TRANSFER PRICING AND OTHER PROVISIONS TO CHECK AVOIDANCE OF TAX

LEARNING OUTCOMES

After studying this chapter, you would be able to -

❑ appreciate the need for incorporation of transfer pricing provisions in the Income-tax Act, 1961;

❑ comprehend the meaning and significance of arm's length principle and the practical difficulties in application of arm's length principle;

❑ appreciate the meaning and significance of the terms "associated enterprise", "international transaction" and "specified domestic transaction";

❑ determine the arm's length price using different methods prescribed under the income-tax law;

❑ appreciate the meaning of safe harbour and rules for safe harbor incorporated in the income-tax law;

- appreciate the benefits of entering into advance pricing agreements;
- identify the cases where secondary adjustments have to be made;
- pinpoint the responsibilities of a person entering into an international transaction to keep and maintain prescribed information and documents;
- identify the circumstances when the Assessing Officer can invoke the power to determine the arm's length price;
- comprehend and appreciate the country-by-country reporting requirements and related matters incorporated in the income-tax law in compliance with BEPS Action Plan 13;
- appreciate the specific anti-avoidance measures incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961 in respect of transactions with persons located in notified jurisdictional areas;
- appreciate the provisions incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961 restricting interest deduction claimed by an entity in respect of borrowings from an associated enterprise in line with BEPS Action Plan 4.

1.1 INTRODUCTION

In the present age of commercial globalisation, it is a universal phenomena that Multinational Companies (MNCs) have branches/ subsidiaries/ divisions operating in more than one country. In such a situation, it is a common event for MNCs to transfer goods produced by a branch in one tax jurisdiction to an associate branch operating in another tax jurisdiction. While doing so, the MNC concerned has in mind the goal of minimizing tax burden and maximizing profits but the two tax jurisdictions/countries have also the consideration of maximizing their revenue while making laws that govern such transactions. It is an internationally accepted practice that such 'transfer pricing' should be governed by the Arm's Length Principle (ALP) and the transfer price should be the price applicable in case of a transaction of arm's length. In other words, the transaction between associates should be priced in the same way as a transaction between independent enterprises.

The principles governing the taxation of MNCs are embodied in the OECD Model Tax Convention on Income and Capital (OECD Model Convention), which serves as the basis for the bilateral income-tax treaties between OECD member countries and between OECD member and non-OECD member countries. According to these guidelines, "Transfer prices" are the prices at which an enterprise transfers physical goods and intangible property or provides services to associated enterprises. Two enterprises are "associated enterprises" if one of the enterprises participates directly or indirectly in the management, control or capital of the other or if both enterprises are under common control. Since international transfer pricing involves more than one tax jurisdiction, any adjustment to the transfer price in one jurisdiction requires a corresponding adjustment in the other jurisdiction. If a corresponding adjustment is not made, double taxation will result.

1.2 MEANING OF THE TERM "ARM'S LENGTH PRINCIPLE"

The Arm's Length Price (ALP) of a transaction between two associated enterprises is the price that would be paid if the transaction had taken place between two comparable independent and unrelated parties, where the consideration is only commercial.

The Arm's Length Principle, in the context of taxation, is explained in the OECD Model Tax Convention as under:

"Where conditions are made or imposed between two associated enterprises in their commercial or financial relations which differ from those which would be made between independent enterprises, then any profits which would, but for those conditions, have accrued to one of the enterprises, but, by reason of those conditions, have not so accrued, may be included in the profits of that enterprise and taxed accordingly."

The OECD transfer pricing guidelines provides guidance on the application of the arm's length principle in order to arrive at the proper transfer pricing range between associated enterprises. Market forces determine business relations between independent parties. The arm's length principle seeks to adjust the profits between two associated enterprises by comparing the same as if the transaction is carried out between two independent enterprises. It treats each enterprise as a separate independent entity rather than as inseparable parts of a single unified business.

1.3 SIGNIFICANCE OF ARM'S LENGTH PRINCIPLE

There are several reasons as to why the OECD member countries and other countries have adopted the arm's length principle.

Parity between MNCs and independent enterprises – A major reason is that the ALP provides broad parity of tax treatment for MNCs and independent enterprises. Since the ALP puts associated and independent enterprises on a more equal footing for tax purposes, it avoids the creation of tax advantages and disadvantages that would otherwise distort the relative competitive positions of these entities. The ALP, thus promotes the growth of international trade and investment by removing these tax considerations from economic decisions.

Determines real taxable profits - The transfer price adopted by a multinational has a direct bearing on the proportional profit it derives in each country in which it operates. If inadequate or excessive consideration is paid for the transfer of goods, services or intangible property between the members of an MNC group, the income calculated for each of those members will be inconsistent with their relative economic contributions. An 'arm's length' price – a price two independent firms operating at arm's length would agree on – is needed to determine taxable profits earned in each country. The arm's length doctrine permits the taxing authorities to rectify the accounts of the enterprise so as to reflect correctly the income that the establishment would have earned if it were an independent enterprise.

Reduction of artificial price distortion - If the ALP is not followed, an MNC will sell goods/ provide services to a controlled entity in a high tax regime at a high price (which exceeds the market price) and to an entity in a low-tax regime or a tax haven at a low price (which is lower than the market price). This would result in extreme price distortion of goods and services in the international market.

Minimization of double taxation – The ALP is an international concept and it represents the international norm. The potential for double taxation is minimized, since in international transfer pricing, adjustment to the transfer price in one tax jurisdiction requires a corresponding adjustment in the other tax jurisdiction.

Accurate measurement of economic contribution – The ALP provides accurate measurement of the fair market value of the economic contribution units of an MNC. The focus of the ALP is to ensure that the proper amount of income is attributed to where it is earned. This result in each unit of the MNC earning a return commensurate with its economic contribution and risk assumed.

1.4 PRACTICAL DIFFICULTIES IN APPLICATION OF ALP

There are, however, certain practical difficulties in applying the ALP, which are described hereunder:

True comparison difficult in certain cases – The commercial and financial conditions governing a transaction between independent enterprises are, by and large, never similar to those existing between associated enterprises. As a result, there cannot be a true comparison. The economies of scale and integration of various business activities of the associated enterprise may not be truly appreciated by arm’s length principle. Further, associated enterprises may enter into transactions which independent enterprises may not enter into, like say, licensing of valuable intangible or sharing the benefits of research. The owner of an intangible may be hesitant to enter into licensing arrangements with independent enterprises for fear of the value of the intangible being degraded. In contrast, he may be prepared to offer terms that are less restrictive to associated enterprises because the use of the intangible can be closely monitored. Further, there is no risk to the overall group’s profit from a transaction of this kind between members of an MNC group. In such situations, where independent enterprises seldom undertake transactions of the type entered into by associated enterprises, the ALP is difficult to apply because there is little or no direct evidence of what conditions would have been established by independent enterprises.

Availability of data and reliability of available data – There may be difficulty in getting adequate and reliable information and data in order to apply arm’s length principle. The comparison of controlled and uncontrolled transactions between associated and independent enterprises usually requires a large quantum of data. Easily accessible information may be incomplete and difficult to interpret while the relevant and required information may be difficult to obtain due to geographical constraints or secrecy and confidentiality aspects. In other cases, information about an independent enterprise which could be relevant may not exist at all. Due to these difficulties, the tax administration and tax payers may have to exercise reason and judgment when applying the ALP.

Absence of market price - There must be a reasonably reliable and comparable uncontrolled market price. The ALP does not meet this condition because of the nature of the market place. A market price is an outcome of unique negotiations. It may be possible to know the price range, but it is very difficult to know the actual market price unless a market transaction actually takes place.

Absence of comparable market price for “intangible” transactions - The ALP reaches a comparable uncontrolled market price that is reasonably reliable for standard transactions where the price range is narrow and market price is certain. However, the ALP generally fails to achieve a comparable market price for transactions involving intangibles because they are unique. The unique nature of these transactions creates a very wide price range.

Administrative burden - In certain cases, the arm’s length principle may result in an administrative burden for both the taxpayer and the tax administrations of evaluating significant numbers and types of cross-border transactions.

Time lag - Although an associated enterprise normally establishes the conditions for a transaction at the time it is undertaken, at some point the enterprise may be required to demonstrate that these are consistent with the arm's length principle. The tax administration may also have to engage in the verification process perhaps some years after the transactions have taken place. It may result in substantial cost being incurred by the tax payer and the tax administration. It is also difficult to appreciate the business realities which prevailed at the time when the transactions were entered into. This may lead to bias against the tax payer.

In spite of the practical difficulties listed above, OECD member countries are of the view that the ALP does provide a sound basis to appreciate the transfer pricing between associated enterprises. It has so far provided acceptable solutions to both taxpayers and the tax administrations. The experience gained so far should be effectively used to remove the practical difficulties and improve the administration.

1.5 THE INDIAN SCENARIO

(1) Transfer pricing in relation to International Transactions

In order to provide a statutory framework empowering the tax authorities to determine reasonable, fair and equitable profits and tax in respect of cross-border transactions, sections 92 to 92F had been included in Chapter X of the Income-tax Act, 1961, through the Finance Act, 2001, providing for a transfer pricing mechanism based on computation of income from cross-border transactions. The following conditions must be satisfied in order to attract the special provisions of Chapter X relating to avoidance of tax:

(i) There must be an international transaction;

(ii) Such international transaction should be between two or more associated enterprises either or both of whom are non-residents;

(iii) Such international transaction should be in the nature of:

(a) purchase, sale or lease of tangible or intangible property; or

(b) provision of service; or

(c) lending or borrowing money; or

(d) any other transaction having a bearing on the profits, income, losses or assets of such enterprise.

(iv) Further, such transaction may also involve allocation or apportionment of, or any contribution to any cost or expenses incurred or to be incurred in connection with a benefit, service or facility provided or to be provided to any one or more of the associated enterprises on the basis of mutual agreement or arrangement between such associated enterprises.

(v) Such international transaction must be done at arm's length price and if such international transaction has been done at less than the arm's length price, it shall require determination of income or apportionment of cost or expense on the basis of arm's length price.

(vi) The above adjustment should either result in an increase of income or decrease of loss returned by the assessee. In other words, the adjustment should not have the effect of reducing the income chargeable to tax or increasing the loss.

The Finance Act, 2001, has introduced provisions relating to pricing of international transaction between the assessee and associated enterprises. These provisions are contained in sections 92 to 92F of the Income-tax Act, 1961. These provisions apply to international transactions entered into with effect from 1st April, 2001. Rules 10A to 10E have been inserted in the Income-tax Rules, 1962 by a notification dated 21st August, 2001. These sections and rules of the Income-tax Act, 1961 and the Income-tax Rules, 1962, respectively, will affect all non-corporate and corporate assessees who have dealings with non-residents for import or export of goods, properties or services. In other words, price paid for import of goods, properties or services and price received for export of goods, properties or services will be subject to scrutiny by the Assessing Officer. Therefore, it is necessary to make a detailed study of these provisions. All assessees who have such dealings with non-residents will have to keep detailed records as prescribed under the Rules and will have to furnish audit report every year with the return of income about their international transactions.

The presence of multinational enterprises in India and their ability to allocate profits in different jurisdictions by controlling prices in intra-group transactions prompted the Government to set up an Expert Group to examine the issues relating to transfer pricing. There is a possibility that two or more entities belonging to the same multinational group can fix up their prices for goods and services and allocate profits among the enterprises within the group in such a way that there may be either no profit or negligible profit in the jurisdiction which taxes such profits and substantial profit in the jurisdiction which is tax haven or where the tax liability is minimum. This may adversely affect a country's share of due revenue. The increasing participation of multinational groups in economic activities in India has given rise to new and complex issues emerging from transactions entered into between two or more enterprises belonging to the same multinational group. The profits derived by such enterprises carrying on business in India can be controlled by the multinational group, by manipulating the prices charged and paid in such intra-group transactions, which may lead to erosion of tax revenue. Therefore, transfer pricing provisions have been brought in by the Finance Act, 2001 with a view to provide a statutory framework which can lead to computation of reasonable, fair and equitable profits and tax in India, in the case of such multinational enterprises.

I. Computation of income from transaction with non-resident [Section 92]: Section 92 provides that any income arising from an "international transaction" shall be computed having regard to "the arm's length price". For this purpose, the allowance for any expense or interest shall be determined on the basis of arm's length price. The section further provides that in an international transaction between two or more 'associated enterprises" when there is a mutual agreement or arrangement for the allocation or apportionment of, or any contribution to, any cost or expenses in connection with a benefit, service or facility provided to any one or more of such enterprises, the allocation of cost, expenses etc. shall be determined having regard to arm's length price of such benefit, service or facility. Similarly, the price received for exports and amounts received for services rendered to associated enterprise will be determined on the basis of arm's length price. It will be noticed that in the international transaction, the income or expense will have to be at arm's length price, if the transaction is between associated enterprises.

The objective of transfer pricing provisions is to protect the tax base of India and to ensure that due to inter-company transactions, there is no reduction in the taxable profits or the taxes paid by the Indian taxpayer. The reverse, however, does not hold true.

While determining arm's length price under the provisions of transfer pricing regulations, if the income works out to a figure lower than the income shown in the books of accounts, the provision of transfer pricing regulations will not apply.

The Assessing Officer will have wide powers to determine what is an arm's length price for such transactions and make adjustments for computation of income. The keywords in section 92 are (i) associated enterprises, (ii) international transactions and (iii) arm's length price. These terms are defined in sections 92A, 92B and 92C.

II. Associated Enterprises [Section 92A]: The term "associated enterprise" in relation to another enterprise is defined in section 92A(1).

Associated Enterprises [Section 92A(1)]
	Condition	Example
(1)	An enterprise which participates, directly or indirectly, or through one or more intermediaries, in: • Management of the other enterprise, or • control of other enterprise, or • capital of other enterprise	Where A Ltd. directly participate in management of B Ltd. and B Ltd. directly participate in management of C Ltd. In such situation, A Ltd. has direct participation in management of B Ltd. but has an indirect participation in management of C Ltd.  In such scenario, both B Ltd. and C Ltd. would be Associated Enterprises of A Ltd.
(2)	If one or more persons participates, directly or indirectly, or through one or more intermediaries in: • management of the two different enterprises • control of two different enterprises	Mr. A directly has control in A Ltd. and B Ltd. In such a scenario, both A Ltd. & B Ltd. are Associated Enterprises since they have a common person i.e. Mr. A, who controls both entities A Ltd. & B Ltd.

	• capital of two different enterprises Then, those two enterprises are AEs.

Section 92A(2) provides that two enterprises shall be deemed to be associated enterprises for the purposes of sub-section (1) if, at any time during the previous year –

Deemed Associated Enterprises [Section 92A(2)]
Condition	Situation	Example
Substantial Voting Power	One enterprise holds 26% or more of the Voting Power, directly or indirectly, in the other enterprise.	A Ltd. holds 33% of Voting Power in B Ltd. and B Ltd. holds 40% Voting Power in C Ltd.  In above situation, A Ltd. holds 33% of Voting Power in B Ltd. directly and 40% of Voting Power in C Ltd. indirectly (i.e. through B Ltd.). Therefore, both B Ltd. & C Ltd. are deemed Associated Enterprises of A Ltd.
Substantial Voting Power in two entities by common person	Any person or enterprise holds 26% or more of the Voting Power power, directly or indirectly, in each of two different enterprises.	Mr. A holds 40% of shareholding in both X Ltd. and Y Ltd. where neither X Ltd. has any holding in Y Ltd. nor Y Ltd. has any holding in X Ltd.  In this situation, since Mr. A directly holds 40% of shareholding in both X Ltd. and Y Ltd., X Ltd. & Y Ltd. will be deemed Associated Enterprises.
Advancing of substantial sum of money	One enterprise advances loan to the other enterprise of an amount of 51% or more of the book value of the total assets of other enterprise	Book Value of total assets of Y Ltd. is ₹ 100 crores. X Ltd. advances loan of ₹ 60 crores to Y Ltd. Since, in this case, X Ltd. advances loan which is 60% of the Book Value of total assets of Y Ltd., X Ltd. & Y Ltd. are deemed Associated Enterprises.
Guaranteeing borrowings	One enterprise guarantees 10% or more of the total	P Inc. has total loan of 1 million dollars from XYZ Bank of America. Out of that, A Ltd., an borrowings of the other enterprise.	Indian company, guarantees 20% of total borrowings in case of any default made by P Inc. In such case, P Inc. and A Ltd. would be deemed Associated Enterprises.

Appointment of majority directors of other enterprise	One enterprise appoints more than half of the board of directors or members of the governing board, or one or more executive directors or executive members of the governing board of other enterprise.	X Ltd. has 15 directors on its Board. Out of that, Y Ltd. has appointed 8 directors. In such case, X Ltd. and Y Ltd. would be deemed Associated Enterprises.
Appointment of majority directors of two different enterprises by same person(s)	More than half of the directors or members of the governing board, or one or more of the executive directors or members of the governing board of each of the two enterprises are appointed by the same person(s).	Mr. A appointed 9 directors out of 15 directors of X Ltd. and appointed 2 executive directors on the board of Y Ltd. In such case, since a common person i.e. Mr. A appointed more than half of the directors in X Ltd. and appointed 2 executive directors in Y Ltd., both X Ltd. and Y Ltd. are deemed Associated Enterprises.
Dependence on intangibles w.r.t which other enterprise has exclusive rights	The manufacture or processing of goods or articles or business carried out by one enterprise is wholly dependent (i.e. 100%) on the know-how, patents, copyrights etc., or any data, documentation, drawing or specification relating to any patent, invention, model etc. of which the other enterprise is the owner or in respect of which the other enterprise has exclusive rights.
Dependence on raw material supplied by other enterprise	90% or more of raw materials and consumables required for the manufacture or processing of goods or articles or business carried out by one enterprise, are supplied by the other enterprise, or by persons specified by the other enterprise, where the prices and other conditions relating to the supply are influenced by such other enterprise.
Dependence on sale	The goods or articles manufactured or processed by one enterprise, are sold to the other enterprise or to persons specified by the other enterprise, and the prices and other conditions relating thereto are influenced by such other enterprise.

Control by common individual	Where one enterprise is controlled by an individual, the other enterprise is also controlled by such individual or his relative or jointly by such individual and his relatives.	Mr. A and Mr. B are relatives. Mr. A has control over X Ltd. and Mr. B has control over Y Ltd. In such a case, both X Ltd. and Y Ltd. would be deemed Associated Enterprises.
Control by HUF or member thereof	Where one enterprise is controlled by an HUF and the other enterprise is controlled by a member of such HUF or by relative of a member of such HUF or jointly by such member and his relative.	 HUF Member of HUF/ Relative of member of such HUF Control Control A Ltd. B Ltd. A Ltd & B Ltd are deemed Associated Enterprises
Interest in a firm, AOPs or BOIs	Where one enterprise is a firm, AOPs or BOIs, the other enterprise holds 10% or more interest in firm/HUF/BOI.
Mutual interest relationship	There exists b/w the two enterprises, any relationship of mutual interest, as may be prescribed.

Section 92A(1) lays down the circumstances when two enterprises can be considered as associated enterprises. The mere fact of participation by one enterprise in the management, control or capital of the other enterprise, or participation by one or more persons in the management, control or capital of both the enterprises is not sufficient unless the tests laid down in section 92A(2) are fulfilled. In other words, the deeming tests contained in section 92A(2) are exhaustive and should be applied to determine the association between two or more enterprises.

Meaning of Enterprise: The term "enterprise" is defined in section 92F to mean a person (including its certain specified Permanent Establishment) who is, or has been, or is proposed to be, engaged in any activity,

- relating to the production, storage, supply, distribution, acquisition or control of articles or goods, or know-how, patents, copy rights, trade-marks, licences, franchises or any other business or commercial rights of similar nature or any data, documentation, drawing or specification relating to any patent, invention, model, design, secret formula or process, of which the other enterprise is the owner or in respect of which the other enterprise has exclusive rights, or

- the provision of services of any kind, or in carrying out any work in pursuance of a contract, or in investment, or providing loan or in the business of acquiring, holding, underwriting or dealing with shares, debentures or other securities of any other body corporate, whether such activity or business is carried on, directly or through one or more of its units or divisions or subsidiaries, or whether such unit or division or subsidiary is located at the same place where the enterprise is located or at a different place or places.

Meaning of Permanent establishment: "Permanent establishment" includes a fixed place of business through which the business of the enterprise is wholly or partly carried on.

III. Definition of International Transaction [Section 92B]

❑ International Transaction [Section 92B(1)]: As per section 92B of the Act, an international transaction means:

(i) a transaction between two or more associated enterprises, either or both of whom are non-residents; and

(ii) transaction in the nature of:

(a) sale/ purchase/ lease of tangible property; or

(b) sale/ purchase/ lease of intangible property; or

(c) provision of services; or

(d) lending/ borrowing money; or

(e) any other transaction having a bearing on profits, income, losses or assets of such enterprises; or

(f) mutual agreement or arrangement between two or more associated enterprise for the allocation or apportionment of, or any contribution to, any cost or expense incurred or to be incurred in connection with a benefit, service or facility provided or to be provided to any one or more of such enterprises.

❑ Deemed International Transaction [Section 92B(2)]: Where, in respect of a transaction entered into by an enterprise with a person other than an associated enterprise (hereinafter referred to as "other person"),

♦ there exists a prior agreement in relation to the relevant transaction between the other person and the associated enterprise or,

♦ where the terms of the relevant transaction are determined in substance between such other person and the associated enterprise; and

♦ either the enterprise or the associated enterprise or both of them are non-residents, then such transaction entered into between the enterprise and the other person shall be deemed to be an international transaction entered into between two associated enterprises, whether or not such other person is a non-resident.

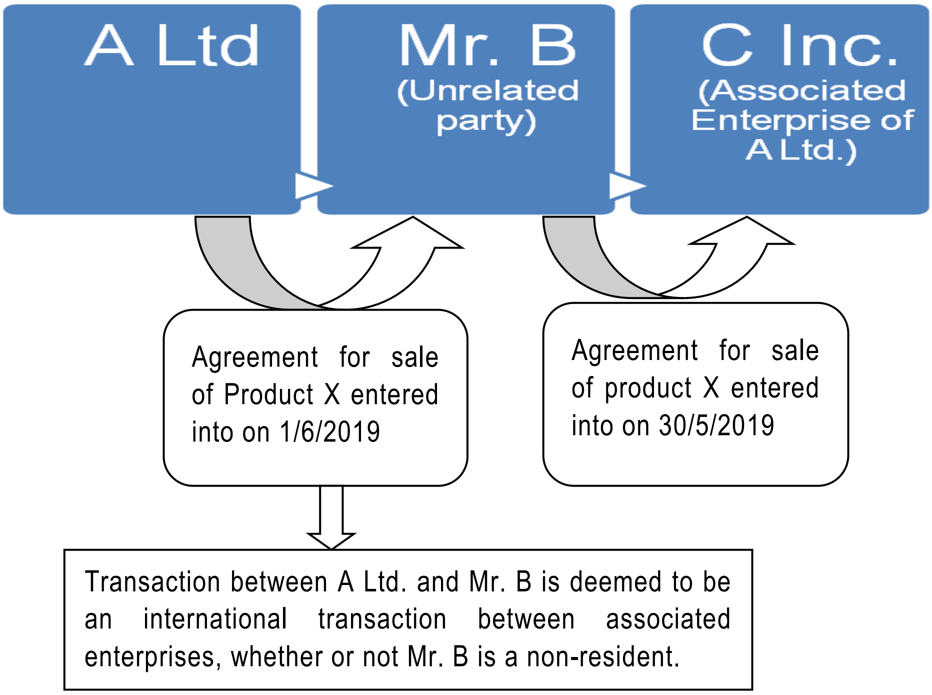
Example:

If A Ltd., an Indian company, has entered into an agreement for sale of product X to Mr. B, an unrelated party, on 1/6/2019 and Mr. B has entered into an agreement for sale of product X with C Inc., a non-resident entity, which is a specified foreign company in relation to A Ltd., on 30/5/2019, then, the transaction between A Ltd. and Mr. B shall be deemed to be an international transaction entered into between two associated enterprises, irrespective of whether or not Mr. B is a non-resident.



Agreement for sale of Product X entered into on 1/6/2019

Agreement for sale of product X entered into on 30/5/2019

Transaction between A Ltd. and Mr. B is deemed to be an international transaction between associated enterprises, whether or not Mr. B is a non-resident.

Note – C Inc. is deemed to be an associated enterprise of A Ltd. since it is a specified foreign company in relation to A Ltd., which means that A Ltd. holds 26% or more in the nominal value of the equity share capital of C Inc.*

❑ The scope of "international transaction" shall include:

	Transactions	Amplification of scope of terms used
(1)	Purchase, sale, transfer, lease or use of tangible property	Tangible property includes - • building, • transportation vehicle, • machinery, equipment, tools, plant, • furniture, • commodity or

		• any other article, product or thing;
(2)	Purchase, sale, transfer, lease or use of intangible property, including transfer of ownership or the provision of use of certain rights	"Use of certain rights" refer to – • land use, • copyrights, patents, trademarks, licences, franchises, • customer list, marketing channel, brand, commercial secret, • know-how, • industrial property right, • exterior design or practical and new design or • any other business or commercial rights of similar nature.
(3)	Capital financing	• any type of long-term or short-term borrowing, • lending or guarantee, • purchase or sale of marketable securities or • any type of advance, payments or deferred payment or receivable or any other debt arising during the course of business.
(4)	Provision of services	• provision of market research, • market development, • marketing management, • administration, • technical service, • repairs, • design, • consultation, • agency, • scientific research, • legal or accounting service.
(5)	Business restructuring or reorganization entered into by an enterprise with an associated enterprise	All such transactions are included in the definition of "international transaction", whether or not it has bearing on the profit, income, losses or assets of such enterprises at the time of the transaction or at any future date.

- ❑ The expression "intangible property" shall include:

	Type of intangible asset in relation to	Examples of each type of intangible asset
(1)	Marketing	• Trademarks • trade names • brand names • logos
(2)	Technology	• Process patents • patent applications • technical documentation such as laboratory notebooks • technical know-how
(3)	Artistic	• literary works and copyrights • musical compositions • copyrights • maps • engravings
(4)	Data processing	• proprietary computer software • software copyrights • automated databases • integrated circuit masks and masters
(5)	Engineering	• industrial design • product patents • trade secrets • engineering drawing and schematics • blueprints • proprietary documentation
(6)	Customer	• customer lists • customer contracts • customer relationship • open purchase orders
(7)	Contract	• favourable supplier • contracts,

		• licence agreements • franchise agreements • non-compete agreements
(8)	Human	• trained and organised work force • employment agreements • union contracts
(9)	Location	• leasehold interest • mineral exploitation rights • easements • air rights • water rights
(10)	Goodwill	• institutional goodwill • professional practice goodwill • personal goodwill of professional • celebrity goodwill • general business going concern value
(11)	methods, programmes, systems, procedures, campaigns, surveys, studies, forecasts, estimates, or technical data;
(12)	any other similar item that derives its value from its intellectual content rather than its physical attributes.

❑ Transaction: The word "transaction" has been defined in section 92F to include an arrangement, understanding or action in concert

(i) whether or not such arrangement, understanding or action is formal or in writing; or

(ii) whether or not such arrangement, understanding or action is intended to be enforceable by legal proceedings."

Section 92F(v) provides an inclusive definition of the term "transaction". Based on the reading of the section, it is evident that it is not necessary that for a transaction undertaken between two enterprises there needs to be a formal written agreement between them. It is only relevant whether a transaction has been entered into in substance. The section also negates the requirement as to the legal enforceability of agreement or understanding.

It may be noted that one of the parties to the international transaction should be a non-resident. Therefore, transactions between a resident assessee ("A" Ltd.) and its foreign branches or between its two or more foreign branches will not be considered as international transactions. This is for the reason that when "A" Ltd. is a resident in India, all its foreign branches will be deemed to be resident in India and transactions between Head Office and branches or between branches inter se will be considered as transactions between residents. Even otherwise there can be no avoidance of income in the transactions between Indian Head Office and foreign branches.

On the other hand, if an Indian branch of a foreign company ("B" Ltd.) is having a transaction with the head office the same will be covered by the definition of international transaction between associated enterprises. This is because the Indian branch (permanent establishment of "B" Ltd.) will be liable to tax in India in respect of its Indian operations and, therefore, any transaction between the Indian branches of "B" Ltd. with its head office in foreign country or with any of the branches of "B" Ltd. outside India will be considered as an international transaction and it will have to establish that the transaction is at an arm's length price. This will be the position even in respect of transactions between a parent company ("A" Ltd.) and its foreign subsidiary and, therefore, such transactions will have to comply with the provisions of transfer pricing regulations.

IV. Arm's Length Price [Section 92C]: "Arm's length price" is defined in section 92F(ii) to mean price which is applied or proposed to be applied in a transaction between persons other than associated enterprises in uncontrolled conditions. Section 92C deals with the method for determining arm's length price and the factors which are to be considered for applicability or non-applicability of a particular method to a given situation. The factors as well as methods incorporated in this section are not exhaustive and the CBDT may prescribe further factors and methods. It provides that the arm's length price in relation to an international transaction shall be determined by any of the following methods, being the most appropriate method, having regard to the nature of transaction or class of transaction or class of associated persons or functions performed by such persons or such other relevant factors as the Board may prescribe, namely -

(a) comparable uncontrolled price method;

(b) resale price method;

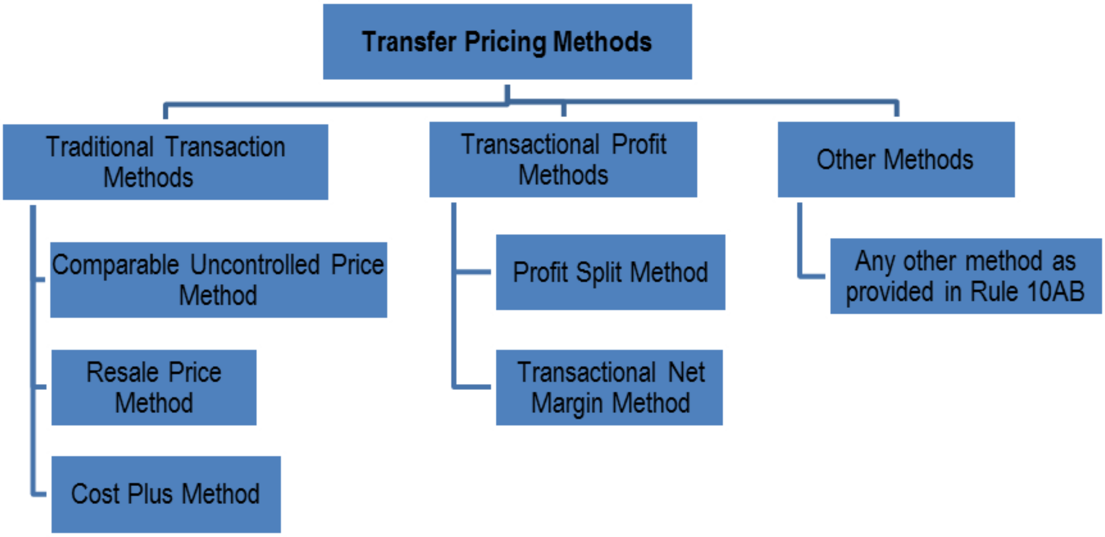
(c) cost plus method;

(d) profit split method;

(e) transactional net margin method;

(f) such other method as may be prescribed by the Board.

Accordingly, the Board has prescribed that the other method for determination of arm's length price in relation to an international transaction shall be any method which takes into account the price which has been charged or paid, or would have been charged or paid, for the same or similar uncontrolled transaction, with or between non-associated enterprises, under similar circumstances, considering all the relevant facts. [Rule 10AB].



Transfer Pricing Methods
Traditional Transaction Methods
Transactional Profit Methods
Other Methods
Comparable Uncontrolled Price Method
Resale Price Method
Cost Plus Method
Profit Split Method
Transactional Net Margin Method
Any other method as provided in Rule 10AB

Section 92C(2) provides that the most appropriate method out of the above methods has to be applied for determination of arm's length price, in the prescribed manner.

Rule 10B(1) prescribed the manner to determine the arm's length price under the five methods as stated in above diagram in respect of any goods, property or services purchased or sold under any international transaction.

(i) Comparable Uncontrolled Price Method

(a) Under this method the price charged or paid for property transferred or services provided under any comparable uncontrolled transaction or transactions should be identifiable.

(b) Adjustment to account for differences between the international transaction and comparable uncontrolled transactions or between the enterprises entering into such transactions which could materially affect the price in the open market can be made.

(c) The adjusted price as worked out under (b) will be considered as an arm's length price in respect of the property transferred or services provided in the international transaction.

(ii) Resale Price Method

(a) Under this method, the price at which property purchased or services obtained by the enterprise from an associated enterprise is resold or are provided to an unrelated enterprise should be identifiable.

(b) The following adjustments can be made to such resale price.

- For normal gross profit margin

- For expenses incurred in connection with the purchase of property or obtaining of services.
- For functional and other differences, including differences in accounting practices which could materially affect the gross profit margin in the open market.

(c) The adjusted price as stated in (b) above will be considered as the arm's length price.

(iii) Cost Plus Method

(a) Under this method, the direct and indirect costs of production incurred by the enterprise in respect of property transferred or services provided to an associated enterprise should be determined.

(b) The amount of a normal gross profit mark-up to such costs arising from the transfer or provision of the same or similar property or services by the enterprise, or by an unrelated enterprise in comparable uncontrolled transaction or transactions should be determined.

(c) The above normal gross profit mark-up can be adjusted to take into account the functional and other differences which could materially affect such profit mark-up in the open market.

(d) Costs referred to in (a) above should be increased by the adjusted profit mark-up as stated in (c) above and the price so arrived at will be considered as the arm's length price.

(iv) Profit Split Method

(a) This is a method which may be applicable mainly in international transactions involving transfer of unique intangibles or in multiple international transactions which are so inter-related that they cannot be evaluated separately for the purpose of determining the arm's length price of any one transaction.

(b) Under this method, combined net profit of the associated enterprises arising from the international transactions in which they are engaged is first determined.

(c) The relative contribution of each associated enterprise to the earning of such combined net profit is then evaluated on the basis of the functions performed, assets employed and risks assumed by each enterprise. This evaluation is to be made on the basis of reliable external market data which can indicate how such contribution would be evaluated by unrelated enterprises performing comparable functions in similar circumstances.

(d) The combined net profit is then split amongst the enterprises in proportion to their relative contributions. The profit thus apportioned to the assessee is taken into consideration to arrive at an arm's length price in relation to the international transaction.

(e) In certain cases the combined net profit referred to in (b) above may, in the first instance, be partially allocated to each enterprise so as to provide it with a basic return appropriate for the type of international transaction in which it is engaged. This has to be determined with reference to market returns achieved for similar types of transactions by independent enterprises. Thereafter, the residual net profit remaining after such allocation may be split amongst the enterprises as stated in (c) and (d) above. In such a case the aggregate of net profit allocated in the first instance together with the residual profit apportioned should be considered for arriving at the arm's length price of the international transaction.

(v) Transactional Net Margin Method

(a) In this method, the net profit margin realised by the enterprise from an international transaction with an associated enterprise is computed having regard to costs incurred or sales effected or assets employed or having regard to any other relevant base.

(b) The net profit margin realised by the enterprise or by an unrelated enterprise from a comparable uncontrolled transaction by applying the same base as in (a) above is computed. This profit margin is adjusted to take into account the differences which could materially affect the net profit margin in the open market having regard to international transaction and comparable uncontrolled transactions or having regard to the enterprise entering into such transactions.

(c) If the net profit margin realised by the enterprise as in (a) above is established to be the same as the net profit margin as in (b) above, then the same is taken into consideration to arrive at an arm's length price in relation to the international transaction.

(v) Other Method as may be prescribed by the CBDT

The Other method allows the use of 'any method' which takes into account

(i) the price which has been charged or paid or

(ii) would have been charged or paid for the same or similar uncontrolled transactions with or between non-associated enterprises, under similar circumstances.

The various data which may possibly be used for comparability purposes under this method could be third party quotations, valuation reports, tender/Bid documents, documents relating to the negotiations, standard rate cards, commercial & economic business models; etc.

For applying the above methods, the comparability of the international transaction with an uncontrolled transaction is to be judged with reference to the following factors:

(i) The specific characteristics of the property transferred or services provided in either transaction;

(ii) The functions performed, taking into account assets employer or to be employer and the risks assumed, by the respective parties to the transactions;

(iii) The contractual terms (whether or not such terms are formal or in writing) of the transactions which lay down explicitly or implicitly how the responsibilities, risks and benefits are to be divided between the respective parties to the transactions;

(iv) Conditions prevailing in the markets in which the respective parties to the transactions operate, including the geographical location and size of the markets, the laws and Government orders in force, costs of labour and capital in the markets, overall economic development and level of competition and whether the markets are wholesale or retail.

Rule 10B(3) provides that an uncontrolled transaction shall be comparable to an international transaction

- if none of the differences between the transactions being comparable or between the enterprises entering into such transactions is likely to materially affect the price or cost charged or paid in, or the profit arising from, such transactions in the open market or
- reasonably accurate adjustments can be made to eliminate the material effects of such differences.

Data to be used for analyzing the comparability of an uncontrolled transaction with an international transaction

The data to be used for analyzing the comparability of an uncontrolled transaction and an international transaction should relate to the financial year (current year) in which the international transaction has been entered into.

In case the most appropriate method for determination of ALP of a transaction entered into on or after 1.4.2014 is the resale price method or cost plus method or the transactional net margin method, then, the data to be used for analyzing the comparability of an uncontrolled transaction with an international transaction shall be –

(a) the data relating to the current year; or

(b) the data relating to the financial year immediately preceding the current year, if the data relating to the current year is not available at the time of furnishing the return of income by the assessee, for the assessment year relevant to the current year.

However, where the data relating to the current year is subsequently available at the time of determination of arm's length price of an international transaction during the course of any assessment proceeding for the assessment year relevant to the current year, then, such data shall be used for such determination irrespective of the fact that the data was not available at the time of furnishing the return of income of the relevant assessment year.

CUP Method	Resale Price Method(RPM)	Cost Plus Method (CPM)	Profit Split Method (PSM)	Transactional Net Margin Method (TNMM)
This method is applied where there are similar transaction(s) b/w unconnected parties	This method is applied where item obtained from AE is resold to unrelated party	This method is generally applied where semi-finished goods are sold to AEs	This method is applied where there is transfer of unique intangibles or in multiple International Transaction	Compute NP margin of the enterprise from International Transaction with AE having regard to cost incurred/sales effected/assets employed
Identify price in a comparable uncontrolled transaction (CUCT)	Identify the RP at which the item is resold to unrelated party	Identify direct & indirect COP incurred for property transferred or services provided to AE	Determine combined NP of the AEs arising out of International Transaction	Compute the NP margin realised by the enterprise or unrelated enterprise in a CUCT by applying the same base
	Reduce the RP by the normal GP margin on CUCT & expenditure incurred (customs duty) w.r.t. purchase	Determine normal GP mark up to such costs by an unrelated enter in CUCT	Evaluate the relative contribution of each enterprise to the earning of combined NP on the basis of FAR	Adjust NP margin realised from CUCT to a/c for differences affecting NP margin in the OM
Adjust the price for material differences in terms of contract, credit, transport etc.	Adjust the price for functional & other differences materially affecting GP margin in open market (OM)	Adjust the normal GP mark-up for functional and other differences materially affecting GP mark-up in OM	Split the combined NP amongst the enterprise in proportion to market returns; & residual profits in proportion to their relative contribution	Compare NP margin relative to costs/sales/assets of the AE with NP margin of uncontrolled party in comparable transactions
Adjusted price is ALP	Adjusted price is ALP	Total Costs ↑d by adjusted mark up = ALP	ALP to be determined on the basis of profit apportioned.	Adjusted NP margin taken into A/c to arrive at ALP

Determination of the most appropriate method: Rule 10C deals with the determination of most appropriate method. Under this Rule, the method which is best suited to the facts and circumstances and which provides the most reliable measure of an arm's length price in relation to the international transaction will be considered to be the most appropriate method.

For the purpose of selecting the most appropriate method, the following factors should be taken into account.

(i) The nature and class of the international transaction;

(ii) The class, or classes of associated enterprises entering into the transaction and the functions performed by them taking into account assets employed or to be employed and risks assumed by such enterprises;

(iii) The availability, coverage and reliability of data necessary for application of the method;

(iv) The degree of comparability existing between the international transaction and the uncontrolled transaction and between the enterprises entering into such transactions;

(v) The extent to which reliable and accurate adjustments can be made to account for difference, if any, between the international transaction and the comparable uncontrolled transaction or between the enterprises entering into such transactions;

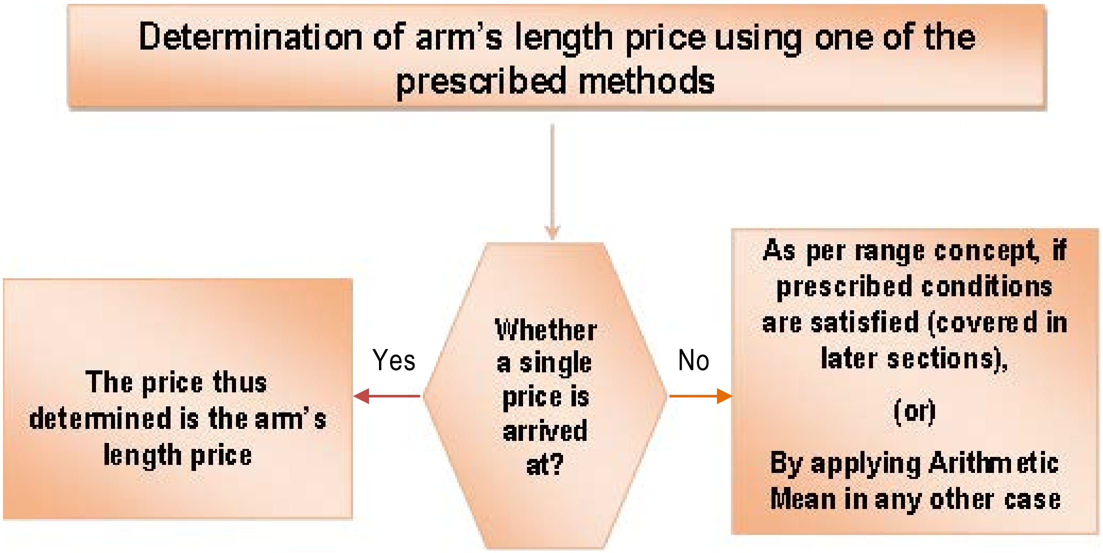
(vi) The nature, extent and reliability of assumptions required to be made in application of a method.

Manner of computation of Arm's length price (Applicable for international transactions and specified domestic transactions undertaken on or after 1.4.2014) [Third proviso to section 92C(2)]

In case of an international transaction or specified domestic transaction[1] undertaken on or after 1.4.2014, where more than one price is determined by the most appropriate method, the ALP shall be computed in the prescribed manner specified in Rule 10CA.

[1] discussed later in this Chapter

Computation of arm's length price in certain cases [Rule 10CA]



Determination of arm's length price using one of the prescribed methods
Whether a single price is arrived at?
Yes
The price thus determined is the arm's length price
No
As per range concept, if prescribed conditions are satisfied (covered in later sections), (or)
By applying Arithmetic Mean in any other case

Rule 10CA(1) provides that where in respect of an international transaction or a specified domestic transaction, the application of the most appropriate method referred to in section 92C(1) results in determination of more than one price, then, the arm's length price in respect of such international transaction or specified domestic transaction has to be computed on the basis of the dataset constructed by placing such prices in an ascending order as provided in Rule 10CA(2).

Application of multiple year data for construction of dataset

Multiple year data allowed only in cases where determination of ALP is done using TNMM, RPM or CPM

Where the most appropriate method is the resale price method or cost plus method or transactional net margin method and the comparable uncontrolled transaction has been identified on the basis of data relating to the current year and the enterprise undertaking the said uncontrolled transaction, [not being the enterprise undertaking the international transaction or the specified domestic transaction referred to in sub-rule (1)], has in either or both of the two financial years immediately preceding the current year undertaken the same or similar comparable uncontrolled transaction then,-

(i) the most appropriate method used to determine the price of the comparable uncontrolled transaction undertaken in the current year shall be applied in similar manner to the comparable uncontrolled transaction or transactions undertaken in the aforesaid period and the price in respect of such uncontrolled transactions shall be determined; and

(ii) the weighted average of the prices, computed in accordance with the manner provided in sub-rule (3), of the comparable uncontrolled transactions undertaken in the current year and in the aforesaid period preceding it shall be included in the dataset instead of the price referred to in sub-rule (1).

Further, where the most appropriate method is the resale price method or cost plus method or transactional net margin method where the comparable uncontrolled transaction has been identified on the basis of the data relating to the financial year immediately preceding the current year and the enterprise undertaking the said uncontrolled transaction, [not being the enterprise undertaking the international transaction or the specified domestic transaction referred to in sub-rule (1)], has in the financial year immediately preceding the said financial year undertaken the same or similar comparable uncontrolled transaction then, -

(i) the price in respect of such uncontrolled transaction shall be determined by applying the most appropriate method in a similar manner as it was applied to determine the price of the comparable uncontrolled transaction undertaken in the financial year immediately preceding the current year; and

(ii) the weighted average of the prices, computed in accordance with the manner provided in sub-rule (3), of the comparable uncontrolled transactions undertaken in the aforesaid period of two years shall be included in the dataset instead of the price referred to in sub-rule (1).

Also, in such cases, where the use of data relating to the current year for determination of ALP subsequently at the time of assessment establishes that,-

(i) the enterprise has not undertaken same or similar uncontrolled transaction during the current year; or

(ii) the uncontrolled transaction undertaken by an enterprise in the current year is not a comparable uncontrolled transaction, then, irrespective of the fact that such an enterprise had undertaken comparable uncontrolled transaction in the financial year immediately preceding the current year or the financial year immediately preceding such financial year, the price of comparable uncontrolled transaction or the weighted average of the prices of the uncontrolled transactions, as the case may be, undertaken by such enterprise shall not be included in the dataset.

Rule 10CA(3) provides that where an enterprise has undertaken comparable uncontrolled transactions in more than one financial year, then for the purposes of sub-rule (2) the weighted average of the prices of such transactions shall be computed in the following manner, namely:-

	Method used to determine the prices	Manner of computation of weighted average of the prices
(i)	The resale price method	By assigning weights to the quantum of sales which has been considered for arriving at the respective prices
(ii)	The cost plus method	By assigning weights to the quantum of costs which has been considered for arriving at the respective prices
(iii)	The transactional net margin method	By assigning weights to the quantum of costs incurred or sales effected or assets employed or to be employed, or as the case may be, any other base which has been considered for arriving at the respective prices.

Range Concept: Rule 10CA(4) provides that where the most appropriate method applied is –

(i) a method other than the profit split method or a method prescribed by the CBDT under section 92C(1)(f); and

(ii) the dataset constructed in accordance with sub-rule (2) consists of six or more entries, an arm's length range beginning from the thirty-fifth percentile of the dataset and ending on the sixty-fifth percentile of the dataset shall be constructed.

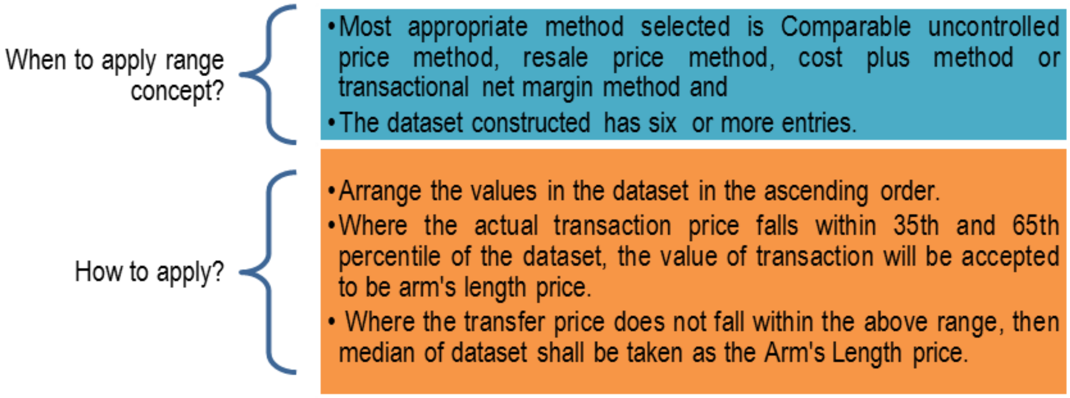
If the price at which the international transaction or the specified domestic transaction has actually been undertaken is within the said range, then, the price at which such international transaction or the specified domestic transaction has actually been undertaken shall be deemed to be the arm's length price [Rule 10CA(5)].

If the price at which the international transaction or the specified domestic transaction has actually been undertaken is outside the said arm's length range, the arm's length price shall be taken to be the median of the dataset [Rule 10CA(6)].



When to apply range concept?

- Most appropriate method selected is Comparable uncontrolled price method, resale price method, cost plus method or transactional net margin method and
- The dataset constructed has six or more entries.

How to apply?

- Arrange the values in the dataset in the ascending order.
- Where the actual transaction price falls within 35th and 65th percentile of the dataset, the value of transaction will be accepted to be arm's length price.
- Where the transfer price does not fall within the above range, then median of dataset shall be taken as the Arm's Length price.

Range concept not applicable:

In a case where the provisions of Rule 10CA(4) are not applicable, the arm's length price shall be the arithmetical mean of all the values included in the dataset. However, if the variation between the arm's length price so determined and price at which the international transaction or specified domestic transaction has actually been undertaken does not exceed such percentage not exceeding 3% of the latter, as may be notified by the Central Government in the Official Gazette in this behalf, the price at which the international transaction or specified domestic transaction has actually been undertaken shall be deemed to be the arm's length price [Rule 10CA(7)].

Meaning of certain terms [Rule 10CA(8)]

	Term	Meaning
(a)	the thirty-fifth percentile of a dataset (having values arranged in an ascending order)	The lowest value in the dataset such that at least 35% of the values included in the dataset are equal to or less than such value. However, if the number of values that are equal to or less than the aforesaid value is a whole number, then, the thirty-fifth percentile shall be the arithmetic mean of such value and the value immediately succeeding it in the dataset.
(b)	the sixth-fifth percentile of a dataset (having values arranged in an ascending order)	The lowest value in the dataset such that at least 65% of the values included in the dataset are equal to or less than such value. However, if the number of values that are equal to or less than the aforesaid value is a whole number, then, the sixty-fifth percentile shall be the arithmetic mean of such value and the value immediately succeeding it in the dataset.
(c)	the median of the dataset (having values arranged in an ascending order)	The lowest value in the dataset such that at least 50% of the values included in the dataset are equal to or less than such value. However, if the number of values that are equal to or less than the aforesaid value is a whole number, then, the median shall be the arithmetic mean of such value and the value immediately succeeding it in the dataset.

V. Reference to Transfer Pricing Officer [Section 92CA]: This section provides for a procedure for reference to a Transfer Pricing Officer (TPO) of any issue relating to computation of arm's length price in an international transaction. The procedure is as under -

(1) The option to make reference to TPO is given to the Assessing Officer. Where the assessee has entered into an international transaction in any previous year and if Assessing Officer considers it necessary or expedient to do so he may refer the computation of the arm's length price in relation to the said international transaction to the TPO. This option is not, however, available to the assessee.

(2) The Assessing Officer has to take the approval of the PCIT/ CIT before making such a reference.

(3) Any Joint /Deputy/Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax, authorised by CBDT, can be appointed as TPO.

(4) When such reference is made, TPO would serve a notice to the assessee requiring him to produce on a date specified in the notice, any evidence on which the assessee relied in support of the computation of arm's length price made by him in relation to the international transaction.

(5) The TPO can also determine the ALP of other international transactions identified subsequently in the course of proceedings before him as if such transaction is referred to the TPO by the Assessing Officer under section 92CA(1) [Sub-section (2A)].

(6) Where in respect of an international transaction, the assessee has not furnished the report under section 92E and such transaction comes to the notice of the TPO during the course of proceeding before him, the transfer pricing provisions shall apply as if such transaction is referred to the TPO by the Assessing Officer under section 92CA(1) [Sub-section (2B)].

(7) The TPO has to pass an order determining the arm's length price after considering the evidence, documents, etc. produced by the assessee and after considering the material gathered by him. He has to send a copy of his order to Assessing Officer as well as the assessee.

(8) The order of the Transfer Pricing Officer determining the arm's length price of an international transaction is binding on the Assessing Officer and the Assessing Officer shall proceed to compute the total income in conformity with the arm's length price determined by the Transfer Pricing Officer [Sub-section (4)].

(9) In order to provide sufficient time to the Assessing Officer to complete the assessment in a case where reference is made to the Transfer Pricing Officer, section 92CA(3A) provides for determination of arm's length price of international transactions by the Transfer Pricing Officer at least 60 days before the expiry of the time limit under section 153 or section 153B for making an order of assessment by the Assessing Officer. This provision would apply in a case where reference is made on or after 1.6.2007 or in a case where reference is made before that date but the order of the Transfer Pricing Officer is pending on that date [Sub-section (3A)].

(10) In many cases, it becomes necessary to seek information from foreign jurisdictions for the purpose of determining the arm's length price by the TPO. At times, proceedings before the TPO may also be stayed by a court order.

Taking into consideration such cases, it has been provided that where assessment proceedings are stayed by any court or where a reference for exchange of information has been made by the competent authority under an agreement referred to in section 90 or 90A, the time available to the Transfer Pricing Officer for making an order after excluding the time for which assessment proceedings were stayed or the time taken for receipt of information, as the case may be, is less than 60 days, then, such remaining period shall be extended to 60 days.

(11) The TPO has power to rectify his order under section 154 if any mistake apparent from the record is noticed. If such rectification is made, the Assessing Officer has to rectify the assessment order to bring it in conformity with the same.

(12) The TPO can exercise all or any of the powers specified in clause (a) to (d) of section 131(1) or section 133(6) or section 133A for determination of arm's length price once the above reference is made to him.

VI. Safe Harbour Rules for determination of arm's length price in case of international transactions [Section 92CB]

(i) Section 92C provides for adjustment in the transfer price of an international transaction with an associated enterprise if the transfer price is not equal to the arm's length price. This has resulted in a large number of such transactions being subjected to adjustment giving rise to considerable dispute.

(ii) Therefore, section 92CB has been introduced to empower the CBDT to formulate safe harbour rules to determine the arm's length price under section 92C and 92CA. Section 92CB(2) empowers the CBDT to prescribe safe harbour rules[2].

'Safe harbour' means circumstances in which the income-tax authorities shall accept the transfer price declared by the assessee.

VII. Introduction of Advance Pricing Agreements [Sections 92CC & 92CD]

(1) An Advance Pricing Agreement (APA) is an agreement between a taxpayer and a taxing authority on an appropriate transfer pricing methodology for a set of transactions over a fixed period of time in future. They offer better assurance on transfer pricing methods and provide certainty and unanimity of approach.

[2] The Safe Harbour Rules relevant for A.Y. 2020-21 are yet to be notified by the CBDT as on the date of release of the Study Material. These rules, when notified, will form part of the webhosted Statutory Update.

(2) Keeping in mind the benefits offered by the APAs, sections 92CC and section 92CD have been introduced in the transfer pricing regime to provide a framework for formulation of APAs between the tax payer and the income-tax authorities.

(3) Section 92CC enables the Board (with the approval of the Central Government), to enter into an APA with any person undertaking an international transaction.

(i) Purpose of APA: The APA shall relate to an international transaction to be entered into by such person. The APA shall be entered into for the purpose of determination of the arm's length price or specifying the manner in which arm's length price shall be determined, in relation to such international transaction.

(ii) Manner of determination of Arm's Length Price in APA: The manner for determination of arm's length price referred above may include methods referred to in section 92C(1) or any other method with necessary adjustments or variations.

(iii) Non-applicability of section 92C or section 92CA: In case an APA has been entered into in respect of any international transaction, the arm's length price in relation to that transaction shall be determined in accordance with that APA notwithstanding any contrary provisions contained in section 92C or section 92CA i.e., the provisions of the APA shall apply overriding the provisions of section 92C or section 92CA, which are normally applicable for determination of arm's length price.

(iv) Validity of APA: The APA shall be valid for such period as specified in the agreement, which shall in no case exceed five consecutive previous years.

(v) Binding nature of APA: The APA so entered into shall be binding on:

(a) the person in whose case, and in respect of the transaction in relation to which, the APA has been entered into; and

(b) the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner and the income-tax authorities subordinate to him, in respect of the said person and the said transaction.

(vi) Not binding of APA: The APA shall not be binding if there is any change in law or facts having bearing on such APA.

(vii) Conditions to declare APA as void ab initio: In case the Board finds that the APA so entered into has been obtained by the person by way of fraud or misrepresentation of facts, the Board is empowered to pass an order declaring any such APA to be void ab initio, with the approval of Central Government.

(viii) Consequences of declaration of an APA as void ab initio: As a result of declaration of an APA as void ab initio:

(a) all the provisions of the Act shall apply to such person as if such APA had never been entered into.

(b) The period beginning with the date of such APA and ending on the date of order declaring the APA as void ab initio, shall be excluded for the purpose of computation of any period of limitation under this Act (for example period of limitation specified in the section 153, 153B etc). This is irrespective of anything contained in any other provision of the Act.

(c) In case the period of limitation after exclusion of the above mentioned period is less than 60 days, such remaining period of limitation shall be extended to 60 days.

(ix) If an application is made by a person for entering into an APA, then, the proceeding, in respect of such person for the purpose of the Act, shall be deemed to be pending.

(x) Prescribed scheme for APA: The Board is empowered to prescribe a scheme specifying the manner, form, procedure and any other matter generally in respect of the APA.

Prescribed Advance Pricing Agreement Scheme for the purpose of section 92CC [Rule 10F to 10T]:]: In exercise of the powers conferred in section 92CC(9) read with section 295 of the Income-tax Act, 1961, the CBDT has prescribed rules specifying an Advance Pricing Agreement (APA) Scheme. Some of the important provisions of the scheme are briefed hereunder –

(1) Persons eligible to apply [Rule 10G]: Any person who has undertaken an international transaction or is contemplating to undertake an international transaction, shall be eligible to enter into an agreement under these rules.

(2) Pre-filing Consultation [Rule 10H]:

(a) Any person proposing to enter into an agreement under these rules may, by an application in writing, make a request for a pre-filing consultation in the prescribed form to the Director General of Income-tax (International Taxation).

(b) The pre-filing consultation shall, among other things,-

(i) determine the scope of the agreement;

(ii) identify transfer pricing issues;

(iii) determine the suitability of international transaction for the agreement;

(iv) discuss broad terms of the agreement.

(c) The pre-filing consultation shall –

(i) not bind the Board or the person to enter into an agreement or initiate the agreement process;

(ii) not be deemed to mean that the person has applied for entering into an agreement.

(3) Application for advance pricing agreement [Rule 10-I]

(a) Any person who is eligible to apply may enter into agreement may, if such person desires to enter into an agreement furnish an application in the prescribed form along with proof of payment of requisite fee as specified, to the Director General of Income-tax (International Taxation) in case of unilateral agreement and to the competent authority in India in case of bilateral or multilateral agreement.

(b) The application may be filed at any time -

(i) before the first day of the previous year relevant to the first assessment year for which the application is made, in respect of transactions which are of a continuing nature from dealings that are already occurring; or

(ii) before undertaking the transaction in respect of remaining transactions.

Note - The applicant may withdraw the application for agreement at any time before the finalisation of the terms of the agreement. However, application fees paid shall not be refunded on withdrawal of application by the applicant.

(4) Approval of Central Government: The agreement shall be entered into by the Board with the applicant after its approval by the Central Government.

(5) Terms of the agreement [Rule 10M]

(a) An agreement may among other things, include –

(i) the international transactions covered by the agreement;

(ii) the agreed transfer pricing methodology, if any;

(iii) determination of arm's length price, if any;

(iv) definition of any relevant term to be used in item (ii) or (iii);

(v) critical assumptions i.e., the factors and assumptions that are so critical and significant that neither party entering into an agreement will continue to be bound by the agreement, if any of the factors or assumptions is changed;

(vi) rollback provision referred to in Rule 10MA;

(vii) the conditions, if any, other than provided in the Act or these rules.

(b) The agreement shall not be binding on the Board or the assessee if there is a change in any of critical assumptions or failure to meet conditions subject to which the agreement has been entered into.

(c) The binding effect of agreement shall cease only if any party has given due notice of the concerned other party or parties.

(d) In case there is a change in any of the critical assumptions or failure to meet the conditions subject to which the agreement has been entered into, the agreement can be revised or cancelled, as the case may be.

(6) Furnishing of Annual Compliance Report [Rule 10-O]: The assessee shall furnish an annual compliance report in quadruplicate in the prescribed form to Director General of Income-tax (International Taxation) for each year covered in the agreement, within 30 days of the due date of filing income-tax return for that year, or within 90 days of entering into an agreement, whichever is later.

(7) Compliance Audit of the agreement [Rule 10P]:

(a) The Transfer Pricing Officer having the jurisdiction over the assessee shall carry out the compliance audit of the agreement for each of the year covered in the agreement. For this purpose, the Transfer Pricing Officer may require –

(i) the assessee to substantiate compliance with the terms of the agreement, including satisfaction of the critical assumptions, correctness of the supporting data or information and consistency of the application of the transfer pricing method;

(ii) the assessee to submit any information, or document, to establish that the terms of the agreement has been complied with.

(b) The compliance audit report shall be furnished by the Transfer Pricing Officer within six months from the end of the month in which the Annual Compliance Report is received by the Transfer Pricing Officer.

(8) Revision of an agreement [Rule 10Q]:

(a) An agreement, after being entered, may be revised by the Board either suo moto or on request of the assessee or the competent authority in India or the Director General of Income-tax (International Taxation), if –

(i) there is a change in critical assumptions or failure to meet a condition subject to which the agreement has been entered into;

(ii) there is a change in law that modifies any matter covered by the agreement but is not of the nature which renders the agreement to be non-binding ; or

(iii) there is a request from competent authority in the other country requesting revision of agreement, in case of bilateral or multilateral agreement.

(b) Except when the agreement is proposed to be revised on the request of the assessee, the agreement shall not be revised unless an opportunity of being heard has been provided to the assessee and the assessee is in agreement with the proposed revision.

(c) The revised agreement shall include the date till which the original agreement is to apply and the date from which the revised agreement is to apply.

(9) Cancellation of an agreement [Rule 10R]:

(a) An agreement shall be cancelled by the Board for any of the following reasons:

(i) the compliance audit has resulted in the finding of failure on the part of the assessee to comply with the terms of the agreement;

(ii) the assessee has failed to file the annual compliance report in time;

(iii) the annual compliance report furnished by the assessee contains material errors; or

(iv) the assessee is not in agreement with the revision proposed in the agreement or the agreement is to be cancelled under rule 10RA(7);.

(b) The Board shall give an opportunity of being heard to the assessee, before proceeding to cancel an application.

(c) The order of cancellation of the agreement shall be in writing and shall provide reasons for cancellation and for non-acceptance of assessee's submission, if any.

(d) The order of cancellation shall also specify the effective date of cancellation of the agreement, where applicable.

(e) The order under the Act, declaring the agreement as void ab initio, on account of fraud or misrepresentation of facts, shall be in writing and shall provide reason for such declaration and for non-acceptance of assessee's submission, if any.

(10) Mere filing of an application for an agreement under these rules shall not prevent the operation of Chapter X of the Act for determination of arms' length price under that Chapter till the agreement is entered into. [Rule 10T(1)]

(11) The negotiation between the competent authority in India and the competent authority in the other country or countries, in case of bilateral or multilateral agreement, shall be carried out in accordance with the provisions of the tax treaty between India and the other country or countries. [Rule 10T(2)]

(xi) Provision for Roll back in APA Scheme [Section 92CC]

(a) In order to reduce current pending as well as future litigation in respect of the transfer pricing matters, section 92CC(9A) provides roll back mechanism in the APA scheme.

(b) Accordingly, the APA may, subject to such prescribed conditions, procedure and manner, provide for determining the ALP or for specifying the manner in which ALP is to be determined in relation to an international transaction entered into by a person during any period not exceeding four previous years preceding the first of the previous years for which the APA applies in respect of the international transaction to be undertaken.

The CBDT has, vide Notification No.23/2015 dated 14.3.2015, in exercise of the powers conferred by 92CC(9A) read with section 295, following conditions, procedure and manner for determining the arm's length price or for specifying the manner in which arm's length price is to be determined in relation to an international transaction:

Rule	Particulars	Conditions, Procedure & Manner of determination of ALP
10F(ba)	Definition of Applicant	A person who has made an application.
10F(ha)	Definition of Rollback year	Any previous year, falling within the period not exceeding four previous years, preceding the first of the five consecutive previous years referred to in section 92CC(4).
10MA	Roll back of the agreement	The said rule provides the following: 1. The agreement may provide for determining the arm's length price or specify the manner in which arm's length price shall be determined in relation to the international transaction entered into by the person during the rollback year (hereinafter referred as "rollback provision"). 2. Conditions for applying for rollback provisions: The agreement shall contain rollback provision in respect of an international transaction subject to the following, namely:- (i) the international transaction is same as the international transaction to which the agreement (other than the rollback provision) applies;

		(ii) the return of income for the relevant rollback year has been or is furnished by the applicant before the due date as specified in Explanation 2 of section 139(1). (iii) the report in respect of the international transaction had been furnished in accordance with section 92E; (iv) the applicability of rollback provision, in respect of an international transaction, has been requested by the applicant for all the rollback years in which the said international transaction has been undertaken by the applicant; and (v) the applicant has made an application seeking rollback in Form 3CEDA in accordance with sub-rule (5); 3. Non-applicability of Rollback provision: Rollback provision shall not be provided in respect of an international transaction for a rollback year, if,- (i) the determination of arm's length price of the said international transaction for the said year has been subject matter of an appeal before the Appellate Tribunal and the Appellate Tribunal has passed an order disposing of such appeal at any time before signing of the agreement; or (ii) the application of rollback provision has the effect of reducing the total income or increasing the loss, as the case may be, of the applicant as declared in the return of income of the said year. 4. Manner for determining arm length price to be the same for rollback years and other previous years: Where the rollback provision specifies the manner in which arm's length price shall be determined in relation to an international transaction undertaken in any rollback year then such manner shall be the same as the manner which has been agreed to be provided for determination of arm's length price of the same international transaction to be undertaken in any previous year to which the agreement applies, not being a rollback year. 5. Time limit for filling application for rollback provision: The applicant may furnish along with the application for advance pricing agreement, the request for rollback provision in Form No. 3CEDA with proof of payment of an additional fee of ₹ 5 lakh.

10RA	Procedure for giving effect to rollback provision of an Agreement	Rule 10RA has been inserted to provide the "Procedure for giving effect to rollback provision of an Agreement" as follows: (i) The applicant shall furnish modified return of income referred to in section 92CD in respect of a rollback year to which the agreement applies along with the proof of payment of any additional tax arising as a consequence of and computed in accordance with the rollback provision. (ii) The modified return in respect of rollback year shall be furnished along with the modified return to be furnished in respect of first of the previous years for which the agreement has been requested for in the application. (iii) If any appeal filed by the applicant is pending before the Commissioner (Appeals), Appellate Tribunal or the High Court for a rollback year, on the issue which is the subject matter of the rollback provision for that year, the said appeal to the extent of the subject covered under the agreement shall be withdrawn by the applicant before furnishing the modified return for the said year. (iv) If any appeal filed by the Assessing Officer or the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner is pending before the Appellate Tribunal or the High Court for a rollback year, on the issue which is subject matter of the rollback provision for that year, the said appeal to the extent of the subject covered under the agreement, shall be withdrawn by the Assessing Officer or the Principal Commissioner or the Commissioner, as the case may be, within three months of filing of modified return by the applicant. (v) The applicant, the Assessing Officer or the Principal Commissioner or the Commissioner, shall inform the Dispute Resolution Panel or the Commissioner (Appeals) or the Appellate Tribunal or the High Court, as the case may be, the fact of an agreement containing rollback provision having been entered into along with a copy of the same as soon as it is practicable to do so.

		(vi) In case effect cannot be given to the rollback provision of an agreement in accordance with this rule, for any rollback year to which it applies, on account of failure on the part of applicant, the agreement shall be cancelled.

Subsequent to the notification of the rules, the CBDT has issued Circular No. 10/2015 dated 10.6.2015 adopting a Question and Answer format to clarify certain issues arising out of the said Rules. The questions raised and answers to such questions as per the said Circular are given hereunder:

Question 1

Under rule 10MA(2)(ii) there is a condition that the return of income for the relevant roll back year has been or is furnished by the applicant before the due date specified in Explanation 2 to section 139(1). It is not clear as to whether applicants who have filed returns under section 139(4) or 139(5) of the Act would be eligible for roll back.

Answer

The return of income under section 139(5) can be filed only when a return under section 139(1) has already been filed. Therefore, the return of income filed under section 139(5) of the Act, replaces the original return of income filed under section 139(1). Hence, if there is a return which is filed under section 139(5) to revise the original return filed before the due date specified in Explanation 2 to sub-section (1) of section 139, the applicant would be entitled for rollback on this revised return of income.

However, rollback provisions will not be available in case of a return of income filed under section 139(4) because it is a return which is not filed before the due date.

Note – A belated return filed under section 139(4) can also be revised under section 139(5). In such a case, the revised return would replace the belated return. Therefore, an applicant would not be entitled for roll back provisions on a revised return which replaces a belated return.

Question 2

Rule 10MA(2)(i) mandates that the rollback provision shall apply in respect of an international transaction that is same as the international transaction to which the agreement (other than the rollback provision) applies. It is not clear what is the meaning of the word "same". Further, it is not clear whether this restriction also applies to the Functions, Assets, Risks (FAR) analysis.

Answer

The international transaction for which a rollback provision is to be allowed should be the same as the one proposed to be undertaken in the future years and in respect of which the agreement has been reached. There cannot be a situation where rollback is finalised for a transaction which is not covered in the agreement for future years. The term same international transaction implies that the transaction in the rollback year has to be of same nature and undertaken with the same associated enterprise(s), as proposed to be undertaken in the future years and in respect of which agreement has been reached. In the context of FAR analysis, the restriction would operate to ensure that rollback provisions would apply only if the FAR analysis of the rollback year does not differ materially from the FAR validated for the purpose of reaching an agreement in respect of international transactions to be undertaken in the future years for which the agreement applies.

The word "materially" is generally being defined in the Advance Pricing Agreements being entered into by CBDT. According to this definition, the word "materially" will be interpreted consistently with its ordinary definition and in a manner that a material change of facts and circumstances would be understood as a change which could reasonably have resulted in an agreement with significantly different terms and conditions.

Rule 10MA(2)(iv) requires that the application for rollback provision, in respect of an international transaction, has to be made by the applicant for all the rollback years in which the said international transaction has been undertaken by the applicant. Clarification is required as to whether rollback has to be requested for all four years or applicant can choose the years out of the block of four years.

Answer

The applicant does not have the option to choose the years for which it wants to apply for rollback. The applicant has to either apply for all the four years or not apply at all. However, if the covered international transaction(s) did not exist in a rollback year or there is some disqualification in a rollback year, then the applicant can apply for rollback for less than four years. Accordingly, if the covered international transaction(s) were not in existence during any of the rollback years, the applicant can apply for rollback for the remaining years. Similarly, if in any of the rollback years for the covered international transaction(s), the applicant fails the test of the rollback conditions contained in various provisions, then it would be denied the benefit of rollback for that rollback year. However, for other rollback years, it can still apply for rollback.

Question 4

Rule 10MA(3) states that the rollback provision shall not be provided in respect of an international transaction for a rollback year if the determination of arm's length price of the said international transaction for the said year has been the subject matter of an appeal before the Appellate Tribunal and the Appellate Tribunal has passed an order disposing of such appeal at any time before signing of the agreement. Further, Rule 10 RA(4) provides that if any appeal filed by the applicant is pending before the Commissioner (Appeals), Appellate Tribunal or the High Court for a rollback year, on the issue which is subject matter of the rollback provision for that year, the said appeal to the extent of the subject covered under the agreement shall be withdrawn by the applicant.

There is a need to clarify the phrase "Tribunal has passed an order disposing of such appeal" and on the mismatch, if any, between Rule 10MA(3) and Rule 10RA(4).

Answer

The reason for not allowing rollback for the international transaction for which Appellate Tribunal has passed an order disposing of an appeal is that the ITAT is the final fact finding authority and hence, on factual issues, the matter has already reached finality in that year. However, if the ITAT has not decided the matter and has only set aside the order for fresh consideration of the matter by the lower authorities with full discretion at their disposal, the matter shall not be treated as one having reached finality and hence, benefit of rollback can still be given.

There is no mismatch between Rule 10MA(3) and Rule 10RA(4).

Question 5

Rule 10MA(3)(ii) provides that rollback provision shall not be provided in respect of an international transaction for a rollback year if the application of rollback provision has the effect of reducing the total income or increasing the loss, as the case may be, of the applicant as declared in the return of income of the said year. It may be clarified whether the rollback provisions in such situations can be applied in a manner so as to ensure that the returned income or loss is accepted as the final income or loss after applying the rollback provisions.

Answer

It is clarified that in case the terms of rollback provisions contain specific agreement between the Board and the applicant that the agreed determination of ALP or the agreed manner of determination of ALP is subject to the condition that the ALP would get modified to the extent that it does not result in reducing the total income or increasing the total loss, as the case may be, of the applicant as declared in the return of income of the said year, the rollback provisions could be applied. For example, if the declared income is ₹ 100, the income as adjusted by the TPO is ₹ 120, and the application of the rollback provisions results in reducing the income to ₹ 90, then the rollback for that year would be determined in a manner that the declared income ₹ 100 would be treated as the final income for that year.

Question 6

Rule 10RA(7) states that in case effect cannot be given to the rollback provision of an agreement in accordance with this rule, for any rollback year to which it applies, on account of failure on the part of applicant, the agreement shall be cancelled. It is to be clarified as to whether the entire agreement is to be cancelled or only that year for which roll back fails.

Answer

The procedure for giving effect to a rollback provision is laid down in Rule 10RA. Sub-rules (2), (3), (4) and (6) of the Rule specify the actions to be taken by the applicant in order that effect may be given to the rollback provision. If the applicant does not carry out such actions for any of the rollback years, the entire agreement shall be cancelled.

This is because the rollback provision has been introduced for the benefit of the applicant and is applicable at its option. Accordingly, if the rollback provision cannot be given effect to for any of the rollback years on account of the applicant not taking the actions specified in sub-rules (2), (3), (4) or (6), the entire agreement gets vitiated and will have to be cancelled.

If there is a Mutual Agreement Procedure (MAP) application already pending for a rollback year, what would be the stand of the APA authorities? Further, what would be the view of the APA Authorities, if MAP has already been concluded for a rollback year?

Answer

If MAP has been already concluded for any of the international transactions in any of the rollback year under APA, rollback provisions would not be allowed for those international transactions for that year but could be allowed for other years or for other international transactions for that year, subject to fulfilment of specified conditions in Rules 10MA and 10RA. However, if MAP request is pending for any of the rollback year under APA, upon the option exercised by the applicant, either MAP or application for roll back shall be proceeded with for such year.

Question 8

Rule 10MA(1) provides that the agreement may provide for determining ALP or manner of determination of ALP. However, Rule 10MA(4) only specifies that the manner of determination of ALP should be the same as in the APA term. Does that mean the ALP could be different?

Answer

Yes, the ALP could be different for different years. However, the manner of determination of ALP (including choice of Method, comparability analysis and Tested Party) would be same.

Question 9

Will there be compliance audit for roll back? Would critical assumptions have to be validated during compliance audit?

Answer

Since rollback provisions are for past years, ALP for the rollback years would be agreed after full examination of all the facts, including validation of critical assumptions. Hence, compliance audit for the rollback years would primarily be to check if the agreed price or methodology has been applied in the modified return.

Question 10

Whether applicant has an option to withdraw its rollback application? Can the applicant accept the rollback results without accepting the APA for the future years?

Answer

The applicant has an option to withdraw its roll back application even while maintaining the APA application for the future years. However, it is not possible to accept the rollback results without accepting the APA for the future years. It may also be noted that the fee specified in Rule 10MA(5) shall not be refunded even where a rollback application is withdrawn.

Question 11

For already concluded APAs, will new APAs be signed for rollback or earlier APAs could be revised?

Answer

The second proviso to Rule 10MA(5) provides for revision of APAs already concluded to include rollback provisions.

Question 12

For already concluded APAs, where the modified return has already been filed for the first year of the APA term, how will the time-limit for filing modified return for rollback years be determined?

Answer

The time to file modified return for rollback years will start from the date of signing the revised APA incorporating the rollback provisions.

Question 13

In case of merger of companies, where one or more of those companies are APA applicants, how would the rollback provisions be allowed and to which company or companies would it be allowed?

Answer

The agreement is between the Board and a person. The principle to be followed in case of merger is that the person (company) who makes the APA application would only be entitled to enter into the agreement and be entitled for the rollback provisions in respect of international transactions undertaken by it in rollback years. Other persons (companies) who have merged with this person (company) would not be eligible for the rollback provisions.

To illustrate, if A, B and C merge to form C and C is the APA applicant, then the agreement can only be entered into with C and only C would be eligible for the rollback provisions. A and B would not be eligible for the rollback provisions. To illustrate further, if A and B merge to form a new company C and C is the APA applicant, then nobody would be eligible for rollback provisions.

In case of a demerger of an APA applicant or signatory into two or more companies (persons), who would be eligible for the rollback provisions?

Answer

The same principle as mentioned in the previous answer, i.e., the person (company) who makes an APA application or enters into an APA would only be entitled for the rollback provisions, would continue to apply. To illustrate, if A has applied for or entered into an APA and, subsequently, demerges into A and B, then only A will be eligible for rollback for international transactions covered under the APA. As B was not in existence in rollback years, availing or grant of rollback to B does not arise.

(4) Section 92CD provides for the following procedure for giving effect to an APA -

(i) In case a person has entered into an APA and prior to the date of entering into such APA, he has furnished the return of income under the provisions of section 139 in respect of any assessment year relevant to a previous year to which the APA applies, then, such person shall, within a period of three months from the end of the month in which the said agreement was entered into, furnish a modified return, notwithstanding any contrary provision contained in section 139.

(ii) Such modified return shall be in accordance with and limited to the provisions of such APA i.e., modifications can only be made on account of such APA in the return to be filed.

(iii) All other provisions of this Act shall apply as if the modified return is a return furnished under section 139, unless anything to the contrary is provided in this section.

(iv) If the assessment or reassessment proceedings for an assessment year relevant to a previous year to which the APA applies have been completed before the expiry of period allowed for furnishing of modified return, the Assessing Officer shall, in a case where modified return is filed in accordance with the provisions of this section, proceed to assess or reassess or re-compute the total income of the relevant assessment year having regard to and in accordance with the APA.

However, with effect from 1.9.2019, Assessing Officer shall pass an order modifying the total income of the relevant assessment year determined in such assessment or reassessment, as the case may be, having regard to and in accordance with the APA, instead of proceeding to assess or reassess the total income.

Such order for assessment or reassessment or re-computation of total income shall be passed within a period of 1 year from the end of the financial year in which the modified return was furnished. This shall apply notwithstanding the period of limitation contained under section 153 or 153B or 144C.

The appeal against such order shall lie to Commissioner (Appeals) [Section 246A]

(v) Where the assessment or reassessment proceedings for an assessment year relevant to the previous year to which the APA applies, are pending on the date of filing of modified return, the Assessing Officer shall proceed to complete the assessment or reassessment proceedings in accordance with the APA taking into consideration the modified return so furnished.

In this case, the time period of completion of pending assessment or reassessment mentioned under section 153 or 153B or 144C shall be extended by 12 months. This shall apply notwithstanding the period of limitation contained under section 153 or 153B or 144C.

(vi) The assessment or reassessment proceedings for an assessment year shall be deemed to have been completed where -

(a) an assessment or reassessment order has been passed; or

(b) no notice has been issued under section 143(2) till the expiry of the limitation period provided under the said section.

VIII. Secondary Adjustment [Section 92CE]

(1) Meaning of Primary Adjustment and Secondary Adjustment

"Primary adjustment" to a transfer price means the determination of transfer price in accordance with the arm's length principle resulting in an increase in the total income or reduction in the loss, as the case may be, of the assessee.

"Secondary adjustment" means an adjustment in the books of accounts of the assessee and its associated enterprise to reflect that the actual allocation of profits between the assessee and its associated enterprise are consistent with the transfer price determined as a result of primary adjustment, thereby removing the imbalance between cash account and actual profit of the assessee.

(2) Forms of Secondary Adjustment - As per the OECD's Transfer Pricing Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises and Tax Administrations (OECD transfer pricing guidelines), secondary adjustment may take the form of constructive dividends, constructive equity contributions, or constructive loans.

(3) Alignment of economic benefit of the transaction with the arm's length position - The provisions of secondary adjustment are internationally recognised and are already part of the transfer pricing rules of many leading economies in the world. Whilst the approaches to secondary adjustments by individual countries vary, they represent an internationally recognised method to align the economic benefit of the transaction with the arm's length position.

(4) Cases where secondary adjustment has to be made - In order to align the transfer pricing provisions in line with OECD transfer pricing guidelines and international best practices, section 92CE provides that the assessee shall be required to carry out secondary adjustment where the primary adjustment to transfer price:

(i) has been made suo motu by the assessee in his return of income; or

(ii) made by the Assessing Officer has been accepted by the assessee; or

(iii) is determined by an advance pricing agreement entered into by the assessee under section 92CC on or after 1.4.2017; or

(iv) is made as per the safe harbour rules framed under section 92CB; or

(v) is arising as a result of resolution of an assessment by way of the mutual agreement procedure under an agreement entered into under section 90 or 90A for avoidance of double taxation.

(5) No requirement of secondary adjustment in certain cases - Such secondary adjustment, however, shall not be carried out if, the amount of primary adjustment made in the case of an assessee in any previous year does not exceed ₹ 1 crore or the primary adjustment is made in respect of A.Y.2016-17 or an earlier assessment year.

(6) Non-repatriation of excess money by the associated enterprise deemed to be an advance - Where, as a result of primary adjustment to the transfer price, there is an increase in the total income or reduction in the loss, as the case may be, of the assessee, the excess money or part thereof, as the case may be, which is available with its associated enterprise, if not repatriated to India within the time as may be prescribed, shall be deemed to be an advance made by the assessee to such associated enterprise and the interest on such advance, shall be computed as the income of the assessee, in the prescribed manner.

Such excess money or part thereof may be repatriated from any of the associated enterprises of the assessee which is not resident in India.

"Excess money" means the difference between the arm's length price determined in primary adjustment and the price at which the international transaction has actually taken place.

Arms' Length Price in primary adjustment
Actual value of international transaction
Excess Money

(7) Time limit for repatriation of excess money or part thereof

Rule 10CB(1) prescribes the time limit for repatriation of excess money i.e., on or before 90 days from the date given in column (3) in the cases mentioned in column (2) of the table below:

	Case	Date
(1)	(2)	(3)
(i)	Where primary adjustments to transfer price has been made suo-moto by the assessee in his return of income	the due date of filing of return u/s 139(1)
(ii)	If primary adjustments to transfer price as determined in the order of the Assessing Officer or the appellate authority has been accepted by the assessee	the date of the said order
(iii)	Where agreement for advance pricing has been entered into by the assessee under section 92CD	the due date of filing of return u/s 139(1)
(iv)	Where option has been exercised by the assessee as per the safe harbour rules under section 92CB	the due date of filing of return u/s 139(1)

(v)	Where agreement under the Mutual agreement procedure under a DTAA has been entered into u/s 90 or 90A	the due date of filing of return u/s 139(1)

(8) Rate of interest for the purpose of computation on interest on excess money or part thereof, if not repatriated within the prescribed time

Rule 10CB(2) prescribes the rate at which the per annum interest income shall be computed in case of failure to repatriate the excess money within the above time limit. The interest would be computed at the rates mentioned in column (3) in respect of the cases mentioned in column (2) of the table below:

	Case	Rate
(1)	(2)	(3)
(i)	Where the international transaction is denominated in Indian rupee	At the one year marginal cost of fund lending rate of SBI as on 1st April of the relevant previous year + 3.25%
(ii)	Where the international transaction is denominated in foreign currency	At six month London Interbank Offered Rate (LIBOR) as on 30th September of the relevant previous year + 3.00%

(9) Option to pay additional income-tax, if the excess money not repatriated: In a case where the excess money or part thereof has not been repatriated within the prescribed time as mentioned above, the assessee has the option to pay additional income-tax @ 20.9664% (i.e., tax@18% plus surcharge@12% plus cess@4%) on such excess money or part thereof, as the case may be.

Where additional income-tax is so paid by the assessee, he will not be required to make secondary adjustment and compute interest from the date of payment of such tax. This implies that he would, in any case, be required to compute interest upto the date of payment of such additional tax.

The additional income-tax so paid by the assessee shall be treated as the final payment of tax in respect of excess money or part thereof not repatriated and no further credit would be allowed to the assessee or to any other person in respect of the amount of additional income-tax so paid.

Further, no deduction in respect of the amount on which such additional income-tax has been paid, would be allowed under any other provision of the Act.

IX. Records to be maintained [Section 92D]: Transfer pricing documentation is the documentation maintained to review Transfer Pricing arrangements for transactions taking place between different entities of the same group (also known as intra-group transactions). The primary objective of the transfer pricing documentation is to review the arm's length (fair price) nature of the transactions taking place between different entities of an Multi National Company

(1) Persons responsible for keeping and maintaining prescribed information and document - Section 92D imposes responsibility on every person

(i) who enters into an international transaction to keep and maintain such information and documents in respect thereof as may be prescribed by CBDT

(ii) being a constituent entity of an international group*, to keep and maintain the prescribed information and document* in respect of an international group*.*

The constituent entity is required to keep and maintain the information and document irrespective of the fact whether or not any international transaction is undertaken by such constituent entity.

The constituent entity has to furnish the information and document to the authority prescribed under section 286(1), i.e., Director General of Income-tax (Risk Assessment) in the prescribed manner, on or before prescribed date

(2) Information and documents to be kept and maintained for prescribed period - The CBDT is empowered to prescribe the period for which the information and documents shall be kept and maintained.

(3) Assessing Officer & Commissioner (Appeals) empowered to require persons entering into international transaction to furnish prescribed information and documents - The Assessing Officer or the Commissioner (Appeals) may, in the course of any proceedings under the Income-tax Act, require any person who has entered into an international transaction to furnish any such prescribed information or documents within a period of 30 days from the date of receipt of a notice issued in this regard. The requisition period may, on request, be extended further for a period not exceeding thirty days by the Assessing Officer or the Commissioner (Appeals).

Information to be kept and maintained under section 92D[Rule 10D(1)]

Rule 10D(1) provides for the information and documents to be kept and maintained by the assessee under section 92D(1)(i). Under this Rule, the following information and documents have to be maintained:

(i) A description of the ownership structure of the assessee enterprise with details of shares or other ownership interest held therein by other enterprises;

(ii) A profile of the multinational group of which the assessee enterprise is a part along with the name, address, legal status and country of tax residence of each of the enterprises comprised in the group with whom international transactions have been entered into by the assessee, and ownership linkages among them;

(iii) A broad description of the business of the assessee and the industry in which the assessee operates, and the business of the associated enterprises with whom the assessee has transacted;

(iv) The nature and terms (including prices) of international transactions entered into with each associated enterprise, details of property transferred or services provided and the quantum and the value of each such transaction or class of such transaction;

(v) A description of the functions performed, risks assumed and assets employed or to be employed by the assessee and by the associated enterprises involved in the international transactions;

(vi) A record of the economic and market analyses, forecasts, budgets or any other financial estimates prepared by the assessee for the business as a whole and for each division or product separately, which may have a bearing on the international transactions entered into by the assessee;

(vii) A record of uncontrolled transactions taken into account for analysing their comparability with the international transactions entered into, including a record of the nature, terms and conditions relating to any uncontrolled transaction with third parties which may be of relevance to the pricing of the international transactions;

(viii) A record of the analysis performed to evaluate comparability of uncontrolled transactions with the relevant international transaction;

(ix) A description of the methods considered for determining the arm's length price in relation to each international transaction or class of transaction, the method selected as the most appropriate method along with explanation as to why such method was so selected, and how such method was applied in each case;

(x) A record of the actual working carried out for determining the arm's length price, including details of the comparable data and financial information used to apply the most appropriate method, and adjustments, if any, which were made to account for differences between the international transaction and the comparable uncontrolled transactions, or between the enterprises entering into such transactions;

(xi) The assumptions, policies and price negotiations, if any, which have critically affected the determination of the arm's length price;

(xii) Details of the adjustments, if any, made to transfer prices to align them with arm's length prices determined under the Income-tax Rules and consequent adjustment made to the total income for tax purposes;

(xiii) Any other information, data or documents, including information or data relating to the associated enterprise, which may be relevant for determination of the arm's length price.

Threshold limit for maintenance of prescribed information and documents [Rule 10D(2)]

Rule 10D(2) provides that in a case where the aggregate value of international transactions does not exceed ₹ 1 crore, it will not be obligatory for the assessee to maintain the above information and documents.

However, it is provided that in the above cases also the assessee will have to substantiate that the income arising from the international transactions with associated enterprises, as disclosed by the accounts, is in accordance with section 92. This will mean that, even if the aggregate value of the international transactions is less than ₹ 1 crore, the assessee will have to maintain adequate records and evidence to show that the international transactions with associated enterprises are on the basis of arm's length principle.

Information to be supported by authentic documents [Rule 10D(3)]

The information to be maintained by the assessee, is to be supported by authentic documents. These documents may include the following:

(i) Official publications, reports, studies and data bases from the Government of the country of residence of the associated enterprise, or of any other country;

(ii) Reports of market research studies carried out and technical publications brought out by institutions of national or international repute;

(iii) Price publications including stock exchange and commodity market quotations;

(iv) Published accounts and financial statements relating to the business affairs of the associated enterprises;

(v) Agreements and contracts entered into with associated enterprises or with unrelated enterprises in respect of transactions similar to the international transactions;

(vi) Letters and other correspondence documenting any terms negotiated between the assessee and the associated enterprise;

(vii) Documents normally issued in connection with various transactions under the accounting practices followed.

It is also provided that the information and documents to be maintained should be contemporaneous and should exist latest by the date specified for getting the audit report. In the case of international transactions which continue to have effect over more than one financial year, fresh documents will not be required to be maintained for each year if there are no significant change which may affect the determination of arm's length price.

The above information and documents are required to be maintained for a period of eight years from the end of the relevant assessment year.

X. Power of Assessing Officer: Section 92C(3) and (4) gives power to the Assessing Officer to determine the arm's length price under the following circumstances and also empowers the Assessing Officer to re-compute total income of the assessee having regard to arm's length price determined by him. It also provides that deduction under section 10AA and Chapter VI-A shall not be allowed from the additional income computed by him.

For example, if the total income declared by the assessee in his return of income is, say ₹ 7 lakhs and the total income computed by the Assessing Officer applying the arm's length principle is, say ₹ 9 lakhs, the difference of ₹ 2 lakhs will not qualify for deduction under section 10AA or Chapter VI-A.

The Assessing Officer may invoke the power to determine arm's length price if during the course of any proceeding, he is of the opinion that, on the basis of material or information or documents in his possession:

(a) The price charged or paid in an international transaction has not been determined in accordance with section 92C(1) and (2); or

(b) Any information and documents relating to an international transaction has not been kept and maintained by the assessee in accordance with the provisions contained in section 92D(1) and the rules made in this behalf (Rule 10D); or

(c) The information or data used in computation of the arm's length price is not reliable or correct; or

(d) The assessee has failed to furnish within the specified time, any information or documents which he was required to furnish by a notice issued under section 92D(3).

Before invoking the power to determine arm's length price, an opportunity of being heard is to be given to the assessee.

Second proviso to section 92C(4) provides that if the total income of an associated enterprise is computed under this section on the determination of arm's length price paid to another associated enterprise, from which tax is deducted or deductible at source, the income of the other associated enterprise shall not be recomputed on this count.

For example, if "A" Ltd. has paid royalty to "B" Ltd. (Non-Resident) @10% of sales and tax is deducted at source, "B" Ltd. cannot claim refund if the Assessing Officer has determined 8% as arm's length price in the case of "A" Ltd. and disallowed 2% of the royalty amount.

XI. Audit Report [Section 92E]: Under section 92E, every person who enters into an international transaction during a previous year is required to obtain a report from a chartered accountant and furnish such report on or before the specified date on the prescribed form.

Rule 10E provides that the auditor's report shall be in Form No.3CEB. It requires the auditor to state that he has examined the accounts and records of the assessee relating to the international transactions entered into by the assessee during the relevant year. He has also to give his opinion whether the prescribed information and documents relating to the above transactions have been kept by the assessee. Further, he has to state that the particulars stated in the Annexure to his report are true and correct. The Annexure is in two parts.

In the first part of the Annexure, general information of the assessee is required to be reported. In the second part of the Annexure, the particulars about the international transactions are required to be stated. Broadly stated these particulars include list of associated enterprises, particulars and description of transactions relating to purchase, sales, provisions of service, loans, advances, etc “Specified date” shall have the same meaning as assigned to due date in Explanation 2 below sub-section (1) of section 139. The due date for filing of transfer pricing report under section 92E in Form 3CEB is 30th November of the assessment year.

XII. Penalties: Stringent penalties are provided in various sections for non-compliance with the above provisions. These are as under:

Penalty for failure to report any international transaction or any transaction deemed to be an international transaction: Under section 270A, penalty@50% of tax payable on under-reported income is leviable. However, the amount of under-reported income represented by any addition made in conformity with the arm’s length price determined by the Transfer Pricing Officer would not be included within the scope of under-reported income under section 270A, where the assessee had maintained information and documents, as prescribed under section 92D, declared the international transactions under Chapter X and disclosed all material facts relating to the transaction.

Failure to report any international transaction or any transaction deemed to be an international transaction or specified domestic transaction to which the provisions of Chapter X applies would constitute ‘misreporting of income’ under section 270A(9), in respect of which penalty@200% would be attracted.

Penalty for failure to keep and maintain information and documentation [Section 271AA]: The penalty provisions in respect of international transaction are broadly covered under section 271BA providing for levy of penalty of ₹ 1 lakh in cases where any person fails to furnish a report from an accountant as required by section 92E. Section 271G which provides for penalty @2% of the value of the international transaction for each failure in case of failure to furnish information or document under section 92D(3).

Further, in order to ensure compliance with the transfer pricing regulations, section 271AA provides that, the Assessing Officer or Commissioner (Appeals) may direct the person entering into an international transaction to pay a penalty@2% of the value of each international transaction entered into by him, if the person:

(1) fails to keep and maintain any such document and information as required by section 92D(1) and section 92D(2);

(2) fails to report such international transaction which is required to be reported; or

(3) maintains or furnishes any incorrect information or document.

The penalty under section 271AA shall be in addition and not in substitution of penalty under section 271BA.

Penalty for failure to comply with TP provisions : A Summary
Section	Nature of default	Penalty
270A(9)	Failure to report any International transaction or deemed International transaction to which the provision of Chapter X applies would constitute 'misreporting of income'	200% of the tax payable on under-reported income
271BA	Failure to furnish a report from an accountant as required under section 92E	₹ 1 lakh
271G	Failure to furnish info or doc as required by Assessing Officer or CIT(A) u/s 92D(3) within 30 days from the date of receipt of notice or extended period not exceeding 30 days, as the case may be.	2% of the value of the International transaction for each failure
271AA	(1) Failure to keep and maintain any such document and information as required by section 92D(1)/(2); (2) Failure to report such International transaction which is required to be reported; or (3) Maintaining or furnishing any incorrect information or document.	2% of the value of each such International transaction

Notes:

- The penalty u/s 271AA shall be in addition and not in substitution of penalty u/s 271BA.
- If the assessee proves that there was reasonable cause for the failure, no penalty would be leviable under section 271BA, 271G and 271AA.

(2) Furnishing of report in respect of international group in line with BEPS Action Plan – Country by Country Report and Master File

(i) Transfer Pricing provisions under the Income-tax Act, 1961

Chapter X of the Income-tax Act, 1961 comprising sections 92 to 92F contain provisions relating to transfer pricing regime.

Section 92D requires maintenance of prescribed information and document relating to the international transaction and specified domestic transaction.

(ii) Requirements as per OECD report on Action 13 of BEPS Action Plan

The report provides for:

(a) revised standards for transfer pricing documentation; and

(b) a template for country-by-country reporting of income, earnings, taxes paid and certain measure of economic activity.

(iii) Three-tier structure mandated by BEPS

The BEPS report recommends that countries adopt a standardised approach to transfer pricing documentation; it mandates the following three-tier structure:-

	Document	Information
(1)	Master File	Standardised information relevant for all multinational enterprises (MNE) group members
(2)	Local file	Specific reference to material transactions of the local taxpayer
(3)	Country-by-country report	Information relating to the global allocation of the MNE's income and taxes paid; and Indicators of the location of economic activity within the MNE group.

(iv) Advantages of the three tier structure [as per BEPS Report]:

(a) Taxpayers will be required to articulate consistent transfer pricing positions;

(b) Tax administrations would get useful information to assess transfer pricing risks;

(c) Tax administrations would be able to make determinations about where their resources can most effectively be deployed, and, in the event audits are called for, provide information to commence and target audit enquiries.

(v) Country-by-country Report: Reporting Requirements of MNEs

The Country-by-Country (CbC) report has to be submitted by parent entity of an international group to the prescribed authority in its country of residence. This report is to be based on consolidated financial statement of the group.

(a) MNEs have to report annually and for each tax jurisdiction in which they do business:

(1) the amount of revenue;

(2) profit before income tax; and

(3) income tax paid and accrued.

(b) MNEs have to report their total employment, capital, accumulated earnings and tangible assets in each tax jurisdiction.

(c) MNEs have to identify each entity within the group doing business in a particular tax jurisdiction and provide an indication of the business activities each entity engages in.

(vi) Master File: Objective & Features

(a) The master file would provide an overview of the MNE groups business, including:

(1) the nature of its global business operations,

(2) its overall transfer pricing policies, and

(3) its global allocation of income and economic activity

in order to assist tax administrations in evaluating the presence of significant transfer pricing risk.

(b) The master file is intended to provide a high-level overview in order to place the MNE group's transfer pricing practices in their global economic, legal, financial and tax context.

(c) The master file shall contain information which may not be restricted to transaction undertaken by a particular entity situated in particular country.

(d) Thus, information in master file would be more comprehensive than the existing regular transfer pricing documentation.

(e) The master file shall be furnished by each entity to the tax authority of the country in which it operates.

(vii) Implementation of international consensus in India

India is one of the active members of BEPS initiative and part of international consensus. For the purpose of implementing the international consensus, a specific reporting regime in respect of CbC reporting and also the master file has been incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961. The essential elements have been incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961 while remaining aspects would be dealt with in detail in the Income-tax Rules, 1962.

(viii) Elements relating to CbC reporting requirement and related matters which have been incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961 [Section 286]

(a) Threshold limit for applicability of CbC reporting [Sub-section (7)]: The reporting provision shall apply in respect of an international group for an accounting year, if the total consolidated group revenue as reflected in the consolidated financial statement (CFS) for the accounting year preceding such accounting year is above a threshold to be prescribed i.e., ₹ 5,500 crore.

Where the total consolidated group revenue of the international group, as reflected in the consolidated financial statement, is in foreign currency, the rate of exchange for the calculation of the value in rupees of such total consolidated group revue shall be the telegraphic transfer buying rate (TTBR) of such currency on the last day of the accounting year preceding the accounting year [Rule 10DB(7)].

(b) Time limit for furnishing CbC report [Sub-section (2)]: The parent entity of an international group or the alternate reporting entity, if it is resident in India shall be required to furnish the report in respect of the group to the Director General of Income-tax (Risk Assessment) for every reporting accounting year, within a period of twelve months from the end of the said reporting accounting year for which the report is being furnished, in Form No. 3CEAD.

(c) Details to be furnished by constituent entity resident in India [Sub-section (1): Every constituent entity resident in India, of an international group having parent entity that is not resident in India, shall notify the Director General of Income-tax (Risk Assessment) at least two months prior to the due date for furnishing Cbc report –

(1) whether it is the alternate reporting entity of the international group; or

(2) the details of the parent entity or the alternate reporting entity, if any of the international group, and the country of territory of which the said entities are resident.

The report shall be furnished in prescribed manner and in the prescribed form i.e., 3CED.

(d) Details/ information to be included in CbC report [Sub-section (3)]: It should contain aggregate information in respect of:

(1) the amount of revenue,

(2) profit and loss before income-tax,

(3) amount of income-tax paid and accrued,

(4) details of stated capital, accumulated earnings, number of employees, tangible assets other than cash or cash equivalent in respect of each country or territory along with details of each constituent's incorporation country and residential status, nature and details of main business activity or activities of each constituent entity and any other information as may be prescribed.

This shall be based on the template provided in the OECD BEPS report on Action Plan 13.

(e) Furnishing of CbC report by resident constituent entity [Sub-section (4): A constituent entity of an international group resident in India, other than the parent entity or the alternate reporting entity, shall be required to furnish CbC report in Form No. 3CEAE within the twelve months from the end of the reporting accounting year to the Director General of Income-tax (Risk Assessment), if the parent entity of the group is resident of a country or territory,-

(1) in which it is not obligated to file report of the nature of CbC report;

(2) with which India does not have an arrangement for exchange of the CbC report; or

(3) there has been a systemic failure of the country or territory i.e., such country is not exchanging information with India even though there is an agreement and this fact has been intimated to the entity by the prescribed authority.

However, in case the parent entity of the constituent entity is resident of a country or territory, where, there has been a systemic failure of the country or territory and the said failure has been intimated to such constituent entity, the period for submission of the report would be six months from the end of the month in which said systemic failure has been intimated.

(f) Nomination of one constituent entity for furnishing CbC report [Proviso to sub-section (4)]: If there are more than one such constituent entity of the group, resident in India, other than the parent entity or the alternate reporting entity, then the group can nominate (under intimation in writing on behalf of the group to the prescribed authority), then, one constituent entity that shall furnish the report on behalf of the group. This entity would then furnish the report.

(g) No obligation to furnish CbC report in certain cases [Sub-section (5)]: If an international group, having parent entity which is not resident in India, had designated an alternate entity for filing its report with the tax jurisdiction in which the alternate entity is resident and such alternate entity has furnished such report on or before the date specified by that country or territory, then, the entities of such group operating in India would not be obliged to furnish report if

- the report is required to be furnished under the law for the time being in force in the said country or territory
- the report can be obtained under the agreement of exchange of such reports by Indian tax authorities
- No systemic failure in respect of the said country or territory has been conveyed to any constituent entity of the group that is resident in India
- the said country or territory has been informed in writing by the constituent entity that it is the alternative reporting entity on behalf of the international group
- the same has been informed to the prescribed authority by the entity in accordance with section 286(1).

(h) Entity to furnish documents and information called for [Sub-section (6)]: The DGIT (Risk Assessment) may call for such document and information from the entity furnishing the report as it may specify in notice in writing for the purpose of verifying the accuracy. The entity shall be required to make submission within thirty days of receipt of notice or further period if extended by the prescribed authority, but extension shall not be beyond a further period of 30 days.

(ix) Penalty for non-furnishing of the report by any reporting entity which is obligated to furnish such report [Section 271GB(1) & (3)]

	Period of delay/ b default	Penalty
(a)	Not more than a month	₹ 5,000 per day
(b)	beyond one month	₹ 15,000 per day for the period exceeding one month

(c)	Continuing default even after service of order levying penalty either under (a) or under (b)	₹ 50,000 per day of continuing failure beginning from the date of service of order

(x) Penalty for failure to produce information and documents within prescribed time [Section 271GB(2) & (3)]

	Default	Penalty
(a)	Failure to produce information before prescribed authority within the period allowed u/s 286(6)	₹ 5,000 per day of continuing failure, from the day immediately following the day on which the period for furnishing the information and document expires.
(b)	Continuing default even after service of penalty order	₹ 50,000 per day for the period of default beyond the date of service of penalty order.

(xi) Penalty for submission of inaccurate information in the CBC report [Section 271GB(4)]

If the reporting entity has provided any inaccurate information in the report, the penalty would be ₹ 5,00,000 if,-

(a) the entity has knowledge of the inaccuracy at the time of furnishing the report but does not inform the prescribed authority; or

(b) the entity discovers the inaccuracy after the report is furnished and fails to inform the prescribed authority and furnish correct report within a period of fifteen days of such discovery; or

(c) the entity furnishes inaccurate information or document in response to notice of the prescribed authority under section 286(6).

(xii) Non-levy of penalty if reasonable cause for failure is proved [Section 273B]

Section 273B provides for non-levy of penalty under various sections if the assessee proves that there was reasonable cause for such failure. Section 271GB has been included within the scope of section 273B. Therefore, the entity can offer reasonable cause defence for non-levy of penalties mentioned above.

	Section	Provision
(1)	92D(1)(ii)	Every person, being constituent entity of an international group, has to keep and maintain the prescribed information and document in respect of the international group. Constituent entity has to keep and maintain such prescribed information and document irrespective of the fact whether or not any international transaction is undertaken by such constituent entity.

		The rules shall, thereafter, prescribe the information and document as mandated for master file under OECD BEPS Action 13 report;
(2)	92D(4)	The information and document shall also be furnished to the prescribed authority u/s 286(1) within such period as may be prescribed and the manner of furnishing may also be provided for in the rules
(3)	271AA(2)	For non-furnishing of the information and document to the prescribed authority, a penalty of ₹ 5 lakh shall be leviable.
(4)	273B	Reasonable cause defence against levy of penalty shall be available to the entity.

(i)	Permanent establishment	Meaning assigned to it in clause (iiia) of section 92F i.e., includes a fixed place of business through which the business of the enterprise is wholly or partly carried on.
(j)	Reporting accounting year	The accounting year in respect of which the financial and operational results are required to be reflected in the report to be furnished every year by the parent entity or the alternate reporting entity, resident in India, in respect of the international group of which it is a constituent under section 286(2) or by a constituent entity of an international group referred to in section 286(4).
(k)	Reporting entity	The constituent entity including the parent entity or the alternate reporting entity, that is required to furnish a report referred to in section 286(2) and 286(4).
(l)	Systemic failure	Systemic failure, with respect to a country or territory, means that the country or territory has an agreement with India providing for exchange of report of the nature referred to in section 286(2), but— (i) in violation of the said agreement, it has suspended automatic exchange; or (ii) has persistently failed to automatically provide to India the report in its possession in respect of any international group having a constituent entity resident in India

(3) Transfer pricing for Specified Domestic Transactions

(i) Income from domestic related party transactions to be subject to transfer pricing [Section 92(2A)]: Section 92 provides that any income arising from an international transaction shall be computed having regard to the arm's length price. In order to provide objectivity in determination of income from domestic related party transactions and determination of reasonableness of expenditure between related domestic parties, the provisions of section 92 have been extended to include within its ambit the specified domestic transactions. Section 92(2A) provides that, any allowance for an expenditure or interest or allocation of any cost or expense or any income in relation to the specified domestic transaction shall be computed having regard to the arm's length price. However, as per section 92(3), the provisions of this section would not apply if such allowance for expense or interest under section 92(2A) has the effect of reducing the income chargeable to tax or increasing the loss, as the case may be.

(ii) Meaning of "specified domestic transaction" [Section 92BA]: Section 92BA provides the meaning of "specified domestic transaction". As per section 92BA, for the purpose of sections 92, 92C (Computation of arm's length price), 92D (Maintenance and keeping of information and documents) and 92E (Furnishing of report from an accountant), in case of an assessee the specified domestic transaction shall mean any of the following transactions, not being an international transaction, namely,-

(1) any transaction referred to in section 80A i.e., inter-unit transfer of goods and services by an undertaking or unit or enterprise or eligible business to other business carried on by the assessee or vice versa, for consideration not corresponding to the market value on the date of transfer;

(2) any transfer of goods or services referred to in section 80-IA(8) i.e., inter-unit transfer of goods or services between eligible business and other business, where the consideration for transfer does not correspond with the market value of goods and services;

(3) any business transacted between the assessee carrying on eligible business and other person as referred to section 80-IA(10);

(4) any transaction, referred to in any other section under Chapter VI-A or section 10AA, to which provisions of section 80-IA(8) or section 80-IA(10) are applicable; or

(5) any other transaction as may be prescribed,

(iii) However, the above mentioned transactions shall not be treated as specified domestic transaction in case the aggregate of such transactions entered into by the assessee in the previous year does not exceed a sum of ₹ 20 crore.

(iv) Arm's length price and income of a specified domestic transaction to be computed in the same manner as applicable to an international transaction [Sections 92 & 92C]: In order to determine the arm's length price in respect of the specified domestic transaction, the provisions of section 92 and 92C shall apply to the specified domestic transaction as they apply to the international transaction. Accordingly, the methods of computation of arm's length price for an international transaction would be applicable to a specified domestic transaction also.

(v) Persons entering into a specified domestic transaction to maintain information and documents and furnish report of an accountant [Section 92D & 92E]: With a view to create a legally enforceable obligation on assessees entering into a specified domestic transaction to maintain proper documentation and obtain and furnish report of a Chartered Accountant on or before the specified date, the provisions of section 92D and 92E have been made applicable to a specified domestic transaction as they apply to an international transaction.

(vi) Reference to Transfer Pricing Officer for computation of arm's length price of specified domestic transaction [Section 92CA]: According to section 92CA, where any person has entered into an international or a specified domestic transaction in any previous year, the Assessing Officer can with the previous approval of the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, if he considers necessary or expedient to do so, refer the computation of the arm's length price of such transaction to the Transfer Pricing Officer (TPO).

When such reference is made, TPO can call upon the assessee to produce evidence in support of the computation of arm's length price made by him in respect of such transaction.

The TPO has to pass an order determining the arm's length price in respect of the specified domestic transaction after considering the evidence, documents, etc. produced by the assessee and after considering the material gathered by him. He has to send a copy of his order to the Assessing Officer as well as the assessee.

However, the powers available to the TPO to determine the ALP of other international transactions identified subsequently in the course of proceedings before him, is not available in respect of other specified domestic transaction i.e., the TPO can determine the ALP in respect of other international transaction that came to his notice subsequently during the course of proceedings but such power is not available in respect of specified domestic transaction subsequently identified.

(vii) Penalty provisions to apply to specified domestic transactions as they apply to an international transaction [Sections 271AA, 271BA & 271G]: The penalty provisions under sections 271AA, 271BA and 271G shall apply to the specified domestic transaction as they apply to an international transaction defined under section 92B.

Failure to furnish the report under section 92E from an accountant would attract penalty of ₹ 1,00,000 under section 271BA.

In addition,

(i) in case of failure to keep and maintain information, document as required under section 92D(1) or 92D(2); or

(ii) failure to report such specified domestic transaction which is required to be reported; or

(iii) maintain or furnishes incorrect information or document penalty under section 271AA at 2% of the value of each transaction would be attracted.

Penalty@2% of value of specified domestic transaction would be attracted under section 271G for failure to furnish the prescribed information or document as required under section 92D(3) within the period of 30 days from the date of receipt of notice or the extended period not exceeding another 30 days, as the case may be.

(viii) Market value to be the arm's length price of goods or services in a specified domestic transaction [Section 80A & 80-IA(8)]: As per the provisions of section 80A(6), in a case where the goods or services held for the purpose of the undertaking or unit or enterprise or eligible business are transferred to any other business carried on by the assessee or where any goods or services held for the purposes of any other business carried on by the assessee are transferred to the undertaking or unit or enterprise or eligible business, the transfer price of such goods and services shall be determined at the market value of such goods or services as on the date of transfer.

Clause (iii) of Explanation to section 80A(6) clarifies that "market value" in relation to any goods or services sold, supplied or acquired, means the arm's length price as defined under section 92F of such goods or services, if it is a specified domestic transaction referred to in section 92BA i.e., the aggregate value of all such transaction specified in section 92BA exceeds ₹ 20 crore.

Therefore, in case the transfer of goods and services between undertaking or unit or enterprise or eligible business and any other business of the assessee takes place at the arm's length price, such arm's length price shall be the market value for the purpose of section 80A(6), and no further adjustment would be required in respect of the same, if the transaction is a specified domestic transaction.

(ix) Similarly, for the purpose of section 80-IA(8), the market value, in relation to any goods or services transferred between the eligible business and any other business carried on by the assessee, shall mean -

(1) the price that such goods or services would ordinarily fetch in the open market; or

(2) the arm's length price as defined under section 92F, where the transfer of such goods or services is a specified domestic transaction referred to in section 92BA.

(x) Profit from transactions between an assessee carrying on "eligible business" and other assessees to be determined as per arm's length price [Section 80-IA(10)]: Under section 80-IA(10), the Assessing Officer is empowered to make an adjustment while computing the profit and gains of the eligible business on the basis of the reasonable profit that can be derived from the transaction, in case the transaction between the assessee carrying on the eligible business under section 80-IA and any other person is so arranged that the transaction produces excessive profits to the eligible business.

It has been provided that if the aforesaid arrangement between the assessee carrying on the eligible business and any other person is a specified domestic transaction referred to in section 92BA, then, the amount of profit of such transaction shall be determined having regard to arm's length price as defined under section 92F and not as per the reasonable profit from such transaction.

(xi) Transfer Pricing Rules made applicable to Specified Domestic Transactions as well [Notification No. 41/2013 dated 10.06.2013]

With effect from A.Y 2013-14, the transfer pricing provisions have been extended to Specified Domestic Transactions. Accordingly, the transfer pricing rules prescribed for international transactions have been suitably amended to make the same applicable for specified domestic transactions, as well.

Rule No.	Particulars	Amendment
10A	Meaning of expressions used in computation of Arm's length price	Definition of "associated enterprise" and "enterprise" included "Associated Enterprise" shall - (i) have the same meaning as assigned to it in section 92A; and (ii) in relation to a specified domestic transaction entered into by an assessee, include - (A) other units or undertakings or businesses of such assessee in respect of a transaction referred to in section 80A or section 80-IA(8); (B) any other person referred to in section 80-IA(10) in respect of a transaction referred to therein; (C) other units, undertakings, enterprises or business of such assessee, or other person referred to in section 80-IA(10) or in respect of a transaction referred to in section 10AA or the transactions referred to in Chapter VI-A to which the provisions of section 80-IA(8) or section 80-IA(10) are applicable; "Enterprise" shall have the same meaning as assigned to it in clause (iii) of section 92F and shall, for the purposes of a specified domestic transaction, include a unit, or an enterprise, or an undertaking or a business of a person who undertakes such transaction.
10AB	Other methods of determination of ALP	This Rule provides that for the purpose of section 92C(1)(f), the other method for determination of the arm's length price in relation to an international transaction shall be any method which takes into account the price which has been charged or paid or would have been charged or paid, for the same or similar uncontrolled transaction, with or between non-associated enterprises, under similar circumstances, considering all the relevant facts. This Rule has now been made applicable to specified domestic transactions as well.
10B	Determination of ALP under section 92C	The methods for determination of arm's length price specified in this Rule for the purpose of section 92C(2) in relation to an international transaction shall also be made applicable in respect of specified domestic transactions.
10C	Most appropriate	Sub-rule (1) provides that, for the purposes of section 92C(1), the most appropriate method shall be the method which is best method	suited to the facts and circumstances of each particular international transaction, and which provides the most reliable measure of an arm's length price in relation to an international transaction. Sub-rule (2) specifies the factors to be taken into account in selecting the most appropriate method. This Rule is made applicable in respect of a specified domestic transaction as well.

10D	Information and documents to be kept and maintained under section 92D	Sub-rule (1) requires every person who has entered into an international transaction or specified domestic transaction to maintain the requisite information and documents as detailed thereunder. As per sub-rule (2), maintenance of information and documents shall not apply where the aggregate value of international transactions does not exceed ₹ 1 crore. However, sub-rule (1) shall be applicable for every specified domestic transaction irrespective of its value.
10E	Report from an accountant to be furnished under section 92E	This rule provides for submission of audit report from a chartered accountant by every person who has entered into an international transaction. This provision would also apply to a person entered into a specified domestic transaction as well.

(xii) Safe Harbour Rules notified for Specified Domestic Transactions [Rule 10TH to Rule 10THD]

Section 92CB(1) provides that the determination of arm's length price under section 92C or section 92CA shall be subject to safe harbour rules. Section 92CB(2) empowers the CBDT to prescribe safe harbour rules.

Safe harbour means circumstances in which the income tax authorities shall accept the transfer price declared by the assessee.

Accordingly, the CBDT has, in exercise of the powers conferred by section 92CB and 92D, read with section 295, inserted Rules 10TH, 10THA, 10THB, 10THC & 10THD providing the safe harbour rules for specified domestic transactions.

Rule	Rule heading	Particulars
10THA	Definitions: Appropriate Commission →	Meaning assigned to it in section 2(4) of the Electricity Act, 2003. Appropriate Commission means the Central Regulatory Commission referred to in sub-section (1) of section 76 or the State Regulatory Commission referred to in section 82 or the Government Company	Joint Commission referred to in section 83, as the case may be, of the Electricity Act, 2003. → Meaning assigned to it in section 2(45) of the Companies Act, 2013. Government company means any company in which not less than 51% of the paid-up share capital is held by the Central Government, or by any State Government or Governments, or partly by the Central Government and partly by one or more State Governments, and includes a company which is a subsidiary company of such a Government company.

10THA	Eligible assessee	• A person who has exercised a valid option for application of safe harbour Rules in accordance with the provisions of Rule 10THC, AND • is a Government company engaged in the business of generation, supply, transmission or distribution of electricity; or • is a co-operative society engaged in the business of procuring and marketing milk and milk products.
10THC	Safe harbour	(1) Where an eligible assessee has entered into an eligible specified domestic transaction in any previous year relevant to an assessment year and the option exercised by the said assessee is treated to be validly exercised under Rule 10THD, the transfer price declared by the assessee in respect of such transaction for that assessment year shall be accepted by the income-tax authorities, if it is in accordance with the circumstances specified in Rule 10THC(2). (2) The following are the circumstances in respect of the eligible specified domestic transaction.

S. No.	Eligible specified domestic Transaction	Circumstances
1	Supply of electricity, transmission of electricity, wheeling of electricity	The tariff in respect of supply of electricity, transmission of electricity, wheeling of electricity, as the case may be, is determined or the methodology for determination of the tariff is approved by the Appropriate Commission in accordance with the provisions of the Electricity Act, 2003.
2	Purchase of milk or milk products by a co-operative society from its members	The price of milk or milk products is determined at a rate which is fixed on the basis of the quality of milk, namely, fat content and Solid Not Fat (SNF) content of milk; and – (a) the said rate is irrespective of,- (i) the quantity of milk procured; (ii) the percentage of shares held by the members in the co-operative society; (iii) the voting power held by the members in the society; and (b) such prices are routinely declared by the co-operative society in a transparent manner and are available in public domain.

(3) No comparability adjustment and allowance under the second proviso to section 92C(2) shall be made to the transfer price declared by the eligible assessee and accepted by the income-tax authority.

(4) The provisions of sections 92D relating to maintenance and keeping of information and document and section

		92E for submission of report from an accountant in respect of a specified domestic transaction shall apply irrespective of the fact that the assessee exercises his option for safe harbour in respect of such transaction.
10THD	Procedure	Furnishing of Form 3CEFB The assessee has to furnish Form 3CEFB, complete in all respects, to the Assessing Officer on or before the due date for furnishing the return of income for the relevant assessment year specified in Explanation 2 to section 139(1), for exercising the option of safe harbour. The return of income should be furnished on or before the date of submitting the Form 3CEFB. Verification by the Assessing Officer Before treating the option for safe harbor by the assessee as validly exercised, the Assessing Officer has to verify whether the assessee exercising the option is an eligible assessee and the transaction in respect of which the option is exercised is an eligible specified domestic transaction. Furnishing of documents or information required by the Assessing Officer Assessing Officer may issue a notice to the assessee to furnish such information or documents or other evidence as he may consider necessary. The assessee has to furnish the same within the specified time in such notice. Circumstances when option exercised can be declared Invalid The Assessing Officer shall, by order in writing, declare the option exercised by the assessee as invalid and cause a copy of the order to be served on the assessee if – (i) the assessee does not furnish the information or documents or other evidence required by the Assessing Officer (ii) the Assessing Officer finds that the assessee is not an eligible assessee (iii) the Assessing Officer finds that the specified domestic transaction in respect of which option has been exercised is not an eligible specified domestic transaction (iv) the tariff is not in accordance with the circumstances specified in Rule 10THC.

		Order by Assessing Officer The Assessing Officer shall pass the order declaring the option exercised by the assessee as invalid within a period of 3 months from the end of the month in which Form 3CEFB is received by him. No order can be passed declaring the option exercised by the assessee invalid unless an opportunity of being heard is given to him. Filling of objections against the order of Assessing Officer by the assessee If the assessee objects to the order of the Assessing Officer declaring the option to be invalid, he may file his objections with the Principal Commissioner or the Commissioner or the Principal Director or the Director, as the case may be, to whom the Assessing Officer is subordinate, within 15 days of receipt of the order of the Assessing Officer. On receipt of objection, the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner or Principal Director or Director, as the case may be, shall, after providing an opportunity of being heard to the assessee, pass appropriate order, within a period of 2 months from the end of the month in which the objection filed by the assessee is received by him, in respect of the validity or otherwise of the option exercised by the assessee. A copy of the said order has to be served on the assessee and the Assessing Officer. If the Assessing Officer or the Principal Commissioner or the Commissioner or the Principal Director or the Director, as the case may be, does not pass an order within the specified time, then the option for safe harbour exercised by the assessee shall be treated as valid.

(xiii) Information and documents to be kept and maintained under section 92D in case of an eligible assessee referred to in Rule 10THA in respect of eligible specified domestic transaction [Rule 10D(2A)]:

Section 92D(1)(i) provides that every person who has entered into an international transaction or specified domestic transaction shall keep and maintain prescribed information and document.

Rule 10D(1) provides for information and documents to be maintained under section 92D. Sub-rule (2A) in Rule 10D provides that nothing contained in Rule 10D(1) in so far as it relates to specified domestic transaction referred to in Rule 10THB, shall apply in the case of an eligible assessee referred to in Rule 10THA.

The information and documents to be maintained by an eligible assessee referred to in Rule 10THA relating to an eligible specified domestic transaction referred to in Rule 10THB are given in Rule 10D(2A) as follows:

Rule	Eligible Assessee	Information and documents to be kept and maintained
10THA(i)	A government company engaged in the business of generation, supply, transmission or distribution of electricity	(i) a description of the ownership structure of the assessee enterprise with details of shares or other ownership interest held therein by other enterprises; (ii) a broad description of the business of the assessee and the industry in which the assessee operates, and of the business of the associated enterprises with whom the assessee has transacted; (iii) the nature and terms (including prices) of specified domestic transactions entered into with each associated enterprise and the quantum and value of each such transaction or class of such transaction; (iv) a record of proceedings, if any, before the regulatory commission and orders of such commission relating to the specified domestic transaction; (v) a record of the actual working carried out for determining the transfer price of the specified domestic transaction; (vi) the assumptions, policies and price negotiations, if any, which have critically affected the determination of the transfer price; and (vii) any other information, data or document, including information or data relating to the associated enterprise, which may be relevant for determination of the transfer price.
10THA(ii)	A co-operative society engaged in the business of procuring and marketing milk and milk products	(i) a description of the ownership structure of the assessee co-operative society with details of shares or other ownership interest held therein by the members; (ii) description of members including their addresses and period of membership; (iii) the nature and terms (including prices) of specified domestic transactions entered into with each member and the quantum and value of each such transaction or class of such transaction; (iv) a record of the actual working carried out for determining the transfer price of the specified domestic transaction; (v) the assumptions, policies and price negotiations, if any, which have critically affected the determination of the transfer price; (vi) the documentation regarding price being routinely declared in transparent manner and being available in public domain; and (vii) any other information, data or document which may be relevant for determination of the transfer price.

The above information should be supported by authentic documents. Both the information and documents must be contemporaneous and should exist latest by the due date of filing return under section 139(1) i.e., 30th November of the assessment year. Such information and documents have to be kept ad maintained for a period of eight years from the end of the relevant assessment year.

1.6 TRANSFER OF INCOME TO NON RESIDENTS [SECTION 93]

Section 93 hits at transactions which are effected with a view to avoiding liability to taxation. For the purpose, the word “non-resident” also includes a person who is not-ordinarily resident. In order to attract the provisions of this section, all the following conditions must be satisfied:

(a) There is a transfer of assets - whether movable or immovable and whether tangible or intangible.

(b) The transfer is made by any person in India or outside irrespective of his residential status or citizenship.

(c) The transfer is made either alone or in connection with associated operations.

(d) The assets transferred directly yield income chargeable to tax under this Act.

(e) The transfer of assets is effected in such a manner that the income becomes payable to a person outside India who is either a non-resident or a not ordinarily resident in India.

(f) The transferor acquires any right by virtue of which he gets the power to enjoy the income whether immediately or in future.

(g) The Assessing Officer is satisfied that avoidance of liability to tax in India is the purpose of the transfers.

In particular, this section deems any income of a non-resident person which, if it were the income of a resident person, would be chargeable to tax in India (in the absence of this Section), as the income of the resident person in India for all purposes of the Act provided that all the conditions stated above are satisfied. This section also covers a variety of transactions constituting a transfer including cases where assets are transferred to a non-resident person and the transferor indirectly derives income under the guise of obtaining loans or repayment of loans. If the aforesaid conditions are fulfilled, the income from the assets transferred should be treated as the income of the transferor and would accordingly be taxable in his hands. Therefore, where assets are transferred to a body corporate outside India, in consideration of shares allotted by it to the transferor, he (the transferor), will become assessable under this section in respect of the income of the company derived by it from those assets. This section will not, however, apply to cases where it is shown to the satisfaction of the Assessing Officer that (i) neither the transfer nor any associated operation had for its purpose or for one of its purposes the avoidance of liability to taxation or (ii) it is provided to the satisfaction of the Assessing Officer that the transfer was effected for bonafide commercial purpose and with no intent to avoid tax.

The income which is deemed to be that of the transferor under this section may also arise as a result of the transfer in connection with associated operations. However, in this case also, the treatment of the income would be the same.

Meaning of "associated operation": The expression 'associated operation," in relation to a transfer, means an operation of any kind effected by any person in relation to:

(i) any of the assets transferred;

(ii) any assets representing, whether directly or indirectly, any of the assets transferred;

(iii) any income arising from such assets;

(iv) any assets representing, whether directly or indirectly, the accumulation of income arising from such assets.

Meaning of "Assets": It includes property or rights of any kind.

Meaning of "transfer": In relation to rights, transfer includes the creation of those rights.

Meaning of "benefit": It includes a payment of any kind.

In order to determine the liability of the assessee in respect of the deemed income it is immaterial if the income or benefits from the transfer (i) are actually received or not or (ii) are received or are receivable in cash or kind or (iii) are receivable directly or indirectly. For purposes of this section, a person is deemed to have the power to enjoy the income of a non-resident if:

(i) the income, in fact, so dealt with by any person as to be calculated at some point of time to enure for the benefit of the transferor, whether in the same form of the income or otherwise;

(ii) the receipt or accrual of the income operates to increase value of any assets held by the transferor or for his direct or indirect benefit;

(iii) the transferor receives or is entitled to receive at any time any benefit out of the income or out of any money available for the purpose by reason of the effect or successive effects of the associated operations on that income and the assets which represent that income;

(iv) the transferor is in a position to obtain for himself the beneficial enjoyment of the income by exercising any power of appointment or power of revocation or otherwise, whether with or without the consent of any other person, or

(v) the transferor is able to control directly or indirectly the application of the income in any manner whatsoever.

However, in determining whether a person has the power to enjoy the income due regard shall be had to the substantial result and effect of the transfer and any associated operations must be taken into consideration irrespective of the nature or form of the benefits.

It may be noted that where an assessee has been charged to tax in respect of a sum deemed to be his income under this section, the subsequent receipt of that sum by the assessee, whether as income or in any other form, shall not be liable to tax in his hands at the time of receipt.

1.7 TRANSACTIONS IN SECURITIES [SECTION 94]

Section 94 aims at preventing avoidance of tax by an assessee by sale or purchase of securities in devices and under different circumstances. In all cases where there is a transfer of shares or securities before the due date of payment of interest whereby the transferor avoids tax or shifts the burden of tax to some other person, the income from the securities transferred shall be deemed to be that of the transferor and shall be assessable in his hands accordingly.

Bond washing transactions: Bond washing transactions, i.e. cases of sale of securities and shares cum-interest or cum-dividend would fall within the provisions of the section. Income by way of interest on securities or dividends does not accrue day by day but on a certain fixed date or on the date of declaration, as the case may be. Accordingly, the seller of securities cum-interest or shares cum-dividends, on accrual of the interest, is not assessable on the interest or dividend income on the securities or shares sold by him since that part of the consideration received would be part of the capital price realised on sale. As a result, if a person, on the eve of payment of interest, sells or otherwise transfers his securities to another and buys back or re-acquires the same after the interest income had been received by the transfer would escape tax thereon. This would amount to either total avoidance of tax or shifting the burden of tax by the transferor indirectly and transactions of this type are commonly known as bond washing transaction. In order to prevent this type of avoidance of tax by the assessee, it has been specifically provided that where the owner of any shares or securities sells or otherwise transfers them and then buys them back or otherwise re-acquires them, the interest received by the transferee shall be the income of the transferor.

Similarly, in cases where shares or securities are sold by the owner of such shares or securities or by a person having beneficial interest therein and, as a result of the sale, the transferor receives either no income or less income from the securities or shares than that which would have been received by him, had the sale not been made, then the income from such securities or shares of such year shall be deemed to be the income of the transferor. Thus, this provision applies only to cases where

(i) the income accrues or falls due periodically and

(ii) the income in question is of a recurring nature, though the interval of time between the two dates of accrual may not equal (e.g., dividends).

However, the notional dividends specified in section 2(22) would not be covered by this section and the assessment of such fictional dividends should be made only in the hands of the person who is entitled to the same and not in the hands of the transferor.

There is however, one exception to both the above provisions given in sub-section (3). According to the exception, the above provisions would not apply (i) if there has been no avoidance of tax, (ii) if the avoidance was exceptional and not systematic and there was no avoidance of income-tax by the assessee during the three years immediately preceding the previous year. It is for the assessee to prove to the satisfaction of the Assessing Officer that there had been no avoidance of tax or that the avoidance of tax is exceptional and not systematic.

Where any person carrying on business, wholly or in part, as a dealer in shares and securities, buys or acquires any security and sells back or re-transfers the same, then, the interest, received or receivable by him in respect of such securities, which is deemed to be the income of the transferor, shall not be taken into account for computing his business income.

The Assessing Officer is empowered to issue a notice in writing requiring any person to furnish to him within a specified time (not being less than 28 days) in respect of all securities of which such person was the owner or in which he had a beneficial interest at any time during the period specified by him in the notice, such particulars at he may consider necessary for purposes of this Section and for the purpose of ascertaining whether tax has been borne in respect of interest or dividends on all those securities or shares.

(a) If any person buys or acquires any securities or unit within a period of three months prior to the record date and

(b) such person sells or transfers –

    (i) such securities within a period of three months after such date, or

    (ii) such unit within a period of nine months after such date and

(c) the dividend or income on such securities or unit received or receivable by such person is exempted, then, the loss, if any, arising therefrom shall be ignored for the purposes of computing his income chargeable to tax. Such loss should not exceed the amount of dividend or income received or receivable on such securities or unit [Sub-section (7)].

Where

(a) any person buys or acquires any units within a period of three months prior to the record date;

(b) such person is allotted additional units without any payment on the basis of holding such units on such date;

(c) such person sells or transfers all or any of the units referred to in (a) above within a period of nine months after such date, while continuing to hold all or any of the additional units referred to in (b), then –

  (i) the loss on sale of original units sold within a period of 9 months after the record date will be ignored and

  (ii) the amount of such loss will be considered as the cost of purchase or acquisition of the bonus units held by him on the date of such sale or transfer.

For the purposes of this section,-

	Term	Meaning
(i)	Interest	Interest includes dividend
(ii)	Record date	Such date as may be fixed by - (i) A company for the purposes of entitlement of the holder of the securities to receive dividend; or (ii) A mutual fund or the Administrator of the specified undertaking or the specified company as referred to in the Explanation to section 10(35), for the purposes of entitlement of the holder of the units to receive income, or additional unit without any consideration, as the case may be.
(iii)	Securities	The term includes stocks and shares.
(iv)	Unit	Unit of a mutual fund specified in section 10(23D) or unit of the Unit Trust of India.

1.8 INTRODUCTION OF SPECIFIC ANTI AVOIDANCE MEASURES IN RESPECT OF TRANSACTIONS WITH PERSONS LOCATED IN NOTIFIED JURISDICTIONAL AREA [SECTION 94A]

The objective of anti-avoidance measures is to discourage assessees from entering into transactions with persons located in countries or territories which do not have effective information exchange mechanism with India. The following are the anti-avoidance measures introduced -

(i) The Central Government empowered to notify any such country or territory outside India as a NJA (Notified Jurisdictional Area), having regard to the lack of effective exchange of information with such country or territory.

> Clarification on removal of Cyprus from the list of notified jurisdictional area under section 94A of the Income-tax Act, 1961 – [Circular No. 15/2017, dated 21-04-2017]
> Cyprus was specified as a "notified jurisdictional area" (NJA) under section 94A of the Income-tax Act, 1961 vide Notification No. 86/2013 dated 01.11.2013. The said Notification No. 86/2013 was subsequently rescinded vide Notification No. 114 dated 14.12.2016 and Notification No. 119 dated 16.12.2016 with effect from the date of issue of the notification.
> The CBDT has, vide this Circular, clarified that Notification No. 86/2013 has been rescinded with effect from the date of issue of the said notification, thereby, removing Cyprus as a notified jurisdictional area with retrospective effect from 01.11.2013.

(ii) A transaction where one of the parties thereto is a person located in a NJA would be deemed to be an international transaction then all parties to the transaction to be deemed as associated enterprises, and accordingly, all the provisions of transfer pricing to be attracted in case of such a transaction. However, the benefit of permissible variation between the ALP and the transfer price [provided for in the second proviso to section 92C(2)] based on the rate notified by the Central Government would not be available in respect of such transaction.

(iii) Such transaction may be in the nature of –

(1) purchase, sale or lease of tangible or intangible property or

(2) provision of service or

(3) lending or borrowing money or

(4) any other transaction having a bearing on the profits, income, losses or assets of the assessee. It may include a mutual agreement or arrangement for allocation or apportionment of, or contribution to, any cost or expense incurred or to be incurred in connection with a benefit, service or facility provided or to be provided by or to the assessee.

(iv) Person located in a NJA shall include a person who is a resident of the NJA and a person, not being an individual, which is established in the NJA. It would also include a permanent establishment of any other person in the NJA.

(v) Payments made to any financial institution located in a NJA would not be allowed as deduction unless the assessee authorizes the CBDT or any other income-tax authority acting on its behalf to seek relevant information from the financial institution on behalf of the assessee.

(vi) No deduction in respect of any other expenditure or allowance, including depreciation, arising from the transaction with a person located in a NJA would be allowed unless the assessee maintains the relevant documents and furnishes the prescribed information.

(vii) Any sum credited or received from a person located in a NJA to be deemed to be the income of the recipient-assessee if he does not explain satisfactorily the source of such money in the hands of such person or in the hands of the beneficial owner, if such person is not the beneficial owner.

(viii) The rate of TDS in respect of any payment made to a person located in the NJA, on which tax is deductible at source, will be the higher of the following rates –

(1) rates specified in the relevant provision of the Income-tax Act, 1961; or

(2) rate or rates in force; or

(3) 30%.

ILLUSTRATION 1

A Ltd., an Indian company, provides technical services to a company, XYZ Inc., located in a NJA for a consideration of ₹ 40 lakhs in October, 2019. It charges ₹ 42 lakhs for similar services rendered to PQR Inc., which is not located in a NJA. PQR Inc. is not an associated enterprise of A Ltd.

Discuss the tax implications under section 94A read with section 92C in respect of the above transaction of provision of technical services by A Ltd. to XYZ Inc.

SOLUTION

Since XYZ Inc. is located in a NJA, the transaction of provision of technical services by the Indian company, A Ltd., would be deemed to be an international transaction and XYZ Inc. and A Ltd. would be deemed to be associated enterprises. Therefore, the provisions of transfer pricing would be attracted in this case.

The price of ₹ 42 lakhs charged for similar services from PQR Inc, being an independent entity located in a non-NJA country, can be taken into consideration for determining the arm's length price (ALP) under Comparable Uncontrolled Price (CUP) Method.

Since the ALP is more than the transfer price, the ALP of ₹ 42 lakhs would be considered as the income arising from the international transaction between A Ltd. and XYZ Inc.

It may be noted that the benefit of permissible variation between the ALP and transfer price is not available in respect of a transaction entered into with an entity in NJA.

ILLUSTRATION 2

Mr. X, a non-resident individual, is due to receive interest of ₹ 5 lakhs during March 2020 from a notified infrastructure debt fund eligible for exemption under section 10(47). He incurred expenditure amounting to ₹ 10,000 for earning such income. Assuming that Mr. X is a resident of a NJA, discuss the tax implications under section 94A, read with sections 115A and 194LB.

SOLUTION

The interest income received by Mr. X, a non-resident, from a notified infrastructure debt fund would be subject to a concessional tax rate of 5% under section 115A on the gross amount of such interest income. Therefore, the tax liability of Mr. X in respect of such income would be ₹ 26,000 (being 5% of ₹ 5 lakhs plus health and education cess@4%).

Under section 194LB, tax is deductible @5% (plus health and education cess@4%) on interest paid by such fund to a non-resident. However, since X is a resident of a NJA, tax would be deductible@30% (plus health and education cess@4%) as per section 94A, and not @5% specified under section 194LB. This is on account of the provisions of section 94A(5), which provides that "Notwithstanding anything contained in any other provision of this Act, where a person located in a NJA is entitled to receive any sum or income or amount on which tax is deductible under Chapter XVII-B, the tax shall be deducted at the highest of the following rates, namely–

(a) at the rate or rates in force;

(b) at the rate specified in the relevant provision of the Act;

(c) at the rate of thirty per cent."

Mr. X can, however, claim refund of excess tax deducted along with interest.

1.9 LIMITATION OF INTEREST DEDUCTION IN CERTAIN CASES [SECTION 94B]

(1) Preference of debt over equity as a measure to finance businesses: Debt and equity are the instruments through which a company is generally financed or capitalized. The manner in which a company is capitalized has a major impact on the amount of taxable profit as the tax laws of countries generally provide for a deduction in respect of interest paid or payable while arriving at the taxable profit. However, the dividend paid on equity contribution is not deductible. Therefore, the higher the level of debt in a company, and thus, the amount of interest it pays, the lower will be its taxable income. Due to this reason, debt is considered a more tax efficient method of finance than equity. Multinational groups are often able to structure their financing arrangements to maximize tax benefits.

(2) Tax Rules to prevent shifting of profits through excessive interest payments: In order to address this issue, tax rules are in place in each country to fix a ceiling limit on the amount of interest deductible in computing a company's profit for tax purposes. Such rules are designed to counter cross-border shifting of profit through excessive interest payments, with the objective of protecting a country's tax base.

(3) Relevant Action Plan of BEPS: Under the initiative of the G-20 countries, the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) in its Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS) project had taken up the issue of base erosion and profit shifting by way of excess interest deductions by the MNEs in Action Plan 4 and recommended certain measures in its final report.

(4) Insertion of provision in the Income-tax Act, 1961 in line with BEPS Action Plan 4: Section 94B has, accordingly, been inserted in the Income-tax Act, 1961, in line with the recommendations of OECD BEPS Action Plan 4, to provide that interest expenses claimed by an entity to its associated enterprises shall not be deductible in computation of income under the "Profits and gains of business or profession" to the extent that it arises from excess interest.

Excess interest shall mean an amount of

- total interest paid or payable* in excess of 30% of its earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization (EBITDA) of the borrower in the previous year or
- interest paid or payable to associated enterprise for that previous year whichever is less.

Total interest paid or payable may be interpreted as interest paid or payable to non-resident associated enterprise as per the intent expressed in section 94B(1) and also the Explanatory Memorandum to the Finance Bill, 2017.*

(5) Applicability: The provision shall be applicable to an Indian company, or a permanent establishment of a foreign company in India, being the borrower who incurs expenditure by way of interest or similar nature in respect of any form of debt issued by a non-resident who is an 'associated enterprise' of the borrower.

However, the provision of this section would be applicable only where the expenditure by way of interest or of similar nature exceeds ₹ 1 crore, in respect of any form of debt issued by a non-resident, being an 'associated enterprise' of such borrower.

(6) Meaning of debt: Any loan, financial instrument, finance lease, financial derivative, or any arrangement that gives rise to interest, discounts or other finance charges that are deductible in the computation of income chargeable under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession".

(7) Provision of guarantee and deposit of matching amount deemed to be debt issued: Where the debt is issued by a lender which is not associated but an associated enterprise either

- provides an implicit or explicit guarantee to such lender or
- deposits a corresponding and matching amount of funds with the lender, such debt shall be deemed to have been issued by an associated enterprise.

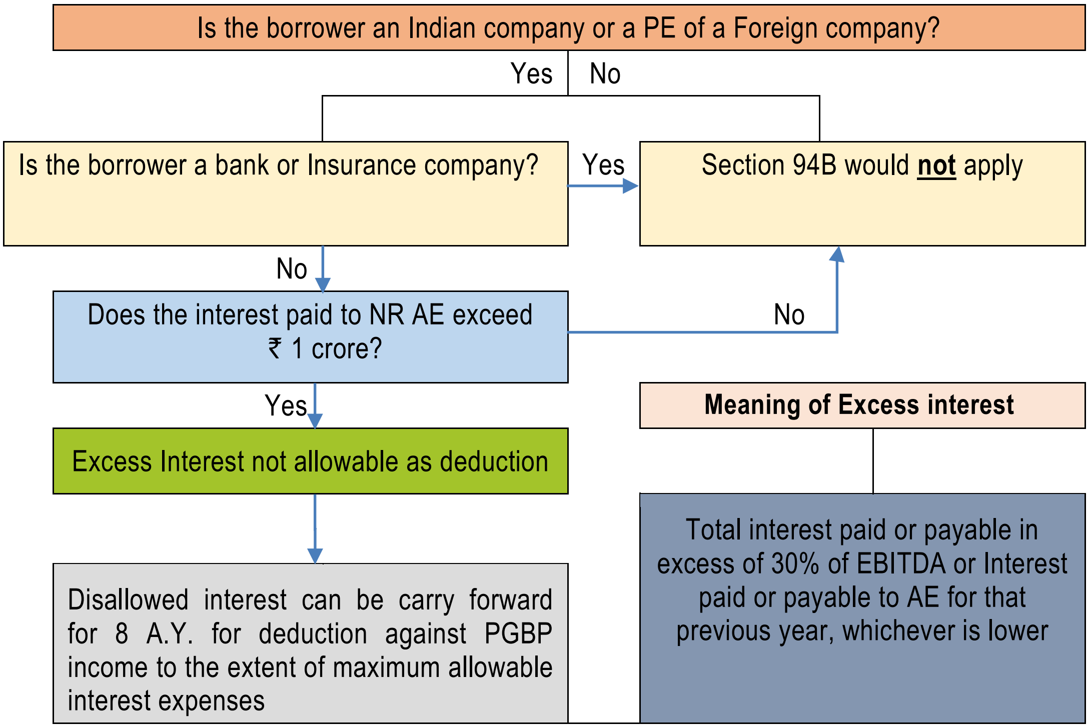
(8) Carry forward of excess interest: The disallowed interest expense can be carried forward upto eight assessment years immediately succeeding the assessment year for which the disallowance was first made and claimed as deduction against the income computed under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession” to the extent of maximum allowable interest expenditure.

(9) Businesses excluded from applicability of the provisions of section 94B: Taking into consideration the special nature of business of Banks and Insurance business, an Indian company or permanent establishment of a foreign company which is engaged in these business have been excluded from the applicability of the provisions of this section.

Limitation of interest deduction (Section 94B): A Summary



Is the borrower an Indian company or a PE of a Foreign company?

Is the borrower a bank or Insurance company?

Section 94B would not apply

Does the interest paid to NR AE exceed ₹ 1 crore?

Excess Interest not allowable as deduction

Disallowed interest can be carry forward for 8 A.Y. for deduction against PGBP income to the extent of maximum allowable interest expenses

Meaning of Excess interest

Total interest paid or payable in excess of 30% of EBITDA or Interest paid or payable to AE for that previous year, whichever is lower

EXERCISE

Question 1

Examine the consequences that would follow if the Assessing Officer makes adjustment to arm's length price in international transactions of the assessee resulting in increase in taxable income. What are the remedies available to the assessee to dispute such adjustment?

Answer

In case the Assessing Officer makes adjustment to arm's length price in an international transaction which results in increase in taxable income of the assessee, the following consequences shall follow:-

(1) No deduction under section 10AA or Chapter VI-A shall be allowed from the income so increased.

(2) No corresponding adjustment would be made to the total income of the other associated enterprise (in respect of payment made by the assessee from which tax has been deducted or is deductible at source) on account of increase in the total income of the assessee on the basis of the arm's length price so recomputed.

The remedies available to the assessee to dispute such an adjustment are:-

(1) In case the assessee is an eligible assessee under section 144C, he can file his objections to the variation made in the income within 30 days [of the receipt of draft order by him] to the Dispute Resolution Panel and Assessing Officer. Appeal against the order of the Assessing Officer in pursuance of the directions of the Dispute Resolution Panel can be made to the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal.

(2) In any other case, he can file an appeal under section 246A to the Commissioner (Appeals) against the order of the Assessing Officer within 30 days of the date of service of notice of demand.

(3) The assessee can opt to file an application for revision of order of the Assessing Officer under section 264 within one year from the date on which the order sought to be revised is communicated, provided the time limit for appeal to the Commissioner (Appeals) or the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal has expired or the assessee has waived the right of such an appeal. The eligibility conditions stipulated in section 264 should be fulfilled.

Question 2

I. Limited, an Indian Company supplied billets to its holding company, U. Limited, UK during the previous year 2019-20. I. Limited also supplied the same product to another UK based company, V. Limited, an unrelated entity. The transactions with U. Limited are priced at Euro 500 per MT (FOB), whereas the transactions with V. Limited are priced at Euro 700 per MT (CIF). Insurance and Freight amounts to Euro 200 per MT. Compute the arm's length price for the transaction with U. Limited.

Answer

In this case, I. Limited, the Indian company, supplied billets to its foreign holding company, U. Limited. Since the foreign company, U. Limited, is the holding company of I. Limited, I. Limited and U. Limited are the associated enterprises within the meaning of section 92A.

As I. Limited supplies similar product to an unrelated entity, V. Limited, UK, the transactions between I. Limited and V. Limited can be considered as comparable uncontrolled transactions for the purpose of determining the arm's length price of the transactions between I. Limited and U. Limited Comparable Uncontrolled Price (CUP) method of determination of arm's length price (ALP) would be applicable in this case.

Transactions with U. Limited are on FOB basis, whereas transactions with V. Limited are on CIF basis. This difference has to be adjusted before comparing the prices.

	Amount (in Euro)
Price per MT of billets to V. Limited	700
Less: Cost of insurance and freight per M.T.	200
Adjusted Price per M.T.	500

Since the adjusted price for V. Limited, UK and the price fixed for U. Limited are the same, the arm's length price is Euro 500 per MT. Since the sale price to related party (i.e., U. Limited) and unrelated party (i.e., V. Limited) is the same, the transaction with related party U. Limited has also been carried out at arm's length price.

Question 3

X Ltd., operating in India, is the dealer for the goods manufactured by Yen Ltd. of Japan. Yen Ltd. owns 55% shares of X Ltd. and out of 7 directors of the company, 4 were appointed by them. The Assessing Officer, after verification of international transactions of ₹ 300 lacs of X Ltd. for the relevant year and by noticing that the company had failed to maintain the requisite records and had also not obtained the accountants report, adjusted its income by making an addition of ₹ 30,00,000 to the declared income and also issued a show cause notice to levy various penalties. X Ltd seeks your expert opinion.

Answer

The facts of the case indicate that X Ltd. and Yen Ltd. of Japan are associated enterprises since Yen Ltd. holds 55% shares of X Ltd. and has appointed more than half of the board of directors of X Ltd. Since Yen Ltd. is a non-resident, any transaction between X Ltd. and Yen Ltd. would fall within the meaning of "international transaction" under section 92B. Therefore, the income arising from such transactions have to be computed having regard to the arm's length price.

The action of the Assessing Officer in making addition to the declared income and issuing show cause notice for levy of various penalties is correct since X Ltd. had committed defaults, as listed hereunder, in respect of which penalty, as briefed hereunder, is imposable -

(i) Failure to report any international transaction or any transaction, deemed to be an international transaction or any specified domestic transaction, to which the provisions of Chapter X applies, would attract penalty @ 200% of the amount of tax payable since it is a case of misreporting of income referred under section 270A(9) read with section 270A(8).

(ii) Failure to maintain the requisite records as required under section 92D in relation to international transaction makes it liable for penalty under section 271AA which will be 2% of the value of each international transaction.

(iii) Failure to furnish report from an accountant as required under section 92E makes it liable for penalty under section 271BA i.e., a fixed penalty of ₹ 1 Lac.

The Assessing Officer shall give an opportunity of hearing to the assessee with a notice as to why the arm's length price should not be determined on the basis of material or information or document in the possession of the Assessing Officer.

Note: It is assumed that X Ltd. has not entered into an APA and has also not opted to be subject to Safe Harbour Rules.

Question 4

Anush Motors Ltd., an Indian company declared income of ₹ 300 crores computed in accordance with Chapter IV-D but before making any adjustments in respect of the following transactions for the year ended on 31.3.2020:

(i) 10,000 cars sold to Rida Ltd., US company, which holds 30% shares in Anush Motors Ltd. at a price which is less by $ 200 each car than the price charged from Shingto Ltd.

(ii) Royalty of $ 1,20,00,000 was paid to Kyoto Ltd., a US company, for use of technical know-how in the manufacturing of car. However, Kyoto Ltd. had provided the same know-how to another Indian company for $ 90,00,000.

(iii) Loan of Euro 1000 crores carrying interest @10% p.a. advanced by Dorf Ltd., a German company, was outstanding on 31.3.2020. The total book value of assets of Anush Motors Ltd. on the date was ₹ 90,000 crores. The said German company had also advanced a loan of similar amount to another Indian company @9% p.a. Total interest paid for the year was EURO 100 crores.

Explain in brief the provisions of the Act affecting all these transactions and compute the income of the company chargeable to tax for A.Y.2020-21 keeping in mind that the value of 1$ and of 1 EURO was ₹ 63 and ₹ 84, respectively, throughout the year.

Answer

Any income arising from an international transaction, where two or more "associated enterprises" enter into a mutual agreement or arrangement, shall be computed having regard to arm's length price as per the provisions of Chapter X of the Act.

Section 92A defines an "associated enterprise" and sub-section (2) of this section speaks of the situations when the two enterprises shall be deemed to associated enterprises. Applying the provisions of section 92A(2)(a) to (m) to the given facts, it is clear that "Anush Motors Ltd." is associated with :-

(i) Rida Ltd. as per section 92A(2)(a), because this company holds shares carrying more than 26% of the voting power in Anush Motors Ltd.;

(ii) Kyoto Ltd. as per section 92A(2)(g), since this company is the sole owner of the technology used by Anush Motors Ltd. in its manufacturing process;

(iii) Dorf Ltd. as per section 92A(2)(c), since this company has financed an amount which is more than 51% of the book value of total assets of Anush Motors Ltd.

The transactions entered into by Anush Motors Ltd. with different companies are, therefore, to be adjusted accordingly to work out the income chargeable to tax for the A.Y. 2020-21.

	Particulars	₹ (in crores)
Income of Anush Motors Ltd. as computed under Chapter IV-D, prior to adjustments as per Chapter X		300.00
Add:	Difference on account of adjustment in the value of international transactions:
(i)	Difference in price of car @ $ 200 each for 10,000 cars ($ 200 x 10,000 x ₹ 63)	12.60
(ii)	Difference for excess payment of royalty of $ 30,00,000 ($ 30,00,000 x ₹ 63) [See Note below]	18.90
(iii)	Difference for excess interest paid on loan of EURO 1000 crores (₹ 84*1000*1/100)	840.00
Total Income		1,171.50

The difference for excess payment of royalty has been added back presuming that the manufacture of cars by Anush Motors Ltd is wholly dependent on the use of know-how owned by Kyoto Ltd.

Note: It is presumed that Anush Motors Ltd. has not entered into an Advance Pricing Agreement or opted to be subject to Safe Harbour Rules.*

Question 5

What is the legislative objective of bringing into existence the provisions relating to transfer pricing in relation to international transactions? Examine.

Answer

The presence of multinational enterprises in India and their ability to allocate profits in different jurisdictions by controlling prices in intra-group transactions prompted the Government to set up an Expert Group to examine the issues relating to transfer pricing.

There is a possibility that two or more entities belonging to the same multinational group can fix up their prices for goods and services and allocate profits among the enterprises within the group in such a way that there may be either no profit or negligible profit in the jurisdiction which taxes such profits and substantial profit in the jurisdiction which is tax haven or where the tax liability is minimum. This may adversely affect a country's share of due revenue. The increasing participation of multinational groups in economic activities in India has given rise to new and complex issues emerging from transactions entered into between two or more enterprises belonging to the same multinational group. The profits derived by such enterprises carrying on business in India can be controlled by the multinational group, by manipulating the prices charged and paid in such intra-group transactions, which may lead to erosion of tax revenue. Therefore, transfer pricing provisions have been brought in by the Finance Act, 2001 with a view to provide a statutory framework which can lead to computation of reasonable, fair and equitable profits and tax in India, in the case of such multinational enterprises.

R, an individual resident in India, bought 1,000 equity shares of ₹ 10 each of A Ltd. at ₹ 50 per share on 30.5.2019. He sold 700 equity shares at ₹ 35 per share on 30.9.2019 and the remaining 300 shares at ₹ 25 per share on 20.12.2019. A Ltd. declared a dividend of 50%, the record date being 10.8.2019. R sold on 1.2.2020, a house from which he derived a long-term capital gain of ₹ 75,000.

Compute the amount of capital gain arising to R for the assessment year 2020-21.

Answer

The amount of capital gains arising to R has to be computed applying the provisions of section 94(7), which provides that where:

(a) any person buys or acquires any securities or unit within a period of three months prior to the record date; and

(b) such person sells or transfers -

  (i) such securities within a period of three months after such date; or

  (ii) such unit within a period of nine months after such date; and

(c) the dividend or income on such securities or unit received or receivable by such person is exempted,

then the loss, if any, arising to him on account of such purchase and sale of securities or unit, to the extent such loss does not exceed the amount of dividend or income received or receivable on such securities or unit, shall be ignored for the purpose of computing his income chargeable to tax".

For this purpose, "record date" means such date as may be fixed by a company for the purpose of entitlement of the holder of the securities to receive dividend; "securities" includes stocks and shares.

Computation of capital gains of Mr. R for the assessment year 2020-21

Particulars	₹	₹
Long-term capital gain on sale of building		75,000
Less: Short-term capital loss on sale of shares
700 shares	7,000
300 shares	7,500	14,500
Taxable long-term capital gains		60,500

Computation of capital gain on sale of shares of A Ltd. by Mr. R

Date of purchase of shares		30.5.2019
Record date		10.8.2019
Date of sale of shares	30.9.2019	20.12.2019
Number of shares sold	700	300
Sale price per share	₹ 35	₹ 25

Particulars	₹	₹
Sale consideration	24,500	7,500
Less: Cost of acquisition	35,000	15,000
	10,500	7,500
Less: Dividend income as per section 94(7)[700×₹10×50%] [See Note below]	3,500	-
Short-term capital loss on sale of shares	7,000	7,500

Note:

(1) 700 shares are sold within 3 months after the record date. Hence, as per section 94(7), the related dividend income should be deducted from the loss.

(2) 300 shares having been sold after 3 months of record date, section 94(7) is not attracted. Therefore, the dividend income of ₹ 1,500 [300×₹10×50%] should not be deducted. Such dividend is exempt under section 10(34).

(3) Short-term capital loss can be set-off against long-term capital gains as per the provisions of section 74(1)(a). Therefore, short-term capital loss on sale of shares can be set-off against long-term capital gains on sale of building.

Question 7

XE Ltd. is an Indian Company in which Zilla Inc., a US company, has 28% shareholding and voting power. Following transactions were effected between these two companies during the financial year 2019-20.

(i) XE Ltd. sold 1,00,000 pieces of T-shirts at $ 2 per T-Shirt to Zilla Inc. The identical T-Shirts were sold to unrelated party namely Kennedy Inc., at $ 3 per T-Shirt.

(ii) XE Ltd. borrowed $ 2,00,000 from a foreign lender based on the guarantee of Zilla Inc. For this, XE Ltd. paid $ 10,000 as guarantee fee to Zilla Inc. To an unrelated party for the same amount of loan, Zilla Inc. collected $ 7000 as guarantee fee.

(iii) XE Ltd. paid $15,000 to Zilla Inc. for getting various potential customers details to improve its business. Zilla Inc. provided the same service to unrelated parties for $ 10,000.

Assume the rate of exchange as 1 $ = ₹ 64

XE Ltd. is located in a Special Economic (SEZ) and its income before transfer pricing adjustments for the year ended 31st March, 2020 was ₹ 1,200 lakhs.

Compute the adjustments to be made to the total income of XE Ltd. Assuming that such adjustments are made by the Assessing Officer, state whether it can claim deduction under section 10AA for the income enhanced by applying transfer pricing provisions.

Answer

XE Ltd, the Indian company and Zilla Inc., the US company are deemed to be associated enterprises as per section 92A(2)(a), since Zilla Inc. holds shares carrying not less than 26% of the voting power in XE Ltd.

As per Explanation to section 92B, the transactions entered into between these two companies for sale of product, lending or guarantee and provision of services relating to market research are included within the meaning of “international transaction”.

Accordingly, transfer pricing provisions would be attracted and the income arising from such international transactions have to be computed having regard to the arm’s length price. In this case, from the information given, the arm’s length price has to be determined taking the comparable uncontrolled price method to be the most appropriate method.

Particulars		₹ in lakhs
Amount by which total income of XE Ltd. is enhanced on account of adjustment in the value of international transactions:
(i)	Difference in price of T-Shirt @ $ 1 each for 1,00,000 pieces sold to Zilla	64.00

	Inc. ($ 1 x 1,00,000 x ₹ 64)
(ii)	Difference for excess payment of guarantee fee to Zilla Inc. for loan borrowed from foreign lender ($ 3,000 x ₹ 64)	1.92
(iii)	Difference for excess payment for services to Zilla Inc. ($ 5,000 x ₹ 64)	3.20
		69.12
XE Ltd. cannot claim deduction under section 10AA in respect of ₹ 69.12 lakhs, being the amount of income by which the total income is enhanced by virtue of the first proviso to section 92C(4)

Question 8

Examine the correctness or otherwise of the following with reference to the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961

(i) Transfer pricing rules shall have no implication where income is computed on the basis of book profits.

(ii) Assessing Officer can complete the assessment of income from international transaction in disregard of the order passed by the Transfer Pricing Officer by accepting the contention of assessee.

Answer

(i) The statement is correct.

For the purpose of computing book profit for levy of minimum alternate tax, the net profit shown in the statement of profit and loss prepared in accordance with the Companies Act can be increased/ decreased only by the additions and deductions specified in Explanation 1 below section 115JB(2).

No other adjustments can be made to arrive at the book profit for levy of MAT, except where:

(a) it is discovered that the statement of profit and loss is not drawn up in accordance with the relevant Schedule of the Companies Act

(b) incorrect accounting policies and/or accounting standards have been adopted for preparing such accounts; and

(c) the method and rate of depreciation adopted is not correct.

Therefore, transfer pricing adjustments cannot be made while computing book profit for levy of MAT.

(ii) The statement is not correct.

Section 92CA(4) provides that on receipt of the order of the Transfer Pricing Officer determining the arm's length price of an international transaction, the Assessing Officer shall proceed to compute the total income in conformity with the arm's length price determined by the Transfer Pricing Officer.

The order of the Transfer Pricing Officer is binding on the Assessing Officer. Therefore, the Assessing Officer cannot complete the assessment of income from international transactions in disregard of the order of Transfer Pricing Officer by accepting the contention raised by the assessee.

CHAPTER 2

NON RESIDENT TAXATION

LEARNING OUTCOMES

After studying this Chapter, you will be able to –

- determine the residential status of foreign companies applying the Place of Effective Management (POEM) Guidelines;
- examine the scope of income taxable in the hands of non-residents;
- examine when income arising in the hands of non-resident from a transaction is deemed to accrue or arise in India;
- appreciate the circumstances when the presence of eligible fund manager in India would not constitute business connection in India for an eligible investment fund;
- identify whether a particular income is exempt in the hands of a non-resident based on the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961;
- compute the profits and gains from shipping business, business of operation of aircraft, business of civil construction etc. in certain turnkey power projects in the case of non-corporate non-residents and foreign company applying the presumptive tax provisions under the Income-tax Act, 1961;
- determine the quantum of head office expenditure allowable as deduction, in the case of non-residents;
- determine the tax payable by the non-residents on dividend, royalty and fees for technical service applying the special provisions of Chapter XII;
- determine the tax payable by non-residents applying the special provisions relating to certain incomes of non-residents prescribed under Chapter XII-A;
- examine the withholding tax provisions to determine the tax, if any, required to be deducted at source on certain payments made to non-residents;
- compute the total income of non-residents and tax payable thereon, applying the general provisions and special provisions applicable to non-residents under the Income-tax Act, 1961.

2.1 INTRODUCTION

Taxation of cross-border transactions are generally based on the two concepts:

1. Residence based taxation

2. Source based taxation

Residence based taxation: The concept of residence-based taxation asserts that natural persons or individuals are taxable in the country or tax jurisdiction in which they establish their residence or domicile, regardless of the source of income. In case of companies, the place of incorporation or the place of effective management is generally considered as its place of residence.

Source based taxation: According to this concept, a country considers certain income as taxable income, if such income arises within its jurisdiction. Such income is taxed in the country of source regardless of the residence of the taxpayer.

The overview of residence and source rules in India may largely be gathered from sections 5, 6 & 9 of the Income-tax Act, 1961. While residents are taxable on global income, non-residents are taxed on their India-source income or income that is received in India or has accrued or deemed to accrue in India.

The term "Non-resident" is defined under section 2(30) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 as a person who is not a "resident", and for the purposes of sections 92 ,93 and 168 includes a person who is not ordinarily resident within the meaning of clause (6) of section 6.

2.2 RESIDENTIAL STATUS AND SCOPE OF TOTAL INCOME

Section 6 contains the provisions for determining the residential status of a person, section 5 deals with scope of total income of resident, resident but not ordinarily resident and non-resident. The provisions of these sections except determination of residential status of foreign companies applying the Place of Effective Management (POEM) Guidelines are discussed in detail in Chapter 2: Residential Status and Scope of Total Income in Module 1 of Part I – Direct Tax Laws.

(1) Residential status of a Company

With effect from assessment year 2017-18, a company would be resident in India in any previous year, if-

(i) it is an Indian company; or

(ii) its place of effective management, in that year, is in India.

> "Place of effective management" means a place where key management and commercial decisions that are necessary for the conduct of the business of an entity as a whole are, in substance made [Explanation to section 6(3)].

Guiding Principles for determination of Place of Effective management ('POEM') of a Company, other than an Indian company – [Circular No. 6/2017, dated 24.01.2017 & Circular No. 8/2017, dated 23-02-2017]:

Place of effective management' (POEM) is an internationally recognised test for determination of residence of a company incorporated in a foreign jurisdiction. Most of the tax treaties entered into by India recognises the concept of 'place of effective management' for determination of residence of a company as a tie-breaker rule for avoidance of double taxation.

The CBDT has laid down the following guiding principles to be followed for determination of POEM.

Concept of Substance over form

Any determination of the POEM will depend upon the facts and circumstances of a given case. The POEM concept is one of substance over form. It may be noted that an entity may have more than one place of management, but it can have only one place of effective management at any point of time. Since "residence" is to be determined for each year, POEM will also be required to be determined on year to year basis.

Whether the company is engaged in active business outside India? - An important criterion for determination of POEM

The process of determination of POEM would be primarily based on the fact as to whether or not the company is engaged in active business outside India.

A company shall be said to be engaged in 'active business outside India'

- if passive income is not more than 50% of its total income, and
- less than 50% of its total asset are situated in India; and
- less than 50% of total number of employees are situated in India or are resident in India; and
- the payroll expenses incurred on such employees is less than 50% of its total payroll expenditure.

Meaning of certain terms:

Term	Meaning
Income	(a) As computed for tax purpose in accordance with the laws of the country of incorporation; or (b) As per books of account, where the laws of the country of incorporation does not require such a computation.

<tr><td rowspan="3">Value of assets</td><td>(a) In case of an individually depreciable asset</td><td>The average of its value for tax purposes in the country of incorporation of the company at the beginning and at end of the previous year; and</td></tr>
<tr><td>(b) In case of pool of fixed asset, being treated as a block for depreciation</td><td>The average of its value for tax purposes in the country of incorporation of the company at the beginning and at end of the year;</td></tr>
<tr><td>(c) In case of any other asset</td><td>Value as per books of account</td></tr>

(i) income from the transactions where both the purchase and sale of goods is from/to its associated enterprises; and
(ii) income by way of royalty, dividend, capital gains, interest or rental income;
However, any income by way of interest shall not be considered to be passive income in case of a company which is engaged in the business of banking or is a public financial institution, and its activities are regulated as such under the applicable laws of the country of incorporation.</td></tr>

Place of Effective Management:

(i) In case of Companies engaged in Active Business outside India

POEM of a company engaged in active business shall be presumed to be outside India if the majority of the board meeting are held outside India.

However, in case the Board is not exercising its powers of management and such powers are being exercised by either the holding company or any other person, resident in India, then POEM shall be considered to be in India.

For this purpose, merely because the Board of Directors (BOD) follows general and objective principles of global policy of the group laid down by the parent entity which may be in the field of Pay roll functions, Accounting, Human resource (HR) functions, IT infrastructure and network platforms, Supply chain functions, Routine banking operational procedures, and not being specific to any entity or group of entities per se; would not constitute a case of BoD of companies standing aside.

CBDT Circular No. 25/2017, dated 23.10.2017 clarifies that so long as the Regional Headquarter operates for subsidiaries/ group companies in a region within the general and objective principles of global policy of the group laid down by the parent entity in the field of Pay roll functions, Accounting, HR functions, IT infrastructure and network platforms, Supply chain functions, Routine banking operational procedures, and not being specific to any entity or group of entities per se; it would, in itself, not constitute a case of BoD of companies standing aside and such activities of Regional Headquarter in India alone will not be a basis for establishment of PoEM for such subsidiaries/ group companies.

It is further mentioned in the said Circular that the provisions of General Anti-Avoidance Rule contained in Chapter X-A of the Income-tax Act, 1961 may get triggered in such cases where the above clarification is found to be used for abusive/ aggressive tax planning.

For the purpose of determining whether the company is engaged in active business outside India, the average of the data of the previous year and two years prior to that shall be taken into account. In case the company has been in existence for a shorter period, then data of such period shall be considered. Where the accounting year for tax purposes, in accordance with laws of country of incorporation of the company, is different from the previous year, then, data of the accounting year that ends during the relevant previous year and two accounting years preceding it shall be considered.

The final guidelines have clarified that mere following of global policies laid down by the Indian holding company would not constitute that Board is standing aside.

(ii) In case Companies not engaged in active business outside India

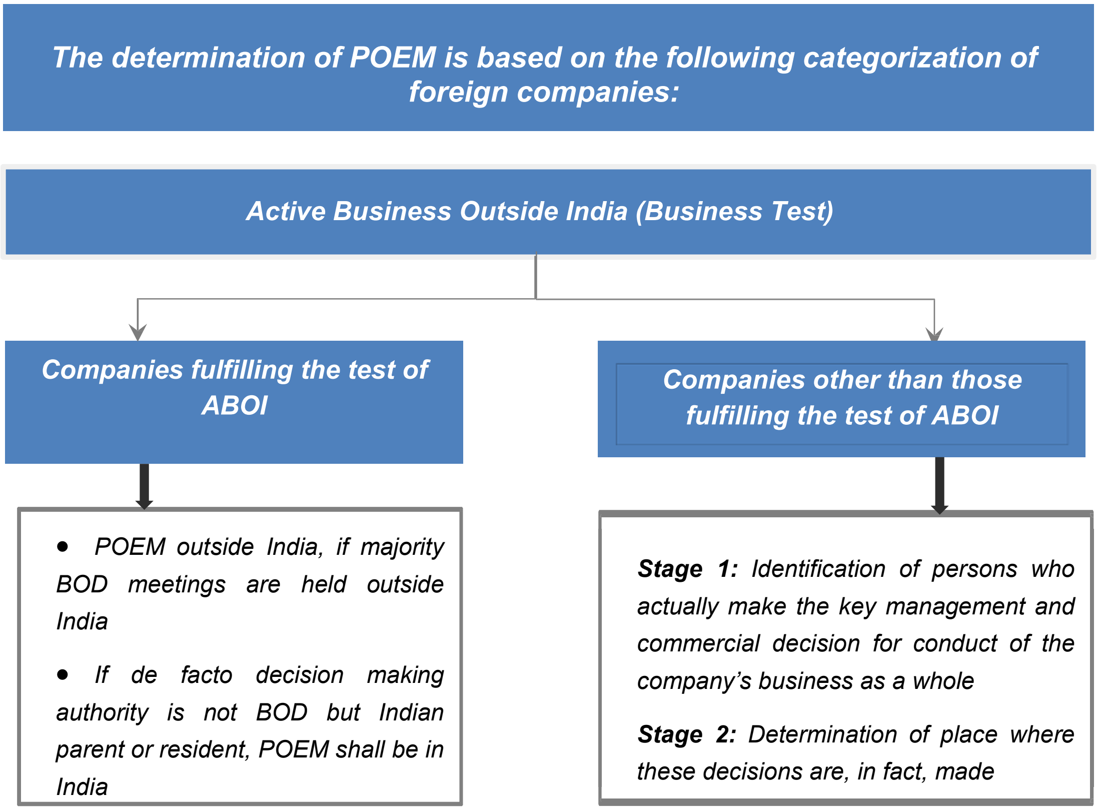
The guidelines provide a two stage process for determination of POEM in case of companies not engaged in active business.

(a) First stage: Identifying the person(s) who actually make the key management and commercial decisions for the conduct of the company as a whole.

(b) Second stage: Determine the place where these decisions are, in fact, being made.

The place where these management decisions are taken would be more important than the place where such decisions are implemented. For the purpose of determination of POEM, it is the substance which would be conclusive rather than the form.

The conditions specified in the circular are depicted in the flow charts below:



The determination of POEM is based on the following categorization of foreign companies:

Active Business Outside India (Business Test)

Companies fulfilling the test of ABOI

- POEM outside India, if majority BOD meetings are held outside India
- If de facto decision making authority is not BOD but Indian parent or resident, POEM shall be in India

Companies other than those fulfilling the test of ABOI

Stage 1: Identification of persons who actually make the key management and commercial decision for conduct of the company's business as a whole

Stage 2: Determination of place where these decisions are, in fact, made

What is ABOI test?

A company is said to be engaged in ABOI, if it fulfills the cumulative conditions of:

Its passive income* (wherever earned) is 50% or less of its total income

Less than 50% of its total assets situated in India

Less than 50% of the total number of employees are situated in India or are residents in India

Payroll expenses incurred on such employees are less than 50% of its total payroll expenditure

 Passive income of a company shall be aggregate of:*

(i) Income from the transactions where both the purchase and sale of goods is from/ to its associated enterprises; and

(ii) income by way of royalty, dividend, capital gains, interest (except for banking companies and public financial institutions) or rental income whether or not involving associated enterprises

Some of the guiding principles which may be taken into account for determining the POEM are as follows:

(a) Location where the Board of Directors meet and makes decisions: This location may be the place of effective management of a company provided, the Board –

(i) retains and exercises its authority to govern the company; and

(ii) does, in substance, make the key management and commercial decisions necessary for the conduct of the company's business as a whole.

It may be mentioned that mere formal holding of board meetings at a place would by itself not be conclusive for determination of POEM being located at that place. If the key decisions by the directors are in fact being taken in a place other than the place where the formal meetings are held then such other place would be relevant for POEM.

As an example this may be the case where the board meetings are held in a location distinct from the place where head office of the company is located or such location is unconnected with the place where the predominant activity of the company is being carried out.

If a Board has de facto delegated the authority to make the key management and commercial decisions for the company to the senior management or any other person including a shareholder, promoter, strategic or legal or financial advisor etc. and does nothing more than routinely ratifying the decisions that have been made, the company's place of effective management will ordinarily be the place where these senior managers or the other person make those decisions.

"Senior Management" in respect of a company means the person or persons who are generally responsible for developing and formulating key strategies and policies for the company and for ensuring or overseeing the execution and implementation of those strategies on a regular and on-going basis. While designation may vary, these persons may include:

(i) Managing Director or Chief Executive Officer;

(ii) Financial Director or Chief Financial Officer;

(iii) Chief Operating Officer; and

(iv) The heads of various divisions or departments (for example, Chief Information or Technology Officer, Director for Sales or Marketing).

(b) Location of Executive Committee, in case powers are delegated by the Board: A company's board may delegate some or all of its authority to one or more committees such as an executive committee consisting of key members of senior management. In these situations, the location where the members of the executive committee are based and where that committee develops and formulates the key strategies and policies for mere formal approval by the full board will often be considered to be the company's place of effective management.

The delegation of authority may be either de jure (by means of a formal resolution or Shareholder Agreement) or de facto (based upon the actual conduct of the board and the executive committee).

(c) Location of Head Office: The location of a company's head office will be a very important factor in the determination of the company's place of effective management because it often represents the place where key company decisions are made. The following points need to be considered for determining the location of the head office of the company:-

If the company's senior management and their support staff are based in a single location and that location is held out to the public as the company's principal place of business or headquarters then that location is the place where head office is located.

If the company is more decentralized (for example where various members of senior management may operate, from time to time, at offices located in the various countries) then the company's head office would be the location where these senior managers,-

(i) are primarily or predominantly based; or

(ii) normally return to following travel to other locations; or

(iii) meet when formulating or deciding key strategies and policies for the company as a whole.

Members of the senior management may operate from different locations on a more or less permanent basis and the members may participate in various meetings via telephone or video conferencing rather than by being physically present at meetings in a particular location. In such situation the head office would normally be the location, if any, where the highest level of management (for example, the Managing Director and Financial Director) and their direct support staff are located.

In situations where the senior management is so decentralised that it is not possible to determine the company's head office with a reasonable degree of certainty, the location of a company's head office would not be of much relevance in determining that company's place of effective management.

> "Head Office" of a company would be the place where the company's senior management and their direct support staff are located or, if they are located at more than one location, the place where they are primarily or predominantly located. A company's head office is not necessarily the same as the place where the majority of its employees work or where its board typically meets.

(d) Use of modern technology: The use of modern technology impacts the place of effective management in many ways. It is no longer necessary for the persons taking decision to be physically present at a particular location. Therefore physical location of board meeting or executive committee meeting or meeting of senior management may not be where the key decisions are in substance being made. In such cases the place where the directors or the persons taking the decisions or majority of them usually reside may also be a relevant factor.

(e) Decision via circular resolution or round robin voting: In case of circular resolution or round robin voting the factors like, the frequency with which it is used, the type of decisions made in that manner and where the parties involved in those decisions are located etc. are to be considered. It cannot be said that proposer of decision alone would be relevant but based on past practices and general conduct; it would be required to determine the person who has the authority and who exercises the authority to take decisions. The place of location of such person would be more important.

(f) Decisions made by Shareholders are not relevant factor in determination of POEM: The decisions made by shareholder on matters which are reserved for shareholder decision under the company laws are not relevant for determination of a company's place of effective management. Such decisions may include sale of all or substantially all of the company's assets, the dissolution, liquidation or deregistration of the company, the modification of the rights attaching to various classes of shares or the issue of a new class of shares etc. These decisions typically affect the existence of the company itself or the rights of the shareholders as such, rather than the conduct of the company's business from a management or commercial perspective and are therefore, generally not relevant for the determination of a company's place of effective management.

However, the shareholder's involvement can, in certain situations, turn into that of effective management. This may happen through a formal arrangement by way of shareholder agreement etc. or may also happen by way of actual conduct. As an example if the shareholders limit the authority of board and senior managers of a company and thereby remove the company's real authority to make decision then the shareholder guidance transforms into usurpation and such undue influence may result in effective management being exercised by the shareholder.

Therefore, whether the shareholder involvement is crossing the line into that of effective management is one of fact and has to be determined on case-to-case basis only.

(g) Day to day routine operational decisions are not relevant for determination of POEM: It may be clarified that day to day routine operational decisions undertaken by junior and middle management shall not be relevant for the purpose of determination of POEM. The operational decisions relate to the oversight of the day-to-day business operations and activities of a company whereas the key management and commercial decision are concerned with broader strategic and policy decision. For example, a decision to open a major new manufacturing facility or to discontinue a major product line would be examples of key commercial decisions affecting the company's business as a whole. By contrast, decisions by the plant manager appointed by senior management to run that facility, concerning repairs and maintenance, the implementation of company-wide quality controls and human resources policies, would be examples of routine operational decisions. In certain situations it may happen that person responsible for operational decision is the same person who is responsible for the key management and commercial decision. In such cases it will be necessary to distinguish the two type of decisions and thereafter assess the location where the key management and commercial decisions are taken.

If the above factors do not lead to clear identification of POEM then the final guidelines provide that following secondary factors may be considered:

- Place where main and substantial activity of the company is carried out; or
- Place where the accounting records of the company are kept.

It needs to be emphasized that the determination of POEM is to be based on all relevant facts related to the management and control of the company, and is not to be determined on the basis of isolated facts that by itself do not establish effective management, as illustrated by the following examples:

(i) The fact that a foreign company is completely owned by an Indian company will not be conclusive evidence that the conditions for establishing POEM in India have been satisfied.

(ii) The fact that there exists a Permanent Establishment of a foreign entity in India would itself not be conclusive evidence that the conditions for establishing POEM in India have been satisfied.

(iii) The fact that one or some of the Directors of a foreign company reside in India will not be conclusive evidence that the conditions for establishing POEM in India have been satisfied.

(iv) The fact of, local management being situated in India in respect of activities carried out by a foreign company in India will not, by itself, be conclusive evidence that the conditions for establishing POEM have been satisfied.

(v) The existence in India of support functions that are preparatory and auxiliary in character will not be conclusive evidence that the conditions for establishing POEM in India have been satisfied.

It is reiterated that the above principles for determining the POEM are for guidance only. No single principle will be decisive in itself. The above principles are not to be seen with reference to any particular moment in time rather activities performed over a period of time, during the previous year, need to be considered.

In other words, a "snapshot" approach is not to be adopted. Further, based on the facts and circumstances if it is determined that during the previous year the POEM is in India and also outside India then POEM shall be presumed to be in India if it has been mainly /predominantly in India

The CBDT also clarified that the Assessing Officer (AO) shall, before initiating any proceedings for holding a company incorporated outside India, on the basis of its POEM, as being resident in India, seek prior approval of the Principal Commissioner or the Commissioner, as the case may be.

Further, in case the AO proposes to hold a company incorporated outside India, on the basis of its POEM, as being resident in India then any such finding shall be given by the AO after seeking prior approval of the collegium of three members consisting of the Principal Commissioners or the Commissioners, as the case may be, to be constituted by the Principal Chief Commissioner of the region concerned, in this regard. The collegium so constituted shall provide an opportunity of being heard to the company before issuing any directions in the matter.

Example 1: Company A Co. is a sourcing entity, for an Indian multinational group, incorporated in country X and is 100% subsidiary of Indian company (B Co.). The warehouses and stock in them are the only assets of the company and are located in country X. All the employees of the company are also in country X. The average income wise breakup of the company's total income for three years is, -

(i) 30% of income is from transaction where purchases are made from parties which are non-associated enterprises and sold to associated enterprises;

(ii) 30% of income is from transaction where purchases are made from associated enterprises and sold to associated enterprises;

(iii) 30% of income is from transaction where purchases are made from associated enterprises and sold to non-associated enterprises; and

(iv) 10% of the income is by way of interest.

Interpretation: In this case, passive income is 40% of the total income of the company. The passive income consists of, -

(i) 30% income from the transaction where both purchase and sale is from/to associated enterprises; and

(ii) 10% income from interest.

The A Co. satisfies the first requirement of the test of active business outside India. Since no assets or employees of A Co. are in India the other requirements of the test is also satisfied. Therefore, company is engaged in active business outside India.

Example 2: The other facts remain same as that in Example 1 with the variation that A Co. has a total of 50 employees. 47 employees, managing the warehouse, storekeeping and accounts of the company, are located in country X. The Managing Director (MD), Chief Executive Officer (CEO) and sales head are resident in India. The total annual payroll expenditure on these 50 employees is of ₹ 5 crore. The annual payroll expenditure in respect of MD, CEO and sales head is of ₹ 3 crore.

Interpretation: Although the first limb of active business test is satisfied by A Co. as only 40% of its total income is passive in nature. Further, more than 50% of the employees are also situated outside India. All the assets are situated outside India. However, the payroll expenditure in respect of the MD, the CEO and the sales head being employees resident in India exceeds 50% of the total payroll expenditure. Therefore, A Co. is not engaged in active business outside India.

Example 3: The basic facts are same as in Example 1. Further facts are that all the directors of the A Co. are Indian residents. During the relevant previous year 5 meetings of the Board of Directors is held of which two were held in India and 3 outside India with two in country X and one in country Y.

Interpretation: The A Co. is engaged in active business outside India as the facts indicated in Example 1 establish. The majority of board meetings have been held outside India. Therefore, the POEM of A Co. shall be presumed to be outside India.

Example 4: The facts are same as in Example 3 but it is established by the Assessing Officer that although A Co.'s senior management team signs all the contracts, for all the contracts above ₹ 10 lakh the A Co. must submit its recommendation to B Co. and B Co. makes the decision whether or not the contract may be accepted. It is also seen that during the previous year more than 99% of the contracts are above ₹ 10 lakh and over past years also the same trend in respect of value contribution of contracts above ₹ 10 lakh is seen.

Interpretation: These facts suggest that the effective management of the A Co. may have been usurped by the parent company B Co. Therefore, POEM of A Co. may in such cases be not presumed to be outside India even though A Co. is engaged in active business outside India and majority of board meeting are held outside India.

Example 5: An Indian multinational group has a local holding company A Co. in country X. The A Co. also has 100% downstream subsidiaries B Co. and C Co. in country X and D Co. in country Y. The A Co. has income only by way of dividend and interest from investments made in its subsidiaries. The Place of Effective Management of A Co. is in India and is exercised by ultimate parent company of the group. The subsidiaries B, C and D are engaged in active business outside

India. The meetings of Board of Director of B Co., C Co. and D Co. are held in country X and Y respectively.

Interpretation: Merely because the POEM of an intermediate holding company is in India, the POEM of its subsidiaries shall not be taken to be in India. Each subsidiary has to be examined separately. As indicated in the facts since B Co., C Co., and D Co. are independently engaged in active business outside India and majority of Board meetings of these companies are also held outside India. The POEM of B Co., C Co., and D Co. shall be presumed to be outside India.

> Further, the CBDT vide Circular no. 8/2017 dated 23.02.2017 also clarified that POEM guidelines shall not apply to a company having turnover or gross receipts of ₹ 50 crores or less in a financial year.

ILLUSTRATION 1

ABC Inc., a Swedish company headquartered at Stockholm, not having a permanent establishment in India, has set up a liaison office in Mumbai in April, 2019 in compliance with RBI guidelines to look after its day to day business operations in India, spread awareness about the company's products and explore further opportunities. The liaison office takes decisions relating to day to day routine operations and performs support functions that are preparatory and auxiliary in nature. The significant management and commercial decisions are, however, in substance made by the Board of Directors at Sweden. Determine the residential status of ABC Inc. for A.Y. 2020-21.

SOLUTION

Section 6(3) provide that a company would be resident in India in any previous year, if-

(i) it is an Indian company; or

(ii) its place of effective management, in that year, is in India .

In this case, ABC Inc. is a foreign company. Therefore, it would be resident in India for P.Y.2019-20 only if its place of effective management, in that year, is in India.

Explanation to section 6(3) defines "place of effective management" to mean a place where key management and commercial decisions that are necessary for the conduct of the business of an entity as a whole are, in substance made. In the case of ABC Inc., its place of effective management for P.Y.2019-20 is not in India, since the significant management and commercial decisions are, in substance, made by the Board of Directors outside India in Sweden.

ABC Inc. has only a liaison office in India through which it looks after its routine day to day business operations in India. The place where decisions relating to day to day routine operations are taken and support functions that are preparatory or auxiliary in nature are performed are not relevant in determining the place of effective management.

Hence, ABC Inc., being a foreign company is a non-resident for A.Y.2020-21, since its place of effective management is outside India in the P.Y.2019-20.

Transition Mechanism for a company incorporated outside India and has not been assessed to tax earlier [Chapter XII-BC – Section 115JH]

A transition mechanism for a company which is incorporated outside India, which has not been assessed to tax in India earlier and has become resident in India for the first time due to application of POEM, has been provided in Chapter XII-BC comprising of section 115JH.

(a) Accordingly, the Central Government is empowered to notify exception, modification and adaptation subject to which, the provisions of the Act relating to computation of income, treatment of unabsorbed depreciation, set-off or carry forward and set off of losses, special provision relating to avoidance of tax and the collection and recovery of taxes shall apply in a case where a foreign company is said to be resident in India due to its POEM being in India for the first time and the said company has never been resident in India before.

(b) In a case where the determination regarding foreign company to be resident in India has been made in the assessment proceedings relevant to any previous year, then, these transition provisions would also cover any subsequent previous year, if the foreign company is resident in India in that previous year and the previous year ends on or before the date on which such assessment proceeding is completed. In effect, the transition provisions would also cover any subsequent amendment upto the date of determination of POEM in an assessment proceeding. However, once the transition is complete, then, normal provisions of the Act would apply.

(c) In the notification issued by the Central Government, certain conditions including procedural conditions subject to which these adaptations shall apply can be provided for and in case of failure to comply with the conditions, the benefit of such notification would not be available to the foreign company.

Accordingly, where in a previous year, any benefit, exemption or relief has been claimed and granted to the foreign company in accordance with the notification, and subsequently, there is failure to comply with any of the conditions specified therein, then –

(i) the benefit, exemption or relief shall be deemed to have been wrongly allowed;

(ii) the Assessing Officer may re-compute the total income of the assessee for the said previous year and make the necessary amendment as if the exceptions, modifications and adaptations as per the notification does not apply; and

(iii) the provisions of section 154 shall, so far as may be, apply thereto and the period of four years for rectification of mistake apparent from the record has to be reckoned from the end of the previous year in which the failure to comply with the condition stipulated in the notification takes place.

(d) Every notification issued in exercise of this power by the Central Government shall be laid before each house of the Parliament.

(e) Accordingly, in exercise of the power under section 115JH(1) of the Income-tax Act, 1961,the Central Government has, vide notification No. 29/2018, dated 22nd June, 2018, specified the exceptions, modifications and adaptions subject to which, the provisions of the Act relating to computation of income, treatment of unabsorbed depreciation, set-off or carry forward and set off of losses, special provision relating to avoidance of tax and the collection and recovery of taxes shall apply in a case where a foreign company is said to be resident in India in any previous year on account of its POEM being in India and the such foreign company has not been resident in India before the said previous year.

Particulars	Provisions
Determination of opening WDV	If the foreign company is assessed to tax in the foreign jurisdiction Where depreciation is required to be taken into account for the purpose of computation of its taxable income, the WDV of the depreciable asset as per the tax record in the foreign country on the 1st day of the previous year shall be adopted as the opening WDV for the said previous year. Where WDV is not available as per tax records, the WDV shall be calculated assuming that the asset was installed, utilised and the depreciation was actually allowed as per the provisions of the laws of that foreign jurisdiction. The WDV so arrived at as on the 1st day of the previous year shall be adopted to be the opening WDV for the said previous year. If the foreign company is not assessed to tax in the foreign jurisdiction WDV of the depreciable asset as appearing in the books of account as on the 1st day of the previous year maintained in accordance with the laws of that foreign jurisdiction shall be adopted as the opening WDV for the said previous year.
Brought forward loss and unabsorbed depreciation	If the foreign company is assessed to tax in the foreign jurisdiction Brought forward loss and unabsorbed depreciation as per the tax record shall be determined year wise on the 1st day of the said previous year. If the foreign company is not assessed to tax in the foreign jurisdiction Brought forward loss and unabsorbed depreciation as per the books of account prepared in accordance with the laws of that country shall be determined year wise on the 1st day of the said previous year. Other provisions Such brought forward loss and unabsorbed depreciation shall be deemed as loss and unabsorbed depreciation brought forward as on the 1st day of the said previous year and shall be allowed to be set off and carried forward in accordance with the provisions of the Act for the remaining period calculated from the year in which they occurred for the first time taking that year as the first year. However, the losses and unabsorbed depreciation of the foreign company shall be allowed to be set off only against such income of the foreign company which has become chargeable to tax in India on account of it becoming resident in India due to application of POEM. In cases where the brought forward loss and unabsorbed depreciation originally adopted in India are revised or modified in the foreign jurisdiction due to any action of the tax or legal authority, the amount of the loss and unabsorbed depreciation shall be revised or modified for the purposes of set off and carry forward in India.

Period of profit and loss account and balance sheet in cases where accounting year of foreign company does not end on 31st March	The foreign company is required to prepare profit and loss account and balance sheet for the period starting from the date on which the accounting year immediately following said accounting year begins, upto 31st March of the year immediately preceding the period beginning with 1st April and ending on 31st March during which the foreign company has become resident. The foreign company is also required to prepare profit and loss account and balance sheet for succeeding periods of twelve months, beginning from 1st April and ending on 31st March, till the year the foreign company remains resident in India on account of its POEM. Examples: Example 1: If the accounting year of the foreign company is a calendar year and the company becomes resident in India during P.Y. 2019-20 for the first time due to its POEM being in India, then, the company is required to prepare profit and loss account and balance sheet for the period 1st January, 2019 to 31st March, 2019. It is also required to prepare profit and loss account and balance sheet for the period 1st April, 2019 to 31st March, 2020. For the purpose of carry forward of loss and unabsorbed depreciation in this case, since the period 1st January, 2019 to 31st March, 2019 is less than 6 months, it is to be included in the accounting year immediately preceding the accounting year in which the foreign company is held to be resident in India for the first time. Accordingly, the profit and loss and balance sheet of the 15 month period from 1 January, 2018 to 31st March, 2019 is to be prepared.

	Example 2: If the accounting year of the foreign company is from 1st July to 30th June and the company becomes resident in India during P.Y. 2019-20 for the first time due to its POEM being in India, then, the company is required to prepare profit and loss account and balance sheet for the period 1st July, 2018 to 31st March, 2019. It is also required to prepare profit and loss account and balance sheet for the period 1st April, 2019 to 31st March, 2020. For the purpose of carry forward of loss and unabsorbed depreciation in this case, since the period is more than 6 months, it is to be treated as a separate accounting year. The loss and unabsorbed depreciation as per tax record or books of account, as the case may be, of the foreign company shall, be allocated on proportionate basis.
Applicability of provisions of Chapter XVII-B (TDS provisions)	Where more than one provision of Chapter XVII-B of the Act applies to the foreign company as resident as well as foreign company, the provision applicable to the foreign company alone shall apply. Compliance to those provisions of Chapter XVII-B of the Act as are applicable to the foreign company prior to its becoming Indian resident shall be considered sufficient compliance to the provisions of said Chapter. The provisions of section 195(2) relating to application to Assessing Officer to determine the appropriate proportion of sum chargeable to tax shall apply in such manner so as to include payment to the foreign company.
Availability of deduction under section 90 or 91 (Foreign tax credit)	The foreign company shall be entitled to relief or deduction of taxes paid in accordance with the provisions of section 90 or section 91 of the Act. Where income on which foreign tax has been paid or deducted, is offered to tax in more than one year, credit of foreign tax shall be allowed across those years in the same proportion in which the income is offered to tax or assessed to tax in India in respect of the income to which it relates and shall be in accordance with the provisions of rule 128 of the Income-tax Rules, 1962 [Given as Annexure 1 at the end of this material].
Non applicability of the notification	The above exceptions, modifications and adaptations shall not apply in respect of such income of the foreign company which otherwise would have been chargeable to tax in India, even if the foreign company had not become Indian resident.
Applicability of the notification where foreign company becomes resident in the subsequent	In a case where the foreign company is said to be resident in India during a previous year, immediately succeeding a previous year during which it is said to be resident in India; the exceptions, modifications and adaptations shall apply to the said previous year subject to the condition that the WDV, the brought forward loss and the unabsorbed depreciation to be adopted on the 1st day of the previous year shall be those which previous year also	have been arrived at on the last day of the preceding previous year in accordance with the provisions of this notification.

No effect on other transactions	Any transaction of the foreign company with any other person or entity under the Act shall not be altered only on the ground that the foreign company has become Indian resident.
Applicability of other provisions relating to foreign company	Subject to the above exceptions, modifications and adaptions specifically provided vide this notification, the foreign company shall continue to be treated as a foreign company even if it is said to be resident in India and all the provisions of the Act shall apply accordingly. Consequently, the provisions specifically applicable to,— (i) a foreign company, shall continue to apply to it; (ii) non-resident persons, shall not apply to it; and (iii) the provisions specifically applicable to resident, shall apply to it.
Applicability of tax rate on foreign company	In case of conflict between the provision applicable to the foreign company as resident and the provision applicable to it as foreign company, the later shall generally prevail. Therefore, the rate of tax in case of foreign company i.e., 40% shall remain the same, i.e., rate of income-tax applicable to the foreign company even though residency status of the foreign company changes from non-resident to resident on the basis of POEM.
Applicability of notification	This notification shall be deemed to have come into force from 1st April, 2017.
Meaning of foreign jurisdiction	The place of incorporation of the foreign company.
Applicability of rule 115 of the Income-tax Rules, 1962.	The rate of exchange for conversion into rupees of value expressed in foreign currency, wherever applicable, shall be in accordance with provision of rule 115 of the Income-tax Rules, 1962. [Given as Annexure 2 at the end of this material]

If money is borrowed and used for the purpose of business or profession carried on in India
If technical services or royalty services are utilised for the purpose of business or profession carried on in India or making income from any source in India

The categories of income which are deemed to accrue or arise in India are:

(1) Any income accruing or arising to an assessee in any place outside India whether directly or indirectly

(i) through or from any business connection in India,

(ii) through or from any property in India,

(iii) through or from any asset or source of income in India or

(iv) through the transfer of a capital asset situated in India would be deemed to accrue or arise in India. [Section 9(1)(i)]

(i) What is Business Connection?

'Business connection' shall include any business activity carried out through a person acting on behalf of the non-resident [Explanation 2 to section 9(1)(i)]

For a business connection to be established, the person acting on behalf of the non-resident –

(a) must have an authority, which is habitually exercised in India, to conclude contracts on behalf of the non-resident or habitually concludes contracts or plays the principal role leading to conclusion of contracts by that non-resident and such contracts are

- in the name of the non-resident; or
- for the transfer of the ownership of, or for the granting of the right to use, property owned by that non-resident or that non-resident has the right to use; or
- for the provision of services by that non-resident.

Note - This amendment in the definition of "business connection" is for the purpose of alignment with the provisions of the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement (DTAA) as modified by Multilateral Instrument (MLI) so as to make the provisions in the treaty effective.

(b) in a case, where he has no such authority, but habitually maintains in India a stock of goods or merchandise from which he regularly delivers goods or merchandise on behalf of the non-resident, or

(c) habitually secures orders in India, mainly or wholly for the non-resident.

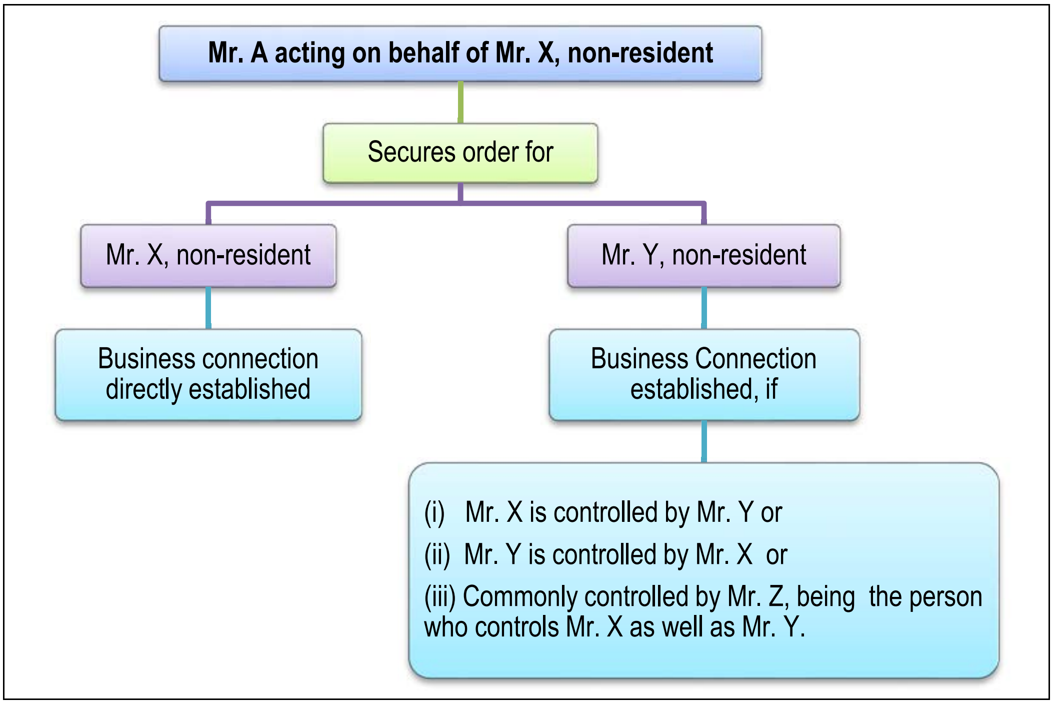
Further, there may be situations when the person acting on behalf of the non-resident secure order for other non-residents. In such situation, business connection for other non-residents is established if,

i. such other non-resident controls the non-resident or

ii. such other non-resident is controlled by the non-resident or

iii. such other non-resident is subject to same control as that of non-resident.

In all the three situations, business connection is established, where a person habitually secures orders in India, mainly or wholly for such non-residents.



Mr. A acting on behalf of Mr. X, non-resident Secures order for
Mr. X, non-resident
Mr. Y, non-resident
Business connection directly established
Business Connection established, if
(i) Mr. X is controlled by Mr. Y or
(ii) Mr. Y is controlled by Mr. X or
(iii) Commonly controlled by Mr. Z, being the person who controls Mr. X as well as Mr. Y.

Agents having independent status are not included in Business Connection: Business connection, however, shall not be established, where the non-resident carries on business through a broker, general commission agent or any other agent having an independent status, if such a person is acting in the ordinary course of his business.

A broker, general commission agent or any other agent shall be deemed to have an independent status where he does not work mainly or wholly for the non-resident.

He will, however, not be considered to have an independent status in the three situations explained above, where he is employed by such a non-resident.

Where a business is carried on in India through a person referred to in (a), (b) or (c) of (i) above, only so much of income as is attributable to the operations carried out in India shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India [Explanation 3 to section 9(1)(i)].

Significant economic presence [Explanation 2A to section 9(1)(i)]

Significant economic presence of a non-resident in India shall also constitute business connection in India.

Significant economic presence means-

	Nature of transaction	Condition
(a)	transaction in respect of any goods, services or property carried out by a non-resident in India including provision of download of data or software in India,	Aggregate of payments arising from such transaction or transactions during the previous year exceeds such amount as may be prescribed
(b)	systematic and continuous soliciting of business activities or engaging in interaction with users in India through digital means	The users should be of such number as may be prescribed

The threshold of "aggregate of payments" in (a) and "users" in India in (b) would be prescribed by Rules. Further, the above transactions or activities shall constitute significant economic presence in India, whether or not,—

(i) the agreement for such transactions or activities is entered in India;

(ii) the non-resident has a residence or place of business in India; or

(iii) the non-resident renders services in India:

However, where a business connection is established by reason of significant economic presence in India, only so much of income as is attributable to the transactions or activities referred to in (a) or (b) above shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

In the case of a non-resident the following shall not, however, be treated as business connection in India [Explanation 1 to section 9(1)(i)]:

(a) In the case of a business, in respect of which all the operations are not carried out in India [Explanation 1(a) to section 9(1)(i)]: In the case of a business of which all the operations are not carried out in India, the income of the business deemed to accrue or arise in India shall be only such part of income as is reasonably attributable to the operations carried out in India. Therefore, it follows that such part of income which cannot be reasonably attributed to the operations in India, is not deemed to accrue or arise in India.

(b) Purchase of goods in India for export [Explanation 1(b) to section 9(1)(i)]: In the case of a non-resident, no income shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India to him through or from operations which are confined to the purchase of goods in India for the purpose of export.

(c) Collection of news and views in India for transmission out of India [Explanation 1(c) to section 9(1)(i)]: In the case of a non-resident, being a person engaged in the business of running a news agency or of publishing newspapers, magazines or journals, no income shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India to him through or from activities which are confined to the collection of news and views in India for transmission out of India.

(d) Shooting of cinematograph films in India [Explanation 1(d) to section 9(1)(i)]: In the case of a non-resident, no income shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India through or from operations which are confined to the shooting of any cinematograph film in India, if such non-resident is :

- an individual, who is not a citizen of India or
- a firm which does not have any partner who is a citizen of India or who is resident in India; or
- a company which does not have any shareholder who is a citizen of India or who is resident in India.

(e) Activities confined to display of rough diamonds in SNZs [Explanation 1(e) to section 9(1)(i)]: In case of a foreign company engaged in the business of mining of diamonds, no income shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India to it through or from the activities which are confined to display of uncut and unassorted diamonds in any special zone notified by the Central Government in the Official Gazette in this behalf.

(ii) & (iii) Income from property, asset or source of income in India

Any income which arises from any property in India (movable, immovable, tangible and intangible property) would be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

Examples:

- Hire charges or rent paid outside India for the use of the machinery or buildings situated in India,
- deposits with an Indian company for which interest is received outside India etc.

(iv) Income through transfer of a capital asset situated in India

Capital gains arising through or from the transfer of a capital asset situated in India would be deemed to accrue or arise in India in all cases irrespective of the fact whether

- The capital asset is movable or immovable, tangible or intangible;
- The place of registration of the document of transfer etc., is in India or outside; and
- The place of payment of the consideration for the transfer is within India or outside.

Accordingly, the expression "through" shall mean and include and shall be deemed to have always meant and included "by means of", "in consequence of" or "by reason of". [Explanation 4* to section 9(1)(i)*]

Further, an asset or a capital asset being any share or interest in a company or entity registered or incorporated outside India shall be deemed to be and shall always be deemed to have been situated in India, if the share or interest derives, directly or indirectly, its value substantially from the assets located in India. [Explanation 5* to section 9(1)(i)*]

However, an asset or capital asset, which is held by a non-resident by way of investment, directly or indirectly, in Category-I or Category-II foreign portfolio investor under the Securities and Exchange Board of India (Foreign Portfolio Investors) Regulations, 2014, made under the Securities and Exchange Board of India Act, 1992, shall not deemed to be or deemed to have been situated in India [Proviso to Explanation 5 to section 9(1)(i)]

The CBDT has, vide Circular No. 28/2017, dated 07.11.2017, clarified that the provisions of section 9(1)(i) read with Explanation 5, shall not apply in respect of income accruing or arising to a non-resident on account of redemption or buyback of its share or interest held indirectly (i.e. through upstream entities registered or incorporated outside India) in the specified funds (namely, investment funds, venture capital company and venture capital funds) if such income accrues or arises from or in consequence of transfer of shares or securities held in India by the specified funds and such income is chargeable to tax in India.

However, the above benefit shall be applicable only in those cases where the proceeds of redemption or buyback arising to the non-resident do not exceed the pro-rata share of the non-resident in the total consideration realized by the specified funds from the said transfer of shares or securities in India. It is further clarified that a non-resident investing directly in the specified funds shall continue to be taxed as per the extant provisions of the Act.

Declaration of dividend by a foreign company outside India does not have the effect of transfer of any underlying assets located in India. Circular No. 4/2015, dated 26-03-2015, therefore, clarifies that the dividends declared and paid by a foreign company outside India in respect of shares which derive their value substantially from assets situated in India would NOT be deemed to be income accruing or arising in India by virtue of the provisions of section 9(1)(i).

Explanation 6* to section 9(1)(i) provides that the share or interest in a company or entity registered or incorporated outside India, shall be deemed to derive its value substantially from the assets (whether tangible or intangible) located in India, if on the specified date, the value of Indian assets, -

- exceeds the amount of ₹ 10 crore; and
- represents at least 50% of the value of all the assets owned by the company or entity, as the case may be;

Meaning of certain terms:

Term	Meaning
Value of an asset	The fair market value as on the specified date, of such asset without reduction of liabilities, if any, in respect of the asset, determined in prescribed manner.

Specified date	The date on which the accounting period of the company or, as the case may be, the entity ends preceding the date of transfer of a share or an interest. However, the date of transfer shall be the specified date of valuation, in a case where the book value of the assets of the company or entity on the date of transfer exceeds by at least 15%, the book value of the assets as on the last balance sheet date preceding the date of transfer.
Accounting period	Each period of 12 months ending with 31st March. However, where a company or an entity, referred to in Explanation 5, regularly adopts a period of 12 months ending on a day other than 31st March for the purpose of— (a) complying with the provisions of the tax laws of the territory, of which it is a resident, for tax purposes; or (b) reporting to persons holding the share or interest, then, the period of twelve months ending with the other day shall be the accounting period of the company or, as the case may be, the entity:
First Accounting Period	First accounting period of the company or, as the case may be, the entity shall begin from the date of its registration or incorporation and end with the 31st March or such other day, as the case may be, following the date of such registration or incorporation.
Later accounting period	Later accounting period shall be the successive periods of twelve months
Accounting period of an entity which ceases to exist	If the company or the entity ceases to exist before the end of accounting period, as aforesaid, then, the accounting period shall end immediately before the company or, as the case may be, the entity, ceases to exist.

Note - The manner of determination of fair market value of the assets of the foreign company is given in Rule 11UB. Determination of income attributable to assets in India is given in Rule 11UC[1].

Explanation 7* to section 9(1)(i) provides that no income shall be deemed to accrue or arise to a non-resident from transfer, outside India, of any share of, or interest in, a company or an entity, registered or incorporated outside India, in the following cases;

(1)	Foreign company or entity directly owns the assets situated in India	AND	the transferor (whether individually or along with its associated enterprises), at any time in the twelve months preceding the date of transfer, does not hold • the right of management or control in relation to foreign company or entity; or • the voting power or share capital or interest

			exceeding 5% of the total voting power or total share capital or total interest, as the case may be, of the foreign company or entity; or
(2)	Foreign company or entity indirectly owns the assets situated in India	AND	the transferor (whether individually or along with its associated enterprises), at any time in the twelve months preceding the date of transfer, does not hold • the right of management or control in relation to foreign company or entity; or • any right in, or in relation to, such foreign company or entity which would entitle him to the right of management or control in the company or entity that directly owns the assets situated in India; or • such percentage of voting power or share capital or interest in foreign company or entity which results in holding of (either individually or along with associated enterprises) a voting power or share capital or interest exceeding 5% of the total voting power or total share capital or total interest, as the case may be, of the company or entity that directly owns the assets situated in India;

In effect, the exemption shall be available to the transferor of a share of, or interest in, a foreign entity if he along with its associated enterprises, -

- neither holds the right of control or management,
- nor holds voting power or share capital or interest exceeding 5% of the total voting power or total share capital or total interest, in the foreign company or entity directly holding the Indian assets (direct holding company).

In case the transfer is of shares or interest in a foreign entity which does not hold the Indian assets directly then the exemption shall be available to the transferor if he along with its associated enterprises,-

- neither holds the right of management or control in relation to such company or the entity,
- nor holds any rights in such company which would entitle it to either exercise control or management of the direct holding company or entity or entitle it to voting power or share capital or total interest exceeding 5% in the direct holding company or entity.

Further, where all the assets owned, directly or indirectly, by a company or, as the case may be, an entity registered or incorporated outside India, are not located in India, the income of the non-resident transferor, from transfer outside India of a share of, or interest in the foreign company or entity, deemed to accrue or arise in India under this clause, shall be only such part of the income as is reasonably attributable to assets located in India and determined in the prescribed manner.

"Associated enterprise", in relation to another enterprise, means an enterprise—

- which participates, directly or indirectly, or through one or more intermediaries, in the management or control or capital of the other enterprise; or
- in respect of which one or more persons who participate, directly or indirectly, or through one or more intermediaries, in its management or control or capital, are the same persons who participate, directly or indirectly, or through one or more intermediaries, in the management or control or capital of the other enterprise.

(2) Income from salaries earned in India [Section 9(1)(ii)]

Income, which falls under the head "Salaries", deemed to accrue or arise in India, if it is earned in India. Salary payable for service rendered in India would be treated as earned in India.

Further, any income under the head "Salaries" payable for rest period or leave period which is preceded and succeeded by services rendered in India, and forms part of the service contract of employment, shall be regarded as income earned in India.

(3) Income from salaries payable by the Government for services rendered outside India [Section 9(1)(iii)].

Income from 'Salaries' which is payable by the Government to a citizen of India for services rendered outside India would be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

However, allowances and perquisites paid or allowed outside India by the Government to an Indian citizen for services rendered outside India is exempt, by virtue of section 10(7).

ILLUSTRATION 2

J, a citizen of India, employed in the Indian Embassy at Tokyo, Japan. He received salary and allowances at Tokyo from the Government of India for the year ended 31.3.2020 for services rendered by him in Tokyo. Besides, he was allowed perquisites by the Government. He is a non-resident for the assessment year 2020-21. Examine the taxability of salary, allowances and perquisites in the hands of J for the assessment year 2020-21.

SOLUTION

As per section 9(1)(iii), salaries payable by the Government to a citizen of India for services rendered outside India shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India. As such, salary received by J is chargeable to tax, even though he was a non-resident for A.Y. 2020-21.

As per section 10(7), all allowances or perquisites paid or allowed as such outside India by the Government to a citizen of India for rendering services outside India is exempt from tax. Therefore, the allowances and perquisites received by J are exempt as per section 10(7).

(4) Dividend paid by a Indian company outside India [Section 9(1)(iv)]

All dividends paid by an Indian company would be deemed to accrue or arise in India. Under section 10(34), income from dividends referred to in section 115-O i.e., dividend distributed by a domestic company on which DDT is leviable in the hands of the company, is exempt from tax in the hands of the shareholder. However, it will not be exempt if such dividend is chargeable to tax under section 115BBDA. Section 115BBDA, which brings to tax dividend in excess of ₹ 10 lakh in the hands of the shareholder @10%, does not apply to the non-residents.

(5) Interest [Section 9(1)(v)]

Under section 9(1)(v), an interest is deemed to accrue or arise in India if it is payable by -

(i) the Government;

(ii) a person resident in India;

Exception: Where it is payable in respect of any debt incurred or money borrowed and used, for the purposes of a business or profession carried on by him outside India or for the purposes of making or earning any income from any source outside India, it will not be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

(iii) a non-resident, when it is payable in respect of any debt incurred or moneys borrowed and used, for the purpose of a business or profession carried on in India by him.

Exception: Interest on money borrowed by the non-resident for any purpose other than a business or profession, will not be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

> Example: If a non-resident 'A' borrows money from a non-resident 'B' and invests the same in shares of an Indian company, interest payable by 'A' to 'B' will not be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

Meaning of interest: Interest means interest payable in any manner in respect of any moneys borrowed or debt incurred (including a deposit, claim or other similar right or obligation) and includes any service fee or other charge in respect of the moneys borrowed or debt incurred or in respect of any credit facility which has not been utilized.

Taxability of interest payable by the Permanent Establishment of a non-resident engaged in banking business to the head office

In order to provide clarity and certainty, on the issue of taxability of interest payable by the PE of a non-resident engaged in banking business to the head office, an Explanation has been inserted in section 9(1)(v). Accordingly, in the case of a non-resident, being a person engaged in the business of banking, any interest payable by the PE in India of such non-resident to the head office or any PE or any other part of such non-resident outside India, shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

Such interest shall be chargeable to tax in addition to any income attributable to the PE in India.

Further, the PE in India shall be deemed to be a person separate and independent of the non-resident person of which it is a PE and the provisions of the Act relating to computation of total income, determination of tax and collection and recovery would apply accordingly.

Also, the PE in India has to deduct tax at source on any interest payable to either the head office or any other branch or PE, etc. of the non-resident outside India. Non-deduction would result in disallowance of interest claimed as expenditure by the PE and may also attract levy of interest and penalty in accordance with relevant provisions of the Act.

Permanent establishment includes a fixed place of business through which the business of the enterprise is wholly or partly carried on.

(6) Royalty [Section 9(1)(vi)]

Royalty will be deemed to accrue or arise in India when it is payable by -

(i) the Government;

(ii) a person who is a resident in India

Exception: Where it is payable for the transfer of any right or the use of any property or information or for the utilization of services for the purposes of a business or profession carried on by such person outside India or for the purposes of making or earning any income from any source outside India, or

(iii) a non-resident only when the royalty is payable in respect of any right, property or information used or services utilised for purposes of a business or profession carried on by such person in India or for the purposes of making or earning any income from any source in India.

Important points:

1. Lumpsum royalty not deemed to accrue arise in India: Lumpsum royalty payments made by a resident for the transfer of all or any rights (including the granting of a licence) in respect of computer software supplied by a non-resident manufacturer along with computer hardware under any scheme approved by the government under the policy on computer software export, software development and training, 1986 shall not be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

2. Meaning of Computer software: "Computer software" means any computer programme recorded on any disc, tape, perforated media or other information storage device and includes any such programme or any customised electronic data.

3. Meaning of Royalty: The term 'royalty' means consideration (including any lumpsum consideration but excluding any consideration which would be the income of the recipient chargeable under the head 'capital gains') for:

   (i) the transfer of all or any rights (including the granting of licence) in respect of a patent, invention, model, design, secret formula or process or trade mark or similar property;

(ii) the imparting of any information concerning the working of, or the use of, a patent, invention, model, design, secret formula or process or trade mark or similar property;

(iii) the use of any patent, invention, model, design, secret formula or process or trade mark or similar property;

(iv) the imparting of any information concerning technical, industrial, commercial or scientific knowledge, experience or skill;

(v) the use or right to use any industrial, commercial or scientific equipment but not including the amounts referred to in section 44BB;

(vi) the transfer of all or any rights (including the granting of licence) in respect of any copyright, literary, artistic or scientific work including films or video tapes for use in connection with television or tapes for use in connection with radio broadcasting, but not including consideration for the sale, distribution or exhibition of cinematographic films;

(vii) the rendering of any service in connection with the activities listed above.

The definition of 'royalty' for this purpose is wide enough to cover both industrial royalties as well as copyright royalties. The deduction specially excludes income which should be chargeable to tax under the head 'capital gains'.

4. Consideration for use or right to use of computer software is royalty within the meaning of section 9(1)(vi)

The consideration for use or right to use of computer software is royalty by clarifying that, transfer of all or any rights in respect of any right, property or information includes and has always included transfer of all or any right for use or right to use a computer software (including granting of a licence) irrespective of the medium through which such right is transferred [Explanation 4]

Consequently, the provisions of tax deduction at source under section 194J and section 195 would be attracted in respect of consideration for use or right to use computer software since the same falls within the definition of royalty.

Note - The Central Government has, vide Notification No. 21/2012 dated 13.6.2012 to be effective from 1st July, 2012, exempted certain software payments from the applicability of tax deduction under section 194J. Accordingly, where payment is made by the transferee for acquisition of software from a resident-transferor, the provisions of section 194J would not be attracted if –

(1) the software is acquired in a subsequent transfer without any modification by the transferor;

(2) tax has been deducted either under section 194J or under section 195 on payment for any previous transfer of such software; and

(3) the transferee obtains a declaration from the transferor that tax has been so deducted along with the PAN of the transferor.

5. Consideration in respect of any right, property or information – Is it royalty?

Explanation 5 provides that Royalty includes and has always included consideration in respect of any right, property or information, whether or not,

(a) the possession or control of such right, property or information is with the payer;

(b) such right, property or information is used directly by the payer;

(c) the location of such right, property or information is in India [Explanation 5]

6. Meaning of Process

Explanation 6 provides that the term "process" includes and shall be deemed to have always included transmission by satellite (including up-linking, amplification, conversion for down-linking of any signal), cable, optic fibre or by any other similar technology, whether or not such process is secret [Explanation 6]

ILLUSTRATION 3

Mr. Soham, an Indian Citizen, left India on 20-04-2017 for the first time to setup a software firm in Singapore. On 10-04-2019, he entered into an agreement with LK Limited, an Indian Company, for the transfer of technical documents and designs to setup an automobile factory in Faridabad. He reached India along with his team to render the requisite services on 15-05-2019 and was able to complete his assignment on 20-08-2019. He left for Singapore on 21-08-2019. He charged ₹ 50 lakhs for his services from LK Limited.

Determine the residential status of Mr. Soham for the Assessment Year 2020-21 and examine whether the fees charged from LK Limited would be chargeable to tax as per the Income-tax Act, 1961.

SOLUTION

Determination of residential status of Mr. Soham

As per section 6(1), an individual is said to be resident in India in any previous year if he satisfies the conditions:-

(i) He has been in India during the previous year for a total period of 182 days or more, or

(ii) He has been in India during the 4 years immediately preceding the previous year for a total period of 365 days or more and has been in India for at least 60 days in the previous year.

In the case of an Indian citizen leaving India for the purposes of employment outside India during the previous year or an Indian citizen, who being outside India, comes on a visit to India in any previous year, the period of stay during the previous year in condition (ii) above, to qualify as a resident, would be 182 days instead of 60 days.

In this case, Mr. Soham is an Indian citizen who left India to set up a software firm in Singapore on 20.04.2017. Therefore, he is an Indian citizen living in Singapore, who comes on a visit to India during the P.Y.2019-20. His stay in India during the period of his visit is only 99 days (i.e., 17+30+31+21 days). Since his stay in India during the previous year 2019-20 is only 99 days, he does not satisfy the minimum criterion of 182 days stay in India for being a resident. Hence, his residential status for A.Y.2020-21 is Non-Resident.

Taxability of income

As per section 5(2), in case of a non-resident, only income which accrues or arises or which is deemed to accrue or arise to him in India or which is received or deemed to be received in India in the relevant previous year is taxable in India.

In this case, Mr. Soham, a non-resident, charges fees from LK Ltd., an Indian company, for transfer of technical documents and designs to set up an automobile factory in Faridabad. He renders the requisite services in India for which he stays in India for 99 days during the P.Y.2019-20.

Section 9(1)(vi) defines "royalty" to mean consideration for transfer of all or any rights in respect of, inter alia, a design and also for the rendering of services in connection with such activity. Transfer of rights in the above definition includes transfer of right for use or right to use a computer software also. Therefore, the fees received by Mr. Soham for transfer of technical documents and designs and rendering of requisite services in relation thereto would fall within the meaning of "royalty".

As per section 9(1)(vi), income by way of royalty payable by a person who is a resident (in this case, LK Limited, an Indian company) would be deemed to accrue or arise in India in the hands of the non-resident (Mr. Soham, in this case), except where such royalty is payable in respect of any right or property or information used or for services utilized for the purpose of a business carried on by such person outside India or for the purposes of making or earning income from any source outside India.

In this case, since the royalty is payable by LK Limited*,* an Indian company, to Mr. Soham, a non-resident, in respect of services utilized for a business in India (namely, for setting up an automobile factory in Faridabad), the same is deemed to accrue or arise in India and is hence, taxable in India in the hands of Mr. Soham, a non-resident for the A.Y. 2020-21.

(7) Fees for technical services [Section 9(1)(vii)]

Any fees for technical services will be deemed to accrue or arise in India if they are payable by -

(i) the Government.

(ii) a person who is resident in India

Exception: Where the fees is payable in respect of technical services utilised in a business or profession carried on by such person outside India or for the purpose of making or earning any income from any source outside India.

(iii) a person who is a non-resident, only where the fees are payable in respect of services utilised in a business or profession carried on by the non-resident in India or where such services are utilised for the purpose of making or earning any income from any source in India.

Fees for technical services mean any consideration (including any lumpsum consideration) for the rendering of any managerial, technical or consultancy services (including providing the services of technical or other personnel). However, it does not include consideration for any construction, assembly, mining or like project undertaken by the recipient or consideration which would be income of the recipient chargeable under the head 'Salaries'.

Income deemed to accrue or arise in India to a non-resident by way of interest, royalty and fee for technical services to be taxed irrespective of territorial nexus [Explanation to section 9]

Income by way of interest, royalty or fee for technical services which is deemed to accrue or arise in India by virtue of clauses (v), (vi) and (vii) of section 9(1), shall be included in the total income of the non-resident, whether or not –

(i) the non-resident has a residence or place of business or business connection in India; or

(ii) the non-resident has rendered services in India.

In effect, the income by way of fee for technical services, interest or royalty, from services utilized in India would be deemed to accrue or arise in India in case of a non-resident and be included in his total income, whether or not such services were rendered in India.

ILLUSTRATION 4

Miss Vivitha paid a sum of 5000 USD to Mr. Kulasekhara, a management consultant practising in Colombo, specializing in project financing. The payment was made in Colombo. Mr. Kulasekhara is a non-resident. The consultancy is related to a project in India with possible Ceylonese collaboration. Is this payment chargeable to tax in India in the hands of Mr. Kulasekhara?

SOLUTION

A non-resident is chargeable to tax in respect of income received outside India only if such income accrues or arises or is deemed to accrue or arise to him in India.

The income deemed to accrue or arise in India under section 9 comprises, inter alia, income by way of fees for technical services, which includes any consideration for rendering of any managerial, technical or consultancy services. Therefore, payment to a management consultant relating to project financing is covered within the scope of "fees for technical services".

The Explanation below section 9(2) clarifies that income by way of, inter alia, fees for technical services, from services utilized in India would be deemed to accrue or arise in India in case of a non-resident and be included in his total income, whether or not such services were rendered in India or whether or not the non-resident has a residence or place of business or business connection in India.

In the instant case, since the services were utilized in India, the payment received by Mr. Kulasekhara, a non-resident, in Colombo is chargeable to tax in his hands in India, as it is deemed to accrue or arise in India.

(8) Any sum of money paid by a resident Indian to a non-corporate non-resident or foreign company [Section 9(1)(viii)]

Income arising outside India, being any sum of money paid without consideration, by a Indian resident person to a non-corporate non-resident or foreign company on or after 5.7.2019 would be deemed to accrue or arise in India if the same is chargeable to tax under section 56(2)(x) i.e., if the aggregate of such sum received by a non-corporate non-resident or foreign company exceeds ₹ 50,000.

(3) Presence of Eligible Fund Manager in India not to constitute Business Connection in India of such Eligible Investment Fund on behalf of which he undertakes Fund Management Activity [Section 9A]

(i) Fund Management Activity through an eligible fund manager not to constitute business connection: In the case of an eligible investment fund, the fund management activity carried out through an eligible fund manager acting on behalf of such fund shall not constitute business connection in India of the said fund, subject to fulfillment of certain conditions.

(ii) Location of Fund Manager in India not to affect residential status of an eligible investment fund: An eligible investment fund shall not be said to be resident in India merely because the eligible fund manager undertaking fund management activities on its behalf, is located in India.

(iii) Conditions to be fulfilled by an Eligible Investment Fund: The eligible investment fund means a fund established or incorporated or registered outside India, which collects funds from its members for investing it for their benefit. Further, it should fulfill the following conditions:

(a) the fund should not be a person resident in India;

(b) the fund should be a resident of a country or a specified territory with which an agreement referred to in section 90(1) or section 90A(1) has been entered into or should be established or incorporated or registered outside India in a country or a specified territory notified by the Central Government in this behalf;

(c) the aggregate participation or investment in the fund, directly or indirectly, by persons being resident in India should not exceed 5% of the corpus of the fund;

(d) the fund and its activities should be subject to applicable investor protection regulations in the country or specified territory where it is established or incorporated or is a resident;

(e) the fund should have a minimum of 25 members who are, directly or indirectly, not connected persons;

(f) any member of the fund along with connected persons shall not have any participation interest, directly or indirectly, in the fund exceeding 10%;

(g) the aggregate participation interest, directly or indirectly, of ten or less members along with their connected persons in the fund, shall be less than 50%;

(h) the investment by the fund in any entity shall not exceed 20% of the corpus of the fund;

(i) no investment shall be made by the fund in its associate entity;

(j) the monthly average of the corpus of the fund shall not be less than ₹ 100 crore. If the fund has been established or incorporated in the previous year, the corpus of fund should not be less than ₹ 100 crore rupees at the end of a period of six months from the last day of the month of its establishment or incorporation, or the end of such previous year, whichever is later;

However, this condition shall not be applicable to a fund which has been wound up in the previous year.

(k) the fund shall not carry on or control and manage, directly or indirectly, any business in India;

(l) the fund should neither be engaged in any activity which constitutes a business connection in India nor should have any person acting on its behalf whose activities constitute a business connection in India other than the activities undertaken by the eligible fund manager on its behalf.

(m) the remuneration paid by the fund to an eligible fund manager in respect of fund management activity undertaken on its behalf should not be less than the amount calculated in the prescribed manner.

(iv) Certain conditions not to apply to investment fund set up by the Government or the Central Bank of a foreign State or a Sovereign Fund or other notified fund [Proviso to Section 9A(3)]: The following conditions would, however, not be applicable in case of an investment fund set up by the Government or the Central Bank of a foreign State or a sovereign fund or such other fund notified by the Central Government (i.e., an investment fund set up by a Category-I or Category-II Foreign Portfolio Investor registered under the Securities and Exchange Board of India (Foreign Portfolio Investors) Regulations, 2014, made under the Securities and Exchange Board of India Act, 1992:

(e) the fund should have a minimum of 25 members who are, directly or indirectly, not connected persons;

(f) any member of the fund along with connected persons shall not have any participation interest, directly or indirectly, in the fund exceeding 10%;

(g) the aggregate participation interest, directly or indirectly, of ten or less members along with their connected persons in the fund, shall be less than 50%.

(v) Eligible Fund Manager [Section 9A(4)]: The eligible fund manager, in respect of an eligible investment fund, means any person who is engaged in the activity of fund management and fulfills the following conditions:

(a) the person should not be an employee of the eligible investment fund or a connected person of the fund;

(b) the person should be registered as a fund manager or investment advisor in accordance with the specified regulations;

The CBDT has, vide Circular No.8/2019 dated 10.5.2019*, clarified that a fund manager includes an Asset Management Company (AMC) approved by SEBI under the SEBI (Mutual Funds) Regulations, 1996. This is because AMCs are engaged in* the activity of fund management of Mutual Funds and hence are, in substance, Fund Managers.

(c) the person should be acting in the ordinary course of his business as a fund manager;

(d) the person along with his connected persons shall not be entitled, directly or indirectly, to more than 20% of the profits accruing or arising to the eligible investment fund from the transactions carried out by the fund through such fund manager.

(vi) Furnishing of Statement in prescribed form [Section 9A(5)]: Every eligible investment fund shall, in respect of its activities in a financial year, furnish within 90 days from the end of the financial year, a statement in the prescribed form to the prescribed income-tax authority. The statement should contain information relating to –

(a) the fulfillment of the above conditions; and

(b) such other relevant information or document which may be prescribed.

If any eligible investment fund fails to furnish such statement or information or document within 90 days from the end of the financial year, the income-tax authority prescribed under the said sub-section may direct that such fund shall pay, by way of penalty, a sum of ₹ 5,00,000. [Section 271FAB]

(vii) Non-applicability of special taxation regime under section 9A [Section 9A(6)]: This special taxation regime would not have any impact on taxability of any income of the eligible investment fund which would have been chargeable to tax irrespective of whether the activity of the eligible fund manager constituted business connection in India of such fund or not.

Further, the said regime shall not have any effect on the scope of total income or determination of total income in the case of the eligible fund manager.

(viii) CBDT to prescribe guidelines for the manner of application of the provisions of this section.

(ix) Meaning of certain terms:

1. Mr. A, citizen of India but resident of USA since year 2012, was appointed in India in October, 2018 as an employee of a US enterprise. Such US enterprise is not engaged in any business in India. A's job requires him to visit his US office every twenty five (25) days for reporting purposes.

   During F.Y. 2019-20, Mr. A earned a remuneration of ₹ 10 lakhs for his India related assignment and his stay in India in aggregate was 85 days. Further, such US enterprise has not claimed any deduction of such remuneration under the Income-tax Act, 1961.

   Being an Individual who is a citizen of India, such remuneration shall not be exempt in his hands for A.Y. 2020-21 under this section i.e., section 10(6)(vi), though he may get exemption under any other provision of the Income-tax Act, 1961, subject to fulfilment of conditions stipulated thereunder.

2. In the above case, let's consider that Mr. A is a citizen of USA. All other facts remaining same, his remuneration shall be exempt from tax in his hands for A.Y. 2020-21 under this section.

3. Let's take another variation, Mr. A is a citizen of USA but the remuneration paid to him is borne by the permanent establishment of such US enterprise in India. ₹ 10 lakhs paid to A is cross charged by the US enterprise to its Indian permanent establishment (PE).

In this case, the remuneration shall not be exempt from taxation in the hands of Mr. A as the same is getting deducted from the income of the Indian PE of such foreign enterprise.

(iii) Salary received by a non-citizen for services rendered in connection with employment on foreign ship [Section 10(6)(viii)]: Any income chargeable under the head "Salaries" received by or due to, non-citizen of India who is also a non-resident as remuneration for services rendered in connection with his employment on a foreign ship is exempt provided his total stay in India does not exceed 90 days during the previous year.

(iv) Remuneration received by Foreign Government employees during their stay in India for specified training [Section 10(6)(xi)]: Any remuneration received by employee of the Government of a foreign state from their respective Government during his stay in India, is exempt from tax, if remuneration is received in connection with training in any establishment or office of or in any undertaking owned by,-

(a) the Government, or

(b) any company owned by the Central Government or any State Government or partly by the Central Government and partly by one or more State Government

(c) any company which is subsidiary of a company referred to in (b) above, or

(d) any statutory corporation; or

(e) any society registered under Societies Registration Act, 1860 or under any law and wholly financed by the Central Government or any State Government(s) or partly by the Central Government and partly by one or more State Governments.

2.4 PRESUMPTIVE TAXATION FOR NON RESIDENTS

Section 28 details the income chargeable to tax under the head “Profits and Gains of Business or Profession”. Certain provisions have been incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961, whereby the "Profits and gains of business or profession" of certain non-resident assessee is computed on the basis of certain percentage of the amount accrued or arisen and received in India.

(1) Special provision for computing the profits and gains of shipping business in the case of non-residents [Section 44B]

Section 44B is a non-obstante clause. Accordingly, sections 28 to 43A are not applicable in the case of a non-resident engaged in the business of operation of ships.

Section 44B provides that profits and gains of a non-resident engaged in the business of operation of ships are to be taken @ 7.5% of the aggregate of the following amounts:

(i) paid or payable, whether in or out of India, to the assessee or to any person on his behalf on account of carriage of passengers, livestock, mail or goods shipped at any port in India; and

(ii) received or deemed to be received in India by or on behalf of the assessee on account of the carriage of passengers, livestock mail or goods shipped at any port outside India.

The amounts referred to in (i) and (ii) shall include demurrage charges or handling charges or any other amount of similar nature.

The amounts paid or payable or the amounts received or deemed to be received will also include the amount paid or payable or received or deemed to be received by way of demurrage charges or handling charges or any other amount of similar nature [CIT v. Japan Lines Ltd. 260 ITR 656 (Mad)]. Thus 7.5% of the gross amounts mentioned above would be liable to tax and no deduction would be allowed for any expenditure, (i.e. the provisions of section 28 to 43A are not to be taken into account) however carried forward losses would be allowed to be set off from such income.

Analysis of section 44B and section 172:

Section 44B	Section 172
Presumptive tax provisions for non-residents engaged in shipping business. It does not, however, contain any procedure for assessment and collection of tax.	Complete code for taxation of occasional shipping business of non-residents, including assessment and collection of tax.
Manner of computation of presumptive Income:
Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in sections 28 to 43A, in the case of an assessee, being a non-resident, engaged in the business of operation of ships, a sum equal to 7.5% of the aggregate of the - - amount paid or payable (whether in or outside	Where a ship carries passengers, livestock, mail or goods shipped at a port in India, a sum equal to 7.5% of - the amount paid or payable on account of such carriage to the owner or the charterer or to any person on his behalf,

India) to the non-resident or to any other person on his behalf on account of the carriage of passengers, livestock, mail or goods shipped at any Indian port and - the amount received or deemed to be received in India on account of the carriage of passengers, livestock, mail or goods shipped at any port outside India. shall be deemed to be the profits and gains of such business chargeable to tax under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession".	whether that amount is paid or payable in or out of India, shall be deemed to be income accruing in India to the owner or charterer on account of such carriage.

Other provisions of section 172

(i) Furnish a return of the amount paid to the owner: Section 172(3) imposes an obligation on the master of the ship to prepare and furnish to the Assessing Officer a return of the full amount paid or payable to the owner or charterer or any person on this behalf, on account of the carriage of all passengers, livestock, mail or goods shipped at any port in India since the last arrival of the ship thereat. Such return is, ordinarily, to be furnished by the master of the ship before the departure, from that port in India, of the ship.

A return may, however, be filed by the person authorized by the master of the ship within 30 days of the departure of the ship from the port, if:

(a) the Assessing Officer is satisfied that it is not possible for the master of the ship to furnish the return required by section 172(3) before the departure of the ship from the port and

(b) the master of the ship has made satisfactory arrangement for the filing of the return and payment of tax by any other person on this behalf.

(ii) Assessment [Section 172(4)]: This section provides for a summary procedure of assessment. On receipt of the return filed by the master of the ship or by any person on this behalf, the Assessing Officer has to determine the tax payable on the taxable income. By virtue of the provisions of section 172(2), the taxable income is a sum equal to 7.5% of the amount paid or payable on account of carriage of passengers etc. to the owner or charterer or to any person on his behalf, whether that amount is paid or payable in or out of India. The tax payable on such taxable income is to be calculated at the rate or rates in force applicable to the total income of a foreign company. The master of the ship is liable for payment of such tax.

(iii) Time limit for passing the assessment order [Section 172(4A)/(5)]: It is incumbent on the Assessing Officer to pass the order of assessment within 9 months from the end of the financial year in which the return of income under section 172(3) is filed.

For the purpose of determining the tax payable, Assessing Officer is empowered to call for such accounts and documents as he may require.

(iv) Grant of port of clearance to the ship [Section 172(6)]: A port clearance shall not be granted to the ship until the Collector of customs or other authorized officer, is satisfied that the tax assessable under section 172 has been duly paid or that satisfactory arrangements have been made for the payment thereof.

(v) Option to pay tax as per normal provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 on the income chargeable to tax under section 172 [Section 172(7)]: The owner or charterer has the option to claim before the expiry of the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which the date of departure of the ship from the Indian port falls, that an assessment in respect of his total income for the previous year and the tax payable on the basis thereof be determined in accordance with the other provisions of this Act. In such a case, any payment made under section 172 is to be treated as a payment in advance of the tax leviable for that assessment year and the difference between the sum so paid and the amount of tax found payable by him on such assessment is to be paid by him or refunded to him, as the case may be.

> The sum chargeable to tax under this section shall include amounts payable by way of demurrage charge or handling charge or any other amount of similar nature [Section 172(8)].

Section 172 vis-à-vis section 44B

In case the assessee is covered under section 172, 7.5 per cent of the amount paid or payable on account of the carriage of the passengers, livestock, mail or goods to the owner or the chartered or to any person on his behalf is deemed as his income and tax is levied on such income at a rate applicable to a foreign company i.e., 40% plus surcharge, if any, and plus health and education cess @4%.

Under the provisions of section 172(7), the non-resident owner or charterer is allowed an option to be assessed on his total income of the previous year in accordance with other provisions of the Act i.e., as per section 44B.

When such option is exercised, a regular assessment is made. In such a case, the tax already paid under the provisions of section 172(4) by the non-resident owner or charterer would be treated as tax paid in advance for that assessment year before determining the amount of tax finally due. The difference between the sum so paid and the amount of tax payable by him on such assessment shall be paid by the assessee or refunded to him (See Note below).

In that case, the non-resident assessee is liable to pay interest under sections 234B and 234C and also entitled to receive interest under section 244A of the Income-tax Act, 1961 as the case may be. [Circular No. 9/2001, dated 9-7-2001]

Note –Refund may arise in case of non-corporate non-residents, since they are liable to pay tax at a rate lower than the rate of 40% (plus surcharge, if any, and cess@4%) applicable to a foreign company.

The Supreme Court, in A.S. Glittre v CIT (1997) 225 ITR 739 (SC), held that the assessment made under section 172(4) shall be an 'adhoc' assessment and it will be superceded if a regular assessment is opted as per the provisions of the Act.

ILLUSTRATION 6

Sea Port Shipping Line, a non-resident foreign company ships is engaged in the business of carriage of goods shipped at Mumbai port. During the previous year ended on 31.3.2020, it had collected freight of 100 lakhs, demurrages of ₹ 20 lakhs and handling charges of ₹ 10 lakhs. The expenses of operating its fleet during the year for the Indian Ports were ₹ 110 lakhs. Compute its income applying the presumptive provisions under section 44B.

SOLUTION

Section 44B provides that in the case of an assessee, being a non-resident, engaged in the business of operation of ships, a sum equal to 7.5% of the aggregate of the following amounts would be deemed to be the profits and gains of such business chargeable to tax under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession".

(i) The amount paid or payable, whether within India or outside, to the assessee or to any person on his behalf on account of the carriage of passengers, livestock, mail or goods shipped at any port in India; and

(ii) The amount received or deemed to be received in India by the assessee himself or by any other person on behalf of or on account of the carriage of passengers, livestock, mail or goods shipped at any port outside India.

The above amounts will include demurrage charges and handling charges.

These provisions for computation of income from the shipping business in case of non-residents would apply notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in the provisions of sections 28 to 43A of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

Therefore, in this case, M/s. Sea Port Shipping Line is required to pay tax in India on the basis of presumptive scheme as per the provisions of section 44B. The assessee shall not be entitled to set off any of the expenses incurred for earning of such income. Therefore, the Shipping Line is required to pay tax on deemed profit of ₹ 9.75 lacs (7.50% on the total receipts of ₹ 130 lacs). The tax payable would be reduced by the amount of tax paid under section 172(4).

(2) Special provision for computing profits and gains in connection with the business of exploration etc. of mineral oils [Section 44BB]

Section 44BB is a non-obstante clause. Accordingly, sections 28 to 41 and section 43 and 43A are not applicable in the case of a non-resident engaged in the business of providing services of facilities in connection with, or supplying plant and machinery on hire used, or to be used in the prospecting for, or extraction or production of, mineral oils.

(i) Eligible assessee: Section 44BB provides for determination of income of taxpayer being a non-resident engaged in the business of providing services and facilities in connection with, or supplying plant and machinery on hire used or to be used in the prospecting for, or extraction or production of mineral oils.

(ii) Presumptive rate: In such case, the profits and gains shall be deemed to be equal to 10% of the following amounts:

- paid or payable to the taxpayer or to any person on his behalf whether in or out of India, on account of the provision of such services or facilities or supply of plant & machinery for the aforesaid purposes in India; and
- received or deemed to be received in India by or on behalf of the assesse on account of such service or facilities or supply of plant and machinery used or to be used in prospecting for, or extraction or production of mineral oils outside India.

(iii) Non-applicability of presumptive taxation under section 44BB: The provisions of section 44BB shall not apply to any income to which the provisions of section 42 or section 44DA, 115A or 293A apply for the purpose of computing profit or gains or any other income referred to in these sections.

Section	Provision
42	Special provision for deductions in the case of business for prospecting, etc., for mineral oil
44DA	Special provisions for computing income by way of royalties, etc., in case of non-residents.
115A	Tax on dividends, royalty and fees for technical services in the case of foreign companies
293A	Power to make exemption, etc., in relation to participation in the business of prospecting for, extraction, etc., of mineral oils.

(iv) Option to claim lower profits: An assessee may claim lower income than the presumptive rate of 10%, if he keeps and maintains books of account under section 44AA(2) and get them audited and furnish a report of such audit under section 44AB. The assessment in all such cases shall be done by the Assessing Officer under section 143(3).

(v) Meaning of certain terms: For the purposes of this section,-

(a) "Plant" includes ships, aircraft, vehicles, drilling units, scientific apparatus and equipment, used for the purposes of the said business;

(b) "Mineral oil" includes petroleum and natural gas.

Note - If the income of a non-resident is in the nature of fees for technical services, it shall be taxable under the provisions of either section 44DA or section 115A irrespective of the business to which it relates. Section 44BB would apply only in a case where consideration is for services and other facilities relating to exploration activity which are not in the nature of technical services.

(3) Special provision for computing profits and gains of the business of operation of aircraft in the case of non-residents [Section 44BBA]

Section 44BBA is a non-obstante clause. Accordingly, sections 28 to 43A are not applicable in the case of a non-resident engaged in the business of operation of aircraft.

(i) Eligible assessee: Section 44BBA provides presumptive rate in case of a non-resident engaged in the business of operation of aircraft.

(ii) Presumptive rate: Income from such business is calculated at a flat rate of 5% of the following:

(a) amount paid or payable, in or out of India, to the tax payer or to any person on his behalf on account or carriage of passenger, livestock, mail or goods from any place in India and

(b) amount received or deemed to be received in India by or on behalf of the taxpayer on account of carriage of passenger, livestock, mail or goods from any place outside India.

ILLUSTRATION 7

Mr. Q, a non-resident, operates an aircraft between Singapore and Chennai. He received the following amounts while carrying on the business of operation of aircrafts for the year ended 31.3.2020:

(i) ₹ 2 crores in India on account of carriage of passengers from Chennai.

(ii) ₹ 1 crore in India on account of carriage of goods from Chennai.

(iii) ₹ 3 crores in India on account of carriage of passengers from Singapore.

(iv) ₹ 1 crore in Singapore on account of carriage of passengers from Chennai.

The total expenditure incurred by Mr. Q for the purposes of the business during the year ending 31.3.2020 was ₹ 6.75 crores.

Compute the income of Mr. Q chargeable to tax in India under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" for the assessment year 2020-21.

What would be your answer in case the business was carried on by a foreign company, Q Airlines (P) Ltd?

SOLUTION

Section 44BBA says for computing profits and gains of the business of operation of aircraft in the case of non-residents a sum equal to 5% of the aggregate of the following amounts -

(a) paid or payable, whether in or out of India, to the assessee or to any person on his behalf on account of the carriage of passengers, livestock, mail or goods from any place in India; and

(b) received or deemed to be received in India by or on behalf of the assessee on account of the carriage of passengers, livestock, mail or goods from any place outside India.

Keeping in view the provisions of section 44BBA, the income of Mr. Q chargeable to tax in India under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" is worked out hereunder-

Particulars	₹
Amount received in India on account of carriage of passengers from Chennai	2,00,00,000
Amount received in India on account of carriage of goods from Chennai	1,00,00,000
Amount received in India on account of carriage of passengers from Singapore	3,00,00,000
Amount received in Singapore on account of carriage of passengers from Chennai	1,00,00,000
	7,00,00,000

Income from business under section 44BBA at 5% of ₹ 7,00,00,000 is ₹ 35,00,000, which is the income of Mr. Q chargeable to tax in India under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" for the A.Y. 2020-21.

In case the assessee is a foreign company, say, Q Airlines (P) Ltd, the answer would be the same since section 44BBA does not distinguish corporate and non-corporate taxpayers who operate aircraft provided their residential status is that of non-resident.

(4) Special provision for computing profits and gains of foreign companies engaged in the business of civil construction etc. in certain turnkey power projects [Section 44BBB]

(i) Eligible assessee: A foreign company engaged in the business of civil construction or the business of erection of plant or machinery or testing or commissioning thereof in connection with a turnkey power project approved by the Central Government in this behalf.

(ii) Presumptive rate: A sum equal to 10% of the amount paid or payable (whether in or out of India) to the said assessee or to any person on his behalf on account of such civil construction, erection, testing or commissioning shall be deemed to be the profits and gains of such business chargeable to tax under the head 'profits and gains of business or profession'.

(iii) Option to claim lower profits: An assessee may claim lower income than the presumptive rate of 10%, if he keeps and maintains books of account under section 44AA(2) and get them audited and furnish a report of such audit under section 44AB. The assessment in all such cases shall be done by the Assessing Officer under section 143(3).

2.5 CAPITAL GAINS TAXATION FOR NON RESIDENTS

Any person including a foreign company or non-corporate non-resident is liable to capital gains tax in India, if there is a transfer of a property (capital asset) in India which results in profit or gain. The provisions relating non-residents in respect of capital gains taxation are discussed in detail in Chapter 7: Capital Gains at Module 1 of Part I: Direct Tax Laws.

First Proviso to Section 48 read with Rule 115A:-

In order to give protection to non-residents who invest foreign exchange to acquire capital assets, the first proviso to section 48 provides that capital gains arising from the transfer of shares or debentures of an Indian company is to be computed as follows:

- The cost of acquisition, the expenditure incurred wholly and exclusively in connection with the transfer and the full value of the consideration are to be converted into the same foreign currency with which such shares or debentures were acquired.
- The resulting capital gains shall be reconverted into Indian currency.

The aforesaid manner of computation of capital gains shall be applied for every purchase and sale of shares or debentures in an Indian company.

Benefit of indexation will not be applied in this case.

Rule 115A of the Income-tax Rules, 1962 provides that the average of the telegraphic transfer buying rate and telegraphic transfer selling rate of the foreign currency initially utilized in purchase of the capital asset as on the date specified in column (3) in the table below, shall be used to convert rupees into foreign currency for the purpose of computation of capital gains.

(1)	(2)	(3)
S. No.	Item	Date
(a)	Cost of acquisition of capital asset	Date of acquisition of capital asset
(b)	Expenditure incurred wholly and exclusively in connection with transfer of capital asset	Date of transfer of capital asset
(c)	Full value of consideration received or accruing as a result of transfer of a capital asset	Date of transfer of capital asset

For reconverting capital gains computed in the foreign currency initially utilized in the purchase of the capital asset into rupees, the telegraphic transfer buying rate of such currency, as on the date of transfer of the capital asset, is to be considered.

Meaning of certain terms

Term	Meaning
Telegraphic transfer buying rate	The rate or rates of exchange adopted by the State Bank of India for buying foreign currency having regard to the guidelines specified from time to time by the RBI for buying foreign currency where such currency, made available to that bank through a telegraphic transfer.

Telegraphic transfer selling rate	The rate of exchange adopted by the State Bank of India for selling foreign currency where such currency is made available by that bank through telegraphic transfer.

However, the benefit of indexation and currency fluctuation would not be available in respect of capital gains arising from the transfer of the following long term capital assets referred to in section 112A –

(i) equity share in a company on which STT is paid both at the time of acquisition and transfer

(ii) unit of equity oriented fund or unit of business trust on which STT is paid at the time of transfer.

Other Important Points:

a. It is also provided that the aforesaid manner of computation of capital gains shall be applicable in respect of capital gains accruing or arising from every re-investment thereafter in and sale of shares in or debentures of an Indian company.

b. If the total income of an assessee includes any income chargeable under the head 'Capital Gains' arising from transfer of a capital asset being an equity share in a company or unit of an equity oriented fund or unit of a business trust, then, tax on short term capital gains shall be payable at the rates specified in section 111A if transaction of sale of such security has been entered on or after October 1, 2004 on which STT is chargeable; and tax on long-term capital gains shall be payable on such securities as per section 112A, if STT has been paid both at the time of acquisition and transfer of equity share or at the time of transfer of unit of equity oriented fund or unit of business trust.

c. Section 50CA provides that where the consideration received or accruing as a result of transfer of a capital asset, being share of a company other than a quoted share, is less than the fair market value of such share determined in such manner as may be prescribed, such fair market value shall be deemed to be the full value of consideration received or accruing as a result of such transfer.

   This provision would, however, not be applicable to any consideration received or accruing as a result of transfer by such class of persons and subject to such conditions as may be prescribed.

d. Section 50D provides that, in case where the consideration received or accruing as a result of the transfer of a capital asset by an assessee is not ascertainable or cannot be determined, then, for the purpose of computing income chargeable to tax as capital gains, the fair market value of the said asset on the date of transfer shall be deemed to be the full value of consideration received or accruing as a result of such transfer.

e. The shares and debentures (whether listed or non-listed) of Indian companies only are covered under this proviso. Indian company shall include Government company. However, bonds of Central Government/State Government and RBI are not covered for this purpose.

ILLUSTRATION 9

Mr. A, a non-resident Indian remits US $ 40,000 to India on 16.09.2005. The amount is partly utilised on 3.10.2005 for purchasing 10,000 equity shares in A Ltd, an Indian Company, at the rate of ₹ 12 per share. These shares are sold for ₹ 48 per share on 30.03.2020. Fair Market value of these shares on 31.01.2018 was ₹ 35 per share.

The telegraphic transfer buying and selling rate of US dollars adopted by the State Bank of India is as follows :-

Date	Buying Rate (1 US$)	Selling Rate (1 US $)
16.09.2005	18	20
3.10.2005	19	21

Long term capital gain		1,30,000

Long term capital gains upto ₹ 1,00,000 would be exempt. Long term capital gains exceeding ₹ 1,00,000, i.e., ₹ 30,000 is taxable @10% under section 112A.

Fourth Proviso to Section 48

As a measure to enable Indian companies to raise funds from outside India, the RBI has permitted them to issue rupee denominated bonds outside India. Accordingly, in case of non-resident assessees, any gains arising on account of appreciation of rupee between the date of purchase and the date of redemption of rupee denominated bond of an Indian company held by him against foreign currency in which investment is made shall not be included in computation of full value of consideration. This would provide relief to the non-resident investor who bears the risk of currency fluctuation.

Note - Non-corporate non-residents and foreign companies to be subject to tax at a concessional rate of 10% (without indexation benefit or currency fluctuation) on long-term capital gains arising from transfer of unlisted securities or shares of a company in which public are not substantially interested [Section 112]

However, the enhanced surcharge of 25% and 37% has been withdrawn on tax payable at special rate under section 115AD by the FPI on the capital gains arising from the transfer of derivatives (Future & Options).*
> In case of assessee other than FPI, derivatives are not treated as capital asset and the income arising from the transfer of the derivatives is treated as business income. Further, it has been clarified that the business income arising from the transfer of derivatives to a person other than FPI would be liable to enhanced surcharge [Press Release dated 24-8-2019]

(ii) No deduction is allowed [Section 115AD(2)]: Where the gross total income of the Foreign Institutional Investor comprises only of the aforesaid interest or dividend income from securities, no deduction shall be allowed to it under sections 28 to 44C or section 57(i) or 57(iii) or under Chapter VI-A.

Deduction under Chapter VI-A is also not allowable in case of short term capital gain or long term capital gain arising from transfer of securities.

Where the gross total income of the Foreign Institutional Investor consists of incomes other than income referred to in (a), (b) and (c) of table in (i) above, then, the deduction under Chapter VI-A will be available in respect of other incomes.

(iii) First and second provisos to section 48 shall not apply [Section 115AD(3)]: The benefit of computation of capital gains in foreign currency and the benefit of indexation would not be available for the computation of capital gains arising on transfer of securities.

(5) Special provision for computing tax on non-resident sportsmen or sports associations [Section 115BBA]

(i) Eligible assessee and special rate of tax: Where the total income of an assessee, referred to in column (2) includes income referred to in column (3) of the table below, such income would be chargeable to tax@20%.

	Assessee	Income
(1)	(2)	(3)
(a)	A sportsman (including an athlete), who is not a citizen of India and is a non-resident	Any income received or receivable by way of— (i) participation in India in any game (other than a game the winnings wherefrom are taxable under section 115BB, being winning from crossword puzzles, races including horse races, card games and other games of any sort of gambling or betting) or sport; or (ii) advertisement; or

		(iii) contribution of articles relating to any game or sport in India in newspapers, magazines or journals;
(b)	A non-resident sports association or institution	Any amount guaranteed to be paid or payable to such association or institution in relation to any game (other than a game the winnings wherefrom are taxable under section 115BB) or sport played in India
(c)	An entertainer who is not a citizen of India and is a non-resident	Any income received or receivable from his performance in India

(ii) Deduction of expenditure not permissible: No deduction in respect of any expenditure or allowance shall be allowed under any provision of this Act in computing the income referred to in (a) or (b) or (c) in the table given above.

(iii) Filing of return of income not required: The assessee is not required to furnish under section 139(1) a return of his income if—

(a) his total income in respect of which he is assessable under this Act during the previous year consisted only of income referred to in (a) or (b) or (c) above; and

(b) the tax deductible at source under the provisions of Chapter XVII-B has been deducted from such income.

Note: The issue as to whether the non-resident match referees and umpires in the games played in India fall within the meaning of "sportsmen" to attract taxability under the provisions of section 115BBA, and consequently attract the TDS provisions under section 194E in the hands of the payer was taken up by the Calcutta High Court in Indcom v. CIT (TDS) (2011) 335 ITR 485.

In order to attract the provisions of the section 194E, the person should be a non-resident sportsperson or non-resident sports association or institution whose income is taxable as per the provisions of section 115BBA.

Umpires and match referees can be described as professionals or technical persons who render professional or technical services, but they cannot be said to be either non-resident sportsmen (including an athlete) or non-resident sports association or institution so as to attract the provisions of section 115BBA and consequently, the provisions of tax deduction at source under section 194E are can not be attracted.

The Calcutta High Court held that although the payments made to non-resident umpires and the match referees are "income" which has accrued and arisen in India, the same are not taxable under the provisions of section 115BBA and thus, the assessee is not liable to deduct tax under section 194E.

It may be noted that since income has accrued and arisen in India to the non-resident umpires and match referees, the TDS provisions under section 195 would be attracted and tax would be deductible at the rates in force.

ILLUSTRATION 12

During the financial year 2019-20, Nadal, a tennis professional and a non-Indian citizen participated in India in a Tennis Tournament and won prize money of ₹ 15 lakhs. He contributed articles on the tournament in a local newspaper for which he was paid ₹ 1 lakh. He was also paid ₹ 5 lakhs by a Soft Drink company for appearance in a T.V. advertisement. Although his expenses in India were met by the sponsors, he had to incur ₹ 3 lakhs towards his travel costs to India. He was a non-resident for tax purposes in India.

What would be his tax liability in India for A.Y. 2020-21? Is he required to file his return of income?

SOLUTION

Under section 115BBA, all the three items of receipts in India viz. prize money of ₹ 15 lakhs, amount received from newspaper of ₹ 1 lakh and amount received towards TV advertisement of ₹ 5 lakhs - are chargeable to tax. No expenditure is allowable as deduction against such receipts. The rate of tax chargeable under section 115BBA is 20%, plus health and education cess @4%. The total tax liability works out to ₹ 4,36,800 being 20.8% of ₹ 21 lakhs. Thus, Nadal will be liable to tax on the income earned in India

He is not required to file his return of income if -

(a) his total income during the previous year consists only of income arising under section 115BBA; and

(b) the tax deductible at source under the provisions of Chapter XVII-B have been deducted from such incomes.

ILLUSTRATION 13

Smith, a foreign national and a cricketer came to India as a member of Australian cricket team in the year ended 31st March, 2020. He received ₹ 5 lakhs for participation in matches in India. He also received ₹ 1 lakh for an advertisement of a product on TV. He contributed articles in a newspaper for which he received ₹ 10,000. When he stayed in India, he also won a prize of ₹ 20,000 from horse racing in Mumbai. He has no other income in India during the year.

(i) Compute tax liability of Smith for Assessment Year 2020-21.

(ii) Are the income specified above subject to deduction of tax at source?

(iii) Is he liable to file his return of income for Assessment Year 2020-21?

(iv) What would have been his tax liability, had he been a match referee instead of a cricketer?

SOLUTION

(i) Computation of tax liability of Smith for the A.Y.2020-21

Particulars	₹	₹
Income taxable under section 115BBA
Income from participation in matches in India	5,00,000
Advertisement of product on TV	1,00,000
Contribution of articles in newspaper	10,000
Income taxable under section 115BB
Income from horse races	20,000
Total income	6,30,000
Tax@ 20% under section 115BBA on ₹ 6,10,000		1,22,000
Tax@ 30% under section 115BB on income of ₹ 20,000 from horse races		6,000
		1,28,000
Add: Health and Education cess@4%		5,120
Total tax liability of Smith for the A.Y.2020-21		1,33,120

(ii) Yes, the above income is subject to tax deduction at source.

Income referred to in section 115BBA (i.e., ₹ 6,10,000, in this case) is subject to tax deduction at source@ 20% under section 194E.

Income referred to in section 115BB (i.e., ₹ 20,000, in this case) is subject to tax deduction at source@30% under section 194BB.

Since Smith is a non-resident, the amount of tax to be deducted calculated at the prescribed rates mentioned above, would be increased by health and education cess@4%.

(iii) Section 115BBA provides that if the total income of the non-resident sportsman comprises of only income referred to in that section and tax deductible at source has been fully deducted, it shall not be necessary for him to file his return of income. However, in this case, Mr. Smith has income from horse races as well. Therefore, he cannot avail the benefit of exemption from filing of return of income as contained in section 115BBA. Hence, he would be liable to file his return of income for A.Y.2020-21.

(iv) The Calcutta High Court in Indcom v. CIT (TDS)(2011) 335 ITR 485 has held that 'match referee' would not fall within the meaning of "sportsmen" to attract the provisions of section 115BBA. Therefore, although the payments made to non-resident 'match referee' are "income" which has accrued and arisen in India, the same are not taxable under the provisions of section 115BBA. They are subject to the normal rates of tax.

Particulars		₹
Tax@30% under section 115BB on winnings of ₹ 20,000 from horse races		6,000
Tax on ₹ 6,10,000 at the rates in force
Upto ₹ 2,50,000	Nil

5,00,000 – 6,10,000 @ 20%	22,000	34,500
		40,500
Add: Health and Education cess@4%		1,620
Total tax liability		42,120

2.8 SPECIAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO CONVERSION OF INDIAN BRANCH OF A FOREIGN BANK INTO A SUBSIDIARY COMPANY [CHAPTER XII-BB]

(1) Conversion of an Indian branch of foreign company into subsidiary Indian company [Section 115JG(1)]

(i) The provisions of this section apply to a foreign company engaged in banking business in India through its branch situated in India, which is converted into an Indian subsidiary company in accordance with the scheme framed by RBI.

(ii) If the conditions notified by the Central Government in this behalf are satisfied, then capital gains arising from such conversion would not be chargeable to tax in the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which such conversion takes place.

(iii) Also, the provisions of the Act relating to computation of income of foreign company and Indian subsidiary company would apply with such exceptions, modifications and adaptations as specified in the notification.

(iv) Further, the benefit of set-off of unabsorbed depreciation, set-off or carry forward and set-off of losses, tax credit in respect of tax paid on deemed income relating to certain companies available under the Act shall apply with such exceptions, modifications and adaptations as specified in the notification.

Accordingly, the Central Government has, vide notification no. 85/2018, specified the conditions to be fulfilled –

(1) For Capital Gains exemption:

Where a foreign company is engaged in the business of banking through its Indian branch and converts such Indian branch into its Indian subsidiary company in accordance with the scheme framed by RBI, the capital gains arising from such conversion would not be chargeable to tax, if -

(a) the Indian branch amalgamates with the Indian subsidiary company in accordance with the scheme of amalgamation approved by the shareholders of the foreign company and the Indian subsidiary company and sanctioned by the RBI[3]

(b) all the assets and liabilities of the Indian branch immediately before conversion would become the assets and liabilities of the Indian subsidiary company;

(c) the asset and liabilities of the Indian branch are transferred to the Indian subsidiary company at values appearing in the books of account of the Indian branch immediately before its conversion.

Note - Any change in the value of assets consequent to their revaluation would not be considered while determining the value of the assets.

(d) the foreign bank or its nominee shall hold the whole of the share capital of the Indian subsidiary company during the period beginning from the date of conversion and ending on the last day of the previous year in which the conversion took place and continue to hold the shares of Indian subsidiary company carrying not less than 51% of the voting power for a period of five years immediately succeeding the said previous year;

(e) the foreign company does not receive any consideration or benefit, directly or indirectly, in any form or manner, other than by way of allotment of shares in the Indian subsidiary company.

(2) Application of the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 with modifications/exceptions

The provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 relating to unabsorbed depreciation, set off or carry forward and set off of losses, tax credit in respect of tax paid on deemed income relating to certain companies and the computation of income in case of foreign company and Indian subsidiary company shall apply with following modifications, exceptions and adaptation –

	section 32	patents, copyrights, trademarks, licences, franchises or any other business or commercial rights of similar nature, being intangible assets, allowable to the Indian branch and the Indian subsidiary company shall not exceed in any previous year the deduction calculated at the prescribed rates as if the conversion had not taken place. Such deduction would be apportioned between the Indian branch and the Indian subsidiary company in the ratio of the number of days for which the assets were used by them;
(b)	Set-off and c/f of loss and depreciation	The accumulated loss and the unabsorbed depreciation of the Indian branch would be deemed to be the loss or allowance for depreciation of the Indian subsidiary company for the previous year in which conversion was effected; and provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961, relating to set off and carry forward of loss and allowance for depreciation shall apply accordingly.
(c)	Determination of actual cost u/s 43(1)	The actual cost of the block of assets in the case of the Indian subsidiary company shall be the written down value of the block of assets as in the case of the Indian branch on the date of its conversion into the Indian subsidiary company The actual cost of any capital asset on which deduction has been allowed or is allowable under section 35AD, shall be treated as 'nil' in the case of the Indian subsidiary company if the capital asset became the property of the Indian subsidiary company as a result of conversion of the Indian branch
(d)	Cost of acquisition of other capital assets	Where the capital asset other than those referred to in (c) above became the property of the Indian subsidiary company as a result of conversion of the Indian branch, the cost of acquisition of the asset for the purposes of computation of capital gains shall be deemed to be the cost for which the Indian branch acquired it or, as the case may be, the cost for which previous owner has acquired it.
(e)	Tax credit	The tax credit of the Indian branch shall be deemed to be the tax credit of the Indian subsidiary company for the purpose of the previous year in which conversion was effected; and the provisions of section 115JAA of the Income-tax Act, 1961 shall apply accordingly.
(f)	Amortisation of VRS Expenditure	The provisions of 35DDA of the Act shall be, as far as may be, apply to the Indian subsidiary company, as they would have applied to the Indian branch, if the conversion had not taken place
(g)	Deemed credit balance in provision for bad and doubtful debts	The credit balance in the provision for bad and doubtful debts account made under section 36(1)(viia) of the Indian branch on the date of conversion shall be deemed to be the credit balance of the Indian subsidiary company and the provisions of section 36 of the Income-tax Act, 1961, shall apply accordingly

(h)	Non-applicability of section 56(2)(x)	The provisions of section 56(2)(x) shall not apply to the transaction of receipt of shares in the Indian subsidiary company by the foreign company or its nominee in consequence of the conversion of the Indian branch into the Indian subsidiary company.

Meaning of certain terms (given in bold in the above table):

Term	Meaning
Accumulated loss	So much of the loss of the Indian branch before its conversion into Indian subsidiary company under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" (not being a loss sustained in a speculation business) which such Indian branch would have been entitled to carry forward and set off under the provisions of section 72, if the conversion had not taken place.
Unabsorbed depreciation	So much of the allowance for depreciation of the Indian branch before its conversion into Indian subsidiary company, which remains to be allowed and which would have been allowed to the Indian branch under the provisions of the Act, if the conversion had not taken place.
Previous owner	In relation to any capital asset owned by the Indian subsidiary company means the last previous owner of the capital asset who acquired it by a mode of acquisition other than those referred in section 49(1)(i)/(ii)/(iii)/(iv) or section 115JG(1).

Date of conversion	The date, which the Reserve Bank of India appoints for the vesting of undertaking of the Indian branch in Indian subsidiary company[4]

(2) Consequences of failure to comply with the specified conditions [Section 115JG(2)]

If the conditions specified in the scheme of RBI or notification issued by the Central Government are not complied with, then, all the provisions of the Act would apply to the foreign company and Indian subsidiary company without any benefit, exemption or relief under this section.

(3) Consequences of subsequent failure to comply with the conditions [Section 115JG(3)]

(i) If the benefit, exemption or relief has been granted to the foreign company or Indian subsidiary company in any previous year and thereafter, there is a failure to comply with any of the conditions specified in the scheme or notification, then, such benefit, exemption or relief shall be deemed to have been wrongly allowed.

[4] under paragraph 20(i) of the Framework for setting up of wholly owned subsidiaries by foreign banks in India issued by the Reserve Bank of India vide press release number 2013-2014/936 dated 6th day of November, 2013.

(ii) In such a case, the Assessing Officer is empowered to re-compute the total income of the assessee for the said previous year and make the necessary amendment. This power is notwithstanding anything contained in the Income-tax Act, 1961.

(iii) The provisions of rectification under section 154, would, accordingly, apply and the four year period within which such rectification should be made has to be reckoned from the end of the previous year in which the failure to comply with such conditions has taken place.

(iv) Every notification under issued under this section shall be laid before each House of Parliament.

2.9 WITHHOLDING TAX PROVISIONS FOR NON-RESIDENTS

(1) Salary payable in foreign currency [Section 192]

By virtue of section 9(1)(ii), salary is deemed to accrue or arise in India, if services are rendered in India. Therefore, if a non-resident renders services in India, the salary income would be chargeable to tax in India and the person responsible for paying the salary income i.e., the employer, has to deduct withholding tax in accordance with the provisions of Section 192.

Such income-tax has to be calculated at the average rate of income-tax computed on the basis of the rates in force for the relevant financial year in which the payment is made, on the estimated total income of the assesse.

Average rate of income-tax means the rate arrived at by dividing the amount of income-tax calculated on the total income, by such total income.

Section 192(6) deals with the provisions of withholding tax in case of salary payable in foreign currency. In case, where salary is payable in foreign currency, the amount of tax deducted is to be calculated after converting the salary payable into Indian currency at the telegraphic transfer buying rate as adopted by State Bank of India on the last day of the month immediately preceding the month in which the salary is due, or is paid in advance or in arrears [Rule 26 read with Rule 115].

Students may note that the Rule 26 and Rule 115 have been given as Annexure – 2 at the end of this material.

(2) Income from units [Section 196B]

The person responsible for making the following payment to an Offshore Fund shall deduct tax @ 10% plus surcharge, wherever applicable, plus health and education cess@4% at the time of credit of such income to the account of the payee or at the time of payment thereof in cash or by the issue of a cheque or draft or by any other mode, whichever is earlier.

- income in respect of units referred to in section 115AB or
- income by way of long-term capital gains arising from the transfer of such units

(3) Income from foreign currency bonds or shares of Indian company [Section 196C]

The person responsible for making the following payment to a non-resident has to deduct tax @ 10% plus surcharge, wherever applicable, plus health and education cess@4% at the time of credit of such income to the account of the payee or at the time of payment thereof in cash or by the issue of a cheque or draft or by any other mode, whichever is earlier.

- income by way of long-term capital gains arising from the transfer of such bonds or Global Depository Receipts.

However, no deduction shall be made in respect of any dividends referred to in section 115-O.

(4) Income of foreign institutional investors from securities [Section 196D]

(i) The person responsible for making the payment in respect of securities referred to in section 115AD(1)(a) to a Foreign Institutional Investor has to deduct tax @20% plus surcharge, wherever applicable, plus health and education cess@4% at the time of credit of such income to the account of the payee or at the time of payment thereof in cash or by the issue of a cheque or draft or by any other mode, whichever is earlier.

(ii) However, no deduction shall be made in respect of the following

- any dividends referred to in section115-O
- income, by way of capital gains arising from the transfer of securities referred to in section 115AD, payable to a Foreign Institutional Investor.

2.10 MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

(1) Recovery of tax in respect of non- resident from his assets [Section 173]

In a case where the person entitled to the income arising from any business connection in India or from any property in India or through or from any asset or source of income in India or through the transfer of a capital asset situated in India is a non-resident, the tax chargeable thereon, whether in his name or in the name of his agent who is liable as a representative assessee, may be recovered by deduction under any of the provisions of Chapter XVII-B. Further, any arrears of tax may be recovered also in accordance with the provisions of this Act from any assets of the non-resident which are, or may at any time come, within India. These provisions are without prejudice to the provisions of section 161(1) or of section 167.

(2) Recovery against the assessee's property in foreign countries [Section 228A]

Where an assessee is in default or is deemed to be in default in making a payment of tax, the Tax Recovery Officer may, if the assessee is a resident of a country (being a country with which the Central Government has entered into an agreement for the recovery of income tax under this Act and the corresponding law in force in that country) or has any property in that country, forward to the CBDT a certificate drawn up by him under section 222. Thereafter, the CBDT may take such action thereon as it may deem appropriate having regard to the terms of the agreement with such country.

Similarly, the Government of the other country or any authority under that Government may send to the CBDT a certificate of recovery of any tax due under such corresponding law from a person having property in India and the CBDT may forward such certificate to Tax Recovery Officer having jurisdiction over the resident or within whose jurisdiction such property is situated, for recovery of such tax. Tax Recovery Officer can proceed to recover the amount specified in the Certificate by –

(a) attachment and sale of assessee's movable or immovable property

(b) arrest of the assessee and his detention in prison.

(c) appointing a receiver for the management of assessee's movable and immovable property.

He shall thereafter remit the sum so recovered to the CBDT.

(3) Submission of statement by a non-resident having liaison office [Section 285]

(i) A non-resident can operate in India through a branch or a liaison office set up after getting the approval of the Reserve Bank of India. Since the branch constitutes a permanent establishment of the non-resident, it has to file its return of income. However, prior to 1.6.2011, there was no such requirement as regards a liaison office since no business activity is allowed to be carried out in India via a liaison office of a non-resident.

(ii) With effect from 1.6.2011, such a non-resident is required to file a statement in the prescribed form [Form No.49C] to the Assessing Officer having jurisdiction, within 60 days from the end of the financial year, providing the details in respect of activities carried out by the liaison office in India during the financial year.

(iii) This requirement has to be complied with by every person, being a non-resident having a liaison office in India set up in accordance with the guidelines issued by the RBI under the Foreign Exchange Management Act, 1999.

(iv) The statement of a particular financial year should be filed on or before 30th May, of the succeeding financial year in electronic form along with digital signature. For example, the statement for F.Y. 2019-20 should be filed on or before 30th May, 2020. Further, the statement is to be verified by a Chartered Accountant or by the Authorized Signatory i.e., the person authorized by the non-resident in this behalf.

(4) Furnishing of information or documents by an Indian Concern [Section 285A]

(i) There shall be a reporting obligation on the Indian concern through or in which the Indian assets are held by a foreign company or entity.

(ii) For the purposes of determination of any income accruing or arising in India under section 9(1)(i), an Indian concern has to furnish, within the prescribed period to the prescribed income-tax authority, the information or documents, in prescribed manner, if -

- any share of, or interest in, a company or an entity registered or incorporated outside India derives, directly or indirectly, its value substantially from the assets located in India, as referred to in Explanation 5 to section 9(1)(i), and
- such company or, entity, holds, directly or indirectly, such assets in India through, or in, the Indian concern.

(iii) The information has to be furnished in Form No.49D electronically within a period of 90 days from the end of the financial year in which the transfer of such share or interest referred to above takes place.

(iv) If any Indian concern fails to furnish the information or documents, the income-tax authority, as may be prescribed under the said section, may direct that such Indian concern shall pay, by way of penalty under section 271GA,—

(a) @2% of the value of the transaction in respect of which such failure has taken place, if such transaction had the effect of directly or indirectly transferring the right of management or control in relation to the Indian concern;

(b) ₹ 5,00,000 in any other case.

Note – Rule 114DB prescribes the time limit and Information or documents to be furnished under section 285A[5].

The other miscellaneous provisions relating to non-residents are discussed in detail in the following chapters:

EXERCISE

Question 1

Peeyush, returned to India on 12th June, 2019 for permanently residing in India after a stay of about 20 years in U.K., provides the sources of his various incomes and seeks your opinion to know about his liability to income tax thereon in India in assessment year 2020-21:

(i) Income of rent of the flat in London which was deposited in a bank there. The flat was given on rent by him after his return to India since July, 2019.

(ii) Dividends on the shares of three German Companies which are being collected in a bank account in London. He proposes to keep the dividend on shares in London with the permission of the Reserve Bank of India.

(iii) He has got two sons, one of whom is of 12 years and other 19 years. Both his sons are staying in London and not returning to India with him. Each of his sons is having income of ₹ 75,000 in U.K. in foreign currency (not received in India) and of ₹ 20,000 in India.

(iv) During the preceding accounting year when he was a non-resident, he had sold 1000 shares which were acquired by him in British Pound Sterling and the sale proceeds were repatriated. The profit in terms of British Pound Sterling on sale of these 1000 shares was 175% of the cost at ₹ 37,500 while in terms of Indian Rupee it was ₹ 50,000.

Answer

Peeyush returned to India on 12th June 2019 for permanently residing in India after staying in UK for 20 years. During the P.Y.2019-20, he stays in India for 294 days. Since he has stayed in India for a period of 182 days or more during the previous year 2019-20, he would be a resident in India for the A.Y.2020-21. However, he would be a resident but not ordinarily resident, assuming that he was a non-resident in nine out of ten previous years preceding P.Y.2019-20 and his stay in India during the seven previous years is less than 730 days. The residential status of Peeyush for A.Y.2020-21 is, therefore, Resident but Not Ordinarily Resident.

As per section 5(1), only income which is received/ deemed to be received/ accrued or arisen/ deemed to accrue or arise in India is taxable in case of a Resident but not Ordinarily Resident. Income which accrues or arises outside India shall not be included in his total income, unless it is derived from a business controlled in, or a profession set up in, India.

(i) Rental income from a flat in London which was deposited in a bank there shall not be taxable in the case of a resident but not ordinarily resident, since both the accrual and receipt of income are outside India.

(ii) Dividends from shares of three German Companies, collected in a bank account in London, would also not be taxable in the case of a resident but not ordinarily resident since both the accrual and receipt of income are outside India.

(iii) As per section 64(1A), all income accruing or arising to a minor child is includible in the hands of the parent, after providing for deduction of ₹ 1,500 per child under section 10(32).

Accordingly, income of ₹ 20,000 accruing to his minor son, aged 12 years, in India is includible in the income of Peeyush, after providing deduction of ₹ 1,500. Therefore, ₹18,500 is includible in the income of Peeyush. Income accruing to the minor child outside India (which is also received outside India) is not includible in the income of Peeyush.

Since the other son is major, his income is not includible in the income of Peeyush.

(iv) Repatriation of sale proceeds of 1000 shares sold in the preceding accounting year, when Peeyush was a non-resident, is not taxable in the A.Y.2020-21 since it is not the income of the P.Y.2019-20.

Consequently, only the income includible under section 64(1A) would form part of the total income of Mr. Peeyush for A.Y.2020-21. Since his total income (i.e., ₹ 18,500) is less than the basic exemption limit, there would be no liability to income-tax for A.Y.2020-21.

Question 2

Mr. David, a citizen of India, serving in the Ministry of External Affairs in India, was transferred to Indian Embassy in Canada on 31.03.2019. He did not visit India any time during the previous year 2019-20. He has received the following income for the Financial Year 2019-20:

S.No.	Particulars	₹
(i)	Salary (Computed)	5,00,000
(ii)	Foreign Allowance	4,00,000
(iii)	Interest on fixed deposit from bank in India	1,00,000
(iv)	Income from agriculture in Pakistan	2,00,000
(v)	Income from house property in Pakistan	2,50,000

Compute his gross total income for Assessment Year 2020-21.

Answer

As per section 6(1), Mr. David is a non-resident for the A.Y. 2020-21, since he was not present in India at any time during the previous year 2019-20.

As per section 5(2), a non-resident is chargeable to tax in India only in respect of following incomes:

(i) Income received or deemed to be received in India; and

(ii) Income accruing or arising or deemed to accrue or arise in India.

In view of the above provisions, income from agriculture in Pakistan and income from house property in Pakistan would not be chargeable to tax in the hands of David, assuming that the same were received in Pakistan.

Income from 'Salaries' payable by the Government to a citizen of India for services rendered outside India is deemed to accrue or arise in India as per section 9(1)(iii). Hence, such income is taxable in the hands of Mr. David, even though he is a non-resident.

However, allowances or perquisites paid or allowed as such outside India by the Government to a citizen of India for rendering service outside India is exempt under section 10(7). Hence, foreign allowance of ₹ 4,00,000 is exempt under section 10(7).

Gross Total Income of Mr. David for A.Y. 2020-21

Particulars	₹
Salaries	5,00,000
Income from other sources (Interest on fixed deposit in India)	1,00,000
Gross Total Income	6,00,000

Question 3

Mr. A, a citizen of India, left for USA for the purposes of employment on 1.5.2019. He has not visited India thereafter. Mr. A borrows money from his friend Mr. B, who also left India for employment purpose one week before Mr. A's departure, to the extent of ₹ 10 lakhs and buys shares in X Ltd., an Indian company. Discuss the taxability of the interest charged @10% in B's hands where the same has been received in New York.

Answer

An individual is said to be resident in India in any previous year, if he -

(i) has been in India during that year for a total period of 182 days or more, or

(ii) has been in India during the four years immediately preceding that year for a total period of 365 days or more and has been in India for at least 60 days in that year.

In the case of an Indian citizen leaving India for the purposes of employment outside India during the previous year, the period of stay during the previous year in condition (ii) above, to qualify as a resident, would be 182 days instead of 60 days.

In this case, Mr. A is an Indian citizen who left India for employment outside India on 01.05.2019. Mr. A has been in India only from 1.4.2019 to 01.05.2019 i.e. for 31 days. Since his stay in India during the previous year 2019-20 is only 31 days, he does not satisfy the minimum criterion of 182 days stay in India for being a resident. Hence, his residential status for A.Y. 2020-21 is Non-Resident. Mr. B, who left India one week before A's departure, is also a non-resident for the same reasons.

Section 9(1)(v) provides that income by way of interest payable by a non-resident in respect of any debt incurred, or moneys borrowed and used, for the purposes of a business or profession carried on by such person in India shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

Therefore, interest payable by a non-resident in respect of any debt incurred, or moneys borrowed and used, for the purpose of making or earning any income from any source other than a business or profession carried on by him in India, shall not be deemed to accrue or arise in India. Therefore, interest payable by Mr. A on money borrowed from Mr. B to invest in shares of an Indian company shall not be deemed to accrue or arise in India and hence, is not taxable in India in the hands of Mr. B.

Question 4

JJ Limited, a company incorporated in Australia has entered into an agreement with KK Limited, an Indian company for rendering technical services to the latter for setting up a fertilizer plant in Orissa. As per the agreement, JJ Limited rendered both off-shore services and on-shore services to KK Limited at fee of ₹ 1 crore and ₹ 1.5 crore, respectively. JJ Limited is of the view that it is not liable to tax in India in respect of fee of ₹ 1 crore as it is for rendering services outside India. Discuss the correctness of the view of JJ Limited.

Answer

The Explanation below section 9(2) clarifies that income by way of, inter alia, fees for technical services from services utilized in India would be deemed to accrue or arise in India under section 9(1)(vii) in case of a non-resident and be included in his total income, whether or not such services were rendered in India.

In this case, the technical services rendered by the foreign company, JJ Ltd., were for setting up a fertilizer plant in Orissa. Therefore, the services were utilized in India. Consequently, as per the Explanation below section 9(2), the fee of ₹ 2.5 crore for technical services rendered by JJ Ltd. (both off-shore and on-shore services) to KK Ltd. is deemed to accrue or arise in India and includible in the total income of JJ Ltd.

Therefore, the view of JJ Ltd. that it is not liable to tax in India in respect of fee of ₹ 1 crore (as it is for rendering services outside India) is not correct.

Question 5

Examine with reasons whether the following transactions attract income-tax in India, in the hands of recipients under section 9 of Income-tax Act, 1961:

(i) A non-resident German company, which did not have a permanent establishment in India, entered into an agreement for execution of electrical work in India. Separate payments were made towards drawings & designs, which were described as "Engineering Fee". The assessee contended that such business profits should be taxable in Germany as there is no business connection within the meaning of section 9(1)(i) of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

(ii) A firm of solicitors in Mumbai engaged a barrister in UK for arguing a case before Supreme Court of India. A payment of 5000 pounds was made as per terms of professional engagement.

(iii) Amount paid by Government of India for use of a patent developed by Mr. A, who is a non-resident.

(iv) Sai Engineering, a non-resident foreign company entered into a collaboration agreement on 25/6/2019, with an Indian Company and was in receipt of interest on 8% debentures for ₹ 20 lakhs, issued by Indian Company, in consideration of providing technical know-how utilised in its business in Mumbai during previous year 2019-20.

Answer

(i) Fees for technical services is taxable under section 9(1)(vii). In this case, the separate payments made towards drawings and designs (described as "engineering fee") are in the nature of fee for technical services and, therefore, it is taxable in India by virtue of section 9(1)(vii), since the services are utilized for execution of electrical work in India [Aeg Aktiengesllschaft v. CIT (2004) 267 ITR 209 (Kar.)].

As per Explanation to section 9, where income is deemed to accrue or arise in India under section 9(1)(vii), such income shall be included in the total income of the non-resident German company, regardless of whether it has a residence or place of business or business connection in India.

(ii) As per section 9(1)(i), all income accruing or arising, whether directly or indirectly, through or from any business connection in India is deemed to accrue or arise in India.

In this case, there was a professional connection between the firm of solicitors in Mumbai and the barrister in UK. The expression "business" includes not only trade and manufacture; it includes, within its scope, "profession" as well. Therefore, the existence of professional connection amounts to existence of "business connection" under section 9(1)(i). It was so held by the Supreme Court in Barendra Prasad Roy v. ITO (1981) 129 ITR 295.

Hence, the amount of 5,000 pounds paid to the barrister in UK as per the terms of the professional engagement constitutes income which is deemed to accrue or arise in India under section 9(1)(i). Hence, it is taxable in India.

(iii) As per section 9(1)(vi), income by way of royalty payable by the Government of India is deemed to accrue or arise in India. "Royalty" means consideration for, inter alia, use of patent. Therefore, the amount paid by Government of India for use of patent developed by Mr. A, a non-resident, is deemed to accrue or arise in India. Hence, it is taxable in India in the hands of Mr. A.

(iv) ₹ 20 lakhs, being the value of debentures issued by an Indian company in consideration of providing technical know-how for use in its business in India, is in the nature of fee for technical services, deemed to accrue or arise in India to Sai Engineering, a non-resident foreign company, under section 9(1)(vii). Hence, it is taxable in India.

Further, as per section 9(1)(v), income by way of interest payable by a person who is a resident of India is deemed to accrue or arise in India. Therefore, interest income from debentures of an Indian company is deemed to accrue or arise in India in the hands of Sai Engineering by virtue of section 9(1)(v). Hence, it is taxable in India.

Note – Since the question specifically requires the candidates to examine the taxability of the above transactions under section 9, the provisions of double taxation avoidance agreement, if any, applicable in the above cases, have not been taken into consideration.

Question 6

Z, an American tourist, comes to India for the first time on June 17, 2019. He leaves India on September 29, 2019. Determine his residential status for the assessment year 2020-21. Does it make any difference if he comes to India on a business trip or if he is an Indian citizen?

Answer

Previous year 2019-20:	105 [14+31+31+29]
Previous year 2018-19:	Nil
Previous year 2017-18:	Nil

and so on ……

He is non-resident for the assessment year 2020-21 as he does not satisfy any of the basic conditions. It does not make any difference if he comes on a business trip to India.

Further, in this case, it does not make any difference if he is an Indian citizen as far as the answer of non-resident is concerned. However, there is a difference in application of basic conditions as an Indian citizen who comes on a visit to India during the previous has the option of only one basic condition of 182 days to become a resident.

Question 7

M/s. Global Airlines incorporated as a company in USA operated its flights to India and vice versa during the year 2019-20 (April, 2019 to March, 2020) and collected charges of ₹ 125 lakhs for carriage of passengers and cargo out of which ₹ 65 lakhs were received in New York in U.S Dollars for the passenger fare booked from New York to Mumbai. The total expenses for the year on operation of such flights were ₹ 195 lakhs. Compute the income chargeable to tax of the foreign airlines.

Answer

As per section 44BBA, in case of a non-resident engaged in the business of operation of aircraft, 5% of the following amounts would be deemed to be the profits and gains from such business:

(a) paid or payable, whether in or out of India, to the assessee or to any person on his behalf on account of the carriage of passengers, livestock, mail or goods from any place in India; and

(b) received or deemed to be received in India by or on behalf of the assessee on account of the carriage of passengers, livestock, mail or goods from any place outside India.

In the present case, the income chargeable to tax of M/s Global Airlines applying the provisions of section 44BBA are as follows:

Particulars	Fare booked from India to outside India whether received in India or not (₹)	Fare booked from New York to Mumbai (₹)
Fare	60,00,000 (1,25,00,000 – 65,00,000)	65,00,000
Deemed income @5% u/s 44BBA	3,00,000 (60,00,000 × 5%)	Nil (since the amount not received in India)

Question 8

Atlant Italy, a company incorporated in France, was engaged in manufacture, trade and supply equipment and services for GSM Cellular Radio Telephones Systems. It supplied hardware and software to various entities in India. Software licensed by assessee embodied the process which is required to control and manage the specific set of activities involved in the business use of its customers, and also made available to its customers, who used it to carry out their business activities. The Assessing Officer contented that the consideration for supply of software embedded in hardware is 'royalty' under section 9(1)(vi)

Examine the correctness of the action of the Assessing Officer assuming that the software that was loaded on the hardware and embedded in the system does not have any independent existence.

Answer

The issue under consideration in this case is whether consideration for supply of software embedded in hardware would tantamount to 'royalty' for attracting deemed accrual of income under section 9(1)(vi).

As per section 9(1)(vi), income by way of royalty payable by a person who is a resident in India would be deemed to accrue or arise in India. However, where it is payable for the transfer of any right or the use of any property or information or for the utilization of services for the purposes of a business or profession carried on by such person outside India or for the purposes of making or earning any income from any source outside India, the amount payable by way royalty would not be deemed to accrue or arise in India, in the hands of non-resident.

For this purpose, 'royalty' includes transfer of all or any right for use or right to use a computer software irrespective of the medium through which such right is transferred.

The facts of the case are similar to the facts in CIT v. Alcatel Lucent Canada (2015) 372 ITR 476, wherein the above issue came up before the Delhi High Court. The Court observed that the software supply is an integral part of GSM mobile telephone system and is used by the cellular operators for providing cellular services to its customers. Where payment is made for hardware in which the software is embedded and the software does not have independent functional existence, no amount could be attributed as 'royalty' for software in terms of section 9(1)(vi).

In this case, since the software that was loaded on the hardware and embedded in the system does not have any independent existence, there could not be any independent use of such software. Therefore, the rationale of the Delhi High Court ruling can be applied to the case on hand. Accordingly, the action of the Assessing Officer in treating the consideration for supply of software embedded in hardware as royalty under section 9(1)(vi) is not correct.

CHAPTER 3

DOUBLE TAXATION RELIEF

LEARNING OUTCOMES

After studying this chapter, you would be able to -

❑ appreciate the need for double taxation relief;

❑ appreciate the types of double taxation relief available;

❑ comprehend and apply the provisions relating to double taxation relief contained in the Income-tax Act, 1961 and Income-tax Rules, 1962 in problem solving and addressing related issues;

❑ comprehend the procedure for claiming deduction where there is no double taxation avoidance agreement between India and the other country where the income has been taxed and compute the amount of deduction;

❑ appreciate the concept of Permanent Establishment under double taxation avoidance agreements and its relevance.

3.1 CONCEPT OF DOUBLE TAXATION RELIEF

In the present era of cross-border transactions across the globe, the effect of taxation is one of the important considerations for any trade and investment decision in other countries. One of the most significant results of globalisation is the visible impact of one country's domestic tax policies on the economy of another country. This has led to the need for continuously assessing the tax regimes of various countries and bringing about necessary reforms.

Where a taxpayer is resident in one country but has a source of income situated in another country it gives rise to possible double taxation. This arises from the two basic rules that enables the country of residence as well as the country where the source of income exists to impose tax namely, (i) the source rule and (ii) the residence rule. The source rule holds that income is to be taxed in the country in which it originates irrespective of whether the income accrues to a resident or a non-resident whereas the residence rule stipulates that the power to tax should rest with the country in which the taxpayer resides. If both rules apply simultaneously to a business entity and it were to suffer tax at both ends, the cost of operating on an international scale would become prohibitive and would deter the process of globalisation. It is from this point of view that Double Taxation Avoidance Agreements (DTAA) become very significant.

DTAAs lay down the rules for taxation of the income by the source country and the residence country. Such rules are laid for various categories of income, for example, interest, dividend, royalties, capital gains, business income etc. Each such category is dealt with by separate article in the DTAA.

Double taxation means taxing the same income twice in the hands of an assessee. In India, a person is taxed on the basis of his residential status. Likewise, it may so happen that he is taxed on this basis or some other basis in another country on the same income. However, it is a universally accepted principle that the same income should not be subjected to tax twice. In order to take care of such situations, the Income-tax Act, 1961 has provided for double taxation relief.

3.2 TYPES OF RELIEF

Relief from double taxation can be provided in mainly two ways:

(1) Bilateral Relief: Under this method, the Governments of two countries can enter into an agreement to provide relief against double taxation by mutually working out the basis on which the relief is to be granted. India has entered into agreements for relief against or avoidance of double taxation with more than 100 countries which include Sri Lanka, Switzerland, Sweden, Denmark, Japan, Federal Republic of Germany, Greece, etc.

Bilateral Relief may be granted in either one of the following methods:

Exemption Method

- A particular income is taxed in only one of the two countries.

Tax Credit Method

- Income is taxable in both countries in accordance with their respective tax laws read with double taxation avoidance agreement.
- The country of resident of the tax payer, however, allows him credit for the tax charged thereon in the country of source.

In India, double taxation relief is provided by a combination of the two methods.

(2) Unilateral Relief: This method provides for relief of some kind by the home country even where no mutual agreement has been entered into by the two countries.

3.3 DOUBLE TAXATION RELIEF PROVISIONS UNDER THE INCOME TAX ACT, 1961

Sections 90 and 91 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 provide for double taxation relief in India.

(1) Agreement with foreign countries or specified territories - Bilateral relief [Section 90]

(i) Section 90(1) provides that the Central Government may enter into an agreement with the Government of any country outside India or specified territory outside India,—

(a) for the granting of relief in respect of—

(i) income on which income-tax has been paid both in India and in that country or specified territory; or

(ii) income-tax chargeable under this Act and under the corresponding law in force in that country or specified territory to promote mutual economic relations, trade and investment; or

(b) for the avoidance of double taxation of income under this Act and under the corresponding law in force in that country or specified territory; or

Accordingly, the Central Government has notified that where such an agreement provides that any income of a resident of India may be taxed in the other country then, such income shall be included in his total income chargeable to tax in India in accordance with the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961, and relief shall be granted in accordance with the method for elimination or avoidance of double taxation provided in such agreement [Notification No. 91/2008, dated 28.8.2008].

(c) for exchange of information for the prevention of evasion or avoidance of income-tax chargeable under this Act or under the corresponding law in force in that country or specified territory or investigation of cases of such evasion or avoidance; or

(d) for recovery of income-tax under this Act and under the corresponding law in force in that country or specified territory.

The Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, make such provisions as may be necessary for implementing the agreement.

(ii) Where the Central Government has entered into such an agreement with the Government of any country outside India or specified territory outside India for granting relief of tax, or for avoidance of double taxation, then, in relation to the assessee to whom such agreement applies, the provisions of this Act shall apply to the extent they are more beneficial to that assessee.

(iii) However, the provisions of Chapter X-A, General Anti-Avoidance Rule, shall apply to the assessee even if such provisions are not beneficial to him.

(iv) Meaning of terms used in any DTAA with a foreign country or specified territory

	Particulars	Meaning of the term
(1)	Term used in any DTAA with a foreign country or specified territory, and not defined in the agreement or the Act but assigned a meaning in the notification issued by the Central Government in the Official Gazette, which is still in force.	The term shall have the meaning assigned in the said notification and the meaning shall be deemed to have effect from the date on which the DTAA came into force.
(2)	Term used in any DTAA with a foreign country or specified territory, which is defined in the DTAA itself.	The term shall have the same meaning assigned to it in the DTAA.
(3)	Term used in any DTAA with a foreign country or specified territory, which is not defined in the said DTAA, but defined in the Income-tax Act, 1961.	The term shall have the meaning assigned to it in the Income-tax Act, 1961 and explanation, if any, given to it by the Central Government.

(v) The DTAAs under section 90 are intended to provide relief to the taxpayer, who is resident of one of the contracting country to the agreement. Such tax payer can claim relief by applying the beneficial provisions of either the treaty or the domestic law. However, in many cases, taxpayers who were not residents of a contracting country also resorted to claiming the benefits under the agreement entered into by the Indian Government with the Government of the other country. In effect, third party residents claimed the unintended treaty benefits.

Therefore, section 90(4) provides that the non-resident to whom the agreement referred to in section 90(1) applies, shall be allowed to claim the relief under such agreement if a Tax Residence Certificate (TRC) obtained by him from the Government of that country or specified territory, is furnished declaring his residence of the country outside India or the specified territory outside India, as the case may be.

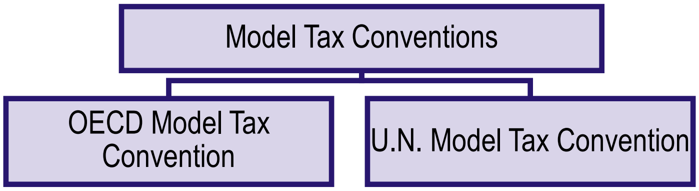
(vi) Therefore, a certificate issued by the Government of a foreign country would constitute proof of tax residency, without any further conditions regarding furnishing of "prescribed particulars" therein. In addition to such certificate issued by the foreign Government, the assessee would be required to provide such other documents and information, as may be prescribed, for claiming the treaty benefits.

(vii) The charge of tax in respect of a foreign company at a rate higher than the rate at which a domestic company is chargeable, shall not be regarded as less favourable charge or levy of tax in respect of such foreign company.

(viii) Circular No. 333 dated 2.4.1982, issued by CBDT provides that a specific provision of the DTAA will prevail over the general provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961. Therefore, where a DTAA provides for a particular mode of computation of income, this mode will take precedence over the Income-tax Act, 1961. However, where there is no specific provision in the treaty, then the Income-tax Act will apply.

(ix) Notification No. 91/2008 dated 28.8.2008 issued by CBDT states that any income of a resident of India which "may be taxed" in the other country (Source Country) as per the DTAA shall be included in his total income chargeable to tax in India in accordance with the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961. Thereafter, relief shall be granted in accordance with the method for elimination or avoidance of double taxation provided in such agreement.

Tax treaties are generally based on certain models. The most common ones are:



These model tax conventions will be discussed in detail in Chapter 9 "Overview of Model Tax Conventions".

ILLUSTRATION 1

Examine the correctness or otherwise of the following statement with reference to the provisions of Income-tax Act, 1961.

The double taxation avoidance treaties entered into by the Government of India override the domestic law.

SOLUTION

The statement is correct.

Section 90(2) provides that where a double taxation avoidance treaty is entered into by the Government, the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 would apply to the extent they are more beneficial to the assessee.

In case of any conflict between the provisions of the double taxation avoidance agreement and the Income-tax Act, 1961, the provisions of the DTAA would prevail over the Act in view of the provisions of section 90(2), to the extent they are more beneficial to the assessee [CIT v. P.V.A.L. Kulandagan Chettiar (2004) 267 ITR 654 (SC)].

(2) Double taxation relief to be extended to agreements between specified associations adopted by the Central Government [Section 90A]

(i) Section 90A provides that any specified association in India may enter into an agreement with any specified association in the specified territory outside India and the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, make the necessary provisions for adopting and implementing such agreement for -

(a) grant of double taxation relief,

(b) avoidance of double taxation of income,

(c) exchange of information for the prevention of evasion or avoidance of income- tax, or

(d) recovery of income-tax.

Section 90A(1) provides that an agreement may be entered into by any specified association in India with any specified association in the specified territory outside India which may be adopted by the Central Government by way of notification in the Official Gazette, for granting relief of tax or, as the case may be, for avoidance of double taxation.

The Central Government has, vide Notification No.90/2008 dated 28.8.2008, notified that where such an agreement provides that any income of a resident of India may be taxed in the other country then, such income shall be included in his total income chargeable to tax in India in accordance with the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961, and relief shall be granted in accordance with the method for elimination or avoidance of double taxation provided in such agreement.

(ii) In relation to any assessee to whom the said agreement applies, the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 shall apply to the extent they are more beneficial to that assessee.

(iii) However, the provisions of Chapter X-A, General Anti-avoidance rule, shall apply to the assesse even if such provisions are not beneficial to him.

(iv) Meaning of terms used in any agreement which any specified association in India may enter into with any specified association in the specified territory outside India for double taxation relief

	Particulars	Meaning of the term
(1)	Term used in any such agreement, and not defined in the agreement or the Act but assigned a meaning in the notification issued by the Central Government in the Official Gazette, which is still in force	The term shall have the meaning assigned in the said notification and the meaning shall be deemed to have effect from the date on which the agreement came into force.
(2)	Term used in any such agreement, which is defined in the agreement itself	The term shall have the same meaning assigned to it in the said agreement
(3)	Term used in any such agreement, which is not defined in the said agreement, but defined in the Income-tax Act, 1961	The term shall have the meaning assigned to it in the Income-tax Act, 1961 and explanation, if any, given to it by the Central Government

(v) The DTAAs under section 90A are intended to provide relief to the taxpayer, who is resident of one of the contracting country to the agreement. Such tax payer can claim relief by applying the beneficial provisions of either the treaty or the domestic law. However, in many cases, taxpayers who were not residents of a contracting country also resorted to claiming the benefits under the agreement entered into by the Indian Government with the Government of the other country. In effect, third party residents claimed the unintended treaty benefits.

Therefore, section 90A(4) provides that the non-resident to whom the agreement referred to in section 90A(1) applies, shall be allowed to claim the relief under such agreement if a Tax Residence Certificate (TRC) obtained by him from the Government of that country or specified territory is furnished, declaring his residence of the country outside India or the specified territory outside India, as the case may be.

(vi) Therefore, a certificate issued by the Government of a foreign country would constitute proof of tax residency, without any further conditions regarding furnishing of "prescribed particulars" therein. In addition to such certificate issued by the foreign Government, section 90A(5) requires the assessee to provide such other documents and information, as may be prescribed, for claiming the treaty benefits.

Documents and information, to be furnished by the assessee for claiming treaty benefits, prescribed by CBDT vide Notification No. 57/2013 dated 01.08.2013:

(i) Status (individual, company, firm etc.) of the assessee;

(ii) Nationality (in case of an individual) or country or specified territory of incorporation or registration (in case of others);

(iii) Assessee's tax identification number in the country or specified territory of residence and in case there is no such number, then, a unique number on the basis of which the person is identified by the Government of the country or the specified territory of which the assessee claims to be a resident;

(iv) Period for which the residential status, as mentioned in the certificate referred to in section 90(4) or section 90A(4), is applicable; and

(v) Address of the assessee in the country or specified territory outside India, during the period for which the certificate, as mentioned in (iv) above, is applicable.

However, the assessee may not be required to provide the information or any part thereof, if the information or the part thereof, as the case may be, is already contained in the TRC referred to in section 90(4) or section 90A(4).

The assessee shall keep and maintain such documents as are necessary to substantiate the information provided. An income-tax authority may require the assessee to provide the said documents in relation to a claim by the said assessee of any relief under an agreement referred to in section 90(1) or section 90A(1), as the case may be.

(vii) The charge of tax at a higher rate for a company incorporated in the specified territory outside India as compared to a domestic company would not be considered as less favourable charge or levy of tax in respect of such company.

(viii) For the purpose of this section, the 'specified association' means any institution, association or body, whether incorporated or not, functioning under any law for the time being in force in India or the laws of the specified territory outside India and which may be notified as such by the Central Government and 'specified territory' means any area outside India which may be notified by the Central Government.

(3) Countries with which no agreement exists – Unilateral Agreements [Section 91] In the case of income arising to an assessee in countries with which India does not have any double taxation agreement, relief would be granted under Section 91 provided all the following conditions are fulfilled:

(a) The assessee is a resident in India during the previous year in respect of which the income is taxable.

(b) The income accrues or arises to him outside India.

(c) The income is not deemed to accrue or arise in India during the previous year.

(d) The income in question has been subjected to income-tax in the foreign country in the hands of the assessee.

(e) The assessee has paid tax on the income in the foreign country.

(f) There is no agreement for relief from double taxation between India and the other country where the income has accrued or arisen.

In such a case, the assessee shall be entitled to a deduction from the Indian income-tax payable by him. The deduction would be a sum calculated on such doubly taxed income at the Indian rate of tax or the rate of tax in the said country, whichever is lower, or at the Indian rate of tax if both the rates are equal.

Meaning of important terms:

(i) "Indian rate of tax" means the rate determined by dividing the amount of Indian income-tax after deduction of any relief due under the provisions of the Act but before deduction of any double taxation relief due to the assessee.

(ii) "Rate of tax of the said country" means income-tax and super-tax actually paid in that country in accordance with the corresponding laws in force in the said country after deduction of all relief due, but before deduction on account of double taxation relief due in the said country, divided by the whole amount of income assessed in the said country.

(iii) The expression "income-tax" in relation to any country includes any excess profits tax or business profits tax charged on the profits by the Government of any part of that country or a local authority in that country.

Nandita, an individual resident retired employee of the Prasar Bharati aged 60 years, is a well-known dramatist deriving income of ₹ 1,10,000 from theatrical works played abroad. Tax of ₹ 11,000 was deducted in the country where the plays were performed. India does not have any Double Tax Avoidance Agreement under section 90 of the Income-tax Act, 1961, with that country. Her income in India amounted to ₹ 6,10,000. In view of tax planning, she has deposited ₹ 1,50,000 in Public Provident Fund and paid contribution to approved Pension Fund of LIC ₹ 32,000. She also contributed ₹ 28,000 to Central Government Health Scheme during the previous year and gave payment of medical insurance premium of ₹ 26,000 to insure the health of her father, a non-resident aged 84 years, who is not dependent on her. Compute the tax liability of Nandita for the Assessment year 2020-21.

SOLUTION

Computation of tax liability of Nandita for the A.Y. 2020-21

Particulars	₹	₹

Contribution to Central Government Health Scheme ₹ 28,000 is also allowable as deduction under section 80D. Since she is a resident senior citizen, the deduction is allowable to a maximum of ₹ 50,000 (See Note 1)	28,000
Medical insurance premium of ₹ 26,000 paid for father aged 84 years. Since the father is a non-resident in India, he will not be entitled for the higher deduction of ₹ 50,000 eligible for a senior citizen, who is resident in India. Hence, the deduction will be restricted to maximum of ₹ 25,000.	25,000	2,03,000

Notes:

1. Section 80D allows a higher deduction of up to ₹ 50,000 in respect of the medical premium paid to insure the heath of a senior citizen. Therefore, Nandita will be allowed deduction of ₹ 28,000 under section 80D, since she is a resident Indian of the age of 60 years.

2. The basic exemption limit for senior citizens is ₹ 3,00,000 and the age criterion for qualifying as a "senior citizen" for availing the higher basic exemption limit is 60 years. Accordingly, Nandita is eligible for the higher basic exemption limit of ₹ 3,00,000, since she is 60 years old.

3. An assessee shall be allowed deduction under section 91 provided all the following conditions are fulfilled:-

(a) The assessee is a resident in India during the relevant previous year.

(b) The income accrues or arises to him outside India during that previous year.

(c) Such income is not deemed to accrue or arise in India during the previous year.

(d) The income in question has been subjected to income-tax in the foreign country in the hands of the assessee and the assessee has paid tax on such income in the foreign country.

(e) There is no agreement under section 90 for the relief or avoidance of double taxation between India and the other country where the income has accrued or arisen.

In this case, since all the above conditions are satisfied, Nandita is eligible for deduction u/s 91.

(4) Foreign Tax Credit [Rule 128 of Income-tax Rules, 1962]

(i) Year of availability of credit for foreign tax paid

An assessee, being a resident shall be allowed a credit for the amount of any foreign tax paid by him in a country or specified territory outside India, by way of deduction or otherwise, in the year in which the income corresponding to such tax has been offered to tax or assessed to tax in India, in the manner and to the extent as specified in this rule.

However, in a case where income on which foreign tax has been paid or deducted, is offered to tax in more than one year, credit of foreign tax shall be allowed across those years in the same proportion in which the income is offered to tax or assessed to tax in India.

(ii) Meaning of "Foreign tax":

	Country/Specified Territory	Foreign Tax
(i)	in respect of a country or specified territory outside India with which India has entered into an agreement for the relief or avoidance of double taxation of income in terms of section 90 or section 90A	the tax covered under the said agreement
(ii)	in respect of any other country or specified territory outside India	the tax payable under the law in force in that country or specified territory in the nature of income-tax referred to in section 91. For this purpose, income-tax in relation to any country includes any excess profits tax or business profits tax charged on the profits by the Government of any part of that country or a local authority in that country.

(iii) Components of income-tax in respect of which FTC is available

Foreign Tax Credit (FTC) is available against the amount of tax, surcharge and cess payable under the Income-tax Act, 1961. However, it is not available in respect of any sum payable by way of interest, fee or penalty.

(iv) Manner of computing FTC

The credit of foreign tax would be the aggregate of the amounts of credit computed separately for each source of income arising from a particular country or specified territory outside India and shall be given effect to in the following manner:-

(a) the credit would be the lower of the tax payable under the Income-tax Act, 1961 on such income and the foreign tax paid on such income.

However, where the foreign tax paid exceeds the amount of tax payable in accordance with the provisions of the agreement for relief or avoidance of double taxation, such excess has to be ignored.

(b) the credit would be determined by conversion of the currency of payment of foreign tax at the telegraphic transfer buying rate on the last day of the month immediately preceding the month in which such tax has been paid or deducted.

Note – Students are advised to refer to Rule 128 of Income-tax Rules, 1961 given as Annexure 1 at the end of the Study Material.

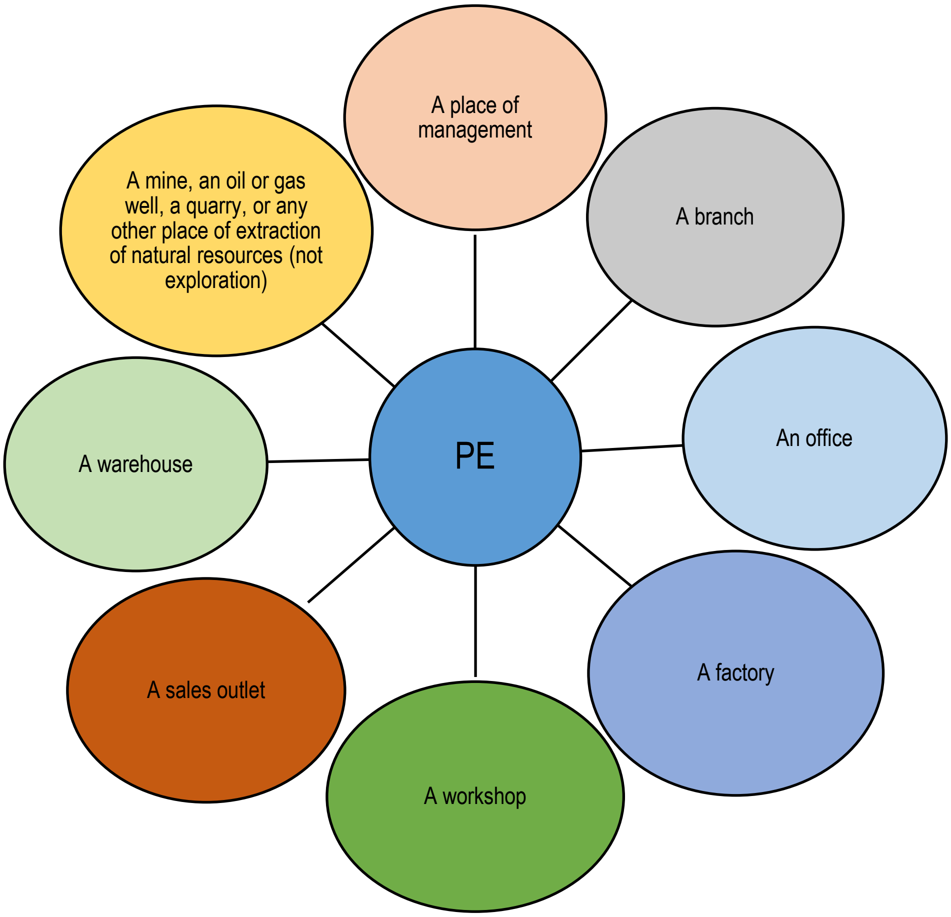
Computation of Relief

- Doubly taxed income x Indian rate of tax or Rate of tax in the said country, whichever is lower

3.4 CONCEPT OF PERMANENT ESTABLISHMENT

In order to determine the taxability of business income of foreign enterprises operating in India, it is important to determine the existence of a Permanent Establishment ('PE'). Article 5(1) of the DTAA provides that for the purpose of this convention the term 'Permanent Establishment' means a fixed place of business through which the business of an enterprise is wholly or partly carried on. The term 'Enterprise' has been defined in section 92F(iii) [See discussion under section 92A in Chapter 1].

According to Article 5(2), the term PE includes



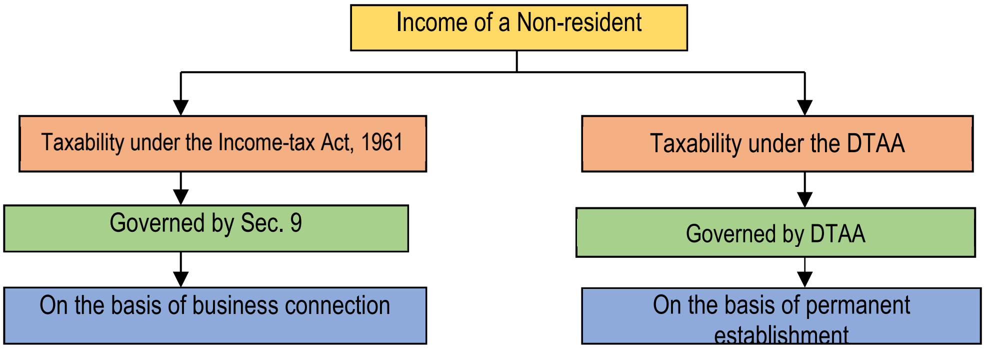
A place of management
A branch
A mine, an oil or gas well, a quarry, or any other place of extraction of natural resources (not exploration)
A warehouse
PE
An office
A sales outlet
A factory
A workshop

(1) Permanent establishment means a fixed place of business through which the business of an enterprises is wholly or partly carried on.

(2) Every DTAA has a specific clause, which will deal with an explanation of permanent establishment for the purpose of such DTAA.

(3) Business Income of a non-resident will not be taxed in India, unless such non-resident has a permanent establishment in India.

(4) Taxability of income under business connection and permanent establishment is explained here below:



Income of a Non-resident
Taxability under the Income-tax Act, 1961
Taxability under the DTAA
Governed by Sec. 9
Governed by DTAA
On the basis of business connection
On the basis of permanent establishment

3.5 TAXATION OF BUSINESS PROCESS OUTSOURCING UNITS IN INDIA

The provisions containing taxation of IT-enabled business process outsourcing units are not contained in the Income-tax Act, 1961 but are given in Circular No.5/2004 dated 28.9.2004 issued by CBDT. The provisions are briefed hereunder -

(a) A non-resident entity may outsource certain services to a resident Indian entity. If there is no business connection between the two, the resident entity may not be a Permanent Establishment of the non-resident entity, and the resident entity would have to be assessed to income-tax as a separate entity. In such a case, the non-resident entity will not be liable under the Income-tax Act, 1961.

(b) However, it is possible that the non-resident entity may have a business connection with the resident Indian entity. In such a case, the resident Indian entity could be treated as the Permanent Establishment of the non-resident entity.

(c) The non-resident entity or the foreign company will be liable to tax in India only if the IT enabled BPO unit in India constitutes its Permanent Establishment.

(d) A non-resident or a foreign company is treated as having a Permanent Establishment in India if the said non-resident or foreign company carries on business in India through a branch, sales office etc. or through an agent (other than an independent agent) who habitually exercises an authority to conclude contracts or regularly delivers goods or merchandise or habitually secures orders on behalf of the non-resident principal. In such a case, the profits of the non-resident or foreign company attributable to the business activities carried out in India by the Permanent Establishment becomes taxable in India.

(e) If a foreign enterprise carries on business in another country through a Permanent Establishment situated therein, the profits of the enterprise may be taxed in the other country but only so much of them as is attributable to the Permanent Establishment.

(f) Profits are to be attributed to the Permanent Establishment as if it were a distinct and separate enterprise engaged in the same or similar activities under the same or similar conditions and dealing wholly independently with the enterprise of which it is a Permanent Establishment.

(g) In determining the profits of a Permanent Establishment there shall be allowed as deduction, expenses which are incurred for the purposes of the Permanent Establishment including executive and general administrative expenses so incurred, whether in the State in which the Permanent Establishment is situated or elsewhere.

(h) The expenses that are deductible would have to be determined in accordance with the accepted principles of accountancy and the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

(i) The profits to be attributed to a Permanent Establishment are those which that Permanent Establishment would have made if, instead of dealing with its Head Office, it had been dealing with an entirely separate enterprise under conditions and at prices prevailing in the ordinary market. This corresponds to the "arm's length principle".

(j) Hence, in determining the profits attributable to an IT-enabled BPO unit constituting a Permanent Establishment, it will be necessary to determine the price of the services rendered by the Permanent Establishment to the Head office or by the Head office to the Permanent Establishment on the basis of "arm's length principle".

EXERCISE

Question 1

Cosmos Limited, a company incorporated in Mauritius, has a branch office in Hyderabad opened in April, 2019. The Indian branch has filed return of income for assessment year 2020-21 disclosing income of ₹ 50 lacs. It paid tax at the rate applicable to domestic company i.e. 30% plus higher education cess@4% on the basis of paragraph 2 of Article 24 (Non-Discrimination) of the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement between India and Mauritius, which reads as follows:

"The taxation on a permanent establishment which an enterprise of a Contracting State has in the other Contracting State shall not be less favourably levied in that other State than the taxation levied on enterprises of that other State carrying on the same activities in the same circumstances."

However, the Assessing Officer computed tax on the Indian branch at the rate applicable to a foreign company i.e. 40% plus higher education cess@4%.

Is the action of the Assessing Officer in accordance with law?

Answer

Under section 90(2), where the Central Government has entered into an agreement for avoidance of double taxation with the Government of any country outside India or specified territory outside India, as the case may be, then, in relation to the assessee to whom such agreement applies, the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 shall apply to the extent they are more beneficial to the assessee. Thus, in view of paragraph 2 of Article 24 (Non-discrimination of the DTAA, it appears that the Indian branch of Cosmos Limited, incorporated in Mauritius, is liable to tax in India at the rate applicable to domestic company (30%), which is lower than the rate of tax applicable to a foreign company (40%).

However, Explanation 1 to section 90 clarifies that the charge of tax in respect of a foreign company at a rate higher than the rate at which a domestic company is chargeable, shall not be regarded as less favourable charge or levy of tax in respect of such foreign company. Therefore, in view of this Explanation, the action of the Assessing Officer in levying tax@40% on the Indian branch of Cosmos Ltd. is in accordance with law.

Question 2

Kalpesh Kumar, a resident individual, is a musician deriving income of ₹ 7,50,000 from concerts performed outside India. Tax of ₹ 1,00,000 was deducted at source in the country where the concerts were performed. India does not have any double tax avoidance agreement with that country. His income in India amounted to ₹ 30,00,000. Compute tax liability of Kalpesh Kumar for the assessment year 2020-21 assuming he has deposited ₹ 1,50,000 in Public Provident Fund and paid medical insurance premium in respect of his father, resident in India, aged 65 years, ₹ 52,000.

Answer

		9,12,600
Average rate of tax in India [i.e., ₹ 9,12,600 /₹ 35,50,000 x 100]	25.71%
Average rate of tax in foreign country [i.e. ₹ 1,00,000/ ₹ 7,50,000 x 100]	13.333%
Doubly taxed income	7,50,000
Deduction under section 91 on ₹ 7,50,000 @13.33% (lower of average Indian tax rate and foreign tax rate]		1,00,000
Tax payable in India [₹ 9,12,600 – ₹ 1,00,000]		8,12,600

Note: An assessee shall be allowed deduction under section 91 provided all the following conditions are fulfilled:-

(a) The assessee is a resident in India during the relevant previous year.

(b) The income accrues or arises to him outside India during that previous year.

(c) Such income is not deemed to accrue or arise in India during the previous year.

(d) The income in question has been subjected to income-tax in the foreign country in the hands of the assessee and the assessee has paid tax on such income in the foreign country.

(e) There is no agreement under section 90 for the relief or avoidance of double taxation between India and the other country where the income has accrued or arisen.

In this case, Kalpesh Kumar is eligible for deduction under section 91 since all the above conditions are fulfilled.

Question 3

The following are the particulars of income earned by Miss Vivitha, a resident Indian aged 25, for the assessment year 2020-21:

	(₹ In lacs)
Income from playing snooker matches in country L	12.00

Average rate of tax in India (i.e. ₹ 7,28,520/₹ 29,60,000 × 100)	24.61%
Average rate of tax in foreign country (i.e. ₹ 1,80,000/ ₹12,00,000 ×100)	15.00%
Deduction under section 91 on ₹ 12 lakh @ 15% (lower of average Indian-tax rate or average foreign tax rate)		1,80,000
Tax payable in India (₹ 7,28,520 – ₹ 1,80,000)		5,48,520

Note: Miss Vivitha shall be allowed deduction under section 91, since the following conditions are fulfilled:-

(a) She is a resident in India during the relevant previous year.

(b) The income accrues or arises to her outside India during that previous year and such income is not deemed to accrue or arise in India during the previous year.

(c) The income in question has been subjected to income-tax in the foreign country L in her hands and she has paid tax on such income in the foreign country L.

(d) There is no agreement under section 90 for the relief or avoidance of double taxation between India and country L where the income has accrued or arisen.

Question 4

The concept of Permanent Establishment is one of the most important concepts in determining the tax implications of cross border transactions. Examine the significance thereof, when such transactions are governed by Double Taxation Avoidance Agreements (DTAA).

Answer

Double Taxation Avoidance Agreements (DTAAs) generally contain an Article providing that business income is taxable in the country of residence, unless the enterprise has a permanent establishment in the country of source, and such income can be attributed to the permanent establishment.

As per section 92F(iiia), the term “Permanent Establishment” includes a fixed place of business through which the business of an enterprise is wholly or partly carried on.

As per this definition, to constitute a permanent establishment, there must be a place of business which is fixed and the business of the enterprise must be carried out wholly or partly through this place.

Section 9(1)(i) requires existence of business connection for deeming business income to accrue or arise in India. DTAAs however provide that business income is taxable only if there is a permanent establishment in India.

Therefore, in cases covered by DTAAs, where there is no permanent establishment in India, business income cannot be brought to tax due to existence of business connection as per section 9(1)(i).

However, in cases not covered by DTAAs, business income attributable to business connection is taxable.

Question 5

An individual resident in India, having income earned outside India in a country with which no agreement under section 90 exists, asks you to examine whether the credit for the tax paid on the foreign income will be allowed against his income-tax liability in India.

Answer

The assessee is a resident in India and accordingly, the income accruing or arising to him globally is chargeable to tax in India. However, section 91 specifies that if a person resident in India has paid tax in any country with which no agreement under section 90 exists, then, for the purpose of relief or avoidance of double taxation, a deduction is allowed from the Indian income-tax payable by him, of a sum calculated on such doubly taxed income at Indian rate of tax or the rate of tax of such foreign country, whichever is lower, or at the Indian rate of tax, if both the rates are equal. Accordingly, the assessee shall not be given any credit of the tax paid on the income in other country, but shall be allowed a deduction from the Indian income-tax payable by him as per the scheme of section 91 read with Rule 128 on Foreign Tax Credit.

Question 6

The Income-tax Act, 1961 provides for taxation of a certain income earned in India by Mr. X, a non-resident. The Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement, which applies to Mr. X provides for taxation of such income in the country of residence. Is Mr. X liable to pay tax on such income earned by him in India? Examine.

Answer

Section 90(2) makes it clear that where the Central Government has entered into a Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement with a country outside India, then in respect of an assessee to whom such agreement applies, the provisions of the Act shall apply to the extent they are more beneficial to the assessee. This means that where tax liability is imposed by the Act, the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement may be resorted to for reducing or avoiding the tax liability.

However, as per section 90(4), the assessee, in order to claim relief under the agreement, has to obtain a certificate [Tax Residence Certificate (TRC)] from the Government of that country, declaring the residence of the country outside India. Further, he also has to provide the following information in Form No. 10F:

(i) Status (individual, company, firm etc.) of the assessee;

(ii) PAN of the assessee, if allotted;

(iii) Nationality (in case of an individual) or country or specified territory of incorporation or registration (in case of others);

(iv) Assessee's tax identification number in the country or specified territory of residence and in case there is no such number, then, a unique number on the basis of which the person is identified by the Government of the country or the specified territory of which the assessee claims to be a resident;

(v) Period for which the residential status, as mentioned in the certificate referred to in section 90(4) or section 90A(4), is applicable; and

(vi) Address of the assessee in the country or specified territory outside India, during the period for which the certificate, as mentioned in (v) above, is applicable.

However, the assessee may not be required to provide the information or any part thereof, if the information or the part thereof, as the case may be, is already contained in the TRC referred to in section 90(4) or section 90A(4).

The Supreme Court has held, in CIT v. P.V.A.L. Kulandagan Chettiar (2004) 267 ITR 654, that in case of any conflict between the provisions of the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement and the Income-tax Act, 1961, the provisions of the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement would prevail over those of the Income-tax Act, 1961. Mr. X is, therefore, not liable to pay tax on the income earned by him in India provided he submits the Tax Residence Certificate obtained from the government of the other country, and provides such other documents and information as may be prescribed.

Arif is a resident of both India and another foreign country in the previous year 2019-20. He owns immovable properties (including residential house) in both the countries. He earned income of ₹ 50 lacs from rubber estates in the foreign country during the financial year 2019-20. He also sold some house property situated in foreign country resulting in short-term capital gain of ₹ 10 lacs during the year. Arif has no permanent establishment of business in India. However, he has derived rental income of ₹ 6 lacs from property let out in India and he has a house in Lucknow where he stays during his visit to India.

Article 4 of the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement between India and the foreign country where Arif is a resident, provides that "where an individual is a resident of both the Contracting States, then, he shall be deemed to be resident of the Contracting State in which he has permanent home available to him. If he has permanent home in both the Contracting States, he shall be deemed to be a resident of the Contracting State with which his personal and economic relations are closer (centre of vital interests)".

You are required to examine with reasons whether the business income of Arif arising in foreign country and the capital gains in respect of sale of the property situated in foreign country can be taxed in India.

Answer

Section 90(1) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 empowers the Central Government to enter into an agreement with the Government of any country outside India for avoidance of double taxation of income under the Indian law and the corresponding law of that country. Section 90(2) provides that where the Central Government has entered into an agreement with the Government of any other country for granting relief of tax or for avoidance of double taxation, then, in relation to the assessee to whom such agreement applies, the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 shall apply to the extent they are more beneficial to that assessee.

Arif has residential houses both in India and foreign country. Thus, he has a permanent home in both the countries. However, he has no permanent establishment of business in India. The Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement (DTAA) with foreign country provides that where an individual is a resident of both the countries, he shall be deemed to be resident of that country in which he has a permanent home and if he has a permanent home in both the countries, he shall be deemed to be resident of that country, which is the centre of his vital interests i.e. the country with which he has closer personal and economic relations.

Arif owns rubber estates in a foreign country from which he derives business income. However, Arif has no permanent establishment of his business in India. Therefore his personal and economic relations with foreign country are closer, since foreign country is the place where –

(a) the property is located and

(b) the permanent establishment (PE) has been set-up

Therefore, he shall be deemed to be resident of the foreign country for A.Y. 2020-21.

The fact of the case and issues arising therefrom are similar to that of CIT vs. P.V.A.L. Kulandagan Chettiar (2004) 267 ITR 654, where the Supreme Court held that if an assessee is deemed to be a resident of a contracting State where his personal and economic relations are closer, then in such a case, the fact that he is a resident in India to be taxed in terms of sections 4 and 5 would become irrelevant, since the DTAA prevails over sections 4 and 5.

However, as per section 90(4), in order to claim relief under the agreement, Arif has to obtain a certificate [Tax Residency Certificate (TRC)] declaring his residence of the country outside India from the Government of that country. Further, he also has to provide such other documents and information, as may be prescribed.

Therefore, in this case, Arif is not liable to income tax in India for assessment year 2020-21 in respect of business income and capital gains arising in the foreign country provided he furnishes the Tax Residency Certificate and provides such other documents and information as may be prescribed.

Question 8

Mr. Kamesh, an individual resident in India aged 52 years, furnishes you the following particulars of income earned in India, Country "X" and Country "Y" for the previous year 2019-20. India has not entered into double taxation avoidance agreement with these two countries.

Particulars	₹
Income from profession carried on in India	7,50,000
Agricultural income in Country "X" (gross)	50,000
Dividend received from a company incorporated in Country "Y" (gross)	1,50,000
Royalty income from a literary book from Country "X" (gross)	6,00,000
Expenses incurred for earning royalty	50,000
Business loss in Country "Y" (Proprietary business)	65,000
Rent from a house situated in Country "Y" (gross)	2,40,000
Municipal tax paid in respect of the above house in Country "Y" (not allowed as deduction in country "Y")	10,000

Note: Business loss in Country "Y" not eligible for set off against other incomes as per law of that country.*

The rates of tax in Country "X" and Country "Y" are 10% and 20%, respectively.

Compute total income and tax payable by Mr. Kamesh in India for Assessment Year 2020-21.

Answer

Computation of total income of Mr. Kamesh for A.Y.2020-21

Particulars	₹	₹
Income from House Property [House situated in country Y]
Gross Annual Value[1]	2,40,000
Less: Municipal taxes	10,000
Net Annual Value	2,30,000
Less: Deduction under section 24 – 30% of NAV	69,000
		1,61,000
Profits and Gains of Business or Profession
Income from profession carried on in India	7,50,000
Royalty income from a literary book from Country X (after deducting expenses of ₹ 50,000)	5,50,000
Less: Business loss in country Y set-off[2]	65,000
		12,35,000

[1] Rental Income has been taken as GAV in the absence of other information relating to fair rent, municipal value etc.

[2] As per section 70(1), inter-source set-off of income is permitted.

Income from Other Sources
Agricultural income in country X	50,000
Dividend received from a company in country Y	1,50,000	2,00,000
Gross Total Income		15,96,000
Less:* Deduction under Chapter VIA
Under section 80QQB – Royalty income of a resident from literary work[3]		3,00,000
Total Income		12,96,000

Computation of tax liability of Mr. Kamesh for A.Y.2020-21

Particulars	₹
Tax on total income [30% of ₹ 2,96,000 + ₹ 1,12,500]	2,01,300
Add: Health and Education cess@4%	8,052
	2,09,352
Less: Deduction under section 91 (See Working Note below)	69,739
Tax Payable	1,39,613
Tax payable (rounded off)	1,39,610

Working Note: Calculation of Rebate under section 91

Average rate of tax in India [i.e., ₹ 2,09,352 / ₹ 12,96,000 x 100]	16.154%
Average rate of tax in country X	10%
Doubly taxed income pertaining to country X
Agricultural Income	50,000
Royalty Income [₹ 6,00,000 – ₹ 50,000 (Expenses) – ₹ 3,00,000 (deduction under section 80QQB)][4]	2,50,000
	3,00,000
Deduction under section 91 on ₹ 3,00,000 @10% [being the lower of average Indian tax rate (16.154%) and foreign tax rate (10%)]		30,000
Average rate of tax in country Y	20%

[3] It is assumed that the royalty earned outside India has been brought into India in convertible foreign exchange within a period of six months from the end of the previous year.

[4] Doubly taxed income includes only that part of income which is included in the assessee's total income. The amount deducted under Chapter VIA is not doubly taxed and hence, no relief is allowable in respect of such amount – CIT v. Dr. R.N. Jhanji (1990) 185 ITR 586 (Raj.).

Doubly taxed income pertaining to country Y
Income from house property	1,61,000
Dividend	1,50,000
	3,11,000
Less: Business loss set-off	65,000
	2,46,000
Deduction u/s 91 on ₹ 2,46,000 @16.154% (being the lower of average Indian tax rate (16.154%) and foreign tax rate (20%)]		39,739
Total rebate under section 91 (Country X + Country Y)		69,739

Note: Mr. Kamesh shall be allowed deduction u/s 91, since the following conditions are fulfilled:-

(a) He is a resident in India during the relevant previous year (i.e., P.Y.2019-20).

(b) The income in question accrues or arises to him outside India in foreign countries X and Y during that previous year and such income is not deemed to accrue or arise in India during the previous year.

(c) The income in question has been subjected to income-tax in the foreign countries X and Y in his hands and it is presumed that he has paid tax on such income in those countries.

(d) There is no agreement under section 90 for the relief or avoidance of double taxation between India and Countries X and Y where the income has accrued or arisen.

CHAPTER 4

ADVANCE RULINGS

LEARNING OUTCOMES

After studying this Chapter, you will be able to–

❑ comprehend the meaning and scope of the term “advance ruling” and the need for obtaining advance ruling;

❑ appreciate the constitution of Authority for Advance Rulings;

❑ appreciate the procedure for making an application to the Authority for Advance Rulings and the procedure to be followed by the Authority on receipt of application;

❑ appreciate the restricted binding nature of an Advance Ruling;

❑ know the circumstances when an advance ruling can be declared void.

4.1 INTRODUCTION

Chapter XIX-B, consisting of sections 245N to 245V provides a scheme for giving advance rulings in respect of transactions involving non-residents and specified residents with a view to avoiding needless litigation and promoting better tax-payer relations.

4.2 DEFINITIONS

(1) Advance Ruling [Section 245N(a)]: The meaning of Advance Ruling is detailed hereunder:

Section	Determination by the Authority
245N(a)(i)	in relation to a transaction which has been undertaken or is proposed to be undertaken by a non-resident applicant.
245N(a)(ii)	in relation to the tax liability of a non-resident arising out of a transaction which has been undertaken or is proposed to be undertaken by a resident applicant with such non-resident and such determination shall include the determination of any question of law or of fact specified in the application.
245N(a)(iia)	in relation to the tax liability of a resident applicant, arising out of a transaction which has been undertaken or is proposed to be undertaken by such applicant and such determination shall include the determination of any question of law or of fact specified in the application.
245N(a)(iii)	in respect of an issue relating to computation of total income which is pending before any Income-tax Authority or the Appellate Tribunal and such determination or decision shall include the determination or decision of any question of law or fact in relation to such computation of total income specified in the application.
245N(a)(iv)	or decision whether an arrangement, which is proposed to be undertaken by any person being a resident or a non-resident, is an impermissible avoidance arrangement as referred to in Chapter X-A or not.

(2) Applicant [Section 245N(b)(A)]: 'Applicant' means any person who –

(i) is a non-resident referred to in section 245N(a)(i) above; or

(ii) is a resident referred to in section 245N(a)(ii) above; or

(iii) is a resident referred to in section 245N(a)(iia) above falling within any such class or category of persons as the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, specify.

[A resident in relation to his tax liability arising out of one or more transactions valuing ₹ 100 crore or more in total which has been undertaken or is proposed to be undertaken would be an applicant – Notification No.73/2014 dated 28.11.2014]; or

(iv) is a resident falling within such class or category of persons as the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, specify in this behalf [Public sector company as defined under section 2(36A) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 – Notification No. 725(E) dated 3.8.2000]; or

(v) is referred to in section 245N(a)(iv) above; and who makes an application for advance ruling under section 245Q(1).

On account of the merger of Authority for Advance Rulings for income-tax, central excise, customs duty and service tax, the definition of applicant would now also include an applicant defined under the Central Excise Act, 1944, Customs Act, 1962 and the Finance Act, 1994[1].

Who can be an applicant in relation to different clauses of section 245N(a) defining advance ruling?

S. No.	Applicant u/s 245N(b)	Advance Ruling u/s 245N(a) means determination by the AAR in relation to
(i)	Non-resident (NR)	A transaction which has been undertaken or is proposed to be undertaken by him.
(ii)	Resident	The tax liability of a NR arising out of a transaction which has been undertaken or is proposed to be undertaken by a resident applicant with such NR and such determination shall include the determination of any question of law or of fact specified in the application.
(iii)	Resident of class or category of persons notified by Central Government	The tax liability of a resident applicant, arising out of a transaction which has been undertaken or is proposed to be undertaken by such applicant and such determination shall include the determination of any question of law or of fact specified in the application.
	Note: The Central Government notified a resident, in relation to his tax liability arising out of one or more transactions valuing ₹ 100 crore or more in total.
(iv)	Resident of class or category of persons notified by Central Government	an issue relating to computation of total income which is pending before any Income-tax Authority or the Appellate Tribunal and such determination or decision shall include the determination or decision of any question of law or fact in relation to such computation of total income specified in the application.
	Note: A public sector undertaking has been notified by the Central Government.
(v)	Resident or NR	whether an arrangement, which is proposed to be undertaken by any person being a resident or a NR, is an impermissible avoidance arrangement as referred to in Chapter X-A or not.

[1] No amendment has been made in pursuance of GST being effective from 01.07.2017

Restrictions on Appellate Authority: Section 245RR provides that where a resident applicant has made an application to AAR in respect of an issue for decision of AAR, then, any Income-tax Authority or Tribunal shall not take any decision in respect of such issues. In other words, a resident assessee cannot pursue both the remedies, i.e. an appeal or revision before Income-tax Authority/Appellate Authority as well as an application for Advance Ruling to AAR, in respect of an issue.

4.3 AUTHORITY FOR ADVANCE RULINGS [SECTION 245-O]

The Authority for Advance Rulings shall be constituted by the Central Government.

Particulars	Provisions
Composition of AAR	AAR to consist of a Chairman and such number of Vice Chairmen, revenue Members and law Members as the Central Government may, by notification, appoint. Qualifications for appointment: (a) Chairman – a person who has been a judge of the Supreme Court or the Chief Justice of a High Court or for at least seven years a judge of a High Court; (b) Vice Chairman – a person who has been a Judge of a High Court; (c) A Revenue Member from the Indian Revenue Service – a person who is, or is qualified to be, a Member of the Board on the date of occurrence of vacancy; (d) A Revenue Member from the Indian Customs and Central Excise Service – a person who is, or is qualified to be a Member of the Central Board of Excise and Customs on the date of occurrence of vacancy. Composition of Benches	A Bench shall consist of the Chairman or the Vice-Chairman and one revenue and one law Member. However, where the Authority is dealing with an application seeking advance ruling in any matter relating to the Income-tax Act, the revenue member of the Bench shall be such Member from the Indian Revenue Service, who is, or is qualified to be, a member of the Board.
Any vacancy in the office of the Chairman by reason of his death, resignation or otherwise	The senior-most Vice Chairman shall act as the Chairman until the date on which a new Chairman, appointed in accordance with the provisions of the Act to fill such vacancy, enters upon his office
In case the Chairman is unable to discharge his functions owing to absence, illness or other cause	The senior-most Vice Chairman shall discharge the functions of the Chairman until the date on which the Chairman resumes his duties.

4.4 QUALIFICATIONS, TERMS AND CONDITIONS OF SERVICE OF CHAIRMAN, VICE CHAIRMAN AND MEMBERS [SECTION 245-OA]

The qualifications, appointment, term of office, salaries and allowances, resignation, removal and the other terms and conditions of service of the Chairman, Vice-Chairman and other Members of the Authority appointed on or after 26.05.2017, being the date on which the provisions of Part XIV of Chapter VI of the Finance Act, 2017 came into force, shall be governed by the provisions of section 184 of Finance Act 2017.

However, the Chairman, Vice-Chairman and Member appointed before 26.05.2017 shall continue to be governed by the provisions of the Act and the rules made thereunder as if the provisions of section 184 of the Finance Act, 2017 had not come into force.

Section 184 of Finance Act, 2017

(1) Power to Central Government to make rules: The Central Government may, by notification, make rules to provide for qualifications, appointment, term of office, salaries and allowances, resignation, removal and the other terms and conditions of service of the Chairman, Vice-Chairman or Member of the Authority.

(2) Term of Chairman, Vice-Chairman or Member of the Authority: The Chairman, Vice-Chairman or Member of the Authority shall hold office for such term as specified in the rules made by the Central Government but not exceeding 5 years from the date on which he enters upon his office and shall be eligible for reappointment.

(3) Age Criteria of Chairman, Vice-Chairman or Member of the Authority: No Chairman, Vice-Chairman or Member of the Authority shall hold office as such after he has attained such age as specified in the rules made by the Central Government which shall not exceed -

In case of	Age
Chairman	seventy years
Vice-Chairman or any other Member	sixty-seven years

Accordingly, the Central Government had notified "Tribunal, Appellate Tribunal and other Authorities (Qualifications, Experience and other Conditions of Service of Members) Rules, 2017", to specify the qualifications, appointment, term of office, salaries and allowances, resignation, removal and the other terms and conditions of service of the Chairman, Vice-Chairman and other Members of the Authority. Qualifications and term of office of the Chairman, Vice-Chairman and other Members of the Authority is as follows:

4.5 VACANCIES, ETC., NOT TO INVALIDATE PROCEEDINGS [SECTION 245P]

No proceeding before, or pronouncement of advance ruling by, the Authority shall be questioned or shall be invalid on the ground merely of the existence of any vacancy or defect in the constitution of the Authority.

4.6 APPLICATION FOR ADVANCE RULING [SECTION 245Q]

Section 245Q(1) provides that an applicant desirous of obtaining an advance ruling may make an application stating the question on which the advance ruling is sought in the prescribed form and in the prescribed manner.

As per section 245Q(2), the application shall be made in quadruplicate and be accompanied by a fee of ₹ 10,000 or such fee as may be prescribed, whichever is higher.

Rule 44E prescribes the fees mentioned in column (3) to be paid by the applicant mentioned in column (1) in the cases of column (2).

Category of applicant	Category of case	Fee
(1)	(2)	(3)
An applicant referred to in sub-clauses (i) or (ii) or (iia) of clause (b) of section 245N	Amount of one or more transaction, entered into or proposed to be undertaken, in respect of which ruling is sought does not exceed ₹ 100 crore.	₹ 2 lacs
	Amount of one or more transaction, entered into or proposed to be undertaken, in respect of which ruling is sought exceeds ₹ 100 crore but does not exceed ₹ 300 crore.	₹ 5 lacs
	Amount of one or more transaction, entered into or proposed to be undertaken, in respect of which ruling is sought exceeds ₹ 300 crore.	₹ 10 lacs
Any other applicant	In all cases	₹ 10000

Rule 44E prescribes the form of application for obtaining an advance ruling. Every application under Rule 44E shall be accompanied by the proof of payment of fees.

Section 245Q(3) provides that an applicant may withdraw an application within 30 days from the date of the application.

4.7 PROCEDURE ON RECEIPT OF APPLICATION [SECTION 245R]

The Authority on receipt of an application will send a copy to the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner concerned and wherever considered necessary, also call upon the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner to furnish relevant records. Such records will be returned to the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner as soon as possible.

The Authority may either allow or reject an application. However, the Authority shall not allow an application where the question raised in the application is:

Pending with income-tax authorities/ tribunal/court	is already pending before any income-tax authority, or Appellate Tribunal or any court. However, a resident falling within any class or category of persons as notified by the Central Government i.e., a public sector undertaking can seek for advance ruling even if question raised is pending before any income-tax authority or Appellate.

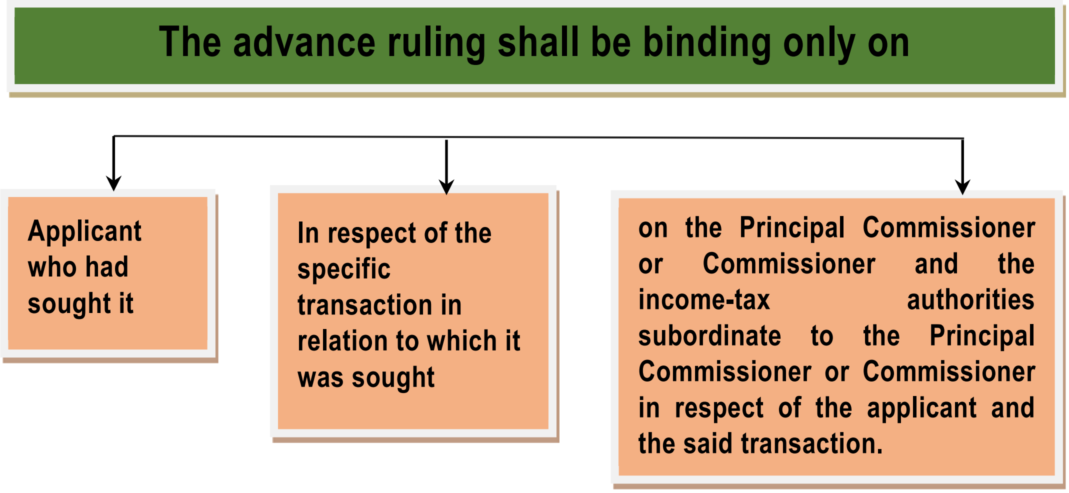
Determination of Fair Market Value	involves the determination of the fair market value of any property;
Transaction designed for avoidance of income-tax	relates to a transaction or issue which is designed prima facie for avoidance of income-tax (except in case of a resident applicant falling within any class or category of persons as notified by the Central Government i.e., a public sector undertaking or in the case of resident or a non-resident for determination of whether an arrangement, which is proposed to be undertaken is an impermissible avoidance arrangement).

However, no application shall be rejected unless an opportunity has been given to the applicant of being heard. Further, where an application is rejected, the reason for rejection shall be given in the order. A copy of every order shall be sent to the applicant and to the PCIT/CIT.

Where an application is allowed, the Authority would pronounce its advance ruling on that question specified in the application, after examining such further material as may be placed before it by the applicant or obtained by the Authority.

An applicant on request can appear either in person or can be represented through a duly authorised representative. The authority will pronounce the advance ruling within 6 months from the receipt of application by the authority and the copy of advance ruling pronounced, duly signed by the Members and certified, shall be sent to the applicant and to the PCIT/CIT.

4.8 APPLICABILITY OF ADVANCE RULING [SECTION 245S]



The advance ruling shall be binding only on

Applicant who had sought it

In respect of the specific transaction in relation to which it was sought on the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner and the income-tax authorities subordinate to the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner in respect of the applicant and the said transaction.

The advance ruling will continue to remain in force unless there is a change either in law or in fact on the basis of which the advance ruling was pronounced.

4.9 ADVANCE RULING TO BE VOID IN CERTAIN CIRCUMSTANCES [SECTION 245T]

Where the Authority finds, on a representation made to it by the PCIT/CIT or otherwise, that an advance ruling has been obtained by the applicant by fraud or misrepresentation of facts, the Authority may, by order, declare such ruling to be void ab initio. The provisions of the Act shall apply (excluding the period beginning with the date of such advance ruling and ending with the date of order under this section) to the applicant as if such advance ruling had never been made. A copy of this order shall be sent to the applicant and the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner.

4.10 POWERS OF THE AUTHORITY [SECTION 245U]

The Authority shall have all the powers of the Civil Court in respect of discovery and inspection, enforcing the attendance of any person, including any officer of a banking company and examining on oath, issuing commissions and compelling the production of books of accounts and other documents. The Authority shall be deemed to be a Civil Court for the purposes of section 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 which provides for prosecution for contempt of lawful authority of public servants, for offences against public justice. Every proceeding before the Authority shall be deemed to be a judicial proceeding under the Indian Penal Code.

However, the Authority shall not be deemed to a Civil Court for the purpose of Chapter XXVI of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 containing the provisions as to offences affecting the administration of justice.

4.11 PROCEDURE OF AUTHORITY [SECTION 245V]

The Authority shall, subject to the provisions of this Chapter, have power to regulate its own procedure in all matters arising out of the exercise of its powers under the Act.

EXERCISE

Question 1

Examine whether a person resident in India can seek advance ruling from the Authority for Advance Ruling.

Answer

A resident can make an application to the Authority for Advance Ruling to seek an advance ruling in the following cases:

(i) Section 245N(b)(A)(III) enables a resident referred in section 245N(a)(iia) falling within any such class or category of persons as may be notified by the Central Government to make an application to Authority for Advance Rulings. Such notified resident applicant can seek ruling in relation to his tax liability arising out of a transaction which has been undertaken or is proposed to be undertaken by such applicant, and such determination shall include the determination of any question of law or of fact specified in the application.

A resident in relation to his tax liability arising out of one or more transactions valuing ₹ 100 crore or more in total which has been undertaken or proposed to be undertaken would be an applicant for this purpose.

(ii) Section 245N(b)(A)(IV) enables a resident falling within any such class or category of persons as may be notified by the Central Government to make an application for Advance Ruling. Such notified resident applicant can seek ruling in respect of issues relating to computation of total income which is pending before any income-tax authority or the Appellate Tribunal. Such a resident applicant can make an application to seek determination or decision by the AAR on a question of law or a question of fact relating to such computation of total income specified in the application.

"Public sector companies" as defined in section 2(36A) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 have been notified as applicant for this purpose.

(iii) A resident can also make an application seeking advance ruling in relation to the tax liability of a non-resident arising out of a transaction undertaken or proposed to be undertaken by him with such non-resident.

(iv) A resident can make an application seeking advance ruling on whether an arrangement proposed to be undertaken by him is an impermissible avoidance arrangement under Chapter X-A.

Question 2

Q, a non-resident, made an application to the Authority for Advance Rulings on 2.7.2019 in relation to a transaction proposed to be undertaken by him. On 31.8.2019, he decides to withdraw the said application. Can he withdraw the application on 31.8.2019?

Answer

Section 245Q(3) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 provides that an applicant, who has sought for an advance ruling, may withdraw the application within 30 days from the date of the application. Since more than 30 days have elapsed since the date of application by Q to the Authority for Advance Rulings, he cannot withdraw the application.

However, the Authority for Advance Rulings (AAR*),* in M.K.Jain AAR No.644 of 2004, has observed that though section 245Q(3) provides that an application may be withdrawn by the applicant within 30 days from the date of the application, this, however, does not preclude the AAR from permitting withdrawal of the application after the said period, if the circumstances of the case so justify.

Question 3

Examine when can an advance ruling pronounced by the Authority for Advance Rulings be declared void. What is the consequence?

Answer

As per section 245T, an advance ruling can be declared to be void ab initio by the Authority for Advance Rulings if, on a representation made to it by the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner or otherwise, it finds that the ruling has been obtained by fraud or misrepresentation of facts. Thereafter, all the provisions of the Act will apply as if no such advance ruling has been made. A copy of such order shall be sent to the applicant and the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner.

Question 4

Mr. Balram is a non-resident. The appeal pertaining to the assessment year 2018-19 is pending before the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal, the issue involved being computation of export profit and tax thereon. The same issue persists for the assessment year 2019-20 as well. Mr. Balram's brother Mr. Krishna has obtained an advance ruling under Chapter XIX - B of Income-tax Act, 1961 from the Authority for Advance Rulings on an identical issue. Mr. Balram proposes to use the said ruling for his assessment pertaining to the assessment year 2019-20. Can he do so?

Answer

As per section 245S(1), the advance ruling pronounced under section 245R by the Authority for Advance Rulings shall be binding only on the applicant who had sought it and in respect of the specific transaction in relation to which advance ruling was sought. It shall also be binding on the Principal Commissioner/Commissioner and the income-tax authorities subordinate to him, in respect of the concerned applicant and the specific transaction.

In view of the above provision, Mr. Balram cannot use the advance ruling, obtained on an identical issue by his brother, for his assessment pertaining to the assessment year 2019-20.

Note – Though the ruling of the Authority for Advance Rulings is not binding on others but there is no bar on the Tribunal taking a view or forming an opinion in consonance with the reasoning of the Authority for Advance Rulings dehors the binding nature [CIT v. P. Sekar Trust (2010) 321 ITR 305 (Mad.)].

Question 5

The Authority for Advance Rulings has the powers of compelling the production of books of account – Examine the correctness or otherwise of this statement.

Answer

The statement is correct.

Under section 245U, the Authority for Advance Rulings shall have all the powers vested in the Civil Court under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 as are referred to in section 131.

Accordingly, the Authority for Advance Rulings shall have the same powers as are vested in a court under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, when trying a suit in respect of the following matters, namely -

(1) discovery and inspection;

(2) enforcing the attendance of any person, including any officer of a banking company and examining him on oath;

(3) compelling the production of books of account and other documents; and

(4) issuing commissions.

Therefore, the Authority for Advance Ruling has the powers of compelling the production of books of account.

Question 6

The term 'Advance Ruling' includes within its scope, a determination by the Authority for Advance Rulings only in relation to a transaction undertaken by a non-resident applicant. Examine the correctness of this statement, with reference to the provisions of the Income-tax Act 1961.

Answer

The statement is not correct.

The term ‘Advance Ruling’ has been defined in section 245N(a) to mean:-

(a) a determination by the Authority in relation to a transaction which has been undertaken or is proposed to be undertaken by a non-resident applicant; or

(b) a determination by the Authority in relation to the tax liability of a non-resident arising out of a transaction which has been undertaken or is proposed to be undertaken by a resident applicant with such non-resident; and such determination shall include the determination of any question of law or of fact specified in the application or

(c) a determination by the Authority in relation to the tax liability of a resident applicant, arising out of a transaction which has been undertaken or is proposed to be undertaken by such applicant, and such determination shall include the determination of any question of law or of fact specified in the application

A resident in relation to his tax liability arising out of one or more transactions valuing ₹ 100 crore or more in total which has been undertaken or proposed to be undertaken would be an applicant for this purpose.

(d) a determination or decision by the Authority in respect of an issue relating to computation of total income which is pending before any income-tax authority or the Appellate Tribunal and such determination or decision shall include the determination or decision on any question of law or of fact relating to such computation of total income specified in the application.

(e) a determination or decision by the Authority whether an arrangement, which is proposed to be undertaken by any person being a resident or a non-resident, is an impermissible avoidance arrangement as referred to in Chapter X-A or not.

Question 7

An Irish company, Phi plc., entered into a contract with an Indian company, Beta Ltd., for provision of technical know-how and made an application to the Authority for Advance Rulings for advance ruling on the rate of withholding tax on receipts from Beta Ltd. Beta Ltd. had also made an application to the Assessing Officer for determination of the rate at which tax is deductible on the said payment to Phi plc. The Authority for Advance Rulings rejected the application of Phi plc. on the ground that the question raised in the application is already pending before an income tax authority. Is the rejection of the application of Phi plc. justified in law?

Answer

This issue came up before the AAR in, Nuclear Power Corporation of India Ltd. In Re, [2012] 343 ITR 220, wherein it was held that an advance ruling is not only applicant specific, but is also transaction specific. The advance ruling is on a transaction entered into or undertaken by the applicant. That is why section 245S specifies that a ruling is binding on the applicant, the transaction and the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax and those subordinate to him, and not only on the applicant.

What is barred by the first proviso to section 245R(2) of the Act in the context of clause (i) thereof is the allowing of an application under section 245R(2) of the Act where “the question raised in the application is already pending before any Income-tax authority, or Appellate Tribunal or any court”. The significance of the dropping of the words, “in the applicant’s case” with effect from June 1, 2000, cannot be wholly ignored.

On the basis of this view expressed by the AAR in the above case, explaining the impact of the dropping of the words “in the applicant’s case” with effect from 1.6.2000, a view can be taken that the AAR can reject the application made by Phi plc. before the AAR on the ground that similar issue is pending before the Assessing Officer in respect of the same transaction i.e., provision of technical know to Beta Ltd.

Note – The issue relates to the admission or rejection of the application filed before the Advance Rulings Authority on the grounds specified in clause (i) of the first proviso to sub-section (2) of section 245R of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

The first proviso to section 245R(2) has been substituted by the Finance Act, 2000 with effect from 1.6.2000. Clause (i) of the first proviso, prior to and post amendment, reads as follows:

Prior to 1.6.2000	On or After 1.6.2000
Provided that the Authority shall not allow the application except in the case of a resident applicant where the question raised in the application is already pending in the applicant's case before any income-tax authority, the Appellate Tribunal or any court;	Provided that the Authority shall not allow the application where the question raised in the application is already pending before any income-tax authority or Appellate Tribunal or any court.

The words "except in the case of a resident applicant" and "in the applicant's case" has been removed in clause (i) of the first proviso with effect from 1.6.2000. However, the Explanatory Memorandum to the Finance Act, 2000, explaining the impact of the substitution, reads as follows "It is proposed to substitute the proviso to provide that the Authority shall not allow the application when the question raised is already pending in the applicant's case before any income-tax authority, Appellate Tribunal or any court in regard to a non-resident applicant and resident applicant in relation to a transaction with a non-resident". Therefore, according to the intent expressed in the Explanatory Memorandum, the AAR shall not allow the application both in the case of resident and non-resident applicant if the question raised is already pending in the applicant's case before any income-tax authority. Thus, as per the Explanatory Memorandum, it is possible to take a view that even post-amendment, the Authority shall not allow the application only where a question is pending in the applicant's case before any income-tax authority. Thus, an alternative view is possible on the basis of the AAR ruling in Ericsson Telephone Corporation India AB v. CIT (1997) 224 ITR 203, which continues to hold good even after the amendment, if we consider the intent expressed in the Explanatory Memorandum. Accordingly, based on this view, the AAR can allow the application made by Phi plc., even if the question raised in the application is pending before the Assessing Officer in Beta Ltd.'s case*.*

EQUALISATION LEVY

LEARNING OUTCOMES

After studying this chapter, you would be able to -

- ❑ appreciate the issues in taxing e-commerce transactions;
- ❑ comprehend the OECD recommendations for taxing e-commerce transactions under Action Plan 1 of Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS) project;
- ❑ appreciate the need for equalization levy;
- ❑ appreciate the meaning of "specified services" which are subject to equalisation levy;
- ❑ comprehend and apply the provisions of equalisation levy contained in Chapter VIII of the Finance Act, 2016 and the relevant Rules in problem solving and addressing related issues.

5.1 GROWTH OF E-COMMERCE AND CONCERNS EMERGING THEREFROM

(1) The rapid growth of information and communication technology has resulted in substantial expansion of the supply and procurement of digital goods and services globally, including India. The digital economy is growing at approximately 10% per annum, significantly faster than the global economy as a whole.

(2) At present, in the digital domain, business may be conducted without regard to national boundaries and may dissolve the link between an income-producing activity and a specific location. Hence, business in digital domain doesn't actually occur in any physical location but instead takes place in "cyberspace." Persons carrying business in digital domain could be located anywhere in the world. Entrepreneurs across the world have been quick to evolve their business to take advantage of these changes. It has also made it possible for the businesses to conduct themselves in ways that did not exist earlier, and given rise to new business models that rely more on digital and telecommunication network, do not require physical presence, and derives substantial value from data collected and transmitted from such networks.

5.2 TAXATION ISSUES RELATING TO E-COMMERCE

These new business models have created new tax challenges. The typical taxation issues relating to e-commerce are:

(1) the difficulty in characterizing the nature of payment and establishing a nexus or link between taxable transaction, activity and a taxing jurisdiction,

(2) the difficulty of locating the transaction, activity and identifying the taxpayer for income tax purposes.

The digital business, thus, challenges physical presence-based permanent establishment rules. If permanent establishment principles are to remain effective in the new economy, the fundamental PE components developed for the old economy i.e. place of business, location, and permanency must be reconciled with the new digital reality.

5.3 OECD RECOMMENDATIONS UNDER ACTION PLAN 1 OF THE BEPS PROJECT

The OECD has recommended several options to tackle the direct tax challenges which include:

(1) Modifying the existing definition of permanent establishment to provide for whether an enterprise engaged in fully de-materialized digital activities would constitute a PE, if it maintained a significant digital presence in another country's economy.

(2) Introducing the concept of a virtual fixed place of business in the concept of permanent establishments i.e., creation of a permanent establishments when the enterprise maintains a website on a server of another enterprise located in a jurisdiction and carries on business through that website.

(3) Imposition of a final withholding tax on gross basis in case of certain payments made for digital goods or services provided by a foreign e-commerce provider or imposition of a equalisation levy on consideration for certain digital transactions received by a non-resident from a resident or from a non-resident having permanent establishment in other contracting state.

Taking into consideration the potential of new digital economy and the rapidly evolving nature of business operations, it becomes necessary to address the challenges in terms of taxation of such digital transactions.

5.4 EQUALISATION LEVY - CHAPTER VIII IN THE FINANCE ACT, 2016

In order to address these challenges, Chapter VIII of the Finance Act, 2016, titled "Equalisation Levy", provides for an equalisation levy of 6% of the amount of consideration for specified services received or receivable by a non-resident not having PE in India, from a resident in India who carries out business or profession, or from a non-resident having PE in India.

The CBDT issued a notification dated 27 May, 2016, stating that the provisions of Chapter VIII relating to the equalisation levy would come into effect from 1st June 2016. This Chapter extends to the whole of India except Jammu and Kashmir. It applies in respect of consideration received or receivable for specified services provided on or after 1.6.2016.

The key aspects related to Equalisation Levy have been discussed below.

(1) Meaning of "Equalisation Levy" [Section 164(d) of the Finance Act, 2016]:

Equalisation levy means the tax leviable on consideration received or receivable for any specified service

(2) Meaning of "Specified Service" [Section 164(i) of the Finance Act, 2016]:

(i) Online advertisement;

(ii) Any provision for digital advertising space or any other facility or service for the purpose of online advertisement;

(iii) Any other service as may be notified by the Central Government.

Note – 'Online' means a facility or service or right or benefit or access that is obtained through the internet or any other form of digital or telecommunication network.

(3) Charge of Equalisation Levy [Section 165 of Finance Act, 2016]:

(i) Equalisation levy @6% is leviable on the amount of consideration for specified service received or receivable by a person, being a non-resident from -

(a) a person resident in India and carrying on business or profession; or

(b) a non-resident having a PE in India.

(ii) Equalisation levy is not chargeable, where –

(a) the non-resident providing the specified service has a PE in India and the specified service is effectively connected with such PE;

(b) the aggregate amount of consideration for specified service received or receivable in a previous year by the non-resident from a person resident in India and carrying on business or profession, or from a non-resident having a PE in India, does not exceed ₹ 1 lakh; or

(c) where the payment for the specified service by the person resident in India, or the PE in India is not for the purposes of carrying out business or profession.

(4) Relief to small players in the digital domain:

In order to reduce burden of small players in the digital domain, it is also provided that no such levy shall be made if the aggregate amount of consideration for specified services received or receivable by a non-resident from a person resident in India and carrying on business or profession or from a non-resident having a permanent establishment in India does not exceed ₹ 1 lakh in any previous year.

Further, equalisation levy shall not be charged where the payment for the specified service by the person resident in India or the permanent establishment in India, is not for the purposes of carrying out business or profession.

(5) Provisions of Chapter on Equalisation Levy:

Section	Subject	Provisions
166	Collection and recovery of equalisation levy
	Person responsible for deduction of equalisation levy	Every person, being a resident and carrying on business or profession or a non-resident having a permanent establishment in India shall deduct equalisation levy from the amount paid or payable to a non-resident in respect of the specified service.
	Rate of equalisation levy	6% of the amount of consideration for specified service paid or payable to a non-resident in respect of specified service by a person resident in India and carrying on business or profession or a non-resident having a PE in India. The amount of consideration of specified services, equalisation levy, interest and penalty payable and refund shall be rounded off to the nearest multiple of ten rupees. [Rule 3 of Equalisation Levy Rules, 2016]

	Threshold limit	Equalisation levy is deductible if the aggregate amount of consideration for specified service in a previous year exceeds one lakh rupees.
	Time period for remittance of equalisation levy	The equalisation levy so deducted during any calendar month shall be paid by every assessee to the credit of the Central Government by the 7th of the month immediately following the said calendar month. Equalisation levy deducted during any calendar month is to be paid to the credit of the Central Government by remitting it to the Reserve Bank of India or the State Bank of India or any other authorised bank, accompanied by an equalisation levy challan. [Rule 4 of Equalisation Levy Rules, 2016]
	Consequence of failure to deduct equalisation levy	Any assessee who fails to deduct equalisation levy shall, notwithstanding such failure, be liable to pay the levy to the credit of the Central Government by the 7th of the month immediately following the said calendar month. Thus, if the assessee responsible for deducting equalisation levy, fails to so deduct, he has, in any case, to pay such levy to the credit of the Central Government by the 7th of the month immediately following the said calendar month.
167	Furnishing of statement
	Statement in prescribed form within time	Every assessee shall, within the prescribed time after the end of each financial year, prepare and deliver or cause to be delivered to the Assessing Officer or to any other authority or agency authorised by the Board in this behalf, a statement in the prescribed form, verified in the prescribed manner and setting forth the prescribed particulars in respect of all specified services during such financial year. The statement in respect of all specified services chargeable to equalisation levy during any financial year is required to be furnished electronically in Form No. 1 (verified through either a digital signature or an electronic verification code) on or before 30th June immediately following that financial year [Rule 5 of Equalisation Levy Rules, 2016]

	Time limit for filing a revised statement	An assessee who has not furnished the statement on or before 30th June immediately following the financial year or having furnished a statement within that time, notices any omission or wrong particulars therein, may furnish a statement or a revised statement, as the case may be. Such statement or revised statement has to be filed at any time before the expiry of two years from the end of the financial year in which the specified service was provided.
	Time limit for filing a statement in response to notice issued by the Assessing Officer	Where any assessee fails to furnish the statement within the prescribed time, the Assessing Officer may serve a notice upon such assessee requiring him to furnish the statement in the prescribed form, verified in the prescribed manner and setting forth the prescribed particulars, within such time, as may be prescribed. The Assessing Officer has been empowered to issue notice for furnishing such statement, which then has to be furnished, within 30 days from date of serving of such notice [Rule 6 of Equalisation Levy Rules, 2016]
168	Processing of statement.
	Manner of processing of statement	Where a statement has been made under section 167 by the assessee, such statement shall be processed in the following manner, namely:— (a) the equalisation levy shall be computed after making the adjustment for any arithmetical error in the statement; (b) the interest, if any shall be computed on the basis of sum deductible as computed in the statement; (c) the sum payable by, or the amount of refund due to, the assessee shall be determined after adjustment of interest computed against the equalisation levy paid under section 166(2) or interest paid section 170 and any amount paid otherwise by way of tax or interest; (d) an intimation shall be prepared or generated and sent to the assessee specifying the sum determined to be payable by, or the amount of refund due to him; and (e) the amount of refund due to the assessee in pursuance of such determination shall be granted to him. However, no such intimation shall be sent after the expiry of one year from the end of the financial year in which the statement is furnished.

	Prescribed form for service of notice of demand on the taxpayer	Where any levy, interest or penalty is payable under the equalisation levy provisions, a notice of demand in Form No. 2 specifying the sum so payable shall be served upon the taxpayer. Further, intimation issued upon processing of the statement of specified services shall also be deemed to be a notice of demand. [Rule 7 of Equalisation Levy Rules, 2016]
	Scheme for centralised processing of statements	For the purposes of processing of statements, the CBDT may make a scheme for centralised processing of such statements to expeditiously determine the tax payable by, or the refund due to, the assessee as required thereunder.
169	Rectification of mistake
	Time limit for amending an intimation	With a view to rectifying any mistake apparent from the record, the Assessing Officer may amend any intimation issued under section 168. Such intimation can be amended within one year from the end of the financial year in which the intimation sought to be amended was issued.
	Amendment can be made suo motu or brought to notice by the assessee	The Assessing Officer may make an amendment to any intimation, either suo motu or on any mistake brought to his notice by the assessee.
	Opportunity of being heard to be given by the Assessing Officer before amending an intimation	An amendment to any intimation, which has the effect of increasing the liability of the assessee or reducing a refund, shall not be made unless the Assessing Officer has given notice to the assessee of his intention so to do and has given the assessee a reasonable opportunity of being heard.
		Where any such amendment to any intimation has the effect of enhancing the sum payable or reducing the refund already made, the Assessing Officer shall make an order specifying the sum payable by the assessee and the provisions of this Chapter shall apply accordingly.
170	Interest on delayed payment of equalisation	An assessee who fails to credit the equalisation levy or any part thereof within 7th of the month following the calendar month in which it is deducted, to the account of

It may be filed electronically under digital signature or electronically through EVC. Any document accompanying Form No.3 has to be furnished in the manner in which Form No.3 is furnished.[Rule 8 of Equalisation Levy Rules, 2016]
	Provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 applicable in case of such appeals	Where an appeal has been filed, the provisions of sections 249 to 251 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 would, as far as may be, apply to such appeal. Section 250 specifies the procedure in appeal and section 251 enlists the powers of the Commissioner (Appeals).
175	Appeal to Appellate Tribunal
	Assessee/CIT may file appeal to Appellate Tribunal against an order passed by Commissioner (Appeals) under section 174	An assessee aggrieved by an order made by the Commissioner of Income-tax (Appeals) under section 174 may appeal to the Appellate Tribunal against such order. The Commissioner of Income-tax may, if he objects to any order passed by the Commissioner of Income-tax (Appeals) under section 174, direct the Assessing Officer to appeal to the Appellate Tribunal against such order.
	Time limit for filing appeal	An appeal shall be filed within 60 days from the date on which the order sought to be appealed against is received by the assessee or by the Commissioner of Income-tax, as the case may be.
	Fee for filing appeal	The appeal shall be in the prescribed form [Form No.4] and verified in the prescribed manner. In the case of an appeal filed by an assessee, it shall be accompanied by a fee of ₹1,000. Also, the form of appeal, the grounds of appeal and the form of verification appended thereto shall be signed by the person specified in Form No.4 [Rule 9 of Equalisation Levy Rules, 2016]
	Provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 applicable in case of such appeals	Where an appeal has been filed before the Appellate Tribunal under sub-section (1) or sub-section (2), the provisions of sections 253 to 255 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 would, as far as may be, apply to such appeal.

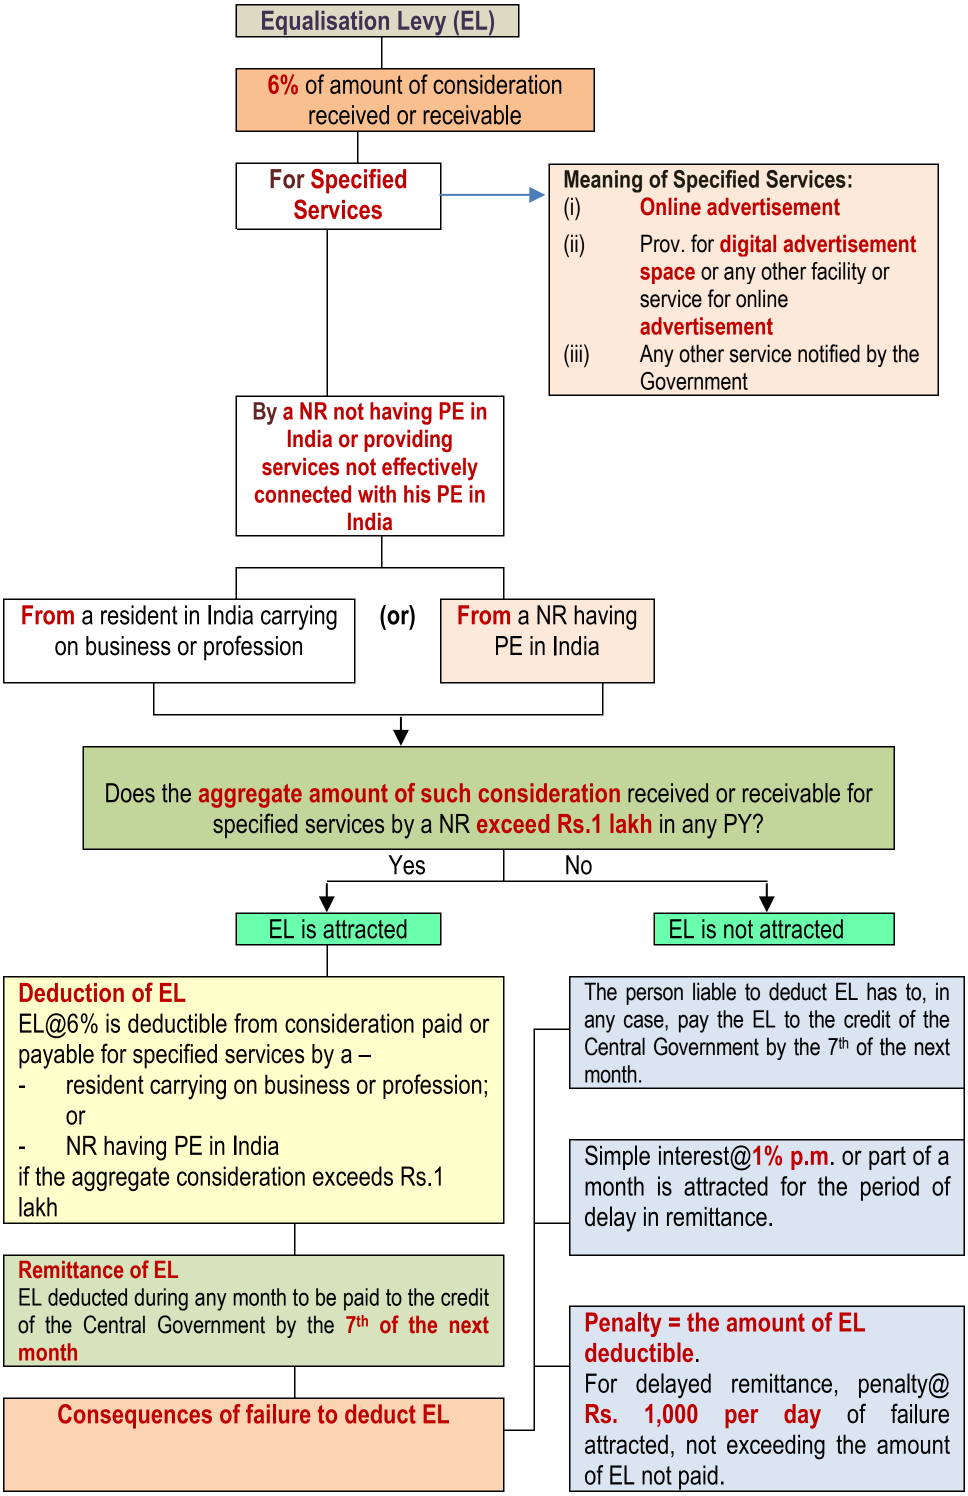
179	Power to make rules	The Central Government is empowered to make rules for the purposes of carrying out the provisions of this Chapter. Also, every Rule made under this Chapter shall be laid before each House of Parliament.
		In particular, such rules may also provide for all or any of the following matters, namely:— (a) the time within which and the form and the manner in which the statement shall be delivered or caused to be delivered or furnished under section 167; (b) the form in which an appeal may be filed and the manner in which it may be verified under sections 174 and 175; (c) any other matter which is to be, or may be, prescribed.
		Every rule made under this Chapter shall be laid, as soon as may be after it is made, before each House of Parliament, while it is in session, for a total period of 30 days. This period of 30 days may be comprised in one session or in two or more successive sessions, and if, before the expiry of the session immediately following the session or the successive sessions aforesaid, both Houses agree: (i) in making any modification in the rule, then, the rule shall thereafter have effect only in such modified form; (ii) that the rule should not be made, then, the rule would be of no effect. However, any such modification or annulment would be without prejudice to the validity of anything previously done under that rule.

180	Power to remove difficulties	The Central Government is empowered to remove any difficulty which arises in giving effect to the provisions of this Chapter. It may, by order published in the Official Gazette, not inconsistent with the provisions of this Chapter, remove the difficulty. However, no such order shall be made after the expiry of a period of two years from the date on which the provisions of this Chapter come into force. Every order made under this section shall be laid, as soon as may be after it is made, before each House of Parliament.

(6) Consequential provisions in the Income-tax Act, 1961:

	Section	Provision
(i)	10(50)	In order to avoid double taxation, section 10(50) provides to exempt any income arising from providing any specified service on or after the date on which the provisions of Chapter VIII of the Finance Act, 2016 comes into force, and chargeable to equalisation levy under that Chapter.
(ii)	40(a)(ib)	In order to ensure compliance with the provisions this Chapter, section 40(a)(ib) provides that if any consideration is paid or payable to a non-resident for a specified service on which equalisation levy is deductible, and such levy has not been deducted or after deduction, has not been paid on or before the due date under section 139(1), then, such expenses incurred by the assessee towards consideration for specified service shall not be allowed as deduction. However, where in respect of such consideration, if the equalisation levy has been deducted in any subsequent year or has been deducted during the previous year but paid after the due date specified under section 139(1), such sum shall be allowed as deduction in computing the income of the previous year in which such levy has been paid.



Equalisation Levy (EL)

6% of amount of consideration received or receivable

Meaning of Specified Services:

(i) Online advertisement

(ii) Prov. for digital advertisement space or any other facility or service for online advertisement

(iii) Any other service notified by the Government

By a NR not having PE in India or providing services not effectively connected with his PE in India

From a resident in India carrying on business or profession

(or)

From a NR having PE in India

Does the aggregate amount of such consideration received or receivable for specified services by a NR exceed Rs.1 lakh in any PY?

Yes

No

EL is attracted

EL is not attracted

Deduction of EL

EL@6% is deductible from consideration paid or payable for specified services by a –

- resident carrying on business or profession; or
- NR having PE in India

if the aggregate consideration exceeds Rs.1 lakh

Remittance of EL

EL deducted during any month to be paid to the credit of the Central Government by the 7th of the next month

Consequences of failure to deduct EL

The person liable to deduct EL has to, in any case, pay the EL to the credit of the Central Government by the 7th of the next month.

Simple interest@1% p.m. or part of a month is attracted for the period of delay in remittance.

Penalty = the amount of EL deductible.

For delayed remittance, penalty@ Rs. 1,000 per day of failure attracted, not exceeding the amount of EL not paid.

EXERCISE

Question 1

Explain the core reasons for difference between the e-commerce transactions and the traditional business transactions causing difficulty to tax the income of e-commerce transactions.

Answer

The core reasons for difference between e-commerce transactions and traditional business transactions causing difficulty to tax the income from e-commerce transactions under the Income-tax Act, 1961 are absence of national boundaries, no requirement of physical presence of goods and no requirement of physical delivery (in certain cases). Since e-commerce transactions are completed in cyberspace, it is often not clear as to the place where the transaction is effected, thereby causing difficulty in implementing source rule taxation.

Question 2

E-commerce transactions have replaced concepts generally associated with international transactions traditionally. Discuss briefly the issues involving such transactions.

Answer

The typical taxation issues relating to e-commerce are:

(1) the difficulty in characterizing the nature of payment and establishing a nexus or link between taxable transaction, activity and a taxing jurisdiction,

(2) the difficulty of locating the transaction, activity and identifying the taxpayer for income tax purposes.

Question 3

ABC ltd., an Indian company, is carrying on the business of manufacture and sale of teakwood furniture under the brand name "PUREWOOD". In order to expand its overseas sales/exports, it launched a massive advertisement campaign of its products. For the purpose of online advertisement, it utilized the services of PQR Inc., a London based company. During the previous year 2019-20, ABC Ltd. Paid ₹ 5 lakhs to PQR Inc. for such services. Discuss the tax implications/TDS implications of such payment and receipt in the hands of ABC Ltd. and PQR Inc., respectively, if –

(i) PQR Inc. has no permanent establishment in India

(ii) PQR Inc. has a permanent establishment in India, and the service is effectively connected to the permanent establishment in India

Answer

Chapter VIII of the Finance Act, 2016, "Equalisation Levy", provides for an equalisation levy of 6% of the amount of consideration for specified services received or receivable by a non-resident not having permanent establishment in India, from a resident in India who carries out business or profession, or from a non-resident having permanent establishment in India.

“Specified Service” means

(1) online advertisement;

(2) any provision for digital advertising space or any other facility or service for the purpose of online advertisement and

(3) any other service as may be notified by the Central Government.

However, equalisation levy shall not be levied-

- where the non-resident providing the specified services has a permanent establishment in India and the specified service is effectively connected with such permanent establishment.
- the aggregate amount of consideration for specified service received or receivable during the previous year does not exceed ₹ 1 lakh.
- where the payment for specified service is not for the purposes of carrying out business or profession

(i) Where PQR Inc. has no permanent establishment in India

In the present case, equalisation levy @6% is chargeable on the amount of ₹ 5,00,000 received by PQR Inc., a non-resident not having a PE in India from ABC Ltd., an Indian company. Accordingly, ABC Ltd. is required to deduct equalisation levy of ₹ 30,000 i.e., @6% of ₹ 5 lakhs, being the amount paid towards online advertisement services provided by PQR Inc., a non-resident having no permanent establishment in India. Non-deduction of equalisation levy would attract disallowance under section 40(a)(ib) of 100% of the amount paid while computing business income.

(ii) Where PQR Inc. has permanent establishment in India and the service is effectively connected to the permanent establishment in India

Equalisation levy would not be attracted where the non-resident service provider (PQR Inc., in this case) has a permanent establishment in India and the service is effectively connected to the permanent establishment in India. Therefore, the ABC Ltd. is not required to deduct equalisation levy on ₹ 5 lakhs, being the amount paid towards online advertisement services to PQR Inc, in this case.

However, tax has to be deducted by ABC Ltd. at the rates in force under section 195 in respect of such payment to PQR Inc. Non-deduction of tax at source under section 195 would attract disallowance under section 40(a)(i) of 100% of the amount paid while computing business income.

CHAPTER 6

APPLICATION AND INTERPRETATION OF TAX TREATIES

LEARNING OUTCOMES

After studying this chapter, you would be able to

- identify the connecting factors of double taxation;
- appreciate the meaning of, and need for, tax treaties;
- appreciate the basic principles of interpretation of tax treaties;
- identify the extrinsic aids to interpretation of a tax treaty;
- appreciate the importance of commentaries in interpretation of tax treaties;
- appreciate the role of Vienna Convention in application and interpretation of tax treaties.

6.1 INTRODUCTION

Article 38(1) of the International Court of Justice[1] provides that the court shall apply the following in deciding on a particular matter –

International Convention(s) [general or particular]

- establishing rules expressly recognised by the contesting states

International Customs

- serving as evidence of general practice accepted as law

General principles

- recognised by civilised nations

Judicial decisions and teachings of highly qualified publicists of various nations

- serving as subsidiary means for determination of rules of law

Success of any law depends upon the manner in which it is interpreted and administered. In order to interpret any law or agreement, one needs to understand the philosophy of law which has been kept in mind at the time of passing such law in a country or at the time of forming an agreement between the two countries on a particular aspect. This gives rise to the principles of public international law (example – U.N principles on business and human rights).

Tax has been a consequence of business for several hundreds of years; some of the principles would definitely have their bearing on the manner in which law is passed. International tax law has evolved so that conflict of national interests can be resolved (double taxation being the primary issue).

Source(s) of International Tax Law

S. No.	Source	Particulars relating to the source/origin
(i)	Multilateral international agreements	For example, the Vienna Convention on Law of Treaties (VCLT)
(ii)	Double Taxation Avoidance	DTAAs may be comprehensive or otherwise. It is to be noted that along with the DTAA, it is the protocols, memorandum of

[1] https://www.icj-cij.org/en/statute#CHAPTER_II

	Agreement (DTAA)	understanding, and exchange of information, etc. forming part of the DTAA which enables interpretation of a DTAA.
(iii)	Customary international law and general principles of law	For example, principles of law recognised by civilized nations in their national legal systems, customary law and judicial decisions and the practices of international organizations. Customary international law is the aspect of international law that derives from customs and convention. Along with general principles of law and treaties, custom is also considered by the International Court of Justice, jurists, the United Nations, and its member states to be among the primary sources of international law. The vast majority of the world's governments accept, in principle, the existence of customary international law, although there are many differing opinions as to what rules are contained therein.

6.2 DOUBLE TAXATION AND CONNECTING FACTORS

The taxability of a foreign entity in any country depends upon two distinct factors, namely, whether it is doing business with that country or in that country. Internationally, the term used to determine the jurisdiction for taxation is "connecting factors". There are two types of connecting factors, namely, "Residence" and "Source". It means a company can be subject to tax either on its residence link or its source link with a country. Broadly, if a company is doing business with another country (i.e. host/source country), then it would be subject to tax in its home country alone, based on its residence link. However, if a company is doing business in a host/source country, then, besides being taxed in the home country on the basis of its residence link, it will also be taxed in the host country on the basis of its source link.

- Juridical double taxation

  When source rules overlap, double taxation may arise i.e. tax is imposed by two or more countries as per their domestic laws in respect of the same transaction, income arises or is deemed to arise in their respective jurisdictions. This is known as "juridical double taxation".

In order to avoid such double taxation, a company can invoke provisions of Double Taxation Avoidance Agreements (DTAAs) (also known as Tax Treaty or Double Taxation Convention–DTC) with the host/source country, or in the absence of such an agreement, an Indian company can invoke provisions of section 91, providing unilateral relief in the event of double taxation.

Example

Company ICO is a resident of India. It has set up a branch in UK. Here, India would be the country of residence for ICO, whereas UK would be the country of source. UK would tax the profits earned by the branch of ICO located in UK, whereas ICO would be taxed on worldwide basis in India, including profits of its UK branch. However, ICO can claim relief in respect of taxes paid in UK while filing its tax return in India under the Indo-UK Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement.

If, instead of UK, ICO has a branch in a state with which India does not have tax treaty, then it can claim unilateral relief under section 91 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 in respect of taxes paid by its branch in that state.

- Economic double taxation

  'Economic double taxation' happens when the same transaction, item of income or capital is taxed in two or more states but in hands of different persons (because of lack of subject identity)

Example

When one state attributes an income/capital to its legal owner whereas the tax law of other state attributes it in the hands of the person in possession or having economic control over the income, it leads to economic double taxation.

Yet another classic example is tax on distributed surplus by a company which is taxed in the hands of the company distributing such surplus, while the other jurisdiction taxes the said income from distribution in the hands of the shareholder, thus leading to double taxation of the same income albeit in the hands of different persons.

6.3 TAX TREATIES: AN OVERVIEW

(1) Definition of "Treaty"

Treaty is a generic term embracing all instruments binding under international law, regardless of their formal designation, concluded between two or more international juridical persons.

The application of the term treaty signifies that the parties intend to create rights and obligations enforceable under international law.

Article 2 of Vienna Convention on Law of Treaties, 1969 defines a “treaty” as an international agreement concluded between States in written form and governed by international law, whether embodied in a single instrument or in two or more related instruments and whatever its particular designation.

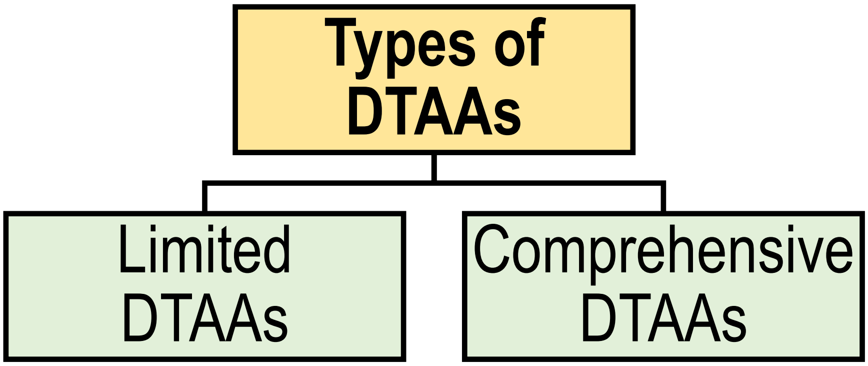
(2) Role of Tax Treaties

“Treaty” represents various compromises agreed upon by the respective Contracting States depending upon the economic expediency of a particular country.

Tax, in the country of source is considered as a cost, whereas the same is an obligation in the country of residence. Therefore, there is need to achieve tax efficiency. Double Tax Avoidance Agreements come into play to mitigate hardship caused by subjecting the same income to double taxation.

Tax Treaties attempt to eliminate double taxation and try to achieve balance and equity. They aim at sharing of tax revenues by the concerned states on a rational basis. Tax treaties do not always succeed in eliminating Double Taxation, but contain the incidence to a tolerable level.

(3) Types of DTAAs



Limited DTAAs are those which are limited to certain types of incomes only. e.g., DTAA between India and Pakistan is limited to income from international air transport only.

Comprehensive DTAAs are those which cover almost all types of incomes covered by any model convention. Many a time, a treaty also covers wealth tax, gift tax, surtax, etc.

(4) Directive Principles set out in the Indian Constitution

In the Indian context, Article 51 of the Indian Constitution has, inter alia, set out some directive principles which must be followed by the State in the context of International agreements and relationships. It has been provided that-

"The State shall endeavor to -

(a) Promote international peace and security;

(b) Maintain just and honourable relations amongst nations;

(c) Foster respect for international law and treaty obligations in the dealings of organised people with one another; and

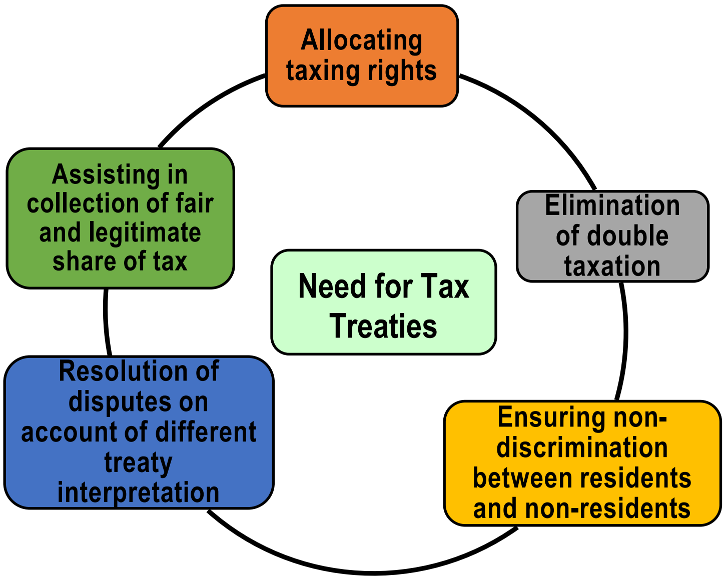
(d) Encourage settlement of international disputes by arbitration.

It is pertinent to note that entries 10 and 14 of List I of the Seventh Schedule to the Constitution of India confer the power on Parliament to legislate treaties with foreign countries. Further, this power of Parliament has been delegated to the Central Government vide sections 90 and 90A of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

(5) Need for tax treaties

The concept of source and residence prevailing in a majority of the countries is the root cause of double taxation. Hence, there is a need to have tax treaties in force. In addition to allocating the taxing rights and eliminating double taxation, there are various other important considerations as mentioned below:

- Ensuring non-discrimination between residents and non-residents
- Resolution of disputes arising on account of different interpretation of tax treaty by the treaty partner.
- Providing assistance in the collection of the fair and legitimate share of tax.



Allocating taxing rights
Elimination of double taxation
Ensuring non-discrimination between residents and non-residents
Resolution of disputes on account of different treaty interpretation
Assisting in collection of fair and legitimate share of tax
Need for Tax Treaties

Further, in addition to above, there are some other principles which must be considered by countries in their tax system –

(i) Equity and fairness: Same income earned by different taxpayers must be taxed at the same rate regardless of the source of income.

(ii) Neutrality and efficiency: Neutrality factor provides that economic processes should not be affected by external factors such as taxation. Neutrality is two-fold.

(a) Capital export neutrality and

(b) Capital import neutrality (CIN).

Capital export neutrality (CEN) provides that business decision must not be affected by tax factors between the country of residence and the target country; whereas CIN provides that the level of tax imposed on non-residents as well as the residents must be similar.

(iii) Promotion of mutual economic relation, trade and investment: In some cases, it is observed that avoidance of double taxation is not the only objective. The other objective may be to give impetus to a country's overall economic growth and development.'

6.4 APPLICATION AND INTERPRETATION OF TAX TREATIES

Application of Tax Treaties

In various countries, unless the context otherwise requires, the provisions of the DTAA shall prevail over the domestic tax provisions. No two treaties between the countries are alike. DTAA signed by India with USA is different in comparison to the DTAA signed with other countries like Netherlands. These differences include taxpayers to resort to tax arbitrage strategies. This frustrates Government's objective and results in unintended tax benefits. Therefore, in specified circumstances, treaty benefits are denied. Some of the circumstances in the Indian context induce (i) General Anti-Avoidance Rules (GAAR)[2] (ii) Targeted anti avoidance rules (transfer pricing), etc. (iii) Beneficial Ownership Conditions (iv) Entitlement to Benefits/Limitation on Benefits Clause/ Articles, etc.

In recent past, India has re-negotiated DTAAs with countries like Mauritius, Singapore, etc. to prevent fiscal evasion with respect to taxes on income and capital gains of the investor[3].

(1) Article 4 of DTAA – Gateway to avail tax benefits

It is a well-accepted proposition in a tax treaty scenario that a person shall be entitled to a tax treaty only if he is a resident of one or both of the Contracting States.

This provision aims at curbing the 'treaty shopping' practices. It must be noted that though 'Article 4' of the tax treaty deals with residential status of a person, it does not provide rules for determination of residence. Instead, it refers to the determination in accordance with the provisions of domestic tax law of the respective Contracting State. This is clear from the language which provides that "the term "resident of a Contracting State" means any person who, under the laws of that State, is liable to tax therein by reason of his domicile, residence, place of management or any other criterion of a similar nature.............". Therefore, the primary requirement is for a person to qualify as a resident under the law of the concerned Contracting State.

Determination of residential status of a person is crucial since it is ultimately the country of residence that may have full right to tax the worldwide income of its resident. Further, in addition to taxing the global income, the country of residence would grant relief in respect of tax paid in the country of source.

Place of effective management is an important criterion for availing treaty benefits by a corporate. India-U.A.E DTAA (as revised) further limits the application of treaty by providing that the treaty would be applicable to U.A.E company only if it is incorporated in U.A.E and is controlled wholly in U.A.E. Only such company would be regarded as resident of U.A.E. Further, the India–U.A.E DTAA provides that if a person other than an individual is resident of both the States, then it should be deemed to be resident of the State in which its Place of effective management is situated.

(2) Computation of income liable for the purpose of taxation

The provisions of tax treaty inter alia allocates taxing rights between the treaty partners, provides relief or reduces or eliminates the harmful effects of double taxation. However, it is to be noted that except for the provisions under 'Article 7 i.e. Business Profits taxation', generally the treaty does not provide rules for computation of income. It would depend upon the domestic tax law provisions. Treaties, at best, distribute the taxing rights between two states. It may limit the rate of tax (generally, in the state of source) or provide the upper limit up to which taxes can be levied. Certain treaties do reduce the incidence of tax by providing or restricting the scope of the subject matter of taxation.

(3) Distributive Rule

Tax treaties only distribute or assign taxing jurisdiction. It does not impose tax. Having assigned the jurisdiction of tax between the State of Residence and State of Source, the domestic tax laws of the respective State determine taxing rules. Taxing experts in early 1920 appointed by the League of Nations describe the method of classification as Contracting States dividing tax sources and tax objects amongst themselves by mutually binding themselves not to levy taxes or to tax only to a limited extent.

English lawyers called it "Classification and Assignment Rule", whereas German jurists called it the "Distributive Rule". According to this principle, "to the extent that an exemption is agreed to, its effect is, in principle, independent of whether the Contracting States imposes a tax, in the situation to which the exemption applies, and irrespective of whether the State actually levies the tax". The point here is that having agreed to give the right of tax to the other state, that state may or may not levy tax and if the state in whose favour right to tax is devolved, chooses not to tax such income, then, it may result in double non-taxation. The argument in favour of double non-taxation is that income would be subject to tax in the exempt state as and when the exemption is withdrawn or tax is levied. Thus, this rule ensures that double taxation does not arise in future also, if the source state decides to levy tax.

(A) Treaties are entered into for "Mutual Benefits"

Apart from the allocation of tax between the treaty partners, tax treaties can also help to resolve problems and can obtain benefits which cannot be achieved unilaterally.

Treaties are negotiated and entered into at a political level and have several considerations as their basis. Thus, treaties should be seen in the context of aiding commercial relations between treaty partners.

(B) A tax treaty provision may have an unequal effect4

State A imposes tax but state B does not impose a tax, yet wordings of the treaty are reciprocal – so that if and when State 'B' does introduce such a tax, the treaty rates would be operative in State 'B'. Until such time there would be an unequal effect. Moreover, State 'A' may make a distributive rule operative upon fulfilment of certain condition or comparable feature.

Interpretation of Tax Treaties

Tax treaties are signed between two sovereign nations by competent authorities under delegated powers from the respective Governments. Thus, an international agreement has to be respected and interpreted in accordance with the rules of international law as laid down in the Vienna Convention on Law of Treaties (VCLT). These rules of interpretation are not restricted to tax treaties but also apply to any treaty between two countries. Therefore, any dispute between two nations in respect of Article 25 relating to Mutual Agreement Procedure of the OECD/UN Model Conventions has to be solved in the light of the VCLT.

However, when it comes to application of a tax treaty in the domestic forum, the appellate authorities and the courts are primarily governed by the laws of the respective countries for interpretation.

In India, even before insertion of Section 90(2) by the Finance (No.2) Act, 1991, with retrospective effect from 1-4-1972, CBDT had clarified vide Circular No. 333 dated 2-4-1982 that where a specific provision is made in the DTAA, the provisions of the DTAA will prevail over the general provisions contained in the Act and where there is no specific provision in the DTAA, it is the basic law i.e. the provisions of the Act, that will govern the taxation of such income.

The Income-tax Act, 1961 provides that where the Indian Government has entered into DTAAs which are applicable to the taxpayers, then, the provisions of the Act shall apply to the extent they are more beneficial to the taxpayer.

[4] Tax Treaty Interpretation – The International Tax Treaties Service"

Interpretation of any statute, more so international tax treaties, requires that we follow some rules of interpretation. In subsequent paragraphs, we shall deal with rules of interpretation of tax treaties.

(1) Basic Principles of Interpretation of a Treaty

Principles or rules of interpretation of a tax treaty would be relevant only where terms or words used in treaties are ambiguous, vague or are such that different meanings are possible. If words are clear or unambiguous, then there is no need to resort to different rules for interpretation.

Prior to the Vienna Convention, treaties were interpreted according to the customary international law. Just as each country's legal system has its own canons of statutory construction and interpretation, likewise, several principles exist for the interpretation of treaties in customary international law. We would be discussing some of the rules of interpretation of Vienna Convention on law of Treaties in the later part of this chapter.

Some of the important principles of Customary International law in interpretation of tax treaties are as follows:

(i) Golden Rule – Objective Interpretation: Ideally, any term or word should be interpreted keeping its objective or ordinary or literal meaning in mind. The term has to be interpreted contextually.

Words and phrases are in the first instance to be construed according to their plain and natural meaning. However, if the grammatical interpretation would result in an absurdity, or in marked inconsistency with other portions of the treaty, or would clearly go beyond the intention of the parties, it should not be adopted[5].

(ii) Subjective Interpretation: Under this approach, the terms of a treaty are to be interpreted according to the common intention of the contracting parties at the time the treaty was concluded. The intention must be ascertained from the words used in the treaty and the context thereof.

In Abdul Razak A. Meman's case [2005] 276 ITR 306, the Authority for Advance Rulings [the AAR] relied on the speeches delivered by the Finance Ministers of India as well as UAE to arrive at the intention of parties in signing the India-UAE Tax Treaty.

(iii) Purposive Interpretation: In this approach the treaty is to be interpreted so as to facilitate the attainment of the aims and objectives of the treaty. This approach is also known as the 'objects and purpose' method.

In case of Union of India v. Azadi Bachao Andolan 263 ITR 706, the Supreme Court of India observed that "the principles adopted for interpretation of treaties are not the same as those in interpretation of statutory legislation. The interpretation of provisions of an international treaty, including one for double taxation relief, is that the treaties are entered into at a political level and have several considerations as their bases."

[5] Prof. J. G. Starke in Introduction to International Law 10th Edition

The Apex Court also agreed with the contention of the Appellant that "the preamble to the Indo-Mauritius DTAA recites that it is for 'encouragement of mutual trade and investment' and this aspect of the matter cannot be lost sight of while interpreting the treaty".

(iv) The Principle of Effectiveness: According to this principle, a treaty should be interpreted in a manner to have effect rather than make it void.

This principle, particularly stressed by the Permanent Court of International Justice, requires that the treaty should be given an interpretation which 'on the whole' will render the treaty 'most effective and useful', in other words, enabling the provisions of the treaty to work and to have their appropriate effects[6].

(v) Principle of *Contemporanea Expositio: A treaty's terms are normally to be interpreted on the basis of their meaning at the time the treaty was concluded. However, this is not a universal principle.

In Abdul Razak A. Meman's case [2005] 276 ITR 306, the AAR observed that "there can be little doubt that while interpreting treaties, regard should be had to material contemporanea exposition, which means that a statute is best explained by following the construction put upon it by judges at the time it was made, or soon after. This proposition is embodied in Article 32 of the Vienna Convention, referred to above, and is also referred to in the decision of the Hon'ble Supreme Court in K. P. Varghese v. ITO [1981] 131 ITR 597."

(vi) Liberal Construction: It is a general principle of construction with respect to treaties that they shall be liberally construed so as to carry out the apparent intention of the parties.

In John N. Gladden v. Her Majesty the Queen [7], the principle of liberal interpretation of tax treaties was reiterated by the Federal Court, which observed that "contrary to an ordinary taxing statute a tax treaty or convention must be given a liberal interpretation with a view to implementing the true intentions of the parties. A literal or legalistic interpretation must be avoided when the basic object of the treaty might be defeated or frustrated in so far as the particular item under consideration is concerned."

The Court further recognised that "we cannot expect to find the same nicety or strict definition as in modern documents, such as deeds, or Acts of Parliament, it has never been the habit of those engaged in diplomacy to use legal accuracy but rather to adopt more liberal terms."

(vii) Treaty as a Whole – Integrated Approach: A treaty should be construed as a whole and effect should be given to each word which would be construed in the same manner wherever it occurs. Any provision should not be interpreted in isolation; rather the entire treaty should be read as a whole to arrive at its object and purpose.

[6] Prof. J. G. Starke in Introduction to International Law 10th Edition

[7] 85 D.T.C. 5188 at 5190, Source: UOI v. Azadi Bachao Andolan 263 ITR 706 (SC)

(viii) Reasonableness and consistency[8] : Treaties should be given an interpretation in which the reasonable meaning of words and phrases is preferred, and in which a consistent meaning is given to different portions of the instrument. In accordance with the principles of consistency, treaties should be interpreted in the light of existing international law.

An important aspect to be noted regarding the rules of interpretation is that they are not rules of law and are not to be applied like the rules enacted by the legislature in an Interpretation Act.

(2) Extrinsic Aids to Interpretation of a Tax Treaty

A wide range of extrinsic material is permitted to be used in interpretation of tax treaties. According to Article 32 of the Vienna Convention, the supplementary means of interpretation include the preparatory work of the treaty and the circumstances of its conclusion.

According to Prof. Starke, one may resort to following extrinsic aids to interpret a tax treaty provided that clear words are not thereby contradicted:

(i) Interpretative Protocols, Resolutions and Committee Reports, setting out agreed interpretations;

(ii) A subsequent agreement between the parties regarding the interpretation of the treaty or the application of its provisions [Art. 31(3) of the VCLT];

(iii) Subsequent conduct of the state parties, as evidence of the intention of the parties and their conception of the treaty;

(iv) Other treaties, in pari materia (i.e., relating to the same subject matter), in case of doubt.

(i) Provisions in Parallel Tax Treaties

If the language used in two tax treaties (say treaties: X and Y) are same and one treaty is more elaborative or clear in its meaning (say treaty X) can one rely on the interpretation/explanations provided in a treaty X while applying provisions of a treaty Y?

The views of the Indian Judiciary are, however, not consistent in this respect. There are contradictory judgments by Indian courts/Tribunal in this regard.

(ii) International Articles/Essays/Reports

International Article/Essays/Reports are referred as extrinsic aid for interpretation of tax treaties. Like, in case of CIT v. Vishakhapatnam Port Trust (1983) 144 ITR 146 (AP), the High Court obtained “useful material” through international articles.

(iii) Cahiers published by International Fiscal Association (IFA), Netherlands

“Cahiers de Droit Fiscal International” is the main publication of the IFA, which is published annually and deals with two major topics each year. Cahiers were relied upon in case of Azadi Bachao Andolan’s (supra) case by the Supreme Court.

[8] Prof. J. G. Starke in Introduction to International Law 10th Edition

(iv) Protocol

Protocol is like a supplement to the treaty. In many treaties, in order to put certain matters beyond doubt, there is a protocol annexed at the end of the treaty, which clarifies borderline issues.

A protocol is an integral part of a tax treaty and has the same binding force as the main clauses therein.

Protocol to India France treaty contains the Most Favoured Nation Clause. Thus, one must refer to protocol before arriving at any final conclusion in respect of any tax treaty provision.

MFN clause is usually found in Protocols and Exchange of Notes to DTCs. Under this clause a country agrees to extend the benefits to the residents of the other country, which it had (first country) promised to the residents of third country. It tries to avoid discrimination between residents of different countries.

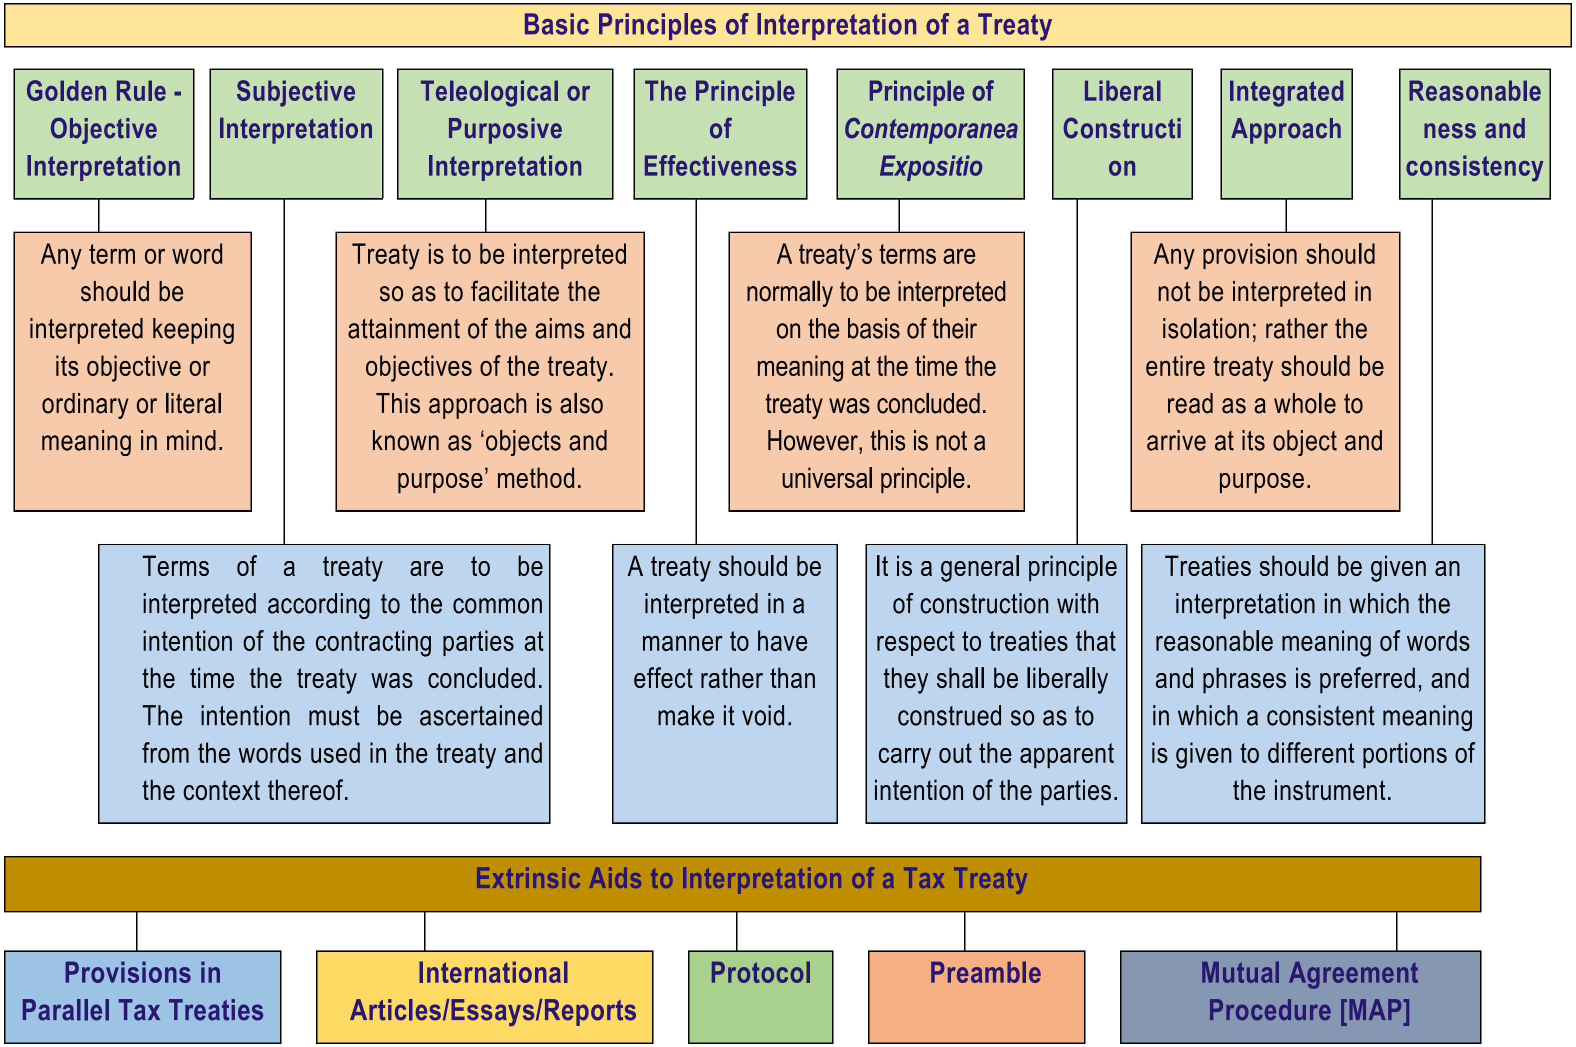
Normally, the benefit under this clause is restricted to a specific group like OECD countries or developing countries. The nature of benefits under MFN clause could either be application of lower rate of tax or narrowing the scope of the income liable to tax or allowing higher deduction in respect of executive and general administrative expenses of head office.

(v) Preamble

Preamble to a tax treaty could guide in interpretation of a tax treaty. In case of Azadi Bachao Andolan, the Apex Court observed that 'the preamble to the Indo-Mauritius Double Tax Avoidance Treaty recites that it is for the 'encouragement of mutual trade and investment' and this aspect of the matter cannot be lost sight of while interpreting the treaty'. These observations are very significant whereby the Apex Court has upheld 'economic considerations' as one of the objectives of a Tax Treaty.

(vi) Mutual Agreement Procedure [MAP]

MAP helps to interpret any ambiguous term/provision through bilateral negotiations. MAP is more authentic than other aids as officials of both countries are in possession of materials/documents exchanged at the time of signing the tax treaty which would clearly indicate the object or purpose of a particular provision. Successful MAPs also serve as precedence in case of subsequent applications.



Basic Principles of Interpretation of a Treaty

Golden Rule - Objective Interpretation

Any term or word should be interpreted keeping its objective or ordinary or literal meaning in mind.

Subjective Interpretation

Terms of a treaty are to be interpreted according to the common intention of the contracting parties at the time the treaty was concluded. The intention must be ascertained from the words used in the treaty and the context thereof.

Teleological or Purposive Interpretation

Treaty is to be interpreted so as to facilitate the attainment of the aims and objectives of the treaty. This approach is also known as ‘objects and purpose’ method.

The Principle of Effectiveness

A treaty should be interpreted in a manner to have effect rather than make it void.

Principle of Contemporanea Expositio

A treaty’s terms are normally to be interpreted on the basis of their meaning at the time the treaty was concluded. However, this is not a universal principle.

Liberal Construction

It is a general principle of construction with respect to treaties that they shall be liberally construed so as to carry out the apparent intention of the parties.

Integrated Approach

Any provision should not be interpreted in isolation; rather the entire treaty should be read as a whole to arrive at its object and purpose.

Reasonableness and consistency

Treaties should be given an interpretation in which the reasonable meaning of words and phrases is preferred, and in which a consistent meaning is given to different portions of the instrument.

(3) Commentaries on OECD/UN Models and their importance

Interpretation of any statute, more so international tax treaties requires that we follow some rules of interpretation. Commentaries are one of the important rules of interpretation of tax treaties.

There are two commentaries available – one by OECD and the other by UN, based on their respective models. OECD Commentary is authentic and revised from time to time. UN Commentary is by and large based on OECD commentary. UN commentary was published in 1980 and has been revised from time to time. One can refer to the commentaries for interpretation and application of various provision contained in a DTAA.

Views expressed in the commentaries carry great authority. Where Contracting States adopt the text of the Article as per OECD Model convention without any change, and if these countries happen to be OECD Countries, the OECD commentary is directly applicable. In case of a DTAA between developed and developing countries, normally UN model is followed. UN Model and UN Commentary both being largely based on OECD Model and Commentary respectively, OECD Commentary is also quite helpful in interpretation of treaties based on UN Model.

OECD Model Commentary has been widely used in interpretation of tax treaties. The Commentary on the OECD Model Convention states that: “the Commentaries have been cited in the published decisions of the courts of the great majority of Member countries. In many decisions, the Commentaries have been extensively quoted and analysed, and have frequently played a key role in the judge’s deliberations.”

The OECD has framed a model convention to guide countries to draft DTAAs. In the Azadi Bachao Andolan case, the Supreme Court has made reference to the OECD convention while interpreting terms used in DTAA.

Both UN and OECD Model Commentaries are a great help in interpretation of tax treaties. Their importance in interpretation of tax treaties can hardly be over emphasized [Credit Lyonnais v. DCIT (2005) 94 ITD 401 (Mum)]. OECD, however, plays a greater role in providing standardized or systematized approach in interpretation of tax treaties.

Model Commentaries give the authoritative interpretation of the provisions of DTAAs [Sonata Information Technology Ltd. v. ACIT (2006) 103 ITD 324 (Bang)]

(4) Foreign Courts’ Decisions

In CIT v. Vishakhapatnam Port Trust’s case [1983] 144 ITR 146, the Andhra Pradesh High Court observed that, “in view of the standard OECD Models which are being used in various countries, a new area of genuine ‘international tax law’ is now in the process of developing. Any person interpreting a tax treaty must now consider decisions and rulings worldwide relating to similar treaties. The maintenance of uniformity in the interpretation of a rule after its international adoption is just as important as the initial removal of divergences. Therefore, the judgments rendered by courts in other countries or rulings given by other tax authorities would be relevant.”

In the under-noted cases, foreign court cases have extensively been quoted for interpretation of treaty provisions:

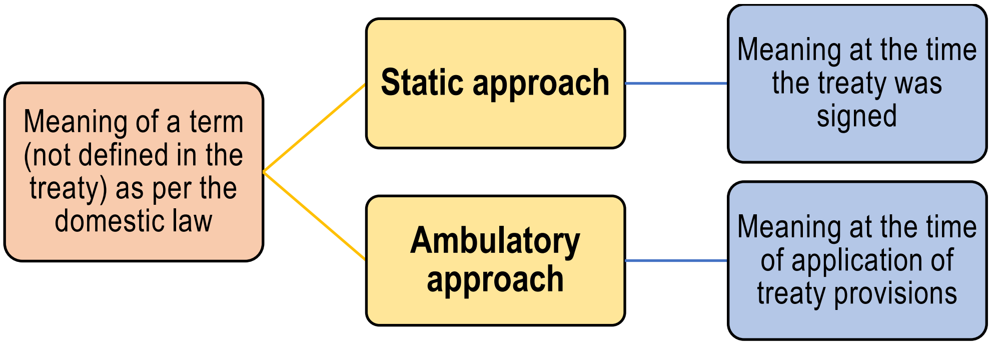
Union of India v. Azadi Bachao Andolan [2003] 263 ITR 706 (SC)

CIT v. Vishakhapatnam Port Trust [1983] 144 ITR 146

Abdul Razak A. Meman's case [2005] 276 ITR 306(AAR)

(5) Ambulatory v. Static Approach

Whenever a reference is made in a treaty to the provisions of domestic tax laws for assigning meaning to a particular term, a question often arises what meaning to be assigned to the said term – the one which prevailed on the date of signing a tax treaty or the one prevailing on the date of application of a tax treaty. There are two views on the subject, namely, Static and Ambulatory.



Meaning of a term (not defined in the treaty) as per the domestic law
Static approach
Meaning at the time the treaty was signed
Ambulatory approach
Meaning at the time of application of treaty provisions

All Model Commentaries including the Technical Explanation on US Model Tax Convention favors ambulatory approach, however with one caution and that is ambulatory approach cannot be applied when there is a radical amendment in the domestic law thereby changing the sum and substance of the term.

India-Australia Treaty, in Article 3(2) adds the expression "from time to time in force" to provide for an "ambulatory" interpretation.

6.5 ROLE OF VIENNA CONVENTION IN APPLICATION AND INTERPRETATION OF TAX TREATIES

The International Law Commission initiated the work on the Vienna Convention on Law of Treaties in the year 1949 which was completed in the year 1969. It came into force in the year 1980. As of January, 2018, it was ratified by 116 Countries.

Since tax treaty is a part of international law, its interpretation should be based on certain set of principles and rules of interpretation. The Vienna Convention on Law of Treaties provides the basic rules of interpretation of any international agreement (including a tax treaty). Therefore, it would be worthy to understand some of the Articles of the Vienna Convention of Law of Treaties which would help appreciate the manner of application and interpretation of tax treaties.

Principles enunciated in the Vienna Convention on Law of Treaties[9]

Article No.	Article Heading	Principle enunciated
26	Pacta Sunt Servanda (in good faith)	Every treaty in force is binding upon the parties and must be followed by them in good faith.
28	Non-retroactivity of treaties	Unless a different intention appears from the treaty or is otherwise established, treaty provisions do not bind a party in relation to any act or fact which took place or any situation which ceased to exist before the date of the entry into force of the treaty with respect to that party. In other words, unless otherwise provided, treaties cannot have retrospective application
29	Territorial Scope of Treaties	Unless a different intention appears from the treaty or is otherwise established, a treaty is binding upon each party in respect of its entire territory.
31	General Rule of Interpretation	• A treaty shall be interpreted in good faith in accordance with the ordinary meaning to be given to the terms thereof in the context and in the light of its object and purpose. • The context for the purpose of interpretation of a treaty shall comprise, in addition to the text, including its preamble and annexure (a) Any agreement relating to the treaty which was made between all the parties in connection with the conclusion of the treaty; (b) Any instrument which was made by one or more parties in connection with the conclusion of the treaty and accepted by the other parties as an instrument related thereto. • The following shall be taken into account, together with the context in that: (a) Any subsequent agreement between the parties regarding the interpretation of the treaty or the application of its provisions; (b) Any subsequent practice in the application of the treaty which establishes the agreement of the parties regarding its interpretation; (c) Any relevant rules of international law applicable to relation between the parties.

		• A special meaning shall be given to a term if it is established that the parties so intended.
32	Supplementary means of interpretation	Recourse may be had to supplementary means of interpretation, including the preparatory work of the treaty and the circumstances of its conclusion, in order to confirm the meaning resulting from the application of Article 31, or to determine the meaning when the interpretation according to Article 31: (a) leaves the meaning ambiguous or obscure; or (b) leads to a result which is manifestly absurd or unreasonable.
33	Interpretation of Treaties Authenticated in two or more languages	• When a treaty has been authenticated in two or more languages, the text is equally authoritative in each language, unless the treaty provides or the parties agree that, in case of divergence, a particular text shall prevail. • A version of the treaty in a language other than the one of those in which the text was authenticated shall be considered an authentic text only if the treaty so provides or the parties so agree. • The terms of the treaty are presumed to have the same meaning in each authentic text. • Except where a particular text prevails in accordance with paragraph 1, when a comparison of the authentic texts discloses a difference in meaning which the application of Articles 31 and 32 does not remove, the meaning which best reconciles the texts, having regard to the object and purpose of the treaty, shall be adopted.
34	General Rule regarding third states	A treaty does not create either obligations or rights for a third State without its consent.
42	Validity and Continuance in force of treaties	• The validity of a treaty or of the consent of a State to be bound by a treaty may be impeached only through the application of the Convention· • The termination of a treaty, its denunciation or the withdrawal of a party, may take place only as a result of the application of the provisions of the treaty or of the Convention. The same rule applies to suspension of the operation of a treaty
60	Termination or Suspension of the	• A material breach of a bilateral treaty by one of the

	operation of a treaty as a consequence of a breach	parties entitles the other to invoke the breach as a ground for terminating the treaty or suspending its operation in whole or in part. • A material breach of a multilateral treaty by one of the parties entitles: (a) the other parties by unanimous agreement to suspend the operation of the treaty in whole or in part or to terminate it either: (i) in the relations amongst themselves and the defaulting State, or (ii) as between all the parties; (b) a party specially affected by the breach to invoke it as a ground for suspending the operation of the treaty in whole or in part in the relations between itself and the defaulting State; (c) any party other than the defaulting State to invoke the breach as a ground for suspending the operation of the treaty in whole or in part with respect to itself if the treaty is of such a character that a material breach of its provisions by one party radically changes the position of every other party with respect to further performance of its obligations under the treaty. • A material breach of a treaty, for the purposes of this Article, consists in: (a) a repudiation of the treaty not sanctioned by the Convention; or (b) the violation of a provision essential to the accomplishment of the object or purpose of the treaty. • The foregoing paragraphs are without prejudice to any provision in the treaty applicable in the event of a breach.
61	Supervening impossibility of performance	• A party may invoke the impossibility of performing provision of a treaty as a ground for terminating or withdrawing from it, if the impossibility results from the permanent disappearance or destruction of an object indispensable for the execution of the treaty. If the impossibility is temporary, it may be invoked only as a ground for suspending its operation.

		• Impossibility of performance may not be invoked by a party as a ground for terminating, withdrawing from or suspending the operation of a treaty if the impossibility is the result of a breach by that party either of an obligation under the treaty or of any other international obligation owed to any other party thereto.
62	Fundamental change of circumstances	• A fundamental change of circumstances which has occurred with regard to those existing at the time of the conclusion of a treaty, and which was not foreseen by the parties, may not be invoked as a ground for terminating or withdrawing from the treaty unless – (a) the existence of those circumstances constituted an essential basis of the consent of the parties to be bound by the treaty; and (b) the effect of the change is radically to transform the extent of obligations still to be performed under the treaty. • A fundamental change of circumstances may not be invoked as a ground for terminating or withdrawing from a treaty – (a) if the treaty establishes a boundary; or (b) if the fundamental change is the result of a breach by the party invoking it either of an obligation under the treaty or of any other international obligation owed to any other party to the treaty. • If, under the foregoing paragraphs, a party may invoke a fundamental change of circumstances as a ground for terminating or withdrawing from a treaty it may also invoke the change as a ground for suspending its operation.
64	Emergence of new peremptory norm of general international law	If a new peremptory norm of general international law emerges, any existing treaty which is in conflict with that norm becomes void and stands terminated

Question 1

What do you mean by double taxation? Discuss the connecting factors which lead to double taxation.

Answer

The taxability of a foreign entity in any country depends upon two distinct factors, namely, whether it is doing business with that country or in that country. Internationally, the term used to determine the jurisdiction for taxation is "connecting factors". There are two types of connecting factors, namely, "Residence" and "Source". It means a company can be subject to tax either on its residence link or its source link with a country. Broadly, if a company is doing business with another country (i.e. host/source country), then it would be subject to tax in its home country alone, based on its residence link. However, if a company is doing business in a host/source country, then, besides being taxed in the home country on the basis of its residence link, it will also be taxed in the host country on the basis of its source link.

- Juridical double taxation: When source rules overlap, double taxation may arise i.e. tax is imposed by two or more countries as per their domestic laws in respect of the same transaction, income arises or is deemed to arise in their respective jurisdictions. This is known as "juridical double taxation".

  In order to avoid such double taxation, a company can invoke provisions of Double Taxation Avoidance Agreements (DTAAs) (also known as Tax Treaty or Double Taxation Convention–DTC) with the host/source country, or in the absence of such an agreement, an Indian company can invoke provisions of section 91, providing unilateral relief in the event of double taxation.

- Economic double taxation: 'Economic double taxation' happens when the same transaction, item of income or capital is taxed in two or more states but in hands of different persons (because of lack of subject identity)

Question 2

"In addition to allocating the taxing rights and elimination of double taxation, there are various other important considerations while entering into tax treaty". Elucidate.

Answer

In addition to allocating the taxing rights and elimination of double taxation, there are various other important considerations while entering into a tax treaty, as mentioned below:

- Ensuring non-discrimination between residents and non-residents
- Resolution of disputes arising on account of different interpretation of tax treaty by the treaty partner.

- Providing assistance in the collection of the fair and legitimate share of tax.

Further, in addition to above, there are some other principles which must be considered by countries in their tax system –

(i) Equity and fairness: Same income earned by different taxpayers must be taxed at the same rate regardless of the source of income.

(ii) Neutrality and efficiency: Neutrality factor provides that economic processes should not be affected by external factors such as taxation. Neutrality is two-fold.

(a) Capital export neutrality and

(b) Capital import neutrality (CIN).

Capital export neutrality (CEN) provides that business decision must not be affected by tax factors between the country of residence and the target country; whereas CIN provides that the level of tax imposed on non-residents as well as the residents must be similar.

(iii) Promotion of mutual economic relation, trade and investment: In some cases, it is observed that avoidance of double taxation is not the only objective. The other objective may be to give impetus to a country's overall economic growth and development.

Question 3

What is the General Rule of Interpretation under Vienna Convention of Law of Treaties?

Answer

Article 31 of Vienna Convention of Law of Treaties contains the General Rule of Interpretation. It lays down that following general rule of interpretation:

- A treaty shall be interpreted in good faith in accordance with the ordinary meaning to be given to the terms thereof in the context and in the light of its object and purpose.
- The context for the purpose of interpretation of a treaty shall comprise, in addition to the text, including its preamble and annexure

  (a) Any agreement relating to the treaty which was made between all the parties in connection with the conclusion of the treaty;

  (b) Any instrument which was made by one or more parties in connection with the conclusion of the treaty and accepted by the other parties as an instrument related thereto.

- The following shall be taken into account, together with the context in that:

  (a) Any subsequent agreement between the parties regarding the interpretation of the treaty or the application of its provisions;

(b) Any subsequent practice in the application of the treaty which establishes the agreement of the parties regarding its interpretation;

(c) Any relevant rules of international law applicable to relation between the parties.

- A special meaning shall be given to a term if it is established that the parties so intended.

Question 4

What are the Extrinsic Aids to interpretation of a tax treaty?

Answer

A wide range of extrinsic material is permitted to be used in interpretation of tax treaties. According to Article 32 of the Vienna Convention, the supplementary means of interpretation include the preparatory work of the treaty and the circumstances of its conclusion.

According to Prof. Starke, one may resort to following extrinsic aids to interpret a tax treaty provided that clear words are not thereby contradicted:

(i) Interpretative Protocols, Resolutions and Committee Reports, setting out agreed interpretations;

(ii) A subsequent agreement between the parties regarding the interpretation of the treaty or the application of its provisions [Art. 31(3) of the VCLT];

(iii) Subsequent conduct of the state parties, as evidence of the intention of the parties and their conception of the treaty;

(iv) Other treaties, in pari materia (i.e., relating to the same subject matter), in case of doubt.

Provisions in Parallel Tax Treaties

If the language used in two tax treaties (say treaties: X and Y) are same and one treaty is more elaborative or clear in its meaning (say treaty X) can one rely on the interpretation/explanations provided in a treaty X while applying provisions of a treaty Y?

However, the views of the Indian Judiciary are not consistent in this respect. There are contradictory judgments by Indian courts/tribunal in this regard.

International Articles/Essays/Reports

International Article/Essays/Reports are referred as extrinsic aid for interpretation of tax treaties. Like, in case of CIT v. Vishakhapatnam Port Trust (1983) 144 ITR 146 (AP), the High Court obtained "useful material" through international articles.

Cahiers published by International Fiscal Association (IFA), Netherlands

"Cahiers de Droit Fiscal International" is the main publication of the IFA, which is published annually and deals with two major topics each year. Cahiers were relied upon in case of Azadi Bachao Andolan's (supra) case by the Supreme Court.

Protocol

Protocol is like a supplement to the treaty. In many treaties, in order to put certain matters beyond doubt, there is a protocol annexed at the end of the treaty, which clarifies borderline issues.

A protocol is an integral part of a tax treaty and has the same binding force as the main clauses therein.

Protocol to India France treaty contains the Most Favoured Nation Clause. Thus, one must refer to protocol before arriving at any final conclusion in respect of any tax treaty provision.

Preamble

Preamble to a tax treaty could guide in interpretation of a tax treaty. In case of Azadi Bachao Andolan, the Apex Court observed that 'the preamble to the Indo-Mauritius Double Tax Avoidance Treaty recites that it is for the 'encouragement of mutual trade and investment' and this aspect of the matter cannot be lost sight of while interpreting the treaty'. These observations are very significant whereby the Apex Court has upheld 'economic considerations' as one of the objectives of a Tax Treaty.

Mutual Agreement Procedure [MAP]

MAP helps to interpret any ambiguous term/provision through bilateral negotiations. MAP is more authentic than other aids as officials of both countries are in possession of materials/documents exchanged at the time of signing the tax treaty which would clearly indicate the object or purpose of a particular provision. Successful MAPs also serve as precedence in case of subsequent applications.

CHAPTER 7

FUNDAMENTALS OF BEPS

LEARNING OUTCOMES

After studying this chapter, you would be able to -

- ❑ gain a broad understanding of the concept of Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS);
- ❑ appreciate the significance of action plans of BEPS;
- ❑ comprehend and appreciate the provisions incorporated in the Indian tax laws in line with the different Action Plans of BEPS.

7.1 BACKGROUND

Impact of Globalisation

Globalisation has benefited our domestic economies, boosted trade and increased foreign direct investments in many countries. The unrestricted movement of capital and labour, the shift of manufacturing bases from high-cost to low-cost locations, the gradual removal of trade barriers, technological and telecommunication developments, and the ever-increasing importance of managing risks and of developing, protecting and exploiting intellectual property, have had an important impact on the way cross-border activities take place. In this way, it accelerated growth, created jobs and fostered innovation. Globalisation is not new, but the pace of integration of national economies and markets has increased substantially in recent years. It has a significant impact on a country's corporate income tax regimes.

Growth of E-Commerce and consequent aggressive tax planning

Way back in 1920s, the League of Nations recognised that the interaction of domestic tax systems can lead to double taxation with adverse effects on growth and global prosperity. Globally, countries concur on the need to eliminate double taxation and the need to achieve this on the basis of accepted international laws that are clear and predictable, giving certainty to both governments and businesses. International tax law is, therefore, a pillar in facilitating the development of the global economy. With the economy, the enterprises also became more globally integrated. Multi-national enterprises (MNE) now represent a significant proportion of global GDP. Further, intra-firm trade comprises of a growing proportion of overall trade. Also, the increasing significance of the service component of the economy, and of digital products which are deliverable over the Internet, has made it much easier for businesses to locate many productive activities in geographic locations that are distant from the physical location of their customers. These developments have been accompanied by the increasing sophistication of tax planners in identifying and exploiting the legal arbitrage opportunities and the boundaries of acceptable tax planning, thus, encouraging MNEs to minimise their tax burden by resorting to aggressive tax planning.

Adverse Effects of BEPS

Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS) refers to tax planning strategies that exploit gaps and mismatches in tax rules to make profits 'disappear' for tax purposes or to shift profits to locations where there is little or no real activity but the taxes are low, resulting in little or no overall corporate tax being paid. This has become a critical issue since governments have to cope with less revenue and a higher cost to ensure compliance. Moreover, BEPS undermines the integrity of the tax system, as reporting of low corporate taxes is considered to be unfair. In developing countries, the lack of tax revenue leads to significant under-funding of public investment that could help foster economic growth. Further, when tax laws permit businesses to reduce their tax burden by shifting their income away from jurisdictions where income producing activities are conducted, other taxpayers, especially individual taxpayers in that jurisdiction bear a greater share of the burden. This gives rise to tax fairness issues on account of individuals having to bear a higher tax burden. Also, enterprises that operate only in domestic markets, including family-owned businesses or new innovative businesses, may have difficulty competing with MNEs that have the ability to shift their profits across borders to avoid or reduce tax. Fair competition is harmed by the distortions induced by BEPS.

Need for international collaboration to protect tax sovereignty of its countries

Taxation is at the core of countries' sovereignty, but the interaction of domestic tax laws in certain cases leads to gaps and frictions. While developing their domestic tax laws, sovereign states may not adequately take into consideration the effect of other countries' laws. The interaction of separate sets of laws enforced by sovereign countries causes frictions, including potential double taxation for corporations operating in many countries. It also causes gaps, in cases where corporate income is untaxed, both in the country of source and in the country of residence, or is taxed only at nominal rates. In the domestic context, coherence is generally achieved through a principle of matching – a payment that is deductible by the payer is usually taxable in the hands of the recipient, unless explicitly exempted. There is no similar principle of coherence at the international level, which leaves considerable scope for arbitrage by taxpayers, though sovereign states have united to ensure coherence in a narrow field, namely, to prevent double taxation. BEPS relates primarily to instances where the interaction of different tax rules leads to double non-taxation. It also relates to arrangements that achieve no or low taxation by shifting profits away from the jurisdictions where the activities creating those profits take place. International standards have tried to reduce these frictions in a manner that respects tax sovereignty; however, gaps still remain. Therefore, there is a need for countries to collaborate on tax matters so that they are able to get their due share of taxes.

8.2 OVERVIEW OF BEPS

In the background of the above repercussions, in February 2013, the OECD published a report on "Addressing Base Erosion and Profit Shifting" iterating the need for analyzing the issue of tax base erosion and profit shifting by global corporations. The OECD followed it up with publishing draft Action Plan on Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS Action Plan) in July 2013 which came to final fruition in October 2015. The BEPS action plan identifies fifteen actions to address BEPS in a comprehensive manner and sets a deadline to implement those actions.

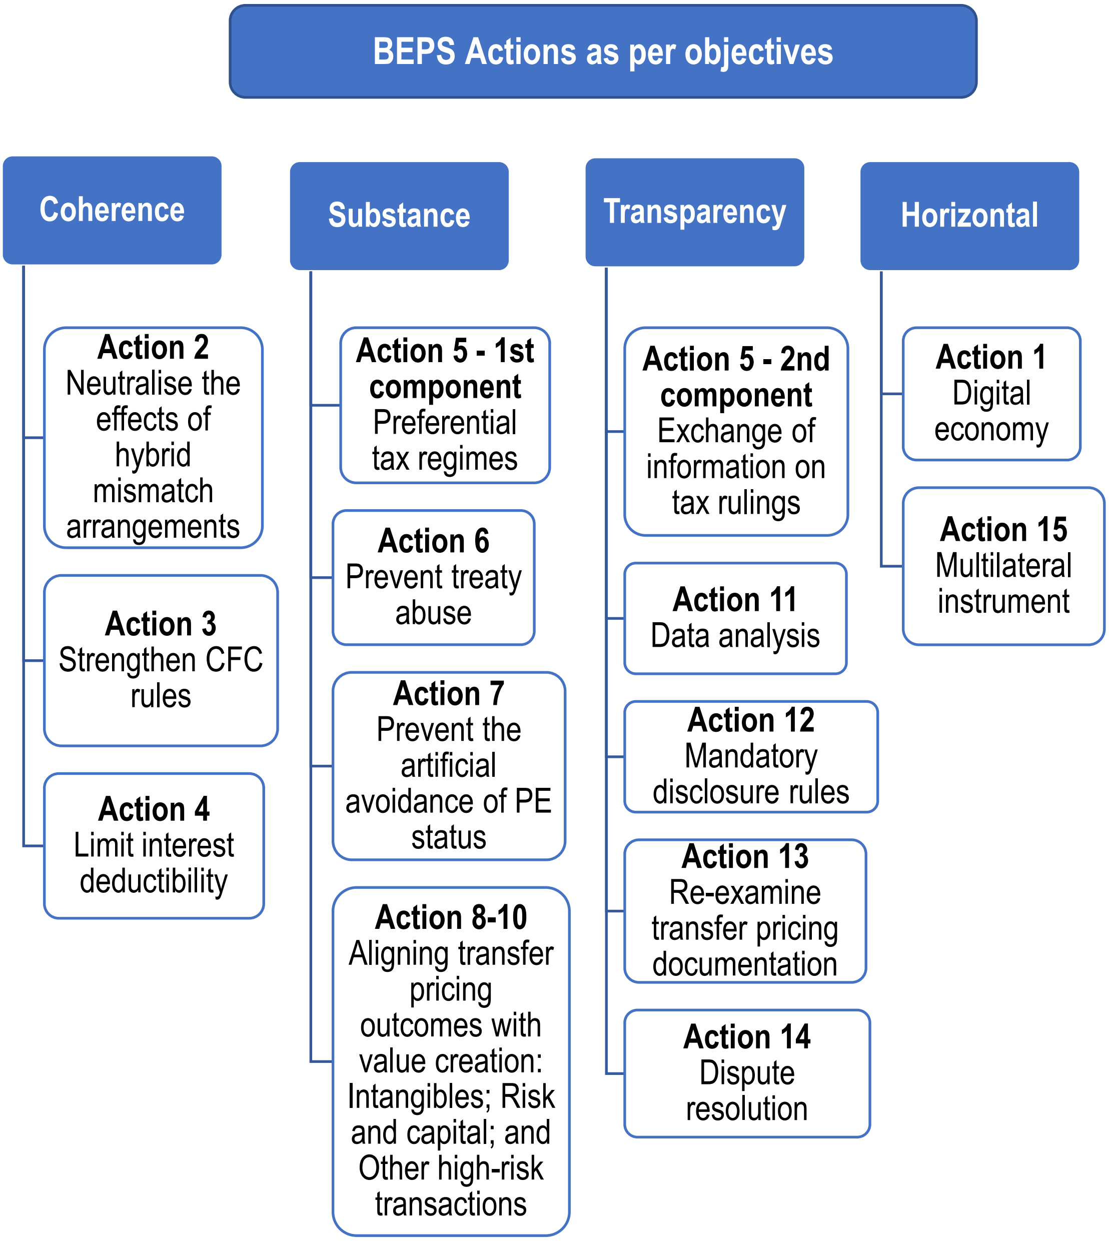
The Action Plans were structured around three fundamental pillars viz.:

(i) Introducing coherence in the domestic rules that affect cross-border activities.

(ii) Reinforcing of 'substance' requirements in existing international standards; Alignment of taxation with location of value creation and economic activity; and

(iii) Improving transparency and tax certainty.

A brief classification of the various action plans based on the fundamental pillars is as under:



BEPS Actions as per objectives

Coherence

Action 2 Neutralise the effects of hybrid mismatch arrangements

Action 3 Strengthen CFC rules

Action 4 Limit interest deductibility

Substance

Action 5 - 1st component Preferential tax regimes

Action 6 Prevent treaty abuse

Action 7 Prevent the artificial avoidance of PE status

Action 8-10 Aligning transfer pricing outcomes with value creation: Intangibles; Risk and capital; and Other high-risk transactions

Transparency

Action 5 - 2nd component Exchange of information on tax rulings

Action 11 Data analysis

Action 12 Mandatory disclosure rules

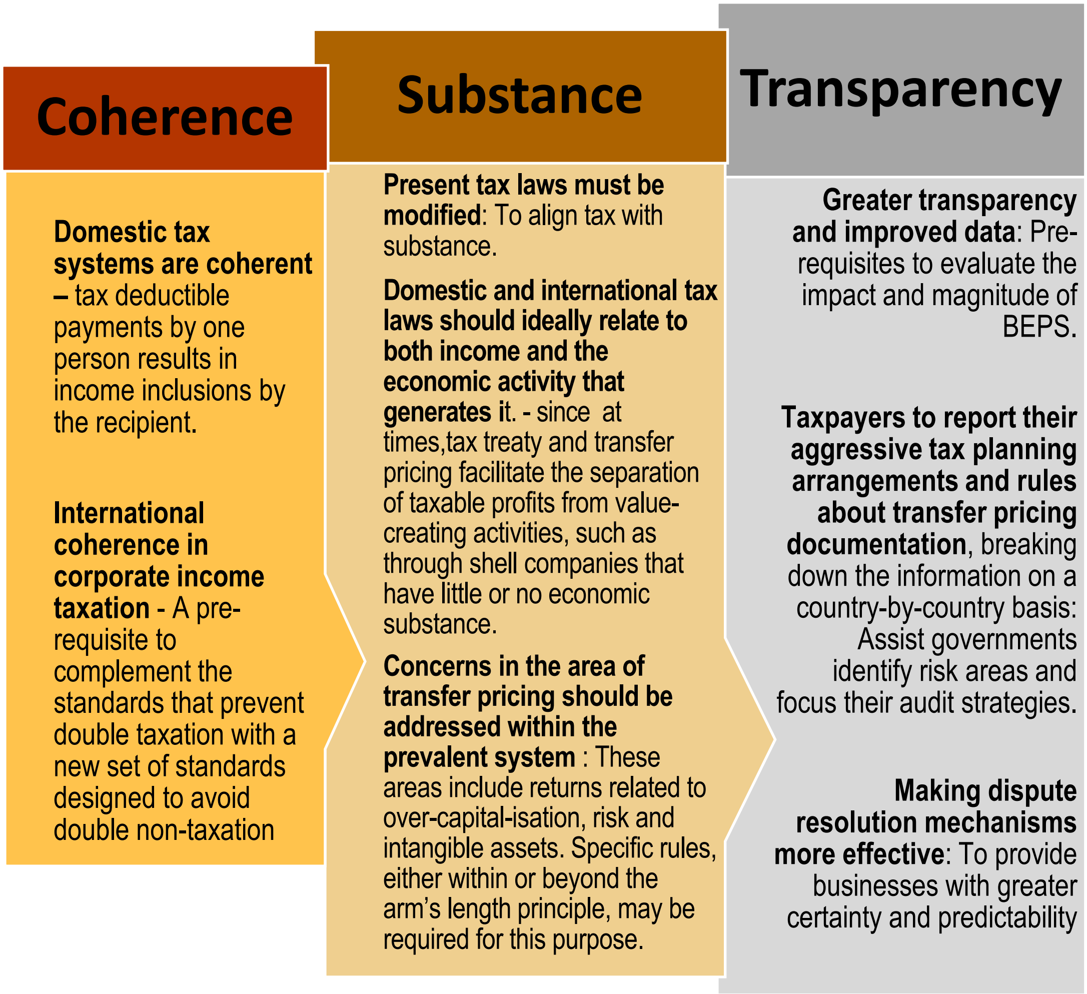
Action 13 Re-examine transfer pricing documentation

Action 14 Dispute resolution

Horizontal

Action 1 Digital economy

Action 15 Multilateral instrument



Coherence

Domestic tax systems are coherent – tax deductible payments by one person results in income inclusions by the recipient.

International coherence in corporate income taxation - A pre-requisite to complement the standards that prevent double taxation with a new set of standards designed to avoid double non-taxation

Substance

Present tax laws must be modified: To align tax with substance.

Domestic and international tax laws should ideally relate to both income and the economic activity that generates it. - since at times,tax treaty and transfer pricing facilitate the separation of taxable profits from value-creating activities, such as through shell companies that have little or no economic substance.

Concerns in the area of transfer pricing should be addressed within the prevalent system : These areas include returns related to over-capital-isation, risk and intangible assets. Specific rules, either within or beyond the arm's length principle, may be required for this purpose.

Transparency

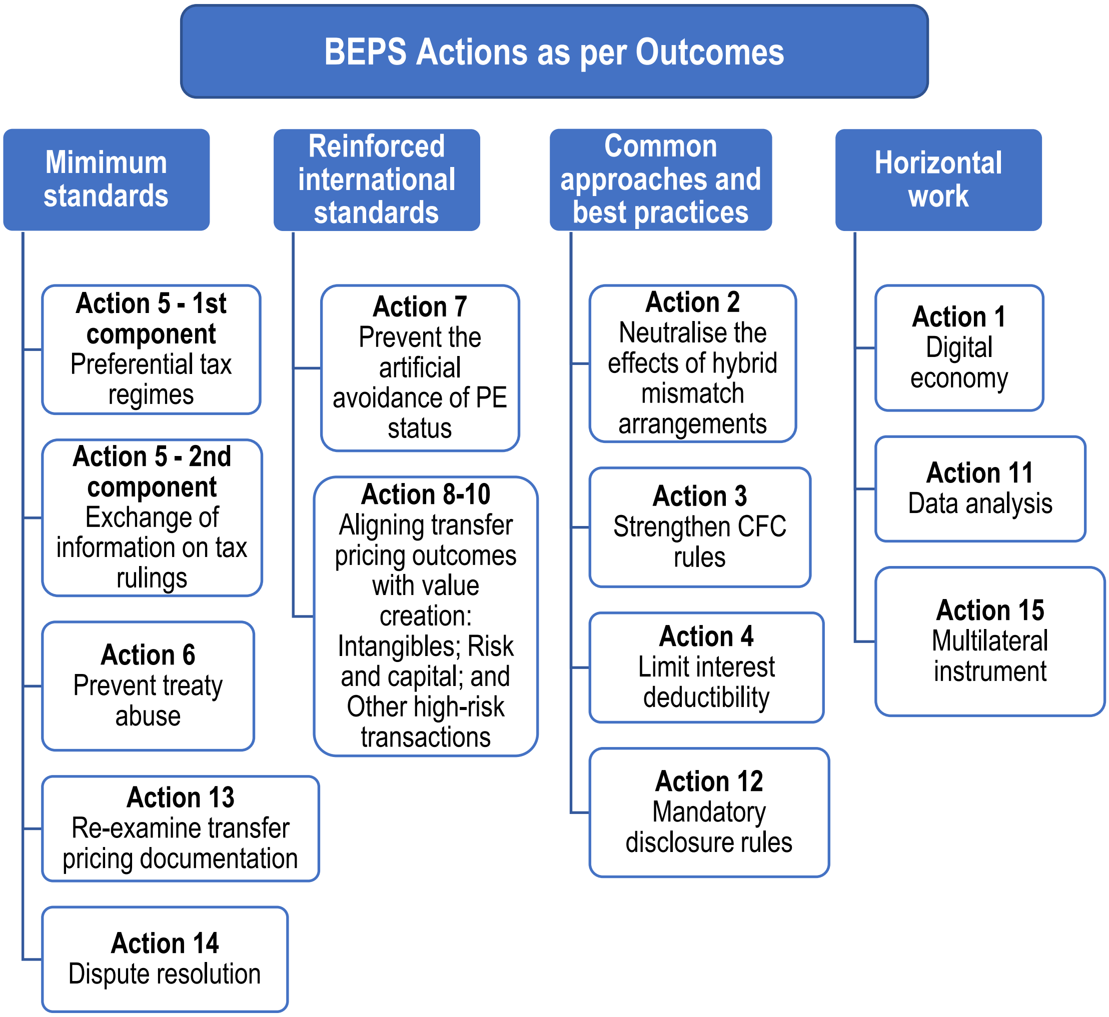
Greater transparency and improved data: Pre-requisites to evaluate the impact and magnitude of BEPS.

Taxpayers to report their aggressive tax planning arrangements and rules about transfer pricing documentation, breaking down the information on a country-by-country basis: Assist governments identify risk areas and focus their audit strategies.

Making dispute resolution mechanisms more effective: To provide businesses with greater certainty and predictability

The BEPS measures range from new minimum standards to a revision of pre-existing international standards, and to common approaches which will facilitate the convergence of national rules and guidance drawing on best practices.

A brief classification of the various action plans based on the basis of outcomes is as under:



BEPS Actions as per Outcomes

Mimimum standards

- Action 5 - 1st component Preferential tax regimes
- Action 5 - 2nd component Exchange of information on tax rulings
- Action 6 Prevent treaty abuse
- Action 13 Re-examine transfer pricing documentation
- Action 14 Dispute resolution

Reinforced international standards

- Action 7 Prevent the artificial avoidance of PE status
- Action 8-10 Aligning transfer pricing outcomes with value creation: Intangibles; Risk and capital; and Other high-risk transactions

Common approaches and best practices

- Action 2 Neutralise the effects of hybrid mismatch arrangements
- Action 3 Strengthen CFC rules
- Action 4 Limit interest deductibility
- Action 12 Mandatory disclosure rules

Horizontal work

- Action 1 Digital economy
- Action 11 Data analysis
- Action 15 Multilateral instrument

An unprecedented amount of interest and participation has been witnessed by OECD with more than sixty countries, both OECD members and G-20 countries, being directly involved as a part of technical groups in the development of congruent international tax standards. The Inclusive Framework on BEPS works to ensure that the international tax framework for MNEs remains relevant for today and the future, thereby promoting economic efficiency and global welfare. It will also ensure that governments continue to efficiently raise revenues not only from traditional but also from digital businesses, both for direct tax and indirect tax purposes.

The summary explanatory statement indicates the level of political commitment by OECD, G20 and other States involved in the 2015 work to the various reports. The OECD has iterated the following terms to indicate the commitment by various participant countries:

New minimum standard - New minimum standard implies application of a new rule to be implemented by all states, since non-implementation may result in negative spill overs (including adverse impact of competitiveness) on other countries. Each of the four BEPS minimum standards [namely, Actions 5, 6, 13 and 14] is subject to peer review in order to ensure timely and accurate implementation and thus safeguard the level playing field. All members of the Inclusive Framework on BEPS commit to implementing the minimum standards, and commit to participating in the peer review.

Revision of a standard which already exists – Existing standards have been updated and will be implemented but with the caveat that all BEPS participants have not endorsed the underlying standards on tax treaties or transfer pricing; and Best practice – A best practice is not a standard but optional recommendation for states to follow. Guidance based on best practices will support those countries proposing to act in the areas of mandatory disclosure initiatives or controlled foreign company (CFC) legislation.

(1) ACTION PLAN 1 – ADDRESSING THE CHALLENGES OF THE DIGITAL ECONOMY

Digital economy: Dissolving link between income-producing activity and physical location

At present, in the digital domain, business may be conducted without regard to national boundaries and may dissolve the link between an income-producing activity and a specific location. Hence, business in digital domain doesn’t actually occur in any physical location but instead takes place in "cyberspace." Given the rise of e-commerce, an entire digital economy has emerged in the last decade. Since there is a concept of ‘intangibility’ attached to the digital model of business, tax authorities often faced challenges rightly bringing to tax the profits earned from a digital business. To address the same, the first action plan of the BEPS project was developed by the OECD which outlines the methods and principles based on which physical and digital economies can be taxed at par. Before the same, physical locations of the servers of such digital businesses were considered to establish the tax jurisdiction in which the profits of digital businesses could be taxed. However, it was observed that servers were therefore placed in tax efficient jurisdictions, even though the main income generation and customers were from other jurisdictions.

Taxation issues in E-Commerce

These new business models have created new tax challenges. The typical taxation issues relating to e-commerce are:

(i) the difficulty in characterizing the nature of payment and establishing a nexus or link between a taxable transaction, activity and a taxing jurisdiction,

(ii) the difficulty of locating the transaction, activity and identifying the taxpayer for income tax purposes.

The digital business, thus, challenges physical presence-based permanent establishment rules. If permanent establishment (PE) principles are to remain effective in the new economy, the fundamental PE components developed for the old economy i.e., place of business, location, and permanency must be reconciled with the new digital reality.

OECD Recommendations under Action Plan 1 of the BEPS project

The The OECD has recommended several options to tackle the direct tax challenges which include:

Modifying the existing Permanent Establishment (PE) rule to provide whether an enterprise engaged in fully de-materialized digital activities would constitute a PE, if it maintained a significant digital presence in another country's economy.

A virtual fixed place of business PE in the concept of PE i.e., creation of a PE when the enterprise maintains a website on a server of another enterprise located in a jurisdiction and carries on business through that website

Imposition of a final withholding tax on certain payments for digital goods or services provided by a foreign e-commerce provider or imposition of a equalisation levy on consideration for certain digital transactions received by a non-resident from a resident or from a non-resident having PE in other contracting state.

Taking into consideration the potential of new digital economy and the rapidly evolving nature of business operations, it becomes necessary to address the challenges in terms of taxation of such digital transactions.

Indian Taxation Regime

Insertion of Chapter VIII in the Finance Act, 2016 on Equalisation Levy to address this challenge

In order to address the challenges of the digital economy, Chapter VIII of the Finance Act, 2016, titled "Equalisation Levy", provides for an equalisation levy of 6% of the amount of consideration for specified services received or receivable by a non-resident not having permanent establishment in India, from a resident in India who carries out business or profession, or from a non-resident having permanent establishment in India.

Meaning of "Specified Service"

(1) Online advertisement;

(2) Any provision for digital advertising space or any other facility or service for the purpose of online advertisement;

Specified Service also includes any other service as may be notified by the Central Government.

Further, in order to reduce burden of small players in the digital domain, it is also provided that no such levy shall be made if the aggregate amount of consideration for specified services received or receivable by a non-resident from a person resident in India or from a non-resident having a permanent establishment in India does not exceed ₹ 1 lakh in any previous year.

"Significant economic presence" to constitute "business connection"

The scope of provisions of section 9(1)(i), prior to amendment by the Finance Act, 2018, were restrictive as it essentially provided for physical presence based nexus rule for taxation of business income of the non-resident in India. Explanation 2 to the said section which defines 'business connection' was also narrow in its scope since it limited the taxability of certain activities or transactions of non-resident to those carried out through a dependent agent. Therefore, emerging business models such as digitized businesses, which do not require physical presence of itself or any agent in India, were not covered within the scope of section 9(1)(i).

In view of the above, the Finance Act, 2018 has amended section 9(1)(i) to provide that 'significant economic presence' in India shall also constitute 'business connection'. For this purpose, "significant economic presence" means-

	Transaction/activity	Condition
(i)	any transaction in respect of any goods, services or property carried out by a non-resident in India including provision of download of data or software in India	the aggregate of payments arising from such transaction or transactions during the previous year exceeds the amount as may be prescribed
(ii)	systematic and continuous soliciting of its business activities or engaging in interaction with users in India through digital means	The users would be of such number as may be prescribed.

Notes:

(i) Only so much of income as is attributable to such transactions or activities shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

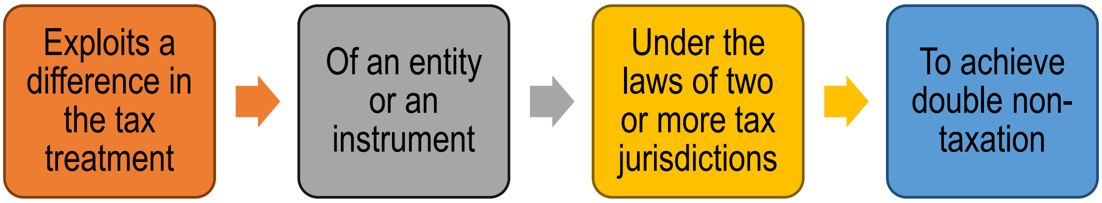
(ii) Such transactions or activities shall constitute significant economic presence in India, whether or not the agreement for such transactions or activities is entered in India or whether or not the non-resident has a residence or place of business in India or renders services in India.

(2) ACTION PLAN 2 - NEUTRALISE THE EFFECTS OF HYBRID MISMATCH ARRANGEMENTS

Before understanding what Action Plan 2 recommends, we must understand what a hybrid mismatch is.

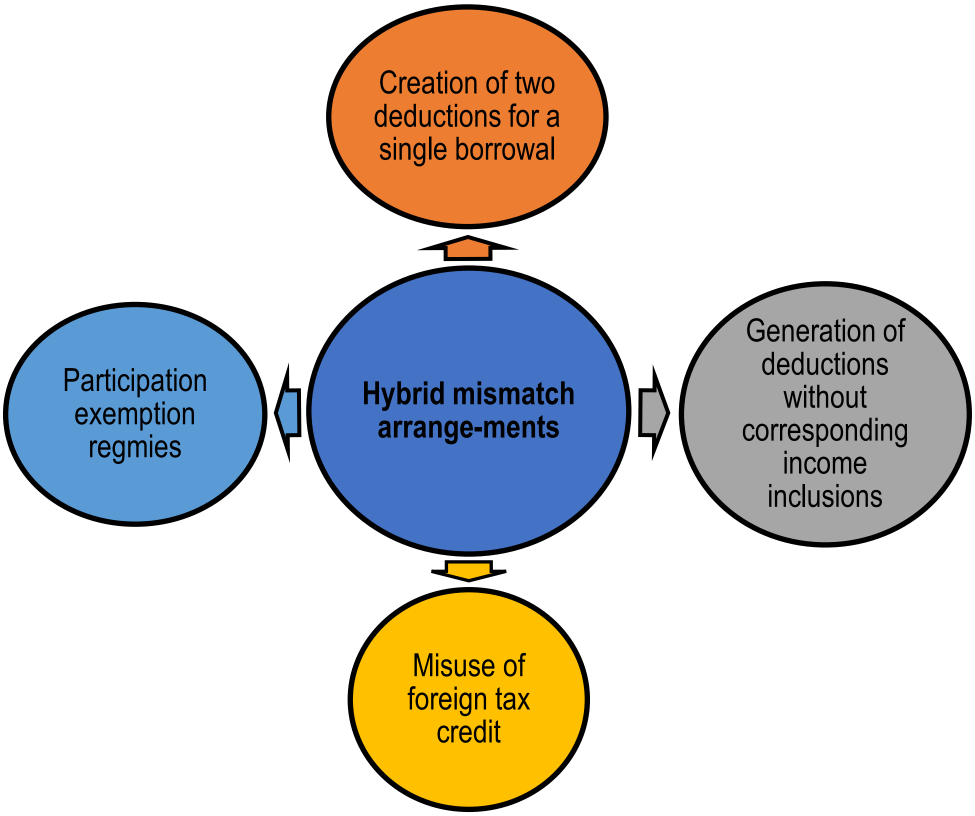
Hybrid Mismatch Arrangement: Meaning

A hybrid mismatch is an arrangement that:



Exploits a difference in the tax treatment
Of an entity or an instrument
Under the laws of two or more tax jurisdictions
To achieve double non-taxation

Hybrid mismatch arrangements are sometimes used to achieve unintended double non-taxation or long-term tax deferral in one or more of the following ways -



Creation of two deductions for a single borrowal
Participation exemption regmies
Hybrid mismatch arrange-ments
Generation of deductions without corresponding income inclusions
Misuse of foreign tax credit

Specific country laws that allow taxpayers to opt for the tax treatment of certain domestic and foreign entities may aid hybrid mismatches. It may not be easy to find out which country has in fact lost tax revenue, since the laws of each country involved have been complied with; however, there is a reduction of the overall tax paid by all parties involved as a whole, which ultimately has an adverse effect on competition, economic efficiency, transparency and fairness.

Recommended general amendments are as follows:

- A rule denying transparency to entities where the non-resident investors' resident country treats the entity as opaque;

Example

Let us say, X Co., a parent company in country X indirectly holds Y Co., an operating company in country Y. Between X Co. and Y Co. is a hybrid entity that is treated as transparent or disregarded for country X tax purposes and as non-transparent for country Y tax purposes. X Co. holds all or almost all equity interest in the hybrid entity which in turn holds all or almost all equity interests in Y Co. The hybrid entity borrows money from a third party and the loan is used to invest equity into Y Co (or to buy the shares in Y Co from either another company of the same group or from an unrelated third party). The hybrid entity pays interest on the loan. Except for the interest, the hybrid entity does not claim any other significant deduction and does not have any significant income.

With respect to Country Y, for tax purposes, Hybrid Entity is subject to corporate income tax. Its interest expenses can be used to offset other country Y group companies' income under the country Y group tax relief regime. On the other hand, country X treats the hybrid entity as transparent or disregarded, with the result that its interest expenses are allocated to X Co, which deducts the interest expense to offset unrelated income. The net effect is that there are two deductions for the same contractual obligation in two different countries.

Therefore, by virtue of rule denying transparency to an entity which is treated as opaque in the subsidiary company's country, the double deduction can be avoided.

- A rule denying an exemption or credit for foreign underlying tax for dividends that are deductible by the payer;

Example

N Co, a company resident in country N is funded by M Co., a company resident in country M with an instrument that qualifies as equity in country M but as debt in country N. A payment made under the instrument would be deductible as interest expense for N Co under country N tax law. The corresponding receipts are treated as exempt dividends under the tax laws of country M. Consequently, deduction is available under the tax laws of country N without a corresponding income inclusion in country M.

Therefore, by virtue of rule denying an exemption or credit for foreign underlying tax for dividends that are deductible by the payer, exemption of such income in country M would not be possible.

- A rule denying a foreign tax credit for withholding tax where that tax is also credited to some other entity; and
- Amendments to CFC and similar regimes attributing local shareholders the income of foreign entities that are treated as transparent under their local law.

Treaty changes - Action Plan 2 recommends a new provision in the case of income earned by a transparent entity. As per the new provision, treaty benefits will only be afforded to so much of the income of the entity as the income of a resident of that State. A specific or general saving rule is proposed so that a State can tax a resident entity generally unrestricted by treaty.

Anti-hybrid rules - The report further issued a series of dedicated domestic anti-hybrid rules which would work in two stages. The primary rules would deny deductions to payers in situations where either

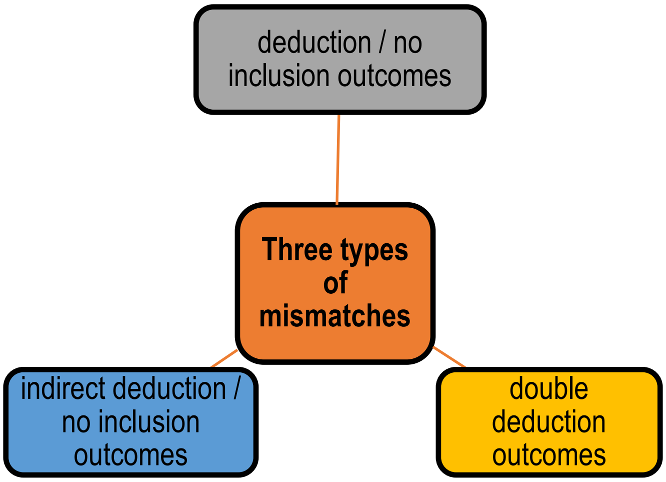
(i) Those payments will not be included in the recipient's ordinary income, or

(ii) The same amount is being simultaneously deducted by another entity.

Treatment of Branch mismatches : 2017 Report

Branch mismatches arise where the ordinary rules for allocating income and expenditure between the branch and head office result in a portion of the net income of the taxpayer escaping the charge to taxation in both the branch and residence jurisdiction. These branch mismatches occur where two jurisdictions take a different view as to the existence of, or the allocation of income or expenditure between, the branch in head office of the same taxpayer.

Unlike hybrid mismatches, which result from conflicts in the legal treatment of entities or instruments, branch mismatches are the result of differences in the way the branch and head office account for a payment made by or to the branch. The 2017 report identifies five basic types of branch mismatch arrangements that give rise to one of three types of mismatches:



deduction / no inclusion outcomes
Three types of mismatches indirect deduction / no inclusion outcomes double deduction outcomes

The 2017 report includes specific recommendations for improvements to domestic law intended to reduce the frequency of branch mismatches as well as targeted branch mismatch rules which adjust the tax consequences in either the residence or branch jurisdiction in order to neutralise the hybrid mismatch without disturbing any of the other tax, commercial or regulatory outcomes.

(3) ACTION PLAN 3 - STRENGTHEN CONTROLLED FOREIGN COMPANY (CFC) RULES

Shifting investment income and passive income to subsidiaries in low tax or no tax jurisdictions: Deferral of home country taxation

Under the tax laws of several countries, a shareholder of a corporation is not taxed on the corporation's income until the income is distributed as a dividend. Therefore, it was common for publicly traded companies to form foreign subsidiaries in tax havens and shift "portable" income to those subsidiaries. Generally, income shifted were mainly investment income (interest and dividends) and passive income (rents and royalties), as well as sales and services income involving related parties. Tax in parent country on this income was avoided until the tax haven country paid a dividend to the shareholding company. This dividend could be avoided indefinitely by loaning the earnings to the shareholder without actually declaring a dividend.

Many countries (where global multi-nationals are based) have high tax rates as compared to certain other countries, which used their low tax rates as a means of attracting inward investment. As a result, when dividends were repatriated from these lower tax countries, the recipient generally suffered additional tax on those profits. Therefore, many companies have a tendency to leave the profits from these low-taxed subsidiaries offshore, with the objective of deferring home country taxation.

Obviously, Governments were disturbed that multinationals based in their countries kept large amounts of profits offshore. In order to address this issue, governments in various countries have introduced legislation aimed at eliminating the benefits of deferral, by currently taxing income in the parent country even when the income has not been repatriated or remitted to that country. These rules are generally referred to as Controlled Foreign Corporation (CFC) rules.

CFC Rules: Addressing BEPS

Controlled foreign company (CFC) rules respond to the risk that taxpayers with a controlling interest in a foreign subsidiary can strip the base of their country of residence and, in some cases, other countries by shifting income into a CFC. Without such rules, CFCs provide opportunities for profit shifting and long-term deferral of taxation.

The OECD Final Report does not propose a minimum standard for controlled foreign company (CFC) regimes. However, OECD regards CFC rules as being important in tackling BEPS and has made a series of best practice recommendations in relation to the 'building blocks' of an effective CFC regime. The major reason why the OECD was unable to provide more than best practice was fundamental disagreement over the policy of CFC regimes, in particular whether states should use the regime to protect other states' tax bases from earnings stripping.

Indian Taxation Regime

- At present, there are no CFC rules in the Income-tax Act, 1961;
- CFC rules formed part of the proposed Direct Tax Code.
- CFC regime has been debated over last many years in India and is one of the last remaining concepts from the DTC to be incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961.
- In order to encourage repatriation of profits, section 115BBD provides a concessional tax rate of 15% (gross basis) on dividends received from a specified foreign company i.e., a foreign company in which the Indian company holds 26% or more in the nominal value of the equity share capital of the company.

(4) ACTION PLAN 4 – INTEREST DEDUCTIONS AND OTHER FINANCIAL PAYMENTS

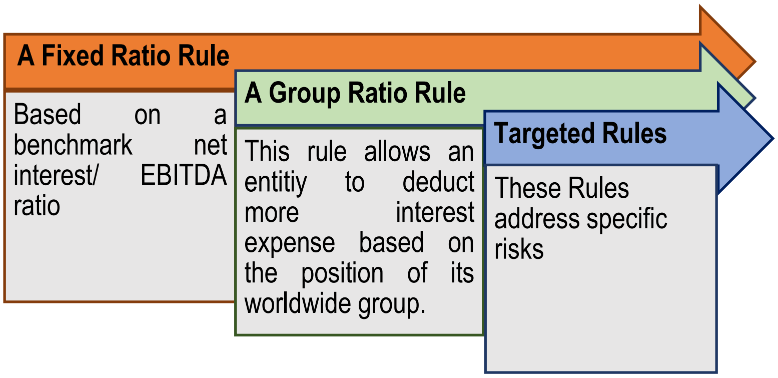
The OECD is concerned that multinational groups are able to erode their tax base (i.e., reduce their taxable profits) with interest expense, for example by:

- Locating third party debt in high tax countries;
- Using intra-group loans to achieve interest deductions in excess of the group's actual third party interest expense;
- Using related party or third party debt to finance the production of exempt or deferred income.

BEPS Action Plan 4 calls for the development of recommendations for the design of domestic rules to prevent tax base erosion through the use of interest expense and other financial payments that are economically equivalent to interest.

Common Approach: Linking an entity's net interest deduction to its level of economic activity

The mobility and fungibility of money enables multinational groups to achieve favourable tax results by adjusting the amount of debt in a group entity. The 2015 Report established a common approach which directly links an entity's net interest deductions to its level of economic activity, based on taxable earnings before interest income and expense, depreciation and amortisation (EBITDA). This approach includes three elements:



A Fixed Ratio Rule

Based on a benchmark net interest/ EBITDA ratio

A Group Ratio Rule

This rule allows an entitiy to deduct more interest expense based on the position of its worldwide group.

Targeted Rules

These Rules address specific risks

Indian Taxation Regime

Section 94B of the Income-tax Act, 1961: Addressing Thin Capitalization

Debt financing of cross-border transactions is often favorable than equity financing for taxpayer. In view of the above, in line with the recommendations of OECD BEPS Action Plan 4, section 94B has been inserted in the Income-tax Act, 1961 by the Finance Act, 2017 to provide a cap on the interest expense that can be claimed by an entity to its associated enterprise. The total interest paid in excess of 30% of its earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization (EBITDA) or interest paid or payable to associated enterprise for that previous year, whichever is less, shall not be deductible.

Applicability

The provision is applicable to an Indian company, or a permanent establishment of a foreign company, being the borrower, who pays interest in respect of any form of debt issued by a non-resident who is an 'associated enterprise' of the borrower. Further, the debt is deemed to be treated as issued by an associated enterprise where it provides an implicit or explicit guarantee to the lender, being a non-associated enterprise, or deposits a corresponding and matching amount of funds with such lender.

Carry forward of disallowed interest expenditure

The provision allows for carry forward of disallowed interest expense for 8 assessment years immediately succeeding the assessment year for which the disallowance is first made and deduction against the income computed under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession” to the extent of maximum allowable interest expenditure.

Threshold limit

In order to target only large interest payments, it provides for a threshold of interest expenditure of ₹ 1 crore in respect of any debt issued by a non-resident associated enterprise exceeding which the provision would be applicable. Banks and Insurance business are excluded from the ambit of the said provisions keeping in view of special nature of these businesses.

(5) ACTION PLAN 5 – COUNTER HARMFUL TAX PRACTICES

The Action 5 Report is one of the four BEPS minimum standards. The minimum standard of the Action 5 Report consists of two parts. One part relates to preferential tax regimes, where a peer review is undertaken to identify features of such regimes that can facilitate base erosion and profit shifting, and therefore have the potential to unfairly impact the tax base of other jurisdictions. The second part includes a commitment to transparency through the compulsory spontaneous exchange of relevant information on taxpayer-specific rulings which, in the absence of such information exchange, could give rise to BEPS concerns.

Indian Taxation Regime

In India, the Finance Act, 2016 has introduced a concessional taxation regime for royalty income from patents for the purpose of promoting indigenous research and development and making India a global hub for research and development. The purpose of the concessional taxation regime is to encourage entities to retain and commercialise existing patents and for developing new innovative patented products. Further, this beneficial taxation regime will incentivise entities to locate the high-value jobs associated with the development, manufacture and exploitation of patents in India.

Section 115BBF of the Income-tax Act, 1961: In line with nexus approach of BEPS Action 5

The nexus approach has been recommended by the OECD under BEPS Action Plan 5. This approach requires attribution and taxation of income arising from exploitation of Intellectual property (IP) in the jurisdiction where substantial research and development (R & D) activities are undertaken instead of the jurisdiction of legal ownership. Accordingly, section 115BBF of the Income-tax Act, 1961 provides that where the total income of the eligible assessee includes any income by way of royalty in respect of a patent developed and registered in India, then such royalty shall be taxable at the rate of 10% (plus applicable surcharge and cess). For this purpose, developed means atleast 75% of the expenditure should be incurred in India by the eligible assessee for any invention in respect of which patent is granted under the Patents Act, 1970.

(6) ACTION PLAN 6 – PREVENTING TREATY ABUSE

Protection against treaty shopping: Minimum Standard

Given the risk to revenues posed by treaty shopping, countries have committed to ensure a minimum level of protection against treaty shopping (the minimum standard). That commitment will require countries to include in their tax treaties an express statement that their common intention is to eliminate double taxation without creating opportunities for non-taxation or reduced taxation through tax evasion or avoidance, including through treaty shopping arrangements.

Countries will implement this common intention by including in their treaties:

(i) the combined approach of Limitation of Benefits (LOB) and Principal Purpose Test (PPT) rule,

(ii) the PPT rule alone, or

(iii) the LOB rule supplemented by a mechanism that would deal with conduit financing arrangements not already dealt with in tax treaties.

Implementation of Action 6 Minimum Standard

The first peer review on the implementation of the Action 6 minimum standard reveals that a large majority of Inclusive Framework members have begun to translate their commitment on treaty shopping into actions and are now in the process of modifying their treaty network. In total, on 30

June 2018, 82 jurisdictions had some treaties that were already compliant with the minimum standard or that were going to shortly comply.

The first peer review shows the efficiency of the Multilateral Instrument (MLI) [For detailed understanding of MLI, refer to discussion in Action Plan 15] in implementing the minimum standard and the other treaty-related BEPS measures. As per OECD, it is by far the preferred tool of Inclusive Framework members for implementing the minimum standard. The majority of the jurisdictions that have signed the MLI have listed almost all their treaties under the MLI.

As on 1st January, 2019, the provisions of the MLI started to take effect with respect to some treaties. For the treaties for which the MLI is effective, tax administration can now use effective treaty provisions to put an end to treaty-shopping.

Indian Tax Regime

LoB clause introduced in India-Mauritius Tax Treaty - On 10th May, 2016, India and Mauritius has signed a protocol amending the India-Mauritius tax treaty at Mauritius. In the said treaty, for the first time, it has been provided that gains from the alienation of shares acquired on or after 1.4.2017 in a company which is a resident of India may be taxed in India. The tax rate on such capital gains arising during the period from 1.4.2017-31.3.2019 should, however, not exceed 50% of the tax rate applicable on such capital gains in India. A Limitation of Benefit (LOB) Clause has been introduced which provides that a resident of a Contracting State shall not be entitled to the benefits of 50% of the tax rate applicable in transition period if its affairs are arranged with the primary purpose of taking advantage of concessional rate of tax. Further, a shell or a conduit company claiming to be a resident of a Contracting State shall not be entitled to this benefit. A shell or conduit company has been defined as any legal entity falling within the meaning of resident with negligible or nil business operations or with no real and continuous business activities carried out in that Contracting State. A resident of a Contracting State is deemed to be a shell/conduit company if its expenditure on operations in that Contracting State is less than Mauritian rupee 15,00,000 or Indian ₹ 7,00,000 in the respective Contracting State as the case may be, in the immediately preceding period of 12 months from the date the gains arise.

LoB clause in India-Singapore Tax Treaty - On similar lines, India and Singapore has signed a protocol amending the India-Singapore tax treaty. Capital gains on alienation of shares would be taxable in a similar manner as laid out in India-Mauritius tax treaty, subject to LoB clause. The transition period benefit is also similar to that contained in India-Mauritius Tax Treaty. In respect of shares acquired after 1.4.2017 and sold before 1.4.2019, the expenditure test needs to be met for the 12 month period immediately preceding the date of transfer.

(7) ACTION PLAN 7 – PREVENT THE ARTIFICIAL AVOIDANCE OF PERMANENT ESTABLISHMENT (PE) STATUS

This report includes changes to the definition of permanent establishment (PE) in the OECD Model Tax Convention that will address strategies used to avoid having a taxable presence in a country under tax treaties.

These changes will ensure that where the activities that an intermediary exercises in a country are intended to result in the regular conclusion of contracts to be performed by a foreign enterprise, that enterprise will be considered to have a taxable presence in that country unless the intermediary is performing these activities in the course of an independent business. The changes will also restrict the application of a number of exceptions to the definition of permanent establishment to activities that are preparatory or auxiliary nature and will ensure that it is not possible to take advantage of these exceptions by the fragmentation of a cohesive operating business into several small operations; they will also address situations where the exception applicable to construction sites is circumvented through the splitting-up contracts between closely related enterprises.

Thus, the following steps have been advocated:

- Reworking exceptions to PE definition – An anti-fragmentation rule to be adopted to aggregate all activities carried by an enterprise in a state, along with activities undertaken by its closely related entities undertaking business operation that create tax mismatch and are cohesive in nature. The above test can also be applied to understand whether the activities undertaken by an enterprise in a state are 'preparatory or auxiliary'.
- Analyzing arrangements entered through contractual agreements –A Commissionnaire arrangement may be broadly defined as an arrangement through which a person sells products in a State in its own name but on behalf of a foreign enterprise that is the owner of these products. Through such an arrangement, a foreign enterprise is able to sell its products in a State without technically having a permanent establishment to which such sales may be attributed for tax purposes and without, therefore, being taxable in that State on the profits derived from such sales. Since the person that concludes the sales does not own the products that it sells, that person cannot be taxed on the profits derived from such sales and may only be taxed on the remuneration that it receives for its services (usually a commission). Commissionnaire arrangements have been a major cause of concern for tax administrations in many countries.

Progress in implementation of BEPS Action Plan 7

The changes to the PE definitions were integrated in the 2017 OECD Model Tax Convention and in Part IV of the MLI (Articles 12 to 15). The Multilateral Instrument (MLI) is a flexible instrument that allows jurisdictions to adopt BEPS treaty-related measures to counter BEPS and strengthen their treaty network. The MLI was signed by nearly 90 jurisdictions and about half of the MLI Signatories have so far adopted the MLI articles that implement the permanent establishment changes [For detailed understanding of MLI, refer to discussion under Action 15].

(8) ACTION PLAN 8-10 - TRANSFER PRICING OUTCOMES IN LINE WITH VALUE CREATION/INTANGIBLES/RISK AND CAPITAL AND OTHER HIGH-RISK TRANSACTIONS

The aforesaid Action plans represent the OECD's work on transfer pricing which has been a core focus of the BEPS Action Plans. The specific Actions focus on Intangibles, Risks and capital and other high-risk transactions. These are the hard areas of transfer pricing and are summarized together in the Final Report 'Aligning Transfer Pricing Outcomes with Value Creation'.

Clarification and Strengthening of existing standards on transfer pricing

Transfer pricing rules, which are set out in Article 9 of tax treaties based on the OECD and UN Model Tax Conventions and the Transfer Pricing Guidelines, are used to determine on the basis of the ALP the conditions, including the price, for transactions within an MNE group. The existing standards in this area have been clarified and strengthened, including the guidance on the arm's length principle and an approach to ensure the appropriate pricing of hard-to-value-intangibles has been agreed upon within the arm's length principle. The work has focused on three key areas.

Action Plan	Details
8	Addresses transfer pricing issues relating to controlled transactions involving intangibles, since intangibles are by definition mobile and they are generally difficult-to-value. Misallocation of the profits generated by valuable intangibles is a significant cause of BEPS.
9	Contractual allocations of risk are respected only when they are supported by actual decision-making and thus exercising control over these risks. Moreover, Action 9 addresses the level of returns to funding provided by a capital-rich MNE group member, where those returns do not correspond to the level of activity undertaken by the funding company.
10	This action focuses on other high-risk areas, which include: the scope for addressing profit allocations resulting from controlled transactions which are not commercially rational, the scope for targeting the use of transfer pricing methods in a way which results in diverting profits from the most economically important activities of the MNE group, and the use of certain type of payments between members of the MNE group (such as management fees and head office expenses) to erode the tax base in the absence of alignment with the value-creation.

OECD Transfer Pricing Guidelines

In addition, the OECD Transfer Pricing Guidelines released in 2017 provide guidance on the application of the "arm's length principle", which represents the international consensus on the valuation, for income tax purposes, of cross-border transactions between associated enterprises. In today's economy where multinational enterprises play an increasingly prominent role, transfer pricing continues to be high on the agenda of tax administrations and taxpayers alike. Governments need to ensure that the taxable profits of MNEs are not artificially shifted out of their jurisdiction and that the tax base reported by MNEs in their country reflects the economic activity undertaken therein and taxpayers need clear guidance on the proper application of the arm's length principle.

(9) ACTION PLAN 11 – MEASURING AND MONITORING BEPS

The adverse fiscal and economic impacts of BEPS have been the focus of the OECD/G20 BEPS Project since its inception. While anecdotal evidence has shown that tax planning activities of some multinational enterprises (MNEs) take advantage of the mismatches and gaps in the international tax rules, separating taxable profits from the underlying value-creating activity, The Addressing Base Erosion and Profit Shifting report (OECD, 2013) recognised that the scale of the negative global impacts on economic activity and government revenues have been uncertain.

Although measuring the scale of BEPS proves challenging given the complexity of BEPS and the serious data limitations, the fiscal effects of BEPS are significant. BEPS causes other adverse economic effects, including tilting the playing field in favour of tax-aggressive MNEs, exacerbating the corporate debt bias, misdirecting foreign direct investment, and reducing the financing of needed public infrastructure.

Indicators of BEPS activity

Six indicators of BEPS activity highlight BEPS behaviour using different sources of data, employing different metrics, and examining different BEPS channels. When combined and presented as a dashboard of indicators, they confirm the existence of BEPS, and its continued increase in scale in recent years.

(i) The profit rates of MNE affiliates located in lower-tax countries are higher than their group's average worldwide profit rate. For example, the profit rates reported by MNE affiliates located in lower-tax countries are twice as high as their group's worldwide profit rate on average.

(ii) The effective tax rates paid by large MNE entities are estimated to be lower than similar enterprises with only domestic operations - This tilts the playing-field against local businesses and non-tax aggressive MNEs, although some of this may be due to MNEs' greater utilisation of available country tax preferences.

(iii) Foreign direct investment (FDI) is increasingly concentrated - FDI in countries with net FDI to GDP ratios of more than 200% increased from 38 times higher than all other countries in 2005 to 99 times higher in 2012.

(iv) The separation of taxable profits from the location of the value creating activity is particularly clear with respect to intangible assets, and the phenomenon has grown rapidly - For example, the ratio of the value of royalties received to spending on research and development in a group of low-tax countries was six times higher than the average ratio for all other countries, and has increased three-fold between 2009 and 2012.

(v) Royalties received by entities located in these low-tax countries accounted for 3% of total royalties - This provides evidence of the existence of BEPS, though not a direct measurement of the scale of BEPS.

(vi) Debt from both related and third-parties is more concentrated in MNE affiliates in higher statutory tax-rate countries. The interest-to-income ratio for affiliates of the largest global MNEs in higher-tax rate countries is almost three times higher than their MNE's worldwide third-party interest-to-income ratio.

(10) ACTION PLAN 12 – DISCLOSURE OF AGGRESSIVE TAX PLANNING ARRANGEMENTS

A significant challenge faced by tax authorities worldwide is the lack of timely, comprehensive and relevant information on aggressive tax planning strategies. Timely access to such information would facilitate quick response to tax risks through informed risk assessment, audits, or changes to legislation or regulations. BEPS Action Plan 12 recognises the advantages of tools designed to facilitate the information flow on tax risks to tax administrations and tax policy makers. The Report provides a modular framework for guidance drawn from best practices for use by countries without mandatory disclosure rules to design a regime that suits their requirement to get early information on potentially aggressive or abusive tax planning schemes and their users. The recommendations in this Report do not represent a minimum standard and countries can decide whether or not to introduce mandatory disclosure regimes. Where a country opts for mandatory disclosure rules, the recommendations provide the necessary flexibility to balance a country's need for better and more timely information with the compliance burdens for taxpayers. It also sets out specific best practice recommendations for rules targeting international tax schemes, as well as for the development and implementation of more effective information exchange and co-operation between tax administrations.

(11) ACTION PLAN 13 – RE-EXAMINE TRANSFER PRICING DOCUMENTATION

This report contains revised standards for transfer pricing documentation incorporating a master file, local file, and a template for country-by-country reporting of revenues, profits, taxes paid and certain measures of economic activity. The revised standardised approach requires taxpayers to articulate consistent transfer pricing positions and will provide tax administrations with useful information to assess transfer pricing and other BEPS risks, make determinations about where audit resources can most effectively be deployed, and, in the event audits are called for, provide information to commence and target audit enquiries. Country-by-country reports will be disseminated through an automatic government-to-government exchange mechanism. The implementation package included in this report sets out guidance to ensure that the reports are provided in a timely manner, that confidentiality is preserved and that the information is used appropriately, by incorporating model legislation and model Competent Authority Agreements forming the basis for government-to-government exchanges of the reports.

Requirements as per OECD report on Action 13 of BEPS Action Plan

The OECD report provides for:

(a) revised standards for transfer pricing documentation; and

(b) a template for country-by-country reporting of income, earnings, taxes paid and certain measure of economic activity.

Three-tier structure mandated by BEPS

The BEPS report recommends that countries adopt a standardised approach to transfer pricing documentation; it mandates the following three-tier structure:-

	Document	Information
(1)	Master File	Standardised information relevant for all multinational enterprises (MNE) group members. Master file requires MNEs to provide tax administrations with high-level information regarding their global business operations and transfer pricing policies. The master file is to be delivered by MNEs directly to local tax administrations.
(2)	Local file	Local file requires maintaining of transactional information specific to each country in detail covering related-party transactions and the amounts involved in those transactions. In addition, relevant financial information regarding specific transactions, a comparability analysis and analysis of the selection and application of the most appropriate transfer pricing method should also be captured. The local file is to be delivered by MNEs directly to local tax administrations.
(3)	Country-by-country report	The BEPS Action 13 report provides a template for multinational enterprises (MNEs) to report annually and for each tax jurisdiction in which they do business the information set out therein. This report is called the Country-by-Country (CbC) Report. To facilitate the implementation of the CbC Reporting standard, the BEPS Action 13 report includes a CbC Reporting Implementation Package which consists of (i) model legislation which could be used by countries to require the ultimate parent entity of an MNE group to file the CbC Report in its jurisdiction of residence including backup filing requirements and (ii) three model Competent Authority Agreements that could be used to facilitate implementation of the exchange of CbC Reports, respectively based on the: a) Multilateral Convention on Administrative Assistance in Tax Matters; b) Bilateral tax conventions; and c) Tax Information Exchange Agreements (TIEAs).

		Following information are required in the CbC report: Information relating to the global allocation of the MNE's income and taxes paid; and Indicators of the location of economic activity within the MNE group. CBC report requires MNEs to provide an annual report of economic indicators viz. the amount of revenue, profit before income tax, income tax paid and accrued in relation to the tax jurisdiction in which they do business. CBC reports are required to be filed in the jurisdiction of tax residence of the ultimate parent entity, being subsequently shared between other jurisdictions through automatic exchange of information mechanism.

Advantages of the three-tier structure [as per BEPS Report]:

(a) Taxpayers will be required to articulate consistent transfer pricing positions;

(b) Tax administrations would get useful information to assess transfer pricing risks;

(c) Tax administrations would be able to make determinations about where their resources can most effectively be deployed, and, in the event audits are called for, provide information to commence and target audit enquiries.

Indian Taxation Regime

Transfer Pricing provisions under the Income-tax Act, 1961

Chapter X of the Income-tax Act, 1961 comprising sections 92 to 92F contain provisions relating to transfer pricing regime.

Section 92D requires maintenance of prescribed information and document relating to the international transaction and specified domestic transaction by every person who has entered into an international transaction. Also, a constituent entity of an international group is required to keep and maintain the prescribed information and document in respect of the international group.

Implementation of international consensus in India

India is one of the active members of BEPS initiative and part of international consensus. For the purpose of implementing the international consensus, a specific reporting regime in respect of CbC reporting and also the master file has been incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961. The essential elements have been incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961 while remaining aspects would be dealt with in detail in the Income-tax Rules, 1962.

Note – Refer to Chapter 1 Transfer Pricing, wherein the following have been discussed at length -

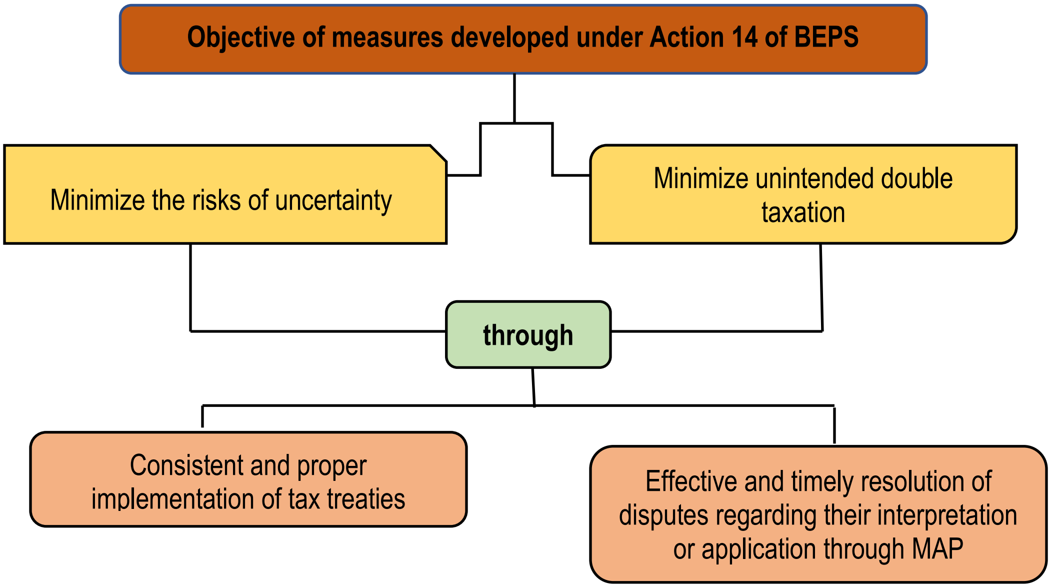
(i) Elements relating to CbC reporting requirement and related matters which have been incorporated in section 286 of the Income-tax Act, 1961

(ii) Maintenance and furnishing of Master file: Consequent provisions incorporated in section 92D of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

Threshold limit of consolidated group revenue for applicability of CbC reporting requirement

The CbC reporting requirement for a reporting year does not apply unless the consolidated revenues of the preceding accounting year of the group, based on consolidated financial statement, exceeds a threshold to be prescribed. The current international consensus is for a threshold of € 750 million equivalent in local currency. This threshold for total consolidated group revenue of the international group prescribed under section 286 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 read with Rule 10DB of the Income-tax Rules, 1962 is ₹ 5,500 crores.

(12) ACTION PLAN 14 – MAKING DISPUTE RESOLUTION MORE EFFECTIVE



Objective of measures developed under Action 14 of BEPS
Minimize the risks of uncertainty
Minimize unintended double taxation through
Consistent and proper implementation of tax treaties
Effective and timely resolution of disputes regarding their interpretation or application through MAP

Eliminating opportunities for cross-border tax avoidance and evasion and the effective and efficient prevention of double taxation are significant to developing an international tax system that facilitates economic growth and a buoyant global economy. Countries concur that the measures introduced to address BEPS pursuant to the BEPS Action Plans should not result in unnecessary uncertainty for compliant taxpayers and in unintended double taxation. Improving dispute resolution mechanisms is, therefore, a critical component of the work on BEPS issues.

(13) ACTION PLAN 15 – DEVELOPING A MULTILATERAL INSTRUMENT

MLI's role in tackling BEPS

Abuse of tax treaties is an important source of BEPS. The MLI helps the fight against BEPS by implementing the tax treaty-related measures developed through the BEPS project in existing bilateral tax treaties in a synchronized and efficient manner. These measures will prevent treaty abuse, improve dispute resolution, prevent the artificial avoidance of permanent establishment status and neutralize the effects of hybrid mismatch arrangements.

Action 15 of the BEPS Action Plan provides for an analysis of the tax and public international law issues related to the development of a multilateral instrument to enable countries that wish to do so to implement measures developed in the course of the work on BEPS and amend bilateral tax treaties.

Formation of ad hoc Group to develop MLI

Based on this analysis, a mandate for the formation of an ad hoc Group to develop a multilateral instrument on tax treaty measures to tackle BEPS, was approved by the OECD Committee on Fiscal Affairs and endorsed by the G20 Finance Ministers and Central Bank Governors in February 2015.

In line with Action 15 report, an ad-hoc group was formed with a pre-defined purpose of development of such Multilateral Instrument (MLI) and that adopted the text of the Convention and accompanying Explanatory Statement in November 2016. India was part of the Ad Hoc Group of more than 100 countries and jurisdictions from G20, OECD, BEPS associates and other interested countries, which worked on an equal footing on the finalization of the text of the Multilateral Convention, starting May 2015. The text of the Convention and the accompanying Explanatory Statement was adopted by the Ad hoc Group on 24th November 2016.

Signatories to the MLI

Once drafted, the said document was thereafter kept open for signatures from 31 December 2016. In the first signing ceremony of the MLI on 7th June, 2017, 67 countries have signed the MLI and 9 countries have expressed their intention to sign the instrument. As on 27th September, 2018, 84 countries have signed the MLI and 6 countries have expressed their intention to sign the instrument.

At the time of signature, signatories submitted a list of their tax treaties in force that they would like to designate as Covered Tax Agreements (CTAs), i.e. to be amended through the MLI.

The Convention enables all signatories, inter alia, to meet treaty-related minimum standards that were agreed as part of the Final BEPS package, including the minimum standard for the prevention of treaty abuse under Action 6.

Features of MLI

The Multilateral Convention is, thus, an outcome of the OECD / G20 Project to tackle Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (the "BEPS Project") i.e., tax planning strategies that exploit gaps and mismatches in tax rules to artificially shift profits to low or no-tax locations where there is little or no economic activity, resulting in little or no overall corporate tax being paid.

The MLI modifies tax treaties that are “Covered Tax Agreements”. A Covered Tax Agreement is an agreement for the avoidance of double taxation that is in force between Parties to the MLI and for which both Parties have made a notification that they wish to modify the agreement using the MLI.

The MLI is a flexible instrument which will modify tax treaties according to a jurisdiction's policy preferences with respect to the implementation of the tax treaty-related BEPS measures. The MLI provides for different types of flexibility:

(i) jurisdictions can choose amongst alternative provisions in certain MLI articles;

(ii) jurisdictions can choose to apply optional provisions (for instance, the provisions on mandatory binding arbitration);

(iii) jurisdictions may also choose to reserve the right not to apply MLI provisions (to opt out through a "reservation") with respect to all of their Covered Tax Agreements or with respect to a subset of their Covered Tax Agreements. Jurisdictions only have the possibility to opt out of provisions that do not reflect a BEPS minimum standard, with the possibility to withdraw their reservation (and opt in) later.

Amendment of MLI position

The provisional MLI position of each Signatory indicates the tax treaties it intends to cover, the options it has chosen and the reservations it has made. Signatories can amend their MLI position until ratification. Even after ratification, parties can choose to opt in with respect to optional provisions or to withdraw reservations.

Indian Taxation Regime

The Multilateral Convention to implement tax treaty related measures to prevent Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS) was signed by India at Paris, France on 7th June, 2017. India had ratified the said Convention and had deposited the instrument of ratification along-with the list of Covered Tax Agreements, reservations and notifications (India's Position under the said Convention) to the Depositary on 25th June, 2019. The date of entry into force of the said Convention for India is 1st October, 2019, being the first day of the month following the expiry of a period of three calendar months beginning on 25th June, 2019, being the date of deposit by India of the instrument of ratification.

The provisions of the said Convention would have effect in India with respect to a Covered Tax Agreement in accordance with the provisions of Article 35 of the said Convention. Accordingly, in exercise of the powers conferred by section 90(1) of the Income-tax Act, 1961, the Central Government has, vide Notification No.57/2019 dated 9.8.2019 (available at https://www.incometaxindia.gov.in/communications/notification/notification57_2019.pdf*), notified that the provisions of the said Convention shall be given effect to in the Union of India, in accordance with India's Position under the said Convention, as set out in the Annexure thereto.*

As per Article 35 of the MLI, the provisions of this Convention shall have effect in each Contracting Jurisdiction with respect to a Covered Tax Agreement:

a) with respect to taxes withheld at source on amounts paid or credited to non-residents, where the event giving rise to such taxes occurs on or after the first day of the next calendar year that begins on or after the latest of the dates on which this Convention enters into force for each of the Contracting Jurisdictions to the Covered Tax Agreement; and

b) with respect to all other taxes levied by that Contracting Jurisdiction, for taxes levied with respect to taxable periods beginning on or after the expiration of a period of six calendar months (or a shorter period, if all Contracting Jurisdictions notify the Depositary that they intend to apply such shorter period) from the latest of the dates on which this Convention enters into force for each of the Contracting Jurisdictions to the Covered Tax Agreement.

Therefore, the earliest date when the provisions of this Convention can take effect in India is 1st April, 2020 (six months from 1st October, 2019, the date of entry into force for India)[1].

Resources: The discussion on BEPS Action Plans contained in this chapter is essentially based on the Action Plans developed in the context of the OECD/G20 BEPS Project and available at the website http://www.oecd.org/tax/beps/beps-actions.htm

[1] Since the provisions of this Convention takes effect only from F.Y.2020-21, the same have not been discussed in detail in this Study Material.

BEPS Action Plan 3: Strengthen CFC rules
OECD Recommendation	Provisions incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961
CFCs are foreign subsidiaries in tax havens in which the taxpayer has controlling interest. Since tax is generally levied on distributed dividend, tax in parent country could be avoided until the tax haven country actually paid dividend to the shareholders. The OECD regards CFC Rules as important in tackling BEPS and has made a series of best practice recommendations in relation to the building blocks of an effective CFC regime.  Definition of a CFC & Control CFC Exemptions & Threshold requirement Definition of CFC Income Rules for computing CFC Income Rules for attributing CFC Income Rules to prevent or eliminate Double Taxation Building Blocks	There are no CFC Rules in the Income-tax Act, 1961. However, section 115BBD has been inserted in Income-tax Act, 1961 to encourage repatriation of profits by Indian companies which have significant voting power in foreign Companies.  Tax on dividend (Divd) received by an Indian Co. (IndCo) from a Foreign Co. Does the IndCo hold 26% or more in the nominal value of Share Capital of the Foreign Co.? Yes No Divd received is taxable @15% u/s 115BBD Divd is taxable@25% or 30%, as the case may be, app to Ind Co. No deduction is allowable in computing divd income Any reasonable commission or remuneration for realization of divd allowable as deduction Is the foreign Co. a subsidiary of IndCo.? Yes No Divid received from foreign Co. can be reduced from divd distributed by IndCo, for payment of DDT Divd received from foreign Co. cannot be reduced from divd distributed by IndCo., for payment of DDT

BEPS Action Plan 4: Interest deductions and other financial payments

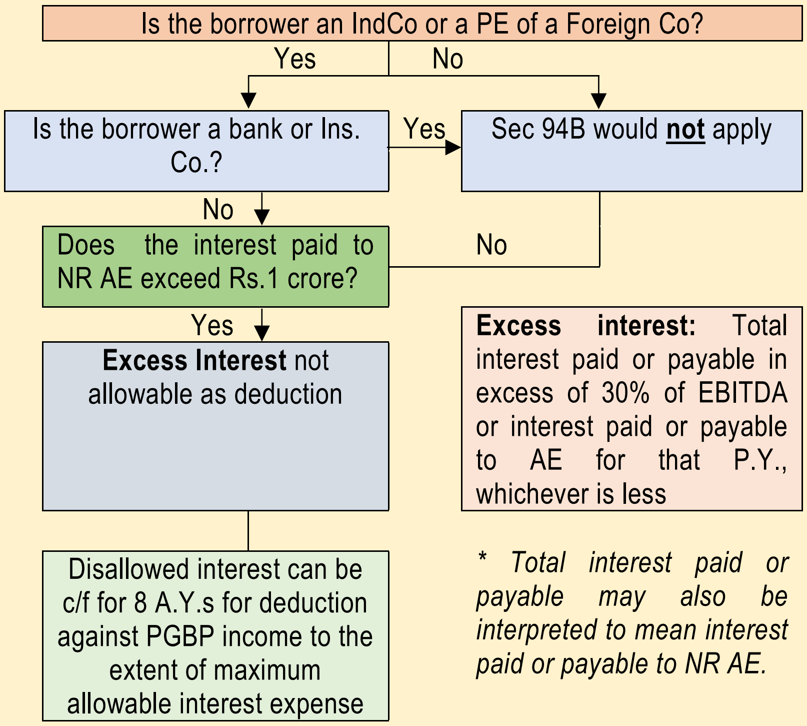
Common Approach in 2015 Report

The common approach which directly links an entity's net interest deductions to its level of economic activity, based on taxable EBITDA includes three elements:

	Rule	Basis
i	Fixed Ratio Rule	based on benchmark net interest/EBITDA Ratio
ii	Group Ratio Rule	allows an entity to deduct more interest expense based on the position of its world wide group
iii	Targeted Rules	address specific risks

Provisions incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961

Sec 94B – Limitation of interest deduction [based on Fixed Ratio Rule]



Is the borrower an IndCo or a PE of a Foreign Co?

Yes

No

Is the borrower a bank or Ins. Co.?

Yes

Sec 94B would not apply

No

Does the interest paid to NR AE exceed Rs.1 crore?

No

Yes

Excess Interest not allowable as deduction

Disallowed interest can be c/f for 8 A.Y.s for deduction against PGBP income to the extent of maximum allowable interest expense

Excess interest: Total interest paid or payable in excess of 30% of EBITDA or interest paid or payable to AE for that P.Y., whichever is less

 Total interest paid or payable may also be interpreted to mean interest paid or payable to NR AE.*

BEPS Action Plan 5: Counter harmful tax practices
OECD BEPS Action 5 Report	Provisions incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961
Action 5 report identifies factors for determining a potential harmful tax practice that results in low or no effective tax rate, lack of transparency, negotiable tax rate or base etc. For instance, in case of R&D activities, the nexus approach recommended by the OECD under BEPS Action 5 requires attribution and taxation of income arising from exploitation of IP in the jurisdiction where substantial R & D activities are undertaken instead of the jurisdiction of legal ownership.	Sec 115BBF of the Income-tax Act, 1961 – Tax on income from patent Where the Total Income of the eligible assessee includes any income by way of royalty in respect of a patent developed & registered in India, then, such royalty is taxable@ 10% (plus applicable surcharge & cess).  Applicability of concessional rate of 10% u/s 115BBF Assessee should be a person resident in India, who is a patentee Income must be from a patent developed & registered in India Option for taxation of income u/s 115BBF to be exercised by assessee on or before due date u/s 139(1) for filing ROI Meaning of developed The invention should be one for which patent is granted under the Patents Act, 1970 At least 75% of the expenditure for such invention must be incurred in India

BEPS Action Plan 6: Preventing treaty abuse
OECD Minimum Standard	LoB clause incorporated in Indian Tax Treaties
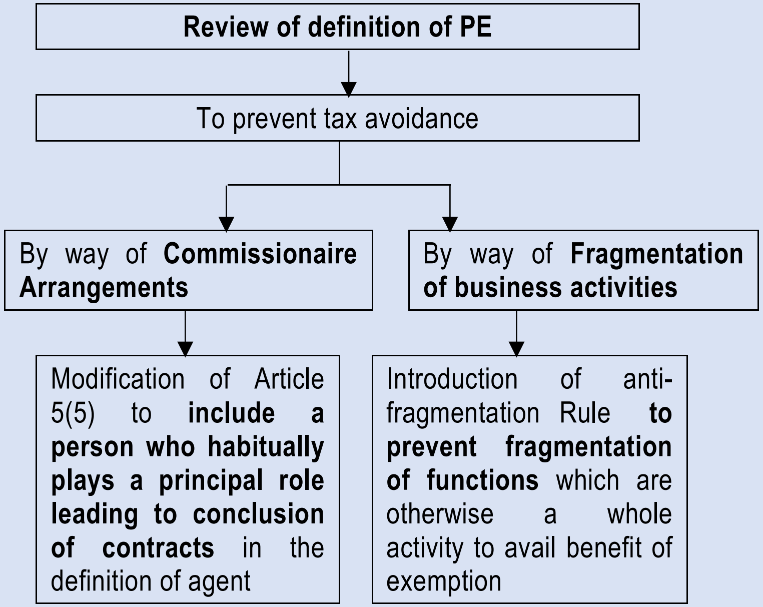
Given the risk to revenues posed by treaty shopping, countries have committed to ensure a minimum level of protection against treaty shopping by including in their treaties: (i) the combined approach of Limitation of Benefits (LOB) and Principal Purpose Test (PPT) rule, (ii) the PPT rule alone, or (iii) the LOB rule supplemented by a mechanism that would deal with conduit financing arrangements not already dealt with in tax treaties	LoB clause in India-Mauritius Tax Treaty • On 10.5.2016, the India-Mauritius tax treaty was amended and for the first time, it has been provided that gains from the alienation of shares acquired on or after 1.4.2017 in a company which is a resident of India may be taxed in India. • The tax rate on such capital gains arising from 1.4.2017-31.3.2019 should, however, not exceed 50% of the applicable tax rate on capital gains in India. • LOB Clause provides that a resident of a Contracting State shall not be entitled to the benefits of 50% of the tax rate applicable in transition period if its affairs are arranged with the primary purpose of taking advantage of concessional rate of tax. • A shell or a conduit Co. claiming to be a resident of a Contracting State shall not be entitled to this benefit. • A shell or conduit Co. is any legal entity falling within the meaning of resident with negligible or nil business operations or with no real and continuous business activities carried out in that Contracting State. LoB clause in India-Singapore Tax Treaty • The India-Singapore tax treaty has been amended to provide that capital gains on alienation of shares would be taxable in a similar manner as laid out in India-Mauritius tax treaty, subject to LoB clause. • The transition period benefit is also similar to that contained in India-Mauritius Tax Treaty.

BEPS Action Plan 7: Prevent the Artificial Avoidance of PE Status

OECD Recommendation



Review of definition of PE

To prevent tax avoidance

By way of Commissionaire Arrangements

Modification of Article 5(5) to include a person who habitually plays a principal role leading to conclusion of contracts in the definition of agent

By way of Fragmentation of business activities

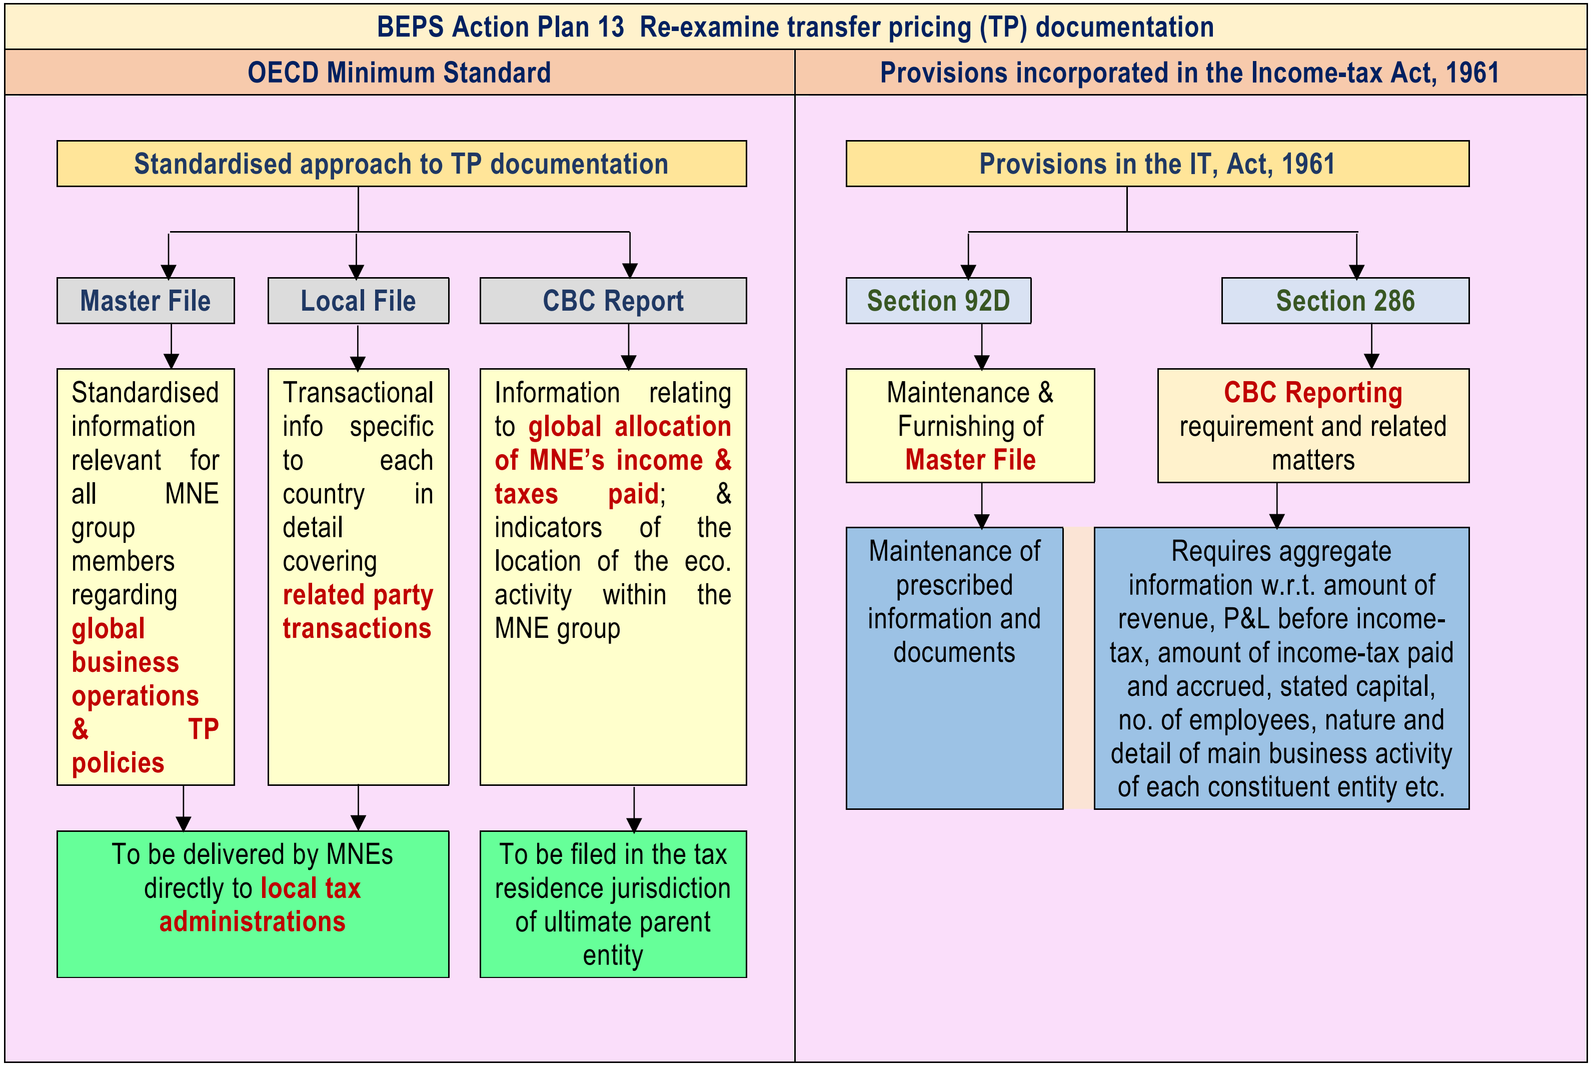
Introduction of anti-fragmentation Rule to prevent fragmentation of functions which are otherwise a whole activity to avail benefit of exemption

Provision incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961

Expanding the scope of business connection (BC) u/s 9(1)(i) of Income-tax Act, 1961

Upto A.Y.2018-19	From A.Y.2019-20
BC is established, inter alia, where a person acting on behalf of NR has and habitually exercises the authority to conclude contracts on behalf of the NR.	BC also include any business activities carried through a person who, acting on behalf of the NR, habitually concludes contracts or habitually plays the principal role leading to conclusion of contracts by the NR. Such contracts should be- (i) in the name of the NR; or (ii) for transfer of ownership of, or for the granting of right to use, property owned by that NR or that the NR has the right to use; or (iii) for provision of services by that NR



BEPS Action Plan 13 Re-examine transfer pricing (TP) documentation

OECD Minimum Standard

Standardised approach to TP documentation

- Master File → Standardised information relevant for all MNE group members regarding global business operations & TP policies
- Local File → Transactional info specific to each country in detail covering related party transactions
- Master File and Local File → To be delivered by MNEs directly to local tax administrations
- CBC Report → Information relating to global allocation of MNE's income & taxes paid; & indicators of the location of the eco. activity within the MNE group → To be filed in the tax residence jurisdiction of ultimate parent entity

Provisions incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961

Provisions in the IT, Act, 1961

- Section 92D → Maintenance & Furnishing of Master File → Maintenance of prescribed information and documents
- Section 286 → CBC Reporting requirement and related matters → Requires aggregate information w.r.t. amount of revenue, P&L before income-tax, amount of income-tax paid and accrued, stated capital, no. of employees, nature and detail of main business activity of each constituent entity etc.

BEPS Action Plan 15 Developing a Multilateral Instrument (MLI)
BEPS Report	Entry into Force of MLI
The MLI helps fight against BEPS by implementing tax treaty-related measures developed through the BEPS Project in existing bilateral treaties in a synchronized and efficient manner to – • prevent treaty abuse, • improve dispute resolution • prevent the artificial avoidance of PE status • neutralize the effects of hybrid mismatch arrangements. The MLI is flexible instrument which modifies tax treaties that are "Covered Tax Agreements". A Covered Tax Agreement is an agreement for the avoidance of double taxation that is in force between Parties to the MLI and for which both Parties have made a notification that they wish to modify the agreement using the MLI.	➢ The Multilateral Convention to implement tax treaty related measures to prevent Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS) was signed by India at Paris, France on 7th June, 2017. ➢ India had ratified the said Convention and had deposited the instrument of ratification along-with the list of Covered Tax Agreements, reservations and notifications (India's Position under the said Convention) to the Depositary on 25th June, 2019. ➢ The date of entry into force of the said Convention for India is 1st October, 2019, being the first day of the month following the expiry of a period of three calendar months beginning on 25th June, 2019, being the date of deposit by India of the instrument of ratification. ➢ The earliest date when the provisions of this Convention can take effect in India is 1st April, 2020 (six months from 1st October, 2019, the date of entry into force for India)

EXERCISE

Question 1

What do you understand by base erosion and profit shifting? Describe briefly its adverse effects.

Answer

Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS) refers to tax planning strategies that exploit gaps and mismatches in tax rules to make profits 'disappear' for tax purposes or to shift profits to locations where there is little or no real activity but the taxes are low, resulting in little or no overall corporate tax being paid.

Adverse Effects of BEPS:

(1) Governments have to cope with less revenue and a higher cost to ensure compliance.

(2) In developing countries, the lack of tax revenue leads to significant under-funding of public investment that could help foster economic growth.

(3) BEPS undermines the integrity of the tax system, as reporting of low corporate taxes is considered to be unfair. When tax laws permit businesses to reduce their tax burden by shifting their income away from jurisdictions where income producing activities are conducted, other taxpayers, especially individual taxpayers in that jurisdiction bear a greater share of the burden. This gives rise to tax fairness issues on account of individuals having to bear a higher tax burden.

(4) Enterprises that operate only in domestic markets, including family-owned businesses or new innovative businesses, may have difficulty competing with MNEs that have the ability to shift their profits across borders to avoid or reduce tax. Fair competition is harmed by the distortions induced by BEPS.

Question 2

What are the significant OECD Recommendations under Action Plan 1 of BEPS? Which recommendation has been adopted in Indian tax laws?

Answer

The OECD has recommended several options to tackle the direct tax challenges which include:

(1) Modifying the existing Permanent Establishment (PE) rule to provide that whether an enterprise engaged in fully de-materialized digital activities would constitute a PE, if it maintained a significant digital presence in another country's economy.

(2) A virtual fixed place of business PE in the concept of PE i.e., creation of a PE when the enterprise maintains a website on a server of another enterprise located in a jurisdiction and carries on business through that website.

(3) Imposition of a final withholding tax on certain payments for digital goods or services provided by a foreign e-commerce provider or imposition of a equalisation levy on consideration for certain digital transactions received by a non-resident from a resident or from a non-resident having permanent establishment in other contracting state.

Taking into consideration the potential of new digital economy and the rapidly evolving nature of business operations, it becomes necessary to address the challenges in terms of taxation of such digital transactions.

In order to address these challenges, Chapter VIII of the Finance Act, 2016, titled "Equalisation Levy", provides for an equalisation levy of 6% of the amount of consideration for specified services received or receivable by a non-resident not having permanent establishment in India, from a resident in India who carries out business or profession, or from a non-resident having permanent establishment in India.

Meaning of "Specified Service":

(1) Online advertisement;

(2) Any provision for digital advertising space or any other facility or service for the purpose of online advertisement;

Specified Service also includes any other service as may be notified by the Central Government.

Further, in order to reduce burden of small players in the digital domain, it is also provided that no such levy shall be made if the aggregate amount of consideration for specified services received or receivable by a non-resident from a person resident in India or from a non-resident having a permanent establishment in India does not exceed ₹ 1 lakh in any previous year.

Note: The Finance Act, 2018 has amended section 9(1)(i) to provide that significant economic presence would also constitute business connection from A.Y.2019-20. However, Rules in this regard are yet to be notified

Question 3

Discuss the provision incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961 in line with the OECD recommendations under Action Plan 4 of BEPS.

Answer

In line with the recommendations of OECD BEPS Action Plan 4, section 94B has been inserted in the Income-tax Act, 1961 by the Finance Act, 2017 to provide a cap on the interest expense that can be claimed by an entity to its associated enterprise. The total interest paid in excess of 30% of its earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization (EBITDA) or interest paid or payable to associated enterprise for that previous year, whichever is less, shall not be deductible.

The provision is applicable to an Indian company, or a permanent establishment of a foreign company, being the borrower, who pays interest in respect of any form of debt issued by a non-resident who is an 'associated enterprise' of the borrower. Further, the debt is deemed to be treated as issued by an associated enterprise where it provides an implicit or explicit guarantee to the lender, being a non-associated enterprise, or deposits a corresponding and matching amount of funds with such lender.

The provision allows for carry forward of disallowed interest expense for 8 assessment years immediately succeeding the assessment year for which the disallowance is first made and deduction against the income computed under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" to the extent of maximum allowable interest expenditure.

In order to target only large interest payments, it provides for a threshold of interest expenditure of ₹ 1 crore in respect of any debt issued by a non-resident associated enterprise exceeding which the provision would be applicable. Banks and Insurance business are excluded from the ambit of the said provisions keeping in view of special nature of these businesses.

Question 4

Describe the three tier structure for transfer pricing documentation mandated by BEPS Action Plan 13.

Answer

Action 13 contains a three-tiered standardized approach to transfer pricing documentation which consists of:

(a) Master file: Master file requires MNEs to provide tax administrations with high-level information regarding their global business operations and transfer pricing policies. The master file is to be delivered by MNEs directly to local tax administrations.

(b) Local file: Local file requires maintaining of transactional information specific to each country in detail covering related-party transactions and the amounts involved in those transactions. In addition, relevant financial information regarding specific transactions, a comparability analysis and analysis of the selection and application of the most appropriate transfer pricing method should also be captured. The local file is to be delivered by MNEs directly to local tax administrations.

(c) Country-by-country (CBC) report: CBC report requires MNEs to provide an annual report of economic indicators viz. the amount of revenue, profit before income tax, income tax paid and accrued in relation to the tax jurisdiction in which they do business. CBC reports are required to be filed in the jurisdiction of tax residence of the ultimate parent entity, being subsequently shared between other jurisdictions through automatic exchange of information mechanism.

Question 5

Explain the nexus approach recommended by OECD in BEPS Action Plan 5 which has been adopted in the Income-tax Act, 1961.

Answer

In India, the Finance Act, 2016 has introduced a concessional taxation regime for royalty income from patents for the purpose of promoting indigenous research and development and making India a global hub for research and development. The purpose of the concessional taxation regime is to encourage entities to retain and commercialise existing patents and for developing new innovative patented products. Further, this beneficial taxation regime will incentivise entities to locate the high-value jobs associated with the development, manufacture and exploitation of patents in India.

The nexus approach has been recommended by the OECD under BEPS Action Plan 5. This approach requires attribution and taxation of income arising from exploitation of Intellectual property (IP) in the jurisdiction where substantial research and development (R & D) activities are undertaken instead of the jurisdiction of legal ownership. Accordingly, section 115BBF has been inserted in the Income-tax Act, 1961 to provide that where the total income of the eligible assessee (being a person resident in India who is the true and first inventor of the invention and whose name is entered in the patent register as the patentee in accordance with the Patents Act, 1970 and includes every such person, being the true and the first inventor of the invention, where more than one person is registered as patentee under Patents Act, 1970 in respect of that patent.) includes any income by way of royalty in respect of a patent developed and registered in India, then such royalty shall be taxable at the rate of 10% (plus applicable surcharge and cess). For this purpose, developed means atleast 75% of the expenditure should be incurred in India by the eligible assessee for any invention in respect of which patent is granted under the Patents Act, 1970.

What are the ways in which hybrid mismatch arrangements are used to achieve unintended double non-taxation or long-term tax deferral?

Answer

Hybrid mismatch arrangements are sometimes used to achieve unintended double non-taxation or long-term tax deferral in one or more of the following ways -

(1) Creation of two deductions for a single borrowal;

(2) Generation of deductions without corresponding income inclusions;

(3) Misuse of foreign tax credit; and

(4) Participation exemption regimes.

OVERVIEW OF MODEL TAX CONVENTIONS

LEARNING OUTCOMES

After studying this chapter, you would be able to:

- appreciate the need for Model Tax Convention;
- appreciate the key features of the OECD and UN Model Tax Conventions;
- identify the subject of the various articles of the OECD and UN Model Tax Conventions;
- appreciate the broad similarities and differences between the principles enshrined in certain articles of the OECD Model Tax Convention vis-à-vis the corresponding articles of the UN Model Tax Convention.

8.1 INTRODUCTION

In order to enable various countries to enter into treaties, which are standardized to some extent, Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) and the United Nations (UN) have developed certain Model Tax Treaties. These treaties can be used by various countries as a starting point in their negotiations with other countries. While these Models are not legally binding, they have been extensively used by various countries as a reference point while entering into Tax Treaties. In some cases, they have been incorporated verbatim or with minor changes. However, in other cases, countries have made suitable changes in the draft model according to their economic environment and commercial and tax considerations.

The significant model conventions have been briefly discussed hereunder:

→ OECD Model - The emergence of present form of OECD Model Convention can be traced back to 1927, when the Fiscal Committee of the League of Nations prepared the first draft of Model Form applicable to all countries. In 1946 the model convention was published in Geneva by the Fiscal Committee of U.N. Social & Economic Council and later by the Organisation for European Economic Co-operation (O.E.E.C) in 1963. However, in 1961, the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (O.E.C.D) was established, with developed countries as its members, to succeed the O.E.E.C., and OECD approved the draft presented to the OEEC. In 1977, the final draft was prepared in the present form which has been revised several times; the latest being in the year 2017.

OECD Model is essentially a model treaty between two developed nations. This model advocates the residence principle, i.e., it lays emphasis on the right of state of residence to tax the income.

→ UN Model – In 1968, the United Nations set up an Adhoc Group of Experts from various developed and developing countries to prepare a draft model convention between developed and developing countries. In 1980, this Group finalised the UN Model Convention in its present form. It has further been revised a number of times, the latest being in the year 2017.

The UN Model is a compromise between the source principle and the residence principle. However, it gives more weight to the source principle as against the residence principle of the OECD Model. UN Model is designed to encourage flow of investments from the developed countries to developing countries. It takes into account sharing of tax-revenue with the country providing capital.

The United Nations Model Convention seeks to be balanced in its approach. As a corollary to the principle of taxation at source, the Articles of the Convention are based on a recognition by the source country that

(a) taxation of income from foreign capital should take into account expenses allocable to the earnings of the income so that such income is taxed on a net basis,

(b) taxation should not be so high as to discourage investment and

(c) it should take into account the appropriateness of the sharing of revenue with the country providing the capital.

In addition, the United Nations Model Convention embodies the idea that it would be appropriate for the residence country to extend a measure of relief from double taxation through either a foreign tax credit or an exemption, as is also the case with the OECD Model Convention.

→ US Model – This Model Convention is used by the United States while entering into tax treaties with various countries. The US Model Convention has been revised in the year 2016.

These Models have a significant influence on international treaty practice, and have important common provisions. The similarities between these Models highlight the areas of consistency. The areas of divergence indicate some critical differences in approach or emphasis which need special focus. These differences are mainly in relation to the taxing rights which would be available to a country under domestic law and the extent to which any country should forego, under a bilateral tax treaty, in order to avoid double taxation and encourage investment.

The above model conventions have been illustrated in the following diagram:

Now, let us discuss the comparative analysis of some of the significant Articles in the Model Tax conventions

8.2 COMPARATIVE ANALYSIS OF SOME OF THE SIGNIFICANT ARTICLES OF OECD AND UN MODEL CONVENTIONS

Title and Preamble to the Model Conventions

The title of the UN Model Convention reads as follows:

"Convention between (State A) and (State B) for the elimination of double taxation with respect to taxes on income and capital and the prevention of tax avoidance and evasion"

There is now a specific reference to "the prevention of tax avoidance and evasion" in the title to emphasize its significance in the Model Convention.

The Preamble to the UN Model Convention reads as follows:

"(State A) and (State B),

Desiring to further develop their economic relationship and to enhance their cooperation in tax matters,

Intending to conclude a Convention for the elimination of double taxation with respect to taxes on income and on capital without creating opportunities for non-taxation or reduced taxation through tax avoidance or evasion (including through treaty-shopping arrangements aimed at obtaining reliefs provided in this Convention for the indirect benefit of residents of third States)"

The Title and Preamble to the OECD Model Convention is almost identical to that of the UN Model Convention. The only minor difference is the reference to "tax evasion and avoidance" in the place of "tax avoidance and evasion" in the Title and Preamble.

The Preamble now clearly indicates that the UN and OECD Model Conventions do not intend to create opportunities for non-taxation or reduced taxation through tax avoidance or evasion including through treaty shopping arrangements.

This language of the Preamble would help ensuring that the provisions of the Conventions are interpreted and applied to prevent abusive treaty shopping arrangements.

Significant Articles in the Model Conventions

Over the years, both Model Conventions have seen a lot of convergence and the language is identical in quite a few Articles. However, there are key differences in approach and language in some Articles which will be the focus of our discussion, in the section below.

The jurisdiction or country of residence of the taxpayer is referred to as the Residence State and the jurisdiction or country where the source of income is located is referred to as the Source State.

Article 1: Persons Covered

The OECD and UN Model Convention would apply to persons who are residents of one or both of the Contracting States.

For the purposes of these Conventions, income derived by or through an entity or arrangement that is treated as wholly or partly fiscally transparent under the tax law of either Contracting State shall be considered to be income of a resident of a Contracting State. However, the same would be treated as income only to the extent that the income is treated, for purposes of taxation by that State, as the income of a resident of that State.

Example

State A and State B have concluded a treaty identical to the Model Tax Convention. State A considers that an entity established in State B is a company, and taxes that entity on interest that it receives from a debtor resident in State A. Under the domestic law of State B, however, the entity is treated as a partnership, and the two members in that entity, who share equally all its income, are each taxed on half of the interest. One of the members is a resident of State B and the other one is a resident of a country with which States A and B do not have a treaty. The paragraph provides that in such case, half of the interest shall be considered, for the purposes of Article 11, to be income of a resident of State B.

Note – The above example forms part of the Commentary to the UN Model Tax Convention.*

With the exception of benefits granted under certain Articles of these conventions, these Conventions would not affect the taxation, by a Contracting State, of its resident.

Article 2: Taxes Covered

The OECD and UN Conventions would apply to taxes on income and on capital imposed on behalf of a Contracting State or of its political subdivisions or local authorities, irrespective of the manner in which they are levied.

Taxes on income and on capital cover all taxes imposed on total income, on total capital, or on elements of income or of capital, including taxes on gains from the alienation of movable or immovable property, taxes on the total amounts of wages or salaries paid by enterprises, as well as taxes on capital appreciation.

The existing taxes to which the Conventions would apply in case of each Contracting State are specifically to be mentioned.

The Convention shall apply also to any identical or substantially similar taxes which are imposed after the date of signature of the Convention in addition to, or in place of, the existing taxes. The competent authorities of the Contracting States shall notify each other of significant changes made to their tax law.

Article 4: Residence

A taxpayer has to demonstrate that he is a resident of one or both Contracting States to be able to gain access to a tax treaty and avail the benefits thereunder.

The concept of 'resident of a Contracting State' has various functions and assumes significance in the following three scenarios:

- In determining a convention's scope of application;
- In solving cases where double taxation arises as a consequence of double residence;
- In solving cases where double taxation arises as a consequence of taxation in the state of residence and also in the state of source of income.

As per paragraph 1 of the UN Model Convention, the term "resident of a Contracting State" means any person who, under the laws of that State, is liable to tax therein by reason of his domicile, residence, place of incorporation, place of management or any other criterion of a similar nature, and also includes that State and any political subdivision or local authority thereof. This term, however, does not include any person who is liable to tax in that State in respect only of income from sources in that State or capital situated therein.

Paragraph 1 of the OECD Model Convention is worded on similar lines. However, it does not contain reference to place of incorporation.

Where by reason of the provisions of paragraph 1, an individual is a resident of both Contracting States, then his status shall be determined as follows:

(a) He shall be deemed to be a resident only of the State in which he has a permanent home available to him; if he has a permanent home available to him in both States, he shall be deemed to be a resident only of the State with which his personal and economic relations are closer (centre of vital interests);

(b) If the State in which he has his centre of vital interests cannot be determined, or if he has not a permanent home available to him in either State, he shall be deemed to be a resident only of the State in which he has an habitual abode;

(c) If he has an habitual abode in both States or in neither of them, he shall be deemed to be a resident only of the State of which he is a national;

(d) If he is a national of both States or of neither of them, the competent authorities of the Contracting States shall settle the question by mutual agreement.

As per paragraph 3 of this Article, where by reason of the provisions of paragraph 1, a person other than an individual is a resident of both Contracting States, the competent authorities of the Contracting States shall endeavour to determine by mutual agreement, the Contracting State of which such person shall be deemed to be a resident for the purposes of the Convention. They shall do so having regard to its place of effective management, the place where it is incorporated or otherwise constituted and any other relevant factors. In the absence of such mutual agreement, such person shall not be entitled to any relief or exemption from tax provided by this Convention except to the extent and in such manner as may be agreed upon by the competent authorities of the Contracting States.

The situation of dual residence may arise in case of companies in case where one Contracting State attaches importance to the place of incorporation and the other State to the place of effective management. The tie-breaker rule traditionally has been ‘place of effective management’. Even India has used place of effective management in some of its treaties. In the latest update by OECD and UN, this has changed to a case by case approach considering the number of tax avoidance cases involving dual resident companies. Determination under the case by case approach will be requested by the concerned taxpayer through Article 25 (Mutual Agreement Procedure). Competent authorities will then rely on a range of factors to resolve the question of dual residency.

The last sentence of paragraph 3 of this Article provides that in the absence of mutual agreement, the taxpayer would not be entitled to any relief or exemption from tax provided by this Convention except to the extent and in such manner as may be agreed upon by the competent authorities of the Contracting States. This will not, however, prevent the taxpayer from being considered a resident of each Contracting State for purposes other than granting treaty reliefs or exemptions to that person.

Article 5: Permanent Establishment

The concept of “Permanent Establishment” (PE), defined in Article 5, has considerable importance as business profits (Article 7) of an enterprise cannot be taxed by a Source State unless it proves the existence of a PE.

The comparable term to PE under the Indian tax law is “business connection” [Section 9(1)(i)]. Generally speaking, the concept of “business connection” is wider than PE and hence, a business connection may exist even without a PE, but the absence of a “business connection” may indicate absence of a PE.

As the PE concept gives the Source State the right to tax, it is an important Article for developing countries. Hence, the UN Model Convention varies from the OECD Model Convention in the following respects:

- As per Article 5(3)(a) of the OECD Model Convention, a building site or construction or installation project constitutes a PE if it lasts more than twelve months. The UN Model Convention is wider as it covers “assembly and installation project” and “supervisory” activities in connection thereto and requires the activity in question to continue only for six months.

- Article 5(3)(b) of the UN Model makes a specific reference to Service PE which is absent in the OECD Model. Article 5(3)(b) of the UN Model reads as follows –

  “The furnishing of services, including consultancy services, by an enterprise through employees or other personnel engaged by the enterprise for such purpose, but only if activities of that nature continue within a Contracting State for a period or periods aggregating more than 183 days in any 12 month period commencing or ending in the fiscal year concerned”.

  In the absence of a Service PE reference in OECD Model, the presence has to be ascertained through general principles under Article 5(1).

- Article 5(1) states the "basic rule" for a PE and expresses the primary meaning of PE. The definition of PE in Article 5 does not use the qualifying words "unless the context otherwise requires". As such, the definition needs to be followed in all cases unless specifically excluded.

  Paraphrasing Article 5(1), a PE exists if the following conditions are satisfied cumulatively:

  ➢ There is an “enterprise”.

  ➢ Such enterprise is carrying on a "business";

- ➢ There is a "place of business";
- ➢ Such place of business is at the disposal of the enterprise (may be owned / rented but must be one which the enterprise has the effective power to use);
- ➢ The place of business is "fixed", that is, it must be established at a distinct place with a certain degree of permanence

The business of the enterprise is carried on wholly or partially through this fixed place of business.

A PE does not exist unless all the aforesaid conditions are satisfied.

- As per Article 5(2), the term "permanent establishment" includes especially:

  a) a place of management;

  b) a branch;

  c) an office;

  d) a factory;

  e) a workshop, and

  f) a mine, an oil or gas well, a quarry or any other place of extraction of natural resources.

- Agency PE under OECD and UN Models targets activities done by a dependent agent of the enterprise in the Source State. The recent update expands the definition of dependent agent PE to include instances when an agent habitually concludes contracts, or habitually plays the principal role leading to the conclusion of contracts routinely concluded without material modification by the enterprise.

- The UN Model Convention has an additional Article 5(6) relating to insurance which is absent in OECD Model.

  As per this Article, an insurance enterprise of a Contracting State shall, except in regard to re-insurance, be deemed to have a permanent establishment in the other Contracting State if it collects premiums in the territory of that other State or insures risks situated therein through a person.

  In the absence of similar Article in the OECD Model, a PE of an insurance Enterprise has to be determined in accordance with provisions of Article 5(1) or 5(2) of the OECD model.

Article 7: Business Profits

Business profits of an enterprise can only be taxed by the Residence State. Right of Source State to tax business profits of an enterprise only exists if a PE exists in its jurisdiction.

As per the approach under the OECD Model Convention, once a PE is proven, the Source State can tax only such profits as are attributable to the PE. The UN Model Convention amplifies this attribution principle by a limited Force of Attraction rule (FOA).

The FOA rule implies that when a foreign enterprise sets up a PE in State of Source, it brings itself within the fiscal jurisdiction of that State (State of Source) to such a degree that profits that the enterprise derives from Source State of Source, whether through the PE or not, can be taxed by it (State of Source State).

As per Article 7 of the UN Model Convention, if the enterprise carries on business in the other Contracting State through a PE, the profits of the enterprise may be taxed in the other State but only so much of them as is attributable to:

(a) that PE;

(b) sales in that other State of goods or merchandise of the same or similar kind as those sold through that PE; or

(c) other business activities carried on in that other State of the same or similar kind as those effected through that PE.

Article 11: Interest

Paragraph 1 of this Article provides the right to Residence State to tax interest. Paragraph 2, however, also confers right to the Source State to tax interest. Generally, the interest is taxed in the Source State at a given rate on gross basis. However, if the beneficial owner of the interest is a resident of the other Contracting State, the tax so charged cannot exceed a specified percentage of the gross amount of the interest. The OECD Model specifies the percentage as 10%, but the UN Model leaves this percentage to be established through bilateral negotiations.

It may be noted that the definition of interest in both the models viz. OECD and UN Model is similar in that it essentially means income from debt claims of every kind, whether or not secured by mortgage and whether or not carrying a right to participate in the debtor's profits, and in particular, income from government securities and income from bonds or debentures, including premiums and prizes attaching to such securities, bonds or debentures. Penalty charges for late payment are not regarded as interest for the purpose of this Article.

Article 12: Royalties

This Article provides the right of Contracting States to tax income from royalty.

Key differences between the two Models are as follows:

- As per the OECD Model, royalties arising in Source State and beneficially owned by resident of the Residence State are taxable only in Residence State. However, the UN Model provides that royalties may be taxed in the Residence State. Hence, the UN Model departs from the principle of exclusive right to tax provided to Residence State in the OECD Model. Thus, under the UN Model, the Source State may also tax royalties. However, if the beneficial owner is a resident of the Residence State, the tax charged by the Source State cannot exceed the specified percentage of the gross amount of royalties. This specified percentage is to be established through bilateral negotiations.

- The definition of 'royalties' under the OECD Model does not include the following: (a) rentals for films or tapes used for radio or television broadcasting and (b) equipment rentals like rentals for industrial, commercial or scientific equipment.

Article 12A: Fees for Technical Services

India is the pioneer of the FTS concept which was added to the Income-tax Act, 1961 since 1976. Some of our tax treaties do contain a specific provision for FTS.

In its 2017 update, the UN Model has inserted a specific article pertaining to Fees for Technical Services (FTS). There is no specific reference to FTS in the OECD Model.

Paragraph 1 of Article 12A provides that the FTS may be taxed in the Residence State but does not provide that the FTS is exclusively taxable in the Residence State.

Paragraph 2 establishes the right of the country in which FTS arises to tax in accordance with its domestic law, subject to the limitation on the maximum rate of tax, if the beneficial owner is a resident of the other Contracting State. The maximum rate of tax is to be established through bilateral negotiations.

FTS is defined as payments for managerial, technical or consultancy services but excludes payment to an employee, payment for teaching in an educational institution or for teaching by an educational institution, payments by an individual for services for personal use. Management involves application of knowledge, skill or expertise in the control or administration of the conduct of a commercial enterprise or organization. Technical involves the application of specialized knowledge, skill or expertise with respect to a particular art, science, profession or occupation. Fees received for services provided by regulated professions such as law, accounting, architecture, medicine, engineering would constitute FTS. The ordinary meaning of "consultancy" involves the provision of advice or services of a specialized nature.

An example of FTS can be seen from the following facts: R Company is a financial institution resident in State R. R Company provides a wide variety of financial services to its customers, including acceptance of deposits, extension of credit, guarantees, foreign exchange, negotiable instruments. R Company's business is conducted primarily in State R, but it also has clients in other countries, including State S. State R and State S have a tax treaty which contains an article akin to Article 12A. Payments received for services provided by a financial institution would constitute FTS if the services involve use of knowledge, skill and expertise to provide research, analysis or advice to a specific client related to particular circumstances. This has to be distinguished from provision of non-specialized services such as payment and transmission services, debit and credit card services, etc.

Article 13: Capital Gains

This is the most commonly used Article and it provides for the taxation of income arising from transfer of a capital asset, including transfer of shares. The right to tax income from capital gains may be exclusively with the Residence State, or shared between the Residence and Source States.

The Article does not specify what is a capital gain and how is to be computed, this being left to the applicable domestic law. The Article contains rules for taxation of gains made from alienation of different assets such as immovable property, immovable property forming part of a PE, ships and aircrafts, etc. In respect of shares, both Models have been updated and are identical. Rights are conferred to the Source State if more than 50 percent of the value of shares during the preceding 365 days is derived from immovable property in such Source State.

Article 14: Independent Personal Services

Article 14 is only present now in the UN Model. It was deleted from the OECD Model on 29-4-2000 on the basis of OECD Report (2000) on "Issues Related to Article 14 of the OECD Model Tax Convention". The Effect of deletion of Article 14 is that income derived from Professional Services etc., is now dealt with as 'Business Profits' (Article 7) under the OECD MC.

This Article deals with the taxation of income derived by a person for professional or specified services which are offered in the Source State through some presence. This article on Independent personal services in the UN Model states as under:

(1) Income derived by a resident of a Contracting State in respect of professional services or other activities of an independent character shall be taxable only in that State except in the following circumstances, when such income may also be taxed in the other Contracting State:

  (a) If he has a fixed base regularly available to him in the other Contracting State for the purpose of performing his activities; in that case, only so much of the income as is attributable to that fixed base may be taxed in that other Contracting State; or

  (b) If his stay in the other Contracting State is for a period or periods amounting to or exceeding in the aggregate 183 days in any twelve-month period commencing or ending in the fiscal year concerned; in that case, only so much of the income as is derived from his activities performed in that other State may be taxed in that other State.

(2) The term "professional services" includes especially independent scientific, literary, artistic, educational or teaching activities as well as the independent activities of physicians, lawyers, engineers, architects, dentists and accountants.

Thus, the Article covers independent activities involving professional skills rendered by individuals on a principal to principal basis. The meaning of the term "professional services" is illustrated by some examples of typical liberal professions. The enumeration has an explanatory character only and is not exhaustive. It excludes industrial and commercial activities that are covered under the Article on Business Profits. Likewise, professional services while in employment which are covered under the Article on Dependent Personal Services, e.g. a physician serving as a medical officer in a factory. Income of Artists, Athletes and Sportsmen, etc. is not covered by this Article. Also, income from Fees from Technical Services is also not covered.

Article 21: Other Income

This Article deals with taxation of items of income which are not specifically taxable under any other specific Article. Key differences are as under:

- OECD approach envisages that the exclusive right to tax is with the Residence State. UN Model contains an additional paragraph, Article 21(3), which provides that Source State may also tax other income.
- Article 21(2) of both OECD and UN Model provides that for income effectively connected with a PE maintained in a Contracting State by a resident of the other Contracting State, taxation is governed by the provisions of Article 7 (Business Profits). Additionally, UN Model provides that if the aforesaid income is effectively connected with a fixed base situated in a Contracting State by a resident of the other Contracting State, taxation would be governed by the provisions of Article 14 (Independent personal services).

Articles 23A & 23B : Elimination of Double Taxation

In many cases, the application of tax treaty may result into double taxation for tax payers. In such a case, in order to provide relief to such tax payers, Articles 23A and 23B which contains provisions relating to elimination of double taxation have to applied. Articles 23A and 23B provide for the mechanism through which tax credit/exemption may be available in the Residence State for taxes deducted in the Source State.

The OECD and UN Model Conventions specify two approaches- Exemption method (Article 23A) and Credit method (Article 23B). Under the exemption method, tax exemption may be available in the Residence State. Under the credit method, tax credit may be available in the Residence State for taxes deducted in the Source State. These methods are not mutually exclusive and there may be cases where a treaty may adopt exemption method for certain types of income and credit method for other incomes.

The double taxation referred to here, is juridical double taxation, meaning the same income or capital is taxable in the hands of the same person by more than one State. It does not thus, encompass situations of economic double taxation, i.e. where two different persons are taxable in respect of the same income or capital. If two States wish to solve problems of economic double taxation, they must do so in bilateral negotiations.

Article 25: Mutual Agreement Procedure

There may be a situation wherein a tax payer may believe that the treatment accorded by either or both Contracting States is not in accordance with the provisions of the tax treaty. In such a case, there is a need for dispute resolution which is addressed by this Article. This Article requires competent authorities of both countries to endeavor to resolve the conflict by engaging in bilateral negotiations.

The UN Model Convention provides two alternatives - Alternative A and Alternative B, for the article on Mutual Agreement Procedure which were introduced in 2011. Under OECD Model the taxpayer may make a request to either Contracting State while UN Model (Alternative A) contemplates taxpayer going to Residence State or the country of his nationality. Alternative B of UN Model Article 25 contemplates reference to an arbitration process as part of the Mutual Agreement Procedure. The decision arrived at, through the process is binding unless a person directly affected does not accept it.

Key differences between the OECD Model Convention (Article 25) and UN Model Convention (Article 25B - Alternative B) are as follows:

- Article 25B(5) of the UN Model provides that an arbitration may be initiated if the competent authorities are unable to reach an agreement on a case within three years from the presentation of that case. However, Article 25(5) of the OECD Model provides a time limit of two years from the date when all the information required by the competent authorities in order to address the case need to be provided to both competent authorities.
- Article 25B(5) of the UN Model provides that arbitration must be requested by the competent authority of one of the Contracting States. Once such a request is made, the taxpayer will be notified. However, as per Article 25(5) of the OECD Model, arbitration must be requested in writing by the person who initiated the case.
- Article 25B(5) of the UN Model allows the competent authorities to depart from the arbitration decision if they agree to do so within six months after the decision has been communicated to them.

Article 26: Exchange of Information

In order to complete tax cases, a country may require certain information which may be available with the treaty partner. Article 26 provides for the information which may be exchanged and the manner in which such a request has to be made. The purpose of Article 26 is to facilitate effective exchange of information between Contracting States. From the perspective of many developing countries, Article 26 is particularly important not only for curtailing cross-border tax evasion and avoidance, but also to curtail the capital flight that is often accomplished through such evasion and avoidance.

The OECD and UN Model Conventions are similar with respect to this Article. A Contracting State cannot be expected to provide confidential financial information to another Contracting State unless it has confidence that the information will not be disclosed to unauthorized persons. A Contracting State can avoid the exchange of information obligations by showing that the information pertains to communication between an attorney and his client which is protected from disclosure under domestic law. However, lack of interest or use in such information cannot form the basis for a Contracting State to not co-operate with the exchange of information obligations.

> Resources: The discussion on Model Tax Conventions in the above chapter is essentially based on the text and commentaries of the OECD and UN Model Tax Conventions, 2017 available at the websites http://www.oecd.org/tax/treaties/ and http://www.un.org, respectively.

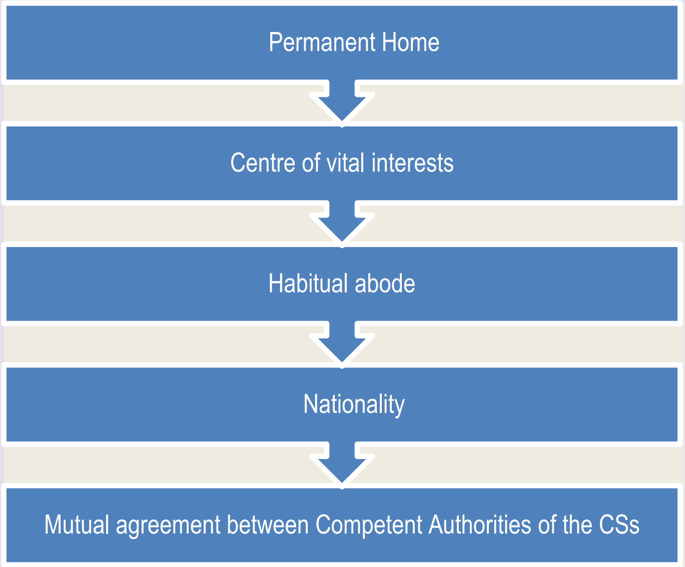
Tie-breaker Rule

In case of individuals

Where an individual is a resident of both CSs as per domestic tax laws of that CS, then, his residential status shall be determined by applying the tie-breaker rule in the following sequence:



Permanent Home
Centre of vital interests
Habitual abode
Nationality
Mutual agreement between Competent Authorities of the CSs

In case of companies

- Dual residence arises where one CS attaches importance to POI and the other CS to the POEM.
- The tie-breaker test involves a case by case approach considering the no. of tax avoidance cases involving dual resident Cos.

- Request has to be made by the tax payer through Article 25 (MAP).
- Competent Authorities will rely on range of factors to resolve the question of dual residency.

5 Permanent establishment (PE)

Meaning of PE [Article 5(1)]

- There should be an "enterprise" (Entr).
- Such Entr should be carrying on a "business";
- There should be a "place of business (POB)";
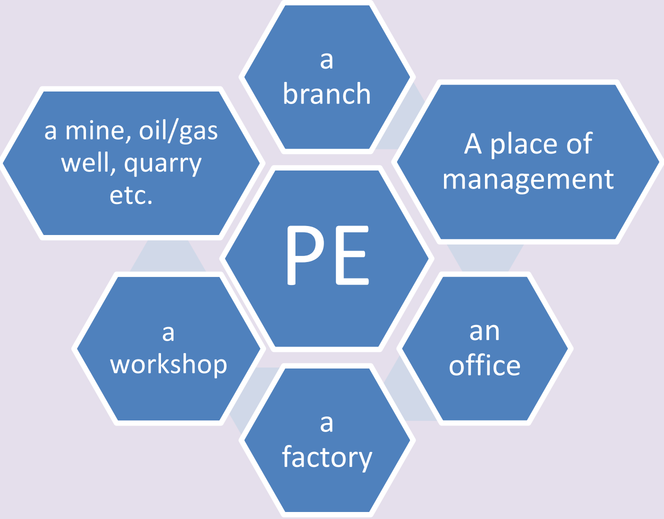
- Such place of business (POB) should be at the disposal of the Entr (may be owned / rented but must be one which the Entr has the effective power to use);
- The POB should be "fixed", i.e., it must be established at a distinct place with a certain degree of permanence
- The business of the enterprise is carried on wholly or partially through this fixed POB.

A PE does not exist unless all the aforesaid conditions are satisfied.

Specific inclusions in the meaning of PE [Article 5(2)]



Expansion of scope of Agency PE

- Agency PE targets activities done by a dependent agent (DA) of the Entr in the Source State (SS).
- DAPE now includes instances when an agent habitually concludes contracts, or habitually plays the principal role leading to the conclusion of contracts routinely concluded without material modification by the enterprise.

PE of an Insurance Enterprise

UN MC	OECD MC
UN MC has an additional Article 5(6) relating to insurance. An insurance Entr of a CS is deemed to have a PE in	In the absence of similar Article in the OECD MC, a PE of an insurance Entr is to be determined the other CS if it collects premiums in the territory of that other CS or insures risks situated therein through a person.	in accord with Article 5(1) or 5(2).

Chapter III : Taxation of Income

7 Business profits

- Right of CS to tax business profits (BPs)

OECD MC	UN MC
BPs of an Entr can only be taxed by the Residence State (RS). Right of Source State (SS) to tax BPs of an enterprise only exists if a PE exists in its jurisdiction.
Once a PE is proven, the SS can tax only such profits as are attributable to the PE	✚ The attribution principle is amplified by a limited Force of Attraction rule (FOA). ✚ The FOA rule implies that when a foreign enterprise sets up a PE in SS, it brings itself within the fiscal jurisdiction of that State to such a degree that profits that the Entr derives therefrom, whether through the PE or not, can be taxed by it (i.e., the SS). ✚ Accordingly, if the Entr carries on business in the other CS through a PE, the profits of the Entr may be taxed in the other CS but only so much of them as is attributable to: (a) that PE; (b) sales in that other CS of goods or merchandise of the same or similar kind as those sold through that PE; or (c) other business activities carried on in that other State of the same or similar kind as those effected through that PE.

11 Interest

- Right of CSs to tax interest

Para of Article	Right of CS to tax interest
1	Confers the right to RS to tax interest
2	Confers right to the SS to tax interest. Generally, interest is taxed in the SS at a given rate on gross basis. However, if the beneficial owner of the interest is a resident of the other CS, the tax so charged ≤ specified % of the gross interest. The specified % as per OECD MC is 10%, but the UN MC leaves this % to be established through bilateral negotiations.

- Definition of interest in OECD & UN MCs - Interest means income from debt claims of every kind,
  - whether or not secured by mortgage and
  - whether or not carrying a right to participate in the debtor's profits.

Specific inclusions in the definition of interest as per OECD & UN MCs

- income from govt securities
- income from bonds or debentures
- premiums and prizes attaching to such securities, bonds or debentures.

Note - Interest does not include penalty charges for late payment.

12 Royalties (Roy)

	OECD MC	UN MC
Right of CS to tax Roy. income	Roy. arising in SS and beneficially owned by resident of the RS is taxable only in RS. Thus, RS has exclusive right to tax royalty income.	Roy may also be taxed in the SS. However, if the beneficial owner is a resident of the RS, the tax charged by SS ≤ the specified %, (to be established through bilateral negotiations) of gross royalty.
Definition of Roy	Definition of Royalty does not include: (a) rentals for films/tapes used for radio/ TV broadcasting; and (b) rentals for industrial, commercial or scientific equipment.	Royalty includes: (a) rentals for films or tapes used for radio or TV broadcasting and (b) equipment rentals like rentals for industrial, commercial or scientific equipment.

12A FTS

In its 2017 update, the UN MC has inserted a specific article pertaining to Fees for Technical Services (FTS). There is no specific reference to FTS in OECD MC.

Right of CS to tax FTS [UN Model]

Para of Article	Right of CS to tax FTS
1	Confers right to the RS to tax FTS. However, does not state that FTS is exclusively taxable in the RS.
2	Establishes the right of the SS to tax FTS in accordance with its domestic law, subject to limitation on the max. rate of tax, to be established through bilateral negotiations, if the beneficial owner is a resident of the other CS.

These methods are not mutually exclusive and there may be cases where a treaty may adopt exemption method for certain types of income and credit method for other incomes.

- Juridical DT and Economic DT:

	Juridical DT	Economic DT
Meaning	The same income or capital is taxable in the hands of the same person by more than one State	Two different persons are taxable in respect of the same income or capital
Example	FTS may be taxable in the hands of the recipient both in the RS as well as in SS, based on the domestic laws of the CSs.	In respect of dividend distributed by a Co., DDT may be payable by the Co. in SS, whereas the dividend may be taxable in the hands of the shareholder of the other CS, on the basis of his residence.
Type of DT addressed by Article 23A & 23B	Articles 23A & 23B address Juridical DT.	The Articles do not address Economic DT. If two States wish to solve problems of economic DT, they must do so in bilateral negotiations.

Chapter VI : Special Provisions

25 Mutual agreement procedure (MAP)

<td>Exchange of information (EOI)</td>
<td>✚ Purpose of Article 26
In order to complete tax cases, a country may require certain info which may be available with the treaty partner.
Article 26 provides for:
• the info which may be exchanged
• the manner in which such a request has to be made.
✚ Importance of Article 26:
• facilitates effective exchange of information between CSs.
• curtails cross-border tax evasion and avoidance,
• curtails the capital flight that is often accomplished through tax evasion & avoidance. This is particularly relevant in the perspective of developing countries.
✚ Similar provisions contained in OECD and UN MCs
• A CS cannot be expected to provide confidential financial info to another CS unless it has confidence that the info will not be disclosed to unauthorized persons.
• A CS can avoid the EOI obligations by showing that the info pertains to communication between an attorney and his client which is protected from disclosure under domestic law.
• Lack of interest or use in such info cannot, however, form the basis for a CS to not co-operate with the EOI obligations.</td>

EXERCISE

Question 1

Explain briefly the significant difference between the UN and OECD Model Tax Convention.

Answer

OECD Model is essentially a model treaty between two developed nations whereas UN Model is a model convention between a developed country and a developing country.

Further, OECD Model advocates the residence principle, i.e., it lays emphasis on the right of state of residence to tax the income, whereas the UN Model is a compromise between the source principle and residence principle, giving more weight to the source principle as against the residence principle.

Question 2

When does it become necessary to apply the tie-breaker rule? Discuss the manner of application of the tie-breaker rule.

Answer

Every jurisdiction, in its domestic tax law, prescribes the mechanism to determine residential status of a person. If a person is considered to be resident of both the Contracting States, relief should be sought from Article 4 of the Tax Treaty. A series of tie-breaker rules are provided in Paragraph 2 Article 4 of Model Convention to determine single state of residence for an individual.

The tie-breaker rule would be applied in the following manner:

(i) The first test is based on where the individual has a permanent home. Permanent home would mean a dwelling place available to him at all times continuously and not occasionally and includes place taken on rent for a prolonged period of time.

(ii) If that test is inconclusive for the reason that the individual has permanent home available to him in both Contracting States, he will be considered a resident of the Contracting State where his personal and economic relations are closer, in other words, the place where lies his centre of vital interests. Thus, preference is given to family and social relations, occupation, place of business, place of administration of his properties, political, cultural and other activities of the individual.

(iii) Paragraph (ii) establishes a secondary criterion for two quite distinct and different situations:

- The case where the individual has a permanent home available to him in both Contracting States and it is not possible to determine in which one he has his centre of vital interests;
- The case where the individual has a permanent home available to him in neither Contracting State.

In the aforesaid scenarios, preference is given to the Contracting State where the individual has an habitual abode.

(iv) If the individual has habitual abode in both Contracting States or in neither of them, he shall be treated as a resident of the Contracting State of which he is a national.

(v) If the individual is a national of both or neither of the Contracting States, the matter is left to be considered by the competent authorities of the respective Contracting States.

Question 3

Explain the meaning of "interest" and "fees for technical services" under the UN Model Convention.

Answer

As per Article 11 of the UN Model Convention, "Interest" essentially means income from debt claims of every kind, whether or not secured by mortgage and whether or not carrying a right to participate in the debtor's profits, and in particular, income from government securities and income from bonds or debentures, including premiums and prizes attaching to such securities, bonds or debentures. Penalty charges for late payment are not regarded as interest for the purpose of this Article.

As per Article 12A of the UN Model Convention, "Fees for technical services" is defined as payments for managerial, technical or consultancy services but excludes payment to an employee, payment for teaching in an educational institution or for teaching by an educational institution, payments by an individual for services for personal use.

ANNEXURE

Annexure

A. Income Computation and Disclosure Standard I relating to accounting policies

Preamble

This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard is applicable for computation of income chargeable under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" or "Income from other sources" and not for the purpose of maintenance of books of accounts.

In the case of conflict between the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 ('the Act') and this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard, the provisions of the Act shall prevail to that extent.

Scope

1. This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard deals with significant accounting policies.

Fundamental Accounting Assumptions

2. The following are fundamental accounting assumptions, namely:—

(a) Going Concern

"Going concern" refers to the assumption that the person has neither the intention nor the necessity of liquidation or of curtailing materially the scale of the business, profession or vocation and intends to continue his business, profession or vocation for the foreseeable future.

(b) Consistency

"Consistency" refers to the assumption that accounting policies are consistent from one period to another;

(c) Accrual

"Accrual" refers to the assumption that revenues and costs are accrued, that is, recognised as they are earned or incurred (and not as money is received or paid) and recorded in the previous year to which they relate.

Accounting Policies

3. The accounting policies refer to the specific accounting principles and the methods of applying those principles adopted by a person.

Considerations in the Selection and Change of Accounting Policies

4. Accounting policies adopted by a person shall be such so as to represent a true and fair view of the state of affairs and income of the business, profession or vocation. For this purpose,

(i) the treatment and presentation of transactions and events shall be governed by their substance and not merely by the legal form; and

(ii) marked to market loss or an expected loss shall not be recognised unless the recognition of such loss is in accordance with the provisions of any other Income Computation and Disclosure Standard.

5. An accounting policy shall not be changed without reasonable cause.

Disclosure of Accounting Policies

6. All significant accounting policies adopted by a person shall be disclosed.

7. Any change in an accounting policy which has a material effect shall be disclosed. The amount by which any item is affected by such change shall also be disclosed to the extent ascertainable. Where such amount is not ascertainable, wholly or in part, the fact shall be indicated. If a change is made in the accounting policies which has no material effect for the current previous year but which is reasonably expected to have a material effect in later previous years, the fact of such change shall be appropriately disclosed in the previous year in which the change is adopted and also in the previous year in which such change has material effect for the first time.

8. Disclosure of accounting policies or of changes therein cannot remedy a wrong or inappropriate treatment of the item.

9. If the fundamental accounting assumptions of Going Concern, Consistency and Accrual are followed, specific disclosure is not required. If a fundamental accounting assumption is not followed, the fact shall be disclosed.

Transitional Provisions

10. All contract or transaction existing on the 1st day of April, 2016 or entered into on or after the 1st day of April, 2016 shall be dealt with in accordance with the provisions of this standard after taking into account the income, expense or loss, if any, recognised in respect of the said contract or transaction for the previous year ending on or before the 31st March,2016.

B. Income Computation and Disclosure Standard II relating to valuation of inventories

Preamble

This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard is applicable for computation of income chargeable under the head “Profits and gains of Business or profession” or “Income from other sources" and not for the purpose of maintenance of books of accounts.

In the case of conflict between the provisions of Income Tax Act, 1961 ('the Act') and this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard, the provisions of the Act shall prevail to that extent.

Scope

1. This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard shall be applied for valuation of inventories, except :

(a) Work-in-progress arising under 'construction contract' including directly related service contract which is dealt with by the Income Computation and Disclosure Standard on construction contracts;

(b) Work-in-progress which is dealt with by other Income Computation and Disclosure Standard;

(c) Shares, debentures and other financial instruments held as stock-in-trade which are dealt with by the Income Computation and Disclosure Standard on securities;

(d) Producers' inventories of livestock, agriculture and forest products, mineral oils, ores and gases to the extent that they are measured at net realisable value;

(e) Machinery spares, which can be used only in connection with a tangible fixed asset and their use is expected to be irregular, shall be dealt with in accordance with the Income Computation and Disclosure Standard on tangible fixed assets.

Definitions

2(1) The following terms are used in this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard with the meanings specified:

(a) "Inventories" are assets:

(i) held for sale in the ordinary course of business;

(ii) in the process of production for such sale;

(iii) in the form of materials or supplies to be consumed in the production process or in the rendering of services.

(b) "Net realisable value" is the estimated selling price in the ordinary course of business less the estimated costs of completion and the estimated costs necessary to make the sale.

2(2) Words and expressions used and not defined in this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard but defined in the Act shall have the meanings assigned to them in that Act.

Measurement

3. Inventories shall be valued at cost, or net realisable value, whichever is lower.

Cost of Inventories

4. Cost of inventories shall comprise of all costs of purchase, costs of services, costs of conversion and other costs incurred in bringing the inventories to their present location and condition.

Costs of Purchase

5. The costs of purchase shall consist of purchase price including duties and taxes, freight inwards and other expenditure directly attributable to the acquisition. Trade discounts, rebates and other similar items shall be deducted in determining the costs of purchase.

Costs of Services

6. The costs of services shall consist of labour and other costs of personnel directly engaged in providing the service including supervisory personnel and attributable overheads.

Costs of Conversion

7. The costs of conversion of inventories shall include costs directly related to the units of production and a systematic allocation of fixed and variable production overheads that are incurred in converting materials into finished goods. Fixed production overheads shall be those indirect costs of production that remain relatively constant regardless of the volume of production. Variable production overheads shall be those indirect costs of production that vary directly or nearly directly, with the volume of production.

8. The allocation of fixed production overheads for the purpose of their inclusion in the costs of conversion shall be based on the normal capacity of the production facilities. Normal capacity shall be the production expected to be achieved on an average over a number of periods or seasons under normal circumstances, taking into account the loss of capacity resulting from planned maintenance. The actual level of production shall be used when it approximates to normal capacity. The amount of fixed production overheads allocated to each unit of production shall not be increased as a consequence of low production or idle plant. Unallocated overheads shall be recognised as an expense in the period in which they are incurred. In periods of abnormally high production, the amount of fixed production overheads allocated to each unit of production is decreased so that inventories are not measured above the cost. Variable production overheads shall be assigned to each unit of production on the basis of the actual use of the production facilities.

9. Where a production process results in more than one product being produced simultaneously and the costs of conversion of each product are not separately identifiable, the costs shall be allocated between the products on a rational and consistent basis. Where by-products, scrap or waste material are immaterial, they shall be measured at net realisable value and this value shall be deducted from the cost of the main product.

Other Costs

10. Other costs shall be included in the cost of inventories only to the extent that they are incurred in bringing the inventories to their present location and condition

11. Interest and other borrowing costs shall not be included in the costs of inventories, unless they meet the criteria for recognition of interest as a component of the cost as specified in the Income Computation and Disclosure Standard on borrowing costs.

Exclusions from the Cost of Inventories

12. In determining the cost of inventories in accordance with paragraphs 4 to paragraphs 11, the following costs shall be excluded and recognised as expenses of the period in which they are incurred, namely:—

(a) Abnormal amounts of wasted materials, labour, or other production costs;

(b) Storage costs, unless those costs are necessary in the production process prior to a further production stage;

(c) Administrative overheads that do not contribute to bringing the inventories to their present location and condition ;

(d) Selling costs.

Cost Formulae

13. The Cost of inventories of items

(i) that are not ordinarily interchangeable; and

(ii) goods or services produced and segregated for specific projects shall be assigned by specific identification of their individual costs.

14. ‘Specific identification of cost’ means specific costs are attributed to identified items of inventory.

15. Where there are a large numbers of items of inventory which are ordinarily interchangeable, specific identification of costs shall not be made.

First-in First-out and Weighted Average Cost Formula

16. Cost of inventories, other than the inventory dealt with in paragraph 13, shall be assigned by using the First-in First-out (FIFO), or weighted average cost formula. The formula used shall reflect the fairest possible approximation to the cost incurred in bringing the items of inventory to their present location and condition.

17. The FIFO formula assumes that the items of inventory which were purchased or produced first are consumed or sold first, and consequently the items remaining in inventory at the end of the period are those most recently purchased or produced. Under the weighted average cost formula, the cost of each item is determined from the weighted average of the cost of similar items at the beginning of a period and the cost of similar items purchased or produced during the period. The average shall be calculated on a periodic basis, or as each additional shipment is received, depending upon the circumstances.

Techniques for the Measurement of Cost

18(1) Techniques for the measurement of the cost of inventories, such as the standard cost method or the retail method, may be used for convenience if the results approximate the actual cost. Standard costs take into account normal levels of consumption of materials and supplies, labour, efficiency and capacity utilisation. They are regularly reviewed and, if necessary, revised in the light of the current conditions.

18(2) The retail method can be used in the retail trade for measuring inventories of large number of rapidly changing items that have similar margins and for which it is impracticable to use other costing methods. The cost of the inventory is determined by reducing from the sales value of the inventory, the appropriate percentage gross margin. The percentage used takes into consideration inventory, which has been marked down to below its original selling price. An average percentage for each retail department is to be used.

Net Realisable Value

19. Inventories shall be written down to net realisable value on an item-by-item basis. Where ‘items of inventory' relating to the same product line having similar purposes or end uses and are produced and marketed in the same geographical area and cannot be practicably evaluated separately from other items in that product line, such inventories shall be grouped together and written down to net realisable value on an aggregate basis.

20. Net realisable value shall be based on the most reliable evidence available at the time of valuation. The estimates of net realisable value shall also take into consideration the purpose for which the inventory is held. The estimates shall take into consideration fluctuations of price or cost directly relating to events occurring after the end of previous year to the extent that such events confirm the conditions existing on the last day of the previous year.

21. Materials and other supplies held for use in the production of inventories shall not be written down below the cost, where the finished products in which they shall be incorporated are expected to be sold at or above the cost. Where there has been a decline in the price of materials and it is estimated that the cost of finished products will exceed the net realisable value, the value of materials shall be written down to net realisable value which shall be the replacement cost of such materials.

Value of Opening Inventory

22. The value of the inventory as on the beginning of the previous year shall be

(i) the cost of inventory available, if any, on the day of the commencement of the business when the business has commenced during the previous year; and

(ii) the value of the inventory as on the close of the immediately preceding previous year, in any other case.

Change of Method of Valuation of Inventory

23. The method of valuation of inventories once adopted by a person in any previous year shall not be changed without reasonable cause.

Valuation of Inventory in Case of Certain Dissolutions

24. In case of dissolution of a partnership firm or association of person or body of individuals, notwithstanding whether business is discontinued or not, the inventory on the date of dissolution shall be valued at the net realisable value.

Transitional Provisions

25. Interest and other borrowing costs, which do not meet the criteria for recognition of interest as a component of the cost as per para 11, but included in the cost of the opening inventory as on the 1st day of April, 2016, shall be taken into account for determining cost of such inventory for valuation as on the close of the previous year beginning on or after 1st day of April, 2016 if such inventory continue to remain part of inventory as on the close of the previous year beginning on or after 1st day of April, 2016.

Disclosure

26. The following aspects shall be disclosed, namely:—

(a) the accounting policies adopted in measuring inventories including the cost formulae used. Where Standard Costing has been used as a measurement of cost, details of such inventories and a confirmation of the fact that standard cost approximates the actual cost; and

(b) the total carrying amount of inventories and its classification appropriate to a person.

C. Income Computation and Disclosure Standard III relating to construction contracts

Preamble

This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard is applicable for computation of income chargeable under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" or "Income from other sources" and not for the purpose of maintenance of books of accounts.

In the case of conflict between the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961('the Act') and this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard, the provisions of the Act shall prevail to that extent.

Scope

1. This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard should be applied in determination of income for a construction contract of a contractor.

Definitions

2 (1) The following terms are used in this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard with the meanings specified:

(a) "Construction contract" is a contract specifically negotiated for the construction of an asset or a combination of assets that are closely interrelated or interdependent in terms of their design, technology and function or their ultimate purpose or use and includes :

(i) contract for the rendering of services which are directly related to the construction of the asset, for example, those for the services of project managers and architects;

(ii) contract for destruction or restoration of assets, and the restoration of the environment following the demolition of assets.

(b) "Fixed price contract" is a construction contract in which the contractor agrees to a fixed contract price, or a fixed rate per unit of output, which may be subject to cost escalation clauses.

(c) "Cost plus contract" is a construction contract in which the contractor is reimbursed for allowable or otherwise defined costs, plus a mark up on these costs or a fixed fee.

(d) "Retentions" are amounts of progress billings which are not paid until the satisfaction of conditions specified in the contract for the payment of such amounts or until defects have been rectified.

(e) "Progress billings" are amounts billed for work performed on a contract whether or not they have been paid by the customer.

(f) "Advances" are amounts received by the contractor before the related work is performed.

2(2) Words and expressions used and not defined in this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard but defined in the Act shall have the meaning respectively assigned to them in the Act.

3. A construction contract may be negotiated for the construction of a single asset. A construction contract may also deal with the construction of a number of assets which are closely interrelated or interdependent in terms of their design, technology and function or their ultimate purpose or use.

4. Construction contracts are formulated in a number of ways which, for the purposes of this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard, are classified as fixed price contracts and cost plus contracts. Some construction contracts may contain characteristics of both a fixed price contract and a cost plus contract, for example, in the case of a cost plus contract with an agreed maximum price.

Combining and Segmenting Construction Contracts

5. The requirements of this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard shall be applied separately to each construction contract except as provided for in paragraphs 6, 7 and 8 herein. For reflecting the substance of a contract or a group of contracts, where it is necessary, the Income Computation and Disclosure Standard should be applied to the separately identifiable components of a single contract or to a group of contracts together.

6. Where a contract covers a number of assets, the construction of each asset should be treated as a separate construction contract when:

(a) separate proposals have been submitted for each asset;

(b) each asset has been subject to separate negotiation and the contractor and customer have been able to accept or reject that part of the contract relating to each asset; and

(c) the costs and revenues of each asset can be identified.

7. A group of contracts, whether with a single customer or with several customers, should be treated as a single construction contract when:

(a) the group of contracts is negotiated as a single package;

(b) the contracts are so closely interrelated that they are, in effect, part of a single project with an overall profit margin; and

(c) the contracts are performed concurrently or in a continuous sequence.

8. Where a contract provides for the construction of an additional asset at the option of the customer or is amended to include the construction of an additional asset, the construction of the additional asset should be treated as a separate construction contract when:

(a) the asset differs significantly in design, technology or function from the asset or assets covered by the original contract; or

(b) the price of the asset is negotiated without having regard to the original contract price.

Contract Revenue

9. Contract revenue shall be recognised when there is reasonable certainty of its ultimate collection.

10. Contract revenue shall comprise of:

(a) the initial amount of revenue agreed in the contract, including retentions; and

(b) variations in contract work, claims and incentive payments:

(i) to the extent that it is probable that they will result in revenue; and

(ii) they are capable of being reliably measured.

11. Where contract revenue already recognised as income is subsequently written off in the books of accounts as uncollectible, the same shall be recognised as an expense and not as an adjustment of the amount of contract revenue.

Contract Costs

12. Contract costs shall comprise of :

(a) costs that relate directly to the specific contract;

(b) costs that are attributable to contract activity in general and can be allocated to the contract;

(c) such other costs as are specifically chargeable to the customer under the terms of the contract; and

(d) allocated borrowing costs in accordance with the Income Computation and Disclosure Standard on Borrowing Costs.

These costs shall be reduced by any incidental income, not being in the nature of interest, dividends or capital gains, that is not included in contract revenue.

13. Costs that cannot be attributed to any contract activity or cannot be allocated to a contract shall be excluded from the costs of a construction contract.

14. Contract costs include the costs attributable to a contract for the period from the date of securing the contract to the final completion of the contract. Costs that are incurred in securing the contract are also included as part of the contract costs, provided

(a) they can be separately identified; and

(b) it is probable that the contract shall be obtained.

When costs incurred in securing a contract are recognised as an expense in the period in which they are incurred, they are not included in contract costs when the contract is obtained in a subsequent period.

15. Contract costs that relate to future activity on the contract are recognised as an asset. Such costs represent an amount due from the customer and are classified as contract work in progress.

Recognition of Contract Revenue and Expenses

16. Contract revenue and contract costs associated with the construction contract should be recognised as revenue and expenses respectively by reference to the stage of completion of the contract activity at the reporting date.

17. The recognition of revenue and expenses by reference to the stage of completion of a contract is referred to as the percentage of completion method. Under this method, contract revenue is matched with the contract costs incurred in reaching the stage of completion, resulting in the reporting of revenue, expenses and profit which can be attributed to the proportion of work completed.

18. The stage of completion of a contract shall be determined with reference to:

(a) the proportion that contract costs incurred for work performed upto the reporting date bear to the estimated total contract costs; or

(b) surveys of work performed; or

(c) completion of a physical proportion of the contract work.

Progress payments and advances received from customers are not determinative of the stage of completion of a contract.

19. When the stage of completion is determined by reference to the contract costs incurred upto the reporting date, only those contract costs that reflect work performed are included in costs incurred upto the reporting date. Contract costs which are excluded are:

(a) contract costs that relate to future activity on the contract; and

(b) payments made to subcontractors in advance of work performed under the subcontract.

20. During the early stages of a contract, where the outcome of the contract cannot be estimated reliably contract revenue is recognised only to the extent of costs incurred. The early stage of a contract shall not extend beyond 25 % of the stage of completion.

Changes in Estimates

21. The percentage of completion method is applied on a cumulative basis in each previous year to the current estimates of contract revenue and contract costs. Where there is change in estimates, the changed estimates shall be used in determination of the amount of revenue and expenses in the period in which the change is made and in subsequent periods.

Transitional Provisions

22.1 Contract revenue and contract costs associated with the construction contract, which commenced on or after 1st day of April, 2016 shall be recognised in accordance with the provisions of this standard.

22.2 Contract revenue and contract costs associated with the construction contract, which commenced on or before the 31st day of March, 2016 but not completed by the said date, shall be recognised based on the method regularly followed by the person prior to the previous year beginning on the 1st day of April, 2016.

Disclosure

23. A person shall disclose:

(a) the amount of contract revenue recognised as revenue in the period; and

(b) the methods used to determine the stage of completion of contracts in progress.

24. A person shall disclose the following for contracts in progress at the reporting date, namely:—

(a) amount of costs incurred and recognised profits (less recognised losses) upto the reporting date;

(b) the amount of advances received; and

(c) the amount of retentions.

D. Income Computation and Disclosure Standard IV relating to revenue recognition

Preamble

This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard is applicable for computation of income chargeable under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" or "Income from other sources" and not for the purpose of maintenance of books of accounts.

In the case of conflict between the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 ('the Act') and this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard, the provisions of the Act shall prevail to that extent.

Scope

1(1) This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard deals with the bases for recognition of revenue arising in the course of the ordinary activities of a person from

(i) the sale of goods;

(ii) the rendering of services;

(iii) the use by others of the person's resources yielding interest, royalties or dividends.

1(2) This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard does not deal with the aspects of revenue recognition which are dealt with by other Income Computation and Disclosure Standards.

Definitions

2(1) The following term is used in this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard with the meanings specified:

(a) "Revenue" is the gross inflow of cash, receivables or other consideration arising in the course of the ordinary activities of a person from the sale of goods, from the rendering of services, or from the use by others of the person's resources yielding interest, royalties or dividends. In an agency relationship, the revenue is the amount of commission and not the gross inflow of cash, receivables or other consideration.

2(2) Words and expressions used and not defined in this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard but defined in the Act shall have the meanings assigned to them in that Act.

Sale of Goods

3. In a transaction involving the sale of goods, the revenue shall be recognised when the seller of goods has transferred to the buyer the property in the goods for a price or all significant risks and rewards of ownership have been transferred to the buyer and the seller retains no effective control of the goods transferred to a degree usually associated with ownership. In a situation, where transfer of property in goods does not coincide with the transfer of significant risks and rewards of ownership, revenue in such a situation shall be recognised at the time of transfer of significant risks and rewards of ownership to the buyer.

4. Revenue shall be recognised when there is reasonable certainty of its ultimate collection.

5. Where the ability to assess the ultimate collection with reasonable certainty is lacking at the time of raising any claim for escalation of price and export incentives, revenue recognition in respect of such claim shall be postponed to the extent of uncertainty involved.

Rendering of Services

6. Subject to Para 7, revenue from service transactions shall be recognised by the percentage completion method. Under this method, revenue from service transactions is matched with the service transaction costs incurred in reaching the stage of completion, resulting in the determination of revenue, expenses and profit which can be attributed to the proportion of work completed. Income Computation and Disclosure Standard on construction contract also requires the recognition of revenue on this basis. The requirements of that Standard shall mutatis mutandis apply to the recognition of revenue and the associated expenses for a service transaction. However, when services are provided by an indeterminate number of acts over a specific period of time, revenue may be recognised on a straight line basis over the specific period.

7. Revenue from service contracts with duration of not more than ninety days may be recognised when the rendering of services under that contract is completed or substantially completed.

The Use of Resources by Others Yielding Interest, Royalties or Dividends

8. (1) Subject to sub paragraph (2), interest shall accrue on the time basis determined by the amount outstanding and the rate applicable.

(2) Interest on refund of any tax, duty or cess shall be deemed to be the income of the previous year in which such interest is received.

(3) Discount or premium on debt securities held is treated as though it were accruing over the period to maturity.

9. Royalties shall accrue in accordance with the terms of the relevant agreement and shall be recognised on that basis unless, having regard to the substance of the transaction, it is more appropriate to recognise revenue on some other systematic and rational basis.

10. Dividends are recognised in accordance with the provisions of the Act.

Transitional Provisions

11. The transitional provisions of Income Computation and Disclosure Standard on construction contract shall mutatis mutandis apply to the recognition of revenue and the associated costs for a service transaction undertaken on or before the 31st day of March, 2016 but not completed by the said date.

12. Revenue for a transaction, other than a service transaction referred to in Para 10, undertaken on or before the 31st day of March, 2016 but not completed by the said date shall be recognised in accordance with the provisions of this standard for the previous year commencing on the 1st day of April, 2016 and subsequent previous year. The amount of revenue, if any, recognised for the said transaction for any previous year commencing on or before the 1st day of April, 2015 shall be taken into account for recognising revenue for the said transaction for the previous year commencing on the 1st day of April, 2016and subsequent previous years.

Disclosure

13. Following disclosures shall be made in respect of revenue recognition, namely:—

(a) in a transaction involving sale of good, total amount not recognised as revenue during the previous year due to lack of reasonably certainty of its ultimate collection along with nature of uncertainty;

(b) the amount of revenue from service transactions recognised as revenue during the previous year;

(c) the method used to determine the stage of completion of service transactions in progress; and

(d) for service transactions in progress at the end of previous year:

(i) amount of costs incurred and recognised profits (less recognised losses) upto end of previous year;

(ii) the amount of advances received; and

(iii) the amount of retentions.

E. Income Computation and Disclosure Standard V relating to tangible fixed assets

Preamble

This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard is applicable for computation of income chargeable under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" or "Income from other sources" and not for the purpose of maintenance of books of accounts.

In the case of conflict between the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 ('the Act') and this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard, the provisions of the Act shall prevail to that extent.

Scope

1. This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard deals with the treatment of tangible fixed assets.

Definitions

2(1) The following terms are used in this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard with the meanings specified:

(a) "Tangible fixed asset" is an asset being land, building, machinery, plant or furniture held with the intention of being used for the purpose of producing or providing goods or services and is not held for sale in the normal course of business.

(b) "Fair value" of an asset is the amount for which that asset could be exchanged between knowledgeable, willing parties in an arm's length transaction.

(2) Words and expressions used and not defined in this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard but defined in the Act shall have the meanings assigned to them in that Act.

Identification of Tangible Fixed Assets

3. The definition in clause (a) of sub-paragraph (1) of paragraph 2 provides criteria for determining whether an item is to be classified as a tangible fixed asset.

4. Stand-by equipment and servicing equipment are to be capitalised. Machinery spares shall be charged to the revenue as and when consumed. When such spares can be used only in connection with an item of tangible fixed asset and their use is expected to be irregular, they shall be capitalised.

Components of Actual Cost

5. The actual cost of an acquired tangible fixed asset shall comprise its purchase price, import duties and other taxes, excluding those subsequently recoverable, and any directly attributable expenditure on making the asset ready for its intended use. Any trade discounts and rebates shall be deducted in arriving at the actual cost.

6. The cost of a tangible fixed asset may undergo changes subsequent to its acquisition or construction on account of

(i) price adjustment, changes in duties or similar factors; or

(ii) exchange fluctuation as specified in Income Computation and Disclosure Standard on the effects of changes in foreign exchange rates.

7. Administration and other general overhead expenses are to be excluded from the cost of tangible fixed assets if they do not relate to a specific tangible fixed asset. Expenses which are specifically attributable to construction of a project or to the acquisition of a tangible fixed asset or bringing it to its working condition, shall be included as a part of the cost of the project or as a part of the cost of the tangible fixed asset.

8. The expenditure incurred on start-up and commissioning of the project, including the expenditure incurred on test runs and experimental production, shall be capitalised. The expenditure incurred after the plant has begun commercial production, that is, production intended for sale or captive consumption, shall be treated as revenue expenditure.

Self- constructed Tangible Fixed Assets

9. In arriving at the actual cost of self-constructed tangible fixed assets, the same principles shall apply as those described in paragraphs 5 to 8. Cost of construction that relate directly to the specific tangible fixed asset and costs that are attributable to the construction activity in general and can be allocated to the specific tangible fixed asset shall be included in actual cost. Any internal profits shall be eliminated in arriving at such costs.

Non- monetary Consideration

10. When a tangible fixed asset is acquired in exchange for another asset, the fair value of the tangible fixed asset so acquired shall be its actual cost.

11. When a tangible fixed asset is acquired in exchange for shares or other securities, the fair value of the tangible fixed asset so acquired shall be its actual cost.

Improvements and Repairs

12. An Expenditure that increases the future benefits from the existing asset beyond its previously assessed standard of performance is added to the actual cost.

13. The cost of an addition or extension to an existing tangible fixed asset which is of a capital nature and which becomes an integral part of the existing tangible fixed asset is to be added to its actual cost. Any addition or extension, which has a separate identity and is capable of being used after the existing tangible fixed asset is disposed of, shall be treated as separate asset.

Valuation of Tangible Fixed Assets in Special Cases

14. Where a person owns tangible fixed assets jointly with others, the proportion in the actual cost, accumulated depreciation and written down value is grouped together with similar fully owned tangible fixed assets.

15. Where several assets are purchased for a consolidated price, the consideration shall be apportioned to the various assets on a fair basis.

Transitional Provisions

16. The actual cost of tangible fixed assets, acquisition or construction of which commenced on or before the 31st day of March, 2016 but not completed by the said date, shall be recognised in accordance with the provisions of this standard. The amount of actual cost, if any, recognised for the said assets for any previous year commencing on or before the 1st day of April, 2015 shall be taken into account for recognising actual cost of the said assets for the previous year commencing on the 1st day of April, 2016 and subsequent previous years.

Depreciation

17. Depreciation on a tangible fixed asset shall be computed in accordance with the provisions of the Act.

Transfers

18. Income arising on transfer of a tangible fixed asset shall be computed in accordance with the provisions of the Act.

Disclosures

19. Following disclosure shall be made in respect of tangible fixed assets, namely:—

(a) description of asset or block of assets;

(b) rate of depreciation;

(c) actual cost or written down value, as the case may be;

(d) additions or deductions during the year with dates; in the case of any addition of an asset, date put to use; including adjustments on account of—

(i) Central Value Added Tax credit claimed and allowed under the CENVAT Credit Rules, 2004;

(ii) change in rate of exchange of currency;

(iii) subsidy or grant or reimbursement, by whatever name called;

(e) depreciation Allowable; and

(f) written down value at the end of year.

F. Income Computation and Disclosure Standard VI relating to the effects of changes in foreign exchange rates

Preamble

This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard is applicable for computation of income chargeable under the head “Profits and gains of business or profession” or “Income from other sources” and not for the purpose of maintenance of books of accounts.

In the case of conflict between the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 (‘the Act’) and this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard, the provisions of the Act shall prevail to that extent.

Scope

1. This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard deals with:

(a) treatment of transactions in foreign currencies;

(b) translating the financial statements of foreign operations;

(c) treatment of foreign currency transactions in the nature of forward exchange contracts.

Definitions

2. (1) The following terms are used in this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard with the meanings specified:

(a) “Average rate” is the mean of the exchange rates in force during a period.

(b) “Closing rate” is the exchange rate at the last day of the previous year.

(c) “Exchange difference” is the difference resulting from reporting the same number of units of a foreign currency in the reporting currency of a person at different exchange rates.

(d) “Exchange rate” is the ratio for exchange of two currencies.

(e) “Foreign currency” is a currency other than the reporting currency of a person.

(f) “Foreign operations of a person” is a branch, by whatever name called, of that person, the activities of which are based or conducted in a country other than India.

(g) “Foreign currency transaction” is a transaction which is denominated in or requires settlement in a foreign currency, including transactions arising when a person:—

(i) buys or sells goods or services whose price is denominated in a foreign currency; or

(ii) borrows or lends funds when the amounts payable or receivable are denominated in a foreign currency; or

(iii) becomes a party to an unperformed forward exchange contract; or

(iv) otherwise acquires or disposes of assets, or incurs or settles liabilities, denominated in a foreign currency.

(h) “Forward exchange contract” means an agreement to exchange different currencies at a forward rate, and includes a foreign currency option contract or another financial instrument of a similar nature;

(i) “Forward rate” is the specified exchange rate for exchange of two Currencies at a specified future date;

(j) “Indian currency” shall have the meaning as assigned to it in section 2 of the Foreign Exchange Management Act, 1999 (42 of 1999);

(k) “Monetary items” are money held and assets to be received or liabilities to be paid in fixed or determinable amounts of money. Cash, receivables, and payables are examples of monetary items;

(l) “Non-monetary items” are assets and liabilities other than monetary items. Fixed assets, inventories, and investments in equity shares are examples of non-monetary items;

(m)“Reporting currency” means Indian currency except for foreign operations where it shall mean currency of the country where the operations are carried out.

(2) Words and expressions used and not defined in this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard but defined in the Act shall have the meaning assigned to them in the Act.

Foreign Currency Transactions

Initial Recognition

3(1) A foreign currency transaction shall be recorded, on initial recognition in the reporting currency, by applying to the foreign currency amount the exchange rate between the reporting currency and the foreign currency at the date of the transaction.

(2) An average rate for a week or a month that approximates the actual rate at the date of the transaction may be used for all transaction in each foreign currency occurring during that period. If the exchange rate fluctuates significantly, the actual rate at the date of the transaction shall be used.

Conversion at Last Date of Previous Year

4. At last day of each previous year:—

(a) foreign currency monetary items shall be converted into reporting currency by applying the closing rate;

(b) where the closing rate does not reflect with reasonable accuracy, the amount in reporting currency that is likely to be realised from or required to disburse, a foreign currency monetary item owing to restriction on remittances or the closing rate being unrealistic and it is not possible to effect an exchange of currencies at that rate, then the relevant monetary item shall be reported in the reporting currency at the amount which is likely to be realised from or required to disburse such item at the last date of the previous year; and

(c) non-monetary items in a foreign currency shall be converted into reporting currency by using the exchange rate at the date of the transaction.

(d) non-monetary item being inventory which is carried at net realisable value denominated in a foreign currency shall be reported using the exchange rate that existed when such value was determined.

Recognition of Exchange Differences

5. (i) In respect of monetary items, exchange differences arising on the settlement thereof or on conversion thereof at last day of the previous year shall be recognised as income or as expense in that previous year.

(ii) In respect of non-monetary items, exchange differences arising on conversion thereof at the last day of the previous year shall not be recognised as income or as expense in that previous year.

Exceptions to Paragraphs 3, 4 and 5

6. Notwithstanding anything contained in paragraph 3, 4 and 5; initial recognition, conversion and recognition of exchange difference shall be subject to provisions of section 43A of the Act or Rule 115 of Income-tax Rules, 1962, as the case may be.

Financial Statements of Foreign Operations

7. The financial statements of a foreign operation shall be translated using the principles and procedures in paragraphs 3 to 6 as if the transactions of the foreign operation had been those of the person himself.

Forward Exchange Contracts

8. (1) Any premium or discount arising at the inception of a forward exchange contract shall be amortised as expense or income over the life of the contract. Exchange differences on such a contract shall be recognised as income or as expense in the previous year in which the exchange rates change. Any profit or loss arising on cancellation or renewal shall be recognised as income or as expense for the previous year.

(2) The provisions of sub-para (1) shall apply provided that the contract:

(a) is not intended for trading or speculation purposes; and

(b) is entered into to establish the amount of the reporting currency required or available at the settlement date of the transaction.

(3) The provisions of sub-para (1) shall not apply to the contract that is entered into to hedge the foreign currency risk of a firm commitment or a highly probable forecast transaction. For this purpose, firm commitment, shall not include assets and liabilities existing at the end of the previous year.

(4) The premium or discount that arises on the contract is measured by the difference between the exchange rate at the date of the inception of the contract and the forward rate specified in the contract. Exchange difference on the contract is the difference between:

(a) the foreign currency amount of the contract translated at the exchange rate at the last day of the previous year, or the settlement date where the transaction is settled during the previous year; and

(b) the same foreign currency amount translated at the date of inception of the contract or the last day of the immediately preceding previous year, whichever is later.

(5) Premium, discount or exchange difference on contracts that are intended for trading or speculation purposes, or that are entered into to hedge the foreign currency risk of a firm commitment or a highly probable forecast transaction shall be recognised at the time of settlement.

Transitional Provisions

9. (1) All foreign currency transactions undertaken on or after 1st day of April, 2016 shall be recognised in accordance with the provisions of this standard.

(2) Exchange differences arising in respect of monetary items or non-monetary items, on the settlement thereof during the previous year commencing on the 1st day of April, 2016 or on conversion thereof at the last day of the previous year commencing on the 1st day of April, 2016 , shall be recognised in accordance with the provisions of this standard after taking into account the amount recognised on the last day of the previous year ending on the 31st March, 2016 for an item, if any, which is carried forward from said previous year.

(3) The financial statements of foreign operations for the previous year commencing on the 1st day of April, 2016 shall be translated using the principles and procedures specified in this standard after taking into account the amount recognised on the last day of the previous year ending on the 31st March, 2016 for an item, if any, which is carried forward from said previous year.

(4) All forward exchange contracts existing on the 1st day of April, 2016 or entered on or after 1st day of April, 2016 shall be dealt with in accordance with the provisions of this standard after taking into account the income or expenses, if any, recognised in respect of said contracts for the previous year ending on or before the 31st March,2016.

G. Income Computation and Disclosure Standard VII relating to government grants

Preamble

This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard is applicable for computation of income chargeable under the head “Profits and gains of business or profession” or “Income from other sources” and not for the purpose of maintenance of books of account.

In case of conflict between the provisions of the Income Tax Act, 1961 ('the Act') and this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard, the provisions of the Act shall prevail to that extent.

Scope

1. This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard deals with the treatment of Government grants. The Government grants are sometimes called by other names such as subsidies, cash incentives, duty drawbacks, waiver, concessions, reimbursements, etc.

2. This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard does not deal with:—

   (a) Government assistance other than in the form of Government grants; and

   (b) Government participation in the ownership of the enterprise.

Definitions

3(1) The following terms are used in the Income Computation and Disclosure Standard with the meanings specified:

   (a) "Government" refers to the Central Government, State Governments, agencies and similar bodies, whether local, national or international.

   (b) "Government grants" are assistance by Government in cash or kind to a person for past or future compliance with certain conditions. They exclude those forms of Government assistance which cannot have a value placed upon them and the transactions with Government which cannot be distinguished from the normal trading transactions of the person.

3(2) Words and expressions used and not defined in this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard but defined in the Act shall have the meaning assigned to them in the Act.

Recognition of Government Grants

4(1) Government grants should not be recognised until there is reasonable assurance that (i) the person shall comply with the conditions attached to them, and (ii) the grants shall be received.

4(2) Recognition of Government grant shall not be postponed beyond the date of actual receipt.

Treatment of Government Grants

5. Where the Government grant relates to a depreciable fixed asset or assets of a person, the grant shall be deducted from the actual cost of the asset or assets concerned or from the written down value of block of assets to which concerned asset or assets belonged to.

6. Where the Government grant relates to a non-depreciable asset or assets of a person requiring fulfillment of certain obligations, the grant shall be recognised as income over the same period over which the cost of meeting such obligations is charged to income.

7. Where the Government grant is of such a nature that it cannot be directly relatable to the asset acquired, so much of the amount which bears to the total Government grant, the same proportion as such asset bears to all the assets in respect of or with reference to which the Government grant is so received, shall be deducted from the actual cost of the asset or shall be reduced from the written down value of block of assets to which the asset or assets belonged to.

8. The Government grant that is receivable as compensation for expenses or losses incurred in a previous financial year or for the purpose of giving immediate financial support to the person with no further related costs, shall be recognised as income of the period in which it is receivable.

9. The Government grants other than covered by paragraph 5, 6, 7, and 8 shall be recognised as income over the periods necessary to match them with the related costs which they are intended to compensate.

10. The Government grants in the form of non-monetary assets, given at a concessional rate, shall be accounted for on the basis of their acquisition cost.

Refund of Government Grants

11. The amount refundable in respect of a Government grant referred to in paragraphs 6, 8 and 9 shall be applied first against any unamortised deferred credit remaining in respect of the Government grant. To the extent that the amount refundable exceeds any such deferred credit, or where no deferred credit exists, the amount shall be charged to profit and loss statement.

12. The amount refundable in respect of a Government grant related to a depreciable fixed asset or assets shall be recorded by increasing the actual cost or written down value of block of assets by the amount refundable. Where the actual cost of the asset is increased, depreciation on the revised actual cost or written down value shall be provided prospectively at the prescribed rate.

Transitional Provisions

13. All the Government grants which meet the recognition criteria of para 4 on or after 1st day of April, 2016 shall be recognised for the previous year commencing on or after 1st day of April, 2016 in accordance with the provisions of this standard after taking into account the amount, if any, of the said Government grant recognised for any previous year ending on or before 31st day of March,2016.

Disclosures

14. Following disclosure shall be made in respect of Government grants, namely:—

(a) nature and extent of Government grants recognised during the previous year by way of deduction from the actual cost of the asset or assets or from the written down value of block of assets during the previous year;

(b) nature and extent of Government grants recognised during the previous year as income;

(c) nature and extent of Government grants not recognised during the previous year by way of deduction from the actual cost of the asset or assets or from the written down value of block of assets and reasons thereof; and

(d) nature and extent of Government grants not recognised during the previous year as income and reasons thereof.

H. Income Computation and Disclosure Standard VIII relating to securities

Preamble

This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard is applicable for computation of income chargeable under the head “Profits and gains of business or profession” or “Income from other sources” and not for the purpose of maintenance of books of account.

In the case of conflict between the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 (‘the Act’) and this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard, the provisions of the Act shall prevail to that extent.

Part A

Scope

1. This part of Income Computation and Disclosure Standard deals with securities held as stock-in-trade.

2. This part of Income Computation and Disclosure Standard does not deal with:

(a) the bases for recognition of interest and dividends on securities which are covered by the Income Computation and Disclosure Standard on revenue recognition;

(b) securities held by a person engaged in the business of insurance;

(c) securities held by mutual funds, venture capital funds, banks and public financial institutions formed under a Central or a State Act or so declared under the Companies Act, 1956 (1 of 1956) or the Companies Act, 2013 (18 of 2013).

Definitions

3(1) The following terms are used in this part of Income Computation and Disclosure Standard with the meanings specified:

(a) "Fair value" is the amount for which an asset could be exchanged between a knowledgeable, willing buyer and a knowledgeable, willing seller in an arm's length transaction.

(b) "Securities" shall have the meaning assigned to it in clause (h) of Section 2 of the Securities Contracts (Regulation) Act, 1956 (42 of 1956) and shall include share of a company in which public are not substantially interested but shall not include derivatives referred to in sub-clause (ia) of that clause (h).

3(2) Words and expressions used and not defined in this part of Income Computation and Disclosure Standard but defined in the Act shall have the meaning respectively assigned to them in the Act.

Recognition and Initial Measurement of Securities

4. A security on acquisition shall be recognised at actual cost.

5. The actual cost of a security shall comprise of its purchase price and include acquisition charges such as brokerage, fees, tax, duty or cess.

6. Where a security is acquired in exchange for other securities, the fair value of the security so acquired shall be its actual cost.

7. Where a security is acquired in exchange for another asset, the fair value of the security so acquired shall be its actual cost.

8. Where unpaid interest has accrued before the acquisition of an interest-bearing security and is included in the price paid for the security, the subsequent receipt of interest is allocated between pre-acquisition and post-acquisition periods; the pre-acquisition portion of the interest is deducted from the actual cost.

Subsequent Measurement of Securities

9. At the end of any previous year, securities held as stock-in-trade shall be valued at actual cost initially recognised or net realisable value at the end of that previous year, whichever is lower.

10. For the purpose of para 9, the comparison of actual cost initially recognised and net realisable value shall be done categorywise and not for each individual security. For this purpose, securities shall be classified into the following categories, namely:-

(a) shares;

(b) debt securities;

(c) convertible securities; and

(d) any other securities not covered above.

11. The value of securities held as stock-in-trade of a business as on the beginning of the previous year shall be:

(a) the cost of securities available, if any, on the day of the commencement of the business when the business has commenced during the previous year; and

(b) the value of the securities of the business as on the close of the immediately preceding previous year, in any other case.

12. Notwithstanding anything contained in para 9, 10 and 11, at the end of any previous year, securities not listed on a recognised stock exchange; or listed but not quoted on a recognised stock exchange with regularity from time to time, shall be valued at actual cost initially recognised.

13. For the purposes of para 9, 10 and 11 where the actual cost initially recognised cannot be ascertained by reference to specific identification, the cost of such security shall be determined on the basis of first-in-first-out method or weighted average cost formula.

Part B

Scope

1. This part of Income Computation and Disclosure Standard deals with securities held by a scheduled bank or public financial institutions formed under a Central or a State Act or so declared under the Companies Act, 1956 (1 of 1956) or the Companies Act, 2013 (18 of 2013).

Definitions

2(1) The following terms are used in this part of Income Computation and Disclosure Standard with the meanings specified:

(a) "Scheduled Bank" shall have the meaning assigned to it in clause (ii) of the Explanation to clause (viia) of sub-section (1) of section 36 of the Act.

(b) "Securities" shall have the meaning assigned to it in clause (h) of Section 2 of the Securities Contract (Regulation) Act, 1956 (42 of 1956) and shall include share of a company in which public are not substantially interested;

2(2) Words and expressions used and not defined in this part of Income Computation and Disclosure Standard but defined in the Act shall have the meaning respectively assigned to them in the Act.

Classification, Recognition and Measurement of Securities

3. Securities shall be classified, recognised and measured in accordance with the extant guidelines issued by the Reserve Bank of India in this regard and any claim for deduction in excess of the said guidelines shall not be taken into account. To this extent, the provisions of Income Computation and Disclosure Standard VI on the effect of changes in foreign exchange rates relating to forward exchange contracts shall not apply."

I. Income Computation and Disclosure Standard IX relating to borrowing costs

Preamble

This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard is applicable for computation of income chargeable under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" or "Income from other sources" and not for the purpose of maintenance of books of account.

In the case of conflict between the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 ('the Act') and this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard, the provisions of the Act shall prevail to that extent.

Scope

1. (1) This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard deals with treatment of borrowing costs.

(2) This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard does not deal with the actual or imputed cost of owners' equity and preference share capital.

Definitions

2. (1) The following terms are used in this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard with the meanings specified:

(a) "Borrowing costs" are interest and other costs incurred by a person in connection with the borrowing of funds and include:

(i) commitment charges on borrowings;

(ii) amortised amount of discounts or premiums relating to borrowings;

(iii) amortised amount of ancillary costs incurred in connection with the arrangement of borrowings;

(iv) finance charges in respect of assets acquired under finance leases or under other similar arrangements.

(b) "Qualifying asset" means:

(i) land, building, machinery, plant or furniture, being tangible assets;

(ii) know-how, patents, copyrights, trade marks, licences, franchises or any other business or commercial rights of similar nature, being intangible assets;

(iii) inventories that require a period of twelve months or more to bring them to a saleable condition.

(2) Words and expressions used and not defined in this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard but defined in the Act shall have the meaning assigned to them in the Act.

Recognition

3. Borrowing costs that are directly attributable to the acquisition, construction or production of a qualifying asset shall be capitalised as part of the cost of that asset. The amount of borrowing costs eligible for capitalisation shall be determined in accordance with this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard. Other borrowing costs shall be recognised in accordance with the provisions of the Act.

4. For the purposes of this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard, "capitalisation" in the context of inventory referred to in item (iii) of clause (b) of sub-paragraph (1) of paragraph 2means addition of borrowing cost to the cost of inventory.

Borrowing Costs Eligible for Capitalisation

5. Subject to paragraph 8, the extent to which funds are borrowed specifically for the purposes of acquisition, construction or production of a qualifying asset, the amount of borrowing costs to be capitalised on that asset shall be the actual borrowing costs incurred during the period on the funds so borrowed.

"6. Subject to Para 8, in respect of borrowing other than those referred to in Para 5, if any, the amount of borrowing costs to be capitalised shall be computed in accordance with the following formula namely :—

$$\mathrm{A} \times \frac{B}{C}$$

Where

A = borrowing costs incurred during the previous year except on borrowings referred to in Para 5 above;

B = (i) the average of costs of qualifying asset as appearing in the balance sheet of a person on the first day and the last day of the previous year;

(ii) in case the qualifying asset does not appear in the balance sheet of a person on the first day, half of the cost of qualifying asset; or

(iii) in case the qualifying asset does not appear in the balance sheet of a person on the last day of the previous year, the average of the costs of qualifying asset as appearing in the balance sheet of a person on the first day of the previous year and on the date of put to use or completion, as the case may be, excluding the extent to which the qualifying assets are directly funded out of specific borrowings;

C = the average of the amount of total assets as appearing in the balance sheet of a person on the first day and the last day of the previous year, other than assets to the extent they are directly funded out of specific borrowings;

Explanation — For the purpose of this paragraph, a qualifying asset shall be such asset that necessarily require a period of twelve months or more for its acquisition, construction or production.

Commencement of Capitalisation

7. The capitalisation of borrowing costs shall commence:

   (a) in a case referred to in paragraph 5, from the date on which funds were borrowed;

   (b) in a case referred to in paragraph 6, from the date on which funds were utilised.

Cessation of Capitalisation

8. Capitalisation of borrowing costs shall cease:

   (a) in case of a qualifying asset referred to in item (i) and (ii) of clause (b) of sub-paragraph (1) of paragraph 2, when such asset is first put to use;

   (b) in case of inventory referred to in item (iii) of clause (b) of sub-paragraph (1) of paragraph 2, when substantially all the activities necessary to prepare such inventory for its intended sale are complete.

9. When the construction of a qualifying asset is completed in parts and a completed part is capable of being used while construction continues for the other parts, capitalisation of borrowing costs in relation to a part shall cease:—

   (a) in case of part of a qualifying asset referred to in item (i) and (ii) of clause (b) of sub- paragraph (1) of paragraph 2, when such part of a qualifying asset is first put to use;

   (b) in case of part of inventory referred to in item (iii) of clause (b) of sub-paragraph (1) of paragraph 2, when substantially all the activities necessary to prepare such part of inventory for its intended sale are complete.

Transitional Provisions

10. All the borrowing costs incurred on or after 1st day of April, 2016 shall be capitalised for the previous year commencing on or after 1st day of April, 2016 in accordance with the provisions of this standard after taking into account the amount of borrowing costs capitalised, if any, for the same borrowing for any previous year ending on or before 31st day of March,2016.

Disclosure

11. The following disclosure shall be made in respect of borrowing costs, namely:—

   (a) the accounting policy adopted for borrowing costs; and

   (b) the amount of borrowing costs capitalised during the previous year.

J. Income Computation and Disclosure Standard X relating to provisions, contingent liabilities and contingent assets

Preamble

This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard is applicable for computation of income chargeable under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" or "Income from other sources" and not for the purpose of maintenance of books of accounts.

In the case of conflict between the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 ('the Act') and this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard, the provisions of the Act shall prevail to that extent.

Scope

1. This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard deals with provisions, contingent liabilities and contingent assets, except those:

(a) resulting from financial instruments;

(b) resulting from executory contracts;

(c) arising in insurance business from contracts with policyholders; and

(d) covered by another Income Computation and Disclosure Standard.

2. This Income Computation and Disclosure Standard does not deal with the recognition of revenue which is dealt with by Income Computation and Disclosure Standard - Revenue Recognition.

3. The term 'provision' is also used in the context of items such as depreciation, impairment of assets and doubtful debts which are adjustments to the carrying amounts of assets and are not addressed in this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard.

Definitions

4(1) The following terms are used in this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard with the meanings specified:

(a) "Provision" is a liability which can be measured only by using a substantial degree of estimation.

(b) "Liability" is a present obligation of the person arising from past events, the settlement of which is expected to result in an outflow from the person of resources embodying economic benefits.

(c) "Obligating event" is an event that creates an obligation that results in a person having no realistic alternative to settling that obligation.

(d) "Contingent liability" is:

(i) a possible obligation that arises from past events and the existence of which will be confirmed only by the occurrence or nonoccurrence of one or more uncertain future events not wholly within the control of the person; or

(ii) a present obligation that arises from past events but is not recognised because:

(A) it is not reasonably certain that an outflow of resources embodying economic benefits will be required to settle the obligation; or

(B) a reliable estimate of the amount of the obligation cannot be made.

(e) "Contingent asset" is a possible asset that arises from past events the existence of which will be confirmed only by the occurrence or nonoccurrence of one or more uncertain future events not wholly within the control of the person.

(f) "Executory contracts" are contracts under which neither party has performed any of its obligations or both parties have partially performed their obligations to an equal extent.

(g) "Present obligation" is an obligation if, based on the evidence available, its existence at the end of the previous year is considered reasonably certain.

4(2) Words and expressions used and not defined in this Income Computation and Disclosure Standard but defined in the Act shall have the meaning respectively assigned to them in the Act.

Recognition

Provisions

5. A provision shall be recognised when:

(a) a person has a present obligation as a result of a past event;

(b) it is reasonably certain that an outflow of resources embodying economic benefits will be required to settle the obligation; and

(c) a reliable estimate can be made of the amount of the obligation.

If these conditions are not met, no provision shall be recognised.

6. No provision shall be recognised for costs that need to be incurred to operate in the future.

7. It is only those obligations arising from past events existing independently of a person's future actions, that is the future conduct of its business, that are recognised as provisions

8. Where details of a proposed new law have yet to be finalised, an obligation arises only when the legislation is enacted.

Contingent Liabilities

9. A person shall not recognise a contingent liability.

Contingent Assets

10. A person shall not recognise a contingent asset.

11. Contingent assets are assessed continually and when it becomes reasonably certain that inflow of economic benefit will arise, the asset and related income are recognised in the previous year in which the change occurs.

Measurement

Best Estimate

12. The amount recognised as a provision shall be the best estimate of the expenditure required to settle the present obligation at the end of the previous year. The amount of a provision shall not be discounted to its present value.

13. The amount recognised as asset and related income shall be the best estimate of the value of economic benefit arising at the end of the previous year. The amount and related income shall not be discounted to its present value.

Reimbursements

14. Where some or all of the expenditure required to settle a provision is expected to be reimbursed by another party, the reimbursement shall be recognised when it is reasonably certain that reimbursement will be received if the person settles the obligation. The amount recognised for the reimbursement shall not exceed the amount of the provision.

15. Where a person is not liable for payment of costs in case the third party fails to pay, no provision shall be made for those costs.

16. An obligation, for which a person is jointly and severally liable, is a contingent liability to the extent that it is expected that the obligation will be settled by the other parties.

Review

17. Provisions shall be reviewed at the end of each previous year and adjusted to reflect the current best estimate. If it is no longer reasonably certain that an outflow of resources embodying economic benefits will be required to settle the obligation, the provision should be reversed.

18. An asset and related income recognised as provided in para 11 shall be reviewed at the end of each previous year and adjusted to reflect the current best estimate. If it is no longer reasonably certain that an inflow of economic benefits will arise, the asset and related income shall be reversed.

Use of Provisions

19. A provision shall be used only for expenditures for which the provision was originally recognised.

Transitional Provisions

20. All the provisions or assets and related income shall be recognised for the previous year commencing on or after 1st day of April, 2016 in accordance with the provisions of this standard after taking into account the amount recognised, if any, for the same for any previous year ending on or before 31st day of March,2016.

Disclosure

21(1) Following disclosure shall be made in respect of each class of provision, namely:-

(a) a brief description of the nature of the obligation;

(b) the carrying amount at the beginning and end of the previous year;

(c) additional provisions made during the previous year, including increases to existing provisions;

(d) amounts used, that is incurred and charged against the provision, during the previous year;

(e) unused amounts reversed during the previous year; and

(f) the amount of any expected reimbursement, stating the amount of any asset that has been recognised for that expected reimbursement.

21(2) Following disclosure shall be made in respect of each class of asset and related income recognised as provided in para 11, namely:—

(a) a brief description of the nature of the asset and related income;

(b) the carrying amount of asset at the beginning and end of the previous year;

(c) additional amount of asset and related income recognised during the year, including increases to assets and related income already recognised; and

(d) amount of asset and related income reversed during the previous year.

INCOME OF OTHER PERSONS INCLUDED IN ASSESSEE'S TOTAL INCOME

LEARNING OUTCOMES

After studying this chapter, you would be able to -

❑ examine the cases where clubbing provisions would be attracted;

❑ examine the circumstances when income of minor child, has to be included in the hands of parent and exemption available in respect of such included income;

❑ examine the circumstances when the income of HUF has to be included in the hands of its member(s);

❑ apply the clubbing provisions to determine the amount of income which need to be included in the hands of another person;

❑ examine the cases of cross transfers to determine the person in whose hands the income arising from assets transferred has to be included and the portion of income that has to be included;

❑ compute the income under different heads of income after applying the clubbing provisions.

9.1 CLUBBING OF INCOME – AN INTRODUCTION

Under the Income-tax Act, 1961, an assessee is generally taxed in respect of his own income. However, there are certain cases where as assessee has to pay tax in respect of income of another person. The provisions for the same are contained in sections 60 to 65 of the Act. These provisions have been enacted to counteract the tendency on the part of the tax-payers to dispose of their property or transfer their income in such a way that their tax liability can be avoided or reduced.

Example:

In the case of individuals, income-tax is levied on a slab system on the total income. The tax system is progressive i.e. as the income increases, the applicable rate of tax increases. Some taxpayers in the higher income bracket have a tendency to divert some portion of their income to their spouse, minor child etc. to minimize their tax burden. In order to prevent such tax avoidance, clubbing provisions have been incorporated in the Act, under which income arising to certain persons (like spouse, minor child etc.) have to be included in the income of the person who has diverted his income for the purpose of computing tax liability.

9.2 INCOME OF OTHER PERSON'S INCLUDIBLE IN ASSESSEE'S TOTAL INCOME

(1) Transfer of income without transfer of asset [Section 60]

(i) If any person transfers the income from any asset without transferring the asset itself, such income is to be included in the total income of the transferor.

(ii) It is immaterial whether the transfer is revocable or irrevocable and whether it was made before the commencement of this Act or after its commencement.

Example:

Mr. A confers the right to receive rent in respect of his house property on his wife, Mrs. A, without transferring the house itself to her. In this case, the rent received by Mrs. A will be clubbed with the income of Mr. A.

(2) Income arising from revocable transfer of assets [Section 61]

All income arising to any person by virtue of a revocable transfer of assets is to be included in the total income of the transferor.

Meaning of revocable transfer [Section 63]

Transfer is deemed to be revocable if—

(i) it contains any provision for the retransfer, directly or indirectly, of the whole or any part of the income or assets to the transferor, or

(ii) it gives, in any way to the transferor, a right to reassume power, directly or indirectly, over the whole or any part of the income or the assets.

This clubbing provision will operate even if only part of income of the transferred asset had been applied for the benefit of the transferor. Once the transfer is revocable, the entire income from the transferred asset is includible in the total income of the transferor.

Exceptions where clubbing provisions are not attracted even in case of revocable transfer [section 62]

Section 61 will not apply to any income arising to any person in the following two cases -

(i) Transfer not revocable during the life time of the beneficiary or the transferee – If there is a transfer of asset which is not revocable during the life time of the transferee, the income from the transferred asset is not includible in the total income of the transfer or provided the transferor derives no direct or indirect benefit from such income.

If the transferor receives direct or indirect benefit from such income, such income is to be included in his total income even though the transfer may not be revocable during the life time of the transferee.

(ii) Transfer made before April 1, 1961 and not revocable for a period exceeding six years - Income arising from the transfer of an asset before 1.4.61, which was not revocable for a period exceeding six years, is not includible in the total income of the transferor provided the transferor does not derive direct or indirect benefit from such income.

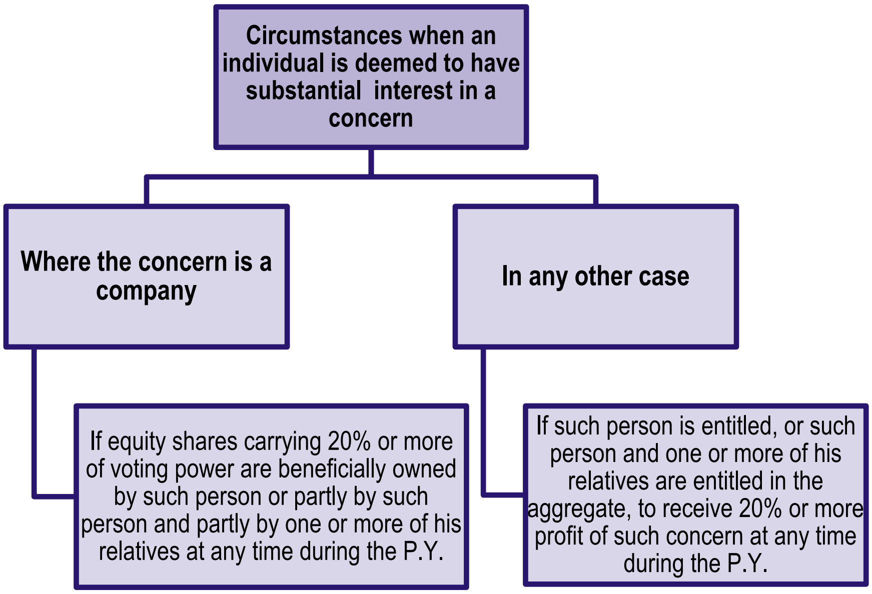
In both the above cases, as and when the power to revoke the transfer arises, the income arising by virtue of such transfer will be included in the total income of the transferor.

9.3 INCOME OF OTHER PERSON'S INCLUDIBLE IN INDIVIDUAL'S TOTAL INCOME

(1) Clubbing of income arising to spouse

(I) Income by way of remuneration from a concern in which the individual has substantial interest [Section 64(1)(ii)]

(i) Remuneration in cash or kind to spouse from a concern in which the individual has substantial interest to be clubbed: In computing the total income of any individual, all such income which arises, directly or indirectly, to the spouse of such individual by way of salary, commission, fees or any other form of remuneration, whether in cash or in kind, from a concern in which such individual has a substantial interest shall be included.



Circumstances when an individual is deemed to have substantial interest in a concern
Where the concern is a company
In any other case
If equity shares carrying 20% or more of voting power are beneficially owned by such person or partly by such person and partly by one or more of his relatives at any time during the P.Y.
If such person is entitled, or such person and one or more of his relatives are entitled in the aggregate, to receive 20% or more profit of such concern at any time during the P.Y.

The term 'relative' in relation to an individual means the husband, wife, brother or sister or any lineal ascendant or descendant of that individual [Section 2(41)].

(ii) Clubbing provisions will not apply where remuneration is received on account of technical or professional qualifications: Clubbing provisions, however, does not apply where the spouse of the said individual possesses technical or professional qualifications and the income to the spouse is solely attributable to the application of his/her technical or professional knowledge or experiences. In such an event, the income arising to such spouse is to be assessed in his/her hands.

(iii) Both husband and wife have substantial interest in a concern: Where both husband and wife have substantial interest in a concern and both are in receipt of income by way of salary etc. from the said concern, such income will be includible in the hands of that spouse, whose total income, excluding such income is higher.

Where any such income is once included in the total income of either spouse, income arising in the succeeding year shall not be included in the total income of the other spouse unless the Assessing Officer is satisfied, after giving that spouse an opportunity of being heard, that it is necessary to do so.

ILLUSTRATION 1

Mr. A holds shares carrying 25% voting power in X Ltd. Mrs. A is working as a computer software programmer in X Ltd. at a salary of ₹ 30,000 p.m. She is, however, not qualified for the job. The other income of Mr. A & Mrs. A are ₹ 7,00,000 & ₹ 4,00,000, respectively. Compute the gross total income of Mr. A and Mrs. A for the A.Y.2020-21.

SOLUTION

Mr. A holds shares carrying 25% voting power in X Ltd i.e. a substantial interest in the company. His wife is working in the same company without any professional qualifications for the same. Thus, by virtue of the clubbing provisions of the Act, the salary received by Mrs. A from X Ltd. will be clubbed in the hands of Mr. A.

Computation of Gross total income of Mr. A

Particulars	₹	₹
Salary received by Mrs. A (₹ 30,000 × 12)	3,60,000
Less: Standard deduction under section 16(ia)	50,000	3,10,000

Gross total income		10,10,000

The gross total income of Mrs. A is ₹ 4,00,000.

ILLUSTRATION 2

Will your answer be different if Mrs. A was qualified for the job?

SOLUTION

If Mrs. A possesses professional qualifications for the job, then the clubbing provisions shall not be applicable.

Gross total income of Mr. A = ₹ 7,00,000 (other income)

Gross total income of Mrs. A = Salary received by Mrs. A [₹ 30,000×12] less ₹ 50,000, being the standard deduction under section 16(ia) plus other income [₹ 4,00,000] = ₹ 7,10,000

(II) Income arising to the spouse from an asset transferred without adequate consideration [Section 64(1)(iv)]

(i) Transfer of asset (other than house property): Where there is a transfer of an asset (other than house property), directly or indirectly, from one spouse to the other, otherwise than for adequate consideration or in connection with an agreement to live apart, any income arising to the transferee-spouse from the transferred asset, either directly or indirectly, shall be included in the total income of the transferor-spouse.

(ii) Transfer of house property: In the case of transfer of house property, the provisions are contained in section 27. If an individual transfers a house property to his spouse, without adequate consideration or otherwise than in connection with an agreement to live apart, the transferor shall be deemed to be the owner of the house property and its annual value will be taxed in his hands.

(iii) Income from accretion of the transferred asset: It may be noted that any income from the accretion of the transferred asset is not to be clubbed with the income of the transferor.

The income arising on transferred assets alone have to be clubbed. However, income earned by investing such income (arising from transferred asset) cannot be clubbed.

(iv) Meaning of adequate consideration: It is also to be noted that natural love and affection do not constitute adequate consideration. Therefore, where an asset is transferred without adequate consideration, the income from such asset will be clubbed in the hands of the transferor.

(v) Transferred asset invested in business: Where the assets transferred, directly or indirectly, by an individual to his spouse are invested by the transferee in the business, proportionate income arising from such investment is to be included in the total income of the transferor. If the investment is in the nature of contribution of capital, proportionate interest on capital will be clubbed with the income of the transferor.

Such proportion has to be computed by taking into account the value of the aforesaid investment as on the first day of the previous year to the total investment in the business or by way of capital contribution in a firm as a partner, as the case may be, by the transferee as on that day.

ILLUSTRATION 4

Mr. Vaibhav started a proprietary business on 01.04.2018 with a capital of ₹ 5,00,000. He incurred a loss of ₹ 2,00,000 during the year 2018-19. To overcome the financial position, his wife Mrs. Vaishaly, a software engineer, gave a gift of ₹ 5,00,000 on 01.04.2019, which was immediately invested in the business by Mr. Vaibhav. He earned a profit of ₹ 4,00,000 during the year 2019-20. Compute the amount to be clubbed in the hands of Mrs. Vaishaly for the Assessment Year 2020-21. If Mrs. Vaishaly gave the said amount as loan, what would be the amount to be clubbed?

SOLUTION

Section 64(1)(iv) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 provides for the clubbing of income in the hands of the individual, if the income earned is from the assets (other than house property) transferred directly or indirectly to the spouse of the individual, otherwise than for adequate consideration or in connection with an agreement to live apart.

In this case, Mr. Vaibhav received a gift of ₹ 5,00,000 on 1.4.2019 from his wife Mrs. Vaishaly, which he invested in his business immediately. The income to be clubbed in the hands of Mrs. Vaishaly for the A.Y. 2020-21 is computed as under:

Particulars	Mr. Vaibhav's capital contribution (₹)	Capital contribution out of gift from Mrs. Vaishaly (₹)	Total (₹)
Capital as on 1.4.2019	3,00,000 (5,00,000 – 2,00,000)	5,00,000	8,00,000
Profit for P.Y.2019-20 to be apportioned on the basis of capital employed on the first day of the previous year i.e. as on 1.4.2019 (3:5)	1,50,000 $\left(4,00,000 \times \frac{3}{8}\right)$	2,50,000 $\left(4,00,000 \times \frac{5}{8}\right)$	4,00,000

Therefore, the income to be clubbed in the hands of Mrs. Vaishaly for the A.Y.2020-21 is ₹ 2,50,000.

In case Mrs. Vaishaly gave the said amount of ₹ 5,00,000 as a bona fide loan, then, clubbing provisions would not be attracted.

Note: The provisions of section 56(2)(x) would not be attracted in the hands of Mr. Vaibhav, since he has received a sum of money exceeding ₹ 50,000 without consideration from a relative i.e., his wife.

(III) Transfer of assets for the benefit of spouse [Section 64(1)(vii)]

All income arising directly or indirectly to any persons or association of persons, from the assets transferred, directly or indirectly, to such person or association of persons by an individual without adequate consideration is includible in the income of the transferor to the extent such income is used by the transferee for the immediate or deferred benefit of the transferor's spouse.

(2) Clubbing of income arising to son's wife

(I) Income arising to son's wife from the assets transferred without adequate consideration by the father-in-law or mother-in-law [Section 64(1)(vi)]

(i) Asset transferred without adequate consideration: Where an asset is transferred, directly or indirectly, by an individual to his or her son's wife without adequate consideration, the income from such asset is to be included in the total income of the transferor.

(ii) Asset transferred invested in the business: For this purpose, where the assets transferred directly or indirectly by an individual to his or her son's wife are invested by the transferee in the business, proportionate income arising from such investment is to be included in the total income of the transferor. If the investment is in the nature of contribution of capital, the proportionate interest on capital will be clubbed with the income of the transferor.

Such proportion has to be computed by taking into account the value of the aforesaid investment as on the first day of the previous year to the total investment in the business or by way of capital contribution in a firm as a partner, as the case may be, by the transferee as on that day.

(II) Transfer of assets for the benefit of son's wife [Section 64(1)(viii)]

All income arising directly or indirectly, to any person or association of persons from the assets transferred, directly or indirectly, without adequate consideration, to such person or association of persons by an individual will be included in the total income of the individual to the extent such income is used by the transferee for the immediate or deferred benefit of the transferor's son's wife.

Note: Where any asset is transferred by any person to any person without consideration or for inadequate consideration, the provisions of 56(2)(x) would get attracted in the hands of transferee, if conditions specified thereunder are satisfied.

ILLUSTRATION 5

Mrs. Kasturi transferred her immovable property to ABC Co. Ltd. subject to a condition that out of the rental income, a sum of ₹ 36,000 per annum shall be utilized for the benefit of her son's wife.

Mrs. Kasturi claims that the amount of ₹ 36,000 (utilized by her son's wife) should not be included in her total income as she no longer owned the property.

Examine with reasons whether the contention of Mrs. Kasturi is valid in law.

SOLUTION

The clubbing provisions under section 64(1)(viii) are attracted in case of transfer of any asset, directly or indirectly, otherwise than for adequate consideration, to any person to the extent to which the income from such asset is for the immediate or deferred benefit of son's wife. Such income shall be included in computing the total income of the transferor-individual.

Therefore, income of ₹ 36,000 meant for the benefit of daughter-in-law is chargeable to tax in the hands of transferor i.e., Mrs. Kasturi in this case.

The contention of Mrs. Kasturi is, hence, not valid in law.

Note - In order to attract the clubbing provisions under section 64(1)(viii), the transfer should be otherwise than for adequate consideration. In this case, it is presumed that the transfer is otherwise than for adequate consideration and therefore, the clubbing provisions are attracted. In such case, the provisions of section 56(2)(x) will also get attracted in the hands of ABC Co Ltd., if stamp duty value exceeds ₹ 50,000 and the other conditions specified thereunder are satisfied.

If it is presumed that the transfer was for adequate consideration, the provisions of section 64(1)(viii) would not be attracted.

(3) Clubbing of minor's income

(i) All income of a minor is to be included in the income of his parent.

(ii) However, the income derived by the minor from manual work or from any activity involving his skill, talent or specialised knowledge or experience will not be included in the income of his parent.

(iii) The income of the minor will be included in the income of that parent, whose total income is greater.

(iv) Once clubbing of minor's income is done with that of one parent, it will continue to be clubbed with that parent only, in subsequent years. The Assessing Officer, may, however, club the minor's income with that of the other parent, if, after giving the other parent an opportunity to be heard, he is satisfied that it is necessary to do so.

(v) Where the marriage of the parents does not subsist, the income of the minor will be includible in the income of that parent who maintains the minor child in the relevant previous year.

(vi) However, the income of a minor child suffering from any disability of the nature specified in section 80U shall not be included in the hands of the parent but shall be assessed in the hands of the child.

(vii) It may be noted that the clubbing provisions are attracted even in respect of income of minor married daughter.

Child in relation to an individual includes a step-child and an adopted child of that individual. [Section 2(15B)]

Exemption in respect of clubbed income of minor [Section 10(32)]

In case the income of an individual (i.e. the parent) includes the income of his/her minor child in terms of section 64(1A), such parent shall be entitled to exemption of ₹ 1,500 in respect of each minor child. However, if income of any minor so includible is less than ₹ 1,500, then the entire income shall be exempt.

ILLUSTRATION 6

Mr. A has three minor children – two twin daughters and one son. Income of the twin daughters is ₹ 2,000 p.a. each and that of the son is ₹ 1,200 p.a. Compute the income, in respect of minor children, to be clubbed in the hands of Mr. A.

SOLUTION

Taxable income, in respect of minor children, in the hands of Mr. A is

Particulars	₹	₹
Twin minor daughters [₹ 2,000 × 2]	4,000
Less: Exempt under section 10(32) [₹ 1,500 × 2]	3,000	1,000
Minor son	1,200
Less: Exempt under section 10(32)	1,200	Nil
Income to be clubbed in the hands of Mr. A		1,000

9.4 CROSS TRANSFERS

In the case of cross transfers also (e.g., A making gift of ₹ 50,000 to the wife of his brother B for the purchase of a house by her and a simultaneous gift by B to A's minor son of shares in a foreign company worth ₹ 50,000 owned by him), the income from the assets transferred would be assessed in the hands of the deemed transferor if the transfers are so intimately connected as to form part of a single transaction, and each transfer constitutes consideration for the other by being mutual or otherwise. Thus, in the instant case, the transfers have been made by A and B to persons who are not their spouse or minor child so as to circumvent the provisions of this section, showing that such transfers constituted consideration for each other.

The Supreme Court, in case of CIT v. Keshavji Morarji [1967] 66 ITR 142, observed that if two transactions are inter-connected and are parts of the same transaction in such a way that it can be said that the circuitous method was adopted as a device to evade tax, the implication of clubbing provisions would be attracted. Accordingly, the income arising to Mrs. B from the house property should be included in the total income of B and the dividend from shares transferred to A's minor son would be taxable in the hands of A. This is because A and B are the indirect transferors to their minor child and spouse, respectively, of income-yielding assets, so as to reduce their burden of taxation.

ILLUSTRATION 7

Mr. Vasudevan gifted a sum of ₹ 6 lakhs to his brother's wife on 14-6-2019. On 12-7-2019, his brother gifted a sum of ₹ 5 lakhs to Mr. Vasudevan's wife. The gifted amounts were invested as fixed deposits in banks by Mrs. Vasudevan and wife of Mr. Vasudevan's brother on 01-8-2019 at 9% interest. Discuss the consequences of the above under the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 in the hands of Mr. Vasudevan and his brother.

SOLUTION

In the given case, Mr. Vasudevan gifted a sum of ₹ 6 lakhs to his brother's wife on 14.06.2019 and simultaneously, his brother gifted a sum of ₹ 5 lakhs to Mr. Vasudevan's wife on 12.07.2019. The gifted amounts were invested as fixed deposits in banks by Mrs. Vasudevan and his brother's wife. These transfers are in the nature of cross transfers. Accordingly, the income from the assets transferred would be assessed in the hands of the deemed transferor because the transfers are so intimately connected to form part of a single transaction and each transfer constitutes consideration for the other by being mutual or otherwise.

If two transactions are inter-connected and are part of the same transaction in such a way that it can be said that the circuitous method was adopted as a device to evade tax, the implication of clubbing provisions would be attracted. It was so held by the Apex Court in CIT vs. Keshavji Morarji (1967) 66 ITR 142.

Accordingly, the interest income arising to Mrs. Vasudevan in the form of interest on fixed deposits would be included in the total income of Mr. Vasudevan and interest income arising in the hands of his brother's wife would be taxable in the hands of Mr. Vasudevan's brother as per section 64(1), to the extent of amount of cross transfers i.e., ₹ 5 lakhs.

This is because both Mr. Vasudevan and his brother are the indirect transferors of the income to their respective spouses with an intention to reduce their burden of taxation.

However, the interest income earned by his spouse on fixed deposit of ₹ 5 lakhs alone would be included in the hands of Mr. Vasudevan's brother and not the interest income on the entire fixed deposit of ₹ 6 lakhs, since the cross transfer is only to the extent of ₹ 5 lakhs.

9.5 CONVERSION OF SELF-ACQUIRED PROPERTY INTO THE PROPERTY OF A HINDU UNDIVIDED FAMILY [SECTION 64(2)]

Section 64(2) deals with the case of conversion of self-acquired property into property of a Hindu undivided family.

(1) Where an individual, who is a member of the HUF, converts at any time after 31-12-1969, his individual property into property of the HUF of which he is a member or throws such property into the common stock of the family or otherwise transfers such individual property, directly or indirectly, to the family otherwise than for adequate consideration, the income from such property shall continue to be included in the total income of the individual.

(2) Where the converted property has been partitioned, either by way of total or partial partition, the income derived from such converted property as is received by the spouse on partition will be deemed to arise to the spouse from assets transferred indirectly by the individual to the spouse and consequently, such income shall also be included in the total income of the individual who effected the conversion of such property.

(3) Where income from the converted property is included in the total income of an individual under section 64(2), it will be excluded from the total income of the family or, as the case may be, of the spouse of the individual.

9.6 INCOME INCLUDES LOSS

It is significant to note that as per the Explanation 2 to section 64, 'income' would include 'loss'. Accordingly, where the specified income to be included in the total income of the individual is a loss, such loss will be taken into account while computing the total income of the individual. It is significant to note that this Explanation applies to clubbing provisions under both sections 64(1) and 64(2).

9.7 DISTINCTION BETWEEN SECTION 61 AND SECTION 64

It may be noted that the main distinction between the two sections is that section 61 applies only to a revocable transfer made by any person while section 64 applies to revocable as well as irrevocable transfers made only by individuals.

9.8 LIABILITY OF PERSON IN RESPECT OF INCOME INCLUDED IN THE INCOME OF ANOTHER PERSON [SECTION 65]

Sections 61 to 64 provide for clubbing of income of one person in the hands of the other in circumstances specified therein. However, service of notice of demand (in respect of tax on such income) may be made upon the person to whom such asset is transferred (i.e. the transferee). In such a case, the transferee is liable to pay that portion of tax levied on the transferor which is attributable to the income so clubbed.

Similar provision will be applicable in case of deemed ownership of house property under section 27 i.e., transfer of house property otherwise than for adequate consideration to spouse, not being in connection with agreement to live apart or to minor child not being a minor married daughter.

ILLUSTRATION 8

Mr. Ravi has gifted his only house property to his wife, Mrs. Ravi, and his married daughter, Mrs. Divya. The Assessing Officer has served a notice of demand on Mr. Ravi for payment of tax for the income derived from the said house property. Examine the validity of the Assessing Officer's action.

Answer

As per section 27(i), an individual who transfers otherwise than for adequate consideration any house property to his spouse, not being a transfer in connection with an agreement to live apart, or to a minor child not being a married daughter shall be deemed to be the owner of the house property so transferred.

Mr. Ravi, in this case, would be the deemed owner only in respect of the share of house property transferred to his wife Mrs. Ravi without consideration and not for the share of the house property transferred to his married daughter Mrs. Divya.

Since Mr. Ravi is the deemed owner of the share of house property transferred to his wife without consideration, the income derived from the house property, to the extent attributable to the share of property transferred to his wife without consideration, would be taxable in his hands under the head "Income from house property".

As per section 65, the notice of demand can, however, be served on Mrs. Ravi for payment of that portion of tax levied on Mr. Ravi attributable to the income derived [by virtue of section 27(i)], from the share of house property transferred to Mrs. Ravi, and standing in her name.

However, the income derived from house property, attributable to the share of property transferred to his married daughter without consideration, would be taxable in the hands of his daughter. Such income would not be taxable in the hands of Mr. Ravi. Mr. Ravi will not be responsible for the payment of tax attributable to aforesaid share of income of daughter from house property.

Thus, the action of the Assessing Officer in serving notice of demand on Mr. Ravi for payment of tax for the entire income derived from the said house property is not valid.

EXERCISE

Question 1

Mrs. E, wife of Mr. F, is a partner in a firm. Her capital contribution to the firm as on 01-04-2019 was ₹ 5 lacs, out of which ₹ 3 lacs was contributed out of her own sources and ₹ 2 lacs was contributed out of gift from her husband.

As further capital was needed by the firm, she further invested ₹ 2 lacs on 01.05.2019 out of the funds gifted by her husband. The firm paid interest on capital of ₹ 80,000 and share of profit of ₹ 60,000 for the financial year 2019-20.

Advise Mr. F as to the applicability of the provisions of section 64(1)(iv) and the manner thereof in respect of the above referred transactions.

Answer

As per section 64(1)(iv), in computing the total income of any individual, there shall be included all such income as arises, directly or indirectly, subject to the provisions of section 27(i), to the spouse of such individual from assets transferred directly or indirectly to the spouse by such individual otherwise than for adequate consideration or in connection with an agreement to live apart.

In this instant case, Mr. F has gifted money to his wife, Mrs. E. Mrs. E, in turn, invested such gifted money in the capital of a partnership firm, of which she is a partner. Mrs. E has also contributed a sum of ₹ 3 lacs out of her own resources to the capital of the firm.

As per Explanation 3 to section 64(1), for the purpose of clubbing under section 64(1)(iv), where the assets transferred, directly or indirectly, by an individual to his spouse are invested by the transferee in the nature of contribution of capital as a partner in a firm, proportionate interest on capital will be clubbed with the income of the transferor. Such proportion has to be computed by taking into account the value of the aforesaid investment as on the first day of the previous year to the total investment by way of capital contribution as a partner in the firm as on that day.

In view of the above provision, interest received by Mrs. E from the firm shall be included in total income of Mr. F to the extent of ₹ 32,000 i.e., ₹ 80,000 x ₹ 2,00,000/ ₹ 5,00,000.

Share of profit amounting to ₹ 60,000 is exempt from income-tax under the provisions of section 10(2A). The provisions of section 64 will not apply, if the income from the transferred asset itself is exempt from tax.

Note: It is assumed that rate of interest on capital contributed by Mrs. E does not exceed 12% p.a.

Question 2

Mr. A has gifted a house property valued at ₹ 50 lakhs to his wife, Mrs. B, who in turn has gifted the same to Mrs. C, their daughter-in-law. The house was let out at ₹ 25,000 per month throughout the year. Compute the total income of Mr. A and Mrs. C.

Will your answer be different if the said property was gifted to his son, husband of Mrs. C?

Answer

As per section 27(i), an individual who transfers otherwise than for adequate consideration any house property to his spouse, not being a transfer in connection with an agreement to live apart, shall be deemed to be the owner of the house property so transferred.

Therefore, in this case, Mr. A would be the deemed owner of the house property transferred to his wife Mrs. B without consideration.

As per section 64(1)(vi), income arising to the son's wife from assets transferred, directly or indirectly, to her by an individual otherwise than for adequate consideration would be included in the total income of such individual.

Income from let-out property is ₹ 2,10,000 [i.e., ₹ 3,00,000, being the actual rent calculated at ₹ 25,000 per month less ₹ 90,000, being deduction under section 24 @30% of ₹ 3,00,000]

In this case, income of ₹ 2,10,000 from let-out property arising to Mrs. C, being Mr. A's son's wife, would be included in the income of Mr. A, applying the provisions of section 27(i) and section 64(1)(vi). Such income would, therefore, not be taxable in the hands of Mrs. C.

In case the property was gifted to Mr. A's son, the clubbing provisions under section 64 would not apply, since the son is not a minor child. Therefore, the income of ₹ 2,10,000 from letting out of property gifted to the son would be taxable in the hands of the son.

It may be noted that the provisions of section 56(2)(x) would not be attracted in the hands of the recipient of house property, since the receipt of property in each case was from a "relative" of such individual. Therefore, the stamp duty value of house property would not be chargeable to tax in the hands of the recipient of immovable property, even though the house property was received by her or him without consideration.

Note - The first part of the question can also be answered by applying the provisions of section 64(1)(vi) directly to include the income of ₹ 2,10,000 arising to Mrs. C in the hands of Mr. A. [without first applying the provisions of section 27(i) to deem Mr. A as the owner of the house property transferred to his wife Mrs. B without consideration], since section 64(1)(vi) speaks of clubbing of income arising to son's wife from indirect transfer of assets to her by her husband's parent, without consideration. Gift of house property by Mr. A to Mrs. C, via Mrs. B, can be viewed as an indirect transfer by Mr. A to Mrs. C.

Question 3

Mr. Korani transferred 2,000 debentures of ₹ 100 each of Wild Fox Ltd. to his wife Mrs. Rekha Korani on 3.10.2018 without consideration. The company paid interest of ₹ 30,000 in September, 2019 which was deposited by Mrs. Korani with Kartar Finance Co. in October, 2019. Kartar Finance Co. paid interest of ₹ 3,000 upto March, 2020. How would both the interest income be charged to tax in A.Y. 2020-21?

Answer

As per section 64(1)(iv), income arising from assets transferred without adequate consideration by an individual to his spouse is liable to be clubbed in the hands of the individual. It may be noted that income on the asset transferred has to be clubbed but if there is accretion to the asset, any further income derived on such accretion should not be clubbed.

Therefore, applying the provisions of section 64(1)(iv), ₹ 30,000, being the interest on debentures received by Mrs. Rekha Korani in September, 2019 will be clubbed with the income of Mr. Korani, since he had transferred the debentures of the company without consideration to her in October, 2018.

However, the interest of ₹ 3,000 upto March, 2020 earned by Mrs. Rekha Korani on the interest on the debentures deposited by her with Kartar Finance Company shall be taxable in her individual capacity and will not be clubbed with the income of Mr. Korani.

Question 4

Mr. Rose, out of his own funds, had taken an FDR for ₹ 10,00,000 bearing interest @10% p.a. payable half-yearly in the name of his wife Lilly. The interest earned during the financial year 2019-20 of ₹ 1,00,000 was invested by Mrs. Lilly in the business of packed spices which resulted in a net profit of ₹ 55,000 for the year ended 31.03.2020. How shall the interest on FDR and income from business be taxed for the Assessment Year 2020-21?

Answer

Section 64(1)(iv) specifies that the income derived by the spouse of an assessee from the assets transferred directly or indirectly without adequate consideration or intention to live apart shall be clubbed with the income of the transferor. Therefore, the interest income of ₹ 1 lac on the FDR of ₹ 10 lacs for the F.Y.2019-20 shall be clubbed with the income of Mr. Rose.

When Mrs. Lilly invested the interest income in a business and earned profits therefrom, such profits shall not be clubbed with the income of her husband but shall be taxable in her individual capacity. This is so because the income from the accretion of the transferred assets is not to be clubbed with the income of the transferor [CIT v. M. S. S. Rajan (2001) 252 ITR 126 (Mad)].

Question 5

Naresh is a fashion designer having lucrative business. His wife is a model. Naresh pays her monthly salary of ₹ 10,000. The Assessing Officer while admitting that the salary is an admissible deduction, in computing the total income of Naresh had applied the provisions of section 64(1), and had clubbed the income (salary) of his wife in Naresh hands.

Discuss the correctness of the action of the Assessing Officer.

Answer

This question is based on the principles laid down by Madras High Court in the case of CIT v. Smt. R. Bharati (1999) 240 ITR 697 where the interpretation of the terms "professional qualifications" and "knowledge" came up for consideration as per proviso to section 64(1).

These words do not necessarily connote a qualification conferred by a recognized university after examining the candidate who has undergone a course of study in a technical subject or course of study preparing him for a profession of law, accountancy etc. Accordingly, the term "qualification" must be given a wide meaning as referring to the qualities which are required to be possessed by a person performing the work that he does, so long as that work is capable of being regarded as technical or professional.

The word "professional" is a term capable of very broad meaning and would encompass a variety of occupations. A large number of occupations are being practiced which form a source of livelihood and are capable of being regarded, as professions as long as they require certain degree of skill. A person having skill, experience and competence in a line of work can be regarded as professionally qualified for the purpose of section 64(1)(ii).

Applying the rationale of the Madras High Court ruling, a model, having skill, competence and experience in her line can be considered as a professional. Hence, the action of the Assessing Officer is not correct.

CHAPTER 10

AGGREGATION OF INCOME, SET OFF OR CARRY FORWARD OF LOSSES

LEARNING OUTCOMES

After studying this chapter, you would be able to -

- identify the permissible inter-source and inter-head adjustments for set-off of losses and the restrictions in inter-source and inter-head set-off of losses;
- determine the unabsorbed losses which can be carried forward to the subsequent assessment year for set-off against income of that year and the maximum period of carry forward of such losses;
- appreciate the provisions regarding carry forward and set-off of losses in case of closely held companies and eligible start-ups as also in case of change in constitution of firms;
- appreciate the conditions which are required to be satisfied by the amalgamating company and the amalgamated company for carry forward and set-off of loss of the amalgamating company by the amalgamated company;
- appreciate the special provisions for carry forward and set-off of losses of a banking company against the profits of a banking institution under a scheme of amalgamation;
- compute the gross total income of an assessee after applying the provisions relating to set-off and carry forward and set-off of losses.

10.1 AGGREGATION OF INCOME

In certain cases, some amounts are deemed as income in the hands of the assessee though they are actually not in the nature of income. These cases are contained in sections 68, 69, 69A, 69B, 69C and 69D. These are discussed in detail in Chapter 1. The Assessing Officer may require the assessee to furnish explanation in such cases. If the assessee does not offer any explanation or the explanation offered by the assessee is not satisfactory, the amounts referred to in these sections would be deemed to be the income of the assessee. Such amounts have to be aggregated with the assessee's income.

10.2 CONCEPT OF SET OFF AND CARRY FORWARD OF LOSSES

Specific provisions have been made in the Income-tax Act, 1961 for the set-off and carry forward of losses. In simple words, "Set-off" means adjustment of losses against the profits from another source/head of income in the same assessment year. If losses cannot be set-off in the same year due to inadequacy of eligible profits, then such losses are carried forward to the next assessment year for adjustment against the eligible profits of that year. The maximum period for which different losses can be carried forward for set-off has been provided in the Act.

10.3 INTER SOURCE ADJUSTMENTS [SECTION 70]

(1) Inter-source set-off of losses

Under this section, the losses incurred by the assessee in respect of one source shall be set-off against income from any other source under the same head of income, since the income under each head is to be computed by grouping together the net result of the activities of all the sources covered by that head. In simpler terms, loss from one source of income can be adjusted against income from another source, both the sources being under the same head.

Examples:

1. Loss from one house property can be set off against the income from another house property.
2. Loss from one business, say textiles, can be set off against income from any other business, say printing, in the same year as both these sources of income fall under one head of income. Therefore, the loss in one business may be set-off against the profits from another business in the same year.

(2) Impermissible inter-source set-off

Inter-source set-off, however, is not permissible in the following cases -

(i) Long-term capital loss [Section 70(3)]

Short-term capital loss is allowed to be set off against both short-term capital gain and long-term capital gain. However, long-term capital loss can be set-off only against long-term capital gain and not short-term capital gain.

(ii) Speculation loss [Section 73(1)]

A loss in speculation business can be set-off only against the profits of any other speculation business and not against any other business or professional income.

However, losses from other business can be adjusted against profits from speculation business.

(iii) Loss from the activity of owning and maintaining race horses [Section 74A(3)]

Such loss can be set-off only against income from the activity of owing and maintaining race horses.

(iv) Losses from specified business [Section 73A(1)]

A loss in any specified business referred in section 35AD can be set-off only against any other specified business.

However, losses from other business can be set-off against profits from specified business.

> It must be noted that loss from an exempt source cannot be set-off against profits from a taxable source of income. For example, share of loss from a partnership firm cannot be set-off against business income, since share of income of the firm is exempt under section 10(2A).

10.4 INTER HEAD ADJUSTMENTS [SECTION 71]

Loss under one head of income can be adjusted or set off against income under another head. However, the following points should be considered:

(1) Loss under any head other than capital gains: Where the net result of the computation under any head of income (other than 'Capital Gains') is a loss, the assessee can set-off such loss against his income assessable for that assessment year under any other head, including 'Capital Gains'.

(2) Loss under the head "Profits and gains from business or profession: Where the net result of the computation under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" is a loss, such loss cannot be set off against income under the head "Salaries".

(3) Loss under the head "Capital Gains": Where the net result of computation under the head 'Capital Gains' is a loss, such capital loss cannot be set-off against income under any other head.

(4) Loss under the head "Income from house property": Where the net result of the computation under the head "Income from house property" is a loss and the assessee has income assessable under any other head of income, the amount of such loss exceeding ₹ 2 lakhs would not be allowable to be set-off against income under the other head. In other words, the maximum loss from house property which can be set-off against income from any other head is ₹ 2 lakhs.

(5) Speculation loss, loss from the activity of owning and maintaining race horses and losses from specified business referred to in section 35AD cannot be set off against income under any other head.

ILLUSTRATION 1

Mr. A (aged 35 years) submits the following particulars pertaining to the A.Y.2020-21:

Particulars	₹
Income from salary (computed)	4,00,000
Loss from self-occupied property	(-)70,000
Loss from let-out property	(-) 1,50,000
Business loss	(-)1,00,000
Bank interest (FD) received	80,000

Compute the total income of Mr. A for the A.Y.2020-21.

SOLUTION

Computation of total income of Mr. A for the A.Y.2020-21

Particulars	Amount (₹)	Amount (₹)
Income from salary	4,00,000
Less: Loss from house property of ₹ 2,20,000 to be restricted to ₹ 2 lakhs by virtue of section 71(3A)	(-) 2,00,000	2,00,000
Balance loss of ₹ 20,000 from house property to be carried forward to next assessment year
Income from other sources (interest on fixed deposit with bank)	80,000
Business loss set-off (Business loss of ₹ 20,000 to be carried forward for set-off against business income of the next assessment year)	(-) 1,00,000	-
Gross total income [See Note below]		2,00,000
Less: Deduction under Chapter VI-A		Nil
Total income		2,00,000

Note: Gross Total Income includes salary income of ₹ 2,00,000 after adjusting loss of ₹ 2,00,000 from house property. The balance loss of ₹ 20,000 from house property to be carried forward to next assessment year for set-off against income from house property of that year.

Business loss of ₹ 1,00,000 is set off against bank interest of ₹ 80,000 and remaining business loss of ₹ 20,000 will be carried forward as it cannot be set off against salary income.

10.5 CARRY FORWARD AND SET OFF OF LOSS FROM HOUSE PROPERTY [SECTION 71B]

(1) Set-off and Carry Forward & Set-off of losses: In any assessment year, if there is a loss under the head 'Income from house property', such loss will first be set-off against income from any other head to the extent of ₹ 2,00,000 during the same year. The unabsorbed loss will be carried forward to the following assessment year to be set-off against income under the head 'Income from house property'.

(2) Maximum period for carry forward & set-off of losses: The loss under this head is allowed to be carried forward upto 8 assessment years immediately succeeding the assessment year in which the loss was first computed.

Example:

Loss from one house property can be adjusted against the profits from another house property in the same assessment year. Any loss under the head 'Income from house property' can be set off against any income under any other head to the extent of ₹ 2,00,000 in the same assessment year. However, if after such set off, there is still any loss under the head "Income from house property", then, the same shall be carried forward to the next year.

Note - It is to be remembered that once a particular loss is carried forward, it can be set off only against the income from the same head in the forthcoming assessment years.

10.6 CARRY FORWARD AND SET OFF OF BUSINESS LOSSES [SECTION 72]

Under the Act, the assessee has the right to carry forward the losses under the business and profession in cases where such loss cannot be set-off due to the absence or inadequacy of income under any other head in the same year. The loss so carried forward can be set-off against the profits of subsequent previous years.

Section 72 covers the carry forward and set-off of losses arising from a business or profession.

Conditions

The assessee's right to carry forward business losses under this section is, however, subject to the following conditions:-

(1) The loss should have been incurred in business, profession or vocation.

(2) The loss should not be in the nature of a loss in the business of speculation.

(3) Loss from one business can be carried forward & set-off against the income from any other business: The loss may be carried forward and set-off against the income from business or profession though not necessarily against the profits and gains of the same business or profession in which the loss was incurred.

However, a loss carried forward cannot, under any circumstances, be set-off against the income from any head other than "Profits and gains of business or profession".

(4) Person who incurred the loss alone is entitled to carry forward & set-off the loss: The loss can be carried forward and set off only against the profits of the assessee who incurred the loss. That is, only the person who has incurred the loss is entitled to carry forward or set off the same. Consequently, the successor of a business cannot carry forward or set off the losses of his predecessor except in the case of succession by inheritance.

(5) Maximum period for carry forward & set-off of losses: A business loss can be carried forward for a maximum period of 8 assessment years immediately succeeding the assessment year in which the loss was incurred.

(6) Rehabilitation of business [Proviso to section 72(1)]

If there is a loss sustained in a business which is discontinued in the circumstances mentioned under section 33B and such business is re-established, reconstructed or revived by the assessee within 3 years from the end of previous year of discontinuation, the loss attributable to such business

(i) shall be allowed to be set off against the profits and gains, if any, of that business or any other business carried on by him and assessable for that assessment year, and

(ii) if the loss cannot be wholly so set off, the amount of balance loss to be carried to the following assessment year and so on for 7 assessment years immediately succeeding provided such re-established business is continued to be carried by the assessee.

Note: Circumstances referred to in section 33B

The business is formed as re-establishment, reconstruction or revival by the assessee of the business of such industrial undertaking which is discontinued by reason of extensive damage to or destruction of, any building, machinery, plant or furniture owned by the assessee and used for the purpose of such business.

Such damage or destruction should be affected as a direct result of flood, typhoon, hurricane, cyclone, earthquake or other convulsion of nature or riot or civil disturbance or accidental fire or explosion or action by an enemy or action taken in combating an enemy.

ILLUSTRATION 2

Mr. B, a resident individual, furnishes the following particulars for the P.Y.2019-20:

Particulars	₹
Income from salary (computed)	45,000
Income from house property	(24,000)
Income from business – non-speculative	(22,000)
Income from speculative business	(4,000)
Short-term capital losses	25,000
Long-term capital gains u/s 112	19,000

What is the total income chargeable to tax for the A.Y.2020-21?

SOLUTION

Total income of Mr. B for the A.Y. 2020-21

Particulars	Amount (₹)	Amount (₹)
Income from salaries	45,000
Income from house property	(24,000)	21,000
Profits and gains of business and profession
Business loss to be carried forward [Note 1]	(22,000)
Speculative loss to be carried forward [Note 2]	(4,000)
Capital Gains
Long term capital gain	19,000
Short term capital loss	(25,000)
Short term capital loss to be carried forward [Note 3]	(6,000)	-
Taxable income		21,000

Note 1: Business loss cannot be set-off against salary income. Therefore, loss of ₹ 22,000 from the non-speculative business cannot be set off against the income from salaries. Hence, such loss has to be carried forward to the next year for set-off against business profits, if any.

Note 2: Loss of ₹ 4,000 from the speculative business can be set off only against the income from the speculative business. Hence, such loss has to be carried forward.

Note 3: Short term capital loss can be set off against both short term capital gain and long term capital gain. Therefore, short term capital loss of ₹ 25,000 can be set-off against long-term capital gains to the extent of ₹ 19,000. The balance short term capital loss of ₹ 6,000 cannot be set-off against any other income and has to be carried forward to the next year for set-off against capital gains, if any.

10.7 CARRY FORWARD AND SET OFF OF ACCUMULATED BUSINESS LOSSES AND UNABSORBED DEPRECIATION IN CERTAIN CASES OF AMALGAMATION/ DEMERGER, ETC. [SECTION 72A]

(1) Amalgamation

Applicability: This section applies where there has been an amalgamation of –

(i) a company owning an industrial undertaking or a ship or a hotel with another company; or

(ii) an amalgamation of a banking company with a specified bank; or

(iii) public sector companies engaged in the business of operation of aircrafts.

Allowability of carry forward and set-off of accumulated loss and unabsorbed loss by amalgamated company in case of amalgamation: It provides that the accumulated loss and unabsorbed depreciation of the amalgamating company shall be deemed to be the loss or depreciation, as the case may be, of the amalgamated company for the previous year in which the amalgamation took place. Other provisions of the Act relating to set off and carry forward shall also apply accordingly.

Conditions for availing benefit under this section

(i) Conditions to be fulfilled by the amalgamating company

(a) The amalgamating company should have been engaged in the business, in which the accumulated loss occurred or depreciation remains unabsorbed, for 3 or more years.

(b) The amalgamating company has held continuously as on the date of amalgamation, at least 3/4th of the book value of the fixed assets held by it, 2 years prior to the date of amalgamation.

(ii) Conditions to be fulfilled by the amalgamated company

(a) The amalgamated company should hold at least 3/4th in the book value of fixed assets of the amalgamating company acquired as a result of amalgamation for a minimum period of 5 years from the effective date of amalgamation.

(b) The amalgamated company continues the business of the amalgamating company for at least 5 years.

(c) The amalgamated company must also fulfill such other conditions prescribed under Rule 9C for the revival of the business of the amalgamating company or to ensure that the amalgamation is for genuine business purpose -

(1) The amalgamated company shall achieve the level of production of at least 50% of the installed capacity (capacity of production as on the date of amalgamation) of the said undertaking before the end of 4 years from the date of amalgamation and continue to maintain the said minimum level of production till the end of 5 years from the date of amalgamation. Central Government has the power to modify this requirement on an application made by the amalgamated company.

(2) The amalgamated company shall furnish to the Assessing Officer a certificate in the prescribed form verified by a Chartered Accountant in this regard.

Consequences of non-fulfillment of specified conditions: In case the above specified conditions are not fulfilled, that part of carry forward of loss and unabsorbed depreciation remaining to be utilized by the amalgamated company shall lapse and such loss or depreciation as has been set-off shall be treated as the income in the year in which there is a failure to fulfill the conditions.

(2) Demerger

Allowability of carry forward and set-off of accumulated loss and unabsorbed loss by resulting company in case of demerger: Where there has been a demerger of an undertaking,

- the accumulated loss and the unabsorbed depreciation directly relatable to the undertaking transferred by the demerged company to the resulting company shall be allowed to be carried forward and set off in the hands of the resulting company.
- if the accumulated loss or unabsorbed depreciation is not directly relatable to the undertaking, the same will be apportioned between the demerged company and the resulting company in the same proportion in which the value of the assets retained by the demerged company and have been transferred to the resulting company.

Conditions for availing benefit under this section: The Central Government is empowered to notify such conditions as it considers necessary to ensure that the demerger is for genuine business purpose.

(3) Re-organisation of business

Allowability of carry forward and set-off of accumulated loss and unabsorbed loss by company in case of succession: In case of re-organisation of business, whereby a firm is succeeded by a company as per the provisions of section 47(xiii), or a sole proprietary concern is succeeded by a company as per the provisions of section 47(xiv), then the accumulated business loss and the unabsorbed depreciation of the firm / proprietary concern, as the case may be, shall be deemed to be the loss or depreciation allowance of the successor company for the previous year in which the business re-organisation took place. Other provisions of the Act relating to set-off and carry forward will apply accordingly.

Consequences of non-fulfillment of specified conditions: If it is found that any of the conditions laid down in the corresponding sub-sections (xiii) or (xiv) of section 47 have not been complied with, the set-off of loss or allowance of depreciation made in any previous year in the hands of the successor company shall be deemed to be the income of the company chargeable to tax in the year in which the conditions have been violated.

(4) Conversion of a company into LLP [Section 72A(6A)]

Allowability of carry forward and set-off of accumulated loss and unabsorbed loss by LLP in case of conversion: In case of re-organisation of business, whereby a private company or unlisted company is succeeded by a LLP as per the provisions of section 47(xiiib), then the successor LLP would be allowed to carry forward and set-off the business loss and unabsorbed depreciation of the predecessor company.

Consequences of non-fulfillment of specified conditions: If the entity fails to fulfill the conditions specified in section 47(xiiib), the benefit of set-off of business loss/unabsorbed depreciation availed by the LLP would be deemed to be the profits and gains of the LLP chargeable to tax in the previous year in which the LLP fails to fulfill any of the conditions.

(5) Meanings of certain terms

Term	Particulars
Accumulated loss	It means so much of the loss of - the predecessor firm or - the proprietary concern or - the private company or unlisted company or - the amalgamating company or - the demerged company, as the case may be, under the head "Profit and gains of business or profession" (not being a loss sustained in a speculation business) which such predecessor firm or the proprietary concern or the company or amalgamating company or demerged company, would have been entitled to carry forward and set off under the provisions of section 72, if the re-organisation of business or amalgamation or demerger had not taken place.
Industrial undertaking	It means any undertaking which is engaged in - (i) the manufacture or processing of goods; (ii) the manufacture of computer software; (iii) the business of generation or distribution of electricity or any other form of power; (iv) providing telecommunication services, whether basic or cellular, including radio paging, domestic satellite service, network of trunking, broad band network and internet services. (v) mining; (vi) the construction of ships, aircraft or rail systems.

Unabsorbed depreciation	Unabsorbed depreciation means so much of the allowance for depreciation of - the predecessor firm or - the proprietary concern or - the private company or unlisted company or - the amalgamating company or - the demerged company, as the case may be, which remains to be allowed and which would have been allowed to the predecessor firm or the proprietary concern or the company or amalgamating company or demerged company, as the case may be, under the provisions of this Act, if the re-organisation of business or amalgamation or demerger had not taken place
Specified bank	It means the State Bank of India (SBI) constituted under the SBI Act, 1955 or a subsidiary bank as defined in the SBI (Subsidiary Banks) Act, 1959 or a corresponding new bank constituted under section 3 of the Banking Companies (Acquisition and Transfer of Undertakings) Act, 1970 or under section 3 of the Banking Companies (Acquisition and Transfer of Undertakings) Act, 1980.

10.8 CARRY FORWARD AND SET OFF OF ACCUMULATED BUSINESS LOSSES AND UNABSORBED DEPRECIATION OF A BANKING COMPANY AGAINST THE PROFIT OF A BANKING INSTITUTION UNDER A SCHEME OF AMALGAMATION [SECTION 72AA]

(1) Applicability: This section provides for carry forward and set off of accumulated loss and unabsorbed depreciation allowance of a banking company against the profits of a banking institution under a scheme of amalgamation sanctioned by the Central Government.

(2) Allowability of carry forward and set-off of accumulated loss and unabsorbed loss by banking institution in case of amalgamation: Where a banking company has been amalgamated with a banking institution under a scheme sanctioned and brought into force by the Central Government under section 45(7) of the Banking Regulation Act, 1949, the accumulated loss and unabsorbed depreciation of the amalgamating banking company shall be deemed to be the loss or the allowance for depreciation of the banking institution for the previous year in which the scheme of amalgamation is brought into force, and all the provisions contained in the Income-tax Act, 1961, relating to set off and carry forward of loss and unabsorbed depreciation shall apply accordingly.

(3) Meaning of certain terms:

Term	Particulars
Accumulated loss	It means so much of the loss of the amalgamating banking company under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" (not being a loss sustained in a speculation business) which such amalgamating banking company, would have been entitled to carry forward and set-off under the provisions of section 72 if the amalgamation had not taken place.
Banking company	It has the same meaning assigned to it in section 5(c) of the Banking Regulation Act, 1949
Banking institution	It has the same meaning assigned to it in section 45(15) of the Banking Regulation Act, 1949.
Unabsorbed depreciation	It means so much of the allowance for depreciation of the amalgamating banking company which remains to be allowed and which would have been allowed to such banking company if the amalgamation had not taken place.

10.9 CARRY FORWARD AND SET OFF OF ACCUMULATED LOSS AND UNABSORBED DEPRECIATION IN BUSINESS REORGANISATION OF CO-OPERATIVE BANKS [SECTION 72AB]

(1) Allowability of carry forward and set-off of accumulated loss and unabsorbed loss by a co-operative bank in case of reorganisation: Under this section, in a case where the amalgamation has taken place during the previous year, set-off of accumulated loss and the unabsorbed depreciation of the predecessor co-operative bank will be allowed in the hands of the successor co-operative bank as if the amalgamation had not taken place. All the other provisions of this Act relating to set off and carry forward of loss and allowance for depreciation would apply accordingly.

(2) Conditions for availing benefit under this section

(i) Conditions to be fulfilled by the predecessor co-operative bank

(a) It should have been engaged in the business of banking for three or more years; and

(b) It has held at least 3/4thof the book value of fixed assets as on the date of the business reorganisation, continuously for 2 years prior to the date of business reorganisation;

(ii) Conditions to be fulfilled by the successor co-operative bank

(a) It should hold at least 3/4thof the book value of fixed assets of the predecessor co-operative bank acquired through business reorganisation, continuously for a minimum period of 5 years immediately succeeding the date of business reorganisation;

(b) It continues the business of the predecessor co-operative bank for a minimum period of 5 years from the date of business reorganisation; and

(c) It fulfils such other conditions as may be prescribed to ensure the revival of the business of the predecessor co-operative bank or to ensure that the business reorganisation is for genuine business purpose.

(3) Quantum allowed of accumulated loss and unabsorbed depreciation: The amount of set-off of the accumulated loss and unabsorbed depreciation allowable to the resulting co-operative bank has to be calculated in the following manner -

(i) In a case where the whole of the amount of such loss or unabsorbed depreciation is directly relatable to the undertakings transferred to the resulting co-operative bank - the entire accumulated loss or unabsorbed depreciation of the demerged co-operative bank is allowed to be set-off.

(ii) In a case where the accumulated loss or unabsorbed depreciation is not directly relatable to the undertakings transferred to the resulting co-operative bank - the amount which bears the same proportion to the accumulated loss or unabsorbed depreciation of the demerged co-operative bank as the assets of the undertaking transferred to the resulting co-operative bank bears to the assets of the demerged co-operative bank.

Example:

If A Co-op Bank is the demerged co-operative bank and B Co-op Bank is the resulting co-operative bank, the amount of set-off of the accumulated loss and unabsorbed depreciation allowable to B Co-op. bank would be –

$$\begin{array}{c}\text{Unabsorbed business loss/depreciation}\\ \text{of A Co-op bank}\end{array} \times \frac{\text{Assets of the undertaking transferred to B Co-op bank}}{\text{Assets of A Co-op bank}}$$

(4) Additional conditions for availing benefit under this section: The Central Government may specify other conditions by notification in the Official Gazette as it considers necessary, to ensure that the business reorganisation is for genuine business purposes.

(5) Period before and after business reorganization to constitute two different previous years: The period commencing from the beginning of the previous year and ending on the date immediately preceding the date of business reorganisation, and the period commencing from the date of such business reorganisation and ending with the previous year shall be deemed to be two different previous years for the purposes of set off and carry forward of loss and allowance for depreciation.

Example:

If the date on which business re-organisation took place is 1.11.2019, then the period between 1.4.2019 and 31.10.2019 and the period between 1.11.2019 and 31.3.2020 would be deemed to be two different previous years for the purposes of set-off and carry forward of unabsorbed business losses and depreciation.

(6) Consequences of non-fulfillment of specified conditions: In a case where the conditions specified in (2) above or notified under (4) above are not complied with, the set-off of accumulated loss or unabsorbed depreciation allowed in any previous year to the successor co-operative bank shall be deemed to be the income of the successor co-operative bank chargeable to tax for the year in which the conditions are not complied with.

(7) Meaning of certain terms

Term	Particulars
Accumulated loss	It means so much of loss of the amalgamating co-operative bank or the demerged co-operative bank, as the case may be, under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" (not being a loss sustained in a speculation business) which such amalgamating co-operative bank or the demerged co-operative bank, would have been entitled to carry forward and set-off under the provisions of section 72 as if the business reorganisation had not taken place.
Unabsorbed depreciation	It means so much of the allowance for depreciation of the amalgamating co-operative bank or the demerged co-operative bank, as the case may be, which remains to be allowed and which would have been allowed to such bank as if the business reorganisation had not taken place.

10.10 LOSSES IN SPECULATION BUSINESS [SECTION 73]

The meaning of the expression 'speculative transaction' as defined in section 43(5) and the treatment of income from speculation business has already been discussed under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession".

(1) Set-off and Carry forward & set-off of loss from speculation business: Since speculation is deemed to be a business distinct and separate from any other business carried on by the assessee, the losses incurred in speculation can be neither set off in the same year against any other non-speculation income nor be carried forward and set off against other income in the subsequent years.

Therefore, if the losses sustained by an assessee in a speculation business cannot be set-off in the same year against any other speculation profit, they can be carried forward to subsequent years and set-off only against income from any speculation business carried on by the assessee.

(2) Maximum period for carry forward & set-off of losses: The loss in speculation business can be carried forward only for a maximum period of 4 years from the end of the relevant assessment year in respect of which the loss was computed. Loss from the activity of trading in derivatives, however, is not to be treated as speculative loss.

(3) When a business of a company deemed to be carrying on a speculation business: The Explanation to this section provides that where any part of the business of a company consists in the purchase and sale of the shares of other companies, such a company shall be deemed to be carrying on speculation business to the extent to which the business consists of the purchase and sale of such shares.

However, this deeming provision does not apply to the following companies –

(i) A company whose gross total income consists of mainly income chargeable under the heads “Income from house property”, “Capital gains” and “Income from other sources”;

(ii) A company, the principal business of which is –

(a) the business of trading in shares; or

(b) the business of banking; or

(c) the granting of loans and advances.

Thus, these companies would be exempted from the operation of this Explanation. Accordingly, if these companies carry on the business of purchase and sale of shares of other companies, they would not be deemed to be carrying on speculation business.

10.11 CARRY FORWARD & SET OFF OF LOSSES BY SPECIFIED BUSINESSES [SECTION 73A]

(1) Set-off and Carry forward & set-off of losses of specified business: Any loss computed in respect of the specified business referred to in section 35AD shall be set off only against profits and gains, if any, of any other specified business. The unabsorbed loss, if any, will be carried forward for set off against profits and gains of any specified business in the following assessment year and so on.

(2) Loss can be set-off indefinitely: There is no time limit specified for carry forward and set-off and therefore, such loss can be carried forward indefinitely for set-off against income from specified business.

> Note - The loss of an assessee claiming deduction under section 35AD in respect of a specified business can be set-off against the profit of another specified business under section 73A, irrespective of whether the latter is eligible for deduction under section 35AD. An assessee can, therefore, set-off the losses of a hospital or hotel which begins to operate after 1st April, 2010 and which is eligible for deduction under section 35AD, against the profits of the existing business of operating a hospital (with atleast 100 beds for patients) or a hotel (of two-star or above category), even if the latter is not eligible for deduction under section 35AD.

10.12 LOSSES UNDER THE HEAD 'CAPITAL GAINS' [SECTION 74]

Carry forward & set-off of losses: Section 74 provides that where for any assessment year, the net result under the head 'Capital gains' is short term capital loss or long term capital loss, the loss shall be carried forward to the following assessment year to be set off in the following manner:

(1) Short-term capital loss: Where the loss so carried forward is a short-term capital loss, it shall be set off against any capital gains, short term or long term, arising in that year.

(2) Long-term capital loss: Where the loss so carried forward is a long-term capital loss, it shall be set off only against long term capital gain arising in that year.

(3) Loss under head capital gains: Net loss under the head capital gains cannot be set off against income under any other head.

(4) Maximum period for carry forward & set-off of loss: Any unabsorbed loss shall be carried forward to the following assessment year up to a maximum of 8 assessment years immediately succeeding the assessment year for which the loss was first computed.

> Note - With effect from 1st April 2018, the long-term capital gain exceeding ₹ 1,00,000 arising on sale of equity shares or units of equity oriented fund or unit of business trust on which STT is paid
> - in respect of equity shares, both at the time of acquisition and sale and
> - in respect of units of equity oriented fund or unit of business trust, at the time of sale > is taxable under section 112A @10%. Long-term capital loss on sale of such shares/units can, therefore, be set-off and carried forward for set-off against long-term capital gains by virtue of section 70(3) and section 74.

ILLUSTRATION 3

During the P.Y. 2019-20, Mr. C has the following income and the brought forward losses:

Particulars	₹
Short term capital gains on sale of shares	1,50,000
Brought forward Long term capital loss of A.Y.2018-19	(96,000)
Short term capital loss of A.Y.2019-20	(37,000)
Long term capital gain	75,000

What is the capital gain taxable in the hands of Mr. C for the A.Y.2020-21?

SOLUTION

Taxable capital gains of Mr. C for the A.Y. 2020-21

Particulars	₹	₹
Short term capital gains on sale of shares	1,50,000
Less: Brought forward short term capital loss of the A.Y.2019-20	(37,000)	1,13,000
Long term capital gain	75,000
Less: Brought forward long term capital loss of A.Y.2018-19 [See Note below]	(75,000)	Nil
Taxable short-term capital gains		1,13,000

Note: Long-term capital loss cannot be set off against short-term capital gain. Hence, the unadjusted long term capital loss of A.Y.2018-19 of ₹ 21,000 (i.e. ₹ 96,000 – ₹ 75,000) has to be carried forward to the next year to be set-off against long-term capital gains of that year.

10.13 LOSSES FROM THE ACTIVITY OF OWNING AND MAINTAINING RACE HORSES [SECTION 74A(3)]

(1) Set-off and Carry forward & set-off of loss: According to provisions of section 74A(3), the losses incurred by an assessee from the activity of owning and maintaining race horses cannot be set-off against the income from any other source other than the activity of owning and maintaining race horses.

(2) Maximum period for carry forward & set-off of losses: Such loss can be carried forward for a maximum period of 4 assessment years immediately succeeding the assessment year for which the loss was first computed, for being set-off against the income from the activity of owning and maintaining race horses.

(3) Meaning of certain terms

Term	Meaning
Amount of loss incurred by the assessee in the activity of owning and maintaining race horses	(i) In case assessee has no income by way of stake money – amount of revenue expenditure incurred by the assessee wholly & exclusively for the purpose of maintaining race horses. (ii) In case assessee has income by way of stake money - The amount by which such income by way of stake money falls short of the amount of revenue expenditure incurred by the assessee wholly & exclusively for the purpose of maintaining race horses. i.e. Loss = Stake money – revenue expenditure for the purpose of maintaining race horses.
Horse race	A horse race upon which wagering or betting may be lawfully made.
Income by way of stake money	The gross amount of prize money received on a race horse or race horses by the owner thereof on account of the horse or horses or any one or more of the horses winning or being placed second or in any lower position in horse races.

10.14 CARRY FORWARD AND SET OFF OF LOSSES IN CASE OF CHANGE IN CONSTITUTION OF FIRM OR SUCCESSION [SECTION 78]

(1) Change in constitution of firm: Where there is a change in the constitution of a firm, so much of the loss proportionate to the share of a retired or deceased partner remaining unabsorbed, shall not be allowed to be carried forward by the firm. However, unabsorbed depreciation can be carried forward.

(2) Succession otherwise by inheritance: Where any person carrying on any business or profession has been succeeded in such capacity by another person otherwise than by inheritance, such other person shall not be allowed to carry forward and set off against his income, any loss incurred by the predecessor.

(3) Succession by inheritance: Where there is a succession by inheritance, the legal heirs are entitled to set-off the business loss of the predecessor. Such carry forward and set-off is possible even if the legal heirs constitute themselves as a partnership firm. In such a case, the firm can carry forward and set-off the business loss of the predecessor.

10.15 CARRY FORWARD AND SET OFF OF LOSSES IN CASE OF CLOSELY HELD COMPANIES [SECTION 79]

(1) Carry forward and set-off of losses in case of closely held company not being an eligible start-up referred to in section 80-IAC

In the case of a company in which the public are not substantially interested and not being an eligible start-up referred to in section 80-IAC, no loss incurred in any year prior to the previous year shall be carried forward and set-off against the income of the previous year, unless

- on the last day of the previous year, the shares of the company carrying not less than 51% of the voting power were beneficially held by persons
- who beneficially held shares of the company carrying not less than 51% of the voting power on the last day of the year or years in which the loss was incurred.

(2) Carry forward and set-off of losses in case of closely held company being an eligible start-up referred to in section 80-IAC

In case of a company in which the public are not substantially interested but being an eligible start-up as referred to in section 80-IAC, any unabsorbed loss of the company shall be allowed to be carried forward and set off against the income of the previous year if either of the conditions are satisfied –

(a) on the last day of the previous year, the shares of the company carrying not less than 51% of the voting power were beneficially held by persons who beneficially held shares of the company carrying not less than 51% of the voting power on the last day of the year or years in which the loss was incurred; or

(b) all the shareholders of such company who held shares carrying voting power on the last day of the previous year or years in which the loss was incurred continue to hold those shares on the last day of such previous year in which the loss is to be set-off and such loss has been incurred during the period of 7 years beginning from the year of incorporation of such company.

(3) Non-applicability of restriction

This restriction shall, however, not apply :

(i) where a change in the voting power and shareholding takes place in a previous year consequent upon the death of a shareholder or on account of transfer of shares by way of gift to any relative of the shareholder making such gift;

(ii) where any change in shareholding takes place in an Indian company, being a subsidiary of a foreign company, as a result of amalgamation or demerger of the foreign company. However, this is subject to the condition that 51% of the shareholders of the amalgamating/ demerged company continue to be shareholders of the amalgamated/ resulting foreign company.

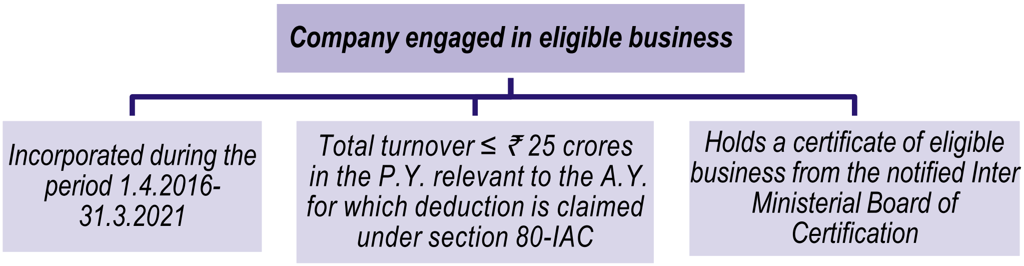
(iii) where a change in shareholding takes place in a previous year pursuant to a resolution plan approved under the Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code, 2016, after affording a reasonable opportunity of being heard to the jurisdictional Principal Commissioner or Commissioner.

(iv) to a company, and its subsidiary and the subsidiary of such subsidiary, where

(a) the Tribunal, on an application moved by the Central Government under section 241 of the Companies Act, 2013, has suspended the Board of Directors of such company and has appointed new directors nominated by the Central Government, under section 242 of the said Act; and

(b) a change in shareholding of a company, and its subsidiary and the subsidiary of such subsidiary, has taken place in a previous year pursuant to a resolution plan approved by the Tribunal under section 242 of the Companies Act, 2013 after affording a reasonable opportunity of being heard to the jurisdictional Principal Commissioner or Commissioner.

(4) Meaning of eligible start-up*:*



Company engaged in eligible business

Incorporated during the period 1.4.2016-31.3.2021

Total turnover ≤ ₹ 25 crores in the P.Y. relevant to the A.Y. for which deduction is claimed under section 80-IAC

Holds a certificate of eligible business from the notified Inter Ministerial Board of Certification

*(5) Meaning of eligible business:

A business carried out by an eligible start-up engaged in –

- Innovation, development or improvement of products or processes or services or
- a scalable business model with a high potential of employment generation or wealth creation

(6) A company shall be a subsidiary of another company, if such other company holds more than half in nominal value of the equity share capital of the company.

10.16 ORDER OF SET OFF OF LOSSES

As per the provisions of section 72(2), brought forward business loss is to be set-off before setting off unabsorbed depreciation. Therefore, the order in which set-off will be effected is as follows -

(1) Current year depreciation/ Current year capital expenditure on scientific research and current year expenditure on family planning, to the extent allowed.

(2) Brought forward loss from business/profession [Section 72(1)]

(3) Unabsorbed depreciation [Section 32(2)]

(4) Unabsorbed capital expenditure on scientific research [Section 35(4)].

(5) Unabsorbed expenditure on family planning [Section 36(1)(ix)]

Long term capital loss of A.Y.2018-19	(30,000)
Winning from lotteries	20,000

What is the taxable income of Mr. E for the A.Y.2020-21?

SOLUTION

Computation of taxable income of Mr. E for the A.Y.2020-21

Particulars	₹	₹
Income from salaries		1,50,000
Income from speculation business	60,000

Less: Loss from non-speculation business	(40,000)	20,000
Short-term capital gain		80,000
Winnings from lotteries		20,000
Taxable income		2,70,000

Note: Long term capital loss can be set off only against long term capital gain. Therefore, long term capital loss of ₹ 30,000 has to be carried forward to the next assessment year.

Dividends from Indian companies carrying on agricultural operations	80,000
Current year depreciation	26,000
Brought forward business loss (loss incurred six years ago)	(45,000)

SOLUTION

Gross Total Income of Mr. F for the A.Y. 2020-21

Particulars	**₹	**₹
Income from house property		1,25,000
Income from business
Profits before depreciation	1,35,000
Less: Current year depreciation	26,000
Less: Brought forward business loss	45,000
	64,000
Income from tea business (40% is business income)	48,000	1,12,000
Income from the capital gains
Short term capital gains		56,000
Gross Total Income		2,93,000

Notes:

(1) Dividend from Indian companies of ₹ 80,000 is exempt from tax under section 10(34).

(2) 60% of the income from tea business is treated as agricultural income and therefore, exempt from tax;

(3) Long-term capital loss can be set-off only against long-term capital gains. Therefore, long-term capital loss of ₹ 90,000 brought forward from A.Y.2017-18 cannot be set-off in the A.Y.2020-21. It has to be carried forward for set-off against long-term capital gains, if any, during A.Y.2021-22.

10.17 SUBMISSION OF RETURN FOR LOSSES [SECTION 80]

As per section 80, the assessee must have filed a return of loss under section 139(3) in order to carry forward and set off of:

- business loss to be carried forward under section 72(1)
- speculation business loss to be carried forward under section 73(2)
- loss from specified business to carried forward under section 73A(2)
- loss under the head "Capital Gains" to be carried forward under section 74(1) and
- loss incurred in the activity of owning and maintaining race horses to be carried forward under section 74A(3).

In other words, the non-filing of a return of loss disentitles the assessee from carrying forward the above specified losses sustained by him. Such a return should be filed within the time allowed under section 139(1).

However, this condition does not apply to a loss from house property to be carried forward under section 71B and unabsorbed depreciation can be carried forward even if return of loss has not been filed as required under section 139(3).

EXERCISE

Question 1

X carrying on a business as sole proprietor, died on 31st March, 2019. On his death, the same business was continued by his legal heirs, by forming a firm. As on 31st March 2019, a determined business loss of ₹ 5 lacs is to be carried forward under the Income-tax Act, 1961.

Does the firm consisting of all legal heirs of Mr. X, get a right to have this loss adjusted against its current income?

Answer

Section 78(2) provides that where a person carrying on any business or profession has been succeeded in such capacity by another person, otherwise than by inheritance, then, the successor is not entitled to carry forward and set-off the loss of the predecessor against his income. This implies that generally, set-off of business losses should be claimed by the same person who suffered the loss and the only exception to this provision is when the business passes on to another person by inheritance.

The facts of case given in the question are similar to the case CIT v. Madhukant M. Mehta (2001) 247 ITR 805, where the Supreme Court has held that if the business is succeeded by inheritance, the legal heirs are entitled to the benefit of carry forward of the loss of the predecessor. Even if the legal heirs constitute themselves as a partnership firm, the benefit of carry forward and set off of the loss of the predecessor would be available to the firm.

In this case, the business of X was continued by his legal heirs after his death by constituting a firm. Hence, the exception contained in section 78(2) along with the decision of the Apex Court discussed above, would apply in this case. Therefore, the firm is entitled to carry forward the business loss of ₹ 5 lacs of X.

Question 2

ABC Limited was amalgamated with XYZ Limited on 01.04.2019. All the conditions of section 2(1B) were satisfied.

ABC Limited has the following carried forward losses as assessed till the Assessment Year 2019-20:

	Particulars	₹ (in lacs)
(i)	Speculative Loss	4
(ii)	Unabsorbed Depreciation	18
(iii)	Unabsorbed expenditure of capital nature on scientific research	2
(iv)	Business Loss	120

XYZ Limited has computed a profit of ₹ 140 lacs for the financial year 2019-20 before setting off the eligible losses of ABC Limited but after providing depreciation at 15% per annum on ₹ 150 lacs, being the consideration at which plant and machinery were transferred to XYZ Limited. The written down value as per Income-tax record of ABC Limited as on 1st April, 2019 was ₹ 100 lacs.

The above profit of XYZ Limited includes speculative profit of ₹ 10 lacs.

Compute the total income of XYZ Limited for Assessment Year 2020-21 and indicate the losses/ other allowances to be carried forward by it.

Answer

Computation of total income of XYZ Limited for the A.Y. 2020-21

Particulars	₹(in lacs)
Business income before setting-off brought forward losses of ABC Ltd.		140.00
Add: Excess depreciation claimed in the scheme of amalgamation of ABC Limited with XYZ Limited.
Value at which assets are transferred by ABC Ltd.	150
WDV in the books of ABC Ltd.	100
Excess accounted	50
Excess depreciation claimed in computing taxable income of XYZ Ltd. [₹ 50 lacs × 15 %] [Explanation 2 to section 43(6)]		7.50
		147.50
Set-off of brought forward business loss of ABC Ltd. (See Notes 2 & 4)		(120.00)
Set-off of unabsorbed depreciation under section 32(2) read with section 72A (See Notes 2 & 4)		(18.00)
Set-off of unabsorbed capital expenditure under section 35(1)(iv) read with section 35(4) (See Note 5)		(2.00)
Business income		7.50

Notes:

1. It is presumed that the amalgamation is within the meaning of section 72A of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

2. In the case of amalgamation of companies, the unabsorbed losses and unabsorbed depreciation of the amalgamating company shall be deemed to be the loss or unabsorbed depreciation of the amalgamated company for the previous year in which the amalgamation was effected and such business loss and unabsorbed depreciation shall be carried forward and set-off by the amalgamated company for a period of 8 years and indefinitely, respectively.

3. As per section 72A(7), the accumulated loss to be carried forward specifically excludes loss sustained in a speculative business. Therefore, speculative loss of ₹ 4 lacs of ABC Ltd. cannot be carried forward by XYZ Ltd.

4. Section 72(2) provides that where any allowance or part thereof unabsorbed under section 32(2) (i.e., unabsorbed depreciation) or section 35(4) (i.e., unabsorbed scientific research capital expenditure) is to be carried forward, effect has to be first given to brought forward business losses under section 72.

5. Section 35(4) provides that the provisions of section 32(2) relating to unabsorbed depreciation shall apply in relation to deduction allowable under section 35(1)(iv) in respect of capital expenditure on scientific research related to the business carried on by the assessee. Therefore, unabsorbed capital expenditure on scientific research can be set-off and carried forward in the same manner as unabsorbed depreciation.

6. The restriction contained in section 73 is only regarding set-off of loss computed in respect of speculative business. Such a loss can be set-off only against profits of another speculation business and not non-speculation business. However, there is no restriction under the Income-tax Act, 1961 regarding set-off of normal business losses against speculative income. Therefore, normal business losses can be set-off against profits of a speculative business.

   Consequently, there is no loss or allowance to be carried forward by XYZ Ltd. to the F.Y. 2020-21.

Question 3

Examine in brief about the treatment to be given in the following case under the Income-tax Act, 1961, for A.Y.2020-21:

A loss of ₹ 85,000 was sustained by Simran in the activity of owning and maintaining camels for races.

Answer

Section 74A(3) lays down the provisions for set-off and carry forward of loss from the activity of owning and maintaining race horses. According to provisions of section 74A(3), the losses incurred by an assessee from the activity of owning and maintaining race horses cannot be set-off against the income from any other source other than the activity of owning and maintaining race horses. Since the scope of this section is confined to the activity of owning and maintaining race horses only, therefore, set-off and carry forward of loss from the activity of owning and maintaining camels is not covered under section 74A(3).

It is possible to take a view that the loss from the activity of owning and maintaining camels for races may be governed by section 72 provided such activity amounts to business. Accordingly, the loss from the activity of owning and maintaining of camels for races can be set-off against any income (other than income from salary) of current year and unadjusted amount shall be carried forward for set off against any business income for a maximum period of 8 assessment years immediately succeeding the assessment year in which the loss was incurred.

Question 4

M/s. JKLM, a firm, consists of four partners namely, J, K, L and M. They shared profits and losses equally during the year ended 31.3.2019. The assessed business loss of the firm for the assessment year 2019-20 which it is entitled to carry forward amounts to ₹ 3,60,000. A new deed of partnership was executed among J, K, L and M on 1.4.2019 in terms of which they agreed to share profits and losses in the ratio of 15:15:20:50 respectively.

Compute the amount of business loss relating to the assessment year 2019-20, which the firm is entitled to set off against its business income for the assessment year 2020-21. The business income of the firm for the assessment year 2020-21 is ₹ 3,30,000. Your answer should be supported by reasons.

Answer

The firm is entitled to set off its brought forward business loss amounting to ₹ 3,60,000 relating to the assessment year 2019-20 to the extent of ₹ 3,30,000 against its business income of ₹ 3,30,000 for the assessment year 2020-21, as per the provisions of section 72(1).

The balance unabsorbed business loss of ₹ 30,000 relating to the assessment year 2019-20 will be carried forward to assessment year 2021-22.

Section 78(1) which deals with carry forward and set-off of losses in the case of change in constitution of firm is applicable only where there is retirement or death of a partner. It is not applicable to a case where there is a change in the ratio of sharing profits and losses amongst the existing partners. Therefore, section 78(1) is not applicable to the case of M/s. JKLM.

Question 5

An assessee sustained a loss under the head "Income from house property" in the previous year relevant to the assessment year 2019-20, which could not be set off against income from any other head in that assessment year. The assessee did not furnish the return of loss within the time allowed under section 139(1) in respect of the relevant assessment year. However, the assessee filed the return within the time allowed under section 139(4). Can the assessee carry forward such loss for set off against income from house property of the assessment year 2020-21?

Answer

Section 139(3) stipulates that an assessee claiming carry forward of loss under the heads “Profits and gains of business or profession” or “Capital gains” should furnish the return of loss within the time stipulated under section 139(1). There is no reference to loss under the head “Income from house property” in section 139(3). The assessee, in the instant case, has filed the return showing loss from property within the time prescribed under section 139(4). The assessee is, therefore, entitled to carry forward such loss for set off against the income from house property of the subsequent assessment year.

SIGNIFICANT SELECT CASES

Can the loss suffered by an erstwhile partnership firm, which was dissolved, be carried forward for set-off by the individual partner who took over the business of the firm as a sole proprietor, considering the succession as a succession by inheritance?
Pramod Mittal v. CIT (2013) 356 ITR 456 (Delhi)

Facts of the case: In the present case, the assessee was previously a partner in a firm. As per the dissolution deed of the partnership firm, with effect from 18th September, 2004, he took over the entire business of the partnership firm in his individual capacity including fixed assets, current assets and liabilities and the other partner was paid his dues. He then ran the business as a sole proprietor with effect from that date. The assessee, relying upon section 78(2) and the decisions of the Supreme Court in CIT v. Madhukant M. Mehta (2001) 247 ITR 805 (SC) and Saroj Aggarwal v. CIT (1985) 156 ITR 497 (SC), claimed the set-off of the losses suffered by the erstwhile partnership firm against his income earned as an individual proprietor, considering the case as inheritance of business.

However, considering that only the person who has suffered the loss is entitled to carry forward and set-off the same, the claim of the assessee was disallowed by the Assessing Officer. The Tribunal concurred with the Assessing Officer's view.

High Court's Observations: The High Court observed that upon dissolution, the partnership firm ceased to exist. Also, the partnership firm and the proprietorship concern are two separate and distinct units for the purpose of assessment. As per section 170(1), the partnership firm shall be assessed as such from 1st April of the previous year till the date of dissolution (i.e., 18th September, 2004). Thereafter, the income of the sole-proprietorship shall be taxable in the hands of the assessee as an individual. Thus, section 170(1) provides as to who will be assessable in respect of the income of the previous year from business, when there is a change in the person carrying on business by succession.

Section 78(2), however, deals with carry forward of losses in case of succession of business. It provides that only the person who has incurred the losses, and no one else, would be entitled to carry forward the same and set it off. An exception provided thereunder is in the case of succession by inheritance.

Therefore, section 170(1) providing the person in whose hands income is assessable in case of succession and section 78(2) providing for carry forward of losses in case of succession of business, deal with different situations and resultantly, there is no contradiction between these sections.

The income earned by the sole proprietor would include his share of loss as an individual but not the loss suffered by the erstwhile partnership firm in which he was a partner. The exception given in section 78(2), permitting carry forward of losses by the successor in case of inheritance, is not applicable in the present case since the partnership firm was dissolved and ceased to continue.

Taking over of business by a partner cannot be considered as a case of inheritance due to death as per the law of succession. The High Court opined that the decision in Madhukant M. Mehta's case and Saroj Aggarwal's case cannot be applied since this is not a case of succession by inheritance.

High Court's Decision: Therefore, the loss suffered by the erstwhile partnership firm before dissolution of the firm cannot be carried forward by the successor sole-proprietor, since it is not a case of succession by inheritance. The assessee sole-proprietor is, therefore, not entitled to set-off the loss of the erstwhile partnership firm against his income.

Note - In Madhukant M. Mehta's case, the sole proprietor had expired and after his death the heirs succeeded the business as a partnership concern. Therefore, the losses suffered by the deceased proprietor was allowed to be set-off by the partnership firm since the case falls within the exception mentioned under section 78(2), i.e., a case of succession by inheritance.

Also, in Saroj Aggarwal's case, upon death of a partner, his legal heirs were inducted as partners in the partnership firm. The partnership firm was not dissolved on the death of the partner. The partnership firm which suffered the losses continued with induction of the legal heirs of the deceased partner. This, being a case of succession by inheritance, the benefit of carry forward of losses was given to the re-constituted partnership firm.

In the present case, however, the partnership firm was dissolved and the take over of the running business of the firm by the erstwhile partner as a sole proprietor was not a case of succession by inheritance. Hence, the carry forward of losses of the firm by the sole proprietor was not allowed in this case.

CHAPTER 11

DEDUCTIONS FROM GROSS TOTAL INCOME

LEARNING OUTCOMES

After studying this chapter, you would be able to:

- appreciate the general provisions contained in "A – General" of Chapter VI-A relating to deductions to be made in computing total income;
- analyse and apply the provisions of Chapter VI-A contained in "B – Deductions in respect of certain payments" in problem solving and addressing related issues;
- appreciate the provisions of Chapter VI-A contained in "C – Deductions in respect of certain incomes" and "CA – Deductions in respect of other incomes", and analyse and apply the provisions in problem solving and addressing related issues;
- compute the deduction allowable in the case of a person with disability under section 80U;
- compute the aggregate deduction available under Chapter VI-A to an assessee, and thereafter, arrive at the total income of the assessee.

11.1 GENERAL PROVISIONS

As we have seen earlier, section 10 exempts certain incomes. Such income are excluded from total income and do not enter into the computation process at all. On the other hand, Chapter VI-A contains deductions from gross total income. The important point to be noted here is that if there is no gross total income, then no deductions will be permissible.

This Chapter contains deductions in respect of certain payments, deductions in respect of certain incomes, deductions in respect of other income and other deductions.

Section 80A

(1) Section 80A(1) provides that in computing the total income of an assessee, there shall be allowed from his gross total income, the deductions specified in sections 80C to 80U.

(2) According to section 80A(2), the aggregate amount of the deductions under this chapter shall not, in any case, exceed the gross total income of the assessee.

Thus, an assessee cannot have a loss as a result of the deduction under Chapter VI-A and claim to carry forward the same for the purpose of set-off against his income in the subsequent year.

(3) Section 80A(3) provides that in the case of AOP/BOI, if any deduction is admissible under section 80G/80GGA/80GGC/80-IA/80-IB/80-IC/80-ID/80-IE, no deduction under the same section shall be made in computing the total income of a member of the AOP or BOI in relation to the share of such member in the income of the AOP or BOI.

(4) The profits and gains allowed as deduction under section 10AA or under any provision of Chapter VI-A under the heading "C.-Deductions in respect of certain incomes" in any assessment year, shall not be allowed as deduction under any other provision of the Act for such assessment year [Section 80A(4)];

(5) The deduction, referred to in (4) above, shall not exceed the profits and gains of the undertaking or unit or enterprise or eligible business, as the case may be [Section 80A(4)];

(6) No deduction under any of the provisions referred to in (4) above, shall be allowed if the deduction has not been claimed in the return of income [Section 80A(5)];

(7) The transfer price of goods and services between such undertaking or unit or enterprise or eligible business and any other business of the assessee shall be determined at the market value of such goods or services as on the date of transfer. This is notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in section 10AA or in any provision of Chapter VI-A under the heading “C- Deductions in respect of certain incomes” [Section 80A(6)].

(8) For this purpose, the expression "market value" has been defined to mean,-

(a) in relation to any goods or services sold or supplied, the price that such goods or services would fetch if these were sold by the undertaking or unit or enterprise or eligible business in the open market, subject to statutory or regulatory restrictions, if any;

(b) in relation to any goods or services acquired, the price that such goods or services would cost if these were acquired by the undertaking or unit or enterprise or eligible business from the open market, subject to statutory or regulatory restrictions, if any;

(c) if it is a specified domestic transaction referred to in section 92BA, - in relation to any goods or services sold, supplied or acquired means the arm's length price as defined in section 92F(ii) of such goods or services.

(9) Where a deduction under any provision of this Chapter under the heading "C – Deductions in respect of certain incomes" is claimed and allowed in respect of the profits of such specified business for any assessment year, no deduction under section 35AD is permissible in relation to such specified business for the same or any other assessment year.

In short, once the assessee has claimed the benefit of deduction under section 35AD for a particular year in respect of a specified business, he cannot claim benefit under Chapter VI-A under the heading "C.-Deductions in respect of certain incomes" for the same or any other year and vice versa.

Section 80AB

This section provides that for the purpose of calculation of deductions specified in Chapter VI-A under the heading "C - Deductions in respect of certain incomes", the income computed in accordance with the provisions of the Act (before making any deduction under Chapter VI-A) shall alone be regarded as income received by the assessee and which is included in his gross total income. Accordingly, the deductions specified in the aforesaid sections will be calculated with reference to the net income as computed in accordance with the provisions of the Act (before making deduction under Chapter VI-A) and not with reference to the gross amount of such income. This is notwithstanding anything contained in the respective sections of Chapter VI-A.

Section 80AC: Furnishing return of income on or before due date mandatory for claiming deduction under Chapter VI-A under the heading "C.- Deductions in respect of certain incomes"

(1) Section 80AC stipulates compulsory filing of return of income on or before the due date specified under section 139(1), as a pre-condition for availing benefit of deductions under any provision of Chapter VI-A under the heading "C. – Deductions in respect of certain incomes".

Table showing the deductions contained in Chapter VI-A under the heading "C. – Deductions in respect of certain income"

Section	Deduction
80-IA	Deductions in respect of profits and gains from undertakings or enterprises engaged in infrastructure development/ operation/ maintenance, generation/ transmission/ distribution of power etc.
80-IAB	Deduction in respect of profits and gains derived by an undertaking or enterprise engaged in development of SEZ
80-IAC	Deduction in respect of profits and gains derived by an eligible start-up from an eligible business
80-IB	Deduction in respect of profits and gains from certain industrial undertakings other than infrastructure development undertakings
80-IBA	Deduction in respect of profits and gains from housing projects
80-IC	Deduction in respect of profits and gains from certain undertakings or enterprises in certain special category States [Himachal Pradesh and Uttaranchal]
80-IE	Deduction in respect of profits and gains from manufacture or production of eligible article or thing, substantial expansion to manufacture or produce any eligible article or thing or carrying on of eligible business in North-Eastern States
80JJA	Deduction in respect of profits and gains from business of collecting and processing of bio-degradable waste
80JJAA	Deduction in respect of employment of new employees
80LA	Deduction in respect of certain income of Offshore Banking Units and International Financial Services Centre
80P	Deduction in respect of income of co-operative societies
80PA	Deduction in respect of certain income of Producer Companies
80QQB	Deduction in respect of royalty income, etc., of authors of certain books other than text books
80RRB	Deduction in respect of royalty on patents

(2) The effect of this provision is that in case of failure to file return of income on or before the stipulated due date, the undertakings would lose the benefit of deduction under these sections.

ILLUSTRATION 1

Examine the following statements with regard to the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961:

(a) For grant of deduction u/s 80-IB, filing of audit report in prescribed form is must for a corporate assessee; filing of return within the due date laid down in section 139(1) is not required.

(b) Filing of belated return under section 139(4) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 will debar an assessee from claiming deduction under section 80-IE.

SOLUTION

(a) The statement is not correct. Section 80AC stipulates compulsory filing of return of income on or before the due date specified under section 139(1), as a pre-condition for availing the benefit of deduction, inter alia, under section 80-IB.

(b) The statement is correct. As per section 80AC, the assessee has to furnish his return of income on or before the due date specified under section 139(1), to be eligible to claim deduction under, inter alia, section 80-IE.

Section 80B(5)

"Gross total income" means the total income computed in accordance with the provisions of the Act without making any deduction under Chapter VI-A. "Computed in accordance with the provisions of the Act" implies—

(1) that deductions under appropriate computation section have already been given effect to;

(2) that income of other persons, if includible under sections 60 to 64, has been included;

(3) the intra head and/or inter head losses have been adjusted; and

(4) that unabsorbed business losses, unabsorbed depreciation etc., have been set-off.

Let us first consider the deductions allowable in respect of certain payments.

11.2 DEDUCTIONS IN RESPECT OF PAYMENTS

(1) Deduction in respect of investment in specified assets [Section 80C]

Section 80C provides for a deduction from the Gross Total Income, of savings in specified modes of investments. The deduction under section 80C is available only to an individual or HUF. The maximum permissible deduction under section 80C is ₹ 1,50,000.

Deduction in respect of investment/contributions

The following are the investments/ contributions eligible for deduction –

(i) Premium paid in respect of Life Insurance policy

Premium paid on insurance on the life of the individual, spouse or any child (minor or major) and in the case of HUF, any member thereof. This will include a life policy and an endowment policy.

> Exemption on receipts from Life insurance policy (LIC) [Section 10(10D)]: Any sum received under a life insurance policy, including the sum allocated by way of bonus on such policy shall not be included in the total income of a person.

The following is a tabular summary of the exemption available under section 10(10D) and deduction allowable under section 80C vis-à-vis the date of issue of such policies –

		Exemption u/s 10(10D)	Deduction u/s 80C
In respect of policies issued before 1.4.2003		Any sum received under a LIP including the sum allocated by way of bonus is exempt.	Premium paid to the extent of 20% of "actual capital sum assured"
In respect of policies issued between 1.4.2003 and 31.3.2012		Any sum received under a LIP including the sum allocated by way of bonus is exempt. However, exemption would not be available if the premium payable for any of the years during the term of the policy exceeds 20% of "actual capital sum assured".
In respect of policies issued on or after 1.4.2012 but before 1.4.2013		Any sum received under a LIP including the sum allocated by way of bonus is exempt. However, exemption would not be available if the premium payable for any of the years during the term of the policy exceeds 10% of "minimum capital sum assured" under the policy on the happening of the insured event at any time during the term of the policy.	Premium paid to the extent of 10% of "minimum capital sum assured"
In respect of policies issued on or after 1.4.2013	(a)	Where the insurance is on the life of a person with disability or severe disability as referred to in section 80U or a person suffering from disease or ailment as specified under section 80DDB.
		Any sum received under a LIP including the sum allocated by way of bonus is exempt. However, exemption would not be available if the premium payable for any of the years during the term of the policy exceeds 15% of "actual capital sum assured" under the policy on the happening of the insured event at any time during the term of the policy.	Premium paid to the extent of 15% of "actual capital sum assured"
	(b)	Where the insurance is on the life of any person, other than mentioned in (a) above
		Any sum received under a LIP including the sum allocated by way of bonus is exempt. However, exemption	Premium paid to the extent of 10% of "actual would not be available if the premium payable for any of the years during the term of the policy exceeds 10% of "actual capital sum assured" under the policy on the happening of the insured event at any time during the term of the policy.	capital sum assured".

Notes:

(a) Amounts not to be considered while computing actual capital sum assured: For the purpose of calculating the actual capital sum assured,

(1) the value of any premiums agreed to be returned or

(2) the value of any benefit by way of bonus or otherwise, over and above the sum actually assured, shall not be taken into account.

(b) Meaning of actual capital sum assured: In respect of the life insurance policies to be issued on or after 1st April, 2012, the actual capital sum assured shall mean the minimum amount assured under the policy on happening of the insured event at any time during the term of the policy, not taking into account -

(1) the value of any premium agreed to be returned; or

(2) any benefit by way of bonus or otherwise over and above the sum actually assured which is to be or may be received under the policy by any person.

In effect, in case the insurance policy has varied sum assured during the term of policy then the minimum of the sum assured during the life time of the policy shall be taken into consideration for calculation of the "actual capital sum assured", in respect of life insurance policies to be issued on or after 1st April, 2012.

(c) Sum received on death of a person - Any sum received under a LIP including the sum allocated by way of bonus on death of a person is exempt.

(d) Exemption is not available in respect of amount received from an insurance policy taken for disabled person under section 80DD: Any sum received under section 80DD(3) shall not be exempt under section 10(10D). Accordingly, if the dependent disabled, in respect of whom an individual has paid or deposited any amount in any scheme of LIC or any other insurer, predeceases the individual, the amount so paid or deposited shall be deemed to be the income of the individual of the previous year in which such amount is received. Such amount would not be exempt under 10(10D).

(e) Exemption is not available in respect of the sum received under a Keyman insurance policy: Explanation 1 to section 10(10D) defines "Keyman insurance policy" as a life insurance policy taken by one person on the life of another person who is or was the employee of the first-mentioned person or is or was connected in any manner whatsoever with the business of the first-mentioned person. The term includes within its scope a keyman insurance policy which has been assigned to any person during its term, with or without consideration. Therefore, such policies shall continue to be treated as a keyman insurance policy even after the same is assigned to the keyman. Consequently, the sum received by the keyman on such policies, being "keyman insurance policies", would not be exempt under section 10(10D).

ILLUSTRATION 2

Compute the eligible deduction under section 80C for A.Y.2020-21 in respect of life insurance premium paid by Mr. Ganesh during the P.Y.2019-20, the details of which are given hereunder -

	Date of issue of policy	Person insured	Actual capital sum assured (₹)	Insurance premium paid during 2019-20 (₹)
(i)	30/3/2012	Self	5,00,000	51,000

(ii) Premium paid in respect of a contract for deferred annuity

Premium paid to effect and keep in force a contract for a deferred annuity on the life of the individual and/or his or her spouse or any child, provided such contract does not contain any provision for the exercise by the insured of an option to receive cash payments in lieu of the payment of the annuity.

It is pertinent to note here that a contract for a deferred annuity need not necessarily be with an insurance company. It follows therefore that such a contract can be entered into with any person.

(iii) Any sum deducted from the salary payable of a Government employee for securing a deferred annuity

Amount deducted by or on behalf of the Government from the salary of a Government employee in accordance with the conditions of his service for securing a deferred annuity or making provisions for his spouse or children. The excess, if any, over one-fifth of the salary is to be ignored.

(iv) Contribution to SPF/PPF/RPF

Contributions to any provident fund to which the Provident Funds Act, 1925 applies and recognized provident fund qualifies for deduction under section 80C.

Contribution made to any Provident Fund set up by the Central Government and notified in his behalf (i.e., the Public Provident Fund established under the Public Provident Fund Scheme, 1968) also qualifies for deduction under section 80C. Such contribution can be made in the name of the individual, his spouse and any child of the individual; and any member of the family, in case of a HUF. The maximum limit for deposit in PPF is ₹ 1,50,000 in a year.

ILLUSTRATION 3

An individual assessee, resident in India, has made the following deposit/payment during the previous year 2019-20:

Particulars	₹
Contribution to the public provident fund	1,50,000
Insurance premium paid on the life of the spouse (policy taken on 1.4.2015) (Assured value ₹ 2,00,000)	25,000

The deposit scheme should be notified by the Central Government, for example, public deposit scheme of HUDCO.

(xv) Payment of tuition fees to any university, college, school or other educational institutions within India for full-time education for maximum 2 children

Payment of tuition fees by an individual assessee at the time of admission or thereafter to any university, college, school or other educational institutions within India for the purpose of full-time education of any two children of the individual. This benefit is only for the amount of tuition fees for full-time education and shall not include any payment towards development fees or donation or payment of similar nature and payment made for education to any institution situated outside India.

(xvi) Repayment of housing loan including stamp duty, registration fee and other expenses

Any payment made towards the cost of purchase or construction of a new residential house property. The income from such property –

(1) should be chargeable to tax under the head "Income from house property";

(2) would have been chargeable to tax under the head "Income from house property" had it not been used for the assessee's own residence.

The approved types of payments are as follows:

(1) Any instalment or part payment of the amount due under any self-financing or other schemes of any development authority, Housing Board or other authority engaged in the construction and sale of house property on ownership basis; or

(2) Any instalment or part payment of the amount due to any company or a cooperative society of which the assessee is a shareholder or member towards the cost of house allotted to him; or

(3) Repayment of amount borrowed by the assessee from:

(a) The Central Government or any State Government;

(b) Any bank including a co-operative bank;

(c) The Life Insurance Corporation;

(d) The National Housing Bank;

(e) Any public company formed and registered in India with the main object of carrying on the business of providing long-term finance for construction or purchase of houses in India for residential purposes which is eligible for deduction under section 36(1)(viii);

(f) Any company in which the public are substantially interested or any cooperative society engaged in the business of financing the construction of houses;

(g) The assessee's employer, where such employer is an authority or a board or a corporation or any other body established or constituted under a Central or State Act;

(h) The assessee's employer where such employer is a public company or public sector company or a university established by law or a college affiliated to such university or a local authority or a co-operative society.

(4) Stamp duty, registration fee and other expenses for the purposes of transfer of such house property to the assessee.

Inadmissible payments: However, the following amounts do not qualify for rebate:

(1) admission fee, cost of share and initial deposit which a shareholder of a company or a member of a co-operative society has to pay for becoming a shareholder or member; or

(2) the cost of any addition or alteration or renovation or repair of the house property after the completion of the house or after the house has been occupied by the assessee or any person on his behalf or after it has been let out; or

(3) any expenditure in respect of which deduction is allowable under section 24.

(xvii) Subscription to certain equity shares or debentures

Subscription to equity shares or debentures forming part of any eligible issue of capital approved by the Board on an application made by a public company or as subscription to any eligible issue of capital by any public financial institution in the prescribed form.

A lock-in period of three years is provided in respect of such equity shares or debentures. In case of any sale or transfer of shares or debentures within three years of the date of acquisition, the aggregate amount of deductions allowed in respect of such equity shares or debentures in the previous year or years preceding the previous year in which such sale or transfer has taken place shall be deemed to be the income of the assessee of such previous year and shall be liable to tax in the assessment year relevant to such previous year.

A person shall be treated as having acquired any shares or debentures on the date on which his name is entered in relation to those shares or debentures in the register of members or of debenture-holders, as the case may be, of the public company.

(xviii) Subscription to certain units of mutual fund

Subscription to any units of any mutual fund referred to in section 10(23D) and approved by the Board on an application made by such mutual fund in the prescribed form.

It is necessary that such units should be subscribed only in the eligible issue of capital of any company.

Eligible issue of capital for (xvii) and (xviii) means an issue made by a public company formed and registered in India or a public financial institution and the entire proceeds of the issue are utilised wholly and exclusively for the purposes of any business referred to in section 80-IA(4).

(xix) Investment in five year Term Deposit

Investment in term deposit -

(1) for a period of not less than five years with a scheduled bank; and

(2) which is in accordance with a scheme framed and notified by the Central Government in the Official Gazette qualifies as an eligible investment for availing deduction under section 80C.

The maximum limit for investment in term deposit is ₹ 1,50,000.

Scheduled bank means -

(1) the State Bank of India constituted under the State Bank of India Act, 1955, or

(2) a subsidiary bank as defined in the State Bank of India (Subsidiary Banks) Act, 1959, or

(3) a corresponding new bank constituted under section 3 of the -

  (a) Banking Companies (Acquisition and Transfer of Undertakings) Act, 1970, or

  (b) Banking Companies (Acquisition and Transfer of Undertakings) Act, 1980, or

(4) any other bank, being a bank included in the Second Schedule to the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934.

Subscription to such bonds issued by NABARD (as the Central Government may notify in the Official Gazette) qualifies for deduction under section 80C.

(xxi) Deposit in Senior Citizens Savings Scheme Rules, 2004

Deposit in an account under the Senior Citizens Savings Scheme Rules, 2004 qualifies for deduction under section 80C.

(xxii) Investment in five year Post Office time deposit

Investment in five year time deposit in an account under Post Office Time Deposit Rules, 1981 qualifies for deduction under section 80C.

(xxiii) Contribution to additional account under NPS

Contribution by a Central Government employee to additional account under NPS (specified account) referred to in section 80CCD for a fixed period of not less than 3 years and which is in accordance with the scheme notified by the Central Government for this purpose qualifies for deduction under section 80C. It may be noted that only the contribution to the additional account under NPS will qualify for deduction under section 80C.

There are two types of NPS account i.e., Tier I and Tier II, to which an individual can contribute. Section 80CCD provides deduction in respect of contribution to individual pension account [Tier I account] under the NPS [referred to in section 20(2)(a) of the Pension Fund Regulatory and Development Authority Act, 2013 (PFRDA)] whereas deduction under section 80C is allowable in respect of contribution by Central Government employee to additional account [Tier II account] of NPS [referred to in section 20(3) of the PFRDA], which does not qualify for deduction under section 80CCD. Thus, Tier II account is the additional account under NPS, contribution to which would qualify for deduction under section 80C only in the hands of a Central Government employee.

Termination of Insurance Policy or Unit Linked Insurance Plan or transfer of House Property or withdrawal of deposit:

Where, in any previous year, an assessee:

(1) terminates his contract of insurance referred to in (i) above, by notice to that effect or where the contract ceases to be in force by reason of not paying the premium, by not reviving the contract of insurance, -

(a) in case of any single premium policy, within two years after the date of commencement of insurance; or

(b) in any other case, before premiums have been paid for two years; or

(2) terminates his participation in any Unit Linked Insurance Plan referred to in (viii) or (ix) above, by notice to that effect or where he ceases to participate by reason of failure to pay any contribution, by not reviving his participation, before contributions in respect of such participation have been paid for five years, or

(3) transfers the house property referred to in (xvi) above, before the expiry of five years from the end of the financial year in which possession of such property is obtained by him, or receives back, whether by way of refund or otherwise, any sum specified in (xvi) above, then, no deduction will be allowed to the assessee in respect of sums paid during such previous year and the total amount of deductions of income allowed in respect of the previous year or years preceding such previous year, shall be deemed to be income of the assessee of such previous year and shall be liable to tax in the assessment year relevant to such previous year.

Further, where any amount is withdrawn by the assessee from his account under the Senior Citizens Savings Scheme or under the Post Office Time Deposit Rules before the expiry of a period of 5 years from the date of its deposit, the amount so withdrawn shall be deemed to be the income of the assessee of the previous year in which the amount is withdrawn. Accordingly, the amount so withdrawn would be chargeable to tax in the assessment year relevant to such previous year. The amount chargeable to tax would also include that part of the amount withdrawn which represents interest accrued on the deposit.

However, if any part of the amount relating to interest so received or withdrawn has been subject to tax in any of the earlier years, such amount shall not be taxed again.

If any amount has been received by the nominee or legal heir of the assessee, on the death of such assessee, the amount would not be chargeable to tax. But if the amount relating to interest on deposit was not included in the total income of the assessee in any of any earlier years, then such interest would be chargeable to tax.

ILLUSTRATION 4

Mr. A, aged about 40 years, has earned a lottery income of ₹ 1,20,000 (gross) during the P.Y. 2019-20. He also has interest on Fixed Deposit of ₹ 30,000. He invested an amount of ₹ 10,000 in Public Provident Fund account and ₹ 24,000 in National Savings Certificate. What is the total income of Mr. A for the A.Y.2020-21?

SOLUTION

Computation of total income of Mr. A for A.Y.2020-21

Particulars	₹	₹
Income from Other Sources
- Interest on Fixed Deposit		30,000
- Lottery income		1,20,000
Gross Total Income		1,50,000
Less: Deductions under Chapter VIA [See Note below]
Under section 80C
- Deposit in Public Provident Fund	10,000
- Investment in National Savings Certificate	24,000
	34,000
Restricted to		30,000
Total Income		1,20,000

Note: Though the value of eligible investments is ₹ 34,000, however, deduction under Chapter VIA cannot exceed the gross total income exclusive of long term capital gains, short-term capital gains covered under section 111A, winnings of lotteries etc. of the assessee.

Therefore, the maximum permissible deduction u/s 80C = ₹ 1,50,000 – ₹ 1,20,000 = ₹ 30,000.

(2) Deduction in respect of contribution to certain pension funds [Section 80CCC]

(i) Eligible assessee - Where an assessee, being an individual, has in the previous year paid or deposited any amount out of his income chargeable to tax to effect or keep in force a contract for any annuity plan of LIC of India or any other insurer for receiving pension from the fund set up by LIC or such other insurer, he shall be allowed a deduction in the computation of his total income.

For this purpose, the interest or bonus accrued or credited to the assessee's account shall not be reckoned as contribution.

Note: Where any amount paid or deposited by the assessee has been taken into account for the purposes of this section, a deduction under section 80C shall not be allowed with reference to such amount.

(ii) Maximum Deduction: The maximum permissible deduction is ₹ 1,50,000 (Further, the overall limit of ₹ 1,50,000 prescribed in section 80CCE will continue to be applicable i.e. the maximum permissible deduction under sections 80C, 80CCC and 80CCD(1) put together is ₹ 1,50,000).

(iii) Deemed Income: Where any amount standing to the credit of the assessee in the fund in respect of which a deduction has been allowed, together with interest or bonus accrued or credited to the assessee's account is received by the assessee or his nominee on account of the surrender of the annuity plan in any previous year or as pension received from the annuity plan, such amount will be deemed to be the income of the assessee or the nominee in that previous year in which such withdrawal is made or pension is received. It will be chargeable to tax as income of that previous year.

(3) Deduction in respect of contribution to pension scheme notified by the Central Government [Section 80CCD]

(i) Pension Scheme of Central Government: As per the "Restructured Defined Contribution Pension System" applicable to new entrants to Government service, it is mandatory for persons entering the service of the Central Government on or after 1st January, 2004, to contribute 10% of their salary every month towards their pension account. A matching contribution is required to be made by the Government to the said account. The benefit of this scheme is also available to individuals employed by any other employer as well as to self-employed individuals.

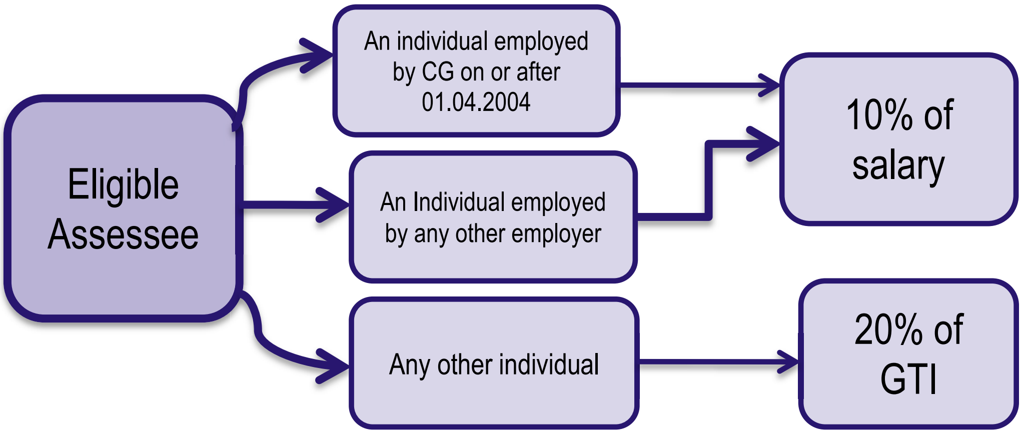
(ii) Deduction: Section 80CCD provides deduction in respect of contribution made to the pension scheme notified by the Central Government.

Accordingly, in exercise of the powers conferred by section 80CCD(1), the Central Government has notified the 'Atal Pension Yojana (APY)' as a pension scheme, contribution to which would qualify for deduction under section 80CCD in the hands of the individual.

(iii) Quantum of deduction

(a) Section 80CCD(1) provides a deduction for the amount paid or deposited by an employee in his pension account subject to a maximum of 10% of his salary. The deduction in the case of a self-employed individual would be restricted to 20% of his gross total income in the previous year.

Deduction under section 80CCD(1)



Eligible Assessee
An individual employed by CG on or after 01.04.2004
An Individual employed by any other employer
Any other individual
10% of salary
20% of GTI

(b) Section 80CCD(1B) provides for an additional deduction of up to ₹ 50,000 in respect of the whole of the amount paid or deposited by an individual assessee under NPS in the previous year, whether or not any deduction is allowed under section 80CCD(1).

(c) Whereas the deduction under section 80CCD(1) is subject to the overall limit of ₹ 1.50 lakh under section 80CCE, the deduction of upto ₹ 50,000 under section 80CCD(1B) is in addition to the overall limit of ₹ 1.50 lakh provided under section 80CCE.

(d) Under section 80CCD(2), contribution made by the Central Government or any other employer in the previous year to the said account of an employee, is allowed as a deduction in computation of the total income of the assessee.

(e) The entire employer's contribution would be included in the salary of the employee. However, deduction under section 80CCD(2) would be restricted to 14% of salary, in case of contribution made by the Central Government, and to 10% of salary, in case of contribution made by any other employer.

Notes:

1. The limit of ₹ 1,50,000 under section 80CCE does not apply to employer's contribution to pension scheme of Central Government which is allowable as deduction under section 80CCD(2).
2. No deduction will be allowed u/s 80C in respect of amounts paid or deposited by the assessee, for which deduction has been allowed u/s 80CCD(1) or 80CCD(1B).
3. For computation of limit under section 80CCD(1) and (2), salary includes dearness allowance, if the terms of employment so provide, but excludes all other allowances and perquisites.

(iv) Deemed income: The amount standing to the credit of the assessee in the pension account (for which deduction has already been claimed by him under this section) and accretions to such account, shall be taxed as income in the year in which such amounts are received by the assessee or his nominee on -

(a) closure of the account or

(b) his opting out of the said scheme or

(c) receipt of pension from the annuity plan purchased or taken on such closure or opting out.

However, the amount received by the nominee on the death of the assessee under the circumstances referred to in (a) and (b) above, shall not be deemed to be the income of the nominee.

Further, the assessee shall be deemed not to have received any amount in the previous year if such amount is used for purchasing an annuity plan in the same previous year.

Notes:

1. Exemption on payment from NPS Trust to an assessee on closure of his account or on his opting out of the pension scheme [Section 10(12A)]

(i) As per section 80CCD, any payment from National Pension System Trust to an employee on account of closure or his opting out of the pension scheme is chargeable to tax.

(ii) Section 10(12A) provides that any payment from National Pension System Trust to an assessee on account of closure or his opting out of the pension scheme referred to in section 80CCD, to the extent it does not exceed 60% of the total amount payable to him at the time of closure or his opting out of the scheme, shall be exempt from tax.

2. Exemption on payment from NPS Trust to an employee on partial withdrawal [Section 10(12B)]

To provide relief to an employee subscriber of NPS, section 10(12B) provides that any payment from National Pension System Trust to an employee under the pension scheme referred to in section 80CCD, on partial withdrawn made out of his account in accordance with the terms and conditions specified under the Pension Fund Regulatory and Development Authority Act, 2013 and the regulations made there under, shall be exempt from tax to the extent it does not exceed 25% of amount of contributions made by him.

(4) Limit on deductions under sections 80C, 80CCC & 80CCD(1) [Section 80CCE]

This section restricts the aggregate amount of deduction under section 80C, 80CCC and 80CCD(1) to ₹ 1,50,000. It may be noted that the deduction of upto ₹ 50,000 under section 80CCD(1B) and employer's contribution to pension scheme, allowable as deduction under section 80CCD(2) in the hands of the employee, would be outside the overall limit of ₹ 1,50,000 stipulated under section 80CCE.

The following table summarizes the ceiling limit under these sections –

Section	Particulars	Ceiling limit (₹)
80C	Investment in LIP, Deposit in PPF/SPF/RPF etc.	1,50,000
80CCC	Contribution to certain pension funds	1,50,000
80CCD(1)	Contribution to NPS of Government	10% of salary or 20% of GTI, as the case may be.
80CCE	Aggregate deduction under sections 80C, 80CCC & 80CCD(1)	1,50,000
80CCD(1B)	Contribution to NPS notified by the Central Government (outside the limit of ₹ 1,50,000 under section 80CCE)	50,000
80CCD(2)	Contribution by the Central Government to NPS A/c of its employees (outside the limit of ₹ 1,50,000 under section 80CCE)	14% of salary
	Contribution by any other employer to NPS A/c of its employees (outside the limit of ₹ 1,50,000 under section 80CCE)	10% of salary

ILLUSTRATION 5

The basic salary of Mr. A is ₹ 1,00,000 p.m. He is entitled to dearness allowance, which is 40% of basic salary. 50% of dearness allowance forms part of pay for retirement benefits. Both Mr. A and his employer contribute 15% of basic salary to the pension scheme referred to in section 80CCD. Examine the tax treatment in respect of such contribution in the hands of Mr. A.

SOLUTION

Tax treatment in the hands of Mr. A in respect of employer's and own contribution to pension scheme referred to in section 80CCD

(a) Employer's contribution to such pension scheme would be treated as salary since it is specifically included in the definition of "salary" under section 17(1)(viii). Therefore, ₹ 1,80,000, being 15% of basic salary of ₹ 12,00,000, will be included in Mr. A's salary.

(b) Mr. A's contribution to pension scheme is allowable as deduction under section 80CCD(1). However, the deduction is restricted to 10% of salary. Salary, for this purpose, means basic pay plus dearness allowance, if it forms part of pay.

Therefore, deduction under section 80CCD for Mr. A would be –

Particulars	₹
Basic salary = ₹ 1,00,000 × 12 =	12,00,000
Dearness allowance = 40% of ₹ 12,00,000 = ₹ 4,80,000
50% of Dearness Allowance forms part of pay = 50% of ₹ 4,80,000	2,40,000
Salary for the purpose of deduction under section 80CCD	14,40,000
Deduction under section 80CCD(1) is restricted to 10% of ₹ 14,40,000 (as against actual contribution of ₹ 1,80,000, being 15% of basic salary of ₹ 12,00,000)	1,44,000
As per section 80CCD(1B), a further deduction of upto ₹ 50,000 is allowable. Therefore, deduction under section 80CCD(1B) is ₹ 36,000 (₹ 1,80,000 - ₹ 1,44,000).	36,000

₹ 1,44,000 is allowable as deduction under section 80CCD(1). This would be taken into consideration and be subject to the overall limit of ₹ 1,50,000 under section 80CCE. ₹ 36,000 allowable as deduction under section 80CCD(1B) is outside the overall limit of ₹ 1,50,000 under section 80CCE.

In the alternative, ₹ 50,000 can be claimed as deduction under section 80CCD(1B). The balance ₹ 1,30,000 (₹ 1,80,000 - ₹ 50,000) can be claimed as deduction under section 80CCD(1).

(c) Employer's contribution to pension scheme would be allowable as deduction under section 80CCD(2), subject to a maximum of 10% of salary. Therefore, deduction under section 80CCD(2), would also be restricted to ₹ 1,44,000, even though the entire employer's contribution of ₹ 1,80,000 is included in salary under section 17(1)(viii). However, this deduction of employer's contribution of ₹ 1,44,000 to pension scheme would be outside the overall limit of ₹ 1,50,000 under section 80CCE i.e., this deduction would be over and above the other deductions which are subject to the limit of ₹ 1,50,000.

Deduction under section 80CCC
- Contribution to approved pension fund of LIC	1,05,000
	2,55,000
As per section 80CCE, the aggregate deduction under section 80C, 80CCC and 80CCD(1) has to be restricted to ₹ 1,50,000
Deduction allowable under Chapter VIA for the A.Y.2020-21	1,50,000

(5) Deduction in respect of medical insurance premium [Section 80D]

(i) In case of an Individual

(a) Deduction in respect of insurance premium paid for family: A deduction to the extent of ₹ 25,000 is allowed in respect of the following payments–

(1) premium paid to effect or keep in force an insurance on the health of self, spouse and dependant children or

(2) any contribution made to the Central Government Health Scheme or

(3) such other health scheme as may be notified by the Central Government. Contributory Health Service Scheme of the Department of Atomic Energy has been notified by the Central Government.

(b) Deduction in respect of insurance premium for parents: A further deduction up to ₹ 25,000 is allowable to effect or to keep in force an insurance on the health of parents of the assessee.

> Quantum of deduction in case of senior citizen: An increased deduction of ₹ 50,000 (instead of ₹ 25,000) shall be allowed in case any of the persons mentioned above is a senior citizen i.e., an individual resident in India of the age of 60 years or more at any time during the relevant previous year.

(c) Deduction in respect of payment towards preventive health check-up: Section 80D provides that deduction to the extent of ₹ 5,000 shall be allowed in respect payment made on account of preventive health check-up of self, spouse, dependant children or parents made during the previous year. However, the said deduction of ₹ 5,000 is within the overall limit of ₹ 25,000 or ₹ 50,000, specified in (a) and (b) above.

(d) Mode of payment: For claiming such deduction under section 80D, the payment can be made:

(1) by any mode, including cash, in respect of any sum paid on account of preventive health check-up;

(2) by any mode other than cash, in all other cases.

(e) Deduction for medical expenditure incurred on senior citizens: As a welfare measure towards senior citizens i.e., person of the age of 60 years or more and resident in India, who are unable to get health insurance coverage, deduction of upto ₹ 50,000 would be allowed in respect of any payment made on account of medical expenditure in respect of a such person(s), if no payment has been made to keep in force an insurance on the health of such person(s).

'Senior citizen' means an individual resident in India who is of the age of 60 years or more at any time during the relevant previous year.

(ii) In case of a HUF

Deduction under section 80D is allowable in respect of premium paid to insure the health of any member of the family. The maximum deduction available to a HUF would be ₹ 25,000 and in case any member is a senior citizen, ₹ 50,000.

Further, the amount paid on account of medical expenditure incurred on the health of any member(s) of a family who is a senior citizen would qualify for deduction subject to a maximum of ₹ 50,000 provided no amount has been paid to effect or keep in force any insurance on the health of such person(s).

(iii) Other conditions

The other conditions to be fulfilled are that such premium should be paid by any mode, other than cash, in the previous year out of his income chargeable to tax. Further, the medical insurance should be in accordance with a scheme made in this behalf by -

(a) the General Insurance Corporation of India and approved by the Central Government in this behalf; or

(b) any other insurer and approved by the Insurance Regulatory and Development Authority.

The following table summarizes the provisions of section 80D –

S. No.	Nature of payment/ expenditure	Expenditure on behalf of		Deduction
I	(i) Any premium paid, otherwise than by way of cash, to keep in force an insurance on the health (ii) Contribution to Central Government Health Scheme (CGHS) (iii) Preventive health check up expenditure	In case of individual	Self, spouse and dependent children	₹ 25,000
		In case of HUF	Family member
		In case any of the above persons is of the age of 60 years or more + resident in India		₹ 50,000

II	(i) Any premium paid, otherwise than by way of cash, to keep in force an insurance on the health (ii) Preventive health check up	Parents In case either or both the parents is of the age of 60 years or more + Resident in India	₹ 25,000 ₹ 50,000
Maximum ₹ 5,000 allowed as deduction for aggregate of preventive health check up expenditure, by any mode including cash, mentioned in I and II (Subject to overall limit of ₹ 25,000 or ₹ 50,000, as the case may be)
III	Amount paid on account of medical expenditure	For self/ spouse/ parents + who is of the age of 60 years or more + Resident in India + no payment has been made to keep in force an insurance on the health of such person	₹ 50,000

Note: In case the individual or any of his family members is a senior citizen, the aggregate of deduction, in respect of payment of premium, contribution to CGHS and medical expenditure incurred, as specified in (I) & (III) above, cannot exceed ₹ 50,000.

In case one of the parents is a senior citizen who is covered under mediclaim policy and another is also a senior citizen but not covered under mediclaim policy, the aggregate of deduction, in respect of payment of medical insurance premium and medical expenditure incurred, as specified in (II) & (III) above, cannot exceed ₹ 50,000.

(iv) Deduction where premium for health insurance is paid in lump sum [Section 80D(4A)]

(a) Appropriate fraction of lump sum premium allowable as deduction: In a case where mediclaim premium is paid in lumpsum for more than one year by:

(1) an individual, to effect or keep in force an insurance on his health or health of his spouse, dependent children or parents; or

(2) a HUF, to effect or keep in force an insurance on the health of any member of the family, then, the deduction allowable under this section for each of the relevant previous year would be equal to the appropriate fraction of such lump sum payment.

(b) Meaning of certain terms

Term	Meaning
Appropriate fraction	1 ÷ Total number of relevant previous years
Relevant previous year	The previous year in which such lump sum amount is paid; and the subsequent previous year(s) during which the insurance would be in force.

ILLUSTRATION 7

Mr. A, aged 40 years, paid medical insurance premium of ₹ 20,000 during the P.Y.2019-20 to insure his health as well as the health of his spouse. He also paid medical insurance premium of ₹ 47,000 during the year to insure the health of his father, aged 63 years, who is not dependant on him. He contributed ₹ 3,600 to Central Government Health Scheme during the year. He has incurred ₹ 3,000 in cash on preventive health check-up of himself and his spouse and ₹ 4,000 by cheque on preventive health check-up of his father. Compute the deduction allowable under section 80D for the A.Y. 2020-21.

SOLUTION

Deduction allowable under section 80D for the A.Y.2020-21

	Particulars	Actual Payment ₹	Maximum deduction allowable ₹
A.	Premium paid and medical expenditure incurred for self and spouse
(i)	Medical insurance premium paid for self and spouse	20,000	20,000
(ii)	Contribution to CGHS	3,600	3,600
(iii)	Exp. on preventive health check-up of self & spouse	3,000	1,400
		26,600	25,000
B.	Premium paid and medical expenditure incurred for father, who is a senior citizen
(i)	Mediclaim premium paid for father, who is over 60 years of age	47,000	47,000
(ii)	Expenditure on preventive health check-up of father	4,000	3,000
		51,000	50,000
	Total deduction under section 80D (₹ 25,000 + ₹ 50,000)		75,000

Notes:

(1) The total deduction under A.(i), (ii) and (iii) above should not exceed ₹ 25,000. Therefore, the expenditure on preventive health check-up for self and spouse would be restricted to ₹ 1,400, being (₹ 25,000 – ₹ 20,000 – ₹ 3,600).

(2) The total deduction under B. (i) and (ii) above should not exceed ₹ 50,000. Therefore, the expenditure on preventive health check-up for father would be restricted to ₹ 3,000, being (₹ 50,000 – ₹ 47,000).

(3) In this case, the total deduction allowed on account of expenditure on preventive health check-up of self, spouse and father is ₹ 4,400 (i.e., ₹ 1,400 + ₹ 3,000), which is less than the maximum permissible limit of ₹ 5,000.

(6) Deduction in respect of maintenance including medical treatment of a dependant disabled [Section 80DD]

(i) Eligible assessee: Section 80DD provides deduction to an assessee, who is a resident in India, being an individual or Hindu undivided family.

(ii) Payment qualifying for deduction:

(a) Any amount –

- incurred for the medical treatment (including nursing), training and rehabilitation of a dependant, being a person with disability, or
- paid or deposited under a scheme framed in this behalf by the Life Insurance Corporation or any other insurer or the Administrator or the Specified

Company as referred to in section 2(h) of the Unit Trust of India (Transfer of Undertaking and Repeal) Act, 2002, for the maintenance of a dependant, being a person with disability qualifies for deduction.

(b) The scheme should provide for payment of annuity or a lump sum amount for the benefit of a dependant, being a person with disability, in the event of the death of the individual or member of the HUF, in whose name subscription was made and the assessee must nominate either the dependant, being a person with disability or any other person or a trust to receive the payment on his behalf, for the benefit of the dependant, being a person with disability.

(c) The benefit of deduction under this section is also available to assessees incurring expenditure on maintenance including medical treatment of persons suffering from autism, cerebral palsy and multiple disabilities

(iii) Quantum of deduction: The quantum of deduction is ₹ 75,000 and in case of severe disability (i.e. person with 80% or more disability) the deduction shall be ₹ 1,25,000.

(iv) Conditions:

(a) For claiming the deduction, the assessee shall have to furnish a copy of the certificate issued by the medical authority under the Persons with Disability (Equal Opportunities, Protection of Rights and Full Participation) Act, 1995 along with the return of income under section 139.

(b) Where the condition of disability requires reassessment, a fresh certificate from the medical authority shall have to be obtained after the expiry of the period mentioned in the original certificate in order to continue to claim the deduction.

(c) If the dependant, being a person with disability, predeceases the individual or the member of HUF, in whose name subscription was made, then the amount paid or deposited under the said scheme would be chargeable to tax in the hands of the assessee in the previous year in which such amount is received by the assessee.

(v) Meaning of "Dependant":

	Assessee	Dependant
(1)	Individual	the spouse, children, parents, brother or sister of the individual who is wholly or mainly dependant on such individual and not claimed deduction under section 80U in the computation of his income
(2)	HUF	a member of the HUF, wholly or mainly dependant on such HUF and not claimed deduction under section 80U in the computation of his income

ILLUSTRATION 9

Mr. X is a resident individual. He deposits a sum of ₹ 50,000 with Life Insurance Corporation every year for the maintenance of his handicapped grandfather who is wholly dependant upon him. The disability is one which comes under the Persons with Disabilities (Equal Opportunities, Protection of Rights and Full Participation) Act, 1995. A copy of the certificate from the medical authority is submitted. Compute the amount of deduction available under section 80DD for the A.Y. 2020-21.

SOLUTION

Since the amount deposited by Mr. X was for his grandfather, he will not be allowed any deduction under section 80DD. The deduction is available if the individual assessee incurs any expense for a dependant disabled relative. Grandfather does not come within the definition of dependant.

ILLUSTRATION 10

What will be the deduction if Mr. X had made this deposit for his dependant father?

SOLUTION

Since the expense was incurred for a dependant disabled relative, Mr. X will be entitled to claim a deduction of ₹ 75,000 under section 80DD, irrespective of the amount deposited. In case his father has severe disability, the deduction would be ₹ 1,25,000.

(7) Deduction in respect of medical treatment etc. [Section 80DDB]

(i) Eligible assessee: This section provides deduction to an assessee, who is resident in India, being an individual and Hindu undivided family. The deduction is available to an individual for medical expenditure incurred on himself or a dependant. It is also available to a Hindu undivided family (HUF) for such expenditure incurred on any of its members.

(ii) Meaning of "Dependant":

	Assessee	Dependant
(1)	Individual	the spouse, children, parents, brother or sister of the individual or any of them, wholly or mainly dependant on such individual for his support and maintenance.
(2)	HUF	a member of the HUF, wholly or mainly dependant on such HUF for his support and maintenance.

(iii) Payment qualifying for deduction: Any amount actually paid for the medical treatment of such disease or ailment as may be specified in the rules made in this behalf by the Board for himself or a dependant, in case the assessee is an individual or for any member of a HUF, in case the assessee is a HUF will qualify for deduction.

(iv) Quantum of deduction: The amount of deduction under this section shall be equal to the amount actually paid or ₹ 40,000, whichever is less, in respect of that previous year in which such amount was actually paid.

In case the amount is paid in respect of a senior citizen, i.e., a resident individual of the age of 60 years or more at any time during the relevant previous year, then the deduction would be the amount actually paid or ₹ 1,00,000, whichever is less.

The deduction under this section shall be reduced by the amount received, if any, under insurance from an insurer, or reimbursed by an employer, for the medical treatment of the assessee or the dependant.

(v) Maximum deduction: The maximum limit of deduction under section 80DDB for the various categories of dependant are summarized hereunder:

	Dependant	Maximum limit (₹)
(1)	A senior citizen, being a resident individual	1,00,000
(2)	Other than a senior citizen	40,000

(vi) Condition: No such deduction shall be allowed unless the assessee obtains the prescription for such medical treatment from a neurologist, an oncologist, a urologist, a hematologist, an immunologist or such other specialist, as may be prescribed.

(8) Deduction in respect of interest loan taken for higher education [Section 80E]

(i) Eligible assessee: Section 80E provides deduction to an individual-assessee in respect of any interest on loan paid by him in the previous year out of his income chargeable to tax.

(ii) Conditions: The loan must have been taken for the purpose of pursuing his higher education or for the purpose of higher education of his or her relative. The loan must have been taken from any financial institution or approved charitable institution.

(iii) Meaning of certain terms:

	Term	Meaning
(a)	Relative	Spouse and children of the individual or the student for whom the individual is the legal guardian
(b)	Higher education	It means any course of study (including vocational studies) pursued after passing the Senior Secondary Examination or its equivalent from any school, board or university recognised by the Central Government or State Government or local authority or by any other authority authorized by the Central Government or State Government or local authority to do so. Therefore, interest on loan taken for pursuing any course after Class XII or its equivalent, will qualify for deduction under section 80E.

(c)	Period of deduction	The deduction is allowed in computing the total income in respect of the initial assessment year (i.e. the assessment year relevant to the previous year, in which the assessee starts paying the interest on the loan) and seven assessment years immediately succeeding the initial assessment year or until the interest is paid in full by the assessee, whichever is earlier.
(d)	Approved charitable institution	It means an institution established for charitable purposes and approved by the prescribed authority under section 10(23C) or an institution referred to in section 80G(2)(a).
(e)	Financial institution	It means – (a) a banking company to which the Banking Regulation Act, 1949 applies (including a bank or banking institution referred to in section 51 of the Act); or (b) any other financial institution which the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, specify in this behalf

Mr. B has taken three education loans on April 1, 2019, the details of which are given below:

	Loan 1	Loan 2	Loan 3
For whose education loan was taken	B	Son of B	Daughter of B
Purpose of loan	MBA	B. Sc.	B.A.
Amount of loan (₹)	5,00,000	2,00,000	4,00,000
Annual repayment of loan (₹)	1,00,000	40,000	80,000
Annual repayment of interest (₹)	20,000	10,000	18,000

Compute the amount deductible under section 80E for the A.Y.2020-21.

SOLUTION

Deduction under section 80E is available to an individual assessee in respect of any interest paid by him in the previous year in respect of loan taken for pursuing his higher education or higher education of his spouse or children. Higher education means any course of study pursued after senior secondary examination.

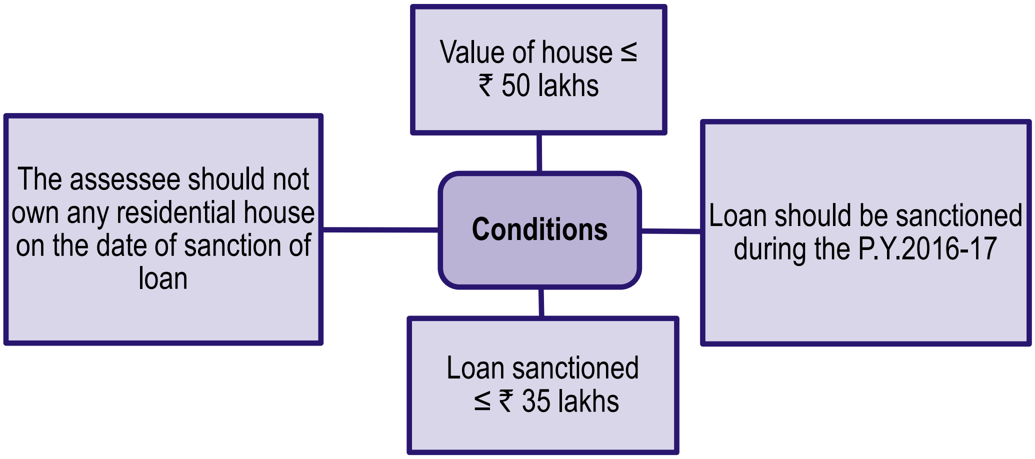
Therefore, interest repayment in respect of all the above loans would be eligible for deduction.

Deduction under section 80E = ₹ 20,000 + ₹ 10,000 + ₹ 18,000 = ₹ 48,000.

(9) Deduction for interest on loan borrowed for acquisition of self-occupied house property by an individual [Section 80EE]

(i) Eligible assessee: Section 80EE provides additional deduction in respect of interest on loan taken by an individual for acquisition of residential house property from any financial institution.

(ii) Conditions: The conditions to be satisfied for availing this deduction are as follows –



Conditions

Value of house ≤ ₹ 50 lakhs

The assessee should not own any residential house on the date of sanction of loan

Loan should be sanctioned during the P.Y.2016-17

Loan sanctioned ≤ ₹ 35 lakhs

(iii) Period of benefit: The benefit of deduction under this section would be available till the repayment of loan continues.

(iv) Quantum of deduction: The maximum deduction allowable is ₹ 50,000. The deduction of upto ₹ 50,000 under section 80EE is over and above the deduction of upto ₹ 2,00,000 available under section 24 for interest paid in respect of loan borrowed for acquisition of a self-occupied property.

(v) Meaning of certain terms:

	Term	Meaning
(a)	Financial institution	▪ A banking company to which the Banking Regulation Act, 1949 applies; or ▪ Any bank or banking institution referred to in section 51 of the Banking Regulation Act, 1949; or ▪ A housing finance company.
(b)	Housing finance company	A public company formed or registered in India with the main object of carrying on the business of providing long-term finance for construction or purchase of houses in India for residential purposes.

ILLUSTRATION 12

Mr. A purchased a residential house property for self-occupation at a cost of ₹ 45 lakh on 1.4.2017, in respect of which he took a housing loan of ₹ 35 lakh from Bank of India@11% p.a. on the same date. The loan was sanctioned on 28th March, 2017. Compute the eligible deduction in respect of interest on housing loan for A.Y.2020-21 under the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961, assuming that the entire loan was outstanding as on 31.3.2020 and he does not own any other house property.

(5)	for renovation or repair of any such temple, mosque, gurdwara, church or other place as notified by the Central Government to be of historic, archaeological or artistic importance or to be a place of public worship of renown throughout any State or States.

(iii) Qualifying limit: The eligible donations referred to in III and IV should be aggregated and the sum total should be limited to 10% of the adjusted gross total income. This would be the maximum permissible deduction.

The donations qualifying for 100% deduction would be first adjusted from the maximum permissible deduction and thereafter 50% deduction of the balance would be allowed.

Steps for computation of qualifying limit

Step 1:	Compute adjusted total income i.e., the GTI as reduced by the following: (i) Deductions under Chapter VI-A, except under section 80G (ii) Short-term capital gain taxable under section 111A (iii) Long-term capital gains taxable under sections 112 & 112A (iv) Any income on which income-tax is not payable (v) Income referred to in section 115A(1)(a), 115AB, 115AC,115AD and 115D
Step 2:	Calculate 10% of adjusted total income
Step 3:	Calculate the actual donation, which is subject to qualifying limit (Total of Category III and IV donations, shown in the table above)
Step 4:	Lower of Step 2 or Step 3 is the maximum permissible deduction.
Step 5:	The said deduction is adjusted first against donations qualifying for 100% deduction (i.e., Category III donations). Thereafter, 50% of balance qualifies for deduction under section 80G.

(iv) Conditions: Donation to any institution or fund referred in point no. (1) of (IV) above, shall be eligible for deduction if it is established in India for charitable purposes and fulfill the following conditions:

(1) The institution or fund is:

(a) constituted as a public charitable trust, or

(b) registered under the Societies Registration Act, 1860 or under any corresponding law or under section 25 of the Companies Act, 1956[2], or

(c) a University established by law or

(d) any other educational institution recognized by the Government or by a university established by law or affiliated to any university established by law

(e) an institution financed wholly or in part by the Government or a local authority.

(2) Where such institution or fund derives any income, such income should not be liable to inclusion in its total income under the provisions of section 10(23AA), 10(23C) or 11 or 12.

However, in respect of profits and gains of business, the condition of such income should not be liable to inclusion in its total income under the provisions of section 11 shall not be applicable if –

[2] Section 8 of the Companies Act, 2013

- The institution or fund maintains separate books of account in respect of such business;
- The donation made to it are not used by it, directly or indirectly, for the purpose of such business; and
- The institution or fund issues certificate to the donor in respect of the above compliance.

Further, it may be noted that the assessee will not lose the benefit of deduction if:

(a) subsequent to the donation, any part of the income of the Institution has become chargeable to tax due to non-compliance with any of the provisions of section 11 or section 12 or section 12A.

(b) as a result of the operation of section 13(1)(c), exemption under section 11 or section 12 is denied to the institution in relation to any income arising to it from any investment made in a concern in which the person specified under section 13(3) has substantial interest and aggregate of fund so invested does not exceed 5% of the capital of that concern. [Explanation 2]

(3) No part of the income or assets of the Institution or Fund is transferable or applicable at any time for any purposes other than charitable purpose.

Such charitable purpose however does not include any purpose the whole or substantially the whole of which is of a religious nature. [Explanation 3]

However, where an institution or fund incurs expenditure of a religious nature for an amount not exceeding 5% of its total income in that previous year, such institution or fund shall be deemed to be a fund or institution to which the provisions of this section apply.

(4) For the purposes of this section, an association or institution having as its object the control, supervision, regulation or encouragement in India of such games or sports as the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, specify in this behalf, shall be deemed to be an institution established in India for a charitable purpose. [Explanation 4]

(5) The Institution or Fund is not expressed to be for the benefit of any particular religious community or caste.

An institution or fund established for the benefit of women and children or of Scheduled Castes, Backward classes or Scheduled Tribes is not however to be treated as an institution or fund for the benefit of a religious community or caste. [Explanation 1]

(6) The Institution or Fund maintains regular accounts of its receipt and expenditure.

(7) Such institution or fund must be approved by the Commissioner in accordance with the rules made in this behalf.

(v) Other points:

(a) Where an assessee has claimed and has been allowed any deduction under this section in respect of any amount of donation, the same amount will not qualify for deduction under any other provision of the Act for the same or any other assessment year.

(b) Donations in kind shall not qualify for deduction.

(c) No deduction shall be allowed in respect of donation of any sum exceeding ₹ 2,000 unless such sum is paid by any mode other than cash.

(d) The deduction under section 80G can be claimed whether it has any nexus with the business of the assessee or not.

(e) As per Circular No.2/2005 dated 12.1.2005, in cases where employees make donations to the Prime Minister's National Relief Fund, the Chief Minister's Relief Fund or the Lieutenant Governor's Relief Fund through their respective employers, it is not possible for such funds to issue separate certificate to every such employee in respect of donations made to such funds as contributions made to these funds are in the form of a consolidated cheque. An employee who makes donations towards these funds is eligible to claim deduction under section 80G. It is, hereby, clarified that the claim in respect of such donations as indicated above will be admissible under section 80G on the basis of the certificate issued by the Drawing and Disbursing Officer (DDO)/ Employer in this behalf.

ILLUSTRATION 14

Mr. Shiva aged 58 years, has gross total income of ₹ 7,75,000 comprising of income from salary and house property. He has made the following payments and investments:

(i) Premium paid to insure the life of her major daughter (policy taken on 1.4.2017) (Assured value ₹ 1,80,000) – ₹ 20,000

(ii) Medical Insurance premium for self – ₹ 12,000; Spouse – ₹ 14,000

(iii) Donation to a public charitable institution registered under 80G ₹ 50,000 by way of cheque

(iv) LIC Pension Fund – ₹ 60,000

(v) Donation to National Children's Fund - ₹ 25,000 by way of cheque

(vi) Donation to Jawaharlal Nehru Memorial Fund - ₹ 25,000 by way of cheque

(vii) Donation to approved institution for promotion of family planning - ₹ 40,000 by way of cheque

(viii) Deposit in PPF - ₹ 1,00,000

Compute the total income of Mr. Shiva for A.Y. 2020-21.

SOLUTION

Computation of Total Income of Mr. Shiva for A.Y. 2020-21

Particulars	₹	₹
Gross Total Income		7,75,000
Less*: Deduction under section 80C
Deposit in PPF	1,00,000
Life insurance premium paid for insurance of major daughter (Maximum 10% of the assured value ₹ 1,80,000, as the policy is taken after 31.3.2012)	18,000
	1,18,000
Deduction u/s 80CCC in respect of LIC pension fund	60,000
	1,78,000
As per section 80CCE, deduction u/s 80C & 80CCC is restricted to		1,50,000
Deduction under section 80D
Medical Insurance premium in respect of self and spouse	26,000
Restricted to		25,000
Deduction under section 80G (See Working Note below)		87,500
Total income		5,12,500

Working Note: Computation of deduction under section 80G

	Particulars of donation	Amount donated (₹)	% of deduction	Deduction u/s 80G (₹)
(i)	National Children's Fund	25,000	100%	25,000
(ii)	Jawaharlal Nehru Memorial Fund	25,000	50%	12,500
(iii)	Approved institution for promotion of family planning	40,000	100%, subject to qualifying limit	40,000
(iv)	Public Charitable Trust	1,50,000	50% subject to qualifying limit (See Note below)	10,000
				87,500

Note - Adjusted total income = Gross Total Income – Amount of deductions under section 80C to 80U except section 80G i.e., ₹ 6,00,000, in this case.

₹ 60,000, being 10% of adjusted total income is the qualifying limit, in this case.

Firstly, donation of ₹ 40,000 to approved institution for family planning qualifying for 100% deduction subject to qualifying limit, has to be adjusted against this amount. Thereafter, donation to public charitable trust qualifying for 50% deduction, subject to qualifying limit is adjusted. Hence, the contribution of ₹ 50,000 to public charitable trust is restricted to ₹ 20,000 (being, ₹ 60,000 - ₹ 40,000), 50% of which would be the deduction under section 80G. Therefore, the deduction under section 80G in respect of donation to public charitable trust would be ₹10,000, which is 50% of ₹ 20,000.

(13) Deduction in respect of rent paid [Section 80GG]

(i) Eligible assessee: Assessee, who is not in receipt of HRA qualifying for exemption under section 10(13A) from employer and who pays rent for accommodation occupied by him for residential purposes.

(ii) Conditions: The following conditions have to be satisfied for claiming deduction under section 80GG -

(a) The assessee should not be receiving any house rent allowance exempt under section 10(13A).

(b) The expenditure incurred by him on rent of any furnished or unfurnished accommodation should exceed 10% of his total income arrived at after all deductions under Chapter VI A except section 80GG.

(c) The accommodation should be occupied by the assessee for the purposes of his own residence.

(d) The assessee should fulfill such other conditions or limitations as may be prescribed, having regard to the area or place in which such accommodation is situated and other relevant considerations.

(e) The assessee or his spouse or his minor child or an HUF of which he is a member should not own any accommodation at the place where he ordinarily resides or perform duties of his office or employment or carries on his business or profession; or

(f) If the assessee owns any accommodation at any place other than that referred to above, such accommodation should not be in the occupation of the assessee and its annual value is not required to be determined under section 23(2)(a) or section 23(4)(a).

(g) The assessee should file a declaration in the prescribed form, confirming the details of rent paid and fulfillment of other conditions, with the return of income.

(iii) Quantum of deduction: The deduction admissible will be the least of the following:

(a) Actual rent paid minus 10% of the total income of the assessee before allowing the deduction, or

(b) 25% of such total income (arrived at after making all deductions under Chapter VI-A but before making any deduction under this section), or

(c) Amount calculated at ₹ 5,000 p.m.

ILLUSTRATION 15

Mr. Ganesh, a businessman, whose total income (before allowing deduction under section 80GG) for A.Y.2020-21 is ₹ 4,60,000, paid house rent at ₹ 12,000 p.m. in respect of residential accommodation occupied by him at Mumbai. Compute the deduction allowable to him under section 80GG for A.Y.2020-21.

SOLUTION

The deduction under section 80GG will be computed as follows:

(i) Actual rent paid less 10% of total income

$$₹\ 1{,}44{,}000\ (-)\ \frac{(10 \times 4{,}60{,}000)}{100} = ₹\ 98{,}000\ (A)$$

(ii) 25% of total income

$$\frac{25 \times 4{,}60{,}000}{100} = ₹\ 1{,}15{,}000\ (B)$$

(iii) Amount calculated at ₹ 5,000 p.m. = ₹ 60,000 (C)

Deduction allowable (least of A, B and C) = ₹ 60,000

(14) Deduction in respect of donations for scientific research or rural development [Section 80GGA]

(i) Eligible assessee: Section 80GGA grants deduction in respect of the donations made for scientific research or rural development by any assessee not having income chargeable under the head “Profits and gains of business or profession”.

(ii) Donations qualifying for deduction:

(a) Any sum paid by the assessee in the previous year to a research association which has, as its object, the undertaking of scientific research or to a University, college or other institution to be used for scientific research; and

Such research association, University, college or institution must be approved under section 35(1)(ii).

(b) Any sum paid to a research Association which has as its object the undertaking of research in social science or statistical research, University, College or other institution to be used for research in social science or statistical research.

Such Research Association, University, College or institution must be approved under section 35(1)(iii).

Further, it has been clarified that the deduction to which an assessee (i.e. donor) is entitled on account of payment of any sum to a research association or university or college or other institution for scientific research or research in a social science or statistical research, shall not be denied merely on the ground that subsequent to payment of such sum by the assessee, the approval granted to any of the aforesaid entities is withdrawn

(c) Any sum paid by the assessee in the previous year

- to an association or institution which has as its object the undertaking of any programme of rural development to be used for carrying out any programme of rural development approved by the prescribed authority for purposes of section 35CCA or
- to an institution or association which has as its object the training of persons for implementing programmes of rural development.

It is, however, essential that assessee furnishes the certificate from such institution or association as referred to in section 35CCA(2) & (2A).

Further, it has been clarified that the deduction to which an assessee (i.e. donor) is entitled on account of payment of any sum to an association or institution for carrying out the programme of rural development shall not be denied merely on the ground that subsequent to payment of such sum by the assessee, the approval granted to such programme is withdrawn

(d) Any sum paid to a public sector company or a local authority or to an association or institution approved by the National Committee for carrying out any eligible project or scheme.

(e) Any sum paid to a rural development fund set up and notified under section 35CCA.

(f) Any sum paid by the assessee in the previous year to National Urban Poverty Eradication Fund (NUPEF).

(iii) Restrictions on deduction:

(a) Where a deduction under this section is claimed and allowed for any assessment year, deduction shall not be allowed in respect of such payment under any provision of this Act for the same or any other assessment year.

(b) No deduction shall be allowed in respect of donation of any sum exceeding ₹ 10,000 unless such sum is paid by any mode other than cash.

(15) Deduction in respect of contributions given by companies to political parties [Section 80GGB]

(i) Deduction & Conditions: This section provides for deduction of any sum contributed in the previous year by an Indian company to any political party or an electoral trust. However, no deduction shall be allowed in respect of any sum contributed by way of cash.

(ii) Meaning of "contribute": For the purposes of this section, the word "contribute" has the same meaning assigned to it under section 293A of the Companies Act, 1956[3], which provides that -

(a) a donation or subscription or payment given by a company to a person for carrying on any activity which is likely to effect public support for a political party shall also be deemed to be contribution for a political purpose;

(b) the expenditure incurred, directly or indirectly, by a company on advertisement in any publication (being a publication in the nature of a souvenir, brochure, tract, pamphlet or the like) by or on behalf of a political party or for its advantage shall also be deemed to be a contribution to such political party or a contribution for a political purpose to the person publishing it.

(iii) Meaning of "Political party": It means a political party registered under section 29A of the Representation of the People Act, 1951.

ILLUSTRATION 16

During the P.Y.2019-20, ABC Ltd., an Indian company,

(1) contributed a sum of ₹ 2 lakh to an electoral trust; and

(2) incurred expenditure of ₹ 25,000 on advertisement in a brochure of a political party.

Is the company eligible for deduction in respect of such contribution/expenditure, assuming that the contribution was made by cheque? If so, what is the quantum of deduction?

SOLUTION

An Indian company is eligible for deduction under section 80GGB in respect of any sum contributed by it in the previous year to any political party or an electoral trust. Further, the word "contribute" in section 80GGB has the meaning assigned to it in section 293A of the Companies

[3] Now section 182 of the Companies Act, 2013

Act, 1956, and accordingly, it includes the amount of expenditure incurred on advertisement in a brochure of a political party.

Therefore, ABC Ltd. is eligible for a deduction of ₹ 2,25,000 under section 80GGB in respect of sum of ₹ 2 lakh contributed to an electoral trust and ₹ 25,000 incurred by it on advertisement in a brochure of a political party.

It may be noted that there is a specific disallowance under section 37(2B) in respect of expenditure incurred on advertisement in a brochure of a political party. Therefore, the expenditure of ₹ 25,000 would be disallowed while computing business income/ gross total income. However, the said expenditure incurred by an Indian company is allowable as a deduction from gross total income under section 80GGB.

(16) Deduction in respect of contributions given by any person to political parties [Section 80GGC]

(i) Deduction & Conditions: This section provides for deduction of any sum contributed in the previous year by any person to a political party or an electoral trust. However, no deduction shall be allowed in respect of any sum contributed by way of cash.

(ii) Persons not eligible for deduction: This deduction will, however, not be available to a local authority and an artificial juridical person, wholly or partly funded by the Government.

(iii) Meaning of "Political party": It means a political party registered under section 29A of the Representation of the People Act, 1951.

11.3 DEDUCTIONS IN RESPECT OF CERTAIN INCOMES

(1) Deductions in respect of profits and gains from undertakings or enterprises engaged in infrastructure development, etc. [Section 80-IA]

Applicability

Section 80-IA(1) provides a 10 year tax holiday to an assessee, whose gross total income includes any profits and gains derived by an undertaking or enterprise from an eligible business i.e., business referred to in sub-section (4), namely :

(i) Infrastructure facility - Any enterprise carrying on the business of:

(a) developing; or

(b) operating and maintaining; or

(c) developing, operating and maintaining any infrastructure facility.

Conditions: However, such enterprise must fulfill the following conditions:

(1) It must be owned by a company registered in India or by a consortium of such companies or by an authority or a board or a corporation or any other body established or constituted under any Central or State Act.

(2) It has entered into an agreement with the Central or a State Government or a local authority or statutory body for (i) developing or (ii) operating and maintaining, or (iii) developing, operating and maintaining a new infrastructure facility.

(3) It starts operating and maintaining such infrastructure facility on or after 1-4-1995.

(4) However, where an enterprise which developed such infrastructure facility transfers it to another enterprise on or after 1-4-1999, and such transferee enterprise operates and maintains it according to the agreement drawn up with the Government, etc., this section will apply to the transferee enterprise for the unexpired period of deduction (which was available to the first enterprise).

Meaning of "infrastructure facility":

Infrastructure facility means a road, including toll road, a bridge or a rail system

a port, airport, inland waterway or inland port or navigational channel in the ea a water supply project, water treatment system, irrigation project, sanitation and sewerage system or solid waste management system a highway project including housing or other activities being an integral part of the highway project

Note:

1. Structures at the ports for storage, loading and unloading etc. will be included in the definition of port for the purpose of section 80-IA, if the concerned port authority has issued a certificate that the said structures form part of the port.

2. Effluent treatment and conveyance system is a part of water treatment system and would accordingly, qualify as an infrastructure facility for the purpose of section 80-IA.

3. The CBDT has, vide Circular No. 4/2010 dated 18.5.2010, clarified that widening of an existing road by constructing additional lanes as a part of a highway project by an undertaking would be regarded as a new infrastructure facility for the purpose of section 80-IA(4)(i). However, simply relaying of an existing road would not be classifiable as a new infrastructure facility for this purpose.

Note – Any enterprise which starts the development or operation and maintenance of the infrastructure facility on or after 1.4.2017 will not be eligible for deduction under section 80-IA. Instead they would be eligible for investment-linked tax deduction under section 35AD.*

(ii) Industrial parks : Any undertaking which

- develops,
- develops and operates, or
- maintains and operates

an industrial park.

Conditions:

(1) The undertaking begins to operate an industrial park in accordance with the scheme framed and notified by the Central Government.

(2) The scheme is notified by the Government for the period beginning on 1-4-1997 and ending on 31-3-2011 for industrial parks

(3) However, where an undertaking develops an industrial park on or after 1.4.1999 and transfers the operation and maintenance to another undertaking (transferee undertaking), the deduction to the transferee undertaking shall be available for the remaining period in the ten consecutive assessment years, in such a manner as would have been available to the transferor undertaking, as if the operation and maintenance were not so transferred to the transferee undertaking.

Rule 18C lays down the following eligibility criteria for Industrial Parks to claim benefit under section 80-IA (4)(iii) -

(1) The undertaking should begin to develop, develop and operate or maintain and operate an industrial park any time during the period from 1.4.2006 to 31.3.2011.

(2) The undertaking and the Industrial Park should be notified by the Central Government under the Industrial Park Scheme, 2008.

(3) The undertaking should continue to fulfill the conditions envisaged in the Industrial Park Scheme, 2008.

(iii) Power undertakings: Any undertaking which is set up in any part of India for the generation or generation and distribution of power. However, such undertaking must begin to generate power at any time during the period between 1.4.1993 and 31.3.2017 starts transmission or distribution by laying a network of new transmission or distribution lines at any time during the period from 1.4.1999 and 31.3.2017. However, the deduction shall be allowed only in respect of profits derived from the laying of such network of new lines for transmission or distribution undertakes substantial renovation and modernisation of the existing network of transmission or distribution lines at any time during the period beginning on 1.4.2004 and ending on 31.3.2017

Meaning of "Substantial renovation and modernisation":

'Substantial renovation and modernisation' means an increase in the plant and machinery in the network of transmission or distribution lines by at least fifty per cent of the book value of such plant and machinery as on 1st April, 2004.

(iv) Undertakings owned by an Indian company and set up for reconstruction or revival of a power generating plant:

An undertaking owned by an Indian company and set up for reconstruction or revival of a power generating plant

Such Indian company should be formed before 30.11.2005 with majority equity participation by public sector companies for the purposes of enforcing the security interest of the lenders to the company owning the power generating plant

Such Indian company should have been notified before 31.12.2005 by the Central Government for the purposes of this clause

Such undertaking should begin to generate or transmit or distribute power before 31.3.2011

Rate of Deduction

The amount of deduction available will be 100% of the profits and gains derived from such business for ten consecutive assessment years commencing at any time during the periods specified in period of tax holiday/concession below.

Period of tax holiday/concession

	Eligible business	Period of tax holiday
1.	For all eligible business except business mentioned in point 2.	Assessee has the option to claim deduction for 10 consecutive assessment years out of 15 years beginning from the year in which the undertaking or the enterprise develops or begins to operate the infrastructure facility or develops industrial park or generates power or commences transmission or distribution of power or undertakes substantial renovation and modernization of the existing transmission or distribution lines.
2.	In case of an infrastructure facility being a public facility like – (i) a road, including a toll road, bridge or rail system; or (ii) a highway project including housing or other activities which are an integral part of the highway project; or (iii) a water supply project, water treatment system, irrigation project, sanitation and sewerage system or solid waste management system	Assessee has the option to claim deduction for 10 consecutive assessment years out of 20 years beginning from the year in which the undertaking or the enterprise develops or begins to operate the eligible business

Other provisions

(1) Eligible business to be considered as the only source of income: For the purpose of computing deduction under this section, the profits and gains of the eligible business shall be computed as if such eligible business were the only source of income of the assessee during the relevant previous years [Sub-section (5)].

(2) Conditions to exempt profit from housing or other activities, being integral part of highway project: Where housing or other activities are an integral part of a highway project and the profits and gains have been calculated in accordance with the section, the profits shall not be liable to tax if the following conditions have been fulfilled:

(a) The profit has been transferred to a special reserve account; and

(b) the same is actually utilised for the highway project excluding housing and other activities before the expiry of 3 years following the year of transfer to the reserve account;

(c) The amount remaining unutilised shall be chargeable to tax as income of the year in which the transfer to the reserve account took place [Sub-section (6)].

(3) Audit of accounts: The deduction shall be allowed to the undertaking only if the accounts of the undertaking for the relevant previous year have been audited by a chartered accountant and the assessee furnishes the audit report in the prescribed form, duly signed and verified by such accountant along with his return of income [Sub-section (7)].

(4) Transfer of goods/services between eligible business and other business of the assessee: Where any goods or services held for the purposes of the eligible business are transferred to any other business carried on by the assessee, or vice versa, and if the consideration for such transfer does not correspond with the market value of the goods or services then the profits and gains of the eligible business shall be computed as if the transfer was made at market value.

However, if, in the opinion of the Assessing Officer, such computation presents exceptional difficulties, the Assessing Officer may compute the profits on such reasonable basis as he may deem fit [Sub-section (8)].

For this purpose, the market value, in relation to any goods or services transferred between the eligible business and any other business carried on by the assessee, shall mean –

(i) the price that such goods or services would ordinarily fetch in the open market; or

(ii) the arm's length price as defined under section 92F, where the transfer of such goods or services is a specified domestic transaction referred to in section 92BA.

(5) Deduction not to exceed profits of eligible business: The deductions claimed and allowed under this section shall not exceed the profits and gains of the eligible business. Further, where deduction is claimed and allowed under this section for any assessment year no deduction in respect of such profits will be allowed under any other section under this chapter under the heading "Deductions in respect of certain incomes". [Sub-section (9)].

(6) Assessing Officer empowered to make adjustment in case any transaction produces excessive profits to eligible business: The Assessing Officer is empowered to make an adjustment while computing the profit and gains of the eligible business on the basis of the reasonable profit that can be derived from the transaction, in case due to close connection or for any other reason the transaction between the assessee carrying on the eligible business under section 80-IA and any other person is so arranged that the transaction produces excessive profits to the eligible business [Sub-section (10)].

If the aforesaid arrangement between the assessee carrying on the eligible business and any other person is a specified domestic transaction referred to in section 92BA, then, the amount of profit of such transaction shall be determined having regard to arm's length price as defined under section 92F and not as per the reasonable profit from such transaction.

(7) Central Government empowered to deny deduction to any class of eligible undertaking or enterprise: The section empowers the Central Government to declare any class of industrial undertaking or enterprise as not being entitled to deduction under this section. The denial of exemption shall be with effect from such date as may be specified in the notification issued in the Official Gazette [Sub-section (11)].

(8) Deduction in case of amalgamation or demerger: In the case of any amalgamation or demerger, by virtue of which the Indian company carrying on the eligible business is transferred to another Indian company, deduction under this section will be available as follows:

(a) No deduction will be available to the amalgamating company or the demerged company, as the case may be, in the year of amalgamation/ demerger.

(b) The provisions of this section will apply to the amalgamated/ resulting company as they would have applied to the amalgamating/ demerged company if the amalgamation/ demerger had not taken place [Sub-section (12)].

However, such transfer of benefit of deduction to the amalgamated/ resulting company would not be available in respect of any enterprise or undertaking which is transferred in a scheme of amalgamation or demerger effected on or after 1.4.2007 [Sub-section (12A)].

(9) No deduction to any business carrying on specified activities in the nature of a work contract: The tax holiday under section 80-IA would not be available in relation to a business referred to in sub-section (4) which is in the nature of a works contract awarded by any person (including the Central or State Government) and executed by the undertaking or enterprise referred to in section 80-IA(1).

(2) Deduction in respect of profits and gains by an undertaking or enterprise engaged in development of SEZ [Section 80-IAB]

(i) Quantum of deduction:

Sub-section (1) provides for a deduction of 100% of profits and gains derived by an undertaking or an enterprise from any business of developing a SEZ for 10 consecutive assessment years.

(ii) Eligible assessee:

The deduction is available to an assessee, being a Developer, whose gross total income includes any profits and gains derived by an undertaking or an enterprise from any business of developing a SEZ, notified on or after 1st April, 2005 under the SEZ Act, 2005.

Note - No deduction would be available to an assessee, being a developer, where the development of SEZ begins on or after 1st April, 2017.*

(iii) Meaning of Developer:

(a) a person who, or

(b) a State Government which has been granted a letter of approval by the Central Government under section 3(10) of the SEZ Act, 2005.

A developer includes –

(a) an authority and

(b) a Co-developer.

Co-developer means -

(a) a person who, or

(b) a State Government which has been granted a letter of approval by the Central Government under section 3(12) of the SEZ Act, 2005.

(iv) Option to choose 10 consecutive A.Y.s out of 15 years to claim deduction:

The assessee has the option of claiming the said deduction for any ten consecutive assessment years out of fifteen years beginning from the year in which a SEZ has been notified by the Central Government.

(v) Deduction to transferee in case of transfer of operation and maintenance of such SEZ:

In a case where an undertaking, being a Developer, who develops a SEZ on or after 1.4.2005 and transfers the operation and maintenance of such SEZ to another Developer, the deduction under sub-section (1) shall be allowed to such transferee Developer for the remaining period in the ten consecutive assessment years as if the operation and maintenance were not so transferred to the transferee Developer.

(vi) The provisions of sub-section (5) and sub-section (7) to (12) of section 80-IA shall apply to the Special Economic Zone for the purpose of allowing deductions under 80-IAB(1).

Lease rent from letting out buildings/developed space along with other amenities in an Industrial Park /SEZ - to be treated as business income [Circular No. 16/2017, dated 25.04.2017]

The issue whether income arising from letting out of premises/developed space along with other amenities in an Industrial Park/SEZ is to be charged under head 'Profits and Gains of Business' or under the head 'Income from House Property' has been subject matter of litigation in recent years. Assessees claim the letting out as business activity, the income arising from which to be charged to tax under the head 'Profits and Gains of Business', whereas the Assessing Officers hold it to be chargeable under the head 'Income from House Property'.

In the case of Velankani Information Systems Pvt Ltd (NJRS Citation [2013-LL-0402-44]), the Karnataka High Court observed that any other interpretation would defeat the object of section 80-IA and Government schemes for development of Industrial Parks in the country. SLPs filed in this case by the Department have been dismissed by the Supreme Court.

In a subsequent judgment dated 30.04.2014 in ITA No. 76 & 78/2012 in the case of CIT v. Information Technology Park Ltd. (NJRS Citation [2014-LL-0430-141], the Karnataka High Court has reaffirmed its earlier views. It has held that, since the assessee-company was engaged in the business of developing, operating and maintaining an Industrial Park and providing infrastructure facilities to different companies as its business, the lease rent received by the assessee from letting out buildings along with other amenities in a software technology park would be chargeable to tax under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" and not under the head "Income from house property". The judgment has been accepted by the CBDT.

In view of the above, it is now a settled position that in the case of an undertaking which develops, develops and operates or maintains and operates an industrial park/SEZ notified in accordance with the scheme framed and notified by the Government, the income from letting out of premises/developed space along with other facilities in an industrial park/SEZ is to be charged to tax under the head 'Profits and Gains of Business'.

(3) Tax incentives for new start-ups [Section 80-IAC]

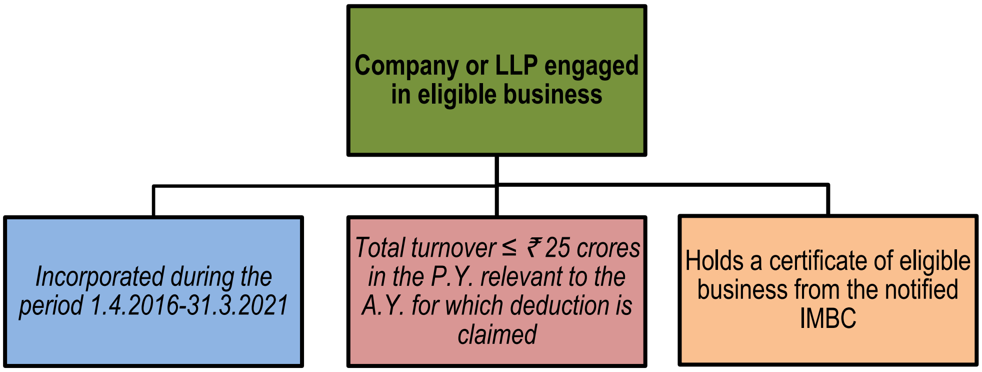
(i) Objective:

Section 80-IAC provides an incentive to start-ups in order to aid their growth in the early phase of their business.

(ii) Quantum of deduction:

Accordingly, a deduction of 100% of the profits and gains derived by an eligible start-up from an eligible business is allowed for any three consecutive assessment years out of seven years beginning from the year in which the eligible start up is incorporated.

(iii) Meaning of eligible start-up:



Company or LLP engaged in eligible business
Incorporated during the period 1.4.2016-31.3.2021
Total turnover ≤ ₹ 25 crores in the P.Y. relevant to the A.Y. for which deduction is claimed
Holds a certificate of eligible business from the notified IMBC

(iv) Meaning of eligible business:

A business carried out by an eligible start-up engaged in –

- Innovation, development or improvement of products or processes or services or
- a scalable business model with a high potential of employment generation or wealth creation

(v) Conditions to be fulfilled:

This incentive is available to an eligible start-up which fulfils the following conditions:

(1) It is not formed by splitting up, or the reconstruction, of a business already in existence.

Exception: However, this condition shall not apply in the case of an undertaking which is formed as a result of reconstruction, re-establishment or revival of the business of any undertaking which has been discontinued in any previous year due to extensive damage or destruction of any building, machinery, plant or furniture owned by the assessee and used for the purposes of such business. Further, the reason for damage or destruction is due to any natural calamity or other unforeseen circumstances such as the following:

(i) Flood, typhoon, hurricane, cyclone, earthquake or other natural calamity, or

(ii) riot or civil disturbance, or

(iii) accidental fire or explosion, or

(iv) enemy action or action taken in combat, and such business is re-established or revived within 3 years from the end of such previous year.

(2) It is not formed by the transfer to a new business of machinery or plant previously used for any purpose.

Exceptions: However, any machinery or plant which was used outside India by any person other than the assessee shall not be regarded as machinery or plant previously used for any purpose, if all the following conditions are fulfilled, namely:—

(a) such machinery or plant was not, at any time previous to the date of the installation by the assessee, used in India;

(b) such machinery or plant is imported into India;

(c) no deduction on account of depreciation in respect of such machinery or plant has been allowed or is allowable under the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 in computing the total income of any person for any period prior to the date of the installation of the machinery or plant by the assessee.

Further, where in the case of a start-up, any machinery or plant or any part thereof previously used for any purpose is transferred to a new business and the total value of the machinery or plant or part so transferred does not exceed 20% of the total value of the machinery or plant used in the business, then, the condition specified that it should not be formed by transfer to a new business of plant and machinery used for any purpose shall be deemed to have been complied with.

(vi) The provisions of sub-section (5) and sub-section (7) to (11) of section 80-IA shall apply to the start-ups for the purpose of allowing deductions under 80-IAC(1).

ILLUSTRATION 17

A (P) Ltd. was incorporated on 1.4.2017 and it holds a certificate of eligible business from the notified IMBC[4]. It is engaged in innovation of new products.

Its total turnover and profits and gains from such business for the P.Y.2017-18 to P.Y.2023-24 are as follows:

	(₹ in crores)
Total turnover	15.42	18.36	20.21	22.72	24.95	23.52	24.68
Profits/Losses	(2.52)	(1.37)	6.52	8.13	9.87	7.59	9.42

Is A (P) Ltd. eligible for any tax benefit under the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 for A.Y. 2020-21? If yes, what is the benefit available?

[4] Inter-Ministerial Board of Certification

SOLUTION

A (P) Ltd. is an eligible start-up, since –

(1) it is a company engaged in eligible business of innovation of new products.

(2) it is incorporated during the period 1.4.2016 to 31.3.2021.

(3) its total turnover does not exceed ₹ 25 crores in the relevant previous years for which deduction is claimed (i.e., P.Y.2019-20 to P.Y.2021-22 (or) P.Y.2020-21 to P.Y.2022-23 (or) P.Y.2021-22 to P.Y.2023-24)

(4) it holds a certificate of eligible business from the notified IMBC

Therefore, A (P) Ltd., being an eligible start-up, is eligible for deduction under section 80-IAC of 100% of the profits and gains derived by it from an eligible business for any three consecutive assessment years out of seven years beginning from the year in which the eligible start up is incorporated i.e., P.Y.2017-18.

In the first and second year i.e., P.Y.2017-18 and P.Y.2018-19, A (P) Ltd. has incurred a loss. In the current previous year i.e., P.Y.2019-20, A (P) Ltd. has earned profits from eligible business and can hence, claim 100% of its profits as deduction for any three consecutive assessment years under section 80-IAC from the P.Y.2019-20 to P.Y.2023-24. However, for P.Y.2019-20, the profits eligible for deduction would be the profits after set-off of brought forward losses of P.Y.2017-18 and P.Y. 2018-19.

(4) Deductions in respect of profits and gains from certain industrial undertakings other than infrastructure development undertakings, etc. [Section 80-IB]

Applicability

This section will be applicable to assessees, whose gross total income includes any profits and gains derived from any of the following business activities -

(1) An industrial undertaking including a small scale industrial undertaking (SSI) in Jammu and Kashmir

(2) An undertaking which begins commercial production of mineral oil or commercial production of natural gas in licensed blocks.

(3) An undertaking deriving profits from the business of processing, preservation and packaging of fruits or vegetables or meat and meat products or poultry or marine or dairy products or from the integrated business of handling, storage and transportation of foodgrains.

Conditions to be fulfilled, amount of deduction and period of deduction

The rate and period of deduction and the conditions required to be satisfied by the different categories of businesses are given below:

(1) An industrial undertaking including a small scale industrial undertaking (SSI) in Jammu and Kashmir [Sub-sections (2) and (4)]

Conditions: In order to be eligible to claim deduction under section 80-IB, an industrial undertaking must fulfill the following conditions:

(i) It manufactures or produces any article or thing or operates a cold storage plant.

(ii) In case of a manufacturing industrial unit, it should employ 10 or more workers (if manufacture is carried on with the aid of power), or 20 or more workers (if manufacture is carried on without the aid of power).

Quantum and period of deduction: The amount of deduction for an industrial undertaking in Jammu and Kashmir will be 100% of the profits and gains derived from such industrial undertaking for the initial 5 years and thereafter 25% of such profits and gains (in case of a company, the rate is 30%)

The total period of deduction should not exceed 10 consecutive assessment years provided the industrial undertaking begins manufacture or production of articles or things or operation of cold storage plant between 1-4-1993 and 31-3-2012. Admissibility of deduction under Chapter VI-A on the profits enhanced due to disallowance of expenditure related to business activity [Circular No.37/2016, Dated 02.11.2016]

Chapter VI-A of the Income-tax Act, 1961, provides for deductions in respect of certain incomes. In computing the profits and gains of a business activity, the Assessing Officer may make certain disallowances, such as disallowances pertaining to sections 32, 40(a)(ia), 40A(3), 43B etc., of the Act. At times, disallowance out of specific expenditure claimed may also be made. The effect of such disallowances is an increase in the profits.

The issue is whether such higher profits would also result in claim for a higher profit-linked deduction under Chapter VI-A.

The courts have generally held that if the expenditure disallowed is related to the business activity against which the Chapter VI-A deduction has been claimed, the deduction needs to be allowed on the enhanced profits. Some illustrative cases upholding this view are as follows:

(i) If an expenditure incurred by assessee for the purpose of developing a housing project was not allowable on account of non-deduction of TDS under law, such disallowance would ultimately increase assessee's profits from business of developing housing project. The ultimate profits of assessee after adjusting disallowance under section 40(a)(ia) would qualify for deduction under section 80-IB.

(ii) If deduction under section 40A(3) is not allowed, the same would have to be added to the profits of the undertaking on which the assessee would be entitled for deduction under section 80-IB.

In view of the aforesaid judgements, the CBDT has accepted the settled position that the disallowances made under sections 32, 40(a)(ia), 40A(3), 43B, etc. and other specific disallowances, related to the business activity against which the Chapter VI-A deduction has been claimed, result in enhancement of the profits of the eligible business, and that deduction under Chapter VI-A is admissible on the profits so enhanced by the disallowance.

Transport, Power and Interest subsidies received by an Industrial Undertaking - Eligibility for deduction under sections 80-IB, 80-IC etc., [Circular No. 39/2016, dated 29.11.2016]

The issue of whether revenue receipts such as transport, power and interest subsidies received by an Industrial Undertaking/ eligible business are part of profits and gains of business derived from its business activities within the meaning of sections 80-IB/ 80-IC of the Income-tax Act, 1961 and, thus, eligible for claim of corresponding deduction under Chapter VI-A of the Act has been a contentious one. Such receipts are often treated as 'Income from other sources' by the Assessing Officers.

The Hon'ble Supreme Court in its judgment dated 9.3.2016 in the case of Meghalaya Steels Ltd and other cases has held that the subsidies of transport, power and interest given by the Government to the Industrial Undertaking are receipts which have been reimbursed for elements of cost relating to manufacture/sale of the products. Thus, there is a direct nexus between profit and gains of the industrial undertaking/business and reimbursement of such business subsidies. Accordingly, such subsidies are part of profits and gains of business derived from the Industrial Undertaking and are not to be included under the head 'Income from other sources'. Therefore, deduction is admissible under section 80-1B/ 80-IC of the Act on such revenue receipts derived from the Industrial Undertaking.

In view of the above, the CBDT has clarified that revenue subsidies received from the Government towards reimbursement of cost of production/ manufacture or for sale of the manufactured goods are part of profits and gains of business derived from the Industrial Undertaking/ eligible business, and are thus, admissible for applicable deduction under Chapter VI-A of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

		(e) an employee who does not participate in the recognised provident fund. Note – If an employee is employed during the previous year for less than 240 days or 150 days, as the case may be, but is employed for a period of 240 days or 150 days, as the case may be, in the immediately succeeding year, he shall be deemed to have been employed in the succeeding year. Accordingly, the employer would be entitled to deduction of 30% of additional employee cost of such employees in the succeeding year.
(c)	Emoluments	any sum paid or payable to an employee in lieu of his employment by whatever name called. Exclusions from the definition: (a) any contribution paid or payable by the employer to any pension fund or provident fund or any other fund for the benefit of the employee under any law for the time being in force; and (b) any lump-sum payment paid or payable to an employee at the time of termination of his service or superannuation or voluntary retirement, such as gratuity, severance pay, leave encashment, voluntary retrenchment benefits, commutation of pension and the like.

ILLUSTRATION 18

Mr. A has commenced the business of manufacture of computers on 1.4.2019. He employed 350 new employees during the P.Y.2019-20, the details of whom are as follows –

	No. of employees	Date of employment	Regular/Casual	Total monthly emoluments per employee (₹)
(i)	75	1.4.2019	Regular	24,000
(ii)	125	1.5.2019	Regular	26,000
(iii)	50	1.8.2019	Casual	25,500
(iv)	100	1.9.2019	Regular	24,000

The regular employees participate in recognized provident fund while the casual employees do not. Compute the deduction, if any, available to Mr. A for A.Y.2020-21, if the profits and gains derived from manufacture of computers that year is ₹ 75 lakhs and his total turnover is ₹ 2.16 crores.

What would be your answer if Mr. A has commenced the business of manufacture of footwear on 1.4.2019?

SOLUTION

Mr. A is eligible for deduction under section 80JJAA since he is subject to tax audit under section 44AB for A.Y.2020-21, as his total turnover from business exceeds ₹ 1 crore and he has employed “additional employees” during the P.Y.2019-20.

I If Mr. A is engaged in the business of manufacture of computers

Additional employee cost = ₹ 24,000 × 12 × 75 [See Working Note below] = ₹ 2,16,00,000

Deduction under section 80JJAA = 30% of ₹ 2,16,00,000 = ₹ 64,80,000.

Total number of employees employed during the year		350
Less: Casual employees employed on 1.8.2019 who do not participate in recognized provident fund	50
Regular employees employed on 1.5.2019, since their total monthly emoluments exceed ₹ 25,000	125
Regular employees employed on 1.9.2019 since they have been employed for less than 240 days in the P.Y.2019-20.	100	275
Number of “additional employees”		75

Notes –

(i) Since casual employees do not participate in recognized provident fund, they do not qualify as additional employees. Further, 125 regular employees employed on 1.5.2019 also do not qualify as additional employees since their monthly emoluments exceed ₹ 25,000. Also, 100 regular employees employed on 1.9.2019 do not qualify as additional employees for the P.Y.2019-20, since they are employed for less than 240 days in that year.

Therefore, only 75 employees employed on 1.4.2019 qualify as additional employees, and the total emoluments paid or payable to them during the P.Y.2019-20 is deemed to be the additional employee cost.

(ii) As regards 100 regular employees employed on 1.9.2019, they would be treated as additional employees for previous year 2020-21, if they continue to be employees in that year for a minimum period of 240 days. Accordingly, 30% of additional employee cost in respect of such employees would be allowable as deduction under section 80JJAA in the hands of Mr. A for the A.Y. 2021-22.

II If Mr. A is engaged in the business of manufacture of footwear

If Mr. A is engaged in the business of manufacture of footwear, then, he would be entitled to deduction under section 80JJAA in respect of employee cost of regular employees employed on 1.9.2019, since they have been employed for more than 150 days in the previous year 2019-20.

Additional employee cost = ₹ 2,16,00,000 + ₹ 24,000 × 7 × 100 = ₹ 3,84,00,000

Deduction under section 80JJAA = 30% of ₹ 3,84,00,000 = ₹ 1,15,20,000

(10) Deduction in respect of certain income of Offshore Banking Units and International Financial Services Centre [Section 80LA]

(i) Eligible assessee:

This section is applicable to the following assessees -

(a) a scheduled bank having an Offshore Banking Unit in a SEZ; or

(b) any bank, incorporated by or under the laws of a country outside India, and having an Offshore Banking Unit in a SEZ; or

(c) a Unit of an International Financial Services Centre (IFSC).

(ii) Eligible income qualifying for deduction:

The deduction will be allowed on account of the following income included in the gross total income of such assessees -

(a) income from an Offshore Banking Unit in a SEZ; or

(b) income from the business referred to in section 6(1) of the Banking Regulation Act, 1949, with -

(1) an undertaking located in a SEZ or

(2) any other undertaking which develops, develops and operates or develops, operates and maintains a SEZ; or

(c) income from any Unit of the IFSC from its business for which it has been approved for setting up in such a Centre in a SEZ.

(iii) Quantum and period of deduction:

(iv) Conditions:

The following conditions have to be fulfilled for claiming deduction under this section-

(a) The report of a Chartered Accountant in the prescribed form certifying that the deduction has been correctly claimed in accordance with the provisions of this section, should be submitted along with the return of income.

(b) A copy of the permission obtained under section 23(1)(a) of the Banking Regulation Act, 1949 should also be furnished along with the return of income.

(11) Deduction in respect of income of co-operative societies [Section 80P]

(i) Applicability:

Under this section, certain specified income of a co-operative society would be allowed as a deduction, provided such income is included in the gross total income of the society.

(ii) Eligible income for deduction and quantum of deduction:

Deduction in respect of profit attributable to certain specified activities

100% deduction shall be allowed in respect of profits and gains attributable to any one or more of the following activities to a co-operative society engaged in -

(1) carrying on the business of banking or providing credit facilities to its members; or

(2) a cottage industry; or

(3) the marketing of the agricultural produce grown by its members; or

(4) the purchase of agricultural implements, seeds, livestock or other articles intended for agriculture or for the purpose of supplying them to its members; or

(5) the processing without the aid of power, of the agricultural produce of its members; or

(6) the collective disposal of the labour to its member; or

(7) fishing and other allied pursuits, such as catching, curing, processing, preserving, storing and marketing of fish or the purchase of materials and equipment in connection therewith for the purpose of supplying them to their members.

However, the exemption in respect of income referred to in (6) or (7) will be available only in the case of those co-operative societies which, under their rules and by-laws, restrict the voting rights to

(i) members who contribute their labour force or who actually carry on the fishing or other allied activities,

(ii) the co-operative credit societies which provide financial assistance to the society and

(iii) the State Government.

Deduction in respect of profit of primary co-operative societies

100% of the profits and gains of the business would be allowed as deduction from the gross total income of the co-operative society in case of a primary co-operative society engaged in supplying milk, oilseeds, fruits or vegetables raised or grown by its members to –

- a federal co-operative society engaged in supplying milk, oilseeds, fruits or vegetables, as the case may be, or
- the Government or a local authority or
- a Government company as defined in section 617[5] of the Companies Act, 1956 or a corporation established by or under a Central, State or Provincial Act (engaged in supplying milk, oilseeds, fruits or vegetables, as the case may be, to the public),

Deduction in respect of other activities

A co-operative society which is engaged in activities other than to those mentioned above either independently of, or in addition to, all or any of the activities so specified, is eligible for deduction upto ₹ 50,000 to the extent of its business income arising from other activities. The limit is ₹ 1,00,000 in the case of consumer co-operative societies.

[5] As defined in section 2(45) of the Companies Act, 2013

For this purpose, consumer co-operative society means a society for the benefit of the consumers.

Deduction in respect of Interest or dividend income

Any income arising to a co-operative society by way of any interest and dividends derived from its investments with any other co-operative society is deductible in full under this section.

Deduction in respect of letting-out income for certain purpose

The income derived by a co-operative society from the letting out of godowns or warehouses for storage, processing or facilitating the marketing of commodities is fully allowable as deduction.

Deduction in respect of interest on securities and income from house property to certain co-operative societies

Any income arising to a co-operative society by way of 'Interest on securities' or 'Income from house property' (chargeable under section 22) is fully deductible under this section where the gross total income of the co-operative society does not exceed ₹ 20,000 and it is not a housing society or an urban consumer's society or a society carrying on transport business or a society engaged in the performance of any manufacturing operations with the aid of power. Thus, a majority of small co-operative societies would not have to pay any income-tax.

(iii) Meaning of urban consumers' co-operative society:

It means a society for the benefit of the consumers within the limits of a municipal corporation, municipality, municipal committee, notified area committee, town area or cantonment.

(iv) Deduction under other section of Chapter VI-A of the Act:

Where the co-operative society is also entitled to the deduction available under section 80-IA, the deduction under this section shall be allowed with reference to the gross total income as reduced by the deduction allowable under section 80-IA.

(v) Non-eligible co-operative societies:

The benefit under section 80P has been withdrawn in respect of all co-operative banks, other than primary agricultural credit societies (i.e. as defined in Part V of the Banking Regulation Act, 1949) and primary co-operative agricultural and rural development banks (i.e. societies having its area of operation confined to a taluk and the principal object of which is to provide for long-term credit for agricultural and rural development activities). This is for the purpose of treating co-operative banks at par with other commercial banks, which do not enjoy similar tax benefits.

(vi) Regional Rural Banks not eligible for deduction under section 80P:

The CBDT has, through Circular No. 6/2010 dated 20.9.2010, reiterated that Regional Rural Banks are not eligible for deduction under section 80P of the Income-tax Act, 1961 from the assessment year 2007-08 onwards. It has also been clarified that the Circular No. 319 dated 11-1-1982 deeming any Regional Rural Bank to be cooperative society stands withdrawn for application with effect from A.Y.2007-08.

This is consequent to the amendment in section 80P by the Finance Act, 2006, providing specifically that w.e.f. 1-4-2007, the provisions of section 80P will not apply to any co-operative bank other than a Primary Agricultural Credit Society or a Primary Cooperative Agricultural and Rural Development Bank. The same has been further clarified by this circular.

(12) Deduction in respect of certain income of Producer Companies [Section 80PA]

(i) Applicability:

Under section 80P, 100% deduction is available in respect of profits of co-operative society which provide assistance to its members engaged in primary agricultural activities.

A similar benefit has been extended, by insertion of new section 80PA, to Farm Producer Companies (FPC), having a total turnover of less than ₹ 100 crore in any previous year, whose gross total income includes any profits and gains derived from eligible business.

(ii) Meaning of Eligible Business:

Eligible business means -

(a) the marketing of agricultural produce grown by its members, or

(b) the purchase of agricultural implements, seeds, livestock or other articles intended for agriculture for the purpose of supplying them to its members, or

(c) the processing of the agricultural produce of its members

(iii) Quantum of deduction:

100% of profits and gains attributable to eligible business for the previous year relevant to A.Y.2019-20 to A.Y.2024-25

In a case where the assessee is entitled also to deduction under any other provision of Chapter VI-A, the deduction under this section shall be allowed with reference to the income, if any, as referred to in this section included in the gross total income as reduced by the deductions under such other provision of this Chapter.

(iv) Meaning of certain terms:

	Term	Meaning [Section 581A of the Companies Act, 1956]
(i)	Member	A person or Producer institution (whether incorporated or not) admitted as a Member of a Producer Company and who retains the qualifications necessary for continuance as such.

(ii)	Producer Company	A body corporate having objects or activities specified in section 581B of the Companies Act, 1956 and registered as Producer Company under that Act. As per section 581B of the Companies Act, 1956, the objects of the Producer Company shall relate to all or any of the following matters, namely:-- (a) production, harvesting, procurement, grading, pooling, handling, marketing, selling, export of primary produce of the Members or import of goods or services for their benefit: However, the Producer Company may carry on any of the activities specified in this clause either by itself or through other institution; (b) processing including preserving, drying, distilling, brewing, vinting, canning and packaging of produce of its Members; (c) manufacture, sale or supply of machinery, equipment or consumables mainly to its Members; (d) providing education on the mutual assistance principles to its Members and others; (e) rendering technical services, consultancy services, training, research and development and all other activities for the promotion of the interests of its Members; (f) generation, transmission and distribution of power, revitalisation of land and water resources, their use, conservation and communications relatable to primary produce; (g) insurance of producers or their primary produce; (h) promoting techniques of mutuality and mutual assistance; (i) welfare measures or facilities for the benefit of Members as may be decided by the Board; (j) any other activity, ancillary or incidental to any of the activities referred to in clauses (a) to (i) or other activities which may promote the principles of mutuality and mutual assistance amongst the Members in any other manner; (k) financing of procurement, processing, marketing or other activities specified in clauses (a) to (j) which include extending of credit facilities or any other financial services to its Members. Section 581B(2) provides that every Producer Company shall deal primarily with the produce of its active Members for carrying out any of its objects specified in this section. "Active Member" means a member who fulfils the quantum and period of patronage of the Producer Company as may be required by the articles.

(13) Deduction in respect of royalty income, etc., of authors of certain books other than text books [Section 80QQB]

(i) Eligible assessee and Quantum of deduction: Under section 80QQB, deduction of up to a maximum ₹ 3,00,000 is allowed to an individual resident in India, being an author including a joint author in respect of income derived by him in the exercise of his profession i.e., the deduction shall be the income derived as author or ₹ 3,00,000, whichever is less.

(ii) Eligible income:

(a) This income may be received either by way of a lumpsum consideration for the assignment or grant of any of his interests in the copyright of any book.

(b) Such book should be a work of literary, artistic or scientific nature, or of royalties or copyright fees (whether receivable in lump sum or otherwise) in respect of such book.

(c) This deduction shall not, however, be available in respect of royalty income from brochures, commentaries, diaries, guides, journals, magazines, newspapers, pamphlets, textbook for schools, tracts and other publications of similar nature.

Note - Where an assessee claims deduction under this section, no deduction in respect of the same income may be claimed under any other provision of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

(iii) Manner of computation of deduction: For the purpose of calculating the deduction under this section, the amount of eligible income (royalty or copyright fee received otherwise than by way of lumpsum) before allowing expenses attributable to such income, shall not exceed 15% of the value of the books sold during the relevant previous year.

However, this condition is not applicable where the royalty or copyright fees is receivable in lump sum in lieu of all rights of the author in the book.

(iv) Conditions:

(a) Furnishing of certificate in prescribed form: For claiming the deduction, the assessee shall have to furnish a certificate in the prescribed manner in the prescribed format, duly verified by the person responsible for making such payment, setting forth such particulars as may be prescribed.

(b) Period for repatriation of income earned outside India: Where the assessee earns any income from any source outside India, he should bring such income into India in convertible foreign exchange within a period of six months from the end of the previous year in which such income is earned or within such further period as the competent authority may allow in this behalf for the purpose of claiming deduction under this section.

The competent authority shall mean the Reserve Bank of India or such other authority as is authorised under any law for the time being in force for regulating payments and dealings in foreign exchange.

(14) Deduction in respect of royalty on patents [Section 80RRB]

(i) Eligible assessee: This deduction shall be available only to a resident individual who is registered as the true and first inventor in respect of an invention under the Patents Act, 1970, including the co-owner of the patent and earning income by way of royalty of a patent registered on or after 1.4.2003.

(ii) Quantum of deduction: This section allows deduction to a resident individual in respect of income by way of royalty of a patent registered on or after 1.4.03 up to an amount of ₹ 3 lakhs.

> Note - No deduction in respect of such income will be allowed under any other provision of the Income-tax Act, 1961

(iii) Eligible income: This deduction shall be restricted to the royalty income including consideration for transfer of rights in the patent or for providing information for working or use of a patent, use of a patent or the rendering of any services in connection with these activities.

The deduction shall not be available on any consideration for sale of product manufactured with the use of the patented process or patented article for commercial use.

(iv) Conditions:

(a) In respect of any such income which is earned from sources outside India, the deduction shall be restricted to such sum as is brought to India in convertible foreign exchange within a period of 6 months or extended period as is allowed by the competent authority (Reserve Bank of India).

(b) For claiming this deduction the assessee shall be required to furnish a certificate in the prescribed form signed by the prescribed authority, alongwith the return of income.

(v) Rectification of assessment where patent is revoked subsequently: Where the patent is subsequently revoked or the name of the assessee was excluded from the patents register as patentee in respect of that patent, the deduction allowed during the period shall be deemed to have been wrongly allowed and the assessment shall be rectified under the provisions of section 155.

The period of 4 years for rectification shall be reckoned from the end of the previous year in which the order of the revocation of the patent is passed.

11.4 DEDUCTIONS IN RESPECT OF OTHER INCOME

(1) Deduction in respect of interest on deposits in savings accounts [Section 80TTA]

(i) Eligible assessee and Quantum of deduction: Section 80TTA provides that in case the gross total income of an assessee, being an individual or a Hindu Undivided Family, includes any income by way of an interest on deposits in a saving account (not being time deposits, which are deposits repayable on expiry of fixed periods), deduction up to ₹ 10,000 in aggregate shall be allowed while computing the total income of such assessee. Such deduction shall be allowed in case the saving account is maintained with:

(a) a banking company to which the Banking Regulation Act, 1949, applies (including any bank or banking institution referred to in section 51 of that Act);

(b) a co-operative society engaged in carrying on the business of banking (including a co-operative land mortgage bank or a co-operative land development bank); or

(c) a post office.

Note - Deduction under this section would, however, not be available to a resident senior citizen eligible for deduction under section 80TTB.

(ii) Restriction: If the aforesaid income is derived from any deposit in a savings account held by, or on behalf of, a firm, an AOP/BOI, no deduction shall be allowed in respect of such income in computing the total income of any partner of the firm or any member of the AOP or any individual of the BOI.

In effect, the deduction under this section shall be allowed only in respect of the income derived in form of the interest on the saving bank deposit (other than time deposits) made by the individual or Hindu Undivided Family directly.

(2) Deduction in respect of interest on deposits in case of senior citizens [Section 80TTB]

(i) Eligible assessee: A senior citizen (a resident individual who is of the age of 60 years or more at any time during the relevant previous year), whose gross total income includes income by way of interest on deposits with –

(a) a banking company to which Banking Regulation Act, 1949 applies

(b) a co-operative society engaged in carrying on the business of banking (including a co-operative land mortgage bank or a co-operative land development bank)

(c) a Post Office.

(ii) Quantum of deduction: Actual amount of interest on deposits or ₹ 50,000, whichever is lower.

(iii) Non-availability of deduction to partner/member, where deposit held by firm/AOP/BOI: Where interest income is derived from any deposit held by, or on behalf of, a firm, an AOP or a BOI, the partner of the firm or member of AOP/BOI would not be allowed deduction in respect of such income while computing their total income.

ILLUSTRATION 19

Mr. A, a resident individual aged about 61 years, has earned business income (computed) of ₹ 1,35,000, lottery income of ₹ 1,20,000 (gross) during the P.Y. 2019-20. He also has interest on Fixed Deposit of ₹ 30,000 with banks. He invested an amount of ₹ 1,50,000 in Public Provident Fund account. What is the total income of Mr. A for the A.Y.2020-21?

SOLUTION

Computation of total income of Mr. A for A.Y.2020-21

Particulars	₹	₹
Profits and gains of business or profession		1,35,000
Income from other sources
- Interest on Fixed Deposit with banks		30,000
- lottery income		1,20,000
Gross Total Income		2,85,000
Less: Deductions under Chapter VIA [See Note below]
Under section 80C
- Deposit in Public Provident Fund	1,50,000
Under section 80TTB
- Interest on fixed deposits with banks	30,000
	1,80,000
Restricted to		1,65,000
Total Income		1,20,000

Note: In case of resident individuals of the age of 60 years or more, interest on bank fixed deposits qualifies for deduction upto ₹ 50,000 under section 80TTB.

Though the value of eligible deductions is ₹ 1,80,000, however, deduction under Chapter VI-A cannot exceed the gross total income exclusive of long term capital gains taxable under section 112 and section 112A, short-term capital gains covered under section 111A and winnings of lotteries of the assessee.

Therefore, the maximum permissible deduction under Chapter VI-A = ₹ 2,85,000 – ₹ 1,20,000 = ₹ 1,65,000.

ILLUSTRATION 20

Mr. Gurnam, aged 42 years, has salary income (computed) of ₹ 5,50,000 for the previous year ended 31.03.2020. He has earned interest of ₹ 14,500 on the saving bank account with State Bank of India during the year. Compute the total income of Mr. Gurnam for the assessment year 2020-21 from the following particulars:

(i) Life insurance premium paid to Birla Sunlife Insurance in cash amounting to ₹ 25,000 for insurance of life of his dependant parents. The insurance policy was taken on 15.07.2017 and the sum assured on life of his dependant parents is ₹ 2,00,000.

(ii) Life insurance premium of ₹ 25,500 paid for the insurance of life of his major son who is not dependant on him. The sum assured on life of his son is ₹ 2,50,000 and the life insurance policy was taken on 30.3.2012.

(iii) Life insurance premium paid by cheque of ₹ 22,500 for insurance of his life. The insurance policy was taken on 08.09.2016 and the sum assured is ₹ 2,00,000.

(iv) Premium of ₹ 26,000 paid by cheque for health insurance of self and his wife.

(v) ₹ 1,500 paid in cash for his health check-up and ₹ 4,500 paid in cheque for health check-up for his parents, who are senior citizens.

(vi) Paid interest of ₹ 6,500 on loan taken from bank for MBA course pursued by his daughter.

(vii) A sum of ₹ 15,000 donated in cash to an institution approved for purpose of section 80G for promoting family planning.

SOLUTION

Computation of total income of Mr. Gurnam for the Assessment Year 2020-21

Particulars	₹	₹	₹
Income from salary			5,50,000
Interest on saving bank deposit			14,500
Gross Total Income			5,64,500
Less: Deduction under Chapter VI-A
Under section 80C (See Note 1)
Life insurance premium paid for life insurance of:
- major son	25,500
- self ₹ 22,500 restricted to 10% of ₹ 2,00,000	20,000	45,500
Under section 80D (See Note 2)
Premium paid for ₹ 26,000 health insurance of self and wife by cheque, restricted to	25,000
Payment made for health check-up for parents:	4,500	29,500

Under section 80E
For payment of interest on loan taken from bank for MBA course of his daughter		6,500
Under section 80TTA (See Note 4)
Interest on savings bank account ₹ 14,500 restricted to		10,000	91,500
Total Income			4,73,000

Notes:

(1) As per section 80C, no deduction is allowed in respect of premium paid for life insurance of parents whether they are dependant or not. Therefore, no deduction is allowable in respect of ₹ 25,000 paid as premium for life insurance of dependant parents of Mr. Gurnam.

In respect of insurance policy issued on or after 01.04.2012, deduction shall be allowed for life insurance premium paid only to the extent of 10% of sum assured. In case the insurance policy is issued before 01.04.2012, deduction of premium paid on life insurance policy shall be allowed up to 20% of sum assured.

Therefore, in the present case, deduction of ₹ 25,500 is allowable in respect of life insurance of Mr. Gurnam's son since the insurance policy was issued before 01.04.2012 and the premium amount is less than 20% of ₹ 2,50,000. However, in respect of premium paid for life insurance policy of Mr. Gurnam himself, deduction is allowable only up to 10% of ₹ 2,00,000 since the policy was issued after 01.04.2012 and the premium amount exceeds 10% of sum assured.

(2) As per section 80D, in case the premium is paid in respect of health of a person specified therein and for health check-up of such person, deduction shall be allowed up to ₹ 25,000. Further, deduction up to ₹ 5,000 in aggregate shall be allowed in respect of health check-up of self, spouse, children and parents. In order to claim deduction under section 80D, the payment for health-checkup can be made in any mode including cash. However, the payment for health insurance premium has to be paid in any mode other than cash.

Therefore, in the present case, in respect of premium of ₹ 26,000 paid for health insurance of self and wife, deduction would be restricted to ₹ 25,000. Since the limit of ₹ 25,000 has been exhausted against medical insurance premium, no deduction is allowable for preventive health check-up for self and wife. However, deduction of ₹ 4,500 is allowable in respect of health check-up of his parents, since it falls within the limit of ₹ 5,000.

(3) No deduction shall be allowed under section 80G in case the donation is made in cash of a sum exceeding ₹ 2,000. Therefore, deduction under section 80G is not allowable in respect of cash donation of ₹ 15,000 made to an institution approved for the purpose of section 80G for promotion of family planning.

(4) As per section 80TTA, deduction shall be allowed from the gross total income of an individual or Hindu Undivided Family in respect of income by way of interest on deposit in the savings account included in the assessee's gross total income, subject to a maximum of ₹ 10,000. Therefore, a deduction of ₹ 10,000 is allowable from the gross total income of Mr. Gurnam, though the interest from savings bank account is ₹ 14,500.

11.5 OTHER DEDUCTIONS

Deduction in the case of a person with disability [Section 80U]

(1) Section 80U harmonizes the criteria for defining disability as existing under the Income-tax Rules with the criteria prescribed under the Persons with Disability (Equal Opportunities, Protection of Rights and Full Participation) Act, 1995.

(2) Eligible assessee: This section is applicable to a resident individual, who, at any time during the previous year, is certified by the medical authority to be a person with disability.

The benefit of deduction under this section has also been extended to persons suffering from autism, cerebral palsy and multiple disabilities.

(3) Quantum of deduction A deduction of ₹ 75,000 in respect of a person with disability and ₹ 1,25,000 in respect of a person with severe disability (having disability over 80%) is allowable under this section.

(4) Conditions:

(a) The assessee claiming a deduction under this section shall furnish a copy of the certificate issued by the medical authority in the form and manner, as may be prescribed, along with the return of income under section 139, in respect of the assessment year for which the deduction is claimed.

(b) Where the condition of disability requires reassessment, a fresh certificate from the medical authority shall have to be obtained after the expiry of the period mentioned on the original certificate in order to continue to claim the deduction.

Life Insurance Premium (See Note 1)	15,000
Contribution to Public Provident fund (See Note 2)	Nil
Tuition fee of 2 sons for graduation course (See Note 3)	16,000
Housing loan principal repayment (See Notes 4 & 5)	Nil
Senior Citizen Savings Scheme deposit (See Note 6)	15,000
Post Office Time Deposit Scheme (See Note 6)	50,000
Investment in National Savings Certificate	70,000
Total Investment	1,66,000
Eligible deduction under section 80C restricted to	1,50,000

Notes:

1. Any amount of life insurance premium paid in excess of the specified percentage of actual capital sum assured shall be ignored for the purpose of deduction under section 80C. In the given case, since the insurance policy has been issued before 1.04.2012, therefore, premium paid upto 20% of actual capital sum assured i.e., ₹ 28,000 shall be allowed as deduction. Hence, the premium of ₹ 15,000 paid during the year is allowable as deduction under section 80C.

2. In the case of an individual, contribution to PPF can be made in his name or in the name of his spouse or children to qualify for deduction under section 80C. As the contribution was made in the name of his father, deduction is not allowable.

3. Tuition fee paid is eligible for deduction under section 80C for a maximum of two children. Therefore, ₹ 16,000 shall be allowed as deduction. Tuition fee paid to an educational institution situated outside India is not eligible for deduction.

4. In order to claim the principal repayment on loan borrowed for house property as deduction, the construction of such property should have been completed and should be chargeable to tax under the head "Income from house property". In the given case, since the property is under construction, principal repayment does not qualify for deduction.

5. Repayment of principal on housing loan is not allowed as deduction in case the loan is borrowed from friends, relatives etc. In order to qualify for deduction, the loan should have been obtained from Central Government / State Government / bank / specified employer / institution.

6. The following investments are also eligible for deduction under section 80C:-

   (1) five year time deposit in an account under Post Office Time Deposit Rules, 1981; and

   (2) deposit in an account under the Senior Citizens Savings Scheme Rules, 2004.

Question 2

X Ltd. has two units, unit 'N' and unit 'Y'. Unit 'N' engaged in the business of power generation installed a windmill in March, 2018 and had a profit of ₹ 100 lakhs in Assessment Year 2020-21. X Ltd. claimed depreciation of ₹ 120 lakhs on windmill against the profit of ₹ 100 lakhs from power generation business which was eligible for deduction under section 80-IA. Unit 'Y', engaged in manufacturing of wires, non-eligible business, had a profit of ₹ 70 lakhs for Assessment Year 2020-21.

The loss of ₹ 20 lakhs, i.e., balance depreciation not set off pertaining to unit 'N' was set-off against the profits of unit 'Y' carrying on non-eligible business, by the assessee, X Ltd. The Assessing Officer was of the view that depreciation relating to a business eligible for deduction under section 80-IA cannot be set-off against non-eligible business income. Hence, unabsorbed depreciation should be carried forward to the subsequent year to be set off against eligible business income of the assessee of that year.

Examine the correctness of the action of the Assessing Officer.

Answer

In CIT v. Swarnagiri Wire Insulations Pvt. Ltd. (2012) 349 ITR 245, the Karnataka High Court observed that it is a generally accepted principle that the deeming provision of a particular section cannot be breathed into another section. Therefore, the deeming provision contained in section 80-IA(5) cannot override the provisions of section 70(1).

In this case, X Ltd. had incurred loss in eligible business (power generation) on account of claiming depreciation of ₹ 120 lakhs. Hence, section 80-IA becomes insignificant, since there is no profit from which this deduction can be claimed.

It is, thereafter, that section 70(1) comes into play, whereby an assessee is entitled to set off the losses from one source against income from another source under the same head of income. Accordingly, X Ltd. is entitled to the benefit of set off of loss of ₹ 20 lakhs (representing balance depreciation not set-off) pertaining to Unit N engaged in eligible business of power generation against profit of ₹ 70 lakhs of Unit Y carrying on non-eligible business. Therefore, the net profit of ₹ 50 lakhs would be taxable in the A.Y.2020-21.

However, once set-off is allowed under section 70(1) against income from another source under the same head, a deduction to such extent is not possible in any subsequent assessment year i.e., the loss (arising on account of balance depreciation of eligible business) so set-off under section 70(1) has to be first deducted while computing profits eligible for deduction under section 80-IA in the subsequent year. Accordingly, in the A.Y.2021-22, the net profits of Unit N has to be reduced by ₹ 20 lacs for computing the profits eligible for deduction under section 80-IA in that year.

The action of the Assessing Officer in not permitting set-off of loss of eligible business against profits of non-eligible business in this case is, therefore, not correct.

Question 3

From the following details, compute the total income of Mr. A, Mr. B and Mr. C for A.Y.2020-21 –

Particulars		Mr. A	Mr. B	Mr. C

Notes:

(1) Deduction u/s 80C in respect of life insurance premium paid by Mr. C

Date of issue of policy	Person insured	Actual capital sum assured	Insurance premium paid during 2019-20	Restricted to % of sum assured	Deduction u/s 80C
31/3/2012	Self	1,48,000	15,000	20%	15,000
11/6/2016	Spouse	1,25,000	15,000	10%	12,500
31/7/2017	Handicapped Son (section 80U disability)	2,00,000	32,000	15%	30,000
				Total	57,500

(2)	Medical Insurance Premium (i) Medical insurance premium of ₹ 30,000 paid by account payee cheque by Mr. A is allowed as a deduction under section 80D, subject to a maximum of ₹ 25,000. (ii) Medical insurance premium paid by cash is not allowable as deduction. Hence, Mr. B is not eligible for deduction under section 80D in respect of medical insurance premium of ₹ 15,000 paid in cash. (iii) Mr. C is eligible for deduction of ₹ 20,000 under section 80D in respect of medical insurance premium paid by crossed cheque.
(3)	The maximum amount eligible for deduction under section 80C shall not exceed ₹ 1,50,000. Mr. A would be eligible for deduction of ₹ 1,50,000 in respect of PPF under section 80C.
(4)	Deduction in respect of interest and principal repayment of housing loan Mr. B is eligible for a maximum deduction of ₹ 2,00,000 under section 24 in respect of interest on housing loan taken in respect of a self-occupied property, for which he is claiming benefit of “Nil” annual value. Therefore, ₹ 2,00,000 would represent his loss from house property. Further, the maximum amount eligible for deduction under section 80C should not exceed ₹ 1,50,000. Since, Mr. B has no other investment under section 80C during the previous year 2019-20, he would be eligible for deduction of ₹ 1,50,000 in respect of principal repayment of housing loan.
(5)	Contribution to National Children’s Fund qualifies for 100% deduction under section 80G. Therefore, Mr. A is entitled to 100% deduction of the sum of ₹ 30,000 contributed by him by way of cheque to National Children’s Fund.
(6)	Mr. B is eligible for deduction under section 80GGC in respect of donation to a political party made otherwise than by way of cash. However, cash donations to electoral trust do not qualify for deduction under section 80GGC.

Question 4

Following issues have been raised by Navi Limited in connection with its eligibility for claiming deduction under section 80-IB for your consideration and advice for the assessment year 2020-21:

(i) It operates two separate industrial units. One unit is eligible for deduction under section 80-IB, while the other unit is not eligible for such deduction. If the eligible unit has profit and the other unit has loss, should it claim deduction after setting off the loss of the other unit against profit of the eligible unit?

(ii) Its profit from one unit includes sale of import entitlement, duty drawback and interest from customers for delayed payment. Is it permissible to claim deduction on these items of income?

Answer

(i) Section 80-IB(13) provides that the provisions contained in section 80-IA(5) shall, so far as may be, apply to the eligible business under section 80-IB. Accordingly, for the purpose of computing the deduction under section 80-IB, the profits and gains of an eligible business shall be computed as if such eligible business was the only source of income of the assessee.

Therefore, Navi Limited should claim deduction under section 80-IB on profit from the eligible unit without setting off loss suffered in the other unit. It may be noted that the aggregate deduction under Chapter VI-A, however, cannot exceed the gross total income of the assessee.

(ii) Under section 80-IB, where the gross total income of an assessee includes any profits and gains derived from an industrial undertaking referred to in the section, there shall be allowed, in computing the total income of the assessee, a deduction from such profits and gains at the specified percentage and for such number of years as specified in the section. In CIT vs. Sterling Foods (1999) 237 ITR 579 (SC) and Liberty India vs. CIT (2009) 317 ITR 218 (SC), it was held that sale of import entitlement and duty drawback cannot be construed as income derived from industrial undertaking. Therefore, such income cannot be included in computing income for the purpose of deduction under section 80-IB.

Interest income derived by an undertaking on delayed collection of sale proceeds shall be treated as income derived from the industrial undertaking, and therefore, the same would be eligible for deduction under section 80-IB. [Phatela Cotgin Industries Private Limited vs CIT (2008) 303 ITR 411 (P & H)].

Question 5

PQR Co-operative Bank, a co-operative society, having its area of operation confined to Gubbi Taluk and the principal object of which is to provide for long-term credit for agricultural and rural development activities, has received the following amounts during the year ending 31.3.2020:

(i) Interest amounting to ₹ 1,00,000 from its members on loans advanced to them.

(ii) Interest amounting to ₹ 1,50,000 on deposits with other co-operative societies.

(iii) Rent amounting to ₹ 2,00,000 from letting out its godowns for storage of commodities.

PQR Co-operative Bank seeks your advice in the matter of taxability of the above amounts and the eligibility for deduction, if any, in respect thereof for the assessment year 2020-21.

Answer

Sub-clause (viia) to section 2(24) includes within the scope of definition of income, the profits and gains of any business of banking (including providing credit facilities) carried on by a co-operative society with its members. Hence, the interest of ₹ 1,00,000 received by PQR Co-operative Bank on loans advanced to its members constitutes its income.

Further, interest received amounting to ₹ 1,50,000 on deposits with other co-operative societies and rent amounting to ₹ 2,00,000 received from letting out its godowns for storage of commodities also constitute the income of the co-operative bank.

Sub-section (4) of section 80P provides that section 80P shall not apply to any co-operative bank other than a primary agricultural credit society or a primary co-operative agricultural and rural development bank.

Explanation to section 80P(4) defines a primary co-operative agricultural and rural development bank to mean a society having its area of operation confined to a taluk and the principal object of which is to provide for long-term credit for agricultural and rural development activities.

PQR Co-operative Bank is a primary co-operative agricultural and rural development bank as defined in the said Explanation since it is a co-operative society having its area of operation confined to Gubbi Taluk and its principal object is to provide long-term credit for agricultural and rural development activities. Therefore, it is eligible for deduction under section 80P.

Interest of ₹ 1,00,000 received by the bank on loans advanced to its members is eligible for deduction in full under section 80P(2)(a)(i).

Interest of ₹ 1,50,000 received by the bank from deposits with other co-operative societies qualifies for deduction in full under section 80P(2)(d).

Rent of ₹ 2,00,000 received by the bank from letting out its godowns for storage of commodities is eligible for deduction in full under section 80P(2)(e).

SIGNIFICANT SELECT CASES

1. Can the Commissioner reject an application for grant of approval under section 80G(5) on the ground that the trust has failed to apply 85% of its income for charitable purposes?

CIT v. Shree Govindbhai Jethalal Nathavani Charitable Trust (2015) 373 ITR 619 (Guj)

Facts of the case: The assessee trust filed an application in Form 10G for grant of approval under section 80G(5)[6]. It also filed copies of trust deed and registration certificate dated 18th August, 2011 with the approving authority. As per the trust deed, the main objects of the trust are educational, social activities, etc. In order to verify the facts stated in the application, the trust was asked to produce books of account, relevant vouchers, donation book and minutes in original. On perusal of the books for financial year 2011-12, it was found that the trust had not applied 85% of its income and therefore, the Commissioner rejected the application of the assessee seeking approval under section 80G(5) and Rule 11AA of the Income-tax Rules, 1962.

Tribunal's view: On appeal, the Tribunal noted the decision of Punjab and Haryana High Court in the case of CIT v. O.P. Jindal Global University (2013) 38 Taxmann 366, in which it was held that at the time of granting approval of exemption under section 80G, only the objects of the trust are required to be examined and the aspect of application of funds can be examined by the Assessing Officer at the time of framing the assessment. Consequently, the Tribunal held that the Commissioner has erred in refusing to grant recognition to the trust under section 80G(5).

High Court's Observations: The High Court was of the view that the issue in the present case is now not res integra in view of the decision of the Division Bench of this Court in the case of N.N. Desai Charitable Trust v. CIT (2000) 246 ITR 452 (Guj). In that case, the Division Bench observed that, while considering the application for the purpose of section 80G, the authority cannot act as an assessing authority and the enquiry should be confined to finding out if the institution satisfies the prescribed conditions. The Division Bench also made the following observations:

(i) Section 80G does not relate to assessment of the trust or the institution whose income is not liable to be included in the computation of taxable income under various provisions of the Act. Primarily, section 80G is related to giving deduction in respect of donations made by a person to such trusts and institutions.

[6] Section 80G(5)(i) provides that donation to any institution or fund would qualify for deduction thereunder only if it is established in India for a charitable purpose and derives such income which would not be liable to inclusion in its total income under the provisions of sections 11 and 12 or section 10(23AA)/(23C).

(ii) There are two distinct concepts. The first is whether an institution or fund is such whose income is not liable to be included in the computation of total income, has to be determined on the basis of its status or character. The second is the actual assessment of income, which necessarily takes place in future after donation is received by the donee, on fulfilment of other conditions about application of income by the eligible trusts, which in the very nature of things can operate only after receipt of income. The two are different concepts.

(iii) The liability to assessment is neither affected on account of grant of recognition under section 80G nor on whether the donor ultimately gets deduction in respect of such donation. Once a trust is registered under section 12AA, its income from property includes donation which is covered by section 11(1)(d) or under section 12. Such donations are deemed to be income from property, which are not to be included in the total income under section 11 or section 12. The enquiry under section 80G, hence, cannot go beyond that.

(iv) The scope of enquiry cannot include an enquiry as to whether, at the close of the previous year, the donee-trust will actually be able to apply 85% of its income because non-fulfillment of some conditions by the donee-trust as regards application or accumulation cannot be ascertained in praesenti, when the donation is made. The question of whether the trust will be able to apply 85% of its income can be determined only from the facts existing at the close of the assessment year.

The High Court also noted that similar views were expressed by the Punjab and Haryana High Court in the case of CIT v. O. P. Jindal Global University (2013) 38 Taxmann.com 366.

High Court's Decision: The High Court, thus, concurred with the decision of the Tribunal setting aside the order passed by the Commissioner refusing to grant registration under section 80G(5) to the assessee-trust due to the reason that it has not applied 85% of its income for charitable purposes.

2. Can Inland Container Depots (ICDs) be treated as infrastructure facility, for profits derived therefrom to be eligible for deduction under section 80-IA?

CIT v. Container Corporation of India Limited [2018] 404 ITR 397 (SC)

Facts of the case: M/s. Container Corporation of India Ltd. (CONCOR) is a Government company engaged in the business of handling and transportation of containerized cargo. Its operating activities are mainly carried out at its Inland Container Depots, Container Freight Stations and Port Side Container Terminals. CONCOR filed its income-tax returns for the relevant assessment years and claimed deduction under various heads including deduction under section 80-IA for profits derived from inland container depots. The claim for deduction on the profits earned from inland container depots was, however, rejected by the Assessing Officer.

Issue: The issue under consideration is whether profits derived from inland container depots can be treated as an infrastructure facility eligible for deduction under section 80-IA.

Supreme Court's Observations: Inland Container Depots function for the benefit of exporters and importers located in industrial centres which are situated at distance from sea ports. The purpose of establishing them was to promote the export and import in the country as these depots acts as a facilitator and reduce inconvenience to the exporter or importer.

Section 80-IA provides for a deduction of profits derived from operation of an infrastructure facility. The Finance Act, 2001 substituted section 80-IA(4), consequent to which the definition of "infrastructure facility" in Explanation to section 80-IA(4)(i) included an inland port. The Supreme Court observed that, considering the nature of work such as custom clearance carried out at inland container depots, it can be considered as an inland port within the meaning of section 80-IA(4). Thus, deduction under section 80-IA can be claimed in respect of income earned therefrom.

Supreme Court's Decision: The Supreme Court, accordingly, upheld the decision of the division bench of the High Court and held that CONCOR can claim for deduction under Section 80-IA in respect of profits derived from Inland Container Depots.

3. Would an assessee who enters into an agreement with the Gujarat State Road Development Corporation for an infrastructure development project be entitled to deduction under section 80-IA(4), even though as per the requirement contained therein, the agreement has to be entered into with the Central Government or State Government or a local authority or any other statutory body?

CIT v. Ranjit Projects Private Limited [2018] 408 ITR 274 (Guj)

Facts of the Case: The assessee is a private limited company engaged in implementing infrastructure development projects. For the relevant assessment year, it claimed deduction of Rs. 4.97 crores under section 80-IA(4). The assessee contended that it had undertaken a road development project, for which, it had entered into an agreement with the Gujarat State Road Development Corporation (GSRDC) which was set up by the Government for the special purpose.

The Assessing Officer doubted whether such agreement would satisfy the requirements of section 80-IA(4). The assessee, however, contended that the GSRDC was performing all the functions of the State Government and therefore, the concession agreement executed by GSRDC should be treated to have been entered into by the State Government. The Assessing Officer, however, did not accept the assessee's contention and rejected the assessee's claim of deduction under section 80-IA(4). However, the Commissioner (Appeals) and the Tribunal allowed the assessee's claim for deduction under section 80-IA(4).

Relevant provision of the Income-tax Act, 1961: Section 80-IA provides for a certain deduction in respect of profits and gains from undertakings or enterprises engaged in infrastructure development. Section 80-IA(4) provides that such section would, inter alia, apply to any enterprise carrying on the business of developing or operating and maintaining or developing, operating and maintaining any infrastructure facility. One of the conditions to be fulfilled for claiming deduction is that the assessee should have entered into an agreement with the Central Government or a State Government or a local authority or any other statutory body for developing or operating and maintaining or developing, operating and maintaining a new infrastructure facility.

Issue: The issue under consideration is whether an assessee who enters into an agreement with Gujarat State Road Development Corporation for an infrastructure development project would be entitled to deduction under section 80-IA(4), even though as per the requirement contained therein, the agreement has to be entered into with the Central Government or State Government or a local authority or any other statutory body.

High Court's Observations: The High Court observed that GSRDC is a wholly Government owned company incorporated pursuant to the State Government's resolution dated February 28, 1999. The memorandum of association shows that the Government enjoys total control over GSRDC. GSRDC was constituted by the State Government as a nodal agency for the purpose of executing road development projects through private participation. Hence, GSRDC is a Government agency as defined in section 2(e) of the Gujarat Infrastructure Development Act, 1999.

High Court's Decision: The High Court held that since the assessee has entered into an agreement with GSRDC, a government agency constituted by the State Government for the purposes of executing road development projects, it is entitled to deduction under Section 80-IA.

Note – The SLP filed by the Department against the judgement was dismissed.

4. Can unabsorbed depreciation of a business of an industrial undertaking eligible for deduction under section 80-IA be set off against income of another non-eligible business of the assessee?

CIT v. Swarnagiri Wire Insulations Pvt. Ltd. (2012) 349 ITR 245 (Kar.)

Facts of the case: The assessee was in the business of manufacture of wires. It installed a windmill for power generation. The assessee claimed depreciation on windmill against income from power generation, which was eligible for deduction under section 80-IA. The balance depreciation was set off against the profits from manufacturing of wires, being a non-eligible business.

Assessing Officer's contention: The Assessing Officer contended that depreciation relating to a business eligible for deduction under section 80-IA cannot be set off against non-eligible business income. Therefore, unabsorbed depreciation was to be carried forward to the subsequent year to be set off against the eligible business income of the assessee of that year.

Tribunal's Observations: The Tribunal observed that the balance depreciation of the eligible business is required to be carried forward for set-off against eligible business income of the next year while determining the profits eligible for deduction under section 80-IA in that year. However, the Tribunal noted that section 80-IA is a beneficial section permitting certain deduction in respect of certain income under Chapter VI-A. A provision granting tax incentive for economic growth should be construed liberally and any restriction placed should also be construed in a reasonable and purposive manner to advance the objects of the provision.

High Court's Observations and Decision: The High Court observed that it is a generally accepted principle that deeming provision of a particular section cannot be breathed into another section. Therefore, the deeming provision contained in section 80-IA(5) cannot override the provisions of section 70(1). The assessee had incurred loss in eligible business after claiming depreciation. Hence, section 80-IA becomes insignificant, since there is no profit from which this deduction can be claimed. It is thereafter that section 70(1) comes into play, whereby the assessee is entitled to set off the losses from one source against income from another source under the same head of income. The Court, therefore, held that the assessee was entitled to the benefit of set off of loss of eligible business against the profits of non-eligible business. However, once set-off is allowed under section 70(1) against income from another source under the same head, a deduction to such extent is not possible in any subsequent assessment year i.e., the loss (arising on account of balance depreciation of eligible business) so set-off under section 70(1) has to be first deducted while computing profits eligible for deduction under section 80-IA in the subsequent year.

Note – The crux of the above decision can be explained with a simple example. Let us consider a company, X Ltd., having two units, Unit A and Unit B. If Unit A engaged in eligible business (say, power generation) has a profit of ₹ 100 lacs in A.Y.2019-20, before claiming depreciation of ₹ 120 lacs and Unit B engaged in non-eligible business (say, manufacture of wires) has a profit of ₹ 70 lacs, then, as per the above decision, the loss of ₹ 20 lacs (representing balance depreciation not set-off) pertaining to Unit A can be set-off against profit of ₹ 70 lacs of Unit B carrying on non-eligible business. Therefore, the net profit of ₹ 50 lacs would be taxable in the A.Y.2019-20. If in the next year, i.e. A.Y.2020-21, the net profits of Unit A and Unit B are ₹ 200 lacs and ₹ 80 lacs, respectively, then the eligible deduction under section 80-IA for that year would be ₹ 180 lacs (i.e., ₹ 200 lacs minus ₹ 20 lacs, being loss (representing balance depreciation) set-off in the A.Y.2019-20 against other income).*

5. Is the increase in gross total income consequent to disallowance under section 40(a)(ia) eligible for profit-linked deduction under Chapter VI-A?

CIT v. Sunil Vishwambharnath Tiwari (2016) 388 ITR 630 (Bom)

Facts of the case: The assessee engaged in development of housing projects filed his return of income for the relevant assessment year after claiming deduction of Rs.16.82 lakhs under section 80-IB(10) [now, section 80-IBA]. The return was selected for scrutiny. In the assessment, a sum of Rs.83 lakhs towards sub-contract payment; Rs.1.75 lakh as commission payment and Rs.7.96 lakhs towards advertisement expenses were disallowed for non-deduction of tax at source by invoking section 40(a)(ia). While based on the assessment, the total income was fixed at Rs.92.71 lakhs, the Revenue authority limited the deduction under section 80-IB(10) to the original amount claimed by the assessee.

Appellate Authorities' Views: The CIT (Appeals) held in favour of the assessee by stating that there cannot be a separate treatment for addition to income and deductions from gross total income i.e., the amount which is added to gross total income would be eligible for corresponding deduction from gross total income. The Tribunal affirmed the view of CIT (Appeals).

Issue: Whether the increase in gross total income on account of disallowance of expenditure under section 40(a)(ia) must be considered for the purpose of deduction under section 80-IB in the absence of any explicit restriction therein?

High Court's Observations: The High Court observed that the fact that the assessee had not deducted tax at source was undisputed. On account of such non-deduction, expenses had been disallowed under section 40(a)(ia) which goes on to increase the income chargeable under the head 'Profits and gains of business or profession'. As deduction under section 80-IB(10) is with reference to the assessee's gross total income, such enhanced income becomes eligible for deduction. Disallowance under section 40(a)(ia) would, thus, be tax neutral for the assessee, on account of the enhanced profit-linked deduction available to him.

High Court's Decision: Affirming the Tribunal's order, the High Court held that the assessee is entitled to claim deduction under section 80-IB(10) in respect of the enhanced gross total income as a consequence of disallowance of expenditure under section 40(a)(ia).

Notes:

(1) Section 80-IB(10) allows deduction at 100% of the profits in respect of housing projects approved before 31.03.2008. Students may note that, presently, section 80-IBA provides for such deduction @100% of the profits and gains from housing project subject to satisfaction of the conditions mentioned therein.

(2) The CBDT has, in its Circular No.37/2016 dated 2.11.2016, mentioned that the courts have generally held that if the expenditure disallowed is related to the business activity against which the Chapter VI-A deduction has been claimed, the deduction needs to be allowed on the enhanced profits. Thus, the settled position is that the disallowances made under sections 32, 40(a)(ia), 40A(3), 43B, etc. and other specific disallowances, relating to the business activity against which the Chapter VI-A deduction has been claimed, result in enhancement of the profits of the eligible business, and that deduction under Chapter VI-A is admissible on the profits so enhanced on account of such disallowance.

6. Can transport subsidy, interest subsidy and power subsidy received from the Government be treated as profits "derived from" business or undertaking to qualify for deduction under section 80-IB?

CIT v. Meghalaya Steels Ltd (2016) 383 ITR 217 (SC)

Facts of the case: The assessee-company, engaged in the business of manufacture of steel and ferro silicon, claimed deduction under section 80-IB on the profits and gains of the business/undertaking which included transport subsidy, interest subsidy and power subsidy received from Government.

Revenue's Contentions: The Assessing Officer was of the view that these subsidies were not eligible for deduction under section 80-IB(4) and hence, disallowed the same, contending that the source of the subsidies was the Government and not the business of the assessee, these subsidies have a close and direct nexus with the grants of the Government and not the business of the assessee. Hence, these subsidies, included in the profits, were "attributable to the business" but not "derived from" business to qualify for deduction under section 80-IB. The Commissioner (Appeals) upheld the view of the Assessing Officer. However, the Appellate Tribunal and High Court allowed the deduction in respect of such subsidies.

Supreme Court's Observations: The Supreme Court observed that an important test to determine whether the profits and gains are "derived from" business or an undertaking is that there should be a direct nexus between such profits and gains and the undertaking or business. Such nexus should not be only incidental. As long as profits and gains emanate directly from the business itself, the fact that the immediate source of the subsidies is the Government would make no difference. The profits and gains referred to in section 80-IB has reference to net profit, which can be calculated by deducting from the sale price of an article, all elements of cost which go into manufacturing or selling it. Thus, the profits arrived at after deducting manufacturing costs and selling costs reimbursed to the assessee by the Government, is the profits and gains "derived from" the business of the assessee.

The Supreme Court observed that section 28(iii)(b) specifically states that income from cash assistance, by whatever name called, received or receivable by any person against exports under any scheme of the Government of India, will be income chargeable to income-tax under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession". The Apex Court further observed that if cash assistance received or receivable against exports schemes are being included as income under the head “Profits and gains of business or profession”, subsidies which go towards reimbursement of cost of production of goods of a particular business would also have to be included under the head “Profits and gains of business or profession”, and not under the head “Income from other sources”.

Supreme Court’s Decision: The Supreme Court, accordingly, held that transport subsidy, interest subsidy and power subsidy from Government were revenue receipts which were reimbursed to the assessee for elements of cost relating to manufacture or sale of their products.

Therefore, there is a direct nexus between profits and gains of the undertaking or business, and reimbursement of such subsidies. The subsidies were only in order to reimburse, wholly or partially, costs actually incurred by the assessee in the manufacturing and selling of its products. Accordingly, these subsidies qualify for deduction under section 80-IB.

7. Can Duty Drawback be treated as profit derived from the business of the industrial undertaking to be eligible for deduction under section 80-IB?

CIT v. Orchev Pharma P. Ltd. (2013) 354 ITR 227 (SC)

Supreme Court’s Decision: On this issue, the Supreme Court, following the decision in case of Liberty India v. CIT (2009) 317 ITR 218 (SC) held that Duty Drawback receipts cannot be said to be profits derived from the business of industrial undertaking for the purpose of computation of deduction under section 80-IB.

Note - In the case of Liberty India v. CIT (2009) 317 ITR 218 (SC), the Supreme Court observed that DEPB / Duty drawback are incentives which flow from the schemes framed by the Central Government or from section 75 of the Customs Act, 1962. Section 80-IB provides for the allowing of deduction in respect of profits and gains derived from eligible business. However, incentive profits are not profits derived from eligible business under section 80-IB. They belong to the category of ancillary profits of such undertaking. Profits derived by way of incentives such as DEPB/Duty drawback cannot be credited against the cost of manufacture of goods debited in the profit and loss account and they do not fall within the expression "profits derived from industrial undertaking" under section 80-IB. Hence, Duty drawback receipts and DEPB benefits do not form part of the profits derived from the eligible business for the purpose of the deduction under section 80-IB.

8. Does the period of exemption under section 80-IB commence from the year of trial production or year of commercial production? Would it make a difference if sale was effected from out of the trial production?

CIT v. Nestor Pharmaceuticals Ltd. / Sidwal Refrigerations Ind Ltd. v. DCIT (2010) 322 ITR 631 (Delhi)

Facts of the case: In this case, the assessee had started trial production in March 1998 whereas commercial production started only in April, 1998. Therefore, the assessee claimed deduction under section 80-IB for the assessment years 1999-2000 to 2003-04, whereas the Assessing Officer denied deduction for A.Y.2003-04 on the ground that the five year period would be reckoned from A.Y.1998-99, since the trial production began in March, 1998.

Tribunal's Observations: The Tribunal observed that not only the trial production had started in March 1998 but there was in fact sale of one water cooler and air-conditioner in the month of March 1998. The explanation of the assessee was that this was done to file the registration under the Excise Act and Sales-tax Act.

High Court's Observations & Decision: The High Court observed that with mere trial production, the manufacture for the purpose of marketing the goods had not started which starts only with commercial production, namely, when the final product to the satisfaction of the manufacturer has been brought into existence and is fit for marketing. However, in this case, since the assessee had effected sale in March 1998, it had crossed the stage of trial production and the final saleable product had been manufactured and sold. The quantum of commercial sale and the purpose of sale (namely, to obtain registration of excise / sales-tax) is not material. With the sale of those articles, marketable quality was established. Therefore, the conditions stipulated in section 80-IB were fulfilled with the commercial sale of the two items in that assessment year, and hence the five year period has to be reckoned from A.Y.1998-99.

Note – Though this decision was in relation to deduction under section 80-IA, as it stood prior to its substitution by the Finance Act, 1999 w.e.f. 1.4.2000, presently, it is relevant in the context of section 80-IB.*

9. Can an assessee who has not claimed deduction under section 80-IB in the initial years, start claiming deduction thereunder for the remaining years during the period of eligibility, if the conditions are satisfied?

Praveen Soni v. CIT (2011) 333 ITR 324 (Delhi)

High Court's Decision: On the above issue, the Delhi High Court held that the provisions of section 80-IB nowhere stipulated a condition that the claim for deduction under this section had to be made from the first year of qualification of deduction failing which the claim will not be allowed in the remaining years of eligibility. Therefore, the deduction under section 80-IB should be allowed to the assessee for the remaining years up to the period for which his entitlement would accrue, provided the conditions mentioned under section 80-IB are fulfilled.

10. Can an assessee who has set up a new industrial undertaking and availed deduction @100% of profits under section 80-IC(3) for the five years, once again claim deduction@100% of profits on the basis of having undertaken substantial expansion thereafter?

CIT v. Classic Binding Industries [2018] 407 ITR 429 (SC)

Facts of the case: The assessee-firm started its business on July 11, 2005 and its initial assessment year for the purpose of deduction under section 80-IC was A.Y. 2006-07. The assessee claimed deduction under section 80-IC to the extent of 100 % of eligible profits for five assessment years from A.Y.2006-07 to A.Y.2010-11. Thereafter, the assessee once again claimed 100% deduction against eligible profits in the A.Y.2012-13 on the ground that it had carried out substantial expansion in the F.Y.2011-12.

The Assessing Officer restricted the deduction to 25% of the eligible profits for the assessment year under consideration, namely, A.Y.2012-13 (i.e., the seventh assessment year) on the ground that the assessee had already claimed deduction@100% of the eligible profits under section 80-IC for assessment years 2006-07 to 2010-11. The finding of the Assessing Officer was affirmed by the Commissioner (Appeals) and the Tribunal, but reversed by the High Court. Hence, the Department filed an appeal to the Supreme Court.

Relevant provision of the Income-tax Act, 1961: Section 80-IC applies to an undertaking or enterpirse which has begun or begins to manufacture any specified article or thing therein by setting up a new factory, inter alia, in the State of Himachal Pradesh. As per section 80-IC(3), the category of undertakings or enterprises to which the assessee belongs, is entitled to deduction@100% of profits and gains for five assessment years commencing from the initial assessment year and, thereafter, deduction@25% of profits and gains for the next five years. The period of deduction is, thus, 10 years, namely, deduction@100% for the first five years and @25% for the remaining five years.

Issue: The issue under consideration is whether an assessee who has set up a new industrial undertaking and availed deduction@100% of profits under section 80-IC(3) for the first five years, can once again claim deduction@100% of profits on the basis of having undertaken substantial expansion thereafter in a subsequent year.

Supreme Court's Observations: The Supreme Court observed that upon a pragmatic and reasonable interpretation, once the assessee satisfies the eligibility conditions under section 80-IC and the initial assessment year commences from a certain assessment year for claim of deduction@100% of profits for a certain period, five years in this case, there cannot be another "initial assessment year", commencing after the expiry of the said period on the basis of substantial expansion.

Supreme Court's Decision: The Supreme Court held that within the period of ten years, having claimed deduction@100% of profits for the first five years, the assessee cannot once again claim deduction@100% of profits for a fresh period of five years thereafter on the basis of substantial expansion as section 80-IC (3), in no uncertain terms, provides for deduction only at 25% of profits in respect of the next five year period.

12.1 ASSESSMENT OF COMPANIES

(1) Meaning of 'Company' for purposes of income-tax

Under the Income-tax Act, 1961, the term "company" has a much wider meaning than what has been given to it under the Companies Act. The company is considered as a 'person' for all purposes of assessment proceedings [Section 2(31)(iii)].

Section 2(17) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 defines a company for income-tax purposes. Accordingly, 'company' means –

(i) any Indian company as defined in section 2(26); or

(ii) anybody corporate incorporated by or under the laws of a country outside India, i.e., any foreign company; or

(iii) any institution, association or body which is assessable or was assessed as a company for any assessment year under the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 or for any assessment year commencing on or before 1.4.1970 under the present Act; or

(iv) any institution, association or body, whether incorporated or not and whether Indian or non-Indian, which is declared by a general or special order of the CBDT to be a company.

Such institution, association etc. shall be deemed to be a company for such assessment years as may be specified in the CBDT's order.

(2) Classes of Companies

♦ Domestic and Foreign Company: Companies can be classified into two groups, viz.(i) Domestic company and (ii) Foreign company.

(i) Domestic company means an Indian company or any other company, which, in respect of its income liable to tax, has made the prescribed arrangements for the declaration and payment of the dividends (including dividends on preferential shares) within India, payable out of such income [Section 2(22A)].

Indian Company [Section 2(26)] - A company has to satisfy the following two conditions so that it can be regarded as an Indian company –

(a) the company should have been formed and registered under Companies Act, 1956[1]

(b) the registered office or the principal office of the company should be in India.

The expression 'Indian Company' also includes the following provided their registered or principal office is in India:

(i) a company formed and registered under any law relating to companies which was or is in force in any part of India;

[1] The Companies Act, 2013

(ii) a corporation established by or under a Central, State or Provincial Act (like Financial Corporation or a State Road Transport Corporation);

(iii) an institution or association or body which is declared by the Board to be a company under section 2(17)(iv);

(iv) in the case of any of the Union territories of Dadra and Nagar Haveli, Goa, Daman and Diu, and Pondicherry, a company formed and registered under any law for the time being in force in that Union territory.

Prescribed arrangements for the declaration and payment of dividends within India [Rule 27]: The arrangements referred to in sections 194 and 236 to be made by a company for declaration and payment of dividends (including dividends on preference shares) within India are as follows:

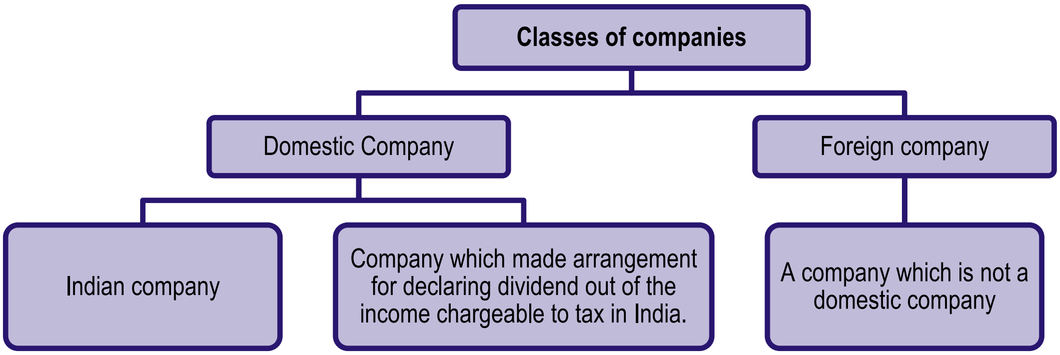
(i) The share register of the company concerned for all its shareholders shall be maintained regularly at its principal place of business within India in respect of any assessment year from a date not later than 1st April of such year.

(ii) The general meeting for passing the accounts of the previous year relevant to the assessment year and for declaring any dividends in respect thereof shall be held only at a place within India.

(iii) The dividends declared, if any, shall be made payable only within India to all the shareholders.

It is obligatory for Indian companies to make the prescribed arrangements stated above; non-Indian companies will be treated as domestic companies only if they make the prescribed arrangements for the declaration and payment of dividends in India.

(ii) Foreign Company: A company that is not a domestic company is a foreign company [Section 2(23A)].



Classes of companies
Domestic Company
Foreign company
Indian company
Company which made arrangement for declaring dividend out of the income chargeable to tax in India.
A company which is not a domestic company

- Closely-held and widely-held Company: Domestic companies are again divided into broad groups, viz

  (1) companies in which public are substantially interested and

  (2) companies in which public are not substantially interested.

  The former types of companies are also referred to as 'widely-held companies' while the latter are also referred to as 'closely-held companies'.

  To determine whether a company is one in which the public are substantially interested, one has to apply the tests laid down in section 2(18). Briefly, the following companies fall under this category:

  (i) A company owned by the Government (either Central or State but not Foreign) or the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) or in which not less than 40% of the shares are held by the Government or the RBI or corporation owned by that bank.

  (ii) A company which is registered under section 25 of the Companies Act, 1956[2] (formed for promoting commerce, arts, science, religion, charity or any other useful object and which prohibits payment of dividends to its members).

  (iii) A company having no share capital which is declared by the Board for the specified assessment years to be a company in which the public are substantially interested.

  (iv) A mutual benefit finance company which carries on its principal business of accepting deposits from its members and which is declared by the Central Government under section 620A of the Companies Act, 1956[3] to be Nidhi or a Mutual Benefit Society.

  (v) A company whose equity shares (not being shares entitled to a fixed rate of dividend) carrying at least 50% of the voting power have been allotted unconditionally to or acquired unconditionally by and were beneficially held throughout the relevant previous year by one or more co-operative societies.

  (vi) A company which is not a private company as defined in the Companies Act, 1956[4] and which fulfills any of the following conditions:

  - its equity shares should have, as on the last day of the relevant previous year, been listed in a recognized stock exchange in India; or

[2] Section 8 of Companies Act, 2013

[3] Section 406 of Companies Act, 2013

[4] Section 2(68) of Companies Act, 2013

- its equity shares carrying at least 50% (40% in case of an Indian company in ship construction business or in the manufacture or processing of goods or in mining or in generation or distribution of electricity or any other form of power) voting power should have been unconditionally allotted to or acquired by and should have been beneficially held throughout the relevant previous year by

  (a) Government or

  (b) a Statutory Corporation or

  (c) a company in which public are substantially interested or

  (d) any wholly owned subsidiary of company mentioned in (c).

  Thus, it should be noted that all public limited companies must automatically be treated as companies in which public are substantially interested, whereas all private limited companies will be treated as companies in which public are not substantially interested.

♦ Relevance of the above classification:

(1) The distinction between domestic and foreign companies is significant for the purpose of rates of tax prescribed.

Domestic companies are taxed at 30% but where the total turnover or gross receipt in the previous year 2017-18 does not exceed ₹ 400 crore, it shall be taxed at 25% of the total income. However, a foreign company will be taxed at 40%. In respect of specified royalties and fees for technical services received from Government or an Indian concern in pursuance of an agreement, approved by the Central Government, made by the foreign company with the Government or Indian concern between 1.4.1961 and 31.3.1976 (in case of royalties) and between 1.3.1964 and 31.3.1976 (in case of FTS), the rate of tax is 50%. A surcharge @ 7% of the tax payable is leviable in the case of domestic companies and @2% of tax payable in the case of foreign companies, if the total income exceeds ₹ 1 crore but does not exceed ₹ 10 crore. Surcharge@12% of the tax payable is leviable in the case of domestic companies and @5% of tax payable in the case of foreign companies, if the total income exceeds ₹ 10 crore.

Note – The Taxation Laws (Amendment) Ordinance, 2019 was promulgated by the President of India on 20.9.2019 to amend the Income-tax Act, 1961 and the Finance (No.2) Act, 2019 and is in force[5]. This Ordinance has inserted two new sections, section 115BAA and 115BAB, in the Income-tax Act, 1961 to be applicable from A.Y.2020-21.

[5] At the time of publication of the Study Material

Section 115BAA provides for concessional rate of tax@22% (plus surcharge@10% and HEC@4%) for domestic companies, subject to certain conditions, like non-availability of profit-linked deductions and investment-linked tax deduction under the Act, non-availability of deduction (weighted or otherwise) for contribution to research and development, additional depreciation etc.

Section 115BAB provides for concessional rate of tax@15% (plus surcharge@10% plus HEC@4%) to new manufacturing domestic companies set up and registered on or after 1.10.2019, and commences manufacturing on or before 31.3.2023, subject to certain conditions, like non-availability of profit-linked deductions and investment-linked tax deduction under the Act, non-availability of deduction (weighted or otherwise) for contribution to research and development, additional depreciation etc.

Domestic Companies have to exercise the option to be governed by these special provisions of the Act. The option for section 115BAB has to be exercised in the very first year in which the eligible company is set up, failing which it cannot exercise such option in the future years. However, a company eligible to exercise option u/s 115BAA can defer exercise of such option to a future year, if it is availing sizable profit-linked or investment-linked deductions or additional depreciation in the P.Y.2019-20. However, once the company exercises such option under section 115BAA or 115BAB, as the case may be, in a year, it would continue to be governed by the special provisions u/s 115BAA or 115BAB, as the case may be, thereafter and cannot opt for regular provisions in any subsequent year.

It may be noted that companies exercising option under section 115BAA or section 115BAB are not liable to minimum alternate tax under section 115JB.

These two sections, namely sections 115BAA and 115BAB have been detailed in Annexure – 1 at the end of this chapter. These sections would come into effect from A.Y.2020-21 after passing of the Taxation Laws (Amendment) Ordinance, 2019 by the Parliament.

(2) The question as to whether a company is one in which public are substantially interested or not is relevant for application of certain provisions which are applicable only to closely held company.

There are certain special provisions which are applicable only to companies in which public are not substantially interested. The list of such special provisions is as follow:

S. No.	Section	Provision
1	2(22)(e)	Advance or loan by a closely held company - deemed dividend

2	56(2)(viib)	Consideration received in excess of FMV of shares issued by a closely held company to be treated as income of such company, where shares are issued at a premium
3	68	Taxation of sum received by closely held company as share application money, share capital, share premium and the explanation offered by company is not satisfactory
4	79	Carry forward and set-off of losses in case of closely held companies
5	179	Liability of directors of private company in liquidation

(3) Concessional rate of tax on dividends received by Indian companies from specified foreign companies [Section 115BBD]

(i) Concessional rate - Dividends received by Indian companies from specified foreign companies to be subject to a concessional rate of 15% (as against the general rate of 30% applicable to Indian companies).

(ii) No expenditure is allowed - This rate of 15% would be applied on gross dividend, in the sense, that no expenditure would be allowable in respect of such dividend.

(iii) Meaning of specified foreign company - Specified foreign company means a foreign company in which the Indian company holds 26% or more in nominal value of the equity share capital of the company. Therefore, this concessional rate would not be applicable in respect of dividend received from a foreign company in which the holding of the Indian company is less than 26% of the nominal value of the equity share capital.

(4) Minimum Alternate Tax on companies [Section 115JB]

(i) Applicability of MAT

As per section 115JB(1), in case of company (domestic or foreign), if the income-tax payable on the total income computed under the Income-tax Act, 1961 is less than, 15% of its book profit, such book profit shall be deemed to be the total income of the assessee and the tax payable by the assessee on such total income shall be the amount of income-tax at the rate of 15% (add surcharge, if applicable, i.e., 7% for domestic companies and 2% for foreign companies, where the total income exceeds ₹ 1 crore but does not exceed ₹ 10 crore, and 12% for domestic companies and 5% for foreign companies where the total income exceeds ₹ 10 crore). Further, health and education cess @ 4% shall be added on the aggregate of income-tax and surcharge.

(ii) Maintenance of statement of profit and loss [Section 115JB(2)]

(a) Every company other than a company referred to in clause (b) of section 115JB(2) shall for the purpose of this section, prepare its statement of profit and loss for the relevant previous year in accordance with the provisions of Schedule III to the Companies Act, 2013 [Clause (a) of section 115JB(2)].

(b) Insurance companies, banking companies, companies engaged in generation or supply of electricity or any other class of company for which a form of financial statement has been specified in or under the Act governing such class of company, shall for the purposes of this section, prepare its statement of profit and loss for the relevant previous year in accordance with the provisions of the Act governing such company [Clause (b) of section 115JB(2)].

(c) The section also specifies that the statement of profit and loss for the relevant previous year has to be drawn in accordance with Schedule III to the Companies Act, 2013. Further, while preparing the annual accounts,-

(i) the accounting policies,

(ii) the accounting standards followed for preparing such accounts, including statement of profit and loss

(iii) the method and rates for calculating depreciation shall be the same as have been adopted for the purpose of preparing such accounts including statement of profit and loss and laid before the company at its annual general meeting.

(d) Where the financial year adopted by the company under the Companies Act, 2013[6] is different from the previous year under the Income-tax Act, 1961, the accounting policies, accounting standards and methods and rates adopted for calculating depreciation shall correspond to the accounting policies followed for preparing such accounts including statement of profit and loss for the financial year.

(iii) Computation of book profit [Explanation 1 below section 115JB(2)]

For computing the book profit, the profit shall be increased by the following amounts, if the amount referred in (a) to (i) is debited to the statement of profit and loss

(a) Income-tax: Income-tax paid or payable, and the provision therefor;

[It may be noted that income-tax includes –

(1) dividend distribution tax under section 115-O/ tax on distributed income under section 115R;

(2) interest;

(3) surcharge;

(4) health and education cess (Explanation 2 to section 115JB)].

[6] As per section 2(41) of the Companies Act, 2013, the financial year of a company shall be the period ending 31st March of every year. If a company is incorporated on or after 1st January of a year, then the financial year shall be the period ending 31st March of the following year.

(b) Amount carried to Reserves: Amount carried to any reserves, by whatever name called;

(c) Provisions: Amounts set aside to provisions for meeting liabilities other than ascertained liabilities;

(d) Provisions for losses of subsidiary companies: Amount of provision for losses of subsidiary companies;

(e) Dividends: Amount of dividends paid or proposed; or

(f) Expenditure relatable to exempt income: Amount of expenditure relatable to any income to which section 10 or sections 11 or 12 apply;

(fa) Expenditure relatable to share of an assessee in the income of an AOP or BOI: Amount of expenditure relatable to income, being share of the assessee in the income of an AOPs or BOIs, on which no income-tax is payable in accordance with the provisions of section 86;

(fb) Expenditure relatable to income accruing to foreign company: The amount or amounts of expenditure relatable to income accruing or arising to an assessee, being a foreign company, from –

(A) the capital gains arising on transactions in securities; or

(B) the interest, royalty or fees for technical services chargeable to tax at the rate or rates specified in Chapter XII i.e., section 115A

if the income-tax payable thereon in accordance with the provisions of the Act, other than the provisions of this Chapter, is at a rate less than 15%;

(fc) Notional loss on the units of business trust: The amount representing-

- notional loss on transfer of a capital asset, being share or a special purpose vehicle to a business trust in exchange of units allotted by that trust; or
- notional loss resulting from any change in carrying amount of said units or
- loss on transfer of such units

(fd) Amount of expenditure relatable to income referred under section 115BBF: The amount or amounts of expenditure relatable to income by way of royalty in respect of patent chargeable to tax under section 115BBF;

(g) Depreciation: The amount of depreciation;

(h) Deferred tax: The amount of deferred tax and provision therefor;

(i) Provision for diminution in the value of any asset: The amount set aside as provision for diminution in the value of any asset.

(j) Amount standing in the revaluation reserve: The profit shall also be increased by the amount standing in revaluation reserve relating to the revalued asset on the retirement or disposal of such asset, in case the same is not credited to the profit and loss account.

(k) Amount of gain arise on transfer units of business trust: When units of business trust are actually transferred, the amount of gain on such transfer has to be added to compute the book profit, since notional gains on transfer of share of a special purpose vehicle to a business trust in exchange for the units of the business trust and notional gains resulting from change in carrying amount of such units have been deducted to compute book profit.

In a case where the shares are carried at cost: The amount of gain has to be computed by taking into consideration the cost of shares exchanged with the units of the business trust.

In a case where the shares are carried at a value other than the cost through statement of profit and loss: The carrying amount of shares at the time of exchange would be taken into consideration for computing the amount of gain. The amount of gain on such transfer, if any, credited to statement of profit and loss will be reduced.

The profit shall be reduced by the following amounts:

(i) Amount withdrawn from any reserve: The amount withdrawn from any reserve or provision, if any such amount is credited to the statement of profit and loss.

However, the amount withdrawn from reserves/ provisions shall not be reduced from the book profit unless the book profit of that year has been increased by those reserves/ provisions;

(ii) Exempt income: Amount of income to which section 10 or sections 11 or 12 apply, if such amount is credited to the statement of profit and loss;

(iia) Depreciation: The amount of depreciation debited to the statement of profit and loss (excluding the claim of depreciation on account of revaluation of assets);

(iib) Amount withdrawn from the revaluation reserve: The amount withdrawn from the revaluation reserve and credited to the statement of profit and loss, to the extent it does not exceed the amount of depreciation on revaluation of assets;

(iic) Share of the assessee in the income of an AOPs or BOIs: The amount of income, being the share of the assessee in the income of an AOPs or BOIs, on which no income-tax is payable in accordance with the provisions of section 86, if any such amount is credited to the statement of profit and loss;

(iid) Income accruing to foreign company: The amount of income accruing or arising to an assessee, being a foreign company, from, -

(A) the capital gains arising on transactions in securities; or

(B) the interest, royalty or fees for technical services chargeable to tax at the rate or rates specified in Chapter XII i.e., section 115A,

if such income is credited to the statement of profit and loss and the income-tax payable thereon in accordance with the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961, other than the provisions of Chapter XII-B, is at a rate less than 15%;

(iie) Notional gain on the units of business trust: The amount representing –

(A) the notional gain on transfer of a capital asset, being a share of a SPV to a business trust in exchange of units allotted by the business trust;

(B) notional gain resulting from any change in carrying amount of said units;

(C) gain on transfer of such units,

if any, credited to statement of profit and loss;

(iif) Loss on transfer of units: The amount of loss on transfer of units acquired in exchange of shares of SPV computed by taking into account the cost of the shares exchanged with the units, where the shares are carried at cost. In case shares are carried at a value other than cost through statement of profit and loss, the amount of loss on transfer of such units has to be computed by taking into account the carrying amount of the shares at the time of exchange;

(iig) Income by way of royalty taxable under section 115BBF: The amount of income by way of royalty in respect of patent chargeable to tax under section 115BBF;

(iih) Brought forward loss and unabsorbed depreciation: Aggregate amount of unabsorbed depreciation and loss brought forward in case of a –

(A) company, and its subsidiary and the subsidiary of such subsidiary, where, the Tribunal, on an application moved by the Central Government under section 241 of the Companies Act, 2013 has suspended the Board of Directors of such company and has appointed new directors who are nominated by the Central Government under section 242 of the said Act;

(B) company against whom an application for corporate insolvency resolution process has been admitted by the Adjudicating Authority under section 7 or section 9 or section 10 of the Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code, 2016.

It may be noted that loss does not include depreciation.

A company would be a subsidiary of another company if such other company holds more than half in the nominal value of equity share capital of the company.

(iii) Brought forward loss or unabsorbed depreciation in case of other companies: Amount of brought forward loss or unabsorbed depreciation, whichever is less, in case of other companies as per books of account.

The loss shall not include depreciation; If either the figure of brought forward loss or unabsorbed depreciation is "NIL", no deduction will be allowed from the book profit of the relevant year;

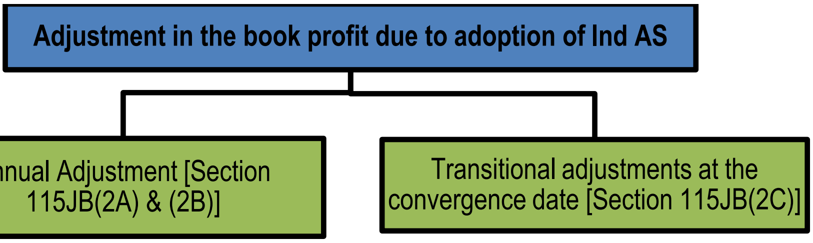
(vii) Profits of sick industrial company: The amount of profits of a sick industrial company (BIFR company) commencing from the previous year in which the company became sick and ending with the assessment year during which the entire net worth of such company becomes equal to or exceeds the accumulated losses. For this purpose, "net worth" shall have the same meaning as assigned under section 3(1)(ga) of the Sick Industrial Companies (Special Provisions) Act, 1985.

(viii) Deferred tax: The amount of deferred tax, if any such amount is credited to the statement of profit and loss.

(iv) Computation of Book Profit for Ind AS compliant companies:

The Central Government has notified the Indian Accounting Standards (Ind AS) which are converged with International Financial Reporting Standards (IFRS) and prescribed the Companies (Indian Accounting Standards) Rules, 2015 which lay down the roadmap for implementation of these Ind AS.

As the book profit based on Ind AS compliant financial statements is likely to be different from the book profit based on existing Indian GAAP, sub-sections (2A), (2B) and (2C) of section 115JB provides the framework for computation of book profit for Ind AS compliant companies in the year of adoption and thereafter.



Adjustment in the book profit due to adoption of Ind AS

Annual Adjustment [Section 115JB(2A) & (2B)]

Transitional adjustments at the convergence date [Section 115JB(2C)]

I MAT on Ind AS compliant financial statement [Section 115JB(2A)]

In case of a company whose financial statements are drawn up in compliance with the Indian Accounting Standards (Ind ASs) specified in Annexure to the Companies (Indian Accounting Standards) Rules, 2015, the following additional adjustments shall be done to the book profit as computed above in point no. (iii) as per section 115JB(2) read with Explanation 1-

(a) increased by all amounts credited to other comprehensive income in the statement of profit and loss under the head "Items that will not be re-classified to profit or loss";

(b) decreased by all amounts debited to other comprehensive income in the statement of profit and loss under the head "Items that will not be re-classified to profit or loss";

However, no adjustment shall be made where the amount credited or debited to other comprehensive income under the head "Items that will not be re-classified to profit or loss", in respect of —

(i) Revaluation surplus for assets in accordance with the Indian Accounting Standards 16 and Indian Accounting Standards 38; or

(ii) Gains or losses from investments in equity instruments designated at fair value through other comprehensive income in accordance with the Indian Accounting Standards 109. [First proviso to section 115JB(2A)]

However, the book profit of the previous year, in which such asset or investment is retired, disposed, realised or otherwise transferred, shall be increased or decreased, as the case may be, by the amount or the aggregate of the amounts as referred to in the first proviso for the previous year or any of the preceding previous years and relatable to such asset or investment [Second proviso to section 115JB(2A)]

The other comprehensive income (OCI) includes certain items that will permanently be recorded in reserves and hence, never be reclassified to the statement of profit and loss included in the computation of book profits. These items shall be included in book profit for MAT purposes at the point of time as specified below-

Sl.No	Items	Point of time
1	Changes in revaluation surplus of Property, Plant or Equipment (PPE) and Intangible assets (Ind AS 16 and Ind AS 38)	To be included in book profits at the time of realisation/ disposal/ retirement or otherwise transferred
2	Gains and losses from investments in equity instruments designated at fair value through other comprehensive income (Ind AS 109)	To be included in book profits at the time of realisation/ disposal/ retirement or otherwise transferred
3	Remeasurements of defined	To be included in book profits every year as the re-measurements gains

	benefit plans (Ind AS 19)	and losses arise
4	Any other item	To be included in book profits every year as the gains and losses arise

(c) Increased by amounts or aggregate of the amounts debited to the statement of profit and loss on distribution of non-cash assets to shareholders in a demerger in accordance with Appendix A of the Indian Accounting Standards 10;

(d) Decreased by all amounts or aggregate of the amounts credited to the statement of profit and loss on distribution of non-cash assets to shareholders in a demerger in accordance with Appendix A of the Indian Accounting Standards 10;

Appendix A of Ind AS 10 provides that any distributions of non-cash assets to shareholders in a demerger shall be accounted for at fair value. The difference between the carrying value of the assets and the fair value is recorded in the statement of profit and loss.

Correspondingly, the reserves are debited at fair value to record the distribution as a 'deemed dividend' to the shareholders. As there is a corresponding adjustment in retained earnings, this difference arising on demerger shall be excluded from the book profits.

II Sub-section (2B) states that in demerger, in the case of a resulting company, the property and the liabilities of the undertaking or undertakings being received by it are recorded at values different from values appearing in the books of account of the demerged company immediately before the demerger, any change in such value shall be ignored for the purpose of computation of book profit of the resulting company under this section.

III MAT on first time adoption [Section 115JB(2C)]:

In case of Ind AS compliant company, the book profit of the year of convergence and each of the following four previous years, shall be further increased or decreased, as the case may be, by one fifth of the transition amount.

In the first year of adoption of Ind AS, the companies would prepare Ind AS financial statement for reporting year with a comparative financial statement for immediately preceding year. As per Ind AS 101, a company would make all Ind AS adjustments on the opening date of the comparative financial year. The entity is also required to present an equity reconciliation between previous Indian GAAP and Ind AS amounts, both on the opening date of preceding year as well as on the closing date of the preceding year.

For the purposes of computation of book profits of the year of adoption and for adjustments, the amounts adjusted as on the opening date of the first year of adoption shall be considered.

For example, companies which adopt Ind AS with effect from 1 April 2016 are required to prepare their financial statements for the year 2016-17 as per the requirements of Ind AS. Such companies are also required to prepare an opening balance sheet as of 1st April 2015 and restate the financial statements for the comparative period 2015-16.

In such a case, the first time adoption adjustments as of 31 March 2016 shall be considered for computation of MAT liability for previous year 2016-17 (Assessment year 2017-18) and thereafter.

Further, in this case, the five years period shall be previous years 2016-17, 2017-18, 2018-19, 2019-20 and 2020-21.

However, the book profit of the previous year in which the asset or investment referred to in sub clauses (B) to (E) of clause (iii) of the Explanation is retired, disposed, realised or otherwise transferred shall be increased or decreased, as the case may be, by the amount of the aggregate of the amounts referred to in the said sub-clause relatable to such asset or investment: [First proviso to section 115JB(2C)]

Further, the book profit of the previous year in which the foreign operation referred to in sub clause (F) of clause (iii) of the Explanation is disposed or otherwise transferred, shall be increased or decreased, as the case may be, by the amount of the aggregate of the amounts referred to in the said sub-clause relatable to such foreign operations. [Second proviso to sub-section (2C)]

Meaning of certain terms [Explanation to Section 115JB(2C)]

Clause	Term	Meaning
(i)	Year of convergence	the previous year within which the convergence date falls.
(ii)	Convergence date	the first day of the first Indian Accounting Standards reporting period as defined in the Ind AS 101.
(iii)	Transition amount	the amount or aggregate of the amounts adjusted in other equity (excluding capital reserve and securities premium reserve) on convergence date but not including the following: (A) Amount or aggregate of the amounts adjusted in the other comprehensive income on the convergence date which shall be subsequently re-classified to the profit and loss; (B) Revaluation surplus for assets in accordance with the Indian Accounting Standards 16 and

		Indian Accounting Standards 38 adjusted on the convergence date; (C) Gains or losses from investments in equity instruments designated at fair value through other comprehensive income in accordance with the Indian Accounting Standards 109 adjusted on the convergence date; (D) Adjustments relating to items of property, plant and equipment and intangible assets recorded at fair value as deemed cost in accordance with paragraphs D5 and D7 of the Indian Accounting Standards 101 on the convergence date; (E) Adjustments relating to investments in subsidiaries, joint ventures and associates recorded at fair value as deemed cost in accordance with paragraph D15 of the Indian Accounting Standards 101 on the convergence date; and (F) Adjustments relating to cumulative translation differences of a foreign operation in accordance with paragraph D13 of the Indian Accounting Standards 101 on the convergence date. [clause (iii)]

Transitional adjustments: Analysis
(i)	The adjustments arising on account of transition to Ind AS from existing Indian GAAP is required to be recorded directly in Other Equity at the date of transition to Ind AS. These adjustments has to be made in the following manner:
	(a)	The book profit of the year of convergence and the following four previous years shall be increased or decreased with the transitional adjustments recorded directly in Other Equity excluding capital reserve and securities premium reserve and excluding the amounts referred in (A) to (F) (in the definition of Transition Amount), on the convergence date.
	(b)	Those adjustments recorded in other comprehensive income referred in (A) above (in the definition of Transition Amount) and which would subsequently be reclassified to the profit and loss, shall be included in book profits in the year in which these are reclassified to the profit and loss, therefore these amounts are excluded from the transition amount.
	(c)	Those adjustments recorded in other comprehensive income referred in (B) and (C) (in the definition of Transition Amount) above and which would never be subsequently reclassified to the profit and loss shall be included in book profits as specified hereunder:

Sl. No	Items	Point of time
1	Changes in revaluation surplus of Property, Plant or Equipment (PPE) and Intangible assets (Ind AS 16 and Ind AS 38)	To be included in book profits at the time of realisation/ disposal/ retirement or otherwise transferred
2	Gains and losses from investments in equity instruments designated at fair value through other comprehensive income (Ind AS 109)	To be included in book profits at the time of realisation/ disposal/ retirement or otherwise transferred
3	Remeasurements of defined benefit plans (Ind AS 19)	To be included in book profits every year as the re-measurements gains and losses arise
4	Any other item	To be included in book profits every year as the gains and losses arise

(d) The other adjustments referred in (D), (E) and (F) (in the definition of Transition Amount) above shall be made in the following manner:

(I) Property, Plant and Equipment (PPE) and intangible assets at fair value as deemed cost [referred in (D) (in the definition of Transition Amount) above]

An entity may use fair value in its opening Ind AS Balance Sheet as deemed cost for an item of PPE or an intangible asset as mentioned in paragraphs D5 and D7 of Ind AS 101. In such cases the treatment shall be as under—

- The existing provisions for computation of book profits under section 115JB of the Act provide that in case of revaluation of assets, any impact on account of such revaluation shall be ignored for the purposes of computation of book profits. Further, the adjustments in retained earnings on first time adoption with respect to items of PPE and Intangible assets shall be ignored for the purposes of computation of book profits.
- Depreciation shall be computed ignoring the amount of aforesaid retained earnings adjustment.

Similarly, gain/loss on realization/ disposal/ retirement of such assets shall be computed ignoring the aforesaid retained earnings adjustment.

		II.	Investments in subsidiaries, joint ventures and associates at fair value as deemed cost [referred in (E) (in the definition of Transition Amount) above] An entity may use fair value in its opening Ind AS Balance Sheet as deemed cost for investment in a subsidiary, joint venture or associate in its separate financial statements as mentioned in paragraph D15 of Ind AS 101. In such cases retained earnings adjustment shall be included in the book profit at the time of realisation of such investment.
		III.	Cumulative translation differences [referred in (F) (in the definition of Transition Amount) above] • An entity may elect a choice whereby the cumulative translation differences for all foreign operations are deemed to be zero at the date of transition to Ind AS. Further, the gain or loss on a subsequent disposal of any foreign operation shall exclude translation differences that arose before the date of transition to Ind AS and shall include only the translation differences after the date of transition. • In such cases, to ensure that such Cumulative translation differences on the date of transition which have been transferred to retained earnings, are taken into account, these shall be included in the book profits at the time of disposal of foreign operations as mentioned in paragraph 48 of Ind AS 21.
(ii)	All other adjustments to retained earnings (recorded as other equity) at the time of transition (including for example, Decommissioning Liability, Asset retirement obligations, Foreign exchange capitalisation/ decapitalization, Borrowing costs adjustments etc.) shall be included in book profits, equally over a period of five years starting from the year of first time adoption of Ind AS.
(iii)	Section 115JB of the Act already provides for adjustments on account of deferred tax and its provision. Any deferred tax adjustments recorded in Reserves and Surplus on account of transition to Ind AS shall also be ignored.

(v) Clarifications on computation of book profit for the purposes of levy of Minimum Alternate Tax (MAT) under section 115JB of the Income-tax Act, 1961 for Ind AS compliant companies [Circular No. 24/2017 dated 25.07.2017]

After amendment in section 115JB for computation of book profit for the purposes of levy of Minimum Alternate Tax (MAT) for Indian Accounting Standards (Ind AS) compliant companies, CBDT received representations from various stakeholders seeking clarifications on certain issues arising therefrom.

Accordingly, the CBDT has vide this circular, clarified these issues by way of the following FAQs:

Question 1: The profit for the period may include Marked to market (MTM) gains/ losses on account of fair value adjustments on various financial instruments recognised through profit or loss (FVTPL). A situation may arise where the losses on account of fair value adjustments could be added back in view of clause (i) of Explanation 1 to section 115JB(2) of the Act. Whether the losses on such instruments require any adjustment for computing book profits for the purposes of MAT?

Answer: Since MTM gains recognised through profit or loss on FVTPL classified financial instruments are included in book profits for MAT computation, it is clarified that MTM losses on such instruments recognised through profit or loss shall not require any adjustments as provided under clause (i) of Explanation 1 to section 115JB(2) of the Act. However, in case of provision for diminution/ impairment in value of assets other than FVTPL financial instruments, the existing adjustment of clause (i) of Explanation 1 to section 115JB (2) of the Act shall apply.

It is further clarified that for financial instruments where gains and losses are recognised through Other Comprehensive income (OCI), the amended provisions of MAT shall continue to apply.

Question 2: For the purposes of section 115JB of the Act, what shall be the starting point for computing Book profits for Ind AS compliant companies? Whether Profit before other comprehensive income [Item number XIII in Part 2 (Statement of Profit and Loss) of Division II of Schedule III to the Companies Act 2013] or Total Comprehensive Income (including other comprehensive income) [Item number XV in Part 2 (Statement of Profit and Loss) of Division II of Schedule III to the Companies Act 2013] shall be the starting point?

Answer: Starting point for computing Book profits for Ind AS compliant companies shall be Profit before other comprehensive income [Item number XIII in Part 2 (Statement of Profit and Loss) of Division II of Schedule III to the Companies Act 2013].

Question 3: As per Explanation to Section 115JB(2C) of the Act, the convergence date is defined as the first day of the first Indian Accounting standards reporting period as defined in Ind AS 101. The Memorandum explaining the provisions of the Finance Bill 2017 mentions that the adjustment as on the last day of the comparative period is to be considered. It may be clarified as to what would be the appropriate manner for computation of transition amount on convergence date, 1st April i.e. at the start of the day or at the end of the day?

Answer: In the first year of adoption of Ind AS, the companies would prepare Ind AS financial statement for reporting year with a comparative financial statement for immediately preceding year. As per Ind AS 101, a company would make all Ind AS adjustments on the opening date of the comparative financial year. The entity is also required to present an equity reconciliation between previous Indian GAAP and Ind AS amounts, both on the opening date of preceding year as well as on the closing date of the preceding year. The amounts as on start of the opening date of the first year of adoption should be considered for the purposes of computation of transition amount.

For example, companies which adopt Ind AS with effect from 1st day of April 2016 are required to prepare their financial statements for the year 2016-17 as per requirements of Ind AS. Such companies are also required to prepare an opening balance sheet as of 1st day of April 2015 and restate the financial statements for the comparative period 2015-16. In such a case, the first time adoption adjustments as of 31st day of March 2016 should be considered [i.e. the start of business on 1st day of April 2016 (or, equivalently, close of business on 31st day of March 2016)] for computation of MAT liability for previous year 2016-17 (Assessment year 2017-18) and thereafter.

Question 4: As per Indian GAAP, proposed dividend was required to be recognized in the financial statements for the year for which it pertained to even though these were declared in the subsequent year. Section 115JB of the Act already provides for adjustments for dividend for computation of book profit. As per Ind AS, the amount of proposed dividend (including dividend distribution taxes) is required to be recognized in the year in which it has been declared rather than the year for which it pertains to. Accordingly, on transition to Ind AS, the amount of proposed dividend for FY 2015-16 which was recognized in profit and loss account in FY 2015-16 is required to be reversed and credited to Retained Earnings. For the computation of MAT, whether these balances would form part of the transition amount and thus be adjusted over a period of 5 years?

Answer: Adjustment of proposed dividend (including dividend distribution taxes) shall not form part of the transition amount.

Question 5: Under Ind AS, adjustments on the transition date may have a corresponding impact on deferred taxes. Should the deferred taxes on such amounts be considered for the purpose of transition amount?

Answer: Any deferred taxes adjustments recorded on the transition date shall be ignored for the purpose of computing Transition Amount.

Question 6: As mentioned in Question No.1, clause (i) of Explanation 1 to Section 115JB(2) of the Act provides for adjustments for computation of book profit for the amount or amounts set aside as provision for diminution in the value of any asset. Convergence date adjustments may include adjustment for Provision for Bad and Doubtful Debts (Expected Credit Loss adjustment) at the time of transition. Whether these adjustments would form part of the transition amount referred to in section 115JB(2C) of the Act?

Answer: Adjustments relating to provision for diminution in the value of any assets other than the ones mentioned in Question Number 1 above, shall not be considered for the purpose of computation of the Transition Amount. Therefore, adjustments relating to provision for doubtful debts shall not be considered for the purpose of computation of the transition amount.

Question 7: Under Section 115JB of the Act, transition amount has been defined as the amount or the aggregate of the amounts adjusted in the 'Other Equity' (excluding capital reserve and securities premium reserve) on the convergence date. Whether changes in share application money on reclassification to 'Other Equity' would form part of the Transition Amount?

Answer: Share application money pending allotment which is reclassified to Other Equity on transition date shall not be considered for the purpose of computing Transition Amount.

Question 8: Under Ind AS, Investments in preference share is considered to be a liability and the corresponding dividend expense is debited to Profit and loss account as interest cost. Should such interest expenses on preference shares be deducted for the purpose of MAT computation?

Answer: For the purpose of computation of MAT, profit/Transition Amount shall be increased by dividend/interest on preference share (including dividend distribution taxes) whether presented as dividend or interest.

Question 9: How do we account for items such as equity component, if any, of financial instruments like Non-Convertible debentures (NCDs), Interest free loan etc. included in other equity as per Ind AS for the computation of transition amount under MAT?

Answer: Items such as equity component of financial instruments like NCD's, Interest free loan etc. would be included in the Transition Amount.

Question 10: Where revaluation/fair value adjustments have been made to items of Property, Plant & Equipment (PPE) under Ind AS, as per section 115JB of the Act, the book profit of the previous year in which the items of PPE are retired, disposed or realised shall be increased or decreased, as the case may be, by the revaluation amount relatable to such items of PPE. Whether the revaluation amount to be considered for adjustment should be the gross amount of the revaluation or the amount after adjustment of the depreciation on the revaluation amount?

Answer: The book profit of the previous year in which the items of PPE are retired, disposed, realised or otherwise transferred shall be increased or decreased, as the case may be, by the revaluation amount after adjustment of the depreciation on the revaluation amount relatable to such asset. This has been explained by an illustration as under:

Particulars	Erstwhile Indian GAAP	Ind-AS (considering fair value/revaluation adjustment on PPE)	Fair Value/ Revaluation Adjustments and corresponding depreciation
WDV/Deemed Cost as on 1 April 2015	100	1000	900
Depreciation @ 10% for F.Y. 2015-16	10	100	90
WDV as on 1 April 2016	90	900	810
Depreciation @ 10% for F.Y. 2016-17	9	90	81
WDV as on 1 April 2017	81	810	*729
Sale value as on 1 April 2017	900	900
Profit on sale credited to P & L	819	90
Adjustment for MAT - revaluation amount after adjustment of the depreciation	0	*729
Profit on sale to be considered for MAT	819	819

Question 11: How should adjustments for service concession arrangements be treated for the purpose of computation of book profit under MAT?

Answer: Adjustments on account of Service Concession arrangements would be included in the Transition Amount and also on an ongoing basis.

Question 12: Existing clause (iii) of explanation to section 115JB(2) of the Act provides for deduction of lower of the amount of loss brought forward or unabsorbed depreciation as per books of account for computation of book profits. In case where, on adjustment of transition amount, the losses as per books of account gets wiped off, whether deduction for the said amount would be available for assessment year 2017-2018 onwards?

Answer: For assessment year 2017-2018, the deduction of lower of depreciation or losses shall be allowed based on the position as on 31 March 2016. For the subsequent periods, the position as per books of account drawn as per Ind AS shall be considered for computing lower of loss brought forward or unabsorbed depreciation.

Question 13: How Capital Reserves or Securities Premium existing as per old Indian GAAP reclassified to Retained Earnings/ Other Reserves on Convergence date be treated for MAT purpose.

Answer: The Capital Reserves or Securities Premium existing as on the convergence date as per the erstwhile Indian GAAP which are reclassified to Retained Earnings/ Other Reserves under Ind AS and vice versa, shall not be considered for the purposes of Transition Amount.

It is further clarified, that even after such reclassifications, the amount of revaluation reserve shall continue to be considered as revaluation reserve for the purposes of computation of book profit and shall also include transfer to any other reserves by whatever name called or capitalised.

Question 14: Companies which follow accounting year other than March, 2017 ending for Companies Act purposes and are required to transition to Ind AS will have to prepare financial statements for MAT purposes for FY 2016-17 partly under Indian GAAP and partly under Ind AS. How should such companies compute MAT on transition to Ind AS?

Answer: In view of second proviso to section 115JB(2) of the Act, companies will be required to follow Indian GAAP for the pre-convergence period and Ind AS for the balance period.

For example, a Company following December ending will be required to prepare, accounts for MAT purposes under Indian GAAP for 9 months upto December 2016 and under Ind AS for 3 months thereafter. The transition amount will be calculated with reference to 1st January, 2017.

(vi) Compulsory filing of return of income and furnishing of report from Chartered Accountant

The section also provides that every company to which this section applies shall furnish, along with the return of income filed under section 139(1) or in response to a notice under section 142(1)(i), a report from a chartered accountant certifying that the book profit has been computed in accordance with the provisions of this section [Section 115JB(4)].

(vii) Allowability of carry forward of losses

In respect of the relevant previous year, the amounts determined under the provisions of section 32(2) or section 72(1)(ii) or section 73 or section 74 or section 74A(3), shall be allowed to be carried forward [Section 115JB(3)].

(viii) Applicability of other provisions of the Act

All other provisions of the Act shall apply to every assessee, being a company mentioned in this section [Section 115JB(5)].

(ix) Non-applicability of MAT [Section 115JB(5A)].

The provisions of MAT u/s 115JB shall not apply to any income accruing or arising to a company from life insurance business referred to in section 115B

(x) Non-applicability of MAT in respect of certain foreign companies

Explanation 4 to section 115JB with retrospective effect from 01.04.2001 provides for non-applicability of levy of MAT under section 115JB in the following cases:

	Existence of DTAA with the country of residence of the foreign company	Additional condition to be satisfied for non-applicability of MAT
(i)	The foreign company is a resident of a country or a specified territory with which India has a DTAA under section 90(1) or the Central Government has adopted any agreement between specified associations for double taxation relief under section 90A(1)	It should not have a permanent establishment in India in accordance with the provisions of such Agreement
(ii)	The foreign company is a resident of a country with which India does not have an agreement of the nature referred to in clause (i) above	It is not required to seek registration under any law for the time being in force relating to companies.

Explanation 4A to section 115JB has been inserted with retrospective effect from 01.04.2001 to clarify that MAT provisions shall not be applicable to an assessee, being a foreign company, where its total income comprises solely of profits and gains from business referred to in section 44B or section 44BB or section 44BBA and such income has been offered to tax at the presumptive rates specified in these sections.

(xi) Concessional rate of MAT for unit located in IFSC

In case of a company, being a unit located in International Financial Services Centre and deriving its income solely in convertible foreign exchange, the minimum alternate tax shall be chargeable at the rate of 9% instead of 15%. [Section 115JB(7)]

A domestic company, ABC Ltd., furnishes the following particulars in respect of Assessment Year 2020-21 and seeks your opinion on the application of section 115JB. You are also required to compute the total income and tax payable.

(1)	Profits as per Statement of profit and loss as per the Companies Act, 2013		₹ 215 Lacs
(2)	Statement of Profit and Loss includes:
	(a) Credits:	Dividend income from Indian companies	₹ 20 Lacs
		Excess realized on sale of land held as investment	₹ 30 Lacs
	(b) Debits:	Depreciation on straight line method basis	₹ 100 Lacs
		Provision for loss of subsidiary company	₹ 60 Lacs
(3)	Depreciation allowable as per the Income-tax Rules, 1962		₹ 150 Lacs

(4)	Short term Capital gains on sale of land mentioned above as computed under Income-tax Act, 1961	₹ 40 Lacs
(5)	Losses brought forward as per books of account and as per Income-tax Act, 1961:
	Business loss	₹ 50 Lacs
	Unabsorbed depreciation	₹ 60 Lacs

The company has represented to you that the excess realized on sale of land cannot form part of the book profit for purposes of section 115JB. You will have to deal with this issue assuming that ABC Ltd. is not required to comply with the Indian Accounting Standards. Ignore the provisions of section 115BAA.

Note - The turnover of ABC Ltd. for the P.Y.2017-18 was ₹ 390 crore.

SOLUTION

In the case of a company, it has been provided that where tax on 15% of book profit exceeds tax on total income computed as per normal provisions, the book profit shall be deemed to be the total income for tax purposes.

It is therefore necessary to compute total income as per Income-tax Act, 1961 as well as book profits.

I. Computation of Total income as per the Income-tax Act, 1961

Particulars	₹ (in Lacs)
Net profit as per statement of profit and loss		215
Add: Depreciation debited to statement of profit and loss	100
Provision for losses of subsidiary company	60	160
		375
Less: Dividend income – exempt under section 10(34)	20
Excess realized on sale of land (considered separately)	30
Depreciation allowable as per Income-tax Rules, 1962	150	200
Business Income		175
Less: Set-off of brought forward business loss		50
		125
Capital gains (Short term capital gains)		40
		165
Less: Set-off of unabsorbed depreciation		60
Total Income as per Income-tax Act, 1961		105

II. Computation of book profit under section 115JB

Particulars	(₹ in Lacs)
Net profit as per statement of profit and loss		215
Add: Provision for loss of subsidiary		60
Depreciation		100
		375
Less: Dividend income exempt under section 10(34)	20
Depreciation	100
Business loss which is less than unabsorbed depreciation	50	170
"Book Profit"		205

III. Computation of Tax liability under the normal provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961

Total income as per the Income-tax Act, 1961 is ₹ 105 Lacs,

Particulars	₹
Tax payable ₹ 105 Lacs @ 25%, since the turnover of the company for the previous year 2017-18 does not exceed ₹ 400 crore.	26,25,000
Add: Surcharge @ 7%	1,83,750
	28,08,750
Add: Health and education cess @ 4%	1,12,350
Total Tax payable	29,21,100

IV. Computation of Minimum Alternate Tax

Particulars	₹
Tax @ 15% of book profit of ₹ 205 lacs	30,75,000
Add: Surcharge @ 7%	2,15,250
	32,90,250
Add: Health and education cess @ 4%	1,31,610
Minimum Alternate Tax payable	34,21,860

Since 15% of book profit exceeds the tax payable as per the Income-tax Act, 1961, the book profit of ₹ 205 lacs would be deemed to be the total income and the tax payable on such total income shall be 15% thereof i.e. ₹ 30,75,000 plus surcharge @ 7% being ₹ 2,15,250 plus health and education cess @ 4% (of tax and surcharge) being ₹ 1,31,610. Total tax liability would be ₹ 34,21,860.

Note: With regard to the company's representation, in respect of capital gain whether liable for book profit tax under section 115JB, it may be noted that since the excess realized on sale of land has been included in net profit computed under Schedule III of the Companies Act, 2013, it will form part of book profit [Bombay High Court judgment in CIT v. Veekay Lal Investment Co. Pvt. Ltd. (2001) 249 ITR 597].

Maitri Jeans (P) Ltd. is in the business of manufacturing jeans. For the assessment year 2020-21, it paid tax @ 15% on its book profit computed under section 115JB. The Assessing Officer though satisfied that it is liable to pay book profit tax U/s. 115JB, wants to charge interest under sections 234B and 234C as no advance tax was paid during the financial year 2019-20. The company seeks your opinion on the proposed levy of interest. Advice.

SOLUTION

The issue under consideration is whether interest under sections 234B and 234C can be levied where a company is assessed on the basis of its book profit under section 115JB.

The Supreme Court, in Joint CIT v. Rolta India Ltd. (2011) 330 ITR 470, observed that there is a specific provision in section 115JB(5) providing that all other provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 shall apply to every assessee, being a company, mentioned in that section. Section 115JB is a self-contained code pertaining to MAT, and by virtue of sub-section (5) thereof, the liability for payment of advance tax would be attracted.

According to section 207, tax shall be payable in advance during any financial year, in accordance with the provisions of sections 208 to 219 (both inclusive), in respect of the total income of the assessee which would be chargeable to tax for the assessment year immediately following that financial year.

Under section 115JB(1), where the tax payable on total income is less than 15% of "book profit" of a company, the "book profit" would be deemed to be the total income and tax would be payable at the rate of 15%.

Since in such cases, the book profit is deemed to be the total income, therefore, as per the provisions of section 207, tax shall be payable in advance in respect of such book profit (which is deemed to be the total income) also.

Therefore, if a company defaults in payment of advance tax in respect of tax payable under section 115JB, it would be liable to pay interest under sections 234B and 234C.

Therefore, even though Maitri Jeans (P) Ltd. is assessed on the basis of its book profit under section 115JB for A.Y.2020-21, it is liable to pay advance tax. Since Maitri Jeans (P) Ltd. has not paid any advance tax during the financial year 2019-20, the levy of interest under section 234B and 234C is valid.

Computation of "Book Profit" for levy of MAT under section 115JB for A.Y.2020-21

Particulars	₹	₹
Net Profit as per Statement of Profit and Loss Add: Net profit to be increased by the following amounts		15,00,000

as per Explanation 1 to section 115JB:
- Provision for the loss of subsidiary	70,000
- Provision for doubtful debts, being the amount set aside as provision for diminution in the value of any asset	75,000
- Provision for income-tax	1,05,000
[As per Explanation 2 to section 115JB, income-tax shall include, inter alia, any interest charged under the Act. Therefore, whole of the amount of provision for income-tax including ₹ 45,000 towards interest payable has to be added]
- Depreciation	3,60,000	6,10,000

Less: Net profit to be decreased by the following amounts as per Explanation 1 to section 115JB:
- Share in income of an AOP as a member	1,00,000
[In a case, where AOP has paid tax on its total income at maximum marginal rate, no income-tax is payable by the company, being a member of AOP, in accordance with the provisions of section 86. Therefore, share in income of an AOP on which no income-tax is payable in accordance with the provisions of section 86, would be reduced while computing book profit, since the same has been credited to statement of profit and loss]
- Income from units in UTI	75,000
[Income from units in UTI shall be reduced while computing the book profits, since the same is exempt under section 10(35)]
- Depreciation other than depreciation on revaluation of assets (₹ 3,60,000 – ₹ 1,50,000)	2,10,000
- Unabsorbed depreciation or brought forward business loss, whichever is less, as per the books of account.
[Lower of unabsorbed depreciation ₹ 4,00,000 and brought forward business loss ₹ 6,00,000 as per books of accounts has to be reduced while computing the book profit]	4,00,000	7,85,000
Book Profit		13,25,000

Computation of MAT liability under section 115JB

Particulars	₹
15% of book profit	1,98,750
Add: Health and education cess @ 4%	7,950
Minimum Alternate Tax liability	2,06,700

Notes:

(1) It is only the specific items mentioned under Explanation 1 to section 115JB, which can be adjusted from the net profit as per the Statement of Profit and Loss prepared as per the Companies Act for computing book profit for levy of MAT. Since the following items are not specified thereunder, the same cannot be adjusted for computing book profit:

- Interest to financial institution (unpaid before filing of return) and
- Penalty for infraction of law

(2) Provision for gratuity based on actuarial valuation is an ascertained liability [CIT v. Echjay Forgings (P) Ltd. (2001) 251 ITR 15 (Bom.)]. Hence, the same should not be added back to compute book profit.

(3) As per proviso to section 115JB(6), the profits from unit established in special economic zone cannot be excluded while computing the book profit, and hence, such income would be liable for MAT.

(4) Long-term capital gains cannot be deducted while computing book profit even if such amount of capital gains is invested in specified assets under section 54EC, since book profit has to be computed by adding/ deducting the items mentioned under Explanation 1 to section 115JB alone. Capital Gains reflected in the statement of profit and loss shall be part of book profit under section 115JB. Capital gains exempted under section 54EC cannot also be excluded for computing book profit. [CIT v. Veekaylal Investment Co. P. Ltd. (2001) 249 ITR 597 (Bom.) & N J Jose and Co. (P) Ltd. v. ACIT (2010) 321 ITR 132 (Ker.)]

(xii) Set-off of credit of tax paid under section 115JB [Section 115JAA]

(1) This section provides that where tax is paid in any assessment year in relation to the deemed income under section 115JB(1), the excess of tax so paid over and above the tax payable under the other provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961, will be allowed as tax credit in the subsequent years. However, no interest would be payable on the tax credit allowed.

(2) The tax credit is, therefore, the difference between the tax paid under section 115JB(1) and the tax payable on the total income computed in accordance with the other provisions of the Act.

(3) This tax credit is allowed to be carried forward for 15 assessment years succeeding the assessment year in which the credit became allowable.

(4) Such credit is allowed to be set off against the tax payable on the total income in an assessment year in which the tax is computed in accordance with the provisions of the Act, other than 115JB, to the extent of excess of such tax payable over the tax payable on book profits in that year.

(5) Where as a result of order passed, the amount of tax payable is reduced or increased, the amount of tax credit allowed shall also be reduced or increased accordingly.

(6) In case of conversion of a private company or unlisted public company into an LLP, the tax credit under section 115JAA for MAT paid by the company under section 115JB would not be allowed to the successor LLP.

(7) Where the amount of tax credit in respect of any income-tax paid in any country or specified territory outside India, under section 90 or section 90A or section 91, allowed against the tax payable under the provisions of section 115JB(1) exceeds the amount of such tax credit admissible against the tax payable by the assessee on its income in accordance with the other provisions of this Act, then, while computing the amount of credit under this sub-section, such excess amount shall be ignored.

In other words, the amount of tax credit in respect of MAT shall not be allowed to be carried forward to subsequent year to the extent such credit relates to the difference between the amount of foreign tax credit (FTC) allowed against MAT and FTC allowable against the tax computed under regular provisions of Act other than the provisions relating to MAT.

Note – The Taxation Laws (Amendment) Ordinance, 2019, promulgated by the President of India on 20.9.2019, has reduced the rate of MAT from 18.5% of book profit (upto A.Y.2019-20) to 15% of book profit (from A.Y.2020-21). In this chapter, MAT has been computed applying the rate of 15% of book profit.

Further, domestic companies eligible to opt for special provisions under section 115BAA and 115BAB from A.Y.2020-21 would not be liable to pay MAT under section 115JB. A company opting for section 115BAA from A.Y.2020-21 or any subsequent year cannot set-off MAT credit available to it under section 115JAA from the year in which it exercises such option. The provisions of section 115BAA and 115BAB are discussed in detail in Annexure - 1 at the end of this chapter.

These amendments by the Taxation Laws (Amendment) Ordinance, 2019 would be effective from A.Y.2020-21, after the same is passed by the Parliament.

(5) Tax on distributed profit of domestic companies: Chapter XII D [Section 115-O]

The amounts declared, distributed or paid on or after 1.4.2003 by a domestic company by way of dividends are charged to additional income-tax at the flat rate of 15%, in addition to normal income-tax chargeable on the income of the company. Dividend received from domestic companies on or after 1.4.03 are exempt in the hands of shareholders subject to the amount of dividend chargeable to tax under section 115BBDA [Section 115-O(1)]

However, in respect of dividend referred to in section 2(22)(e), the rate of dividend distribution tax would be 30%.

(i) Removal of cascading effect of dividend distribution effect:

(a) Section 115-O(1A) seeks to provide relief from double taxation of dividends by removing the cascading effect of dividend distribution tax in a multi-tier corporate structure. A domestic holding company receiving dividend from its subsidiary company can reduce the same from dividends declared, distributed or paid by it.

However, there are certain conditions to be fulfilled to avail this benefit. They are –

Status of subsidiary company	Conditions
Where subsidiary is a domestic company	the subsidiary should have paid the dividend distribution tax, as payable on such dividend
Where subsidiary is a foreign company	the tax is payable by the domestic company under section 115BBD on such dividend

Meaning of holding company - For this purpose, a holding company is one which holds more than 50% of the nominal value of equity shares of the subsidiary.

(b) The NPS [Non-Pension System] Trust is exempted from the applicability of dividend distribution tax in respect of dividend paid to any person for, or on behalf of, the NPS Trust. Hence, the dividend paid to any person for, or on behalf of, the NPS Trust would not be subject to dividend distribution tax. Therefore, for the purpose of calculating dividend distribution tax, a company can reduce such dividend from the dividends declared, distributed or paid by it. [Section 115-O(1A)]

(ii) Grossing up of dividend distributed:

Section 115-O(1B) provides that for the purposes of determining the tax on distributed profits payable in accordance with the section 115-O, any amount by way of dividends referred to in section 115-O(1), as reduced by the amount referred to in section 115-O(1A) [referred to as net distributed profits], shall be increased to such amount as would, after reduction of the tax on such increased amount at the rate specified in section 115-O(1), be equal to the net distributed profits.

However, this provision does not apply in respect of dividend referred to in section 2(22)(e).

Yaman Limited is a company in which 60% of the shares are held by Piloo Limited. Yaman Limited declared a dividend amounting to ₹ 35 lacs to its shareholders for the financial year 2018-19 in its Annual General Meeting held on 10th July, 2019. Dividend distribution tax was paid by Yaman Limited on 21st July, 2019. Piloo Limited declared an interim dividend amounting to ₹ 50 lacs on 15th October, 2019.

Compute the amount of tax on dividend payable by Piloo Limited.

What would be your answer, if 58% shares of Piloo Limited are held by Kafi Limited, an Indian company?

SOLUTION

As per section 115-O, dividend distribution tax at the rate of 17.472% (i.e., 15% plus surcharge @ 12% and health and education cess @ 4%) is leviable on dividend declared, distributed or paid by a domestic company. As per section 115-O(1A), a holding company receiving dividend from its domestic subsidiary company can reduce the same from dividend declared, distributed or paid by it. The dividend from its domestic subsidiary company should be received in the same financial [7] As per sub-section (1B) of section 115-O, for the purpose of grossing up, the rate specified in sub-section (1) has to be considered. The rate specified in sub-section (1) is 15%. Further, in the example given in the Explanatory Memorandum to the Finance (No.2) Bill, 2014, grossing up has been done at the rate of 15%.

However, it is also possible to take a view that grossing up should be done at the rate of 17.472% (that is, 15% plus surcharge @ 12% plus health and education cess @ 4%), which is the effective rate of dividend distribution tax.

year in which the holding company declares, distributes or pays the dividend. Further, the dividend shall not be considered for reduction more than once.

The conditions to be fulfilled for this purpose are as follows:

(1) The domestic subsidiary company should have paid the dividend distribution tax which is payable on such dividend;

(2) The recipient holding company should be a domestic company;

For this purpose, a holding company is a company which holds more than 50% of the nominal value of equity shares capital of another company.

Section 115-O (1B) provides that for the purposes of determining the tax on distributed profits payable in accordance with section 115-O, any amount by way of dividends referred to in section 115-O(1), as reduced by the amount referred to in section 115-O(1A) [referred to as net distributed profits], shall be increased to such amount as would, after reduction of the tax on such increased amount at the rate specified in section 115-O(1), be equal to the net distributed profits.

On the basis of the aforesaid provision, dividend distribution tax payable by Piloo Limited shall be computed as follows:

Particulars	₹ in lakh
Dividend distributed by Piloo Ltd.	50.00
Less: Dividend received from subsidiary Yaman Ltd. (60% of ₹ 35 lacs)	21.00
Net distributed profits	29.00
Add: Increase for the purpose of grossing up of dividend ₹ 29 x 100 /85 = ₹ 34.12 minus ₹ 29.00	5.12
Gross dividend	34.12
Additional income-tax payable by Piloo Ltd. u/s 115-O [15% of ₹ 34.12 lakh]	5.12
Add: Surcharge @ 12%	0.61
	5.73
Add: Health and education cess @ 4%	0.23
	5.96

In order to remove the cascading effect of DDT in a multi-tier corporate structure, section 115-O provides that, in case any domestic company (Piloo Ltd., in this case) receives any dividend during the year from any subsidiary company (Yaman Ltd., in this case) and such subsidiary company (Yaman Ltd.) has paid the DDT as payable on such dividend, then, dividend distributed by the holding company (Piloo Ltd.,) in the same year to the extent of dividend received from the subsidiary (Yaman Ltd.), shall not be subject to DDT under section 115-O, irrespective of whether the holding company (Piloo Ltd.) is a subsidiary of any other company (Kafi Ltd., in this case).

Therefore, in spite of the fact that Piloo Ltd. is a subsidiary of Kafi Ltd., it can reduce the amount of dividend received from Yaman Ltd. for computation of dividend distribution tax. Therefore, dividend distribution tax payable by Piloo Ltd. shall be 17.472% of ₹ 34.12 lacs (grossed up amount) i.e. ₹ 5.96 lacs.

(iii) Payment of DDT even if no income-tax is payable by the company

Even if no income-tax is payable by a domestic company on its total income computed in accordance with the provisions of Income-tax Act, 1961, the tax on distributed profits shall be payable by such company [Section 115-O(2)].

(iv) Prescribed period for payment of DDT

Additional income-tax must be paid to the credit of the Central Government within fourteen days from the date of

(a) declaration of any dividend or

(b) distribution of any dividend or

(c) payment of any dividend, whichever is earliest [Section 115-O(3)].

(v) No credit of DDT paid

The tax on distributed profits so paid by the company shall be treated as the final payment of tax in respect of the amount declared, distributed or paid as dividends and no further credit therefore shall be claimed by the company or by any other person in respect of the amount of tax so paid [Section 115-O(4)].

(vi) No deduction under any other provisions

No deduction under any of the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 shall be allowed to the company or shareholder in respect of the dividend income or DDT [Section 115-O(5)].

(vii) Exemption from levy of DDT on distributions by a SPV to a business trust

Non-levy of DDT on distributed profits in respect of any amount declared, distributed or paid by way of dividends (whether interim or otherwise) out of its current income –

(a) By a specified domestic company i.e., by a domestic company in which a business trust has become a holder of the whole of the nominal value of equity share capital of the company (excluding the equity share capital required to be held mandatorily by any other person in accordance with any law for the time being in force or any directions of Government or any regulatory authority or equity share capital held by any Government or Government body).

(b) On or after the specified date i.e., on or after the date of acquisition of such holding referred to in (a) above by the business trust. [Section 115-O(7)].

However, this exemption would not be applicable in respect of any amount declared, distributed or paid at any time by the specified domestic company out of its accumulated profits or current profits upto the date of acquisition by the business trust of the specified holding [as per (a) above] in the SPV.

(viii) Exemption from levy of DDT on distributions by unit located in International Financial Services Centre

No tax on distributed profits shall be chargeable in respect of the total income of a company, being a unit located in International Financial Services Centre, deriving income solely in convertible foreign exchange, for any assessment year on any amount declared, distributed or paid by such company, by way of dividends (whether interim or otherwise) on or after 1st April, 2017 out of its current income, either in the hands of the company or the person receiving such dividend.

Further, any dividend paid out of income accumulated as a unit of International Financial Services Centre after 1st April, 2017 shall not be liable for tax on distributed profits either in the hands of the company or the person receiving such dividend [Section 115-O(8)].

(ix) Interest on non-payment or delayed payment of additional income-tax by the company

Section 115P provides that non-payment of dividend distribution tax within the time allowed under section 115-O(3) attracts simple interest @ 1% for every month or part thereof on the amount of such tax for the period beginning from the date following the date on which the tax was payable and ending with the date on which the tax is actually paid. The Principal Officer of a domestic company and the company is liable to pay interest on such non-payment or delayed payment.

(x) Deemed assessee-in-default

Section 115Q provides that the Principal Officer and the company would be deemed to be an assessee-in-default if they fail to pay the tax in accordance with the provisions of section 115-O.

(6) Levy of additional income-tax on distributed income of a domestic company on account of buy-back of shares [Chapter XII-DA]

(i) Under section 115-O, dividend distribution tax (DDT) is levied on a company at the time when it distributes, declares or pays any dividend to its shareholders. Consequently, the amount of dividend received by the shareholders is not included in the total income of the shareholder, by virtue of exemption provided under section 10(34) subject to the amount of dividend chargeable to tax under section 115BBDA.

(ii) So far, the consideration received by a shareholder on buy-back of shares by a company is not treated as dividend but is taxable as capital gains under section 46A.

(iii) While payment of dividend is one option available to a company to distribute its reserves to its shareholders, another option available is to buy-back its own shares at a consideration determined by it. If the company exercises the former option, the payment of dividend would be subject to DDT under section 115-O and income in the hands of shareholders would be exempt as per section 10(34) subject to section 115BBDA. However, if the company prefers the second option, the income would be taxed in the hands of shareholder under section 46A as capital gains.

(iv) In order to discourage the practice of domestic companies resorting to buy back of unlisted shares instead of payment of dividends in order to avoid payment of tax by way of DDT, especially if the capital gains arising to the shareholders are either not chargeable to tax or are taxable at a lower rate, Chapter XII-DA, comprising of sections 115QA, 115QB and 115QC, levies additional income-tax on buy back of such shares by domestic companies. The income arising to the shareholders in respect of such buy back of unlisted shares by the domestic company would be exempt under section 10(34A), where the company is liable to pay the additional income-tax on the buy-back of shares.

(v) Levy of additional income-tax @ 20% on buyback of shares [Section 115QA]

The Finance (No. 2) Act, 2019 has extended the levy of additional income-tax on buy back to all companies including listed companies with effect from 5.7.2019. Thus, hereafter, In case of buyback of shares (whether listed or unlisted) by domestic companies, additional income-tax @20% (plus surcharge@12% and cess@4%) is leviable in the hands of the company.

Consequently, the income arising to the shareholders in respect of such buyback of shares by the domestic company would be exempt under section 10(34A), since the domestic company is liable to pay additional income-tax on the buyback of shares.

It means additional income tax is applicable to all companies, whether listed or unlisted, with effect from 5th July, 2019, However, the provision of this sub-section shall not apply to such buy of shares being the shares listed on recognized stock exchange in respect of which public announcement has been made before 5th July, 2019 in accordance with the provisions of SEBI (Buy Back Of Securities) Regulation 2018 made under the SEBI Act, 1992 as amended from time to time.

Note: Prior to 5.7.2019, additional income-tax was attracted only in case of buy-back of unlisted shares by domestic companies. Consequently, only holders of unlisted shares were entitled to exemption under section 10(34A).

Meaning of buyback and distributed income
Buyback	Purchase by a company of its own shares in accordance with the provisions of any law for the time being in force to companies [clause (i) of Explanation to section 115QA]
Distributed income	The consideration paid by the company on buy-back of shares as reduced by the amount which was received by the company for issue of such shares, determined in the manner as may be prescribed [clause (ii) of Explanation to section 115QA]

Accordingly, the CBDT has, vide notification no. 94/2016 dated 17-10-2016, inserted Rule 40BB to provide the manner of determination of the amount received by the company for issue of shares being bought back in various circumstances including shares being issued under tax neutral reorganisations and in different tranches as follows:

Sub-rule No.	Circumstance	Manner of determination of amount received by the company in respect of issue of shares being bought back
2	Where shares have been issued by a company to any person way of subscription	Amount actually received by the company in respect of such share including any amount actually received by way of premium.

3	Where the company had at any time, prior to the buy-back of the share, returned any sum out of the amount received in respect of such share	The amount actually received in respect of such shares as reduced by the sum so returned However, if the sum or any part of it so returned was chargeable to additional income-tax under section 115-O and the company has paid such additional income tax, then, such sum or part thereof, as the case may be, shall not be reduced.
4	Where the share has been issued by a company under any plan or scheme under which an employees' stock option has been granted or as part of sweat equity shares	The fair market value of the share as computed in accordance of Rule 3(8), to the extent credited to the share capital and share premium account by the company shall be deemed to be the amount received by the company for issue of said share. "Sweat equity shares" means equity shares issued by a company to its employees or directors at a discount or for consideration other than cash for providing know-how or making available rights in the nature of intellectual property rights or value additions, by whatever name called [Clause (b) of Explanation to section 17(2)(vi)].
5	Where the share has been issued by a company being an amalgamated company, under a scheme of amalgamation, in lieu of the share or shares of an amalgamating company	The amount received by the amalgamating company in respect of such share or shares determined in accordance with this rule, shall be deemed to be the amount received by the amalgamated company in respect of the share so issued by it.
6	Where the Shares are issued by resulting company under a scheme of demerger	Amount received by the resulting company in respect of shares issued by it under a scheme of demerger: $\text{Amount received by the demerged co. in respect of the original shares (determined as per this Rule)} \times \frac{\text{Net book value of assets transferred in a demerger}}{\text{Net worth of the demerged co. immediately before demerger}}$

7		Amount received in respect of the original shares issued by the demerged company post demerger: The amount received by the demerged company in respect of the original shares (-) the amount as so arrived under sub-rule (6).
8	Where the share has been issued or allotted by the company as part of consideration for acquisition of any asset or settlement of any liability	The amount received by the company for issue of such share shall be determined in accordance with the following formula- Amount received = A/B Where, A = an amount being lower of the following amounts- (a) $\text{The amount received by the demerged company in respect of the original shares} \times \frac{\text{The part of consideration being paid by issue of shares}}{\text{The total consideration}}$ (b) the amount of consideration for acquisition of the asset or settlement of the liability to be paid in the form of shares, to the extent credited to the share capital and share premium account by the company; B = the number of shares issued by the company as part of consideration:
9	Where the shares have been issued or allotted by a company on succession or conversion, as the case may be, of a firm into the company or succession of sole proprietary concern by the company	The amount received by the company for issue of shares shall be determined in accordance with the following formula- Amount received = (A-B)/C A= book value of the assets in the balance-sheet as reduced by any amount of tax paid as deduction or collection at source or as advance tax payment as reduced by the amount of tax claimed as refund under the Income-tax Act and any amount shown in the balance-sheet as asset including the unamortized amount of deferred expenditure which does not represent the value of any asset; For determining book value of the assets, any change in the value of the assets consequent to their revaluation shall be ignored. B = book value of liabilities shown in the balance-sheet, but does not include the following amounts, namely:- (a) capital, by whatever name called, of the proprietor or partners of the firm, as the case may be; (b) reserves and surpluses, by whatever name called, including balance in profit and loss account; (c) any amount representing provision for taxation, other than amount of tax paid, as deduction or collection at source or as advance tax payment as reduced by the amount of tax claimed as refund under the Income-tax Act, if any, to the extent of the excess over the tax payable with reference to the book profits in accordance with the law applicable thereto; (d) any amount representing provisions made for meeting liabilities, other than ascertained liabilities; and (e) any amount representing contingent liabilities, C = number of shares issued on conversion or succession.

10	Where the share has been issued or allotted, without any consideration, on the basis of existing shareholding in the company	The consideration in respect of such share shall be deemed to be "Nil"
11	Where the shares have been issued on conversion of preference shares or bond or debenture, debenture-stock or deposit certificate in any form or	The amount received by the company in respect of such instrument as so converted.

	warrants or any other security issued by the company
12	Where the share being bought back is held in dematerialised form and the same cannot be distinctly identified	The amount received by the company in respect of such share shall be the amount received for the issue of share determined in accordance with this rule on the basis of the first-in-first-out method.
13	In any other case	The face value of the share shall be deemed to be the amount received by the company for issue of the share.

(vi) No credit or deduction under the Act in respect of such income or additional income-tax:

The additional income-tax payable by the company shall be the final payment of tax on such income. No credit or deduction shall be claimed by the company or any other person in respect of such tax paid.

Further, no deduction under any provision of the Income-tax Act, 1961 shall be allowed to the company or the shareholder in respect of income, which has been subject to additional income-tax, or tax thereon.

(vii) Interest payable for non-payment of additional income-tax by the company [Section 115QB]

The principal officer of the domestic company and the company will be liable to pay simple interest on the amount of additional income-tax not paid within the specified time. Such interest is leviable at the rate of 1% for every month or part of the month on the amount of such tax not paid or short paid for the period beginning on the date immediately after the last date on which such tax was payable and ending with the date on which the tax is actually paid.

(viii) Deemed Assessee-in-default [Section 115QC]

The principal officer of the domestic company and the company will be deemed to be an assessee-in-default in respect of amount of tax payable by him or it, in case the additional income-tax is not paid to the credit of Central Government within the specified time. In such a case, all the provisions of the Act for the collection and recovery of income-tax would apply.

ILLUSTRATION 6

XYZ Ltd., a domestic company, purchases its own unlisted shares on 4th July, 2019. The consideration for buyback amounted to ₹ 21 lakh, which was paid on the same day. The amount received by the company two years back for issue of such shares determined in the manner specified in Rule 40BB was ₹ 13 lakh. Compute the additional income-tax payable by XYZ Ltd. Compute the interest, if any, payable if such tax is paid to the credit of the Central Government on 29th September, 2019.

What would be your answer if the shares purchased were listed shares, other facts remaining the same?

SOLUTION

XYZ Ltd is liable to pay ₹ 1,86,368 as additional income-tax, which is the amount calculated @ 23.296% (20% plus surcharge @ 12% plus health and education cess @ 4%) on ₹ 8 lakh, being its distributed income (i.e., ₹ 21 lakh – ₹ 13 lakh).

The additional income-tax was payable on or before 18th July, 2019. However, the same was paid only on 29th September 2019.

Period for which interest @ 1% per month or part of a month is leviable -

Period	No. of months/part of month
19th July – 18th August, 2019 (whole of first month)	1
19th August – 18th September, 2019 (whole of second month)	1
19th September – 29th September, 2019 (part of third month)	1
Total number of months	3

Interest under section 115QB is payable @ 1% per month for 3 months on the amount of additional tax payable i.e., ₹ 1,86,300 (rounded off as per Rule 119A). Therefore, interest payable under section 115QB is ₹ 5,589.

If the shares purchased were listed shares, additional income-tax would not be attracted in the hands of XYZ Ltd., since the purchase was made before 5.7.2019.

(7) Special provisions relating to income of shipping companies

To make the Indian shipping industry more competitive, a tonnage tax scheme for taxation of shipping profits has been introduced. Tonnage tax will induce more ships to fly the Indian Flag.

Chapter XII-G, containing sections 115V to 115VZC, provides for special provisions relating to taxation of the income of shipping companies. With the introduction of tonnage tax scheme, the companies have to exercise the option to be assessed under this scheme or under the normal provisions of the Income-tax Act. The salient features of the scheme are as follows:

- A company owning at least one qualifying ship may join.
- A qualifying ship is one with a minimum tonnage of 15 tons and having a valid certificate.
- If a company is incorporated after the initial period or a company which is incorporated before the initial period but becomes a qualifying company for the first time after the initial period, this application is required to be made within three months of the date of incorporation or the date on which it becomes a qualifying company, as the case may be.

(I) Computation of Tonnage Income from Business of Operating Qualifying Ships

Computation of profits and gains from the business of operating qualifying ships [Section 115VA]

(1) A company has the option to compute the income from the business of operating qualifying ships in accordance with the provisions of this Chapter.

(2) Such income is deemed to be the income chargeable to tax under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" in respect of such business.

Operating ships [Section 115VB]

(1) A company shall be regarded as operating a ship if it operates any ship whether owned or chartered by it.

(2) Even if only a part of the ship has been chartered in by it in an arrangement such as slot charter, space charter or joint charter, the company would be regarded as operating a ship.

(3) However, a company will not be regarded as the operator of a ship which has been chartered out on bareboat charter-cum-demise terms or on bareboat charter terms for a period exceeding three years.

(4) "Bareboat charter" means hiring of a ship for a stipulated period on terms which give the charterer possession and control of the ship, including the right to appoint the master and crew;

(5) "Bareboat charter-cum-demise" means a bareboat charter where the ownership of the ship is intended to be transferred after a specified period to the company to whom it has been chartered;

Meaning of "Qualifying company" [Section 115VC]

(1) A company will be a qualifying company if -

(a) it is an Indian company;

(b) the place of effective management of the company is in India;

(c) it owns at least one qualifying ship; and

(d) the main object of the company is to carry on the business of operating ships.

(2) The expression "place of effective management of the company" has been defined in the Explanation to the section to mean –

(a) the place where the board of directors of the company or its executive directors make their decisions; or

(b) in a case where the board of directors routinely approve the commercial and strategic decisions made by the executive directors or officers of the company, the place where such executive directors or officers of the company perform their functions.

Meaning of "Qualifying ship" [Section 115VD]

(1) A ship is a qualifying ship if

(i) it is a seagoing ship or vessel of 15 net tonnage or more;

(ii) it is registered –

(a) under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1958; or

(b) outside India in respect of which a licence has been issued by the Director-General of Shipping under section 406 or 407 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1958

(iii) there is a valid certificate in force indicating the net tonnage of such a ship;

(2) However, the following ships are not "qualifying ships" –

(i) a seagoing ship or vessel if the main purpose for which it is used is for the provision of goods or services of a kind normally provided on land ("seagoing ship" means a ship which is certified as seagoing by the competent authority of any country);

(ii) fishing vessels;

(iii) factory ships (which includes a vessel providing processing services in respect of processing of the fishing produce);

(iv) pleasure craft (i.e. a ship, whose primary use is for the purposes of sport or recreation);

(v) harbour and river ferries;

(vi) offshore installations;

(vii) a qualifying ship which is used as a fishing vessel for a period of more than thirty days during a previous year.

Manner of computation of income under tonnage tax scheme [Section 115VE]

(1) A tonnage tax company engaged in the business of operating qualifying ships should compute the profits from such business under the tonnage tax scheme;

(2) "Tonnage tax company" means a qualifying company in relation to which tonnage tax option is in force;

(3) "Tonnage tax scheme" means a scheme for computation of profits and gains of business of operating qualifying ships under the provisions of this Chapter.

(4) The business of operating qualifying ships giving rise to "relevant shipping income" (i.e. income referred to in section 115V-I(1)) has to be considered as a separate business, distinct from all other activities or business carried on by the company.

(5) Such profits should be computed separately from the profits and gains from any other business.

(6) The tonnage tax scheme will apply only if an option to that effect is made (in accordance with the provisions of section 115VP).

(7) The profits and gains from the business of operating qualifying ships of a company engaged in such business and –

(a) not covered under the tonnage tax scheme or,

(b) which has not made an option to that effect, have to be computed in accordance with the other provisions of this Act.

Tonnage income [Section 115VF]

(1) "Tonnage income" means the income of a tonnage tax company computed in accordance with the provisions of this Chapter. The tonnage income has to be computed in accordance with the provisions of section 115VG given below.

(2) The income so computed is deemed to be the profits chargeable under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession".

(3) Where income is so computed under section 115VG, the relevant shipping income (referred to in section 115V-I(1)) will not be chargeable to tax.

Computation of tonnage income [Section 115VG]

(1) The tonnage income for a previous year is the aggregate of the tonnage income of each qualifying ship.

(2) The tonnage income of a qualifying ship is to be calculated on the basis of the daily tonnage income of such ship multiplied by the number of days in the previous year.

(3) In case the ship is operated by the company as a qualifying ship for only part of the previous year, the tonnage income of the ship will be calculated on the basis of daily tonnage of such ship multiplied by the number of days in part of the previous year.

(4) The daily tonnage income of a qualifying ship has to be computed as under –

Qualifying ship having net tonnage	Amount of daily tonnage income
Up to 1000	₹ 70 for each 100 tons
Exceeding 1,000 but not more than 10,000	₹ 700 plus ₹ 53 for each 100 tons exceeding 1,000 tons
Exceeding 10,000 but not more than 25,000	₹ 5,470 plus ₹ 42 for each 100 tons exceeding 10,000 tons
Exceeding 25,000	₹ 11,770 plus ₹ 29 for each 100 tons exceeding 25,000 tons

(5) "Tonnage" means the tonnage of a ship indicated in the "valid certificate" (i.e. referred to in section 115VX) and includes deemed tonnage computed in the prescribed manner.

(6) "Deemed tonnage" means the tonnage in respect of an arrangement of purchase of slots, slot charter and an arrangement of sharing of break-bulk vessel.

(7) The tonnage is to be rounded off to the nearest multiple of hundred tons. For this if the last figure that amount of tonne is fifty or more, the tonnage shall be increased to the next higher tonnage which is a multiple of 100, otherwise, shall be reduced to the next lower tonnage which is a multiple of 100.

(8) No deduction or set-off is allowed in computing the tonnage income under this Chapter.

Calculation of tonnage income in case of joint operation [Section 115VH]

(1) Where a qualifying ship is operated by two or more companies –

(a) by way of joint interest in the ship or by way of an agreement for the use of the ship and

(b) their respective shares are definite and ascertainable,

the tonnage income of each such company shall be an amount equal to a share of income proportionate to its share of interest.

(2) Where two or more companies are operators of a qualifying ship, the tonnage income of each company shall be computed as if each had been the only operator, if the conditions specified in (a) and (b) of (1) above are not satisfied.

Meaning of "Relevant shipping income" [Section 115V-I]

(1) The "relevant shipping income" of a tonnage tax company means its profits from core activities and its profits from incidental activities

(2) Where the aggregate of income from incidental activities exceeds one-fourth per cent of the turnover from core activities, such excess will not form part of relevant shipping income for the purposes of this Chapter and shall be taxable under the other provisions of this Act.

(3) The core activities of a tonnage tax company are –

(i) its activities from operating qualifying ships; and

(ii) Other ship-related activities, being,

(a) shipping contracts in respect of –

(1) earnings from pooling arrangements i.e.

(i) agreement between two or more persons for providing services through a pool or

(ii) operating one or more ships and sharing earnings or operating profits on the basis of mutually agreed terms;

(2) contracts of affreigtment i.e. a service contract under which a tonnage tax company agrees to transport a specified quantity of specified products at a specified rate, between designated loading and discharging ports over a specified period.

(b) Specific shipping trades, being, -

(1) on-board or on-shore activities of passenger ships comprising of fares and food and beverages consumed on board;

(2) slot charters, space charters, joint charters, feeder services, container box leasing of container shipping.

(4) The incidental activities of the tonnage tax company are the activities which are incidental to the core activities and which may be prescribed for the purpose.

(5) The Central Government can, by notification, exclude any activity under “other ship-related activities” mentioned in (3) above or prescribe the limit up to which such activities can be included in the core activities.

(6) Every notification issued under this Chapter has to be laid before each House of Parliament to make the same effective.

(7) If both Houses agree in making any modification therein, the notification will have effect in such modified form.

(8) Similarly, if both Houses agree that the notification should not be issued, then such notification will be of no effect.

(9) However, such modification or annulment will not affect anything previously done under that notification.

(10) Where a tonnage tax company operates a non-qualifying ship, then the income attributable to operation of the non-qualifying ship should be computed in accordance with the other provisions of this Act.

(11) In the following cases, the relevant shipping income is to be computed as if the transfer had been at market value of the goods and services as on the date of transfer–

(i) Where any goods or services held for the purposes of tonnage tax business are transferred to any other business carried on by a tonnage tax company, or

(ii) where any goods or services held for the purposes of any other business carried on by such tonnage tax company are transferred to the tonnage tax business, and

(iii) In both the above cases, the consideration, if any, for such transfer as recorded in the accounts of the tonnage tax business does not correspond to the market value of such goods or services as on the date of the transfer,

(12) Market value in relation to any goods and services means the price that such goods or services would ordinarily fetch on sale in the open market.

(13) Where the computation of the relevant shipping income in the manner specified above presents exceptional difficulties, the Assessing Officer may compute such income on such reasonable basis as he may deem fit.

(14) If the Assessing Officer is of the opinion that owing to the close connection between the tonnage tax company and such other person or for any other reason, the affairs of the business transacted between the tonnage tax company and any other person are arranged in such a manner that the company gets more than the ordinary profits which might be expected to arise in the tonnage tax business, then he may take into account the amount of income which may be reasonably deemed to have been derived therefrom for computing the relevant shipping income.

(15) In case the relevant shipping income of a tonnage tax company is a loss, then, such loss is to be ignored for the purposes of computing tonnage income.

Treatment of common costs [Section 115VJ]

(1) Where a tonnage tax company also carries on any business or activity other than the tonnage tax business, the common costs attributable to the tonnage tax business should be determined on a reasonable basis.

(2) Where any asset, other than qualifying ship, is not exclusively used for the tonnage tax business by the tonnage tax company, depreciation on such asset has to be allocated between its tonnage tax business and other business.

(3) Such allocation of depreciation has to be done on a fair proportion to be determined by the Assessing Officer, having regard to the use of such asset for the purpose of the tonnage tax business and for the other business.

Depreciation [Section 115VK]

(1) The depreciation for the first previous year of the tonnage tax scheme has to be computed on the written down value of the qualifying ships.

(2) The written down value of the block of assets, being ships, as on the first day of the previous year, has to be divided in the ratio of the book written down value of the qualifying ships (qualifying assets) and the book written down value of the non-qualifying ships (other assets).

(3) The block of qualifying assets would constitute a separate block of assets.

(4) The manner of computing the book written down value of the block of qualifying assets and the block of other assets is as follows –

(a) the book written down value of each qualifying asset and each other asset as on the first day of the previous year is to be determined by taking the book written down value of each asset appearing in the books of account as on the last day of the preceding previous year;

(b) Any change in the value of assets consequent to their revaluation after 10.9.04 is to be ignored;

(c) The book written down value of all the qualifying assets and other assets are to be aggregated;

(d) The ratio of the aggregate book written down value of the qualifying assets to the aggregate book written down value of the other assets has to be determined.

(5) In case an asset forming part of the block of qualifying assets begins to be used for purposes other than the tonnage tax business, an appropriate portion of the written down value allocable to such asset has to be reduced from the written down value of that block and added to the block of other assets.

(6) In case an asset forming part of the block of other assets begins to be used for tonnage tax business, an appropriate portion of the written down value allocable to such asset i.e., the amount which bears the same proportion to the written down value of the block of other assets as on the first day of the previous year as the book written value of the asset beginning to be used for tonnage tax business bears to the total book written down value of all the assets forming the block of other assets, has to be reduced from the written down value of the block of other assets and has to be added to the block of qualifying asset.

(7) Depreciation computed for the previous year on such asset mentioned in (6) shall be allocated in the ratio of number of days for which the asset was used for the tonnage tax business and for purposes other than tonnage tax business.

(8) Depreciation on the block of qualifying assets and block of other assets so created shall be allowed as if the written down value as on the first previous year has been brought forward from the preceding previous year.

(8) The expression "book written down value" means the written down value as appearing in the books of account.

Deemed deduction and set-off and carry forward of losses etc. [Section 115VL]

(1) Any loss/allowance or deduction under sections 30 to 43B relating to or allowable for any of the relevant previous years, would be deemed to have been given full effect to in that previous year itself;

(2) No set-off or carry forward of losses referred to in –

(i) sections 70(1) and 70(3); or

(ii) sections 71(1) and 71(2); or

(iii) section 72(1) or

(iv) section 72A(1),

relating to the business of operating qualifying ships of the company is permissible where such loss relates to any of the previous years when the company is under the tonnage tax scheme;

(3) No deduction under Chapter VI-A is allowable in relation to the profits and gains from the business of operating qualifying ships;

(4) In computing the depreciation allowance under section 32, the written down value of any asset used for the purposes of the tonnage tax business has to be computed as if the company has claimed and has been actually allowed the deduction in respect of depreciation for the relevant previous year.

Set-off and carry forward of losses of tonnage tax business [Section 115VM]

(1) Any losses attributable to its tonnage tax business that have accrued to a company before its entry in tonnage tax scheme can be set off only against the relevant shipping income when the company is under the tonnage tax scheme.

(2) Such losses will not be available for set off against any income other than relevant shipping income in any previous year beginning on or after the date when the company exercises its option under section 115VP.

(3) Any apportionment necessary to determine such losses should be made on a reasonable basis.

Capital gains from transfer of tonnage tax assets [Section 115VN]

(1) Profits or gains arising from the transfer of a capital asset being an asset forming part of the block of qualifying assets is chargeable to income-tax in accordance with the provisions of section 45, read with section 50.

(2) The capital gains so arising has to be computed in accordance with the provisions of sections 45 to 51.

Book profit or loss to be excluded for the purpose of section 115JB [Section 115VO]

This section seeks to exclude the book profits or loss derived from the activities of a tonnage tax company (referred to in section 115V-I(1)) for the purposes of section 115JB.

(II) Procedure for Option of Tonnage Tax Scheme

Method and time of opting for tonnage tax scheme [Section 115VP]

(1) A qualifying company may opt for the tonnage tax scheme by making an application to the Joint-Commissioner having jurisdiction over the company in the prescribed form and manner.

(2) An existing qualifying company should make an application at any time after 30th September, 2004 but before 1st January, 2005, which is the initial period.

(3) In case of a company incorporated after the initial period or a company incorporated before the initial period but which becomes a qualifying company for the first time after the initial period, an application can be made within three months of the date of its incorporation or the date on which it became a qualifying company, as the case may be.

(4) The Joint Commissioner, on receipt of an application for option for tonnage tax scheme, may call for such information or documents from the company as he thinks necessary in order to satisfy himself about the eligibility of the company.

(5) After satisfying himself about the eligibility of the company to make such option for tonnage tax scheme, he can either pass an order in writing approving the option for tonnage tax scheme or, if he is not so satisfied, pass an order in writing refusing to approve the option for tonnage tax scheme.

(6) A copy of such order should be sent to the applicant.

(7) An order refusing to approve the option for tonnage tax scheme can be passed only after giving the applicant a reasonable opportunity of being heard.

(8) Every order granting or refusing the approval of the option for tonnage tax scheme should be passed before the expiry of one month from the end of the month in which the application was received.

(9) Where an order granting approval for tonnage tax scheme is passed, the provisions of this Chapter will apply from the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which the option for tonnage tax scheme is exercised.

Period for which the tonnage tax option will remain in force [Section 115VQ]

(1) An option for tonnage tax scheme (after it has been approved under section 115VP(3)) would remain in force for a period of ten years from the date on which such option has been exercised.

(2) For this purpose, the option would be taken into account from the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which such option is exercised.

(3) An option for tonnage tax scheme would cease to have effect from the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which –

(i) the qualifying company ceases to be so or

(ii) a default is made in complying with the provisions contained in section 115VT or section 115VU or section 115VV.

(4) The tonnage tax option will also cease to have effect in case –

(i) a company is excluded from the tonnage tax scheme under section 115VZC or

(ii) the qualifying company furnishes to the Assessing Officer, a declaration in writing to the effect that the provisions of this Chapter may not be made applicable to it.

(5) In such a case, the profits of the company from the business of operating qualifying ships shall be computed in accordance with the other provisions of the Income-tax Act.

Renewal of tonnage tax scheme [Section 115VR]

(1) An option for tonnage tax scheme approved under section 115VP may be renewed within one year from the end of the previous year in which the option ceases to have effect.

(2) The provisions of sections 115VP and 115VQ discussed above would apply in relation to a renewal of the option for tonnage tax scheme in the same manner as they apply in relation to the approval of option for tonnage tax scheme.

Bar from opting for tonnage tax scheme in certain cases [Section 115VS]

(1) A qualifying company is not eligible to opt for the tonnage tax scheme if –

(i) the company, on its own, opts out of the tonnage tax scheme or

(ii) it makes a default in complying with the provisions of section 115VT or section 115VU or section 115VV or

(iii) its option has been excluded from tonnage tax scheme in pursuance of an order made under section 115VZC(1).

(2) In such cases, the qualifying company will not be eligible to opt for tonnage tax scheme for a period of ten years from the date of such opting out or default or order, as the case may be.

(III) Conditions for Applicability of Tonnage Tax Scheme

Transfer of profits to Tonnage Tax Reserve Account [Section 115VT]

(1) A tonnage tax company is required to credit to a reserve account (called Tonnage Tax Reserve Account) an amount not less than 20% of the book profits derived from its core and incidental activities (referred to in section 115V-I(1)) in each previous year to be utilised in the manner laid down below –

(i) The amount credited should be utilized for acquiring a new ship before the expiry of 8 years for the purposes of the business of the company; and

(ii) Until the acquisition of a new ship, the amount can be utilized for the purposes of the business of operating qualifying ships other than for distribution by way of dividends or profits or for remittance outside India as profits or for the creation of any asset outside India. [Sub-section (3)]

(2) A tonnage tax company may transfer a sum in excess of twenty per cent of the book profits. Such excess sum transferred should also be utilised in above manner.

(3) "Book profit" will have the same meaning as in the Explanation to section 115JB(2) so far as it relates to income derived from the core and incidental activities.

(4) Where the company has book profit from the business of operating qualifying ships and book loss from any other source, and consequently, the company is not in a position to create the full or any part of the reserves as required, then –

(a) the company should create the reserves to the extent possible in that previous year.

(b) The shortfall, if any, will be added to the amount of the reserves required to be created for the following previous year.

(c) Such shortfall will be deemed to be part of the reserve requirement of that following previous year.

(5) Consequences of misutilisation / non-utilisation [Sub-section (4)]

(i) Where any amount credited to the Tonnage Tax Reserve Account has –

(a) been utilized for any purpose other than that referred to in (1) above; or

(b) not been utilized for the purpose of acquiring a new ship for the purpose of the business of the company within 8 years; or

(c) has been utilized for acquiring a new ship within 8 years but such ship is sold or transferred, otherwise than in any scheme of demerger, within 3 years from the end of the previous year in which it was acquired then, an amount which bears the same proportion to the total relevant shipping income of the year in which such reserve was created, as the amount out of such reserve so utilized or not utilized bears to the total reserve created during that year shall be taxable under the other provisions of the Act i.e.

Taxable amount =

$$\text{Relevant shipping income} \times \frac{\text{Extent of reserves unutilized or misutilised}}{\text{Total reserve created during the year}}$$

(ii) Such amount as calculated above would be taxable -

(a) in case (a) of (i) above, in the year in which the amount was so utilized; or

(b) in case (b) of (i) above, in the year immediately following the period of 8 years;

(c) in case (c) of (i) above, in the year in which the sale or transfer took place.

(iii) However, the income so taxable under the other provisions of the Act will be reduced by the proportionate tonnage income charged to tax in the year of creation of such reserves.

(6) Shortfall in credit to Tonnage Tax Reserve Account [Sub-section (5)]

If there is any shortfall in the amount credited to the Tonnage Tax Reserve Account, then the amount which bears the same proportion to the total relevant shipping income as the shortfall in credit to the reserves bears to the minimum reserve required to be credited, will be taxable under the other provisions of the Act i.e.

$$\text{Taxable amount} = \text{Relevant shipping income} \times \frac{\text{Shortfall in credit to reserves}}{\text{Minimum reserve to be credited}}$$

(7) Consequences of failure to create reserve for two consecutive previous years [Sub-section (6)] - If the reserve required to be created is not created for any two consecutive previous years, the option of the company for tonnage tax scheme will cease to have effect from the beginning of the previous year following the second consecutive previous year in which the failure to create the reserve had occurred.

(8) Meaning of "new ship": A new ship includes a 'qualifying ship', which before the date of its acquisition by the qualifying company was used by any other person. However, it should not have been owned by any person resident in India before the date of such acquisition.

Minimum training requirement for a tonnage tax company [Section 115VU]

(1) A tonnage tax company, after its option has been approved under section 115VP(3) is required to comply with the minimum training requirement in respect of trainee officers in accordance with the guidelines framed by the Director-General of Shipping and notified in the Official Gazette by the Central Government. [Sub-section (1)]

(2) A copy of the certificate issued by the Director-General of Shipping to the effect that such company has complied with the minimum training requirement in accordance with the guidelines referred to in sub-section (1) for the previous year is required to be furnished along with the return of income.

(3) If the minimum training requirement is not complied with for any five consecutive previous years, the option of the company for tonnage tax scheme shall cease to have effect from the start of the previous year following the fifth consecutive year in which the failure to comply with the minimum training requirement occurred.

Limit for charter in of tonnage [Section 115VV]

(1) Every company which has opted for tonnage tax scheme should charter in not more than forty-nine per cent of the net tonnage of the qualifying ships operated by it during any previous year. The term "chartered in" does not include a ship chartered in by the company on bareboat charter-cum-demise terms.

(2) Such proportion of net tonnage in respect of a previous year is to be calculated based on the average of net tonnage during that previous year.

(3) The average of net tonnage is to be computed in such manner as may be prescribed in consultation with the Director-General of Shipping.

(4) Where the net tonnage of ships chartered in exceeds the limit of 49% during any previous year, the total income of such company in relation to that previous year is to be computed as if the option for tonnage tax scheme does not have effect for that previous year.

(5) Where the said limit of 49% is exceeded in any two consecutive previous years, the option for tonnage tax scheme shall cease to have effect from the beginning of the previous year following the second consecutive previous year in which the limit had exceeded.

Maintenance and audit of accounts [Section 115VW]

An option for tonnage tax scheme by a tonnage tax company will not have effect in relation to a previous year unless such company –

(i) maintains separate books of account in respect of the business of operating qualifying ships and

(ii) furnishes, along with the return of income for that previous year, the report of an accountant, in the prescribed form duly signed and verified by such accountant.

Determination of tonnage [Section 115VX]

(1) The tonnage of the ship shall be determined in accordance with the valid certificate indicating its net tonnage.

(2) "Valid certificate" means –

(i) in case of ships registered in India—

(a) having a length of less than twenty-four metres, a certificate issued under the Merchant Shipping (Tonnage Measurement of Ship) Rules, 1987 made under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1958;

(b) having a length of twenty-four metres or more, an international tonnage certificate issued under the provisions of the Convention on Tonnage Measurement of Ships, 1969 as specified in the Merchant Shipping (Tonnage Measurement of Ship) Rules, 1987 made under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1958;

(ii) in case of ships registered outside India,

(a) a licence issued by the Director-General of Shipping under section 406 or section 407 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1958 specifying the net tonnage on the basis of Tonnage Certificate issued by the Flag State Administration where the ship is registered or

(b) any other evidence acceptable to the Director-General of Shipping produced by the ship owner while seeking permission for chartering in the ship.

(IV) Amalgamation and Demerger of Shipping Companies

Amalgamation [Section 115VY]

(1) In case of amalgamation, the provisions relating to the tonnage tax scheme would apply to the amalgamated company if it is a qualifying company.

(2) However, where the amalgamated company is not a tonnage tax company, it should exercise an option for tonnage tax scheme under section 115VP(1) within three months from the date of the approval of the scheme of amalgamation.

(3) Where the amalgamating companies are tonnage tax companies, the provisions of this Chapter would apply to the amalgamated company for such period as the option for tonnage tax scheme which has the longest unexpired period continues to be in force.

For example, if two tonnage tax companies X Ltd. and Y Ltd. are amalgamated to form a new company Z Ltd., and the option for tonnage tax scheme of X Ltd. has an unexpired period of 8 years and Y Ltd. has an unexpired period of 6 years, then the provisions of this Chapter would apply to the new company Z Ltd. for a period of 8 years.

(4) Where one of the amalgamating companies is a qualifying company on 1st October, 2004 and has not exercised option for tonnage tax scheme within the initial period, then –

(i) the provisions of this Chapter will not apply to the amalgamated company and

(ii) the income of the amalgamated company from the business of operating qualifying ships has to be computed in accordance with the other provisions of the Act.

Demerger [Section 115VZ]

(1) Where in a scheme of demerger, the demerged company transfers its business to the resulting company before the expiry of the option for tonnage tax scheme, then the scheme would apply to the resulting company for the unexpired period if it is a qualifying company.

(2) The option for tonnage tax scheme in respect of the demerged company would remain in force for the unexpired period of the tonnage tax scheme if it continues to be a qualifying company.

(V) Other Provisions

Effect of temporarily ceasing to operate qualifying ships [Section 115VZA]

(1) A temporary cessation (as against permanent cessation) of operating any qualifying ship by a company would not be considered as a cessation of operating of such qualifying ship. The company would still be deemed to be operating such qualifying ship for the purposes of this Chapter.

(2) Where a qualifying company continues to operate a ship, which temporarily ceases to be a qualifying ship, then such ship will not be considered as a qualifying ship for the purposes of this Chapter.

(VI) Cases where provisions of this Chapter does not apply

Avoidance of tax [Section 115VZB]

(1) The tonnage tax scheme will not apply where a tonnage tax company is a party to any transaction or arrangement which amounts to an abuse of the tonnage tax scheme.

(2) A transaction or arrangement will be considered as an abuse if the entering into or the application of such transaction or arrangement results, or would, but for this section have resulted, in a tax advantage being obtained by –

(a) a person other than a tonnage tax company; or

(b) a tonnage tax company in respect of its non-tonnage tax activities.

(3) "Tax advantage" includes,—

(i) (a) the determination of the allowance for any expense or interest, or

(b) the determination of any cost or expense allocated or apportioned, which has the effect of reducing the income or increasing the loss, as the case may be, from activities other than tonnage tax activities chargeable to tax.

Such computation should be on the basis of entries made in the books of account in respect of the previous year in which the transaction was entered into; or

(ii) a transaction or arrangement which produces to the tonnage tax company more than ordinary profits which might be expected to arise from tonnage tax activities.

Exclusion from tonnage tax scheme [Section 115VZC]

(1) Where a tonnage tax company is a party to any transaction or arrangement which amounts to an abuse of the tonnage tax scheme, the Assessing Officer has the power to exclude such company from the tonnage tax scheme, by an order in writing, after giving an opportunity of being heard to such company.

(2) However, no order to this effect can be passed without the previous approval of the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner.

(3) This section does not apply where the company shows to the satisfaction of the Assessing Officer that the transaction or arrangement was a bona fide commercial transaction and has not been entered into for the purpose of obtaining tax advantage under this Chapter.

Where an order has been passed by the assessing officer excluding the tonnage tax company from the tonnage tax scheme, then, the option for tonnage tax scheme shall cease to be in force from the first day of the previous year in which the transaction or arrangement was entered into.

12.2 TAX ON INCOME DISTRIBUTED BY SPECIFIED COMPANY OR A MUTUAL FUND [CHAPTER XII-E: SECTIONS 115R, 115S AND 115T]

(1) Tax on income distributed [Section 115R(2)]

Any amount of income distributed by the specified company as defined in the Unit Trust of India (Transfer of Undertaking and Repeal) Act, 2002 or a Mutual Fund to its unit holders on or after 1.4.03 shall be chargeable to tax and the specified company or the Mutual Fund shall be liable to pay additional income-tax at the rate specified in the table below. Thus, the income from units received by a unit holder on or after 1.4.03 is exempt from income-tax under section 10(35).

Type of Fund	Person to whom income is distributed	Rate of tax on income distributed
Money market mutual fund (MMMF) or liquid fund	Individual or HUF	25%
	Any other person	30%
Equity oriented fund	Any person	10%
Fund other than MMMF or liquid fund or equity-oriented fund	Individual or HUF	25%
	Any other person	30%
Infrastructure Debt Fund set up as a Mutual Fund	Non-corporate non-resident or a foreign company	5%

However, this does not apply in respect of any income distributed by the Administrator of the specified undertaking to the unit holders. Further, no additional income-tax shall be chargeable in respect of any amount of income distributed on or after 1st September, 2019 by a specified Mutual Fund, out of its income derived from transactions made on a recognised stock exchange located in any International Financial Services Centre and where the consideration for such transaction is paid or payable in convertible foreign exchange.

(2) Grossing up of income distributed [Section 115R(2A)]

For the purposes of determining the additional income-tax payable in accordance with section 115R(2), the amount of distributed income shall be increased to such amount as would, after reduction of the additional income-tax on such increased amount at the rate specified in section 115R(2), be equal to the amount of income distributed by the Mutual Fund.

(3) Time limit to deposit the tax [Section 115R(3)]

The person responsible for making the payment of income distributed by the UTI or a Mutual Fund and the UTI or the Mutual Fund itself, as the case may be, shall be liable to pay the tax under this provision to the credit of the Central Government within fourteen days from the date of distribution or payment of such income, whichever is earlier.

(4) No deduction under any other provision [Section 115R(4)]

No deduction under any provision of the Income-tax Act, 1961 shall be allowed to the UTI or to a Mutual Fund in respect of income, which has been subject to tax under section 115R(2).

Clarification regarding scope of additional income-tax on distributed income under section 115R [Circular No. 6/2014, dated 11.2.2014]

Section 115R provides for levy of additional tax on distributed income to unit holders. Some Assessing Officers have taken a view that mutual funds/specified companies are required to pay additional income-tax under section 115R not only on income distributed by way of dividend but also on payments made at the time of redemption/repurchase of units as well as at the time of allotment of bonus units to existing investors.

On these issues, the CBDT has clarified the following –

(i) Section 115R(2) requires payment of additional income-tax at the rates prescribed thereunder in respect of any amount distributed by a specified company or a mutual fund to its unit holders. The income so distributed by such entities constitutes dividend paid to the unit holders and is liable to tax thereunder. However, redemption of units or repurchase of units would not attract levy of tax under section 115R(2) as such income is not in the nature of income "distributed" to the unit holders and hence, lies outside the purview of this section.

(ii) Further, the income so distributed by the mutual fund or the specified company is specifically exempt from tax under section 10(35) in the hands of the recipient unit holders. As per the proviso to section 10(35), exemption of income thereunder is not applicable to those cases where transfer of units take place. The recipient of income is, therefore, liable to pay capital gains tax, if applicable, as per the relevant provisions of the Act, on transfer of such units.

(iii) Also, since issue of bonus units is not akin to distribution of income by way of dividend, the same would not be subject to additional income tax under section 115R. This inference can be drawn from the provisions of section 55, prescribing "cost of acquisition" of bonus shares as Nil for the purposes of computation of capital gains tax.

Thus, in view of the above position, the CBDT has, in exercise of its powers under section 119, clarified that additional income-tax under section 115R(2) is to be levied on income distributed by way of dividend to unit-holders of mutual fund or specified companies. Further, it is specifically clarified that receipts from redemption/repurchase of units or allotment of additional units by way of bonus units would not be subject to levy of additional income-tax thereunder.

(5) Interest on non-payment of tax [Section 115-S]

If the person responsible for making payment of the income distributed by the specified company or a Mutual Fund and the specified company or the Mutual Fund, as the case may be, fails to pay the additional income-tax to the credit of the Central Government within the time allowed under section 115-R, he or it shall be liable to pay simple interest at the rate of 1% for every month or part thereof on such amount of tax which has not been paid or was not paid in time for the period beginning on the date immediately after the last date on which such tax was payable and ending with the date on which the tax is actually paid.

(6) Deemed assesse-in-default [Section 115-T]

If the person responsible for making payment of the income distributed by the specified company or a Mutual Fund and the specified company or the Mutual Fund, as the case may be, fails to pay the additional income-tax to the credit of the Central Government, he or it shall be deemed to be an assessee in default in respect of the amount of tax payable and all the provisions of this Act for the collection and recovery of income-tax shall apply.

(i) income in the hands of business trusts; and

(ii) income distributed by such business trusts in the hands of the unit holders.

Section 2(13A) defines a business trust to mean a trust –

- registered as an Infrastructure Investment Trust (Invit) under SEBI (Infrastructure Investment Trusts) Regulations, 2014 or as a Real Estate Investment Trust (REIT) under SEBI (Real Estate Investment Trusts) Regulations, 2014 and
- the units of which are required to be listed on a recognized stock exchange in accordance with the aforesaid regulations.

Chapter XII-FA contains the special provisions relating to business trusts. Section 115UA(1) provides that any income distributed by a business trust to its unit holders shall be deemed to be of the same nature and in the same proportion in the hands of the unit holder, as it had been received by, or accrued to the business trust.

(5) Exemption of certain income to business trust [Section 10(23FC)]

Section 10(23FC) exempts any income of a business trust by way of -

- interest received or receivable from a Special Purpose Vehicle (SPV). Thus, the business trust enjoys a pass-through status in respect of interest received or receivable from a SPV; or
- dividend referred to in section 115-O(7) i.e., any income of a business trust by way of dividend received from SPV, being a specified domestic company in which a business trust has become the holder of the whole of the nominal value of equity share capital of the company. Such dividend income is also exempt in the hands of the unit-holder.

"SPV" means any Indian company, -

(i) in which the REIT holds or proposes to hold not less than 50% of the equity share capital or interest;

(ii) which holds not less than 80% of its assets directly in properties and does not invest in other special purpose vehicles; and

(iii) which is not engaged in any activity other than holding and developing property and any other activity incidental to such holding or development;

(6) Exemption of Rental income of REIT from directly owned real estate asset [Section 10(23FCA)]

Any income of a business trust, being a REIT, by way of renting or leasing or letting out any real estate asset owned directly by such business trust is exempt in the hands of the business trust.

(7) Section 115UA(2) provides that subject to the provisions of sections 111A and 112, the total income of a business trust shall be chargeable to tax at the maximum marginal rate.

(8) Any distributed income referred to in section 115UA received by unit holders is exempt in their hands under section 10(23FD) to the extent it does not comprise of

- interest referred to in sub-clause (a) of section 10(23FC) or
- rental income referred to in section 10(23FCA),

(9) Section 115UA(3) provides that distributed income or any part thereof, which is in the nature of interest income received by the business trust from the SPV [referred to in sub-clause (a) of section 10(23FC)] or rental income from real estate assets owned directly by the REIT [referred to in section 10(23FCA)] is deemed to be the income of the unit holder in the previous year of distribution and subject to tax in the hands of the unit holder in that year.

(10) Any person responsible for making payment of income distributed on behalf of the business trust to a unit holder is required to furnish a statement to the unit holder and the prescribed authority within the prescribed time.

The statement should be in the prescribed form and manner. It should contain the particulars of the nature of income paid during the previous year as well as the other details as may be prescribed [Section 115UA(4)].

Rule 12CA provides that the statement of income distributed by a business trust to its unit holder has to be furnished to the Principal Commissioner or the Commissioner of Income-tax within whose jurisdiction the principal office of the business trust is situated, by 30th November of the financial year following the previous year during which such income is distributed.

Further, the statement of income distributed also has to be furnished to the unit holder by 30th June of the financial year following the previous year during which the income is distributed.

(11) Under section 139(4E), a business trust is mandatorily required to furnish a return of its income or loss in every previous year. All the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 would apply as if it were a return required to be furnished under section 139(1).

(12) The scheme of taxability of income in the hands of the business trust, unit holders, sponsors etc. is briefed in the table given hereunder –

ILLUSTRATION 7

A business trust, registered under SEBI (Real Estate Investment Trusts) Regulations, 2014, gives particulars of its income for the P.Y.2019-20:

(1) Interest income from Beta Ltd. – ₹ 4 crore;

(2) Dividend income from Beta Ltd. – ₹ 2 crore;

(3) Short-term capital gains on sale of listed shares of Beta Ltd. – ₹ 1.5 crore;

(4) Short-term capital gains on sale of developmental properties – ₹ 1 crore

(5) Interest received from investments in unlisted debentures of real estate companies – ₹ 10 lakh;

(6) Rental income from directly owned real estate assets – ₹ 2.50 crore

Beta Ltd. is an Indian company in which the business trust holds 100% of the shareholding.

Discuss the tax consequences of the above income earned by the business trust in the hands of the business trust and the unit holders, assuming that the business trust has distributed ₹ 10 crore to the unit holders in the P.Y. 2019-20.

SOLUTION

Tax consequences in the hands of the business trust and its unit holders

(1) Interest income of ₹ 4 crore from Beta Ltd.: There would be no tax liability in the hands of business trust due to pass-through status enjoyed by it under sub-clause (a) of section 10(23FC) in respect of interest income from Beta Ltd., being the special purpose vehicle. Therefore, Beta Ltd. is not required to deduct tax at source on interest payment to the business trust.

The distributed income or any part thereof, received by a unit holder from the REIT, which is in the nature of interest income received or receivable from a SPV is deemed income of the unit holder as per section 115UA(3).

The business trust has to deduct tax at source under section 194LBA –

- @ 10%, on interest component of income distributed to resident unit holders; and
- @ 5%, on interest component of income distributed to non-corporate non-resident and foreign companies unit holders.

Interest component of income distributed to unit holders is taxable in the hands of the unit holders – @ 5%, in case of unit holders, being non-corporate non-residents or foreign companies; and at normal rates of tax, in case of resident unit holders.

The interest component of income received from the business trust in the hands of each unit-holder would be determined in the proportion of 4/11.1, by virtue of section 115UA(1).

(2) Dividend income of ₹ 2 crore from Beta Ltd.: The dividend distributed by the SPV to the business trust is exempt by virtue of section 115-O(7), since the SPV is a specified domestic company in which the business trust has become the holder of whole of the nominal value of equity share capital of the company. Further, there would be no tax liability in the hands of the business trust, due to specific exemption provided under sub-clause (b) of section 10(23FC).

Any distributed income referred to in section 115UA, to the extent it does not comprise of interest [referred to in sub-clause (a) of section 10(23FC)] and rental income from real estate assets owned directly by the business trust [referred to in section 10(23FCA)] received by unit holders, is exempt in their hands under section 10(23FD). Therefore, by virtue of section 10(23FD), there would be no tax liability on the dividend component [referred to in sub-clause (b) of section 10(23FC)] of income distributed to unit holders in their hands.

(3) Short-term capital gains of ₹ 1.50 crore on sale of listed shares of Beta Ltd.: As per section 115UA(2), the business trust is liable to pay tax @ 15% under section 111A in respect of short-term capital gains on sale of listed shares of special purpose vehicle. There would, however, be no tax liability on the capital gain component of income distributed to unit holders, by virtue of the exemption contained in section 10(23FD).

(4) Short-term capital gains of ₹ 1 crore on sale of developmental properties: It is taxable at maximum marginal rate of 42.744% in the hands of the business trust as per section 115UA(2). There would be no tax liability in the hands of the unit holders on the capital gain component of income distributed to them, by virtue of the exemption contained in section 10(23FD).

(5) Interest of ₹ 10 lakh received in respect of investment in unlisted debentures of real estate companies: Such interest is taxable @ 42.744%, being the maximum marginal rate, in the hands of the business trust, as per section 115UA(2). However, there would be no tax liability in the hands of the unit holders on the interest component of income distributed to them, by virtue of section 10(23FD).

(6) Rental income of ₹ 2.50 crore from directly owned real estate assets: Any income of a business trust, being a REIT, by way of renting or leasing or letting out any real estate asset owned directly by such business trust is exempt in the hands of the trust as per section 10(23FCA).

Where the income by way of rent is credited or paid to a business trust, being a REIT, in respect of any real estate asset held directly by such REIT, no tax is deductible at source under section 194-I.

The distributed income or any part thereof, received by a unit holder from the REIT, which is in the nature of income by way of renting or leasing or letting out any real estate asset owned directly by such REIT is deemed income of the unit holder as per section 115UA(3). The business trust has to deduct tax at source @ 10% under section 194LBA in case of distribution to a resident unit holder and at rates in force in case of distribution to a non-resident unit holder.

The rental income component received from the business trust in the hands of each unit-holder would be determined in the proportion of 2.5/11.1, by virtue of section 115UA(1).

12.5 SPECIAL TAXATION REGIME FOR INVESTMENT FUNDS AND INCOME RECEIVED FROM SUCH FUNDS [CHAPTER XII-FB] [SECTIONS 115UB, 10(23FBA) & 10(23FBB)]

(1) Tax liability of the unit holders:

Any income accruing or arising to, or received by, a person, being a unit holder of an investment fund, out of investments made in the investment fund shall be chargeable to income-tax in the same manner as if it were the income accruing or arising to, or received by, such person had the investments made by the investment fund, been made directly by him [Section 115UB(1)].

Note – Accordingly, income in the hands of the non-resident investor from off shore investments routed through Category I or Category II AIFs, being a deemed direct investment outside India by the non-resident investor, is not taxable in India under section 5(2) of the Act [Circular No. 14/2019, dated 3.7.2019].

(2) Exemption of income of investment fund other than income under the head profits and gains from business and profession [Section 10(23FBA)]

The Scheme provides for exemption of income, other than income chargeable under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession", in the hands of investment fund. The income in the nature of profits and gains of business or profession shall be taxable in the hands of the investment fund.

(3) Exemption to unit holder of income under the head "Profits and gains from business or profession" of investment fund [Section 10(23FBB)]

Income accruing or arising to, or received by, a unit holder of an investment fund, being that proportion of income which is of the same nature as income chargeable under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" at investment fund level, shall be exempt under section 10(23FBB).

(4) TDS in respect of income of units of investment fund to unit holders [Section 194LBB]

Investment fund to deduct tax at source on any income (other than the proportion of income which is of the same nature as income chargeable under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" which is taxable at investment fund level) payable by the investment fund to a unit holder

- @ 10% in case of payable to a resident unit holder
- at rates in force in case of payable to a non-corporate non-resident or foreign company unit holder

In case of income payable to a non-corporate non-resident or foreign company unit holder, no deduction is to be made in respect of any income that is not chargeable to tax under the Act.

Such tax has to be deducted at the time of credit of such income to the account of the payee or at the time of payment, whichever is earlier.

For this purpose, any such income credited to any account, whether called "suspense account" or by any other name, in the books of account of the person liable to pay such income, such crediting shall be deemed to be the credit of such income to the account of the payee, and the provisions of section 194LBB shall apply accordingly.

(5) Pass - through status for current year losses:

If in any year there is a loss under any head of income at the fund level and such loss cannot be or is not wholly set-off against income under any other head of income of the said previous year, then out of such losses, (i) the loss arising to the Investment Fund under the head "Profits & Gains of Business or Profession" shall not be allowed to be passed through to the investors but has to be carried over at fund level to be set off against income of the next year in accordance with the provisions of Chapter VI

(ii) loss other than loss under the head "profits and gains from business or profession" would not be allowed be passed through to the investors if such loss has arisen in respect of a unit which has not been held by the unit holder for a period of at least 12 months [Section 115UB(2)].

Note – By implication, losses other than those referred to in (i) and (ii) above, which cannot be wholly set-off against current year income, would be passed on to the unit holders to be carry forward and set-off in their individual hands in accordance with the provisions of Chapter VI.

(6) Pass - through status for losses accumulated as on 31.3.2019:

Losses, other than loss under the head "profits and gains from business or profession", if any, accumulated at the level of investment fund as on 31.3.2019, shall be

- deemed to be the loss of a unit holder who held the unit as on 31.3.2019 in respect of the investment made by him in the investment fund in the same manner as it were the loss incurred by him had he made such investments directly and
- shall be allowed to be passed through to the investors for the remaining period calculated from the year in which the loss has occurred for the first time taking that year as the first year and set off against their income in accordance with the provisions of Chapter VI.

Further, such accumulated losses shall not be available to the investment fund on or after 1.4.2019.

Note – Even capital loss on sale of units held for less than 12 months, accumulated as on 31.3.2019, would be allowed to be carry forward and set-off by the unit holders.

(7) Nature of income in the hands of unitholders:

The income paid or credited by the investment fund shall be deemed to be of the same nature and in the same proportion in the hands of the unit holder as if it had been received by, or had accrued or arisen to, the investment fund during the previous year. [Section 115UB(3)].

(8) Tax on total income:

As per section 115UB(4), the total income of the investment fund is chargeable to tax as follows:

Investment Fund	Rate of tax
A company or a firm	Rate or rates specified in the Finance Act of the relevant year (30%/25%, as the case may be, for a company and 30% for firm for A.Y.2020-21)
Other than a company or a firm	Maximum marginal rate

(9) Non-applicability of DDT:

Income paid by an investment fund to its unit holders would not be subject to dividend distribution tax under Chapter XII-D or tax on distributed income under Chapter XII-E [Section 115UB(5)].

(10) Deemed credit on the last day of the previous year:

If the income accruing or arising to, or received by, an investment fund, during a previous year is not paid or credited to the unit-holders, it shall be deemed to have been credited to the account of the unit-holder on the last day of the previous year in the same proportion in which such person would have been entitled to receive the income had it been paid in the previous year [Section 115UB(6)].

(11) Summary:

The following table gives a summary of the above provisions:

	Particulars	Investment Fund	Unit holder
(i)	Income under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" of the Investment Fund	Taxable	Exempt
(ii)	Income, other than profits and gains of business or profession	Exempt. Tax to be deducted on such income distributed to unit-holders - @ 10% in case of resident payee - at rates in force in case of non-resident payee	Taxable, as if he had directly made the investment.
(iii)	Loss under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" incurred by the investment fund	To be carried forward for set-off as per Chapter VI at the Fund level	Not passed on to investors
(iv)	Capital loss on transfer of units (i.e., units held by a unit holder for less than 12 months) – remaining after set-off against capital gains in the current year	Not allowed to be carried forward for set-off by the Investment Fund	Not allowed to be carried forward by the unit-holder. He cannot set-off such losses against his income.

(v)	Losses (other than losses referred to in (iii) and (iv) above) remaining after set-off against current year income.	Not allowed to be carried forward for set-off by the Investment Fund	Unit-holder can carry forward and set-off such losses against his income as per Chapter VI
(vi)	Dividend distribution tax and tax on distributed income	Chapter XII-D and XII-E not to apply to income paid to unit holders.	-

Note – Losses, other than business losses, accumulated at the level of the investment fund as on 31.3.2019 would be deemed to be the loss of the unit holder who held the unit as on 31.3.2019 in respect of the investments made by him in the investment fund, in the same manner as it were the loss incurred by him had he made such investments directly. Such loss can be carried forward by the unit-holder for the remaining period calculated from the year in which the loss had occurred for the first time taking that year as the first year. Accordingly, he can set-off such loss in accordance with the provisions of Chapter VI. The loss so deemed to be the loss of the unit-holder shall not be available to the investment fund on or after 1.4.2019.

(12) Statement to be furnished:

The person responsible for crediting or making payment of the income on behalf of an investment fund and the investment fund are required to furnish, within the prescribed time, to the person who is liable to tax in respect of such income and to the prescribed income-tax authority, a statement in the prescribed form and verified in the prescribed manner. Such statement should give details of the nature of the income paid or credited during the previous year and such other relevant details as may be prescribed [Section 115UA(7)].

Rule 12CB provides that the statement of income paid or credited by an investment trust to its unit holder has to be furnished to the Principal Commissioner or the Commissioner of Income-tax within whose jurisdiction the principal office of the investment trust is situated, by 30th November of the financial year following the previous year during which such income is paid or credited.

Further, the statement of income paid or credited also has to be furnished to the unit holder by 30th June of the financial year following the previous year during which the income is paid or credited.

(13) Every investment fund has to compulsorily file its return of income or loss under section 139(4F), if it is not required to do so under any other provision of section 139. The provisions of the Act would apply as if such return of income or loss were a return required to be furnished under section 139(1).

(14) Income taxed in the year of accrual not taxable again in the year of payment [Explanation 2 below section 115UB]:

It has been clarified that any income which has been included in the total income of the unit holder of an investment fund in a previous year, on account of it having accrued or arisen in the said previous year, would not be included in his total income in the previous year in which such income is actually paid to him by the investment fund.

(15) Meaning of certain terms:

ILLUSTRATION 8

The following are the particulars of income of three investment funds for P.Y.2020-21:

Particulars	A	B	C
		₹ in lakh
Business Income		2	(2)
Capital Gains	16	14	(6)
Income from other sources	4	4	8

Compute the total income of the investment funds and unit-holders for A.Y.2020-21, assuming that:

(1) each investment fund has 20 unit holders each having one unit; and

(2) income from investment in the investment fund is the only income of the unit-holder.

If Investment Fund C has the following income components for A.Y. 2021-22, what would be the total income of the fund and the unit holder for that year?

Business Income ₹ 2 lakh

Capital Gains ₹ 9 lakh

Income from Other Sources ₹ 8 lakh

SOLUTION

Computation of total income of the investment fund for A.Y. 2020-21

Particulars	A	B	C
Business Income	Nil	2,00,000	Nil
Total Income	Nil	2,00,000	Nil

Computation of total income of a unit holder of the following Investment funds for A.Y. 2020-21

Particulars	A	B	C
Capital Gains	80,000	70,000	-
Income from other sources	20,000	20,000	30,000
Total Income	1,00,000	90,000	30,000

Notes:

(i) The total income of Investment Fund B would be chargeable to tax @30% if the fund is a firm and @ 30%/25%, as the case may, if the fund is a company and at the maximum marginal rate, in any other case.

(ii) In case of Investment Fund C, the business loss of ₹ 2 lakh is set-off against income from other sources of ₹ 8 lakh. Loss of ₹ 6 lakh under the head "Capital gains" cannot be set-off against income under any other head. The same has to be carried forward by the Unit-holder for set-off in the subsequent years, if the units are held for a period of 12 months or more. However, if the units are held for less than 12 months, the loss arising therefrom can neither be carried forward by the investment fund nor by the unit-holders.

(iii) For A.Y.2021-22, the brought forward capital loss of ₹ 30,000 [₹ 6 lakh/20] can be set-off against capital gains of ₹ 45,000 [₹ 9 lakh/20] by the unit-holder, assuming that the period of holding of units is 12 months or more. Otherwise, such capital loss has to be ignored. Business income of ₹ 2 lakh would be taxable in the hands of the Investment Fund. Income from other sources of ₹ 40,000 (₹ 8 lakh/20) would be taxable in the hands of the unit-holders.

12.6 ASSESSMENT OF OTHER ENTITIES

(1) Levy of Alternate Minimum Tax (AMT) on all persons claiming profit-linked deductions, other than companies [Chapter XII-BA–Sections 115JC to 115JF]

(i) Background: The Finance Act, 2011 had introduced the concept of AMT initially in relation to LLPs and accordingly the LLPs were subject to AMT @18.5% of adjusted total income.

Though the concept of Alternate Minimum Tax (AMT) was similar to MAT in case of corporates, however, the tax base in the case of LLPs was the adjusted total income computed as per the Income-tax Act, 1961 and not the book profit computed after making the specified adjustments to the profit as per the profit and loss account prepared in accordance with Schedule VI to the Companies Act, 1956.

The Finance Act, 2012 extended the levy of AMT to certain persons other than companies, in order to widen the tax base vis-à-vis profit-linked deductions. Accordingly, any person other than a company, who has claimed deduction under any section (other than section 80P) included in Chapter VI-A under the heading "C – Deductions in respect of certain incomes" or under section 10AA would be subject to AMT with effect from A.Y.2013-14 [Section 115JEE(1)].

The provisions of AMT would, however, not be applicable to an individual, HUF, AOPs, BOIs, whether incorporated or not, or artificial juridical person, if the adjusted total income of such person does not exceed ₹ 20 lakh [Section 115JEE(2)].

Investment-linked tax deduction claimed under section 35AD also falls within the scope of alternate minimum tax.

(ii) Levy of AMT@18.5% on Adjusted Total Income: Accordingly, where the regular income-tax payable by a person, other than a company, for a previous year computed as per the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 (other than Chapter XII-BA) is less than the AMT payable for such previous year, the adjusted total income shall be deemed to be the total income of the person. Such person shall be liable to pay income-tax on the adjusted total income @ 18.5% [Section 115JC].

(iii) Meaning of Adjusted Total Income: "Adjusted total income" would mean the total income before giving effect to Chapter XII-BA as increased by the deductions claimed, if any, under –

(1) any section (other than section 80P) included in Chapter VI-A under the heading "C – Deductions in respect of certain incomes";

(2) section 10AA; and

(3) section 35AD, as reduced by the depreciation allowable under section 32, as if no deduction under section 35AD was allowed in respect of the asset for which such deduction is claimed.

(iv) Furnishing Report by Chartered Accountant: Such persons to whom this section applies should obtain a report in the prescribed form from a Chartered Accountant certifying that the adjusted total income and the AMT have been computed in accordance with the provisions of this Chapter. The report has to be furnished on or before the due date of filing of return under section 139(1).

(v) Levy of AMT@ 9% of Adjusted Total Income in case of a unit located in IFSC: Where the person subject to AMT is a unit located in an International Financial Services Centre (IFSC) deriving its income solely in convertible foreign exchange, AMT would be leviable @ 9% of Adjusted Total Income, instead of 18.5%.

(vi) Applicability of Interest and Penal provisions: Section 115JE specifically provides that "save as otherwise provided in this Chapter, all other provisions of this Act shall apply to a person referred to in this Chapter". Hence, all other provisions relating to self-assessment under section 140A, advance tax, interest under sections 234A, 234B and 234C, penalty etc. would also apply to a person who is subject to AMT.

Tax credit for AMT [Section 115JD]

(i) AMT paid in excess of the regular income-tax payable under the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 for the year would be eligible for credit to be carried forward and set-off against income-tax payable in the later year to the extent of excess of regular income-tax payable under the provisions of the Act over the AMT payable in that year. The balance tax credit, if any, shall be carried forward to the next year for set-off in that year in a similar manner.

Where the amount of tax credit in respect of any income-tax paid in any country or specified territory outside India under section 90 or section 90A or section 91, allowed against the alternate minimum tax payable, exceeds the amount of the tax credit admissible against the regular income-tax payable by the assessee, then, while computing the amount of credit under this sub-section, such excess amount shall be ignored.

In other words, the amount of tax credit in respect of AMT shall not be allowed to be carried forward to subsequent year to the extent such credit relates to the difference between the amount of foreign tax credit (FTC) allowed against AMT and FTC allowable against the regular tax payable by the assessee.

(ii) AMT credit can be carried forward for set-off upto a maximum period of 15 assessment years succeeding the assessment year in which the credit becomes allowable.

(iii) No interest shall, however, be payable on such tax credit.

(iv) If the amount of regular income-tax or AMT is reduced or increased as a result of any order passed under the Income-tax Act, 1961, the amount of tax credit allowed under section 115JD would also vary accordingly.

Tax Credit allowable even if Adjusted Total Income does not exceed ₹ 20 lakh in the year of set-off [Section 115JEE(3)]

The credit for tax paid under section 115JC shall be allowed in accordance with the provisions of section 115JD, notwithstanding the conditions mentioned in sub-section (1) or (2) of section 115JEE. Hence, even if the assessee has not claimed any deduction under section 10AA or section 35AD or Chapter VI-A under the heading "C- Deductions in respect of certain incomes" in any previous year and the adjusted total income of that year does not exceed ₹ 20 lakh, it would still be entitled to set-off his brought forward AMT credit in that year.

Related Provisions

(i) Correspondingly, under section 140A, for determination of self-assessment tax payable, tax credit claimed to be set-off in accordance with section 115JD has also to be reduced.

(ii) Such tax credit allowed to be set-off in accordance with the provisions of section 115JD has to be reduced from the amount of tax on total income determined under section 143(1) or on regular assessment, on which interest under section 234A is leviable for default in furnishing return of income.

(iii) Similarly, section 234B levies interest for default in payment of advance tax, to enable reduction of tax credit under section 115JD while computing "assessed tax".

(iv) Likewise, in section 234C levying interest for deferment of advance tax, such tax credit under section 115JD has to be reduced for computing "tax due on the returned income".

ILLUSTRATION 9

Mr. Rajesh has income of ₹ 45 lakhs under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession". One of his businesses is eligible for deduction @ 100% of profits under section 80-IB for A.Y. 2020-21. The profit from such business included in the business income is ₹ 20 lakhs. Compute the tax payable by Mr. Rajesh, assuming that he has no other income during the P.Y. 2019-20.

SOLUTION

Computation of regular income-tax payable under the provisions of the Act

Particulars	₹
Profits and gains of business or profession	45,00,000
Less: Deduction under section 80-IB	20,00,000
Total Income	25,00,000
Tax payable
Up to ₹ 2,50,000	Nil
5% on next ₹ 2,50,000	12,500

20% on next ₹ 5,00,000	1,00,000
30% on balance ₹ 15,00,000	4,50,000
	5,62,500

Computation of Alternate Minimum Tax (AMT)

Particulars	₹
Total Income as per the Income-tax Act, 1961	25,00,000
Add: Deduction under section 80-IB	20,00,000
Adjusted Total Income	45,00,000
AMT = 18.5% × 45,00,000 =	8,32,500

Since the regular income-tax payable as per the provisions of the Act is less than the AMT, the adjusted total income of ₹ 45 lakhs would be deemed to be the total income of Mr. Rajesh and he would be liable to pay tax @ 18.5% thereof. The tax payable by Mr. Rajesh for the A.Y.2020-21 would, therefore, be ₹ 8,32,500 plus health and education cess @ 4%, totaling ₹ 8,65,800.

Mr. Rajesh would be eligible for credit to the extent of ₹ 2,80,800 [₹ 8,65,800 – ₹ 5,85,000 (i.e., ₹ 5,62,500 + 4% cess)] to be set-off in the year in which tax on total income computed under the regular provisions of the Act exceeds the AMT. Such credit can be carried forward for succeeding 15 assessment years.

(2) Assessment of Individuals

The term "individual" as such has nowhere been defined in the Income-tax Act, 1961. Section 2(31), however, states that "person" inter alia, includes an individual. In the commonly understood sense of the term, an individual means a human being or a single person. The person may be major, minor, married or unmarried, possessing sound or unsound mind. All the same, he is assessable as an 'individual' and is liable to pay tax, if the total income earned by him during any previous year exceeds the prescribed limit exempted from tax. If an individual who is liable to pay tax for any year dies before he is assessed to tax, his executor, administrator or legal representative is treated as the individual assessee for purposes of assessment of the income of the deceased person. In the case of an individual who is a minor or a lunatic, the assessment of his income will be made on his guardian or the trustee. However, if the incapacitated person has no trustee or guardian or trustee or guardian is a non-resident and cannot be traced, the assessment can be made directly on the minor or lunatic. The rights and duties of all representative assessees are the same as those of the persons they are representing.

(i) Total income of an individual: The Total Income of an individual is arrived at after making deductions under Chapter VI-A from the Gross Total Income. As we have learnt earlier, Gross Total Income is the aggregate of the net income computed under the five heads of income, after giving effect to the provisions for clubbing of income and set-off and carry forward and setoff of losses.

(ii) Assessment of a non-resident individual

The manner for computation of total income explained above is also applicable to an individual who is a non-resident during the previous year. The scope of deemed income taxable in the hands of a non-resident as laid down in section 5 is explained in section 9(1) which extends the liability to tax of a non-resident individual in respect of income which although not actually accruing or arising in India deemed to be so accruing or arising, assumes significance in the assessment of non-resident individual. For better understanding of the provisions of section 9, students are advised to refer to Chapter 2 - "Non-resident Taxation in Module 4 of the Study material containing the chapters relating to Part II: International Taxation.

(iii) Flat rate of tax on winnings from lotteries, crossword puzzles etc. [Section 115BB]

Under section 115BB, gross winnings from lotteries, crossword puzzles, races including horse races (other than income from the activity of owning and maintaining race horses), card games and other games of any sort or from gambling or betting of any nature whatsoever shall be chargeable to income-tax at a flat rate of 30% on the gross winnings.

(iv) Special concessions in the case of individuals not being citizens of India

Although basically the law of income-tax is applicable alike to both citizens and non-citizens of India, and there is no difference in the general principles for computing the total income under the Income-tax Act, 1961, however, on a consideration of the peculiar circumstances in which a foreigner might come to or live in India, certain concessions and reliefs are granted to them under section 10(6). These have been discussed in detail in Chapter 2 - "Non-resident Taxation in Module 4 of the Study material containing the chapters relating to Part II: International Taxation.

(v) Exemptions and reliefs available to individuals

The tax exemptions and reliefs available under the Act to individuals in respect of income chargeable to tax fall under the following categories:

(a) Income altogether excluded from the total income, and on which in consequence, no income-tax is payable [Section 10].

(b) Deductions from gross total income both in respect of income, a part of which is not chargeable to income-tax and payments made by the assessee, a part or the whole of which is deductible from the gross total income.

(c) Relief in tax when salary is paid in arrears [Section 89].

(vi) Rebate of tax and relief in certain cases

- Income from association of persons or bodies of individuals: If the assessee is a member of an association of persons or a body of individuals (other than a company, co-operative society or society) income-tax shall not be payable by him in respect of any portion of the amount receivable by him from the association or body on which tax has already been paid by the association or body at the maximum marginal rate or any higher rate [Section 86].

  In any other case, the share of member shall form part of his total income.

  Further, if the total income of AOP or BOI is not chargeable to income-tax, then the share of member shall be chargeable to tax as part of his total income.

  For the purposes of this provision in the case of an association of persons which is assessable under section 67A, the members of the AOP whose shares in the income are indeterminate or unknown, will be entitled to receive equal shares in the income of the AOP and the individual share of such member will be determined accordingly.

- Rebate of income-tax to certain individuals: Section 87A provides a rebate from the tax payable by an assessee, being an individual resident in India, whose total income does not exceed ₹ 5,00,000. Such assessee shall get a tax relief of ₹ 12,500. In effect, the rebate would be the tax payable or ₹ 12,500, whichever is less.

- Relief when salary etc. is paid in arrears or in advance [Section 89]: It has already been explained in the Chapter relating to salaries that arrears or advances of salaries are assessable in the hands of the recipients in the year in which these are received. Consequently, in a financial year, an employee may become chargeable to tax in respect of salary for more than 12 months. Likewise, any payment in the nature of profit in lieu of salary (within the meaning of section 17(3)) is also chargeable in the year of receipt in addition to the normal salary received by the employee. In consequence, the aggregate salary income may become liable to tax at a rate higher than that at which it would otherwise have been assessed. To obviate such a hardship, the Assessing Officer has been empowered to grant relief in appropriate cases, on the employee making an application, in accordance with Rule 21A of the Income-tax Rules, 1962.

  In appropriate cases coming under section 192(2A), where the employer is the Government or a public sector undertaking, co-operative society, local authority, university, institution or body, such employer himself is entitled to take into account the relief under section 89(1).

- Rates of Surcharge Applicable to Individuals

  The Finance (No.2) Act, 2019 has levied an enhanced surcharge of 25% and 37%, where the total income of individuals/HUF/AOPs/BoIs exceeds ₹ 2 crores and ₹ 5 crores, respectively. However, vide Press Release dated 24.8.2019, the enhanced surcharge has been withdrawn on tax payable at special rates under section 111A and 112A on short-term capital gains and long-term capital gains arising from the transfer of equity share in a company or unit of an equity-oriented fund/business trust, which has been subject to securities transaction tax. Accordingly, the Taxation Laws (Amendment) Ordinance, 2019, promulgated by the President of India on 20.9.2019, has amended the Finance (No.2) Act, 2019 to give effect to the withdrawal of enhanced surcharge on tax payable under section 111A and 112A [Table containing the rates of surcharge applicable to individuals is given as Annexure 2 at the end of this chapter]. These rates would have effect from A.Y.2020-21, after the Taxation Laws (Amendment) Ordinance, 2019 is passed by the Parliament.

(3) Assessment of Hindu Undivided Families

(i) Concept of HUF: A Hindu undivided family (HUF) is treated as a separate entity for the purpose of assessment under the Income-tax Act, 1961. It is included in the definition of the term "person" under section 2(31). The levy of income-tax is on "every person". Therefore, income-tax is payable by a HUF. "Hindu undivided family" has not been defined under the Income-tax Act. The expression is, however, defined under the Hindu Law as a family, which consists of all males lineally descended from a common ancestor and includes their wives and daughters. (Concept of HUF is already discussed in detail in Chapter 1: Basic Concepts).

(ii) Assessment of Hindu Undivided family: The income of a HUF is to be assessed in the hands of the HUF and not in the hands of any of its members. This is because HUF is a separate and a distinct tax entity.

(iii) Assessment of HUF after partition of HUF [Section 171]: There are two types of partition. They are –

(a) Total partition – is a partition by which the entire family property is divided amongst the coparceners. After the total partition, the HUF ceases to exist as such.

(b) Partial partition – is a partition which is partial as regards either the persons constituting the joint family or as regards the properties belonging to the joint family or both. In case of a partial partition as regards persons constituting the joint family, some coparceners may separate from the joint family while the others might continue to remain as part of the joint family. In case of a partial partition as regards the property, there may be a division or severance of interest in respect of some part of the estate of the joint family, while the rest of the estate may continue to remain as property of the joint family.

Effect of partial partitions made after 31st December, 1978: However, partial partitions after 31st December, 1978 are not recognized for tax purposes. If any partial partition has been effected after 31.12.1978, then no claim of such partial partition shall be recorded by the Assessing Officer. Such family will continue to be assessed as if no such partial partition has been effected. Every member of the HUF, immediately before such partial partition, and the HUF shall be jointly and severally liable for any sum payable under the Act. The several liability of a member would be proportionate to the share of joint family property allotted to him on such partial partition.

When a claim of total partition of HUF has been made by any member of the HUF on behalf of the HUF, the Assessing Officer shall inquire into such claim. For this purpose, he shall give notice to all the members of the HUF. Thereafter, the Assessing Officer shall, on completion of inquiry, record a finding as to whether total partition has taken place and if so, the date when such partition was effected.

If partition has been effected in the previous year, the total income of the HUF for the previous year up to the date of partition shall be assessed as income of the HUF. Every member of the HUF, in addition to any tax for which he is separately liable, is jointly and severally liable for payment of tax on such assessed income of the HUF. The several liability of a member would be proportionate to the share of joint family property allotted to him on such partition.

If partition has been effected after expiry of previous year, the total income of the HUF for the previous year shall be assessed as income of the HUF. Every member of the HUF is jointly and severally liable for payment of tax on such assessed income of the HUF.

If partition has already taken place: If the Assessing Officer finds after completion of the assessment of a HUF that the partition has already taken place, the Assessing Officer shall proceed to recover the tax from every person who was a member of the family before the partition.

Every such member of the HUF is jointly and severally liable for payment of tax on such assessed income of the HUF.

(iv) Computation of total income of HUF: The following points should be taken into consideration while determining the total income of HUF -

(a) Income from the transfer of a self-acquired property by an individual to his HUF for inadequate consideration or conversion of the self-acquired property into property of the HUF is not considered as the income of the HUF. It would be included in the income of the individual member who transferred the property to the HUF [Section 64(2)]

(b) Income from an impartible estate is included in the hands of the holder of the estate and not in the hands of the HUF. Even if the impartible estate is owned by the HUF, income from such estate is includible in the hands of the holder of the estate who is the eldest member of the HUF.

(c) Section 10(2) exempts any receipt by an individual as a member of a HUF out of the family income.

(d) If a member of the HUF receives any fee or remuneration as a director or a partner in a company or firm as a consequence of the investment made in such concern out of the funds of the HUF, such fee/ remuneration shall constitute income of the HUF. However, any such fee or remuneration earned by a member of a HUF as a director or partner for services rendered purely in his personal capacity, will be included in the income of the individual member and not the HUF.

(v) Rates of Surcharge Applicable to HUF

The Finance (No.2) Act, 2019 has levied an enhanced surcharge of 25% and 37%, where the total income of individuals/HUF/AOPs/BoIs exceeds ₹ 2 crores and ₹ 5 crores, respectively. However, vide Press Release dated 24.8.2019, the enhanced surcharge has been withdrawn on tax payable at special rates under section 111A and 112A on short-term capital gains and long-term capital gains arising from the transfer of equity share in a company or unit of an equity-oriented fund/business trust, which has been subject to securities transaction tax. Accordingly, the Taxation Laws (Amendment) Ordinance, 2019, promulgated by the President of India on 20.9.2019, has amended the Finance (No.2) Act, 2019 to give effect to the withdrawal of enhanced surcharge on tax payable under section 111A and 112A. The table containing the rates of surcharge applicable to HUFs is given as Annexure 2 at the end of this chapter. These rates would have effect from A.Y.2020-21, after the Taxation Laws (Amendment) Ordinance, 2019 is passed by the Parliament.

(vi) Conversion of separate property into property of HUF: However, to the above exemption there is an exception provided by section 64(2). Even though we have discussed this in the appropriate place it will be better to recapitulate.

Before this, let us understand the concept of conversion. Generally, income from self-acquired property of an individual, who is a member of a HUF will be assessed as his personal income and not as the income of the family. However, the individual can convert his separate properties into the property of the HUF. There are no legal formalities to be complied with. These principles have been upheld by various judicial rulings.

It naturally follows that once the assets belonging to the individual are impressed with the character of joint family property, the income arising therefrom, should be assessed as the income of the HUF. However, the deeming provisions of section 64(2) specifically provide that the entire income from the converted property is taxable as the income of the transferor. This provision applies not only to property converted in the above manner but also covers transfer of property by an individual, directly or indirectly, to the family otherwise than for adequate consideration, in other words, gifts. Accordingly, where an individual makes direct or indirect gift of his separate property to the Hindu Undivided family of which he is a member or if he transfers his separate property to his family for less than its fair market value, the provisions of section 64(2) will be attracted and the entire income from such separate property converted into HUF property will be included in the total income of the individual.

(vii) Business in the personal capacity of the Karta or member: Where the Karta or any member of a joint family carries on a business on his personal capacity, the income from any such business would constitute his personal income. It does not matter even if the business of the member and of the joint family are identical in nature and size. Suppose the capital for the individual's business is borrowed from the funds of the family what will be the position? Consider the following example.

Example: A HUF consists of the Karta, his wife, two sons and daughter. The HUF runs a departmental store. One of the two sons is qualified in business administration and the other one is an automobile engineer. Together they start a garage for repairing all types of motor cars. The technical aspects are looked after by the engineer while the general administration is taken care of by the son qualified in business administration. For starting the business the HUF has advanced an interest-free loan of ₹ 50,000. The business is yielding good profits. Now the question arises whether the income from the business should be assessed in the hands of the Hindu undivided family.

It is obvious that the family, in providing the interest-free loan to the business of the brothers has suffered a detriment. However, the Delhi High Court has laid down the following proposition in this connection in the case of CIT vs. Charan dass Khanna & Sons (1980) 123 ITR 194 (Delhi). If investment plays a minor role and it is primarily the personal efforts, specialised skill and enterprise of the individual coparceners which resulted in the new business being set up and the profits accruing, it may not essentially be said that the income belongs to the HUF. In the given example the good profits are more due to the specialised skills acquired by the two sons in their respective fields. Of course, the capital, got from the family as interest free loan, has its role to play but it is nevertheless a minor one. Therefore, we can say that the income from the business set up by the brothers is assessable in their hands as individuals according to the agreed rate of sharing and not as the income of the family.

The Supreme Court has also upheld this principle in K.S. Subbiah Pillai vs. CIT (237 ITR 11). It was held that remuneration received on account of personal qualification and exercise of individual exertion was assessable as individual income and not as income of

HUF. The following principles have been broadly applied by the Supreme Court for determining the character of the receipt by way of remuneration paid to a coparcener:

(i) when the remuneration received by the coparcener though not in form but in substance was one of the modes of return made to the family because of investment of the family funds, it has to be assessed as the income of Joint Hindu Family.

(ii) when the remuneration is not paid to the detriment of the family funds, it is assessable as the income of recipient Karta or coparcener as an individual.

(iii) when it is a compensation for the services, skill or labour of the coparcener, it has to be assessed as the income of such a coparcener in his individual capacity.

Example: The Karta of a HUF receives salary in his capacity as a treasurer and secretary of a bank. The HUF has furnished ₹ 1,00,000 as security deposit. Decide whether the salary can be assessed as the income of the HUF.

The position of treasurer and secretary requires considerable personal skill and integrity on the part the incumbent. It is true that the security deposit might have been furnished by the HUF, however, since the salary is paid to the Karta primarily for the exercise of his personal skill and integrity, it is to be assessed as his individual income.

Hence, students should carefully understand the following:

(a) Where the funds of a HUF are invested in a company or a partnership firm, the dividends or share of profits are generally taxable as the income of the family. In such a case the fee, salary, commission or other remuneration received by the Karta, or any member of the family, in his capacity as director or partner would also be taxable as income of the family. The reasons for this treatment are as follows:

  (1) The income is earned by the detriment to the joint family funds.

  (2) It is earned with the aid of joint family funds.

  (3) There is real and sufficient connection between the investment of the joint family funds and the income by way of remuneration earned.

(b) However, where the income is earned by the karta or any other member of the family by the exercise of the personal skill, the income should be assessed in their individual hands even if some detriment is caused to the family funds, say, by way of loan, guarantee etc. whose role is only secondary.

(viii) Members of HUF and Partnership firms: A Hindu undivided family can become a partner in a firm. However, since it has no separate legal entity of its own, its Karta alone can be partner in the firm representing the family. The coparcenery has no place in the partnership.

When the Karta of joint Hindu family enters into a partnership with strangers, the member of the family do not, ipso facto, become partners in that firm. They have no right to take part in its management or to sue for its dissolution. The creditors of the firm are entitled to proceed against the joint family assets including the shares of the non-partner coparceners for their debts. This is because under Hindu Law, the Karta has the right when carrying on business to pledge the credit of the joint family to the extent of its assets. The liability on the part of other members of the HUF arises by reason of their status as coparceners and not by reason of any contract of partnership by them.

Partnership between Karta representing family and Coparcener: A Karta of a HUF representing the family on the one hand, and a member of that family in his individual capacity on the other, can enter into a valid partnership. An individual coparcener, while remaining joint, can possess, enjoy and utilise in any way he likes, property which is his individual property. Therefore, when he enters into partnership with the family he retains his share and interest in the property of the family while he simultaneously enjoys the benefit of his separate property and fruits of its investment.

(ix) Salary paid to Karta for managing the family's business: If remuneration is paid to the Karta of Hindu undivided family under a valid agreement which is bona fide and in the interest of and expedient for the business of the family and the payment is genuine and not excessive, such remuneration would be an expenditure laid out wholly and exclusively for the purpose of the business of the family and would be allowable as an expenditure.

(x) Salary paid to member: A Hindu undivided family can be allowed to deduct salaries paid to member of the family if the payment is made as a matter of commercial or business expediency, but the service rendered must be to the family.

(xi) Gifts by HUF: A HUF as such is incapable of making a gift to any of its member. However, the Karta of a HUF has power to gift out of joint family property for certain approved purposes. The gift should be reasonable. For example, a father may make a gift of the ancestral moveable properties of the joint family, of which he is the Karta, for the purpose of discharging duties prescribed by Hindu Law. The income of the joint family will stand reduced to the extent to the income arising out of the assets thus gifted out.

(xii) Gifts to HUF: Can an outsider make a gift to HUF? Under what circumstances will a gift made by an outsider be considered as a gift to the HUF? The answers to these questions are as follows:

(a) If the HUF to which such a gift is made consists of only one coparcener, then the gifted property can be held by the members of the family only as tenants-in-common, i.e., the income arising out of such gifted property can be assessed as income in the hands of the Association of Persons (AOP).

(b) If the HUF to which such a gift is made consists of minimum two coparceners, then the gifted property can be held by the members of the family as joint tenants and the income arising out of such gifted property can be assessed as income in the hands of the joint Hindu family.

Section 56(2)(x) provides that any sum of money or value of property received by a HUF without consideration would be chargeable to income-tax under the head "Income from other sources", if the aggregate value or in case of immovable property stamp duty value of the property exceeds ₹ 50,000 during a year. However, a sum received by a HUF from its relative, i.e., a member of the HUF, is exempt. For details, refer Chapter 8 on "Income from other sources".

ILLUSTRATION 10

Mr. Ram (aged 56) is Karta of his HUF. The HUF consists of himself, his wife and two sons viz. Mr. C (aged 28) and Minor D (aged 16). The HUF is assessed to income tax and has business income from the year 2010-11 onwards. The business income of HUF for the year ended 31.3.2020 is ₹ 5,00,000 (computed). Mr. Ram is employed in a private company and his salary income for the same period is ₹ 6,10,000 (computed).

You are requested to answer the following treating each of them as independent situations:

(i) Mr. C gave cash gift of ₹ 1,00,000 to the HUF of Mr. Ram. What would be the total income of HUF?

(ii) The HUF has one house property fetching rent of ₹ 10,000 per month and some movable assets. There is a proposal to make a partial partition of HUF by allotting the house property to Mr. C. Is it advisable to do a partial partition?

(iii) Minor D earned ₹ 70,000 by use of his special skill and talent. How would his income be taxed?

(iv) A car owned personally by Mr. Ram was blended with HUF during the year. It was leased out for a monthly rent of ₹ 10,000 from 1-10-2019. How would this income be taxed?

SOLUTION

(i) Cash gift of ₹ 1 lakh by Mr. C, Ram's major son, to the HUF of Mr. Ram would not be taxable in the hands of the HUF, since gifts from a relative of the HUF does not fall within the scope of income taxable under section 56(2)(x). Since Mr. C, being Mr. Ram's son, is a member of Ram's HUF, he is a relative of the HUF. Hence the total income of HUF would be ₹ 5 lakhs, being the business income computed.

Note - Salary income of Mr. Ram, the Karta of the HUF, who is employed in a private company would be taxed in his individual hands, since the remuneration earned by the Karta on account of the personal qualifications and exertions and not on account of the investment of the family funds cannot be treated as income of the HUF.

(ii) Partial partition (after 31.12.1978) is not recognized and the HUF, which has been hitherto assessed to tax, shall continue to be liable to be assessed as if no such partial partition has taken place [Section 171(9)].

The rental income in this case would continue to be assessed in the hands of the HUF, even after partial partition. Therefore, it is not advisable to do a partial partition.

(iii) Income of ₹ 70,000 earned by Minor D by use of his special skill and talent would be taxable in his individual hands. It will not be included in the hands of his parent by virtue of the exception to section 64(1A) contained in the proviso to section 64(1A).

(iv) As per section 64(2), where a member of the HUF blends his self-acquired property for inadequate consideration with the HUF, income derived therefrom is deemed to arise to the transferor-member and not to the HUF. In this case, Mr. Ram has blended his personal property (i.e., car) with the HUF.

Since there is no consideration in case of blending, the income from car computed in the prescribed manner, [which can be as per the presumptive provisions or lease rental of ₹ 60,000 (₹ 10,000 × 6 months) less depreciation] would be deemed as the income of Mr. Ram.

(4) Assessment of Local Authority

(i) General meaning: The expression "local authority" has not been defined by the Income-tax Act, 1961. A local authority is a person under section 2(31) of the Income-tax Act, 1961, and thus, constitutes a separate unit of assessment. It is chargeable to tax on its total income in respect of the previous year, computed in accordance with and under the basic provisions of the Act, which apply to other taxable entities and for all purposes of the Act, this entity is included in the term 'person'. All municipal corporations, or councils, committees, panchayat boards, port trusts, district boards and other authorities legally entitled to or entrusted by the Central or State Government with the control and/or management of a municipal or local fund are covered by the expression 'local authority'.

(ii) Exemptions: Under section 10(20), the income of a local authority which is chargeable to tax under the heads 'Income from house property,' 'Capital gains' and 'Income from other sources' accruing or arising to it anywhere in or outside India and income from a trade or business carried on by it which accrues or arises to it from the supply of a commodity or service with its own jurisdiction area or from the supply of water or electricity within or outside its own jurisdictional area are totally exempt from tax.

In other words, a local authority is taxable only in respect of the income arising to it from any business carried on by it provided that such income arises from the supply of any commodity or service, not being water or electricity outside its jurisdictional area, i.e., territorial limits.

A local authority is said to be resident at the place where the control and management of its affairs are situated and its residential status is governed by section 6(4). A local authority in India is always resident in India, except where the control and management of its affairs is exercised wholly from outside India.

(iii) Tax rate: After total income, i.e., the income of a local authority chargeable to tax has been determined, the whole of it would attract tax at the rate applicable i.e., the one prescribed by the relevant Finance Act. There is no minimum amount exempt from tax in the case of a local authority. For income tax purposes, local authority is chargeable to tax on the whole of its income at 30%. Surcharge @ 12% is applicable where total income exceeds ₹ 1 crore. Health and Education cess @ 4% have to be added to the income-tax and surcharge, wherever applicable.

(5) Assessment of firms/ LLPs and their partners

A firm is to be assessed as a unit and the share income from the firm in the hands of the partners is exempt. There is no need for registration.

(i) General: Meaning of terms 'firm', 'partner' and 'partnership' has already discussed in Chapter 1: Basic Concepts. Under section 2(23) of the Income-tax Act, 1961, the terms 'firm', 'partner' and 'partnership' have the same meanings respectively as have been assigned to them under the Indian Partnership Act, 1932, but the expression 'partner' also includes any other person who being a minor, has been admitted to the benefits of an existing partnership. In addition, the definitions also include the terms limited liability partnership, a partner of limited liability partnership as they have been defined in the Limited Liability Partnership Act, 2008.

A firm though not a legal person or juridical entity, is chargeable to tax as a separate entity distant from the partners and the partners are assessable as individuals and not as an association persons or body of individuals. The term 'firm' as used in the Act covers both registered and unregistered firms.

The residential status of a firm to be determined depending upon the fact whether or not the control and management of its affairs is exercised from within India. Even if the negligible part of the control and management is exercised from within India, the firm would be resident in India for all the purposes. For determining the residential status of a firm, it is immaterial to ascertain the residential status of partners thereof because a firm may be resident even in cases where all the partners are not resident in India and they control or manage the affairs from India.

Every firm is liable to pay tax flat rate of 30% on its total income of the previous year computed in accordance with the provisions of the Act, plus surcharge @ 12% if its total income exceeds ₹ 1 crore, plus health and education cess@4%.

The following are the salient features of assessment of partnership firms:

(a) The firm will be taxed as a separate entity. There will be no distinction between registered and unregistered firm.

(b) The share of the partner in the income of the firm will not be included in the hands of the partner. It will be exempt under section 10(2A).

(c) Any salary, bonus commission or remuneration, by whatever name called, which is due to or received by a partner will be allowed as a deduction subject to certain restrictions.

(d) Where a firm pays interest to any partner, the firm can claim deduction of such interest from its total income subject to certain conditions. However, the maximum rate at which interest can be allowed to a partner will be 12% per annum.

(e) The income of the firm will be taxed at a flat rate of 30% plus surcharge @ 12% if its total income exceeds ₹ 1 crore plus health and education cess @ 4%.

(ii) Partnership Firm Assessed As Such (PFAS) [Section 184]

♦ Conditions to be fulfilled:

To get the status of PFAS, the firm should be evidenced by an “instrument”. The word “instrument” means a document of legal nature by which any right or liability is created, limited, extended, or extinguished.

Instrument does not necessarily mean a regular partnership deed, but it may constitute any other relevant document. If the terms of a partnership are contained in a number of documents or in the correspondence between the parties, the documents or letters would constitute “instrument” for the purposes of section 184(1)(i).

The next condition is that the individual shares of partners must be specified in the instrument. A firm cannot get the status of PFAS unless the instrument of partnership specifies the individual shares of partners in the profits of the partnership. Evidence regarding the shares of partners should be available within the framework of the instrument. It should not involve searching of a number of documents.

The next condition is that a certified copy of the instrument should accompany the first return of income of a firm. As already noted “instrument” in this sense refers not only to the partnership deed but also other documents from which the existence of partnership can be proved. Accordingly, certified copies of all documents will have to be submitted. Section 184 requires that the copy of the instrument shall be certified in writing by all partners other than minors. If, however, the return is made after the dissolution of the firm, it should be certified by all partners other than minors who were partners in the firm immediately before dissolution and by the legal representative of any such partner who is deceased. The certified copy of the instrument of partnership shall accompany the return of income of the firm of the previous year relevant to the assessment year.

If there is any change in the constitution of the firm or profit-sharing ratio during any previous year, a certified copy of the revised instrument of partnership should be filed along with the return of income of the relevant assessment year. Even if there is a change in remuneration/payment of interest to partners but there is no change in profit sharing ratio, a copy of the revised instrument of partnership should be submitted along with return to comply with the provisions of section 40(b).

Section 184(5) provides that where the firm commits any default as mentioned in section 144, the firm shall be assessed as a firm and not as an AOP. However, no deduction for payment of interest, salary, bonus, commission or remuneration, by whatever name called, made by the firm to any partner shall be allowed in computing the income chargeable under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession". However, the interest, salary, bonus, commission or remuneration so disallowed shall not be charged to tax in the hands of the partners under section 28(v).

♦ Computation of income of partnership firm: While computing the income of a firm assessed as such, we have to keep in mind the following points:

(a) Remuneration is to be allowed

(b) Interest is to be allowed

(c) Unabsorbed depreciation and other losses should be provided for.

♦ Remuneration paid to partners: First let us discuss the question of deduction of remuneration to the partners. In this context we have to remember the conditions prescribed by section 37 as regards the allowability of residuary expenses. Accordingly, no capital expenditure or personal expenses will be allowed. Further the remuneration paid must be only and exclusively for the purposes of the business of the firm. Apart from the general conditions prescribed in section 37 there are certain specific conditions prescribed by section 40(b).

They are as follows: -

(1) Such remuneration should be paid only to the working partner.

(2) It should be authorised by the partnership deed.

(3) It should not pertain to a period prior to partnership deed.

(4) It should not exceed the permissible limit.

Payment should be to a working partner:

Explanation 4 to section 40(b) defines working partner as one who is actively engaged in conducting the affairs of the business or profession of the firm of which he is a partner. This definition is very general. It seems that a partner can be a working partner in more than one firm. If a partner is employed somewhere else too, he can still be a working partner in the firm. However, in all such situations the partner must infact be a working partner in the firm. In other words, merely because a person is working somewhere else too, such a fact does not by itself debar him from being a working partner in a firm in which he is a partner. As stated before, to be a working partner, the partner has to be actively engaged in conducting the affairs of the business or profession of the firm. Now in order to be actively engaged in conducting the affairs of the business or profession does not require either expressly or by implication that the concerned partner should be so actively engaged in conducting the business affairs on a full-time basis. A partner can be said to be actively engaged in conducting the affairs of the firm even if he devotes a part and not the whole of his working hours.

Further, in order to be actively engaged in the affairs, a partner is not expected to be engaged in the whole of the affairs of the business of the firm, nor is he expected to know everything about the affairs of the business of the firm. For example, in a firm with many partners, one partner may be looking after purchases, another after sales and another after production and still another after administration, finance and accounts. It cannot be contended that just because they are not overall incharge, they cannot be considered as working partner.

Another significant point to be noted here is that the definition of "working partner" in Explanation 4 contemplates an individual. Therefore, a partner other than an individual (example a company) cannot be working partner. An interesting situation may be considered here. When a company is a partner in a firm, a director or shareholder of the company can very well be an employee of the firm in which the company is a partner. Any salary/ remuneration paid by the firm to such an employee would be totally outside the ambit of disallowance under section 40(b). This would be so because the individual who is an employee of the firm is not a partner in the firm. It is the company in which he is the director which is the partner and, section 40(b) contemplates allowance of remuneration paid by a firm to its partners and not to other employees.

It should be authorised by the Partnership Deed:

Any payment of salary, bonus, commission or remuneration by whatever name called to a working partner is not allowed as a deduction if the payment is not authorised by partnership deed or it is not in accordance with the terms of partnership deed. As a result, a mere general authority in the partnership deed that such and such working partners would be paid remuneration as may be agreed upon between the partners from time to lime will not be sufficient. The partnership deed will have to contain clear direction as to the quantum of remuneration to be paid to the working partners. For example, such remuneration may be specified by way of annual fixed payment or as a certain specified percentage of the firm's book profit at the year end. It may be noted that such remuneration need not be paid on a monthly basis. An item like commission can be paid even as a percentage of sales. Remuneration also can be a yearly payment.

Now, a question arises whether the names of individual working partners should be specified in the partnership deed or whether it is sufficient if the total remuneration payable to the working partners as a whole is indicated. One opinion is that it is not necessary that the individual partners should be identified or designated. It will be sufficient to lay down an authorisation in the deed to the effect that remuneration will be payable to the class of working partners up to so and so percentage of the book profit. And further that, within such limits the working partners shall share such remuneration in any ratio as may be agreed upon. In other words this concept gives recognition to the working partners as a class and authorising remuneration for the class rather than identifying or designating individual working partners and authorising remuneration for each individual working partner. There is nothing in the section 40(b) which prohibits this type of interpretation. However, in order to avoid litigation, it is better that the deed identifies and designates the working partners as well as the remuneration payable to them.

As a result of this stipulation, every firm constituted on or after April 1, 1992 will have to provide for an appropriate clause in its partnership deed satisfying this requirement. However, so far as the existing firms are concerned, they will have to execute a supplementary deed or a deed of change in the constitution so as to incorporate a clause within the deed of partnership relating to payment of remuneration to its working partners.

It should not pertain to period prior to partnership deed:

By virtue of a further restriction contained in 40(b)(iii), such remuneration paid to the working partners will be allowed as deduction to the firm from the date of such partnership deed and not from any period prior thereto. Consequently, if for instance a firm incorporates the clause relating to payment of remuneration to the working partners by executing an appropriate deed as on July 1st, but effective from April 1st, the firm would get deduction for the remuneration paid to its working partners from July 1st onwards but not for the period from April 1st to June 30th. In other words, it will not be possible to give retrospective effect to oral agreements entered into vis-a-vis such remuneration prior to putting the same in a written partnership deed.

Example: A and B entered into partnership agreement on April 1, 2019. As per the deed, each of them will be entitled to salary of ₹2,000 per month apart from profit. On August 1, 2019, they executed a supplementary deed by which they increased the remuneration to ₹3,000 each effective from 1st April 2019. Discuss the validity of the supplementary deed.

Remuneration will be payable effective from the date of the deed which provides for the payment of such remuneration. In the given case, the original deed provides for remuneration at the rate of ₹ 2,000 for each partner from April 1, 2019 onwards. The supplementary deed is executed on August 1, 2019 increasing the limit of remuneration. Such increase in the limit of remuneration will be allowable only from 1st August 2019, being the date of supplementary deed. Hence, for the period from 1st April 2019 to 31st July 2019, the partners will be allowed remuneration only at the rate of ₹ 2,000 per month.

It should not exceed the permissible limit:

As we have seen earlier, salary, bonus, commission or other remuneration may be paid to any working partner in accordance with and as authorised by the terms of the partnership deed and in relation to any period falling after the partnership deed. However, the maximum amount of such payment to all the partners during the previous year should not exceed the limits given below:-

Book Profit	Quantum of Deduction
On the first ₹ 3 lakh of book profit or in case of loss	₹ 1,50,000 or 90% of book profit, whichever is higher on the balance of book profit	60% of book profit

Book Profit:

The permissible remuneration is to be computed as a percentage of book profit. For this purpose we have to draw up the profit and loss account and find the net profit. This profit and loss account is to be prepared in the manner laid down in Chapter IV-D. It may be noted that Chapter IV-D contains the provisions relating to computation of income under the head 'Profits and gains of business or profession'. Further, Explanation 3 also lays down that if while arriving at the above net profit, the remuneration paid/payable by a firm to its partners is debited to such a profit and loss account, the aggregate of such remuneration paid/payable to the partners shall be added to the net profit in order to arrive at the book profit.

When the Act says that the profit and loss account should be prepared in the manner laid down in Chapter IV-D, it means that only those items which are chargeable under section 28 as income will be taken into account and only deductions permissible thereunder will be allowed. For example, rent from house property, dividend, interest on bank deposit or government securities are not chargeable as income from business or profession under section 28. Therefore, if the profit and loss account of a firm contains these above receipts, they have to be excluded while calculating the net profit. In the same way, items which are to be disallowed under the various provisions from sections 28 to 44D will have to be eliminated. It naturally follows, therefore, that brought forward business losses will not be deducted while calculating book profit.

The above table shows the upper limits up to which deduction is allowed to firm in respect of the remuneration paid to its working partners. It does not mean that a firm is prohibited from paying remuneration beyond these limits. A firm can pay remuneration to working partners beyond these limits but it will suffer disallowance in respect of such excess under section 40(b) and consequently pay tax on it @ 30%. If a firm pays remuneration to non-working partners, the same will be the result. However, the above limits apply to the remuneration paid to the group of all working partners in a firm taken together and not to each individual partner. Finally, it may be noted that section 40(b) does not compel a firm to pay remuneration to its working partners. It is purely at the discretion of the firm. However, once a firm pays remuneration to its working partners it will be subject to the restrictive provisions of section 40(b). It is also open to a firm to pay salary only to a few working partners and not all the working partners.

- Interest payable to partners: So far as allowability of interest paid by a firms to its partners under section 40(b) is concerned, the following conditions have been prescribed by section 40(b):

  (1) The interest payable by a firm to its partners should be authorised by and in accordance with the partnership deed.

  (2) The interest payable by a firm to its partners should not be for a period falling prior to the date of such partnership deed authorizing the payment of such interest.

  (3) The rate of interest payable to the partners shall not exceed 12% simple interest per annum.

  Apart from the above conditions the conditions prescribed by section 36(1)(iii) and section 40(a)(i) should also be satisfied. Section 36(1)(iii) provides that the amount of interest paid in respect of capital borrowed must be for the purposes of the business or profession. Section 40(a)(i) provides that any interest which is payable outside India or in India to a non-corporate non-resident or to foreign company will not be allowed as a deduction unless tax has been deducted therefrom.

  An important question could be regarding the amount with reference to which this interest @ 12% will have to be calculated. For example, a partner may have contributed capital to the firm and in addition may also advance loan to the firm. The question would be whether the interest paid by the firm on capital would be allowable or that on the loan would be allowable. Moreover, some firms have an accounting system of maintaining current accounts of partners in addition to the capital accounts. When some balance is standing to the credit of a partner in such current account as well the question arises whether the interest paid on the balance in the current account will be allowable within the meaning of section 40(b).

In this regard, it may be noted that section 40(b) does not refer to nor does it make any distinction between the capital contributed by a partner to the firm, the loan advanced by a partner to the firm or the balance in the current account of a partner. Therefore, the interest paid by a firm to its partners on the credit balance standing in all the accounts/whether in capital account, loan account or current account, shall be allowed as deduction to the firm under section 40(b). The idea seems to be to allow interest on the funds employed in the firm by a partner.

As it happens, many a time, a partner may have debit balance in his current account and credit balance in his capital account or loan account. The question which would arise in such a situation could be whether the interest payable to such a partner at the rate of interest authorised by and in accordance with partnership deed will be reckoned with reference to the aggregate of the credit balance in the capital account and the loan account including the debit balance in the current account or whether it should be calculated on the net balance that is the aggregate of the credit balance in the capital account and in the loan account as reduced by the debit balance in the current account. It appears that in such a situation the equitable principle would be to allow interest reckoned with reference to the net balance. Alternatively, if interest is recovered from a partner on the debit balance in his account and interest is paid to the same partner on the credit balance in his account, the net amount paid to that partner would be subjected to the provisions of section 40. However, interest received from one partner cannot be set-off against interest paid to another partner under this proviso.

The next issue which is to be considered here is the point of time at which interest should be credited to the partners' accounts. For example, a firm may adopt a policy of crediting interest quarterly to the credit of the partners' accounts. In such a case, the firm would be paying in effect interest on interest at the year end. This would amount to compounding interest quarterly. This is not permitted under section 40(b) because what that section contemplates is simple interest and simple interest here would mean interest which is calculated yearly or annually. Paying the interest on interest credited periodically during a year would be contrary to the concept of simple interest per annum.

ILLUSTRATION 11

M/s. HIG, a firm, consisting of three partners namely, H, I and G, carried on the business of purchase and sale of television sets in wholesale and manufacture and sale of pens under a deed of partnership executed on 1.4.2010. H, I and G were partners in their individual capacity.

The deed of partnership provided for payment of salary amounting to ₹ 1,25,000 each to H and G, who were the working partners. A new deed of partnership was executed on 1.10.2019 which, apart from providing for payment of salary to the two working partners as mentioned in the deed of partnership executed on 1.4.2010, for the first time provided for payment of simple interest @ 12% per annum on the balances standing to the credit of the Capital accounts of partners from 1.4.2019.

The firm was dissolved on 31.3.2020 and the capital assets of the firm were distributed among the partners on 20.4.2020. The net profit of the firm for the year ended 31.3.2020 after payment of salary to the working partners and debit/credit of the following items to the Profit and Loss Account was ₹ 1,50,000:

(i) Interest amounting to ₹ 1,00,000 paid to the partners on the balances standing to the credit of their capital accounts from 1.4.2019 to 31.3.2020.

(ii) Interest amounting to ₹ 50,000 paid to the partners on the balances standing to the credit of their Current accounts from 1.4.2019 to 31.3.2020.

(iii) Interest amounting to ₹ 20,000 paid to the Hindu undivided family of partner H @ 18% per annum.

(iv) Payment of ₹ 25,000 towards purchase of television sets (stock in trade) made by crossed cheque on 1.11.2019.

(v) ₹ 30,000 being the value of gold jewellery received as gift from a manufacturer for achieving sales target.

(vi) Depreciation amounting to ₹ 15,000 on motor car bought and used exclusively for business purposes, but registered in the name of partner 'H'.

(vii) Depreciation under section 32(1)(ii) amounting to ₹ 37,500 of new machinery bought and installed for manufacture of pens on 1.11.2019 at a cost of ₹ 5,00,000.

(viii) Interest amounting to ₹ 25,000 received from bank on fixed deposits made out of surplus funds.

The firm furnishes the following information relating to it:

(a) Closing stock-in-trade was valued at ₹ 60,000 as per the method of lower of cost or net realizable value consistently followed by it. The net realizable value of the closing stock-in-trade was ₹ 65,000.

(b) Brought forward business loss relating to the assessment year 2019-20 was ₹ 50,000.

(c) The fair market value of the capital assets as on 31.3.2020 was ₹ 20,00,000 and the cost of their acquisition was ₹ 15,00,000.

Compute the total income of M/s. HIG for the assessment year 2020-21.

You are required to furnish explanations for the treatment of the various items given above.

Interest received from bank on fixed deposits [Note (viii)].		25,000
Total Income		1,80,000

Notes:

(i) Interest to partners authorised by the partnership deed will be allowed as deduction only for the period beginning with the date of the partnership deed and not for any earlier period as per section 40(b)(iv). Therefore, interest paid to the partners on the balances standing to the credit of their capital accounts from 1.10.2019 alone is eligible for deduction, since the partnership deed was executed only on 1.10.2019. Interest for the period prior to 1.10.2019 is not allowed.

(ii) The partnership deed of 1.10.2019 provides for payment of interest on balances in capital accounts of partners only. As such, the interest paid on the balances standing to the credit of the current accounts of partners is not allowable under section 40(b). The Kerala High Court has, in Novel Distributing Enterprises v. DCIT (2001) 251 ITR 704 (Ker), on identical facts, held that interest paid to the partners on their current account balances is not allowable.

(iii) Since H is a partner in his individual capacity, interest paid to the Hindu Undivided Family of partner H does not attract disallowance under section 40(b)(iv).

(iv) Section 40A(3) provides for disallowances @ 100% of the expenditure incurred otherwise than by an account payee cheque drawn on a bank or an account payee bank draft or use of electronic clearing system through a bank account or through such other electronic mode as may be prescribed. Since the firm has made payment of ₹ 25,000 towards purchase of television sets by a crossed cheque and not by an account payee cheque, 100% of such expenditure would be disallowed.

(v) Gold jewellery valued at ₹ 30,000 received as gift from a manufacturer for achieving sales target is taxable under section 28(iv), being a benefit arising from business. Since it has already been credited to profit and loss account, no further adjustment is required.

(vi) Depreciation on motor car bought and used exclusively for the purposes of business is allowable though not registered in the name of the firm in view of the ratio of the decision of the Supreme Court in Mysore Minerals Ltd. v. CIT (1999) 239 ITR 775.

(vii) The firm is entitled to additional depreciation @ 20% under section 32(1)(iia) in respect of the new machinery installed for manufacture of pens. Since the new machinery is put to use for less than 180 days during the relevant previous year, the additional depreciation is restricted to 50% of the prescribed rate of 20% i.e. it is restricted to 10%. The balance additional depreciation can be claimed in the immediately succeeding financial year.

(viii) Interest received from bank on fixed deposits made out of surplus funds is assessable under the head 'Income from other sources'. Hence, it is not taken into account for the purpose of computing book-profit.

(ix) As per para 24 of ICDS II: Valuation of Inventories, closing stock has to be valued at net realizable value in the case of a dissolved firm. As such, the closing stock-in-trade of the firm has to be valued at the net realizable value of ₹ 65,000. Since it has been valued at ₹ 60,000, being the cost, the balance ₹ 5,000 has to be added.

(x) Net profit shown in the profit and loss account computed in the manner laid down in Chapter IV-D as increased by the aggregate amount of the remuneration paid or payable to all the partners constitutes book profit as per Explanation 3 to section 40(b). Carry forward and set off of business loss is covered under Chapter VI. Hence, brought forward business loss relating to the assessment year 2019-20 is not considered for calculation of book-profit.

(xi) Section 45(4) is not applicable to the firm for the assessment year 2020-21, though the dissolution of the firm took place on 31.3.2020, as there was no transfer by way of distribution of capital assets during the relevant previous year. The distribution of the capital assets took place on 20.4.2020. The capital gains will, therefore, be assessable in the assessment year 2021-22.

♦ Partner in a representative capacity: If an individual is a partner in a firm in a representative capacity (that is on behalf and for the benefit of another person) and not in his personal capacity then, interest paid by the firm to such individual in his personal capacity and not as a representative capacity will not be subject to the conditions and ceiling as prescribed for disallowance. But interest paid by the firm to such individual as representative partner or person represented shall be subject to the conditions and ceiling as prescribed (Explanation 1).

> Example: X is a partner in a firm in a representative capacity for and on behalf of his HUF. Supposing the firm pays interest of ₹ 6,000 to X in his personal capacity and not in his capacity as the representative of HUF, it will be allowed as deduction and the prescribed ceiling will not apply. However, if such payment is made to X as a representative and partner or if the firm has paid the interest directly to the HUF, then the payment will be subject to the conditions and ceiling as prescribed.

- Interest received by a non-representative partner: If interest is paid to an individual partner who is not the representative partner and the interest received by him is on behalf of or for the benefit of another person, then such interest payment shall be allowed without applying the ceiling limits.

> Example: X is a partner of a firm in his individual capacity and is not a representative partner. Interest is paid by the firm to him in respect of a deposit made by his wife. This will be allowed as a deduction because such interest is received by him purely on behalf of another person.

- Computation of income of partner of a firm (PFAS): While computing the income of a partner including a minor partner of a firm, the following points have to taken into consideration.

  Share income exempt under section 10(2A): The partner's share in the total income of firm (PFAS) will be exempt in his hands and will not be included in his total income. His share in the total income of the firm will be calculated as follows:-

$$\text{Total income of firm} \times \frac{\text{Partner's share in profits of firm as per partnership deed}}{\text{Total profit of the firm}}$$

  By virtue of this exemption, a partner of PFAS will not be taxed in respect of his share in the firm's income since the firm itself will be taxed as a separate entity @ 30%. There will be no allocation of income among the partners. On account of this exemption, he will not be entitled to set-off his share in the firm's loss against his other personal income.

- Chargeability of remuneration and interest: Remuneration and interest received by a partner of a PFAS in accordance with the conditions prescribed under section 40(b) will be taxable in his hands as income from profits and gains of business or profession.

  If remuneration or interest paid to a partner is disallowed in the assessment of the firm due to the fact that they are not in accordance with the conditions prescribed under section 40(b) then the partner will not be taxed in respect of the amount disallowed because in such a case the firm itself will be liable to pay tax on the amount which has been disallowed in its assessment. In other words, if the firm is given the benefit of deduction of remuneration and interest paid to a partner then the liability to tax in respect of such amount will be that of a partner. If the firm is not given the benefit of deduction because of the non-compliance with the provisions of section 40(b) then the firm itself will be liable in respect of the amount and the partner will not be taxed in respect of it in his personal assessment. It is obvious that such remuneration or interest which has been disallowed in the hands of the firm but actually received by a partner will be assumed to be his share in the income of such firm and exemption under section 10(2A) will operate.

Suppose a portion of the remuneration and interest in the assessment of the firm is disallowed since they exceed the overall ceiling limit prescribed under section 40(b), the question arises as to how to allocate such disallowance in the hands of the partner. One reasonable basis is to assume that the remuneration and interest paid to the partners concerned has been disallowed in proportion to the gross remuneration and interest paid to them and the exemption of the disallowed sum should be available to the partners in the same proportion.

♦ Assessment of firms – Some of the important issues to be considered by the Assessing Officer while framing assessment [Circular 12/2019, dated 19.6.2019]:

(i) While computing remuneration which is allowable to a working partner under section 40(b)(v), the term 'in accordance with the terms of the partnership deed' in clauses (ii) and (v) of section 40(b) implies that remuneration should not be undetermined or undecided. Hence, in all situations, partnership deed should form the basis for determination of remuneration payable to the working partners. Furthermore, in situations where the remuneration either so specified in the partnership deed or computed as per the method indicated therein falls short of the amount allowable under section 40(b)(v), it would be restricted to the figure computed on the basis of the partnership deed.

(ii) While computing remuneration payable to the working partners under section 40(b)(v) of the Act, the remuneration should not exceed a particular aggregate amount which is based upon the figure of 'book profit'. Explanation 3 to section 40(b) contains definition of 'book profit' for the purposes of determination of remuneration of the partners and provides that 'book profit' shall mean the net profit, as shown in the profit & loss account for the relevant previous year, computed in the manner laid down in Chapter IV-D as increased by the aggregate amount of the remuneration paid or payable to all the partners of the firm if such amount has been deducted while calculating the net profit. Therefore, while computing 'book profit' for purposes of section 40(b)(v), all incomes such as capital gain, interest, rental income, income from other sources etc. which do not fall under the head 'Profits and gains of business or profession', should be excluded.

(iii) Under section 185, any non-compliance by the firm or its partners with provisions of section 184 may result in denial of expenses such as remuneration, interest etc. payable to the partners which are otherwise allowable under the provisions of the Act.

(iv) Where firms try to inflate the profits eligible for deduction under section 80-IA by not claiming expenditure towards remuneration, salary, interest etc. which are payable to the partners, the Assessing Officers may examine these transactions in light of provisions of section 80-IA(10) which empower Assessing Officer to re-compute profit of the eligible business after excluding the profits of the related activity/business which produced the excessive profit.

(v) While framing assessments in case of firms claiming carry forward and set off of losses, Assessing Officers have to verify such claims taking into consideration provisions of section 78 which disallow such a carry forward and set off in case of change in constitution of the firm or on succession.

- Rate of tax: A PFAS will be chargeable in respect of its total income at the rate of 30% plus surcharge @ 12% if its total income exceeds ₹ 1 crore, plus health and education cess @ 4% thereon.

- Treatment of losses: If PFAS incurs any loss, the firm alone can set off and forward such losses to be set off against income of the subsequent years. The firm will not be allowed to apportion its unabsorbed losses among its partners.

- Set off of carry forward loss in case of change in the constitution of the firm [Section 78]: If there is a change in the constitution of the firm, the loss of a retired/ deceased partner can be carried forward by the firm only to the extent that it does not exceed such partner's share in the profits of the firm of the relevant previous year. However, it is to be carefully noted that section 78 is applicable only in case there is a change in the constitution of the firm as result of retirement or death of a partner in the previous year. In other words, it does not apply when there is a change in the profit sharing ratio or change in the constitution because of induction of a new partner. Similarly, section 78 will not apply to set off and carry forward of unabsorbed depreciation etc.

- Tax rate of firm [Section 167A]: In the case of a firm which is assessable as a firm, tax shall be charged at the rate as specified in the Finance Act of the relevant year.

- Liability of partner of LLP in liquidation [Section 167C]: This section provides for the liability of partners of LLP in liquidation. In case of liquidation of an LLP, where tax due from the LLP cannot be recovered, every person who was a partner of the LLP at any time during the relevant previous year will be jointly and severally liable for payment of such tax unless he proves that non-recovery cannot be attributed to any gross neglect, misfeasance or breach of duty on his part in relation to the affairs of the LLP. This provision would also apply where tax is due from any other person in respect of any income of any previous year during which such other person was a LLP. "Tax due", for the purpose of this section includes penalty, interest or any other sum payable under the Income-tax Act, 1961.

♦ Assessment in case of change in constitution, succession and dissolution of a firm [Section 187 to 189A]

Change in constitution of a firm: Where at the time of making an assessment under section 143 or 144 it is found that a change has occurred in the constitution of a firm, assessment shall be made on the firm as constituted at the time of making the assessment.

Meaning of change in constitution of the firm: It means

(a) If one or more of the partners cease to be partners (other than a case where ceases to be a partner by way of demise of the partner) or one or more new partners are admitted, in such circumstances that one or more of the persons who were partners of the firm before the change continue as partner or partners after the change.

(b) All the partners of firm continue to be the partner of the firm but there is a change in their profit sharing ratio or change in shares of some of them.

Succession of one firm by another: In a case where a firm carrying on a business or profession is succeeded by another firm, separate assessment will be made on the predecessor firm and the successor firm in accordance with the provisions of section 170.

Liability of partners: Where any tax, penalty or other sum payable by the firm for the relevant previous year is due, then every person being a partner of a firm and the legal representative of deceased partner during the previous year shall be jointly and severally liable along with the firm in respect of such sum.

Dissolution of firm or discontinuance of business: Where a firm is dissolved or business or profession is discounted by the firm, the assessing officer shall make an assessment of the total income of the firm as if no discontinuance or dissolution has taken place and all the provisions of the Act relating to levy of a penalty or any other sum chargeable under this Act, shall be applicable accordingly.

Every person who was at the time of dissolution or discontinuance a partner of a firm and the legal representative of deceased partner shall be jointly and severally liable for the amount of tax, penalty or other sum payable by the firm and all the provisions of the Act shall apply accordingly. If any proceedings have commenced in respect of any assessment year before dissolution or discontinuance, the proceeding may be continued against such persons (i.e., partner and legal representative) from that stage. The liability of legal representative is limited to the extent to which the estate is capable of meeting the liability.

ILLUSTRATION 12

Vijay Agencies, a partnership firm constituted by three partners with equal shares was dissolved on 1-04-2019 after a search. The tax liability of the firm outstanding to be paid was determined at ₹ 15 lakhs. Out of three partners, one was declared insolvent on 18-03-2020 by the Court. The Assessing Officer, for recovering the demand, attached the Bank Accounts of other two partners and could recover an amount of ₹ 6 lakhs from the Account of one such partner. You are asked by the partners of the dissolved firm the following questions:

(i) About the liability of each of them to pay outstanding demand.

(ii) Whether the action of Assessing Officer to attach the Bank Account of partners to recover the tax demand of the dissolved firm is justified?

SOLUTION

(i) As per section 189(3), every person who was at the time of dissolution, a partner of the firm, shall be jointly and severally liable for the amount of tax, penalty or other sum payable and all the provisions of the Act relating to assessment of such tax or imposition of such penalty or other sum, shall apply. Therefore, the three partners (till one was declared as insolvent by the Court) are jointly and severally liable for making the payment of outstanding dues of ₹ 15 Lakhs. After insolvency of one partner, the other two partners are jointly and severally liable to pay such demand.

(ii) Accordingly, the action of the Assessing Officer to attach the bank accounts of the partners for recovery of outstanding demand is correct and the amount of ₹ 6 lakhs recovered by attachment of the bank account of one of the partners is also in order.

- Conversion of company into a LLP

(i) Consequent to the Limited Liability Partnership Act, 2008 coming into effect in 2009 and notification of the Limited Liability Partnership Rules w.e.f. 1st April, 2009, the Finance (No.2) Act, 2009 had incorporated the taxation scheme of LLPs in the Income-tax Act, 1961 on the same lines as applicable for general partnerships, i.e. tax liability would be attracted in the hands of the LLP and tax exemption would be available to the partners. Therefore, the same tax treatment would be applicable for both general partnerships and LLPs.

(ii) Under section 56 and section 57 of the Limited Liability Partnership Act, 2008, conversion of a private company or an unlisted public company into an LLP is permitted. However, under the Income-tax Act, no exemption is available on conversion of a company into an LLP. As a result, transfer of assets on conversion would attract capital gains tax. Further, there is no specific provision enabling the LLP to carry forward the unabsorbed losses and unabsorbed depreciation of the predecessor company.

(iii) Therefore, section 47(xiiib) provides that -

(1) any transfer of a capital asset or intangible asset by a private company or unlisted public company to a LLP; or

(2) any transfer of a share or shares held in a company by a shareholder

on conversion of a company into a LLP in accordance with section 56 and section 57 of the Limited Liability Partnership Act, 2008, shall not be regarded as a transfer for the purposes of levy of capital gains tax under section 45, subject to fulfillment of certain conditions. This clause has been introduced to facilitate conversion of small private and unlisted public companies into LLPs. These conditions are as follows:

(1) the total sales, turnover or gross receipts in business of the company should not exceed ₹ 60 lakh in any of the three preceding previous years;

(2) all the shareholders of the company immediately before conversion become partners of the LLP in the same proportion as their shareholding in the company;

(3) no consideration other than share in profit and capital contribution in the LLP arises to the shareholders;

(4) the erstwhile shareholders of the company continue to be entitled to receive at least 50% of the profits of the LLP for a period of 5 years from the date of conversion;

(5) The total value of assets as appearing in the books of account of the company in any of the three previous years preceding the previous year in which the conversion takes place, should not exceed ₹ 5 crore;

(6) all assets and liabilities of the company become the assets and liabilities of the LLP; and

(7) no amount is paid, either directly or indirectly, to any partner out of the accumulated profit of the company for a period of 3 years from the date of conversion.

(iv) However, if subsequent to the transfer, any of the above conditions are not complied with, the capital gains not charged under section 45 would be deemed to be chargeable to tax in the previous year in which the conditions are not complied with, in the hands of the LLP or the shareholder of the predecessor company, as the case may be [Section 47A(4)].

(v) Further, the successor LLP would be allowed to carry forward and set-off the business loss and unabsorbed depreciation of the predecessor company [Section 72A(6A)].

(vi) However, if the entity fails to fulfill any of the conditions mentioned in (iii) above, the benefit of set-off of business loss/unabsorbed depreciation availed by the LLP would be deemed to be the profits and gains of the LLP chargeable to tax in the previous year in which the LLP fails to fulfill any of the conditions listed above.

(vii) The tax credit under section 115JAA for MAT paid by the company under section 115JB would not be allowed to the successor LLP [Sub-section (7) of section 115JAA].

(viii) The actual cost of the block of assets in the case of the successor LLP shall be the written down value of the block of assets as in the case of the predecessor company on the date of conversion [Explanation 2C to section 43(6)].

(ix) The aggregate depreciation allowable to the predecessor company and successor LLP shall not exceed, in any previous year, the depreciation calculated at the prescribed rates as if the conversion had not taken place. Such depreciation shall be apportioned between the predecessor company and the successor LLP in the ratio of the number of days for which the assets were used by them [Section 32(1)].

(x) The cost of acquisition of the capital asset for the successor LLP shall be deemed to be the cost for which the predecessor company acquired it. It would be further increased by the cost of improvement of the asset incurred by the predecessor company or the successor LLP [Section 49(1)].

(xi) If the capital asset became the property of the LLP as a result of conversion of a company into an LLP, and deduction has been allowed or is allowable in respect of such asset under section 35AD, the actual cost would be taken as Nil [Explanation 13 to section 43(1)].

However, where an asset, in respect of which deduction is claimed and allowed under section 35AD is deemed to be the income of the assessee in accordance with the provisions of section 35AD(7B) (on account of being used for a purpose other than specified business under section 35AD), the actual cost of the asset to the assessee shall be actual cost to assessee as reduced by the amount of depreciation allowable had the asset been used for the purpose of business, calculated at the rate in force, since the date of its acquisition [Proviso to Explanation 13 to section 43(1)]

(xii) If a company eligible for deduction under section 35DDA in respect of expenditure incurred under Voluntary Retirement Scheme (one-fifth of such expenditure allowable over a period of five years) is converted into a LLP and such conversion satisfies the conditions laid down in section 47(xiiib), then, the LLP would be eligible for such deduction from the year in which the transfer took place.

(xiii) If a shareholder of a company receives rights in a partnership firm as consideration for transfer of shares on conversion of a company into a LLP, then the cost of acquisition of the capital asset being rights of a partner referred to in section 42 of the LLP Act, 2008 shall be deemed to be the cost of acquisition to him of the shares in the predecessor company, immediately before its conversion [Section 49(2AAA)].

(6) Assessment of AOPs/ BOIs and their members

Section 2(31) defines "person" as including "association of persons" or a body of individuals. The expression association of persons is to be understood in its ordinary sense meaning there by a group or congregation of persons. The expression association of persons is of a wider connotation and scope than that of a body of individuals. An association of persons may have as its members not only individuals (including minors) but also companies, firms, joint families and other associations. When there is a group of persons formed for the promotion of an enterprise or when co-adventures join together in a common action they are assessable as an association of persons. Ordinarily, there can be no association of persons in business unless the members of the group join together out of their own volition or will.

In order to constitute an association of persons, the members thereof must join any common purpose or common action and the object of the association must be to produce income. Mere receipt of income by a group of members in common will not make it an association unless income is earned by its own effort in common.

The co-owners, co-legatees and joint receivers joining for a common purpose or action would be assessable as an association of persons. For example, if the funds of a number of beneficiaries are put together and one business is carried on with the combined resources by the trustee, guardian or administrator, the business must be regarded as a single business assessable in the hands of an association of persons. However, section 26 specifically provides an exception to the assessment of co-owners as an association of persons. According to that section, where the shares of the co-owners in respect of income from house property are defined and ascertainable, the co-owners must be assessed not as an association of persons but individually even if the property may be owned and managed and developed jointly by the co-owners.

For the purpose of assessment, it is not necessary that the association should be legally constituted. In other words, it is not necessary that there must be mutual rights and obligations amongst the members enforceable in law. The illegality, invalidity or incorrectness in the constitution of an association does not in any way affect its liability to tax or its chargeability as a unit of assessment. A partnership which is illegal or otherwise void will have to be assessed as an association of persons. The question whether there is an association of persons or not depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case.

Computation of total income of AOPs/BOIs

1. Computation of total income in the case of an association of persons or body of individuals will be done in the same manner as in the case of any other assessee.
2. In computing the total income, interest, salary, bonus, commission, remuneration, by whatever name called, paid to members will not be allowed.

However, in the case of payment of interest the following provisions will apply:

Explanation 1: If interest is paid by an AOPs/BOIs to any member who has also paid interest to the AOPs/BOIs then only that amount of interest paid by the AOPs/BOIs will be disallowed in its assessment which is in excess of the interest paid by the member to the AOPs/BOIs.

Explanation 2: If an individual is a member of an AOPs/BOIs in a representative capacity, on behalf of or for the benefit of another person, then interest paid by the AOPs/BOIs to such individual in his personal capacity will not be taken into account for the purpose of disallowance. However, interest paid by the AOPs/BOIs to such individual or vice-versa as representative member or interest paid by the AOPs/BOIs directly to the beneficiary will be taken into account for the purpose of disallowance.

Explanation 3: If interest is paid to a member who is not a member in a representative capacity but such interest is received by him on behalf of or for the benefit of another person the interest payment will be allowed.

♦ Computation of tax where shares of members in AOPs/BOIs are unknown [Section 167B]: Tax on the total income would be computed as follows:

	Circumstances	Taxability
1.	If individual share of any member is not known	Tax will be levied at the maximum marginal rate. However, if total income of any member of AOPs/BOIs is taxable at a rate higher than maximum marginal rate then total income of AOPs/BOIs shall be chargeable to tax at such higher rate of tax.
2.	If individual share of a member is known and
	(a) total income of any member (excluding his share from	The AOPs/BOIs will pay tax at the maximum marginal rate. However, if total income of any member of AOPs/BOIs is taxable at a rate higher than maximum marginal rate (for AOPs/BOIs) exceeds the basic exemption limit	example, a foreign company which is a member), then, total income of AOPs/BOIs shall be chargeable to tax as follows: • Portion of income attributable to such member shall be taxable at such higher rate as applicable to that member. • Balance income shall be taxable at the maximum marginal rate of tax.

	(b) no member has total income (excluding his share from AOPs/BOIs) exceeding the basic exemption limit	The AOPs/BOIs will pay tax at the normal rates applicable to an individual

- Rate of Surcharge Applicable to AOP /BOI whether incorporated or not, having income under section 115AD of the income tax Act

  The Finance (No.2) Act, 2019 has levied an enhanced surcharge of 25% and 37%, where the total income of individuals/HUF/AOPs/BoIs exceeds Rs.2 crores and Rs.5 crores, respectively. However, vide Press Release dated 24.8.2019, the enhanced surcharge has been withdrawn on tax payable at special rates under section 115AD on short-term capital gains and long-term capital gains arising from the transfer of securities referred to in 115AD(1)(b). Accordingly, the Taxation Laws (Amendment) Ordinance, 2019, promulgated by the President of India on 20.9.2019, has amended the Finance (No.2) Act, 2019 to give effect to the withdrawal of enhanced surcharge on tax payable on capital gains arising from the transfer of securities referred to in section 115AD(1)(b). The table containing the rates of surcharge applicable to AOPs/BOIs is given as Annexure 3*. These rates would be effective from A.Y.2020-21, after the Taxation Laws (Amendment) Ordinance, 2019 is passed by the Parliament.*

- Assessment of share in the hands of member [Section 86]:

  - A member's share in the total income of an AOPs/BOIs will be treated as follows:

    If an AOPs/BOIs has paid tax at the maximum marginal rate, or a higher rate, the member's share in the total income of the firm will not be included in his total income.

    If the AOPs/BOIs has paid tax at regular rates applicable to an individual, the member's share in the income of the AOPs/BOIs computed under section 67A shall form part of his total income. However, the member will be allowed rebate under section 110 at the average rate in respect of such share.

- If the AOPs/BOIs has not paid tax on its total income, the member's share in the total income of the AOPs/BOIs will be included in his total income and taxed at regular rates.

♦ Computation of member's share in the total income of AOPs/BOIs [Section 67A]: A member's share in the income of an AOPs/BOIs (wherein the shares of members are determinate and known) will be computed as follows:

(a) Any interest, salary, bonus, commission, remuneration, etc. paid to a member during the previous year will be deducted from the total income of the association or body, and the balance will be apportioned among the members in proportion to their respective shares.

(b) If the amount apportioned to a member as per (a) is a profit, any interest, salary, etc. paid to him by the association or body during the previous year will be added to that amount and the aggregate sum will be such member's share in the income of the AOPs/BOIs.

(c) If the amount apportioned to a member as per (a) is a loss, any interest, salary, etc., paid to him by the association or body will be deducted from the amount of loss and the balance sum will be such member's share in the income of the AOPs/BOIs.

The share of a member in the income/loss of the AOPs/BOIs will, for the purposes of assessment, be apportioned under the various heads of income in the same manner in which income/loss of the association has been determined under each head.

Any interest paid by a member on capital borrowed by him for the purpose of investment in the AOPs/BOIs will be allowed as deduction while computing his share of income under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession."

♦ Determination of tax where total income includes income on which no tax is payable [Section 110]:

If the total income of an assessee includes any income on which no income-tax is payable, the assessee would be entitled to a deduction, from the amount of income-tax with which he is chargeable on his total income, of an amount equal to the income-tax calculated at the average rate of income-tax on the amount on which no income-tax is payable.

♦ Share of member of an AOPs/BOIs in the income of the AOPs/BOIs to be reduced from net profit for computing book profit for levy of MAT [Section 115JB]

(i) Under section 115JB, in the case of a company, if the tax payable on the total income computed as per the normal provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 is less than 15% of its book profit, such book profit shall be deemed to be the total income of the company and the tax payable for the relevant previous year shall be 15% of its book profit.

(ii) Explanation 1 below section 115JB(2) provides that the expression "book profit" means profit as shown in the statement of profit and loss account prepared in accordance with the provisions of the Companies Act or in accordance with the provisions of the relevant statute governing a company, as increased or reduced by certain adjustments, as specified thereunder.

(iii) Under section 86, no income-tax is payable on the share of a member of an AOPs/BOIs in the income of the AOPs/BOIs in certain circumstances. A company which is a member of an AOPs is also not required to pay tax in respect of its share in the income of the AOPs in such cases. However, under section 115JB, a company which is a member of an AOPs is liable to MAT on such share also, since such income is not excluded from the book profit while computing the MAT liability of the member. It may be noted that in a similar situation, in the case of a partner of a firm, the share in the profits of the firm is exempt in the hands of the partner as per section 10(2A) and no MAT is payable by the partner on such profits, since income to which any provision of section 10 applies, has to be reduced for computing book profit.

(iv) In order to ensure equity, clause (iic) in Explanation 1 below section 115JB(2) provides that the share of a member of an AOPs or BOIs, in the income of the AOPs or BOIs, on which no income-tax is payable in accordance with the provisions of section 86, should be reduced while computing book profit for levy of MAT under 115JB, if any such amount is credited to statement of profit and loss account. Consequently, clause (fa) has been inserted in Explanation 1 to add back the expenditures, if any, debited to the statement to profit and loss, corresponding to such income, while computing book profit for levy of MAT.

ILLUSTRATION 13

JK Associates is an Association of Persons (AOPs) consisting of two members, J and K. Shares of the members are: 60%(J) and 40%(K). Income of the AOPs for the previous year 2019-20 is ₹ 7 lacs.

Compute tax liability of the AOP and the members in the following situations:

(i) J and K have their income, other than income from AOPs, amounting to ₹ 1 lac and ₹ 2.7 lacs, respectively.

(ii) J and K's income, other than income from AOPs, amount to ₹ 1.50 lac and ₹ 2.30 lacs, respectively.

SOLUTION

Computation of tax of AOPs is governed by section 167B of the Income-tax Act, 1961. Tax on total income of AOP is computed as follows:

(i) If individual share of a member is known, and the total income of any member, excluding his share from such AOPs, exceeds the basic exemption limit, then the AOPs will pay tax at the maximum marginal rate.

(ii) If individual share of a member is known and no member has total income (excluding his share from AOPs) exceeding the basic exemption limit, then the AOP will pay tax at the rates applicable to an individual.

Section 86 provides for assessment of share in the hands of members of AOPs as follows:

A member's share in the total income of AOPs will be treated as follows:-

(i) If an AOPs has paid tax at the maximum marginal rate or a higher rate, the member's share in the total income of AOPs will not be included in his total income and will be exempt.

(ii) If the AOPs has paid tax at regular rates applicable to an individual, the member's share in the income of AOPs will be included in his total income and he will be allowed rebate at the average rate of tax in respect of such share.

Tax Liability of J K Associates, AOPs

(i) As K's income, other than that from the AOPs, exceeds the basic exemption limit, the AOPs shall pay tax at maximum marginal rate of 42.744 % (i.e. 30% plus 37% surcharge plus health and education cess @ 4%). Thus, the tax payable by AOP = ₹ 7,00,000 x 42.744 % = ₹ 2,99,208.

(ii) Since none of the members have income, other than income from the AOPs, exceeding the basic exemption limit, the AOPs would be taxed at the rates applicable to an individual. Therefore, the AOP's tax liability = ₹ 52,500 + ₹ 2,100 = ₹ 54,600.

(7) Assessment of Co-operative Societies

(i) General provisions: The expression "co-operative society" means a society registered under the Cooperative Societies Act, 1912 or under any other law for the time being in force in any State for the registration of co-operative societies [Section 2(19)]. For purposes of taxation, it is treated as a separate assessable entity. The profits of any business of insurance carried on by a co-operative society are to be computed in accordance with the rules set out in the First Schedule to the Act. Apart from this, the computation of income in the case of a co-operative society should also be made in the same way under each head of income as in the case of any other assessee. Entrance fees received by a co-operative society from its members is taxable as its income from business irrespective of the nature of the business carried on by the society as was held in Co-operative Central Bank vs. C.I.T. (1965) 57 ITR 579.

A member of a co-operative society to whom a building or a part thereof is allotted or leased under a house building scheme of the society must be deemed to be the owner of that building or part thereof under section 27(iii). Accordingly, the co-operative society is not liable to pay tax in respect of the income from the house property even though it may be the real owner according to official records and the tenant may have taken the building on lease. But where the tenant is not a member of the society or where the house is allotted to him otherwise than under a house building scheme of the society, the society will be liable to tax in respect of the income of the house property.

(ii) Exemptions: Section 80P provides certain exemptions to co-operative societies. However, the exemption is not available to co-operative banks, other than primary agricultural credit societies and primary co-operative agricultural and rural development banks. Students may refer to the detailed discussion of this provision in Chapter 11 "Deductions from Gross Total Income".

It may also be noted that the provisions of section 194A which require deduction of income-tax at source from interest other than interest on securities, credited or paid, do not apply to such income credited or paid–

(i) by a co-operative society (other than a co-operative bank) to a member thereof or to any other co-operative society;

(ii) in respect of deposits with a primary agricultural credit society or a primary credit society or a co-operative land mortgage bank or a co-operative land development bank;

(iii) in respect of deposits (other than time deposits) with a co-operative society, other than a co-operative society or bank engaged in carrying on the business of banking.

ILLUSTRATION 14

Transfer fees are received by a cooperative housing society from its incoming and outgoing members. Are such transfer fees liable to tax in the hands of the cooperative society?

SOLUTION

The issue under consideration is whether the transfer fees received by a co-operative housing society from its incoming and outgoing members is taxable or exempt on the principle of mutuality.

On this issue, the High Court, in Sind Co-operative Housing Society v. ITO (2009) 317 ITR 47, observed that under the bye-laws of the society, charging of transfer fees had no element of trading or commerciality. Both the incoming and outgoing members have to contribute to the common fund of the assessee. The amount paid was to be exclusively used for the benefit of the members as a class.

The High Court, therefore, held that transfer fees received by a co-operative housing society, whether from outgoing or from incoming members, is not liable to tax on account of the principle of mutuality, since the predominant activity of such co-operative society is maintenance of property of the society and there is no taint of commerciality, trade or business.

Further, section 28(iii), which provides that income derived by a trade, professional or similar association from specific services performed for its members shall be treated as business income, can have no application since the co-operative housing society is not a trade or professional association.

Applying the rationale of the above ruling, transfer fees received by a co-operative housing society from its incoming and outgoing members would not be liable to tax in the hands of the co-operative society.

(8) Assessment of Mutual Concerns

(i) General principles of mutuality –

(a) The first principle of mutuality is that no person can trade with himself or make income out of himself. A mutual association arises where persons forming a group associate together with a common object and contribute monies for achieving that object and divide the surplus amongst themselves in the character. The cardinal requirement in the case of mutual association is that all the contributors to the common fund must be entitled to participate in the surplus and all the participators to the surplus must be contributors to the common fund. In other words, there must be complete identity between the contributors and the participators.

(b) The participation in the surplus need not be immediate but it may assume the shape of a reduction in the future contribution or a division of the surplus on dissolution.

(c) It does not make any difference whether the persons joining together form an association or incorporate a company because the fact of incorporation does not destroy the identity of the contributors and participators.

(d) Where there is mutuality, the fact that some members alone take advantage of the mutual enterprise would not affect the mutual character of the association.

(e) There is nothing in law which prohibits a mutual association from carrying on a trade so long as it is confined to its own members.

(f) It is not necessary that the surplus should be returned to every member of the association pro rata. The identification between the contributors and the participators should be regarded as one whole and not in relation to each individual.

(g) It is not necessary that all the activities of such an association should be mutual in character. There may be activities of a non-mutual character but the exemption from tax will apply to the surplus arising out of the mutual enterprise.

From the above principles we can conclude that one cannot trade with one self and earn taxable profits thereby. Hence if there is a mutual concern, ordinarily there should be no tax on the profits arising out of mutual operations. But the Income-tax Act, 1961 provides for assessment of the income of a mutual concern in the following circumstances:

(1) Where the mutual concern is a mutual insurance society and the income is derived from the carrying on of any business of insurance.

(2) Where the mutual concern is a trade, professional or similar association and the income in question is derived from specific service performed for its members.

(ii) Insurance business: Under section 2(24)(vii) any surplus accruing to life as well as general mutual insurance concerns will fall within the definition of the word "income" and as such would be taxable as income from business. Section 44 expressly provides the profits and gains of any business of insurance including that carried on by a mutual insurance company or a cooperative society shall be computed not according to the provisions of the Act for computation of income under the various heads but according to the method prescribed in the Rules contained in the First Schedule to the Act.

(iii) Trade and professional associations: A trade, professional or similar association may be a mutual concern. Section 28(iii) enacts that "income derived by a trade, professional or similar association from specific services performed for its members" shall be taxable as business profits. Under section 2(24)(v) any sum chargeable under section 28(iii) is deemed to be income. The object of these provisions seems to be to tax as profit the surplus arising from specific services rendered to members by a mutual trade, professional or similar association which otherwise may not be liable to tax in view of the general principles applicable to mutual concerns.

It may carefully be noted that a trade association is not the same thing as a trading association. A trade association means an association of tradesmen or businessmen for the protection or advancement of their common interests. Again clause (iii) of section 28 taxes the profit accruing only on specific services rendered by an association to its members. Any surplus arising to a mutual association in other way e.g. from entrance fees or members' periodic subscriptions would be outside the scope of this clause and would be non-taxable on the general principles stated above.

Since the surplus arising to trade, professional or similar association during the process of advancement of the common interest of the members is not includible in the taxable income it follows that the concerned expenditure will not also be allowed. Section 44A gives a benefit in this regard. It provides that in the case of such trade associations which did not distribute any parts of its income to its members, the amount of any deficit (deficiency) (excess of expenditure incurred for the advancement of the common interest of the members of the association over receipt from the members) would be deductible from the assessable income of the association to the maximum extent of 50% of such income.

This deficiency is to be deducted in the first instance from the assessable income under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession". If the deficiency exceeds such income the balance of deficiency can be set off against assessable income from any other head. The maximum limit of 50%, however, still operates. It can be carried forward to the next year and set-off against income of the relevant assessment year. It should be noted that any adjustment of the deficiency is permissible only after effect has been given as provided in the Act to all losses, allowances etc., for the year in question or brought forward from earlier years.

(iv) Clubs: The consensus of judicial opinion is that any surplus accruing to a members' club from the subscriptions and charges for various conveniences paid by members is not income or profit at all, nor can a social club be deemed to trade as far as its dealings with its own members are concerned. The position would be the same even though the club may be incorporated as a company or registered as a society. But a club is taxable on the profit derived from subscriptions and charges paid by non-members and on the income derived from its capital assets. Where a club is an incorporated company carrying on business it may be taxable on the money received from its members as well as non-members in the course of its business.

However, if the club is not a member's club but is a proprietary club i.e. if the club is owned by an outsider and not by the members themselves, the proprietor would be taxable on the profits earned by running the club. The position would not in any way be affected by the fact that the proprietor is a limited company and some of the shareholders are members of the club.

12.7 OTHER PROVISIONS RELATED TO VARIOUS ENTITIES

(1) Tax on income from life insurance business

Section 115B provides for a concessional rate of tax for taxing the profits and gains derived from the business of life insurance. Under these provisions, in the case of an assessee whose total income includes any profits and gains derived from the business of life insurance computed in accordance with the First Schedule to the Income-tax Act, 1961, the income-tax payable shall be the aggregate of -

(i) the amount of income-tax calculated on the income from life insurance business included in total income at the rate of 12½% and

(ii) the amount of income-tax with which the assessee would have been chargeable had the total income of the assessee been reduced by the amount of profits and gains from the life insurance business.

Income accruing or arising to a company from life insurance business referred to in section 115B would not be subject to MAT. [Section 115JB(5A)]

Taxation of income/ loss of non-life insurance business: Rule 5 of the First Schedule to the Income-tax Act, 1961 provides that the profits and gains of non-life insurance business would be the profit before tax and appropriations as disclosed in the profit and loss account prepared in accordance with the provisions of the Insurance Act, 1938 or the IRDA Act, 1999, subject to following adjustment -

- expenditure or allowances not allowable under sections 30 to 43B,

- any provision for diminution in the value of investment debited to profit and loss account has to be added back
- any gain or loss on realization of investments not credited or debited to profit and loss account, shall be added or deducted, as the case may be
- reserve for unexpired risk as prescribed shall be allowed.

(2) Special Rates of tax in respect of certain specified income or assets

♦ Tax on income from GDRs purchased in foreign currency or capital gains arising from transfer of such GDRs[Section 115ACA]

(i) Eligible assessee [Section 115ACA(1)(a)/(b)] - This section applies to resident individuals who are employees of an Indian company engaged in specified knowledge based industry or service, or employee of its subsidiary engaged in specified knowledge based industry or service.

(ii) Eligible income and special rate of tax [Section 115ACA(1)(a)/(b)] - Where the total income includes the following income namely –

(a) income by way of dividends (other than dividends referred to in section 115-O) in respect of Global Depository Receipts of an Indian company engaged in specified knowledge based industry or service, purchased by an eligible assessee in foreign currency issued in accordance with such employees' stock option scheme as the Central Government may specify in this behalf,

(b) income by way of long-term capital gains arising from the transfer of the aforesaid Global Depository Receipts, then the same will be taxed at the rate of 10%.

(iii) No deduction is allowed [Section 115ACA(2)] - In the case of the aforesaid resident employee, no deduction shall be allowed under any provisions of this Act, where the gross total income consists only of income by way of dividend from Global Depository Receipts.

However, where the gross total income includes dividend income or long term capital gain from such Global Depository Receipts, the deduction under any provisions of the Act shall be allowed only on that portion of gross total income which does not include such income from the Global Depository Receipts.

(iv) No benefit of first and second proviso of section 48 [Section 115ACA(3)] - The first and second provisos to section 48 relating to the computation of capital gains shall not apply in case of transfer of Global Depository Receipts of an Indian company purchased by the resident employee in foreign currency. In other words, no indexation will be available even if the assets are long term capital assets.

(v) Meaning of certain terms:

S. No.	Term	Meaning
1.	Global Depository Receipts	Any instrument in the form of a depository receipt or certificate (by whatever name called) created by the Overseas Depository Bank outside India and issued to investors against the issue of – (i) ordinary shares of issuing company, being a company listed on a recognized stock exchange in India; or (ii) foreign currency convertible bonds of issuing company;
2.	Specified knowledge based industry or service	(i) information technology software; (ii) information technology service; (iii) entertainment service; (iv) pharmaceutical industry; (v) bio-technology industry; and (vi) any other industry or service, as may be notified by the Central Government
3.	Subsidiary	The term includes subsidiary incorporated outside India
4.	Information technology service	Any service which results from the use of any information technology software over a system of information technology products for realising value addition

♦ Concessional Taxation Regime for royalty income in respect of patent developed and registered in India [Section 115BBF]

(i) The Finance Act, 2016 introduced a concessional taxation regime for royalty income from patents for the purpose of promoting indigenous research and development and making India a global hub for research and development.

(ii) The purpose of the concessional taxation regime is for encouraging entities to retain and commercialise existing patents and for developing new innovative patented products.

(iii) Further, this beneficial taxation regime will incentivise entities to locate the high-value jobs associated with the development, manufacture and exploitation of patents in India.

(iv) The nexus approach has been recommended by the OECD under Action Plan 5 in Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS) project. This approach requires attribution and taxation of income arising from exploitation of Intellectual property (IP) in the jurisdiction where substantial research and development (R & D) activities are undertaken instead of the jurisdiction of legal ownership.

(v) Concessional rate of tax - Section 115BBF provides that where the total income of the eligible assessee includes any income by way of royalty in respect of a patent developed and registered in India, then such royalty shall be taxable at the rate of 10% (plus applicable surcharge and cess). For this purpose, developed means atleast 75% of the expenditure should be incurred in India by the eligible assessee for any invention in respect of which patent is granted under the Patents Act, 1970.

(vi) No expenditure is allowed - No deduction for any expenditure or allowance in respect of such royalty income shall be allowed under the Act.

(vii) Option of concessional rate to be exercised before due date under section 139(1) - The eligible assessee has to exercise the option for taxation of income by way of royalty in respect of a patent developed and registered in India in accordance with the provisions of section 115BBF in the prescribed manner, on or before the due date specified under section 139(1) for furnishing the return of income for the relevant previous year.

(viii) Not eligible to opt for concessional taxation under this section for 5 assessment years - Where an eligible assessee opts for taxation of income by way of royalty in respect of a patent developed and registered in India for any previous year in accordance with section 115BBF, and the assessee offers the income for taxation for any of the five assessment years relevant to the previous year succeeding the previous year not in accordance with section 115BBF(1), then the assessee shall not be eligible to claim the benefit of section 115BBF for five assessment years subsequent to the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which such income has not been offered to tax in accordance with section 115BBF(1).

(ix) Non-applicability of MAT provisions - Further, the amount of income by way of royalty in respect of patent chargeable to tax under section 115BBF would not be subject to MAT under section 115JB. The same would be reduced while arriving at the book profit. Consequently, the related expenditure would be added back for arriving at the book profit.

(x) Meaning of certain terms

S. No.	Term	Meaning
1	Eligible assessee	Eligible assessee means: • A person resident in India, • who is the true and first inventor of the invention and • whose name is entered on the patent register as the patentee in accordance with Patents Act, 1970. Eligible assessee includes: every such person, being the true and the first inventor of the invention, where more than one person is registered as patentee under Patents Act, 1970 in respect of that patent.
2	Royalty	"Royalty", in respect of a patent, means consideration (including any lump sum consideration but excluding any consideration which would be the income of the recipient chargeable under the head "Capital gains" or consideration for sale of product manufactured with the use of patented process or the patented article for commercial use) for the— (1) transfer of all or any rights (including the granting of a licence) in respect of a patent; or (2) imparting of any information concerning the working of, or the use of, a patent; or (3) use of any patent; or (4) rendering of any services in connection with the activities referred to in (1) to (3) above.
3	Lumpsum	"Lump sum" includes an advance payment on account of such royalties which is not returnable

(3) Tax on income from transfer of Carbon credits [Section 115BBG]

(i) Carbon credits is an incentive given to an industrial undertaking for reduction of the emission of GHGs (Green House gases).

(ii) A reduction in emissions entitles the entity to a credit in the form of a Certified Emission Reduction (CER) certificate. The CER is tradable and its holder can transfer it to an entity which needs Carbon Credits to overcome an unfavourable position on carbon credits.

(iii) To bring clarity on the issue of taxation of income from transfer of carbon credits and to encourage measures to protect the environment, section 115BBG provides that where the total income of the assessee includes any income from transfer of carbon credit, such income shall be taxed at a concessional rate of 10% (plus applicable surcharge and cess)

(iv) No expenditure is allowed - No expenditure or allowance in respect of such income shall be allowed under the Act.

(4) Tax incentives to International Financial Services Centres [Sections 111A, 112A, 115JB, 115JC & 115-O]

In order to encourage the growth of International Financial Services Centres (IFSCs) into a world class financial services hub, it is necessary to ensure a competitive tax regime to International Financial Services Centre. Accordingly, the following incentives have been provided to units set up in the IFSC under the Income-tax Act, 1961:

(1) There was an addition to Plant & Machinery amounting to ₹ 50 lakhs on 10-06-2019, which was used for more than 180 days during the year. Additional depreciation has not been adjusted in the books.

(2) Normal depreciation calculated as per Income-tax Rules, 1962 is ₹ 80 lakhs.

(3) The company had credited a sub-contractor an amount of ₹ 10 lakhs on 31-03-2019 towards repairing a machinery component. The tax so deducted was remitted on 31-12-2019.

(4) The company has collected ₹ 7 lakhs as GST from its customers and paid the same on the due dates. However, on an appeal made, the High Court directed the Department to refund ₹ 3 lakhs to the company. The company in turn refunded ₹ 2 lakhs to the customers from whom the amount was collected and the balance of ₹ 1 lakh is still lying under the head "Current Liabilities".

Notes:

(1) Employees contribution to PF deposited after the due date mentioned under the PF Act is not allowable as deduction as per section 36(1)(va). The same has also been affirmed by the Gujarat High Court in CIT v. Gujarat State Road Transport Corporation (2014) 366 ITR 170. Hence, in the above solution, employees' contribution to PF has been disallowed while computing business income.

The CBDT has, vide Circular No. 22/2015, dated 17.12.2015, clarified that the employer contribution to provident fund remitted on or before due date of filing of return under section 139(1), is allowable as deduction while computing Business Income. Further, it has also clarified that the circular does not apply to claim of deduction relating to employee's contribution welfare funds which are governed by section 36(1)(va) of the Act.

Alternate View - An alternate view has, however, been expressed in CIT v. Kiccha Sugar Co. Ltd. (2013) 356 ITR 351 (Uttarakhand), CIT v. AIMIL Ltd (2010) 321 ITR 508 (Del) and CIT v. Nipso Polyfabriks Ltd (2013) 350 ITR 327 (HP) that employees contribution to PF, deducted from the salaries of the employees of the assessee, shall be allowed as deduction from the income of the employer-assessee, if the same is deposited by the employer-assessee with the provident fund authority on or before the due date of filing of return for the relevant previous year. If this view is considered, then no disallowance would be attracted in this case, since the employees' contribution has been remitted before the due date of filing of return of income.

(2) ₹ 50 lakhs, being the addition to plant and machinery on 10.6.2019 qualifies for additional depreciation @ 20% under section 32(1)(iia). Since only the normal depreciation as per Income-tax Rules, 1962, has been debited to profit and loss account, additional depreciation of ₹ 10 lakhs (being 20% of ₹ 50 lakhs) has to be deducted while computing business income.

(3) Since the tax deducted during the P.Y.2018-19 was remitted only on 31.12.2019, i.e., after the due date of filing of return for A.Y. 2019-20, ₹ 3,00,000, being 30% of ₹ 10 lakh would have been disallowed while computing the business income of that year. Since the tax deducted has been remitted on 31.12.2019, ₹ 3,00,000 would be allowed as deduction while computing the business income of the A.Y.2020-21.

Question 2

Parik Hospitality Limited is engaged in the business of running hotels of 3-star category. The company's Statement of Profit and Loss for the previous year ended 31st March, 2020 shows a profit of ₹ 152 lakhs after debiting or crediting the following items:

(a) Payment of ₹ 0.25 lakh and ₹ 0.30 lakh in cash on 3rd December, 2019 and 10th December, 2019, respectively, for purchase of crab, lobster and squid to Mr. Raja, a fisherman, and Mr. Khalid, a middleman for these products, respectively.

(b) Contribution towards employees' pension scheme notified by the Central Government under section 80CCD for a sum of ₹ 3 lakhs calculated at 12% of basic salary and Dearness Allowance payable to the employees.

(c) Payment of ₹ 6.50 lakhs towards transportation of various materials procured by one of its hotels to M/s. Bansal Transport, a partnership firm, without deduction of tax at source. The firm opts for presumptive taxation under section 44AE and has furnished a declaration to this effect. It also furnished its Permanent Account Number in the tender document.

(d) Profit of ₹ 12 lakhs on sale of a plot of land to Avimunya Limited, a domestic company, the entire shares of which are held by the assessee company. The plot was acquired by Parik Hospitality Limited on 1st June, 2018.

(e) Contribution of ₹ 2.50 lakhs to Indian Institute of Technology with a specific direction for use of the amount for scientific research programme approved by the prescribed authority.

(f) Expense of ₹ 10 lakhs on foreign travel of two directors for a collaboration agreement with a foreign company for a brewery project to be set up. The negotiation did not succeed and the project was abandoned.

(g) Fees of ₹ 1 lakh paid to independent directors for attending Board meeting without deduction of tax at source under section 194J.

(h) Depreciation charged ₹ 10 lakhs.

(i) ₹ 10 lakhs, being the additional compensation received from the State Government pursuant to an interim order of Court in respect of land acquired by the State Government in the previous year 2015-16.

(j) Dividend received from a foreign company ₹ 5 lakhs.

Additional information:

(i) As a corporate debt restructuring, the bank has converted unpaid interest of ₹ 10 lakhs upto 31st March, 2019 into a new loan account repayable in five equal annual installments. The first installment of ₹ 2 lakhs was paid in March, 2020 by debiting new loan account.

(ii) Depreciation as per Income-tax Act, 1961 ₹ 15 lakhs.

(iii) The company received a bill for ₹ 2 lakhs on 31st March 2020 from a supplier of vegetables for supply made in March, 2020. The bill was omitted to be recorded in the books in March, 2020. The bill was paid in April, 2020 and the necessary entry was made in the books then.

Compute total income of Parik Hospitality Limited for the Assessment Year 2020-21 indicating the reason for treatment of each item. Ignore the provisions relating to minimum alternate tax and the provisions of section 115BAA.

Answer

Computation of Total Income of Parik Hospitality Ltd. for the A.Y.2020-21

Particulars	Amount (₹)
Profit as per Statement of profit and loss		1,52,00,000
Add:* Items debited but to be considered separately or to be disallowed
(a) Payment to middleman for purchase of crab etc. in an amount exceeding ₹ 10,000 [Under section 40A(3), disallowance is attracted in respect of expenditure for which cash payment exceeding ₹ 10,000 is made on a day to a person. Payment of ₹ 25,000 to fishermen for purchase of crab etc. is covered by exception under Rule 6DD. However, payment of ₹ 30,000 to middlemen for purchase of crab etc. is not covered under the exception - CBDT Circular 10/2008 dated 5/12/2008].	30,000
(b) Contribution towards employees' pension scheme in excess of 10% of salary disallowed under section 40A(9) [Contribution to the extent of 10% of salary (basic salary + dearness allowance, if it forms part of pay for retirement benefits) is allowable as deduction under section 36(1)(iva). In this case, it is presumed that dearness allowance forms part of pay for retirement benefits]	50,000

(c) Payment to transport contractor without deduction of tax at source	-
[Since the contractor opts for presumptive taxation under section 44AE and furnished a declaration to this effect, tax is not required to be deducted at source under section 194C in respect of payment to transport contractor].
(f) Expenses on foreign travel of two directors for a collaboration agreement which failed to materialize	10,00,000
[Where expenditure is incurred for a project not related the existing business and the project was abandoned without creating a new asset, the expenses are capital in nature as per Mc Gaw-Ravindra Laboratories (India) Ltd. v. CIT (1994) 210 ITR 1002 (Guj.). Brewery project is not related to the existing business of running three star hotels]
(g) Fees paid to directors without deducting tax at source [30% of ₹ 1 lakh]	30,000
[Disallowance @ 30% would be attracted under section 40(a)(ia) for non-deduction of tax at source from director's remuneration on which tax is deductible under section 194J]		11,10,000
		1,63,10,000
Less:* Items credited but to be considered separately/ Expenditure to be allowed
(d) Profit on sale of plot of land to 100% subsidiary	12,00,000
[Short-term capital gains arise on sale of plot of land held for less than 24 months. However, in this case, since the transfer is to a 100% subsidiary company and the subsidiary company is an Indian company, the same would not constitute a transfer for levy of capital gains tax as per section 47(iv). Since this amount has been credited to the statement of profit and loss, the same has to be deducted for computing business income].
(e) Contribution to IIT for scientific research	1,25,000
[Contribution to IIT for scientific research programme approved by the prescribed authority qualifies for weighted deduction @ 150% under section 35(2AA). Since 100% of contribution has already been debited to the statement of profit and loss, the balance 50% has to be deducted while computing business income][8].

[8] From assessment year 2021-22 it is deductible @ 100%

(h) Depreciation [Depreciation allowable under the Income-tax Act, 1961 is ₹ 15 lakhs whereas the depreciation as per books of account debited to the statement of profit and loss is ₹ 10 lakhs. Hence, the additional amount of ₹ 5 lakhs has to be deducted while computing business income]	5,00,000
(i) Additional compensation received from State Government [Since the additional compensation has been received pursuant to an interim order of the Court, the same would be deemed as income chargeable to tax under the head "Capital Gains" in the year of final order as per section 45(5). Since the compensation has been credited to the statement of profit and loss, the same has to be deducted while computing business income]	10,00,000
(j) Dividend received from foreign company [Dividend received from foreign company is taxable under the head "Income from other sources". Since the said dividend has been credited to the statement of profit and loss, the same has to be deducted while computing business income]	5,00,000
(i) Interest paid during the year [Conversion of unpaid interest into loan shall not be construed as payment of interest for the purpose section 43B. The amount of unpaid interest converted into a new loan will be allowable as deduction only in the year in which such converted loan is actually paid. Since ₹ 2 lakhs has been paid in the P.Y. 2019-20, the same is allowable as deduction]	2,00,000
(iii) Purchases omitted to be recorded in the books [Since the purchase is made in March, 2020 (i.e., P.Y. 2019-20), in respect of which bill of ₹ 2 lakhs received on 31.3.2020 has been omitted to be recorded in the books in that year, it has to be deducted to compute the business income [Kedarnath Jute Manufacturing Company Ltd. v. CIT (1971) 82 ITR 363 (SC)]. It is logical to assume that the company is following mercantile system of accounting.].	2,00,000	37,25,000
Income under the head "Profits and Gains of Business or Profession"		1,25,85,000

Income from Other Sources
Dividend received from foreign company [Dividend received from a foreign company is chargeable to tax under the head "Ïncome from other sources".]		5,00,000

2017-2018	3,50,000	3,15,000	1,20,000	2,10,000

You are required to:

(i) compute the total income of the company for the assessment year 2020-21 giving the reasons for treatment of items and

(ii) examine the applicability of section 115JB of the Income-tax Act, 1961, and compute book profit and the tax credit to be carried forward.

Assume the tax rate applicable to Hyder Ltd for the P.Y. 2019-20 is 30%. Ignore the provisions of section 115BAA.

Computation of Book Profit under section 115JB

Particulars	₹	₹
Profit as per Statement of Profit & Loss		14,25,000
Add:* Net Profit to be increased by the following amounts as per Explanation 1 below section 115JB(2)
Provision for loss of subsidiary	70,000
Provision for income-tax	1,05,000
Depreciation debited to statement of profit and loss	3,60,000	5,35,000

Brought forward business loss or unabsorbed deprecation as per books of account, whichever is less, taken on cumulative basis	6,00,000	8,85,000
Book Profit		10,75,000
15% of book profit		1,61,250
Add: Health and Education cess @ 4%		6,450
		1,67,700

In case of a company, it has been provided that where income-tax payable on total income computed as per the provisions of the Act is less than 15% of book profit, the book profit shall be deemed as the total income and the tax payable on such total income shall be 15% thereof plus health and education cess @ 4%.

Accordingly, in this case, since income-tax payable on total income computed as per the provisions of the Act is less than 15% of book profit, the book profit of ₹ 10,75,000 is deemed to be the total income and income-tax is payable @ 15% thereof plus health and education cess @ 4%. The tax liability, therefore, works out to be ₹ 1,67,700.

Section 115JAA provides that where tax is paid in any assessment year in relation to the deemed income under section 115JB(1), the excess of tax so paid, over and above the tax payable under the other provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961, will be allowed as tax credit in the subsequent years.

The tax credit is, therefore, the difference between the tax paid under section 115JB(1) and the tax payable on the total income computed in accordance with the other provisions of the Act. This tax credit is allowed to be carried forward for 15 assessment years succeeding the assessment year in which the credit became allowable.

Such credit is allowed to be set off against the tax payable on the total income in an assessment year in which the tax is computed in accordance with the provisions of the Act, other than section 115JB, to the extent of excess of such tax payable over the tax payable on book profits in that year.

Particulars	₹
Tax on book profit under section 115JB	1,67,700

Depreciation other than depreciation on revaluation of assets (₹ 100 lacs - ₹ 40 lacs)	60,00,000
Withdrawal from revaluation reserve restricted to the extent of depreciation on account of revaluation of assets (₹ 50 lacs or ₹ 40 lacs, whichever is less)	40,00,000
Unabsorbed depreciation or brought forward business loss, whichever is less, as per the books of account. Unabsorbed depreciation ₹ 10 lakhs and brought forward business loss ₹ 20 lakhs – whichever is less	10,00,000
Dividend income [since the same is exempt under section 10(34)]	10,00,000	1,20,00,000
Book profit		3,80,00,000

Note – For the purpose of section 115JB, book profit means the profit as per the statement of profit and loss prepared in accordance with Schedule III to the Companies Act, 2013, as adjusted by certain additions/deductions as specified. One of the adjustments is to add back income-tax paid or payable, and the provisions therefor. Explanation 2 after sub-section (2) of section 115JB clarifies that income-tax includes, inter alia, dividend distribution tax/ tax on distributed income and interest. Therefore, the entire provision of ₹ 40 lacs for income-tax is added back for computing book profit for levy

Question 6

X, Y and HUF of Z (represented by Z) are partners with equal shares in profits and losses of a firm, M/s Popular Cine Vision, which is engaged in the production of TV serials and telefilms. In the previous year 2018-19, one partner 'A' retired, but his dues have been settled in the previous year 2019-20.

The earlier partnership deed did not authorise payment of remuneration or interest to partners. The partnership deed was revised by the partners on 1st June, 2019 to authorise payment of remuneration of ₹ 1 lac per month to each working partner and simple interest at 15% per annum on partners' capital. X, Y and Z are actively associated with the affairs of the firm.

The Profit & Loss Account of the firm for the year ended 31st March, 2020 shows a net profit of ₹ 10 lacs after debiting/crediting the following:

(a) Interest amounting to ₹ 5 lacs each was paid to partners on the balances standing to their capital accounts from 1stJune, 2019 to 31st March, 2020.

(b) Remuneration to the partners including partner in representative capacity ₹ 30 lacs.

(c) Interest amounting to ₹ 2 lacs paid to Z on loan provided by him in his individual capacity at 16% interest.

(d) Royalty of ₹ 5 lacs paid to partner X, who is a professional script writer, for use of his scripts as per agreement between the firm and X. The same is authorized by partnership deed.

(e) Two separate payments of ₹ 18,000 and ₹ 15,000 made in cash on 1st February, 2020 to Altaf, a hairdresser, against his bill for services rendered in January, 2020 and two payments of ₹ 19,000 and ₹ 10,000 made in cash on 1st February and 2nd February, 2020, respectively, to Priyam, an assistant cameraman, against her bill for services provided in January, 2020.

(f) Amount of ₹ 5 lacs provided in the books on 31st March 2020 as liability for remuneration to Shreya, a film artist and a non-resident. Tax deducted at source under section 195 from the amount so credited was paid on 3rd June, 2020.

(g) Amount of ₹ 6 lacs provided as gratuity for the year on the basis of actuarial valuation. Gratuity actually paid to one retired employee during the year is ₹ 1.50 lacs.

(h) Interest of ₹ 1.20 lacs received on income-tax refund under section 244(1A) in respect of A.Y. 2017-18.

The firm has also provided the following additional information:

The amount due to A, an ex-partner, was ₹ 15 lacs which was settled on 30th September, 2019 by transferring a plot of land purchased one year back having book value of ₹ 10 lacs. The difference of ₹ 5 lacs was credited to partners' capital accounts in their profit-sharing ratio. The value of plot for stamp duty valuation on the date of transfer was ₹ 16 lacs.

Compute the total income of the firm for the assessment year 2020-21 stating the reasons for treatment of each item.

Answer

Computation of Total Income of M/s. Popular Cine Vision for the A.Y.2020-21

Particulars	₹	₹

Income from other sources
Interest on income-tax refund		1,20,000
Gross Total Income		27,02,800
Deductions under Chapter VI-A		Nil
Total Income		27,02,800

Notes:

1. As per section 40(b), simple interest at 12% p.a. to partners relating to the period after the date of partnership deed is allowable. Excess interest @ 3% paid from 1st June, 2019 to 31st March, 2020 is to be disallowed. Excess interest of 3% being ₹ 15,00,000 x 3/15 = ₹ 3,00,000.

2. Even though Z is a partner in a representative capacity, he is still a partner. Therefore, remuneration to Z should also be subject to the limits prescribed in section 40(b). This view finds support from the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Rashik Lal & Co. vs CIT (1998) 229 ITR 458 (SC).

3. As per Explanation 1 to section 40(b), where an individual is a partner in a firm in representative capacity, the provisions of section 40(b) shall not apply to any interest payable by the firm to such individual in his personal capacity. Z represents his HUF in the firm. However, Z gave the loan in his individual capacity. Hence, assuming that the provisions of section 40A(2) do not get attracted in this case, such interest shall be allowed as deduction in full even though the interest rate is more than 12% p.a.

4. It may be noted that the limits specified under section 40(b)(v) are applicable in case of payment of salary, bonus, commission, or remuneration, by whatever name called, to a working partner. From a plain reading of the section, it is clear that any remuneration, by whatever name called, paid to a working partner, is subject to the limits laid down in section 40(b)(v). Therefore, the royalty of ₹ 5 Lacs paid to partner X would also be subject to the limits laid down in section 40(b)(v). Hence, the same has to be added back for computing book profits.

5. Section 40A(3) provides for disallowance of any expenditure in respect of which the actual payment exceeding ₹ 10,000 is made otherwise than by an account payee cheque, account payee bank draft or use of ECS through bank account or through such other electronic mode as may be prescribed in a single day to a person. Hence, the payments of ₹ 18,000 and ₹ 15,000 in cash on 1.2.2020 to Altaf, a hairdresser, shall be disallowed, since the aggregate payment of ₹ 33,000 exceeds the limit of ₹ 10,000.

   The payment of bill of the assistant cameraman of ₹ 19,000 on 1st February is also liable for disallowance under section 40A(3) since the aggregate payment in cash on a single day has exceeded ₹ 10,000.

6. As per section 40(a)(i), any sum payable to a non-resident shall not be allowed as deduction, if tax has not been deducted at source or after deduction, has not been paid on or before the due date specified under section 139(1). Tax deducted from the amount of remuneration credited to payee's account on 31st March 2020 has to be deposited latest by 31st July 2020/ 30th September, 2020 (as the case may be). The firm has paid the tax on 3rd June, 2020 and hence, the remuneration shall be allowed. Since the same is already debited to profit and loss account, no further adjustment is made.

7. As per section 40A(7), any provision made for payment of gratuity to employees on their retirement or on termination of employment for any reason is disallowed. However, gratuity of ₹ 1.50 lacs paid to retired employees is allowable as deduction. Hence, the balance provision of ₹ 4.50 lacs (i.e., ₹ 6 lacs – ₹ 1.50 lacs) is to be disallowed.

8. Interest on income-tax refund is assessable under the head "Income from other sources".

9. Distribution of a capital asset by a firm to its partner on dissolution or otherwise attracts capital gains tax liability as per the provisions of section 45(4) and the fair market value of the asset on the date of transfer is deemed to be the full value of consideration received or accruing as a result of the transfer. The words "or otherwise" includes within its scope, cases of distribution of capital assets on retirement of a partner also. [CIT vs. A. N. Naik Associates (2004) 265 ITR 346 (Bom.)]. Therefore, distribution of a plot of land on retirement of a partner would attract section 45(4).

   ₹ 16 lacs, being the fair market value of the plot on the date of transfer, is deemed to be the full value of consideration. Therefore, the short-term capital gain would be ₹ 6 lacs (i.e., ₹ 16 lacs – ₹ 10 lacs).

Question 7

PQR LLP, a limited liability partnership set up a unit in Special Economic Zone (SEZ) in the financial year 2015-16 for production of washing machines. The unit fulfills all the conditions of section 10AA of the Income-tax Act, 1961. During the financial year 2018-19, it has also set up a warehousing facility in a district of Tamil Nadu for storage of agricultural produce. It fulfills all the conditions of section 35AD. Capital expenditure in respect of warehouse amounted to ₹ 75 lakhs (including cost of land ₹ 10 lakhs). The warehouse became operational with effect from 1st April, 2019 and the expenditure of ₹ 75 lakhs was capitalized in the books on that date.

Relevant details for the financial year 2019-20 are as follows:

Particulars	₹
Profit of unit located in SEZ	40,00,000
Export sales of above unit	80,00,000
Domestic sales of above unit	20,00,000
Profit from operation of warehousing facility (before considering deduction under Section 35AD).	1,05,00,000

Compute income tax (including AMT under Section 115JC) payable by PQR LLP for Assessment Year 2020-21.

Answer

Computation of total income and tax liability of PQR LLP for A.Y.2020-21
(under the regular provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961)

Particulars	₹	₹
Profits and gains of business or profession
Unit in SEZ	40,00,000
Less: Deduction under section 10AA [See Note (1) below]	32,00,000
Business income of SEZ unit chargeable to tax		8,00,000
Profit from operation of warehousing facility	1,05,00,000
Less: Deduction under section 35AD [See Note (2) below]	65,00,000
Business income of warehousing facility chargeable to tax		40,00,000
Total Income		48,00,000
Computation of tax liability (under the normal/ regular provisions)
Tax @ 30% on ₹ 48,00,000		14,40,000
Add: Health and Education cess @ 4%		57,600
Total tax liability		14,97,600

Computation of adjusted total income of PQR LLP for levy of Alternate Minimum Tax

Particulars	₹	₹
Total Income (as computed above)		48,00,000
Add: Deduction under section 10AA		32,00,000
		80,00,000
Add: Deduction under section 35AD	65,00,000
Less: Depreciation under section 32
On building @ 10% of ₹ 65 lakhs[9]	6,50,000	58,50,000
Adjusted Total Income		1,38,50,000
Alternate Minimum Tax @ 18.5%		25,62,250
Add: Surcharge @ 12% (since adjusted total income > ₹ 1 crore)		3,07,470
		28,69,720

[9] Assuming the capital expenditure of ₹ 65 lakhs is incurred entirely on buildings

Add: Health and Education cess @ 4%		1,14,789
		29,84,509
Tax liability under section 115JC (rounded off)		29,84,510

Since the regular income-tax payable is less than the alternate minimum tax payable, the adjusted total income shall be deemed to be the total income and tax is leviable @ 18.5% thereof plus surcharge @ 12% and cess @ 4%. Therefore, the tax liability is ₹ 29,84,510.

AMT Credit to be carried forward under section 115JEE

Tax liability under section 115JC	29,84,510
Less: Tax liability under the regular provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961	14,97,600
	14,86,910

Notes:

(1) Deduction under section 10AA in respect of Unit in SEZ =

$$\text{Profit of the Unit in Sez} \times \frac{\text{Export turnover of the Unit in SEZ}}{\text{Total turnover of the Unit in SEZ}}$$

$$₹\ 40,00,000 \times \frac{₹\ 80,00,000}{₹\ 1,00,00,000} = ₹\ 32,00,000$$

(2) Deduction @ 100% of the capital expenditure is available under section 35AD for A.Y.2020-21 in respect of specified business of setting up and operating a warehousing facility for storage of agricultural produce which commences operation on or after 01.04.2012.

Further, the expenditure incurred, wholly and exclusively, for the purposes of such specified business, shall be allowed as deduction during the previous year in which he commences operations of his specified business if the expenditure is incurred prior to the commencement of its operations and the amount is capitalized in the books of account of the assessee on the date of commencement of its operations.

Deduction under section 35AD would, however, not be available on expenditure incurred on acquisition of land.

In this case, since the capital expenditure of ₹ 65 lakhs (i.e., ₹ 75 lakhs – ₹ 10 lakhs, being expenditure on acquisition of land) has been incurred in the F.Y.2018-19 and capitalized in the books of account on 1.4.2019, being the date when the warehouse became operational, ₹ 65,00,000, being 100% of ₹ 65 lakhs would qualify for deduction under section 35AD.

Question 8

Victory Polyfibres, a partnership firm, has earned a gross total income of ₹ 300 lacs for the year ended 31-3-2020. The firm has not undertaken any international transaction or specified domestic transaction during the said year.

The above includes a profit of ₹ 220 lacs from an undertaking having a turnover of ₹ 80 crores. This is the fifth year and deduction under section 80-IA of the Income-tax Act, 1961 is available to the extent of ₹ 200 lacs.

There are some grey areas in the taxation workings and hence, the assessee is contemplating to file the return of income on 7-12-2020, after seeking clarifications from tax experts.

Advise the assessee-firm by working out the total income and tax payable, where the return is filed on 30-09-2020 or when the same is filed on 7-12-2020.

What is the practical solution as regards obtaining clarifications, which might or might not have an impact on the total income? You may ignore interest under section 234A, 234B, 234C and 234F while making the computation in support of your advice.

Answer

As per section 80AC, while computing the total income of an assessee of a previous year (P.Y.2019-20, in this case) relevant to any assessment year (A.Y.2020-21, in this case), any deduction is admissible, inter alia, under section 80-IA, such deduction shall not be allowed unless it furnishes a return of income for such assessment year on or before the 'due date' specified in section 139(1).

Since the turnover of the partnership firm has exceeded ₹ 200 lacs in the previous year 2019-20, it would be subject to audit under section 44AB, in which case the 'due date' of filing its return of income for A.Y.2020-21 would be 30th September, 2020 as per section 139(1).

Computation of total income and tax liability of M/s. Victory Polyfibres for A.Y.2020-21

I. Where the firm files its return of income on 30th September 2020:

Particulars	₹ in lacs
Gross Total Income	300.00
Less: Deduction under section 80-IA	200.00
Total Income	100.00
Tax liability @ 30%	30.00
Add: Health and Education cess @ 4%	1.20
Regular income-tax payable	31.20

Computation of Alternate Minimum Tax payable [Section 115JC]

Particulars	₹ in lacs
Total Income	100.00
Add: Deduction under section 80-IA	200.00
Adjusted Total Income	300.00
Alternate Minimum Tax (AMT) @ 18.5% on ₹ 300 lacs	55.50

Add: Surcharge @ 12% (Since adjusted total income >₹ 1 crore)	6.66
	62.16
Add: Health and Education cess @ 4%	2.49
Total tax payable (AMT)	64.65

Since the regular income-tax payable by the firm is less than the alternate minimum tax payable, the adjusted total income shall be deemed to be the total income of the firm for P.Y.2019-20 and it shall be liable to pay income-tax on such total income @ 18.5% [Section 115JC(1)]. Therefore, the tax payable for the A.Y.2020-21 would be ₹ 64.65 lacs.

Tax credit for Alternate Minimum Tax [Section 115JD]

	₹ in lacs
Total tax payable for A.Y.2020-21 (Alternate Minimum Tax)	64.65
Less: Regular income-tax payable	31.20
To be carried forward for set-off against regular income-tax payable (upto a maximum of fifteen assessment years).	33.45

II. Where the firm files its return of income on 7th December 2020:

Where the firm files its return on 7-12-2020, it would be a belated return under section 139(4). Consequently, as per section 80AC, deduction under section 80-IA would not be available. In such circumstances, the gross total income of ₹ 300 lacs would be the total income of the firm.

Particulars	₹ in lacs
Income-tax @ 30% of ₹ 300 lacs	90.000
Add: Surcharge @ 12% (since total income exceeds ₹ 100 lacs)	10.800
Income-tax (plus surcharge)	100.800
Add: Health and Education cess @ 4%	4.032
Total tax liability	104.832

Practical solution regarding obtaining clarifications

The practical solution regarding obtaining clarifications would be to file the return of income under section 139(1) on or before the 'due date', i.e., 30.9.2020, and claim deduction under section 80-IA. In such a case, the firm can claim deduction of ₹ 200 lacs under section 80-IA. Thereafter, consequent to the clarifications obtained, if any change is required, it can file a revised return under section 139(5) within 31.3.2021 (i.e., within the end of A.Y.2020-21) which would replace the original return filed under section 139(1). A revised return filed under section 139(5) would replace the original return filed under section 139(1).

If the firm files the return of income under section 139(1) on or before 30.9.2020, its tax liability would stand reduced to ₹ 64.65 lacs, as against ₹ 104.832 lacs to be paid if return is furnished after due date. Further, it would also be eligible for tax credit for alternate minimum tax under section 115JD to the extent of ₹ 33.45 lacs. Therefore, the firm is advised to file its return of income on or before 30.9.2020.

Question 9

Prakash, a member in two AOPs, namely, "AOP & Co." and "Prakash & Akash", provides the following details of his income for the year ended 31.3.2020:

(a) "AOP & Co.", assessed at normal rates of tax, had credited in his account, amount of ₹ 2,10,000 as interest on capital, ₹ 4,96,000 as salary and ₹ 20,000 as share of profit.

(b) A house property located at Jaipur was purchased on 1.7.2010 with the borrowed capital in "Prakash & Akash" jointly shared equally and occupied by both of them for self-residential purposes. Total interest paid for the year 2019-20 on the borrowed capital was ₹ 4,10,000.

Compute the income and the tax liability thereon for the A.Y. 2020-21 and support your answer with brief reasons and the provisions of the Act.

Answer

Mr. Prakash is a member in two AOPs, namely, AOP & Co. and Prakash & Akash. Though Prakash & Akash is an AOPs, the income from the house property will not be assessed as income of the AOPs, but will be included in the hands of the individual members as per section 26, since the share of each member is definite and ascertainable. Hence, Prakash's share of income from house property would be assessed in his individual hands.

Since AOP & Co., has been taxed at normal rates of tax, Mr. Prakash's share income from the AOPs (i.e. salary, interest on capital and his share of profit) would be included in his total income. Mr. Prakash, however, would be entitled to a relief under section 86 read with section 110 in respect of this income which has been included in his total income but on which tax has already been paid by the AOPs. As per section 110, the relief shall be allowed at the average rate of tax calculated on the total income inclusive of such income.

Hence, the tax liability in the hands of Mr. Prakash would be as under:-

Question 10

T and Q are individuals, who constitute an Association of Persons, sharing profit and losses in the ratio of 2:1. For the accounting year ended 31st March, 2020, the Profit and Loss account of the business was as under:

		Figures are in ₹ '000s

Required to:

(i) Compute the total income of the AOPs for the assessment year 2020-21; and

(ii) Discuss the tax implication for that year in the hands of the individual members.

Answer

(i) Computation of total income of the AOP for A.Y.2020-21

Particulars	₹
Profit & gains of business (See Working Note below)	3,12,300
Long term capital gain	6,40,000
Income from other sources [Dividend is exempt under section 10(34)]	-
Total income	9,52,300

Working Note - Computation of profits and gains of business

Particulars	₹	₹
Net profit as per profit & loss account		5,24,300
Add: Inadmissible payments
Interest to members T & Q (₹ 48,300 + ₹ 35,700)	84,000
Advertising [Disallowance under section 40A(3) (100% of ₹ 30,000 being a cash payment)]	30,000
Remuneration to members T & Q (₹ 1,30,000 + ₹ 1,70,000)	3,00,000
Sales tax penalty (See Note 3 below)	39,000	4,53,000
		9,77,300
Less: Income not taxable under this head
Dividend from Indian companies	25,000
Long term capital gain	6,40,000	6,65,000
Profits and gains of business		3,12,300

Notes:

1. Since the employer's contribution to PF has been paid during the previous year itself, it is allowable as deduction.

2. Penalty imposed for delay in filing sales tax return is not deductible since it is on account of infraction of the law requiring filing of the return within the specified period. – CIT v. Ratanchand Bholanath (S.S) (1986) 160 ITR 500 (M.P.)

(ii) Tax implication in the hands of members T & Q for the A.Y.2020-21

Members of the AOPs have to pay tax on their total income taking into account savings/ investments etc.

Since one of the members has individual income more than the basic exemption limit, the AOPs will be assessed at the maximum marginal rate.

Since the AOPs is taxed at maximum marginal rate, the share income of members is not taxable in their hands individually.

Question 11

The assessee, Pandey Co-operative Housing Society, is a registered co-operative housing society, formed with the objective of maintaining the property owned by it, to effect repairs and maintenance of the common property of the members, and to confer to the members, the usual rights and privileges. For the assessment year 2020-21, the assessee has received ₹ 3 lacs as transfer fees from the transferor members and like amount from the transferees, who at the time of transfer, were not members of the society. Discuss the exigibility to tax the aforesaid receipts in the hands of the assessee.

Answer

Transfer fees received by a co-operative housing society, whether from outgoing or from incoming members, is not liable to tax on the ground of principle of mutuality where the predominant activity of such co-operative society is maintenance of property of the society. It was so held by the Bombay High Court in Sind Co-op Housing Society v. ITO (2009) 317 ITR 47.

Further, section 28(iii), which provides that income derived by a trade, professional or similar association from specific services performed for its members shall be treated as business income, can have no application since the co-operative housing society is not a trade or professional association.

Therefore, ₹ 3 lacs received as transfer fees by Pandey Co-operative Housing Society from its transferor members and its transferees, is not chargeable to tax.

SIGNIFICANT SELECT CASES

1 Can dividend distribution tax under Section 115-O of Income-tax Act, 1961 be levied in respect of the dividend declared out of agricultural income?

Union of India v. Tata Tea and Others [2017] 398 ITR 260 (SC)

Facts of the case: The petitioner is a tea company engaged in cultivating and processing tea in its factory for marketing. The cultivation of tea is an agricultural process while the processing of tea in the factory is an industrial process. The petitioners contend that when the company distributes dividend, it is taxed under Section 115-O. The tax on dividend declared by it in this case is nothing but a tax on agricultural income. The legislative competence for taxing agricultural income lies with the State Government and not the Central Government.

Issue: Can dividend distribution tax be levied on dividend income of a tea company under section 115-O?

Supreme Court's Observations: As per entry 82 of List I the Union Parliament has the competence to tax "income other than agricultural income." Section 115-O pertains to additional tax at the stage of distribution of dividend by domestic company which is covered by entry 82 in List I. When dividend is declared to be distributed and paid to a company's shareholders it is not impressed with character of the source of its income. The Court relied on Mrs. Bacha F Guzdar v. CIT AIR 1955 SC 74 which looked into the nature of the dividend income in the hands of the shareholders. Dividend is derived from the investment made in the company's shares and the foundation rests on the contractual relations between the company and the shareholder.

Dividend is not 'revenue derived from land' and hence cannot be termed as agricultural income in the hands of a shareholder. Hence, despite the petitioner's company being involved in agricultural activities, in the shareholder's hands, the income is only dividend and not agricultural income.

The Calcutta High Court had upheld the vires of section 115-O but put a qualification that additional tax levied under section 115-O shall be only to the extent of 40% which is the taxable income of the tea company. The Supreme Court overturned this cap placed by the Calcutta High Court. Section 115-O is within the competence of the Parliament and hence, no limits can be placed on the same.

Supreme Court's Decision: When dividend is declared to be distributed and paid to a company's shareholders, it is not impressed with character of the source of its income. Section 115-O is within the competence of the Union Parliament and therefore dividend distribution tax can be levied in respect of the entire dividend declared and distributed by a tea company.

2. Whether certain receipts by co-operative societies from its members (non-occupancy charges, transfer charges, common amenity fund charges) are exempt based on the doctrine of mutuality?

Income-tax Officer v. Venkatesh Premises Co-operative Society Ltd. [2018] 402 ITR 670 (SC)

Supreme Court's observations: The doctrine of mutuality is based on the common law principle that a person cannot make a profit from himself. The income of a co-operative society from business is taxable under section 2(24)(vii) and will stand excluded based on the principle of mutuality. The essence of the principle of mutuality lies in the commonality of the contributors and the participants who are also the beneficiaries. The contributors to the common fund must be entitled to participate in the surplus and the participators in the surplus are contributors to the common fund. Any surplus in the common fund shall, therefore, not constitute income but will only be an increase in the common fund meant to meet sudden eventualities.

The Supreme Court made the following observations:

- If for convenience, part of the transfer charges were paid by the transferee, they would not partake of the nature of profit. The amount is appropriated only after the transferee was inducted as a member. In the event of non-admission, the amount was returned. The moment the transferee was inducted as a member the principles of mutuality would apply.
- Non-occupancy charges were levied by the society and were payable by a member who did not himself occupy the premises but let them out to a third person. The charges were utilised only for common benefit of facilities and amenities to the members.
- Contribution to the common amenity fund taken from a member disposing of property was utilized for meeting heavy repairs to ensure hazard-free maintenance of the properties of the society which ultimately benefitted the members. Membership forming a class, the identity of the individual member not being relevant, induction into membership automatically attracted the doctrine of mutuality.
- If a society had surplus floor space index available, it was entitled to utilise it by making fresh construction in accordance with law. Naturally, such additional construction would entail extra maintenance charges. If the society first inducted new members who were required to contribute to the common fund for availing of the common facilities, and then granted only occupancy rights to them by draw of lots, the ownership remaining with the society, the receipts could not be bifurcated into two segments of receipt and costs, so as to hold the former to be outside the purview of mutuality classifying it as income of the society with commerciality.

Supreme Court's Decision: The doctrine of mutuality, is based on the common law principle that a person cannot make a profit from himself. Accordingly, the transfer charges, non-occupancy charges common amenity fund charges and other charges are exempt owing to application of the doctrine of mutuality.

3. Where land inherited by three brothers is compulsorily acquired by the State Government, whether the resultant capital gain would be assessed in the status of "Association of Persons" (AOP) or in their individual status?

CIT v. Govindbhai Mamaiya (2014) 367 ITR 498 (SC)

Facts of the case: Three brothers inherited a property consequent to demise of their father. A part of this bequeathed land was acquired by the State Government and compensation was paid for it. On appeal, compensation was enhanced and the enhanced compensation was paid with interest.

Issue: The issue under consideration is regarding the status in which capital gain arising on transfer of property would be assessed. The assessees' offered income in their status as "individual" but the Revenue sought to tax the same in their status as "Association of Persons" (AOP).

High Court's Observations: The High Court found that the parties inherited the property and there was no material on record to suggest consensus ad idem between the brothers for formation of AOP. It referred to CWT v. Chander Sen (1986) 161 ITR 370 (SC) to hold that as per section 4 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, income from the asset inherited by a son from his father has to be assessed as income of the son individually. Further, as per section 8 of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, the property of the father devolves on his son in his individual capacity and not as karta of HUF. Thus, it was held that the income is chargeable to tax in their individual status and not as AOP.

Supreme Court's Observations: The Supreme Court referred to its earlier decision in the case of Meera & Co v. CIT (1997) 224 ITR 635 in which the earlier precedent in the case of CIT v. Indira Balakrishna (1960) 39 ITR 546 (SC) was followed. The Apex Court noted that "Association of Persons" means an association in which two or more persons join in a common purpose or common action.

The Supreme Court also referred to its judgment in G. Murugesan & Bros. v. CIT (1973) 4 SCC 211. In that case, it was held that an association of persons could be formed only when two or more persons voluntarily combined together for certain purposes.

In this case, the property in question came to the assessees' possession through inheritance i.e., by operation of law. It is not a case where any 'association of persons" was formed by volition of the parties. Further, even the income earned in the form of interest is not because of any business venture of the three assessees, but is the result of the act of the Government in compulsorily acquiring the said land. Thus, the basic test to be satisfied for making an assessment in the status of AOP is absent in this case.

Apex Court's Decision: The Apex Court, accordingly, held that the income from asset inherited by the legal heirs is taxable in their individual hands and not in the status of AOP.

4. Would the ancestral property received by the assessee after the death of his father, be considered as HUF property or as his individual property, where the assessee's father had received such property as his share when he went out of the joint family under a release deed?

Commissioner of Income-tax v. D. L. Nandagopala Reddy (Individual) (2014) 360 ITR 0377 (Kar)

Facts of the case: In the present case, Laxmaiah Reddy had no sons and therefore, he adopted the assessee vide a registered adoption deed dated June 25, 1956. The property, which is the subject matter of the suit, originally belonged to Venkateshwaraiah (assessee's grandfather). The assessee's father (Laxmaiah Reddy), took his share in the joint family property and executed a release deed in favour of the remaining members of the joint family vide a registered release deed dated November 23, 1927 and bequeathed all his properties in favour of the assessee. The assessee, in turn, distributed the property in favour of his wife and children. This was done by oral partition which was evidenced by a memorandum of partition dated August 6, 1998.

Thereafter, a transaction was entered into by the assessee with the builder for development of the property. The Assessing Officer treated the consideration received from the builder by the assessee and his wife as their individual income and assessed the same to tax in their individual hands.

Assessing Officer's contention: The Revenue contended that when assessee's father got the property under a release deed, it ceased to be the joint family property. Since that property was bequeathed in favour of the assessee, he became its owner after the death of his father. Therefore, it was a separate property and, consequently, the income derived therefrom is assessed to tax in the hands of the assessee as separate property.

High Court's Observations: The High Court observed that the property originally belonged to Hindu Undivided Family (HUF). One of the members of the family (i.e., the assessee's father) went out of the joint family under a release deed and the remaining members continued to be the members of joint family. After the death of assessee's father and mother, the assessee, being the adopted son, became the sole surviving co-parcener. When such property came to the hands of the assessee it was not his individual property; it was the property of his Hindu Undivided Family.

High Court's Decision: The High Court held that that when the property came to the hands of the assessee, it was not his self-acquired property; it was property belonging to his HUF. The assessee had given a portion of the property to his wife without a registered document, which is possible only if the property is a HUF property. If such property is treated as a self-acquired property, then assessee would have been able to give the portion of the property to his wife only by registered document.

5. Under which head of income is rental income from plinths inherited by individual co-owners from their ancestors taxable - "Income from house property" or "Income from other sources"? Further, would such income be assessable in the hands of the individual co-owners or in the hands of the Association of Persons?

Sudhir Nagpal v. Income-tax Officer (2012) 349 ITR 0636 (P & H)

First Issue: The first issue relates to the head of income under which rental income from plinths, inherited by individual co-owners from their ancestors, is taxable – whether "Income from house property" or "Income from other sources"?

High Court's Observations: As regards the head of income under which rental income from plinths is assessable, the High Court referred to the Division Bench judgment in Gowardhan Das and Sons v. CIT (2007) 288 ITR 481, wherein it was observed that it is the income from property consisting of any building or land appurtenant thereto which is assessed under section 22 and not the income from renting out of open land or some kutcha plinth only.

High Court's Decision: Therefore, the Court held that the income from letting out the plinths is assessable under section 56 as "Income from other sources" and not under the head "Income from house property".

Second Issue: The second issue relates to whether such rental income is assessable in the hands of the individual co-owners or in the hands of the Association of Persons. To appreciate this issue, it is necessary to understand the complete facts of the case.

Facts of the case: In the present case, five persons of the Nagpal family were co-owners of the agricultural land "Nagpal farms" inherited from their forefathers. The co-owners executed a power of attorney in favour of Mr. Sudhir Nagpal, one of the co-owners, appointing him to construct plinths on the agricultural land and to further lease out such open plinths to any party on their behalf. The co-owners had, therefore, not purchased the land for the said purpose but had inherited the land. They were owners not in their joint capacity but in their individual capacity with a definite/defined proportion of share. The co-owners filed their individual returns of income disclosing their rental income and also paid tax on such income.

The Assessing Officer, however, issued notice under section 148 to all the co-owners of the property in the name of Mr. Sudhir Nagpal on the ground that there is an association of persons formed by the co-owners and therefore, income had escaped assessment in the hands of association of persons.

The assessee contended that since no land was purchased, therefore, the status of the co-owners cannot be treated as association of persons.

The Assessing Officer did not agree with the contention of the assessee and assessed the entire rental income from the plinths as income from other sources in the hands of the association of persons and determined the tax payable by applying section 167B(2). The Commissioner (Appeals) and the Tribunal confirmed the action of the Assessing Officer.

High Court's Observations: On appeal, the High Court observed that in order to assess individuals as "association of persons", the individual co-owners should have joined their resources and thereafter, acquired property in the name of association of persons and the property should have been commonly managed. It is only in such a case that income could be assessed in the hands of "association of persons". Mere accruing of income jointly to more persons than one would not constitute them an association of persons in respect of such income. In other words, unless the associates have done some acts or performed some operations together, which have helped to produce the income in question, they cannot be termed as an association of persons. Unless the members combine or join in a common purpose, it cannot be held that they have formed themselves into an association of persons.

High Court's Decision: In this case, the co-owners had inherited the property from their ancestors and there was nothing to show that they had acted as an association of persons. Thus, the High Court held that the rental income from the plinths has to be assessed in the status of individual and not association of persons and consequently, section 167B would not be attracted in this case.

6. Would the interest earned on surplus funds of a club deposited with institutional members satisfy the principle of mutuality to escape taxability?

Madras Gymkhana Club v. DCIT (2010) 328 ITR 348 (Mad.)

Facts of the case: The assessee-club providing facilities like gym, library, etc, to its members earned interest from fixed deposits which it had made by investment of its surplus funds with its corporate members.

High Court's Decision: The High Court held that interest earned from investment of surplus funds in the form of fixed deposits with institutional members does not satisfy the principle of mutuality and hence cannot be claimed as exempt on this ground. The interest earned is, therefore, taxable.

7. Can transfer fees received by a co-operative housing society from its incoming and outgoing members be exempt on the ground of principle of mutuality?

Sind Co-operative Housing Society v. ITO (2009) 317 ITR 47 (Bom)

High Court's Observations: On this issue, the High Court observed that under the bye-laws of the society, charging of transfer fees had no element of trading or commerciality.

Both the incoming and outgoing members have to contribute to the common fund of the assessee. The amount paid was to be exclusively used for the benefit of the members as a class.

High Court's Decision: The High Court, therefore, held that transfer fees received by a co-operative housing society, whether from outgoing or from incoming members, is not liable to tax on the ground of principle of mutuality since the predominant activity of such co-operative society is maintenance of property of the society and there is no taint of commerciality, trade or business.

Further, section 28(iii), which provides that income derived by a trade, professional or similar association from specific services performed for its members shall be treated as business income, can have no application since the co-operative housing society is not a trade or professional association.

8. In a case where the partnership deed does not specify the remuneration payable to each individual working partner but lays down the manner of fixing the remuneration, would the assessee-firm be entitled to deduction in respect of remuneration paid to partners?

CIT v. Anil Hardware Store (2010) 323 ITR 368 (HP)

Facts of the case: The partnership deed of the assessee-firm provided that in case the book profits of the firm are up to ₹ 75,000, then the partners would be entitled to remuneration up to ₹ 50,000 or 90% of the book profits, whichever is more. In respect of the next ₹ 75,000, it is 60% and for the balance book profits, it is 40%. Thereafter, it is further clarified that the book profits shall be computed as defined in section 40(b) of the Income-tax Act, 1961, or any other provision of law as may be applicable for the assessment of the partnership firm. It has also been clarified that in case there is any loss in a particular year, the partners shall not be entitled to any remuneration. Clause 7 of the partnership deed laid down that the remuneration payable to the partners should be credited to the respective accounts at the time of closing the accounting year and clause 5 stated that the partners shall be entitled to equal remuneration.

High Court's Decision: The High Court held that the manner of fixing the remuneration of the partners has been specified in the partnership deed. In a given year, the partners may decide to invest certain amounts of the profits into other ventures and receive less remuneration than that which is permissible under the partnership deed, but there is nothing which debars them from claiming the maximum amount of remuneration payable in terms of the partnership deed. The method of remuneration having been laid down, the assessee-firm is entitled to deduct the remuneration paid to the partners under section 40(b)(v).

Notes:

(1) Payment of remuneration to working partners is allowed as deduction if it is authorized by the partnership deed and is subject to the overall ceiling limits specified in section 40(b)(v). The limits for partners' remuneration under section 40(b)(v) has revised upwards and the differential limits for partners' remuneration paid by professional firms and non-professional firms have been removed. On the first ₹ 3 lakh of book profit or in case of loss, the limit would be the higher of ₹ 1,50,000 or 90% of book profit and on the balance of book profit, the limit would be 60%.

(2) The CBDT had, vide Circular No. 739 dated 25-3-1996, clarified that no deduction under section 40(b)(v) will be admissible unless the partnership deed either specifies the amount of remuneration payable to each individual working partner or lays down the manner of quantifying such remuneration.

In this case, since the partnership deed lays down the manner of quantifying such remuneration, the same would be allowed as deduction subject to the limits specified in section 40(b)(v).

9. Can interest under sections 234B and 234C be levied where a company is assessed on the basis of book profits under section 115JB?

Joint CIT v. Rolta India Ltd. (2011) 330 ITR 470 (SC)

Supreme Court's Observations: On this issue, the Supreme Court observed that there is a specific provision in section 115JB(5) providing that all other provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 shall apply to every assessee, being a company, mentioned in that section. Section 115JB is a self-contained code pertaining to MAT, and by virtue of sub-section (5) thereof, the liability for payment of advance tax would be attracted. Therefore, if a company defaults in payment of advance tax in respect of tax payable under section 115JB, it would be liable to pay interest under sections 234B and 234C.

Supreme Court's Decision: The Supreme Court, therefore, held that interest under sections 234B and 234C shall be payable on failure of the company to pay advance tax in respect of tax payable under section 115JB.

Note – According to section 207, tax shall be payable in advance during any financial year, in accordance with the provisions of sections 208 to 219 (both inclusive), in respect of the total income of the assessee which would be chargeable to tax for the assessment year immediately following that financial year. Under section 115JB(1), where the tax payable on total income is less than 15% of "book profit" of a company, the "book profit" would be deemed to be the total income and tax would be payable at the rate of 15%. Since in such cases, the book profit is deemed to be the total income, therefore, as per the provisions of section 207, tax shall be payable in advance in respect of such book profit (which is deemed to be the total income) also.

10. Can long-term capital gain exempted by virtue of section 54EC be included in the book profit computed under section 115JB?

N. J. Jose and Co. (P.) Ltd. v. ACIT (2010) 321 ITR 132 (Ker.)

Facts of the case: The assessee claimed exemption under section 54E on the income from long-term capital gains by depositing amounts in specified assets in terms of the said provision. In the computation of book profit under section 115J, the assessee claimed exclusion of capital gains because of exemption available on it by virtue of section 54E. The Assessing Officer reckoned the book profits including long-term capital gains for the purpose of assessment under section 115J.

High Court's Decision: The High Court held that once the Assessing Officer found that total income as computed under the provisions of the Act was less than 30 per cent of the book profit, he had to make the assessment under section 115J which does not provide for any deduction in terms of section 54E. As long as long-term capital gains are part of the profits included in the profit and loss account prepared in accordance with the provisions of Parts II and III of Schedule VI to the Companies Act, 1956 (now, Statement of Profit and Loss prepared in accordance with Part II of Schedule III to the Companies Act, 2013), capital gains cannot be excluded unless provided under the Explanation to section 115J(1A).

Note – It may be noted that the rationale of this decision would apply even where minimum alternate tax (MAT) is attracted under section 115JB, on account of tax on total income being less than 15% of book profits. If an assessee has claimed exemption under section 54EC by investing in bonds of NHAI/ RECL, within the prescribed time, the long-term capital gains so exempt would be taken into account for computing book profits under section 115JB for levy of minimum alternate tax (MAT), since Explanation 1 to section 115JB does not provide for such deduction.*

11. Can income derived by an Indian shipping company from slot charter arrangement in other ships be computed applying the special provisions under Chapter XII-G of the Income-tax Act, 1961, relating to Tonnage Tax Scheme, inspite of non-fulfillment of the condition of holding a valid certificate in respect of such ships indicating its net tonnage in force?

CIT v. Trans Asian Shipping Services (P) Ltd (2016) 385 ITR 637 (SC)

Facts of the case: The assessee-company owned a qualifying ship and fulfilled all the requisite conditions for availing tonnage tax scheme contained in Chapter XII-G of the Income-tax Act, 1961. Thus, the income generated from the qualifying ship is exigible to tax as per the said scheme, since it has exercised the requisite option in this behalf and submitted valid certificate in respect of such qualifying ship. In addition to the income from qualifying ship, it has also earned income from “slot charter” arrangement in other ships in the previous years relevant to the assessment years 2005-06 and 2008-09. In the return of income filed for the relevant previous years, the assessee company also included the income earned from such slot charter for the purpose of computation of income as per the tonnage tax scheme.

Revenue’s contentions vis-à-vis Assessee’s contention: The Assessing Officer opined that the income earned from slot charter arrangement did not qualify for the purpose of computation of tonnage income under the tonnage tax scheme, since the said income was not generated from the ship owned by it nor was such income earned from the entire ship chartered by it. He was also of the opinion that in order to avail the benefit of Tonnage Tax Scheme, the assessee had to show that it operated a qualifying ship and it is incumbent to produce a valid certificate in respect of such ship indicating its net tonnage as provided in section 115VX(1)(b). Thus, production of valid certificate is an essential requirement contained in section 115VD which cannot be done away with because of the formula that is contained in section 115VG for the computation of tonnage income. The Revenue further contended that computation of tonnage income under the tonnage tax scheme has to be as per the provisions of section 115VG(4) which defines "Tonnage" to mean tonnage of a ship indicated in the certificate referred to in section 115VX.

The assessee company, however, contended that the requirement of producing valid certificate would apply in respect of own ships and ships hired fully. It also contended that as per method of computation provided under section 115VG, the income for the full ship is to be computed on the basis of “net tonnage” shown in the valid certificate, whereas deemed tonnage in respect of slot charter arrangement in other ships has to be computed as per Rule 11Q(1) of the Income-tax Rules, 1962.

However, the Assessing Officer rejected the contention of the assessee and held that the income from slot charter arrangement could not be included for computation of tonnage income under the tonnage tax scheme.

The order of the Assessing Officer denying the benefit of applying the tonnage tax scheme under Chapter XII-G for slot charter arrangement was upheld by CIT (Appeals) and by the Appellate Tribunal.

High Court’s Decision: The High Court, however, held that the income earned under slot charter arrangement comes under definition of “deemed tonnage tax” as per Explanation to section 115VG(4), therefore, the exclusion of such income while assessing the same under the special provisions was inappropriate. Accordingly, the High Court held that the assessee is eligible for tonnage tax scheme in respect of income from slot charter arrangement also.

Supreme Court’s Observations: The Apex Court noted that a company would regarded as operating a ship “if it operates any ship whether owned or chartered by it in an arrangement such as slot charter, space charter or joint charter”. Thus, even an arrangement such as slot charter would be regarded as operating a ship.

A perusal of the provisions of section 115VD, containing the conditions for a ship to qualify as a "qualifying ship" would indicate that all the conditions laid down therein are fulfilled by the assessee, except the condition stipulated in clause (c) which imposes an obligation on the assessee to produce a valid certificate in respect of such a ship indicating its net tonnage in force.

The Supreme Court, noted that provisions of section 115VG(4) are in two parts in so far as computation of tonnage is concerned. When it comes to tonnage of a ship, a valid certificate is to be produced. The second part of this provision talks about "deemed tonnage" in contradistinction to the "actual tonnage" mentioned in the certificate. Explanation to sub-section 115VG(4), inter alia, mentions that in so far as slot charter arrangements are concerned, purchase of such slot charter shall be treated as deemed tonnage.

The requirement of producing a certificate would not apply when entire ship is not chartered and the arrangement pertains only to purchase of slots, slot charter and an arrangement of sharing of break-bulk vessel. This position becomes abundantly clear by reading Rule 11Q(1) which specifies the basis/formula of computing deemed tonnage in respect of arrangement of slot charter.

Supreme Court's Decision: The Apex Court, accordingly, held that the requirement of producing a certificate would not apply when entire ship is not chartered and the arrangement pertains only to purchase of slots, slot charter etc. It held that the contention of the assessee is valid and the legal fiction created by section 115VG(4) is to be given proper meaning.

Accordingly, income from slot charter arrangement in other ships can be computed applying the special provisions under Chapter XII-G.

Note: As per section 115VG(4), for the purposes of Chapter XII-G, the tonnage shall mean the tonnage of a ship indicated in the certificate referred to in section 115VX and includes the deemed tonnage computed in the prescribed manner. The manner has been prescribed in Rule 11Q of the Income-tax Rules, 1962.

Further, the Explanation to section 115VG(4) provides that for the purposes of this sub-section, 'deemed tonnage' shall be the tonnage in respect of an arrangement of purchase of slots, slot charter and an arrangement of sharing of break-bulk vessel.

Rules 11Q(1) provides that for the purpose of Explanation to section 115VG(4), deemed tonnage in respect of an arrangement of purchase of slots and slot charter shall be computed on the following basis:

2.5 TEU = 1 Net Tonnage (1NT)

Where TEU is Twenty foot Equivalent Unit (Container of this size)

Annexure 1

Special Provisions for taxation of income of certain domestic companies

Two new sections, namely, section 115BAA and section 115BAB have been inserted with effect from A.Y.2020-21, providing for concessional rates of tax on income of certain domestic companies. The provisions of these two sections are discussed hereunder:

(1)	(2)	(3)	(4)
	Particulars	Section 115BAB	Section 115BAA
(1)	Applicability	Domestic manufacturing company	Any domestic company
(2)	Rate of tax	15%	22%
(3)	Rate of surcharge	10%	10%
(4)	Effective rate of tax (including sur-charge & cess)	17.16%	25.168%
(5)	Applicability of concessional rate of tax on total income of company	The rate of tax (i.e., 17.16%) is notwithstanding anything contained in the Income-tax Act, 1961 but subject to the provisions of Chapter XII, other than section 115BA and 115BAA.	The rate of tax (i.e., 25.168%) is notwithstanding anything contained in the Income-tax Act, 1961, but subject to the provisions of Chapter XII, other than section 115BA and 115BAB.
		Note – This implies that this rate (i.e., 17.16%/25.168%) would prevail in respect of all income, other than income subject to special rates of tax under Chapter XII, for which the special rates would continue to apply. For example, in case of such companies opting for section 115BAA or 115BAB, long-term capital gains chargeable to tax under section 112 and 112A and short-term capital gains chargeable to tax under section 111A would be subject to tax at the rates mentioned in the said sections. However, other income, like short term capital gains (other than those covered under section 111A), income from house property and income from other sources would be taxable at the rate of 17.16%/25.168%, as the case may be.*
(6)	Conditions to be fulfilled for availing the concessional rate of tax and exemption from MAT	(i) The company should be set-up and registered on or after 1.10.2019.	No time limit specified. Both existing companies and new companies can avail benefit.
		(ii) It should commence manufacturing on or before 31.3.2023.	Need not be a manufacturing company

		(iii)	It should not be formed by splitting up or the reconstruction of a business already in existence (except in case of an undertaking formed by reconstruction or revival of a person of the business of any undertaking referred to in section 33B in the circumstances and within the period specified therein)	No similar condition has been prescribed
		(iv)	It does not use any machinery or plant previously used for any purpose [Refer Note at the end]	No similar condition has been prescribed
		(v)	It does not use any building previously used as a hotel or a convention centre [meanings assigned in section 80-ID(6)]	No similar condition has been prescribed
		(vi)	It should not be engaged in any business other than the business of manufacture or production of any article or thing and research in relation to, or distribution of, such article or thing manufactured or produced by it.	No similar condition has been prescribed
(7)	Common condition for both sections for availing the concessional rate of tax and exemption from MAT	The total income should be computed -

In case the arrangement referred to above involves a specified domestic transaction referred to in section 92BA, then, the amount of profits from such transaction would be determined by considering the arm's length price (ALP). Note – The scope of "specified domestic transaction" referred to in section 92BA has been expanded to include within its ambit, any business transacted between such persons with close connection, where one such person is a company claiming benefit under section 115BAB.*
(11)	Exercise of option by the company within the prescribed time	The beneficial provisions of this section would apply only if option is exercised in the prescribed manner on or before the due date u/s 139(1) for furnishing the first of the returns of income for any previous year relevant to A.Y.2020-21 or any subsequent assessment year. Such option, once exercised, would apply to subsequent assessment years. Further, once the option has been exercised for any previous year, it cannot be subsequently withdrawn for the same or any other previous year.	The beneficial provisions of this section would apply if option is exercised in the prescribed manner on or before the due date u/s 139(1) for furnishing the return of income for any previous year relevant to A.Y.2020-21 or any subsequent assessment year. Such option, once exercised, would apply to subsequent assessment years. Further, once the option has been exercised for any previous year, it cannot be subsequently withdrawn for the same or any other previous year.

		Note – The option has to be exercised at the time of furnishing the first of the returns of income *for any previous year. Note - For the purpose of point no.7(iv) in column (3) of the above table, any machinery or plant which was used outside India by any other person shall not be regarded as machinery or plant previously used for any purpose, if all the following conditions are fulfilled, namely:—

(a) such machinery or plant was not, at any time previous to the date of the installation by the person, used in India;

(b) such machinery or plant is imported into India from any country outside India;

(c) no deduction on account of depreciation in respect of such machinery or plant has been allowed or is allowable under the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 in computing the total income of any person for any period prior to the date of installation of the machinery or plant by the person.

Further, where in the case of a person, any machinery or plant or any part thereof previously used for any purpose is put to use by the company and the total value of the machinery or plant or part so transferred does not exceed 20% of the total value of the machinery or plant used by the company, then, the condition specified that the company does not use any machinery or plant previously used for any purpose would be deemed to have been complied with.

13.1 INTRODUCTION

Section 10(23C*), inter alia*, exempts income received by any person on behalf of university, or other educational institution or any hospital. Section 11 provides exemption in respect of income derived from property held under trust wholly for charitable or religious purposes. Section 13A exempts certain categories of income derived by a political party and section 13B exempts voluntary contributions received by electoral trusts.

13.2 INCOME OF UNIVERSITIES, HOSPITALS, EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS, MEDICAL INSTITUTIONS ETC. [SECTION 10(23C)]

As we have read in Chapter 3, exemption is available in respect of any income received by any person on behalf of the certain funds and institutions. In particular, in this chapter, we would be dealing with income of universities, educational institutions, hospitals and other medical institutions covered under sub-clauses (iiiab), (iiiac), (iiiad), (iiiae), (iv), (v), (vi) and (via) of section 10(23C):

(1) any university or other educational institution wholly or substantially financed by the Government which exists solely for educational purposes and not for profit [Sub-clause (iiiab)];

(2) any hospital or other institution wholly or substantially financed by the Government, which exists solely for philanthropic purposes and not for profit and which exists for the reception and treatment of persons suffering from illness or mental defectiveness or for the reception and treatment of convalescing persons or persons requiring medical attention or rehabilitation [Sub-clause (iiiac)];

> If the government grant to a university or other educational institution, hospital or other institution during the relevant previous year exceeds 50% of the total receipts (including any voluntary contributions), of such university or other educational institution, hospital or other institution, as the case may be, then, such university or other educational institution, hospital or other institution shall be considered as being substantially financed by the Government for that previous year.

(3) any university or other educational institution existing solely for educational purposes and not for profit and its aggregate annual receipts do not exceed ₹ 1 crore [Sub-clause (iiiad)];

(4) any hospital or other institution as described in (2) above if its aggregate annual receipts do not exceed the prescribed limit of ₹ 1 crore [Sub-clause (iiiae)];

(5) any other fund or institution for charitable purposes approved by the prescribed authority having regard to the objects of the fund or institution and its importance throughout India or throughout any State or States [Sub-clause (iv)];

(6) any trust (including any other legal obligation) or institution wholly for public religious or wholly for public religious and charitable purposes approved by the prescribed authority having regard to ensure the income applies for the objects of the fund or institution [Sub-clause (v)];

(7) any other university or educational institution existing solely for educational purposes and not for purposes of profit and which may be approved by the prescribed authority [Sub-clause (vi)];

(8) any other hospital, or other medical institution as described in (2) above approved by the prescribed authority [Sub-clause (via)].

Notes:

(i) Application in prescribed form: The application form for such exemption will have to be made in the prescribed form and manner.

(ii) Commissioner of Income-tax (Exemptions) to act as "prescribed authority" for the purpose of section 10(23C)(iv)/(v)/(vi)/(via): Commissioner of Income-tax (Exemptions) is empowered to call for such documents or information as it considers necessary in order to satisfy itself about the genuineness of the activities of the fund or trust or institution or any university or other educational institution or any hospital or other medical institution, and the compliance of such requirements under any other law for the time being in force by such fund or trust or institution or any university or other educational institution or any hospital or other medical institution, as the case may be, as are material for the purpose of achieving its objects before approving the same under section 10(23C)(iv)/(v)/(vi)/(via). Such documents may include audited annual accounts. The prescribed authority may also make such inquiries as it may deem necessary for this purpose.

(iii) Conditions to be fulfilled for exemption: For exemption under section 10(23C)(iv)/(v)/(vi)/(via), the fund or trust or institution etc. must fulfill the following conditions:

(a) It should apply its income or accumulate it for application wholly and exclusively to the objects for which it is established,

(b) In case where more than 15% of its income is accumulated, the period of accumulation of the amount exceeding 15% of its income shall be maximum 5 years.

(c) Funds should be invested or deposited in the forms or modes specified in section 11(5). This condition would however not apply to the following funds–

— any assets held by the fund, trust or institution or any university or other educational institution or any hospital or other medical institution, where such assets form part of the corpus of the fund, trust or institution or any university or other educational institution or any hospital or other medical institution as on 1.6.1973;

- any asset, being equity shares of a public company, held by any university or other educational institution or any hospital or other medical institution where such assets form part of its corpus as on 1.6.1998;
- any debentures, issued by or on behalf of any company or corporation, acquired by the fund, trust or institution, etc. before 1.3.1983;
- any bonus shares allotted to the fund, trust or institution, etc. in respect of the shares mentioned above forming part of the corpus of such fund, etc.
- voluntary contributions received and maintained in the form of jewellery, furniture or other article as the Board may specify for any period during the previous year.

(iv) Applicability of exemption to profits and gains of business of the trust/fund etc. - Exemption under section 10(23C)(iv)/(v)/(vi)/(via) would not apply to profits and gains of business in all cases. However, where the business is incidental to the attainment of its objectives and separate books of account are maintained in respect of the business, the exemption would apply to such business profits also.

(v) Period of validity of notification issued by the Central Government - Any notification issued by the Central Government [under sub-clauses (iv) or (v)] on or after 13.7.2006 will be valid until withdrawn.

(vi) Time limit for passing order of approval/rejection - Where an application form for exemption is made on or after 13.7.2006, every notification under sub-clause (iv)/(v) shall be issued or approval under sub-clause (iv)/(v)/(vi)/(via) shall be granted or an order rejecting the application shall be passed within the period of 12 months from the end of the month in which such application was received.

(vii) Audit of accounts - If the total income of any entity referred to in sub-clauses (iv), (v), (vi) and (via) of section 10(23C), without giving effect to the provisions of the said sub-clauses, exceeds the basic exemption limit in any previous year, it shall –

(1) get its accounts audited in respect of that year by a chartered accountant; and

(2) furnish such audit report along with the return of income for the relevant assessment year. The report must be in the prescribed form, duly signed and verified by the accountant, and must contain such particulars as may be prescribed.

(viii) Payment or credit to another fund, trust etc. out of accumulated income not to be considered as application of income - Where the fund/ trust/ institution/ university/ hospital etc. does not apply its income during the year of receipt and accumulates it, and subsequently makes a payment or credit out of such accumulated income, to any institution or trust registered u/s 12AA or to any fund/ trust/ institution/ university/ hospital, such payment or credit shall not be considered to be an application of income for its specified objectives.

(ix) Provisions of sections 40(a)(ia), 40A(3) and 40A(3A) apply in case of application of income by Fund/ Trust/ Institution etc. – In case where an expenditure is incurred on which tax is deductible at source under Chapter XVII-B and such tax has not been deducted or after deduction, has not been paid on or before the due date under section 139(1), 30% of sum paid would not be treated as application of income in that year. The same would be, however, be treated as application in the year in which tax is deducted and paid.

Likewise, where the trust/fund etc. incurs any expenditure in respect of which a payment or aggregate of payments made to a person in a day, otherwise than by an account payee cheque/bank draft/ECS, exceeds ₹ 10,000, the same would not be considered as application of income.

Further, where any liability incurred has been allowed as application during the P.Y., say P.Y. 2019-20 and subsequently, say during the P.Y. 2020-21, the trust/fund/institution etc. makes payment in respect thereof, otherwise than by way of account payee cheque/bank draft/ECS, payment so made shall be deemed as income of the trust/fund/institution etc. of the year in which payment is made, if the payment or aggregate of payments made to a person in a day exceeds ₹ 10,000.

(x) Withdrawal of approval - The Central Government, or prescribed authority shall have the power to withdraw the approval or rescind the notification if:

(a) such fund/ institution/university/hospital etc. has not applied its income or invested/ deposited its funds in accordance with the provisions; or

(b) the activities of such fund, etc. are not genuine; or

(c) such activities are not being carried out in accordance with the conditions based upon which it was notified or approved; or

(d) such fund/institution/university/hospital etc. has not complied with the requirement of any other law for the time being in force, and the order, direction or decree, by whatever name called, holding that such non-compliance has occurred, has either not been disputed or has attained finality

However, the approval or notification can be withdrawn or rescinded only after issuing a show cause notice and giving reasonable opportunity to such fund, etc. of being heard. After withdrawing the approval or rescinding the notification, a copy of the order is to be forwarded to the concerned fund/institution, etc. as well as to the Assessing Officer.

(xi) Time limit for making an application for grant of exemption - The time limit for making an application for grant of exemption or continuation thereof under section 10(23C) by a fund or trust or institution or any university or other educational institution or any hospital or other medical institution referred to in sub-clauses (iv)/(v)/(vi)/(via) of section 10(23C) has been specified in respect of such applications made on or after 1.6.2006. Such applications have to be filed on or before 30th September of the succeeding financial year. For example, if an educational institution seeks exemption under clause (vi) for P.Y.2019-20 (i.e. A.Y.2020-21), it has to make an application for grant of exemption by 30.9.2020.

(xii) Anonymous donation to be included in total income - Any anonymous donation referred to in section 115BBC on which tax is payable in accordance with the provisions of the said section shall be included in the total income.

(xiii) Amount credited or paid out of income of any fund, trust etc. by way of corpus donation to any trust or institution registered under section 12AA not considered as application - Any amount credited or paid out of income of any fund or trust or institution or any university or other educational institution or any hospital or other medical institution referred to in sub-clause (iv)/(v)/(vi)/(via), to any trust or institution registered under section 12AA, being voluntary contribution made with a specific direction that they shall form part of the corpus of the trust or institution, shall not be treated as application of income to the objects for which such fund or trust or institution or university or educational institution or hospital or other medical institution, as the case may be, is established.

(xiv) Trust not entitled to exemption if its commercial receipts exceed 20% of total receipts - If the purpose of a trust or institution referred to in sub-clauses (iv)/(v) of section 10(23C) does not remain charitable in a previous year on account of the commercial receipts exceeding 20% of total receipts of the trust or institution, then, such trust or institution would not be entitled to get benefit of exemption in respect of its income for that previous year in which the commercial receipts exceed the specified threshold. The denial of exemption would be compulsory by operation of law and would not be dependent on any approval being withdrawn or registration being cancelled or a notification being rescinded.

Such trust and institution cannot get benefit of tax exemption in the year in which its receipts from commercial activities exceed 20% of total receipts, whether or not the registration or approval granted or notification issued is cancelled, withdrawn or rescinded in respect of such trust or institution.

(xv) No benefit of exemption under section 10 to entities eligible for exemption under section 10(23C) - Entities which have been approved or notified for claiming benefit of exemption under section 10(23C) would not be entitled to claim any benefit of exemption under any other provision of section 10 [except exemption under section 10(1) in respect of agricultural income]. This is to ensure that once a trust or institution voluntarily opts for the special dispensation under this section, it should be governed by these provisions and should not be allowed the flexibility of being governed by the general provisions of section 10. Allowing such flexibility may have adverse effects on the objective for which this section was enacted.

(xvi) Depreciation not allowable if cost of asset claimed as application - Income for the purposes of application under section 10(23C) shall be determined without allowing any deduction or allowance for depreciation or otherwise, where the cost of acquisition of the asset has been claimed as application of income under section 10(23C) in the same previous year or any other previous year.

ILLUSTRATION 1

An educational institution having annual receipts of ₹ 1.20 crore during the P.Y. 2019-20, has to make an application to the prescribed authority before 31.3.2020 for claiming tax exemption under section 10(23C). Discuss the correctness or otherwise of this statement.

SOLUTION

This statement is not correct.

According to the first proviso to section 10(23C), an educational institution having aggregate annual receipts exceeding ₹ 1 crore, is required to make an application to the prescribed authority for grant of exemption under section 10(23C)(vi). Further, it is provided that such application can be made on or before 30th September of the relevant assessment year from which the exemption is sought.

Therefore, in the given case, the educational institution (having annual receipts of ₹ 1.20 crore during the P.Y. 2019-20) can make an application for grant of exemption in the prescribed form to the prescribed authority on or before 30th September, 2020, for claiming exemption under section 10(23C)(vi) for previous year 2019-20.

13.3 CHARITABLE OR RELIGIOUS TRUSTS AND INSTITUTIONS [SECTIONS 11 TO 13]

(1) General discussion on trusts - Before considering the provisions of sections 11 to 13 which govern the exemption in respect of income from property held for charitable or religious purposes, let us see briefly what exactly the term trust signifies, the types of trusts and the manner of their creation. Though this aspect of the topic does not strictly fall within the purview of income-tax, such a general knowledge would be useful in understanding the provisions of tax laws relating to charitable trusts.

A trust is an obligation annexed to the ownership and arising out of a confidence reposed in and accepted by the owner if declared and accepted by him for the benefit of another or of another and the owner. The person who reposes or declares the confidence is called the 'author of the trust'; the person who accepts the confidence is called the trustee; the person for whose benefit the confidence is accepted is called the 'beneficiary'; the subject matter of the trust is called the 'trust property'; the 'beneficial interest' or 'interest' of the beneficiary is his right against the trustees or owner of the trust property and the instrument, if any, by which trust is declared is called the 'instrument of trust'.

Trusts can be broadly classified into two groups - Public and Private. The distinction between a public and private trust is that, whereas in the former, the beneficiaries are the general public or a class thereof, in the latter they are specific individuals. While in the former the beneficiaries constitute a body which is incapable of ascertainment, in the latter they are persons who are ascertained or capable of being ascertained. In some cases, private trusts may enure for the benefit of the public. Some religious trust may also be in the nature of public-cum-private trust.

Private trusts are governed by the Indian Trust Act, 1882. This Act does not apply to the following:

(1) The rules of Mohammedan law as to waqf;

(2) The mutual relations of the members of undivided family as determined by any customary or personal law;

(3) Public or private religious or charitable endowments; and

(4) Trust to distribute prizes taken in war among the captors.

From the above, it will be clear that public charitable trusts are not governed by the Indian Trust Act.

There are three requirements for creation of a public trust. They are (1) a declaration of trust which is binding on the settlor, (2) setting apart definite property and depriving himself of the ownership, and (3) a statement of objects for which the property is thereafter to be held. In the case of a private trust also, more or less similar requirements exist.

The word 'trust' as used in the context of sections 11 to 13 includes, in addition to the 'trust' as explained above, 'any other legal obligation'. This is made clear in Explanation 1 to section 13. The words 'any other legal obligation' are wide enough to cover Muslim wakfs, Hindu endowments and dedications to deities. It would also cover a case in which the trustees of a settlement are to pay the income to other trustees who in their turn are bound to apply it for purposes which are religious or charitable.

(2) Tax Exemption [Section 11] - Subject to the provisions of sections 60 to 63, the income of a religious or charitable trust or institution, to the extent specified in the Act, is exempt from tax when certain prescribed conditions are fulfilled. The relevant income does not even form part of the total income of the trust or institution.

Section 11 deals with the exemption of income from property held in trust or other legal obligation for religious or charitable purposes wholly or in part. Section 12 deals with exemption of income derived by such a trust from voluntary contributions. Section 12A prescribes the conditions as to registration of trust etc. Section 13 enumerates the circumstances under which the exemption available under sections 11 to 12 will be denied.

(i) Income from property held for charitable or religious purposes - The following income shall not be included in the total income of the previous year of the person in receipt of the income:

(a) Income derived from property held under trust wholly for charitable and religious purposes to the extent such income is applied in India for such purpose.

(b) Income derived from property held under trust in part only for such purpose, to the extent such income is applied in India for such purposes. However, the trust in question must have been created before 1.4.1962.

(c) Income derived from property held under trust, created on after 1.4.1952 for charitable purpose which tends to promote international welfare in which India is interested to the extent to which such income is applied to such purpose outside India. This does not cover religious trusts.

Income derived from property held under a trust for charitable or religious purposes, created before 1.4.1952, to the extent to which such income is applied for such purposes outside India.

In both the cases, the CBDT should have, by general or special order, directed that such income shall not be included in the total income of the person in receipt of such income.

(d) Income in the form of voluntary contributions made with a specific direction that they shall form part of the corpus of the trust or institution.

Thus, it may be noted that only such income derived from property held under trust wholly for charitable or religious purposes is exempt. If the property is held in part only for such purposes, it is necessary that such a trust must have been created before the commencement of the Act. In both the cases, the exemption is limited to the extent such income is applied in India for such specified purposes.

(ii) Types of trusts - To get exemption in respect of income applied outside India, the trusts are divided into two types:

(a) If the object of the trust is to promote international welfare in which India is interested, such trust may have been created on or after 1.4.1952.

(b) If the trust is for any other charitable purpose it must have been created before 1.4.1952. Here also, the exemption is limited to the extent to which such income is applied outside India for such specified purposes. It is to be noted however that a direction from CBDT by a general or special order is necessary before such exemption can be claimed.

(iii) Conditions for claiming exemption

(a) Property should be held under trust - The exemptions explained in the preceding paragraphs are available if and only if there is a valid trust or there is a legal obligation, under which the income derived from the property held under such trust or legal obligation is to be applied for charitable or religious purposes. If there is no trust nor any legal obligation, the income will not be exempt even if the whole of such income is applied to charitable or religious purposes. A mere creation of a trust for the income is not sufficient, there must be a trust of the property out of which the income is derived before one can consider any exemption under section 11.

(b) Income should be applied for charitable purposes - Section 2(15) states that 'charitable purpose' includes relief of the poor, education, yoga, medical relief, preservation of environment (including watersheds, forests and wildlife) and preservation of monuments or places or objects of artistic or historic interest and the advancement of any other object of general public utility.

The definition of "charitable purpose" includes "any other object of general public utility" The question arises as to what is an object of "general public utility". This expression has not been defined anywhere in the Act.

In CIT v. Gujarat Maritime Board (2007) 295 ITR 561, the Supreme Court observed that the Gujarat Maritime Board was established for the predominant purpose of development of minor ports within the State of Gujarat, the management and control of the Board was essentially with the State Government and there was no profit motive. The assessee, Gujarat Maritime Board, was under a legal obligation to apply its income which was directly and substantially from the business held under trust for the development of minor ports in Gujarat. Therefore, the Supreme Court held that the assessee was entitled to be registered as "charitable trust" under section 12A.

A number of entities functioning on commercial basis claim exemption of their income either under section 10(23C) or section 11 on the foundation that they are charitable institutions. This is based on the contention that they are engaged in the "advancement of an object of general public utility" as is included in the fourth part of the present definition of "charitable purpose". There were many decisions rendered in the past supporting the view that if unconnected business is held under a trust for promoting the object of general public utility and if profits are used for promoting such objects, income thereof shall be exempt, for example, the decision of the Supreme Court in CIT v. Madras Stock Exchange Ltd. (1981) 130 ITR 184. However, such a claim in respect of an activity carried out on commercial basis, goes against the basic intention of the provision.

Therefore, in order to limit the ambit of the phrase "advancement of any other object of general public utility", section 2(15) provides that "the advancement of any other object of general public utility" would not be a charitable purpose if it involves the carrying on of –

(a) any activity in the nature of trade, commerce or business or,

(b) any activity of rendering of any service in relation to any trade, commerce or business, for a fee or cess or any other consideration, irrespective of the nature of use or application of the income from such activity, or the retention of such income, by the concerned entity.

Thus, the advancement of any other object of general public utility shall not be a charitable purpose, if it involves the carrying on of any activity in the nature of trade, commerce or business, or any activity of rendering any service in relation to any trade, commerce or business, for a cess or fee or any other consideration, irrespective of the nature of use or application, or retention, of the income from such activity, unless,-

(1) such activity is undertaken in the course of actual carrying out of such advancement of any other object of general public utility; and

(2) the aggregate receipts from such activity or activities, during the previous year, does not exceed 20% of the total receipts, of the trust or institution undertaking such activity or activities, for the previous year .

Therefore, in effect, "advancement of any other object of general public utility" would continue to be a "charitable purpose", if the activity in the nature of trade, commerce or business is undertaken in the course of actual carrying out of such advancement of any other object of general public utility and the aggregate receipts from any activity in the nature of trade, commerce or business, or any activity of rendering any service in relation to any trade, commerce or business does not exceed 20% of the total receipts of the trust or institution undertaking such activity or activities, for the previous year.

ILLUSTRATION 2

An institution having its main object as "advancement of general public utility" received ₹ 30 lakhs in aggregate during the P.Y.2019-20 from an activity in the nature of trade. The total receipts of the institution, including donations, was ₹ 140 lakhs. It applied 85% of its total receipts from such activity during the same year for its main object i.e. advancement of general public utility.

(i) What would be the tax consequence of such receipt and application thereof by the institution?

(ii) Would your answer be different if the institution's total receipts had been ₹ 150 lakhs (instead of ₹ 140 lakhs) in aggregate during the P.Y.2019-20?

(iii) What would be your answer if the main object of the institution is "relief of the poor" and the institution receives ₹ 30 lakhs from a trading activity, when its total receipts are ₹ 140 lakhs and applies 85% of the said receipts for its main object?

SOLUTION

(i) As the main object of the institution is "advancement of object of general public utility", the institution will lose its "charitable" status for the P.Y.2019-20, since it has received ₹ 30 lakhs from an activity in the nature of trade, which exceeds ₹ 28 lakhs, being 20% of the total receipts of the institution undertaking that activity for the previous year. The application of 85% of such receipt for its main object during the year would not help in retaining its "charitable" status for that year. The institution will lose its charitable status and consequently, the benefit of exemption of income for the P.Y.2019-20, irrespective of the fact that its approval is not withdrawn or its registration is not cancelled.

(ii) If the total receipts of the institution is ₹ 150 lakhs, and the institution receives ₹ 30 lakhs in aggregate from an activity in the nature of trade during the P.Y.2019-20, then it will not lose its "charitable" status since receipt of upto 20% of the total receipts of the institution in a year from such activity is permissible. The institution can claim exemption subject to fulfilment of other conditions under sections 11 to 13. Further, such activity should also be undertaken in the course of actual carrying out of such advancement of any other object of general public utility.

(iii) The restriction regarding carrying on of a trading activity for a cess, fee or other consideration will not apply if the main object of the institution is "relief of the poor". Therefore, receipt of ₹ 30 lakhs from a trading activity by such an institution will not affect its "charitable" status, even if it exceeds 20% of the total receipts of the institution. The institution can claim exemption subject to fulfilment of other conditions under sections 11 to 13.

Would such utilization of its income be treated as utilisation for "charitable purpose"? Examine. Would your answer be different, if the main object of the institution is "advancement of object of general public utility"?*

(b) A charitable trust derives its income from the business of providing mineral water to various companies situated in Software Technology Park in Hyderabad. A sum of ₹ 30 lacs has been derived as net income from such business activity, which has been applied for the object of general public utility. The total receipts of the trust during the P.Y. 2019-20 was ₹ 140 lakhs. Examine the taxability of application of the income, if the income so derived relates to the previous year 2019-20. Would your answer be different, if the trust runs a school in a backward district and applies the profits from the business for such school's activity?

SOLUTION

(a) Section 2(15) defines “charitable purpose” to include relief of the poor, education, yoga, medical relief, preservation of environment (including watersheds, forests and wildlife) and preservation of monuments or places or objects of artistic or historic interest and the advancement of any other object of general public utility. However, the “advancement of any other object of general public utility” shall not be a charitable purpose, if the institution is carrying on any activity in the nature of trade, commerce or business, or any activity of rendering any service in relation to any trade, commerce or business, for a cess or fee or any other consideration, irrespective of the nature of use or application, or retention, of the income derived from such activity.

Therefore, preservation of wildlife is included in the definition of “charitable purpose” under section 2(15). Further, an institution having the preservation of wildlife as its main object would not be subject to the restrictions which are applicable to the “advancement of any other object of general public utility”. Such institution would continue to retain its “charitable” status, even if it derives income from an activity in the nature of trade.

However, if an institution having its main object as “advancement of any other object of general public utility”, derives income from an activity in the nature of trade during a financial year, it would lose its “charitable” status for that year, even if it applies such income for its main objects.

It may be noted that if the receipts from such activity does not exceed 20% of the total receipts in that year, then, the institution would not lose its “charitable” status, even if its main object is “advancement of any other object of general public utility”, if such activity is undertaken in the course of actual carrying out of such advancement of any other object of general public utility.

(b) In the first case, net income from the business of supplying mineral water to various companies i.e., ₹ 30 lakhs is not eligible for exemption under section 11, since the receipt from such activity exceeds 20% of total receipts (i.e., 20% of ₹ 140 lakhs) during the year. This is because “advancement of any object of general public utility” would not be a charitable purpose if it involves carrying on of any activity in the nature of trade, commerce or business, for example, supply of mineral water for a consideration, as in this case. It is immaterial that the net income from such business is applied for the object of general public utility.

On the other hand, where the trust runs a school in a backward district, this restriction is not applicable. The reason is that the restriction contained in section 2(15) is applicable only to the last limb of the definition of “charitable purpose” i.e. advancement of object of general public utility. It does not affect the other limbs of the definition viz. “relief of the poor”, “education”, “medical relief” etc.

Section 11(4) clarifies that “property held under trust” includes a business undertaking so held. As per section 11(4A), exemption can be availed in respect of profits and gains of business, if such business is incidental to the attainment of the objectives of the trust and separate books of account are maintained in respect of such business. Therefore, in the second case, the profit from the business shall be eligible for exemption under section 11, assuming that the said business is incidental to the attainment of the objects of the trust (i.e., education) and books of account for such business activity is maintained separately.

Circular No.11/2008 dated 19.12.2008

Exemption under section 11 in case of an assessee claiming both to be a charitable institution as well as a mutual organisation

The proviso to section 2(15) will apply only to entities whose purpose is advancement of any other object of general public utility i.e. the last limb of the definition of charitable purpose contained in section 2(15). Hence, such entities will not be eligible for exemption under section 11 or under section 10(23C), if they carry on commercial activities. Whether such an entity is carrying on an activity in the nature of trade, commerce or business is a question of fact which will be decided based on the nature, scope, extent and frequency of the activity.

There are industry and trade associations who claim exemption from tax under section 11 on the ground that their objects are for charitable purpose as these are covered under any other object of general public utility. Under the principle of mutuality, if trading takes place between persons who are associated together and contribute to a common fund for the financing of some venture or object and in this respect have no dealings or relations with any outside body, then any surplus returned to the persons forming such association is not chargeable to tax. In such cases, there must be complete identity between the contributors and the participants.

Therefore, where industry or trade associations claim to be both charitable institutions as well as mutual organizations and their activities are restricted to contributions from and participation of only their members, these would not fall within the purview of the proviso to section 2(15) owing to the principle of mutuality. However, if such organizations have dealings with non-members, their claim to be charitable organizations would be governed by the additional conditions stipulated in the proviso to section 2(15).

In the final analysis, however, whether the assessee has, for its object, the advancement of any other object of general public utility is a question of fact. If such assessee is engaged in any activity in the nature of trade, commerce or business or renders any service in relation to trade, commerce or business, it would not be entitled to claim that its object is charitable purpose. In such a case, the object of general public utility will be only a mask or a device to hide the true purpose which is trade, commerce or business or the rendering of any service in relation to trade, commerce or business. Each case would, therefore, be decided on its own facts and no generalization is possible.

Circular No.395, dated 24.9.1984 – Promotion of sports and games is considered to be a charitable purpose within the meaning of section 2(15). Therefore, an association or institution engaged in the promotion of games and sports can claim exemption under section 11 even if it is not approved under section 10(23).

A trust will be treated as a charitable trust under section 2(15) even if its object involves the carrying on of an activity for profit. Such a trust will not be denied exemption under section 11 on the ground that its objects are non-charitable.

(iv) Application and accumulation - We have seen that the exemption is limited to the extent to which such income is applied in India or outside India, as the case may be. Is it necessary that the entire income should be so applied? The Act gives a concession here. It is possible to claim the exemption even if the trust or institution applies only 85% of the income derived from the trust property for the purpose of the trust, during the relevant previous year.

An accumulation not exceeding 15% of the income from such property is permissible. For computing this 15%, voluntary contributions referred to in section 12 shall be deemed to be part of the income. It must be clearly noted that accumulation must be with the object of application of the accumulated amount for charitable or religious purpose in India at a later date. Such a facility for accumulation is not available for those trusts whose income is to be applied outside India.

(v) Inability to apply in full 85% of the income - It is clear from the above discussion that free accumulation not exceeding 15% of income[1] from property is permissible. Hence, the balance 85% must be applied during the previous year for the purposes for which the trust has been created. However, it is possible that the trust is unable to apply the minimum of 85% of its income during the previous year due to either of the following reasons.

(1) The whole or any part of the income has not been received during that year.

(2) Any other reason.

In the first class of cases, the period of application is extended to cover the previous year in which the income is actually received and the previous year immediately following the year. However, the amount which may be so claimed to have been so applied during the subsequent previous year cannot exceed the amount of the income which had not been received earlier but received during a subsequent previous year. In the second case, the period of application is extended to the previous year immediately following the previous year in which the income was derived.

[1] As per the Supreme Court ruling in CIT v. Programme for Community Organisation (2001) 116 Taxman 608, 15% of gross receipts would be eligible for accumulation under section 11(1)(a).

Example

During the previous year ending 31st March, 2020, a charitable trust earned an income of ₹ 1,00,000 but it received only ₹ 60,000 in that year. The balance of ₹ 40,000 is received in the year ending 31-3-2021.

Solution

Total income earned during the P.Y.2019-20	1,00,000
Actual receipt in P.Y.2019-20	60,000
Permissible accumulation @15% of ₹ 1,00,000	15,000
Balance to be applied during P.Y.2019-20	45,000
Amount received in P.Y.2020-21 to be applied in P.Y.2020-21 or P.Y.2021-22	40,000

Since this amount of ₹ 40,000 is received during the P.Y. 2020-21, this can be applied in the P.Y.2020-21 or in the P.Y.2021-22. If the entire amount of ₹ 40,000 is duly spent for charitable purposes in these two years, the exemption is fully available but if only part of the amount is so spent within the period, the exemption is restricted to that part only.

There may be a case where the inability springs from some other reason e.g., late receipt of the income making it impossible to spend it before the end of the year.

Example

A trust receives a sum of ₹ 50,000 on 30th March, 2020. Its previous year ends on 31-3-2020.

Solution

It is obvious that it is impossible to apply the requisite sum within one day. Therefore, it has been provided that such sum can be applied at any time during the immediately following previous year i.e., up to 31-3-2021.

(vi) Amount credited or paid out of income of any trust by way of corpus donation to any trust or institution registered under section 12AA not considered as application - Any amount credited or paid, out of income derived from property held under trust, to any trust or institution registered under section 12AA, being voluntary contribution made with a specific direction that they shall form part of the corpus of the trust or institution, shall not be treated as application of income for charitable or religious purpose.

(vii) Provisions of sections 40(a)(ia), 40A(3) and 40A(3A) apply in case of application of income by trust – In case where an expenditure is incurred on which tax is deductible at source under Chapter XVII-B and such tax has not been deducted or after deduction, has not been paid on or before the due date under section 139(1), 30% of sum paid would not be treated as application of income in that year. The same would be, however, be treated as application in the year in which tax is deducted and paid.

Likewise, where the trust incurs any expenditure in respect of which a payment or aggregate of payments made to a person in a day, otherwise than by an account payee cheque/ bank draft/ ECS, exceeds ₹ 10,000, the same would not be considered as application of income.

Further, where any liability incurred has been allowed as application during the P.Y., say P.Y. 2019-20 and subsequently, say during the P.Y. 2020-21, the trust makes payment in respect thereof, otherwise than by way of account payee cheque/bank draft/ECS, payment so made shall be deemed as income of the trust of the year in which payment is made, if the payment or aggregate of payments made to a person in a day exceeds ₹ 10,000.

(viii) Procedural Formalities: Exercise of option - To avail the facility of the extended period of application of income, the trust has to exercise an option in writing that the income applied later as prescribed may be deemed to be income applied to the relevant charitable purposes during the previous year in which the income was derived. Such option has to be exercised before the expiry of the time allowed statutorily under section 139(1).

The income so deemed to have been applied shall, however, not be taken into account in calculating the amount of income applied to such purposes, during the previous year in which the income is actually received or during the immediately following previous year, as the case may be. Thus, in the Example 1 given above, the amount of ₹ 40,000, received subsequently in the year 2020-21 and applied to charitable purposes in the year 2020-21, will by virtue of the option exercised by the trust, be deemed to be applied for charitable purposes in the year 2019-20 itself. Therefore, such an amount will not be taken into consideration in determining the amount of income applied for charitable purposes in the year 2020-21.

Section 11(1B) provides that where the income for which an option has been exercised as discussed above, is not actually applied, it is to be treated as the income of the previous year immediately following the year of receipt or the previous year in which it was derived, as the case may be.

(ix) Conditional accumulation - As per section 11, application of income derived from property held under trust for charitable purposes in India is the main condition for grant of exemption to trust or institution in respect of income derived from property held under such trust. In case such income cannot be applied during the previous year, the same can be accumulated and applied for such purposes, subject to satisfaction of the conditions provided therein.

Section 11 permits accumulation of 15% of the income indefinitely by the trust or institution. However, 85% of income can only be accumulated for a period not exceeding 5 years subject to the conditions that such person submits the prescribed form i.e., Form 10 to the Assessing Officer and the money so accumulated or set apart is invested or deposited in the specified forms or modes.

If the accumulated income is not applied for charitable purposes or ceases to be accumulated or set apart for accumulation or ceases to remain invested or deposited in specified modes, then, such income is deemed to be taxable income of the trust or institution.

For the purpose of clarifying the period within which the assessee is required to file Form 10, and to ensure due compliance of the above conditions within time, section 11(2) provides that -

(1) such person should furnish a statement in the prescribed form and in the prescribed manner to the Assessing Officer, stating the purpose for which the income is being accumulated or set apart and the period for which the income is being accumulated or set apart, which shall, in no case, exceed five years.

In computing the period of five years, the period during which the income could not be applied for the purpose for which it is so accumulated or set apart, due to an order or injunction of any court, shall be excluded.

(2) the money so accumulated or set apart should be invested or deposited in the modes specified in section 11(5).

(3) the statement in Form 10 should be filed on or before the due date of filing return of income specified under section 139(1).

In case the statement in Form 10 is not submitted on or before this date, then, the benefit of accumulation would not be available and such income would be taxable at the applicable rate. Further, the benefit of accumulation would also not be available if return of income is not furnished on or before the due date of filing return of income specified in section 139(1) [Section 13(9)].

ILLUSTRATION 4

A charitable institution registered under section 12AA of the Income-tax Act, 1961 filled in Form No.10 for seeking permission to accumulate unapplied income under section 11(2) of the Act for the objects of the institution and submitted it to the Assessing Officer along with the resolution for accumulation. The Assessing Officer found that the objects for which accumulation was sought were not particularised in as much as they covered the entire range of objects of the institution. Can the Assessing Officer deny the benefit of accumulation in such a case?

SOLUTION

Section 11(2) permits a charitable trust or institution to accumulate its unspent income where 85% of the income is not applied or is not deemed to have been applied to charitable or religious purposes in India during the previous year. The institution or trust has to specify, by notice in writing given to the Assessing Officer, the purpose for which the income is being accumulated or set apart and the period for which such income is to be accumulated or set apart.

In the given case, the assessee institution sought the permission of the Assessing Officer to accumulate unapplied income for the objects of the institution. The institution had not stated any objects in particular for which the unspent income was sought to be accumulated or set apart. In Bharat Krishak Samaj vs. Deputy Director of Income-tax (Exemption) (2008) 306 ITR 153 (Del.), it was held that it is not necessary for a charitable trust to particularize each and every object for which accumulation is sought. It is enough if the assessee seeks permission for accumulation for the objects of the trust. Therefore, the Assessing Officer cannot deny the benefit of accumulation in such a case.

Modes specified in section 11(5):

(1) Investment in Government Saving Certificates.

(2) Deposits with Post Office Savings Banks.

(3) Deposit with Scheduled banks or Co-operative Banks.

(4) Investment in units of the Unit Trust of India.

(5) Investment in Central or State Government Securities.

(6) Investments in debentures issued by or on behalf of any company or corporation. However, both the principal and interest thereon must have been guaranteed by the Central or the State Government.

(7) Investment or deposits in any public sector company.

Where an investment is made in the shares of any public sector company and such public sector company ceases to be a public sector company, the investment so made shall be deemed to be an investment made for a period of three years from the date of such cessation and in the case of any other investment or deposit, till the date of its maturity.

(8) Investment in bonds of approved financial corporation providing long term finance for industrial development in India and eligible for deduction under section 36(1)(viii).

(9) Investment in bonds of approved public companies whose principal object is to provide long-term finance for construction or purchase of houses in India for residential purposes and eligible for deduction under section 36(1)(viii).

(10) Deposits with or investment in any bonds issued by a public company formed and registered in India with the main object of carrying on the business of providing long-term finance for urban infrastructure in India.

"Long-term finance" means any loan or advance where the terms under which moneys are loaned or advanced provide for repayment along with interest thereof during a period of not less than five years.

"Urban infrastructure" means a project for providing potable water supply, sanitation and sewerage, drainage, solid waste management, road, bridges and flyovers or urban transport.

(11) Investment in immovable property excluding plant and machinery, not being plant and machinery installed in a building for the convenient occupation thereof.

(12) Deposits with Industrial Development Bank of India.

(13) Any other mode of investment or deposit as may be prescribed. Rule 17C specifies the following other modes: (1) Investments in units issued under any scheme of mutual fund referred to in section 10(23D); (2) Any transfer of deposits to Public Account of India; (3) Deposits made with an authority constituted in India or under any law enacted either for the purpose of dealing with and satisfying the need for housing accommodation or for the purpose of planning, development or improvement of cities, towns and villages, or for both; (4) investment by way of acquiring equity shares of a 'depository'; (5) investment by a recognized Stock Exchange, in the equity shares of a company promoted by it to acquire the membership rights of other stock exchanges, where at least 51% of the paid-up share capital is held by the Stock Exchange and the balance is held by its members; (6) investment by way of acquiring equity shares of an incubatee by an incubator; (7) investment by way of acquiring shares of National Skill Development Corporation; (8) investment in debt instruments issued by any infrastructure finance company registered with RBI; (9) investment in Stock Certificate as defined in of Sovereign Gold Bonds Scheme, 2015.

Amount credited or paid, out of accumulated income of any trust, to any trust or institution registered under section 12AA or referred to in section 10(23C)(iv)/(v)/(vi)/(via), not considered as application of income [Explanation to section 11(2)]

Any amount credited or paid, out of income derived from property held under trust, which is not applied, but is accumulated or set apart, to any trust or institution registered under section 12AA or to any fund or institution or trust or any university or other educational institution or any hospital or other medical institution referred to in sub-clause (iv)/(v)/(vi)/(via) of section 10(23C), shall not be treated as application of income for charitable or religious purpose, either during the period of accumulation or thereafter.

Deemed income in case of non-utilisation or mis-utilisation of accumulated amount

Where the accumulated income of the trust -

(a) is applied for purposes other than charitable or religious purposes; or

(b) ceases to be accumulated or set apart for application thereto; or

(c) ceases to remain invested or deposited in any of the modes mentioned under section 11(5) above; or

(d) is not utilised for the purpose for which it is so accumulated or set apart during the period specified (not exceeding 5 years) or in the year immediately following thereof.

However, in computing the aforesaid period of 5 years, the period during which the income could not be applied for the purposes for which it is so accumulated or set apart due to an order or injunction of any Court shall be excluded.

(e) accumulated or set apart for application to charitable and religious purposes in India, is credited or paid to any trust or institution registered under section 12AA or to any fund or institution or trust or any university or other educational institution or any hospital or other medical institution referred to in sub-clause (iv)/(v)/(vi)/(via) of section 10(23C), such income shall be deemed to be the income of the previous year –

(a) in which it is so applied; or

(b) in which it ceases to be accumulated or set apart; or

(c) in which it ceases to remain so invested or deposited; or

(d) immediately following the expiry of the period aforesaid; or

(e) in which it is paid or credited.

In DIT (Exemption) v. Khetri Trust (2014) 367 ITR 723 (Del), properties bequeathed to a trust could not be transferred to it due to ongoing court litigation and pendency of probate proceedings question arose if violation of the provisions of section 11(5) be attracted. In the facts of the case, trustees paid ₹ 1,10,000 for raising a memorial for late Raja Bahadur Sardar Singh and the said amount was given to a business entity for this purpose, but due to the ongoing dispute, such project was not completed the Commissioner (Appeals) observed that the validity of the will has been challenged in the probate proceedings; therefore, till the 'will' is probated and affirmed as genuine, the trust would not acquire the legal right on the property for the purpose of Act. In case the probate is denied, the properties would not devolve on the trust. The shares in foreign company were still in the name of the donor, late assessee and its acquisition by the trust is dependent upon the adjudication of the probate.

Further, with regard to the advance given to the business entity, the Commissioner (Appeals) found that the said amount cannot be treated as an investment which was covered and regulated by section 11(5), since the intent and purpose behind the payment was not investment. Based on the above factual findings, elucidated and affirmed by the Commissioner (Appeals) and the Tribunal, the High Court held that there was no violation of section 11(5) in this case.

Application to be made to Assessing Officer for application of income for other purposes

It is possible that due to circumstances beyond the control of the person in receipt of the income, any income invested or deposited in approved modes cannot be applied for the purpose for which it was accumulated or set apart. In such a case, an application may be made to the Assessing Officer specifying such other purposes as are in conformity with the objects of the trust. The Assessing Officer may allow the application of income to such other purposes. If such a permission is granted by the Assessing Officer, the new purposes will be deemed to be purposes specified in the written notice given to the Assessing Officer.

It is to be noted that the Assessing Officer cannot allow transfer of any such accumulated income to other charitable trusts/institutions as application of income towards charitable purposes. This has created genuine problems for those trusts and institutions which are wound up. However, in case of a trust or institution which has invested or deposited its income in any of the forms mentioned in section 11(5), the Assessing Officer can allow application of such income for crediting or payment to any trust or institution registered under section 12AA or any fund or institution or trust or university or education institution or hospital or medical institution covered by section 10(23C). Such application can be allowed only in the year in which such trust or institution is dissolved.

(x) No deduction for depreciation where cost of asset has been claimed as application of income - Income for the purposes of application under section 11 shall be determined without allowing any deduction or allowance for depreciation or otherwise, in respect of any asset, the cost of acquisition of which has been claimed as an application of income under this section in the same or any other previous year [Section 11(6)].

ILLUSTRATION 5

MSO Foundation, a charitable institution set up on 1st April, 2019 and registered under section 12AA with effect from that date, is engaged in providing education in hotel management. The organisation acquires a building for using the same for holding classes and office activities. It has approached you for your opinion on its eligibility to claim the cost of the building and also depreciation thereon in the current year and the subsequent year. Advise the institution indicating the reasons.

SOLUTION

(i) 15% of income from property held for charitable purposes is exempt from tax under section 11. The remaining 85% of such "income" would be exempt if it is "applied" for charitable purposes in India.

(ii) Application of the amount can be for revenue or capital purposes. As long as the expenditure is incurred out of income earned by the trust and for the purposes of carrying on the objects of the trust, it would be treated as application of income even if such expenditure is for capital purposes. Therefore, since the building is acquired by the organization for holding classes and office activities, which is for the purposes of carrying on the objects of the charitable institution i.e., for providing education in hotel management, the cost of the building would be treated as application of income.

However, section 11 provides that where the cost of building is claimed as application, no other deduction for depreciation or otherwise would be allowed as an application of income in respect of such asset for the same or any other previous year.

(xi) No claim for exemption under section 10 permissible where trust has been granted registration for availing exemption under section 11 - Where a trust or an institution has been granted registration for purposes of availing exemption under section 11, and the registration is in force for a previous year, then such trust or institution cannot claim any exemption under any provision of section 10 [other than exemption of agricultural income under section 10(1) and exemption available under section 10(23C)] [Section 11(7)].

(xii) Cases where trust property consists of a business undertaking - Section 11(4) clarifies that for the purposes of section 11, property held under trust may consist of a business undertaking so held. If that be so, the trustees may claim that the income of such undertaking enjoys exemption under section 11. Section 11(4) provides for the following -

(a) The Assessing Officer shall have the power to determine the income of the undertaking in accordance with the provisions of the Act relating to assessment, and

(b) Where the income determined by the Assessing Officer is in excess of that shown in the books of the undertaking, such excess shall be deemed to be applied to purposes other than charitable or religious purposes.

(xiii) Charitable trust engaged in business activity [Section 11(4A)] - Consequently, a charitable trust engaged in business activity will be liable to any tax on income from the activity. However, exemption would be available to the trust in respect of income earned from such business activity if –

(a) such business is incidental to the attainment of the objects of the trust/institution; and

(b) separate books of account are maintained by such trust/institution in respect of such business.

Note – Profits derived by a trust/institution referred to in clauses (21), (23A), (23B), (23BB) and (23C) of section 10 will continue to be exempt from income-tax, since section 11(4A) does not override the provisions of section 10.

(xiv) Instances where capital gains would be deemed to have been applied for charitable purposes [Section 11(1A)]

(a) Transfer of a capital asset held under trust wholly for charitable or religious purposes [Section 11(1A)(a)] - Where the whole of the net consideration from the transfer of the capital asset is utilised for acquiring a new capital asset which is held under trust wholly for charitable or religious purposes, the entire amount of capital gains arising from the transfer would be deemed to have been applied for charitable or religious purposes. If, however, only a part of the net consideration is utilised in acquiring the new capital asset, the amount of capital gains deemed to have been utilised for charitable or religious purposes shall be equal to the excess of the proceeds utilised over the cost of the asset transferred.

Example

Original cost of capital asset transferred	₹ 1,00,000
Consideration for which it is transferred	₹ 1,50,000
Situation 1 Cost of new capital asset acquired	₹ 1,50,000
Situation 2 Cost of new capital asset acquired	₹ 1,20,000

Amount that will be deemed to have been applied for charitable purposes.

Situation 1	₹ 50,000
Situation 2	₹ 20,000

(b) Transfer of a capital asset held under trust in part only for charitable and religious purposes [Section 11(1A)(b)] - Where only a part of a capital asset has been transferred, only the "appropriate fraction" of the capital gain arising from the transfer shall be deemed to have been applied to charitable or religious purposes. Where the whole of the net consideration is utilised in acquiring the new capital asset, the whole of the appropriate fraction of such capital gain will be deemed to have been so applied. In any other case, the exemption will be limited to so much of the appropriate fraction of the amount utilised for acquiring the new asset as exceeds the appropriate fraction of the cost of the transferred asset.

"Appropriate fraction" means the fraction which represents the extent to which the income derived from the capital asset transferred was applicable to charitable or religious purposes before such transfer.

Example

A capital asset is being held under trust. Two-thirds of the income derived from such capital asset are being utilised for the charitable purposes of the trust. The asset is being transferred.

Cost of transferred asset	₹ 1,20,000
Net consideration	₹ 1,80,000
Cost of new asset acquired	₹ 1,50,000
Capital gains	₹ 60,000 [₹ 1,80,000 – ₹ 1,20,000]

Appropriate fraction 2/3rd

Income represented by 'appropriate fraction' = 2/3rds of ₹ 60,000 = ₹ 40,000

Since the entire net consideration has not been utilised in acquiring the new asset, the amount deemed to have been utilised for charitable purpose will be (2/3rds of ₹ 1,50,000) – (2/3rds of ₹ 1,20,000) = ₹ 1,00,000 – ₹ 80,000 = ₹ 20,000.

(xv) Voluntary Contributions [Section 12] - Any voluntary contribution received by a trust created wholly for charitable or religious purposes or by an institution established wholly for such purposes shall, for the purposes of section 11, be deemed to be income derived from property held under trust wholly for charitable or religious purposes. However, corpus donations (i.e. contributions made with a specific direction that they shall from part of the corpus of the trust or institution) shall not be treated as income. Such corpus donations are treated as capital receipts not chargeable to tax. Other voluntary contributions would be treated as income. However, exemption can be claimed in respect of such income subject to fulfillment of the conditions mentioned below –

(a) The trust should be registered under section 12AA with the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax;

(b) If the total income of the trust exceeds the basic exemption limit, the accounts of the trust should be audited.

(c) The trust should apply at least 85% of its income for the approved purposes.

(d) The balance should be invested or deposited in specified forms or modes.

Note – It may be noted that the corpus donations are to be considered for the purpose of determining whether the accounts of the trust are to be audited. Further, corpus donations have to be invested only in the investments approved under section 11(5). If invested elsewhere, the income from unapproved investment would be chargeable to tax.

ILLUSTRATION 6

Hundi (charitable box) superscribing "contributions in this hundi form part of corpus of trust fund" kept at Lord Venkateshwara Temple, Tirumala, was opened on 30.3.2020. Cash of ₹ 100 lakhs and valuable articles worth ₹ 250 lakhs were found to have been contributed by the devotees. Discuss the tax implications.

SOLUTION

As per section 11(1)(d), income in the form of voluntary contributions made with a specific direction that they shall form part of the corpus of the trust or institution shall not be included in the total income of the recipient. In the given case, there is a specific declaration by the temple authorities that the contributions being put in the hundi (charity box) would form part of the corpus of the trust fund. Therefore, it is possible to take a view that those who put the contributions in the hundi give a tacit declaration that the contributions would form part of the corpus. Hence, a view can be taken that such contributions shall not be included in the total income of the recipient trust.

Further, it may be noted that the provision relating to taxability of anonymous donations under section 115BBC does not apply to voluntary contributions received by a trust or institution created or established wholly for religious purposes.

(3) Conditions for applicability of sections 11 & 12 [Section 12A]

(i) Conditions to be satisfied and the assessment year from which exemption would be available: The exemption provisions contained in section 11 and 12 as explained above shall not apply in relation to the income of any trust or institution unless the following conditions are satisfied:

(a) In respect an application for registration of trust was made before 1.6.2007, the requirement was that such application had to be made one year from the date of creation of the trust and the exemption provisions of section 11 and 12 applied from the date of creation of the trust or establishment of the institution [Section 12A(1)].

(b) This requirement of filing an application for registration under section 12A within one year of creation of the religious or charitable trust or institution has been removed in respect of applications made on or after 1.6.2007. The application can be filed at any time now.

(c) Accordingly, in respect of applications filed in the prescribed form to the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner on or after 1st June, 2007, the provisions of sections 11 and 12 would apply from the assessment year relevant to the financial year in which the application is made i.e., the exemption would be available only with effect from the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which the application is filed. It would not be available in respect of any earlier assessment year [Section 12A(2)].

(d) Thus, under section 12A, a trust or an institution can claim exemption under sections 11 and 12 only after registration under section 12AA has been granted. Also, in case of trusts or institutions which apply for registration after 1st June, 2007, the registration shall be effective only prospectively.

(ii) Fresh registration of a trust in the event of adoption or undertaking modifications of the objects after the registration has been granted [Section 12A(ab)]: Where a trust or an institution has been granted registration under section 12AA or has obtained registration at any time under section 12A [as it stood before its amendment by the Finance (No. 2) Act, 1996] and, subsequently, it has adopted or undertaken modifications of the objects which do not conform to the conditions of registration, it shall be required to obtain fresh registration by making an application within a period of thirty days from the date of such adoption or modification of the objects, to the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, in the prescribed form and manner.

(iii) Circumstance when exemption would be granted for an earlier assessment year:

Non-application of registration for the period prior to the year of registration causes genuine hardship to charitable organisations. On account of non-registration, tax liability gets attracted in those years even though they may otherwise be eligible for exemption due to compliance with other substantive conditions. Further, condonation of delay in seeking registration is also not permitted. Therefore, three provisos have been inserted in section 12A by the Finance (No.2) Act, 2014, in order to remove the genuine hardship and provide relief to the trusts.

In case where a trust or institution has been granted registration under section 12AA, the benefit of sections 11 and 12 shall be available in respect of any income derived from property held under trust in any assessment proceeding for an earlier assessment year which is pending before the Assessing Officer as on the date of such registration.

(a) Condition for grant of such exemption:

The objects and activities of such trust or institution in the relevant earlier assessment year should be the same as those on the basis of which such registration has been granted.

(b) Reassessment proceedings not to be initiated for earlier years due to reason of non-registration

No action for reopening of an assessment under section 147 shall be taken by the Assessing Officer in the case of such trust or institution for any assessment year preceding the first assessment year for which the registration applies, merely for the reason that such trust or institution has not obtained the registration under section 12AA for the said assessment year.

(c) Non-availability of above benefits to a trust or institution in certain cases

The above benefits would, however, not be available in case of any trust or institution which at any time had applied for registration and the same was denied or a registration granted to it was cancelled at any time under section 12AA.

ILLUSTRATION 7

Can a trust created for charitable purposes in April 2019, having filed application for registration as per section 12A on 11.4.2020, claim benefits of sections 11 and 12 from Assessment Year 2020-21?

SOLUTION

In respect of applications filed on or after 1st June, 2007, the provisions of sections 11 and 12 shall apply from the assessment year relevant to the financial year in which the application is made i.e., the exemption would be available only with effect from the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which the application is filed. It would not be available in respect of any earlier assessment year.

Therefore, since the trust has filed application for registration only on 11.4.2020, it cannot claim benefit of sections 11 and 12 from A.Y.2020-21. Assuming that the registration has been granted under section 12AA, the exemption would be available only from the A.Y. 2021-22, being the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which application is filed [i.e., P.Y. 2020-21].

However, where a trust has been granted registration under section 12AA in the P.Y. 2020-21, the benefit of sections 11 and 12 shall be available in respect of any income derived from property held under trust for assessment year 2020-21, being the assessment year preceding the assessment year in which application is filed i.e., A.Y.2021-22, if assessment proceedings in respect of that year is pending before the Assessing Officer as on the date of such registration.

It may be noted that exemption in respect of an earlier assessment year can be claimed only if the objects and activities of such trust or institution in the relevant earlier assessment year are the same as those on the basis of which such registration has been granted.

ILLUSTRATION 8

Help All, a trust created on 1st January, 2020 for providing relief to the poor, applied for registration under section 12A on 1st March, 2020. On that date, its corpus fund comprised only of the initial contribution made by the trustees. The Commissioner denied registration solely on the ground that the trust had not commenced any charitable activity, due to which he could not satisfy himself about the genuineness of the trust. Is the ground for denial of registration by the Commissioner justified in this case? Discuss.

SOLUTION

The Karnataka High Court, in DIT (Exemptions) v. Meenakshi Amma Endowment Trust (2013) 354 ITR 219, opined that an application under section 12A for registration of the trust can be sought even within a week of its formation. The activities carried on by the trust are to be seen in a case where the registration is sought much later after formation of the trust.

The High Court further observed that the corpus fund included contribution made by the trustees only, which indicated that the trustees were contributing the funds by themselves in a humble way and were intending to commence charitable activities. The assessee-trust had not also collected any donation for the activities of the trust, by the time its application came up for consideration before them. When the application for registration was made, the trust, therefore, did not have sufficient funds for commencement of its activities.

The High Court observed that, with the money available with the trust, it cannot be expected to carry out activity of charity immediately. Consequently, in such a case, it cannot be concluded that the trust has not intended to do any activity of charity. In such a situation, where application is made shortly after formation of the trust, the objects of the trust as mentioned in the trust deed have to be taken into consideration by the authorities for satisfying themselves about the genuineness of the trust and not the activities carried on by it. Later on, if it is found from the subsequent returns filed by the trust, that it is not carrying on any charitable activity, it would be open to the concerned authorities to withdraw the registration granted or cancel the registration as per the provisions of section 12AA(3).

Applying the rationale of the above ruling, the Commissioner cannot deny registration solely on the ground that the trust had not commenced any charitable activity in this case, since the trust has applied for registration under section 12A within two months after its formation and the corpus fund comprised only of contribution made by the trustees. The Commissioner has to take into consideration the objects of the trust as mentioned in the trust deed to satisfy itself about the genuineness of the trust.

(iv) Audit - Where the total income of the trust without giving effect to the provisions of section 11 and 12 exceeds the maximum amount which is not chargeable to income-tax in any previous year, the accounts of the trust must be audited by a chartered accountant and the report of such audit in the prescribed form duly signed and verified by such accountant and setting forth such prescribed particulars, should be furnished along with the return.

(v) Mandatory filing of return: In order to provide further clarity, section 12A provides for further condition that the person in receipt of the income chargeable to income-tax shall furnish the return of income within the time allowed under section 139(4A) of the Act.

(4) Procedure for Registration [Section 12AA] - The Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, on receipt of an application for registration of a trust or institution made under section 12A(1) shall proceed as follows :

(i) He would call for such documents or information from the trust or institution as he thinks necessary in order to satisfy himself about –

(a) the genuineness of activities of the trust or institution and

(b) the compliance of such requirements of any other law for the time being in force by the trust or institution as are material for the purpose of achieving its objects and may also make such enquiries as he may deem necessary in this behalf.

(ii) After satisfying himself about the objects of the trust or institution and the genuineness of its activities as required in (i)(a) above and compliance of the requirements under (i)(b) above, he shall pass an order in writing registering the trust or institution.

(iii) If he is not satisfied, he shall pass an order in writing refusing to register the trust or institution.

(iv) A copy of such an order issued under (ii) or (iii) above shall be sent to the applicant. However, an order under (iii) shall not be passed unless the applicant has been given a reasonable opportunity of being heard.

(v) Every order granting or refusing registration shall be passed within six months from the end of the month in which the application for registration of trust or institution is received by the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner.

(vi) Where a trust or an institution has been granted registration and subsequently, if the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax is satisfied that the activities of any trust or institution are not genuine or are not being carried out in accordance with the objects of the trust or institution, he can pass an order in writing canceling the registration granted under section 12AA and 12A (as it stood before its amendment by the Finance (No.2) Act, 1996). However, the trust or institution should be given a reasonable opportunity of being heard.

(vii) Any order passed by the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax under section 12AA refusing registration is appealable under section 253 to the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal.

(viii) Where a trust or an institution has been granted registration, and subsequently it is noticed that its activities are being carried out in such a manner that,—

(a) its income does not enure for the benefit of general public;

(b) it is for benefit of any particular religious community or caste;

(c) any income or property of the trust is applied for benefit of specified persons like author of trust, trustees etc.; or

(d) its funds are invested in prohibited modes,

then, the Principal Commissioner or the Commissioner may cancel the registration of such trust or institution. The Commissioner may also cancel the registration of such trust or institution, if it has not complied with the requirement of any other law and the order, direction or decree, by whatever name called, holding that such non-compliance has occurred, has either not been disputed or has attained finality. However, if the trust or institution proves that there was a reasonable cause for the activities to be carried out in the above manner, the registration shall not be cancelled.

ILLUSTRATION 9

Educare, a trust created with the objective of promoting primary education in rural areas, filed an application for registration under section 12A on 30th April, 2019. Since the application was not disposed of by the Commissioner on or before 31st October, 2019 as required under section 12AA(2), the trust contended that it was deemed to be registered as per the provisions of section 12AA(1). Examine the correctness of contention of the trust.

SOLUTION

As per the provisions of section 12AA(2), every order granting or refusing registration under section 12AA(1)(b), shall be passed by the registering authority before the expiry of six months from the end of the month in which the application was received under section 12A(1)(a) or section 12A(1)(aa).

The Supreme Court, in CIT v. Society for Promotion of Education (2016) 382 ITR 6, held that once an application under section 12AA was made and the same was not responded to within six months, the trust would be deemed as registered with effect from the date following the expiry of the six month period.

Applying the rationale of the above Supreme Court ruling in this case, the trust would be deemed as registered with effect from 1.11.2019. The contention that the trust is deemed to be registered, since its application for registration has not been disposed of within six months is, therefore, correct.

Note: The benefit of exemption under section 11 and 12 would be available from the A.Y. 2020-21, being the assessment year relevant to the financial year in which such application is made.

ILLUSTRATION 10

A charitable trust, whose income can be exempt under section 11 of the Income-tax Act, 1961, was formed on 1st March, 2017. For the accounting year ended 31st March, 2020, it earned an income of ₹ 3,60,000.

It filed with the Commissioner of Income-tax its application for registration on 31st August, 2019 explaining that for good and sufficient reasons, it was prevented from filing the application for so long.

Examine -

(i) by which date the application for registration should have been filed;

(ii) whether such an application could have been filed before the formation of the trust;

(iii) in the absence of an order of registration from the Commissioner, can the trust be deemed to be registered;

(iv) the steps to be taken by the trust to secure exemption from income-tax;

(v) whether a certificate of registration once granted can be cancelled and if so, the conditions there for.

SOLUTION

(i) The requirement of filing an application for registration under section 12A within one year of creation of the trust has been removed. The application can be filed at any time now. Accordingly, the provisions of sections 11 and 12 would apply from the assessment year relevant to the financial year in which the application is made i.e. the exemption would be available only with effect from the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which the application was filed.

However, where registration has been granted to the trust under section 12AA and on the said date, assessment proceedings relating to earlier assessment years are pending, then, the benefit of sections 11 and 12 shall be available in respect of income derived from property held under trust in those years, provided the objects and activities of the trust remain unchanged.

(ii) No. The application for registration under section 12A cannot be filed before the formation of the trust.

(iii) As per section 12AA(2), every order granting or refusing registration should be passed before the expiry of 6 months from the end of the month in which the application was received under section 12A. The Supreme Court, in CIT v. Society for Promotion of Education (2016) 382 ITR 6, held that the trust would be deemed as registered if the application under section 12AA is not disposed of within the stipulated period of six months. Therefore, in this case, the trust would be deemed as registered with effect from 1st March, 2020. The benefit of exemption under section 11 and 12 would be available from A.Y. 2020-21, being the assessment year relevant to the financial year in which the application is made.

(iv) The following are the steps to be taken by the trust to secure exemption from income-tax:

(1) The trust should be registered with the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax under section 12AA.

(2) The accounts of the trust for the previous year must be audited by a Chartered Accountant if its total income without giving effect to the provisions of section 11 and section 12 exceeds the maximum amount which is not chargeable to tax. The audit report in the prescribed form, duly signed and verified by the Chartered Accountant, should be furnished along with the return of income of the trust for the relevant assessment year.

(3) At least 85% of the income is required to be applied for the approved purposes.

(4) The unapplied income and the money accumulated or set apart should be invested or deposited in the specified forms or modes, after filing statement in Form 10 on or before the due date of filing return of income specified under section 139(1).

(v) Yes, the certificate of registration can be cancelled by the Commissioner. According to section 12AA, if the Commissioner is satisfied that the activities of the trust are not genuine or are not being carried out in accordance with the objects of the trust, he shall, after giving the trust a reasonable opportunity of being heard, pass an order in writing cancelling the registration of the trust.

Further, section 12AA(4) provides that where a trust or an institution has been granted registration, and subsequently it is noticed that its activities are being carried out in such a manner that,—

(i) its income does not enure for the benefit of general public;

(ii) it is for benefit of any particular religious community or caste;

(iii) any income or property of the trust is applied for benefit of specified persons like author of trust, trustees etc.; or

(iv) its funds are invested in prohibited modes,

then, the Commissioner may cancel the registration of such trust or institution. The Commissioner may also cancel the registration of such trust or institution, if it has not complied with the requirement of any other law and the order, direction or decree, by whatever name called, holding that such non-compliance has occurred, has either not been disputed or has attained finality. However, if the trust or institution proves that there was a reasonable cause for the activities to be carried out in the above manner, the registration shall not be cancelled.

(5) Denial of Exemption [Section 13]

(i) Income not eligible for exemption under sections 11 and 12

(a) Income from property held under a trust for private religious purposes - Where the property is held under a trust for private religious purposes, no part of the income will be exempt if it does not ensure for the benefit of the public [Section 13(1)(a)].

(b) Income from trust established for benefit of any particular religious community or caste - Where a trust has been established for the benefit of any particular religious community or caste, the income thereof will not be eligible for exemption. However, a trust or institution created or established for the benefit of scheduled caste, backward classes, scheduled tribes or women and children shall not be treated as a trust or institution created or established for the benefit of a religious community or caste within the meaning of section 13(1)(b).

(c) Income of trust enuring for the benefit of any person referred to in section 13(3) - Where the trust or the institution has been created or established after 31.3.1962, if any part of its income enures directly or indirectly for the benefit of any person referred to in section 13(3).

Irrespective of the date of the creation of the trust or the establishment of the institution, if any part of its income or any property belonging to it during the relevant previous year is used or applied directly or indirectly for the benefit of any person referred to in section 13(3) [Section 13(1)(c)].

(d) Deposit or investment of funds in impermissible modes - Any income of a trust or institution, if –

(1) its funds are invested or deposited otherwise than in the forms or modes specified in section 11(5);

(2) it holds shares in a company other than -

(i) a public sector company; or

(ii) shares prescribed as a form or mode of investment under section 11(5)(xii).

However, these restrictions do not apply in respect of :

(a) any assets forming part of corpus of the trust as on 1-6-1973.

(b) any accretion to the corpus shares by way of bonus shares allotted to the trust.

(c) debentures issued by or on behalf of any company or corporation and acquired by the trust before March 1, 1983.

(d) any asset not covered under section 11(5), where such asset is held for not more than one year from the end of the previous year in which such asset is acquired.

(e) any funds representing the profits and gains of business, being profits and gains of any previous year relevant to the assessment year 1984-85 or any subsequent assessment year. However, such relaxation of the restriction will be denied unless the trust keeps separate accounts for the business. As already noted, subject to certain exceptions, such business profits are no longer eligible for exemption under section 11.

(ii) Prohibited use or application - We have noted above that when any part of the income or any property of the trust whenever created, is, during the previous year, used or applied directly, for the benefit of any person referred to in section 13(3), the denial of exemption operates. Section 13(2) specifies a few particular instances where the income or the property is to be deemed to have been used for the benefit of a person referred to in section 13(3). It should be noted that those particular instances do not in any way restrict the general meaning of the expression "used or applied for the benefit of a person". The provisions of section 13(2) are as follows:

The income or the property of the trust or institution or any part of such income or property is to be deemed to have been used or applied for the benefit of a person referred to in section 13(3) in the following cases:

(a) Loan without adequate interest or adequate security - If any part of the income or the property of the trust or institution is or continues to be lent to any person referred to in section 13(3) for any period during the previous year without either adequate security or adequate interest or both.

(b) Allowing use of property without adequate rent - If any land, building or other property of the trust or institution is or continues to be, made available, for the use of any person referred to in section 13(3) for any period during the previous year without charging adequate rent or other compensation.

(c) Excess payment for services - If any amount is paid out of the resources of the trust or institution to any of the persons referred to in section 13(3) for services rendered to the trust or institution but such amount is in excess of a reasonable sum payable for such services.

(d) Inadequate remuneration for services rendered - If the services of the trust or institution are made available to any person referred to section 13(3) without adequate remuneration or other compensation.

(e) Excess payment for purchase of property - If any share, security or other property is purchased by or on behalf of the trust or institution from any person referred to in section 13(3) during the previous year for a consideration which is more than adequate.

(f) Inadequate consideration for property sold - If any share, security or other property is sold by or on behalf of the trust or institution to any person referred to in section 13(3) during the previous year for a consideration which is less than adequate.

(g) Diversion of income or property exceeding ₹ 1,000 - If any income or property of the trust or institution is diverted during the previous year in favour of any person referred to in section 13(3) provided the aggregate value of such income and property diverted exceeds ₹ 1,000.

(h) Investment in substantial interest concerns - If any funds of the trust or institution are, or continue to remain, invested for any period during the previous year in any concern in which any person referred to in section 13(3) has a substantial interest.

Section 13(4) provides some respite where the aggregate of the funds invested in the said concern does not exceed five per cent of the capital of that concern. In such a case, the exemption under section 11 will be denied only in relation to such income as arises out of the said investment.

(iii) Exemption not to be denied to charitable trusts providing educational or medical facilities to specified persons [Section 13(6)] - A charitable or religious trust running an educational institution or a medical institution or a hospital shall not be denied the benefit of exemption under section 11 merely due to the reason that the benefit of educational or medical facilities have been provided to the specified persons referred to in section 13(3). However, the value of such facilities provided to such specified persons either free of cost or at a concessional rate would be deemed to be the income of the trust. Such income would not be eligible for exemption under section 11.

(iv) Anonymous donations [Section 13(7)] - The exemption provisions contained in section 11 or section 12 shall not be applicable in respect of any anonymous donation referred to in section 115BBC on which tax is payable in accordance with the provisions of that section. For example, section 11(1)(d) provides that any income in the form of voluntary contributions made with a specific direction that they shall form part of the corpus of the trust or institution shall not be included in the total income of such trust/institution for the relevant previous year.

However, if a trust or institution established wholly for charitable purposes receives an anonymous donation with a specific direction that the donation shall form part of the corpus of the trust or institution, such anonymous donation would not be exempt by virtue of section 11(1)(d). It would be taxable at 30% as provided in section 115BBC.

(v) Exemption to be denied to a charitable trust having its main object as "advancement of any other object of general public utility" if its trading receipts exceed the specified threshold irrespective of withdrawal of approval or cancellation of registration or rescindment of notification [Section 13(8)]

(a) Under sections 11 and 12, income of any charitable trust or institution is exempt if such income is applied for charitable purposes in India and such institution is registered under section 12AA.

(b) The definition of "charitable purpose" under section 2(15) provides that the advancement of any other object of general public utility shall not be a charitable purpose, if it involves the carrying on of any activity in the nature of trade, commerce or business, or any activity of rendering any service in relation to any trade, commerce or business, for a cess or fee or any other consideration, irrespective of the nature of use or application, or retention, of the income from such activity, unless,-

(1) such activity is undertaken in the course of actual carrying out of such advancement of any other object of general public utility; and

(2) the aggregate receipts from such activity or activities, during the previous year, does not exceed 20% of the total receipts, of the trust or institution undertaking such activity or activities, for the previous year .

(c) Thus, a charitable trust or institution pursuing "advancement of object of general public utility" may be a charitable trust in one year and not a charitable trust in another year depending on the percentage of receipts from commercial activities vis-à-vis its total receipts.

(d) Therefore, no exemption would be available to a trust or institution for the previous year in which the receipts from commercial activities exceed 20% of the total receipts of that year. However, this temporary excess in one year may not be treated as altering the very nature of the trust or institution so as to lead to cancellation of registration or withdrawal of approval or rescinding of notification issued in respect of trust or institution.

(e) Therefore, there is need to ensure that if the purpose of a trust or institution does not remain charitable in a previous year on account of the commercial receipts exceeding the specified percentage of total receipts, then, such trust or institution would not be entitled to get benefit of exemption in respect of its income for that previous year in which the commercial receipts exceed the specified percentage of total receipts. The denial of exemption would be compulsory by operation of law and would not be dependent on any approval being withdrawn or registration being cancelled or a notification being rescinded.

(f) Accordingly, section 13(8) ensures that such trust and institution does not get benefit of tax exemption under section 11 or 12 in the year in which its receipts from commercial activities exceed the specified percentage of total receipts, whether or not the registration or approval granted or notification issued is cancelled, withdrawn or rescinded in respect of such trust or institution.

Clarification regarding cancellation of registration u/s 12AA of the Income-tax Act, 1961 in certain circumstances [Circular No - 21/2016 dated: May 27, 2016]:

The CBDT has clarified that it shall not be mandatory to cancel the registration already granted u/s 12AA to a charitable institution merely on the ground that the cut-off specified (20% of the total receipts) in the proviso to section 2(15) is exceeded in a particular year without there being any change in the nature of activities of the institution.

If in any particular year, the specified cut-off is exceeded, the tax exemption would be denied to the institution in that year and cancellation of registration would not be mandatory unless such cancellation becomes necessary on the ground(s) prescribed under the Act.

With the introduction of Chapter XII-EB in the Act vide Finance Act, 2016, prescribing special provisions relating to tax on accreted income of certain trusts and institutions, cancellation of registration granted under section 12AA may lead to a charitable institution getting hit by sub-section (3) of section 115TD and becoming liable to tax on accreted income. The cancellation of registration without justifiable reasons may, therefore, cause additional hardship to an assessee-institution due to attraction of tax-liability on accreted income. The field authorities are, therefore, advised not to cancel the registration of a charitable institution granted u/s 12AA just because the proviso to section 2(15) comes into play. The process for cancellation of registration is to be initiated strictly in accordance with section 12AA(3) and 12AA(4) after carefully examining the applicability of these provisions

(vi) Non-submission of statement in prescribed form on or before the due date of filing return of income under section 139(1) [Section 13(9)] - In case the statement in Form 10 is not submitted on or before the due date of filing return of income under section 139(1), then, the benefit of accumulation would not be available and such income would be taxable at the applicable rate. Further, the benefit of accumulation would also not be available if return of income is not furnished on or before the due date of filing return of income specified in section 139(1).

(vii) Prohibited category of persons - Section 13(3) gives the list of persons, use or application of the income or property of a trust for whose direct or indirect benefit results in a denial of the exemption contemplated in section 11 for a charitable or religious trust or institution. The said persons are:

(1) The author of the trust or the founder of the institution.

(2) Any person who has made a substantial contribution to the trust or institution, that is, any person whose total contribution up to the end of the relevant previous year exceeds ₹ 50,000.

(3) Where the author, founder or the person making a substantial contribution is a HUF, any member of the family.

(4) Any trustee of the trust or manager (by whatever name called) of the institution.

(5) Any relative of any such author, founder, person, member, trustee or manager as referred to above.

(6) Any concern in which any of the persons referred to in clauses (1) to (5) above has a substantial interest.

Relative - The expression "relative", in relation to an individual, means -

(a) spouse of the individual;

(b) brother or sister of the individual;

(c) brother or sister of the spouse of the individual;

(d) any lineal ascendant or descendant of the individual;

(e) any lineal ascendant or descendant of the spouse of the individual;

(f) spouse of a person referred to in (b), (c), (d) or (e) above;

(g) any lineal descendant of a brother or sister of either the individual or the spouse of the individual;

Substantial interest in a concern - Section 13(2)(h), section 13(3) and section 13(4) refers to cases where a person has a substantial interest in a concern. These references occur where the "Prohibited use or application" and "Prohibited category of persons" have been described. The circumstances in which a person shall be deemed to have a substantial interest in a concern, have been laid down in Explanation 3 to section 13.

Circumstances when a person is deemed to have substantial interest in a concern

Where the concern is a company

If equity shares carrying 20% or more of voting power are beneficially owned by such person or partly by such person and partly by one or more of the other persons referred to in section 13(3) at any time during the P.Y.

In any other case

If such person is entitled, or such person and one or more of the person referred to in section 13(3) are entitled in the aggregate, to receive 20% or more profit of such concern at any time during the P.Y.

(6) Anonymous Donations received by Charitable Trusts/Institutions to be subject to tax [Section 115BBC]

(i) As per the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961, tax exemption under section 10(23C) and section 11 are available to certain entities, as briefed in the table below, on fulfillment of the conditions prescribed under the relevant sections –

Entity	Applicable section
Charitable or religious trusts/institutions	11
Universities and other educational institutions	10(23C)(iiiad) and (vi)
Hospitals and other medical institutions	10(23C) (iiiae) and (via)
Notified funds or institutions established for charitable purposes	10(23C)(iv)
Notified trusts or institutions established wholly for public religious purposes or wholly for public religious and charitable purposes	10(23C)(v)

(ii) Section 115BBC has been inserted to tax anonymous donations received by the above entities at 30%.

(iii) In order to provide relief to these trusts and institutions and to reduce their compliance burden, an exemption limit has been introduced, and only the anonymous donations in excess of this limit would be subject to tax@30% under section 115BBC.

(iv) The exemption limit is the higher of the following –

(1) 5% of the total donations received by the assessee; or

(2) ₹ 1 lakh.

(v) The total tax payable by such institutions would be –

(1) tax@30% on anonymous donations exceeding the exemption limit as calculated above; and

(2) tax on the balance income i.e. total income as reduced by the anonymous donations which have been subject to tax@30% under section 115BBC.

(vi) The following table illustrates the calculation of anonymous donations liable to tax @30% under section 115BBC –

I	II	III	IV	V	VI
Situation	Total donations during the year (₹)	Anonymous donations received during the year (₹)	Exemption (₹)	Anonymous donations taxable@30% (₹)	Donations subject to tax at normal rates # (₹)
A	15,00,000	4,00,000	1,00,000	3,00,000	12,00,000
B	30,00,000	7,00,000	1,50,000	5,50,000	24,50,000
C	40,00,000	10,00,000	2,00,000	8,00,000	32,00,000

It is possible to take a view that the remaining donations reflected in Column VI which are taxable at normal rates would be eligible for application of income and thereby, the benefit of exemption under section 11 would apply.

(vii) For this purpose, “anonymous donation” means any voluntary contribution referred to in section 2(24)(iia), where the person receiving such contribution does not maintain a record of the identity indicating the name and address of the person making such contribution and such other particulars as may be prescribed.

(viii) However, the above provision does not apply to a trust or institution created or established wholly for religious purposes.

(ix) Further, anonymous donations to trusts/institutions created or established wholly for religious and charitable purposes (i.e. partly charitable and partly religious institutions/trusts) would be taxed only if such anonymous donation is made with a specific direction that such donation is for any university or other educational institution or any hospital or other medical institution run by such trust or institution. Other anonymous donations received by such trusts/institutions are not taxable.

(x) Section 13(7) provides that the exemption provisions contained in section 11 or section 12 shall not be applicable in respect of any anonymous donation referred to in section 115BBC on which tax is payable in accordance with the provisions of that section.

(xi) For example, section 11(1)(d) provides that any income in the form of voluntary contributions made with a specific direction that they shall form part of the corpus of the trust or institution shall not be included in the total income of such trust/institution for the relevant previous year. However, if a trust or institution established wholly for charitable purposes receives an anonymous donation with a specific direction that the donation shall form part of the corpus of the trust or institution, such anonymous donation would not be exempt by virtue of section 11(1)(d). It would be taxable at 30% as provided in section 115BBC.

(xii) Similarly, section 10(23C) provides that any anonymous donation referred to in section 115BBC on which tax is payable in accordance with the provisions of the said section shall be included in the total income. Consequently, sections 10(23C) and 13 provide that any income by way of any anonymous donation which is taxable under the provisions of section 115BBC shall not be excluded from the total income of the trust or institution.

ILLUSTRATION 11

The following trusts claim that anonymous donations received by them during the financial year 2019-20 are not liable to tax under section 115BBC:

(i) A charitable trust referred to in section 11 which applied the entire amount of anonymous donations for purposes of the trust during the relevant financial year.

(ii) A trust established wholly for religious purposes which applied 85% of the amount of anonymous donations for the purposes of the objects of the trust during the relevant financial year.

Examine the validity of the claim made by the trusts.

SOLUTION

(i) Section 115BBC provides for levy of tax @ 30% on anonymous donation received by, inter alia, charitable trusts or institutions referred to in section 11 in the following manner:

(a) the amount of income-tax calculated @30% on the aggregate of anonymous donations received in excess of 5% of the total donations received by the assessee or one lakh rupees, whichever is higher; and

(b) the amount of income-tax with which the assessee would have been chargeable had his total income been reduced by the aggregate of the anonymous donations received in excess of 5% of the total donations received by the assessee or ₹ 1 lakh, as the case may be.

Further, section 13(7) provides that the exemption provisions contained in sections 11 and 12 shall not be applicable in respect of any anonymous donation liable to tax under section 115BBC. As such, application of the anonymous donations received by the charitable trust for charitable purposes does not confer any exemption from tax. Therefore, the claim for non-taxability under section 115BBC of anonymous donations received by the charitable trust is not valid in law.

However, a view may be taken that anonymous donation upto higher of 5% of total donations or ₹ 1 lakh, which is taxable at normal rates would be eligible for application of income and thereby, the benefit of exemption under section 11 would apply.

(ii) Section 115BBC(2) provides that the provisions contained in section 115BBC(1) relating to the taxability of anonymous donations are not applicable to any trust or institution created or established wholly for religious purposes. As such, the trust established wholly for religious purposes is not liable to be taxed in respect of the anonymous donations received by it. Therefore, the claim made by the trust is valid in law. The application or non-application of such anonymous donation for the purposes of trust during the relevant financial year is not germane to the issue of taxability under section 115BBC.

13.4 TAX ON ACCRETED INCOME OF CERTAIN TRUSTS AND INSTITUTIONS [CHAPTER XII-EB]

(1) Background for introduction of Exit Tax

(i) As per section 2(24), "income" includes any voluntary contribution received by a charitable trust or institution or a fund.

(ii) Sections 11 and 12 provide exemption to trusts or institutions in respect of income derived from property held under trust and voluntary contributions, subject to the conditions stipulated thereunder.

(iii) The exemption is subject to the condition that the income derived from property held under trust should be applied for charitable purposes; and where such income cannot be applied during the previous year, it has to be accumulated and invested in the modes prescribed and applied for such purposes in accordance with specified conditions.

(iv) If the accumulated income is not applied in accordance with the conditions provided in the said section within a specified time, then such income is deemed to be taxable income of the trust or the institution. Section 12AA provides for registration of the trust or institution which entitles them to be able to get the benefit of sections 11 and 12. It also provides the circumstances under which the registration can be cancelled. Section 13 of the Act provides for the circumstances under which exemption under section 11 or 12 in respect of whole or part of income would not be available to a trust or institution.

(v) A society or a company or a trust or an institution carrying on charitable activity may –

(1) voluntarily wind up its activities and dissolve; or

(2) merge with any other charitable or non-charitable institution; or

(3) convert into a non-charitable organization.

There is, however, no specific provision in the income-tax law as to how the assets of such a charitable institution should be dealt with.

(vi) Under section 11, certain amount of income of prior period can be brought to tax on failure of certain conditions. However, there is no provision in the Income-tax Act, 1961, which ensure that the corpus and asset base of the trust accreted over a period of time, with promise of it being used for charitable purpose, continues to be utilised for charitable purposes and is not used for any other purpose.

(vii) Consequently, it is always possible for charitable institutions to transfer assets to a non-charitable institution.

(viii) In order to ensure that the benefit conferred over a period of time by way of exemption is not misused and to plug the gap in law that allows the charitable trusts having built up corpus/wealth through exemptions being converted into non-charitable organisation with no tax consequences, Chapter XII-EB imposes additional income-tax in the nature of an exit tax when the organization is converted into a non-charitable organization or gets merged with a non-charitable organization or does not transfer the assets to another charitable organisation.

(2) Salient Features:

	Section	Provision
(i)	115TD(1)	Circumstances where levy of tax on accreted income is attracted: The accreted income of a trust or institution registered under section 12AA shall be taxable at the maximum marginal rate (@34.944%) on – (1) conversion of the trust or institution into a form not eligible for grant of registration under section 12AA; or (2) merger with an entity not having similar objects and registered under section 12AA; or (3) non-distribution of assets on dissolution to any charitable institution registered under section 12AA or approved under section 10(23C) within a period of 12 months from the end of the month in which the dissolution takes place. This levy of exit tax shall be in addition to income chargeable in the hands of the entity.
(ii)	115TD(3)	Deemed conversion into non-eligible form - Circumstances: A trust or an institution shall be deemed to have been converted into any form not eligible for registration under section 12AA in a previous year, if,— (i) the registration granted to it under section 12AA has been cancelled; or (ii) it has adopted or undertaken modification of its objects which do not conform to the conditions of registration and,— (a) it has not applied for fresh registration under section 12AA in the said previous year; or (b) it has filed application for fresh registration under section 12AA but the said application has been rejected.
(iii)	115TD(2)	Meaning of Accreted Income : Aggregate FMV of total assets as on the specified date Less Total liability computed in accordance with the prescribed method of valuation [See Method of Valuation prescribed by CBDT given at the end of para 13.4]

Notes –

(1) Accreted income attributable to any asset which is established to have been directly acquired by the trust or institution out of its agricultural income exempt under section 10(1) would be ignored. Liability, in relation to such asset, also has to be ignored.

(2) Accreted income attributable to any asset acquired by the trust or institution during the period beginning from the date of its creation or establishment and ending on the date from which the registration under section 12AA became effective[2], if the trust or institution has not been allowed any benefit of sections 11 and 12 during the said period, would be ignored. Liability, in relation to such asset, also has to be ignored.

(3) The asset and the liability of the charitable organisation which have been transferred on dissolution to another charitable trust or institution registered under section 12AA or a fund/ institution/ trust/ university/ educational institution/ hospital/ medical institution approved under section 10(23C) within specified time have to be ignored while calculating accreted income.

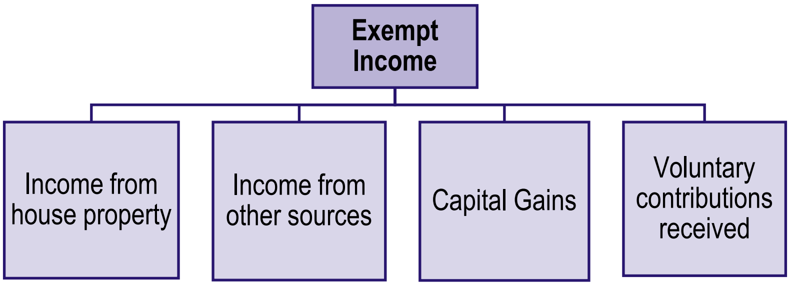
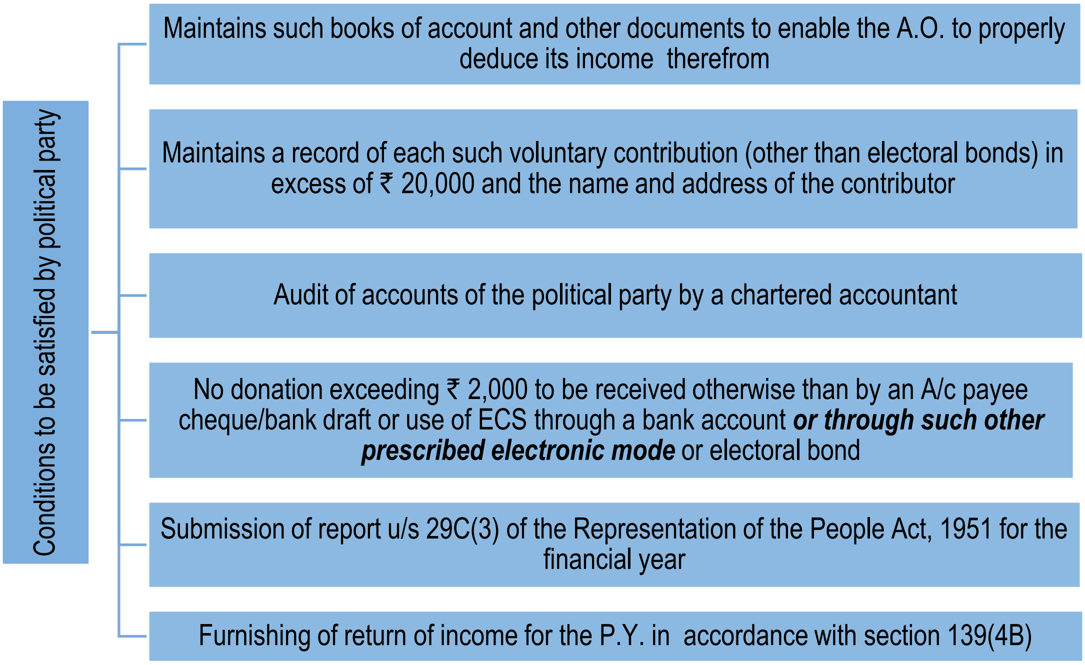
13.5 EXEMPTION TO POLITICAL PARTIES [SECTION 13A]

Section 13A of the Income-tax Act, 1961 grants exemption from tax to political parties in respect of their income specified below:



Exempt Income
Income from house property
Income from other sources
Capital Gains
Voluntary contributions received

The aforesaid categories of income would qualify for exemption provided additional conditions for availing the benefit of the said section which are as under are met :



Conditions to be satisfied by political party

- Maintains such books of account and other documents to enable the A.O. to properly deduce its income therefrom
- Maintains a record of each such voluntary contribution (other than electoral bonds) in excess of ₹ 20,000 and the name and address of the contributor
- Audit of accounts of the political party by a chartered accountant
- No donation exceeding ₹ 2,000 to be received otherwise than by an A/c payee cheque/bank draft or use of ECS through a bank account or through such other prescribed electronic mode or electoral bond
- Submission of report u/s 29C(3) of the Representation of the People Act, 1951 for the financial year
- Furnishing of return of income for the P.Y. in accordance with section 139(4B)

For the purposes of this section, “political party” means a political party registered under section 29A of the Representation of the People Act, 1951.

ILLUSTRATION 12

Explain in the context of provisions of the Act, whether the income derived during the year ended on 31.03.2020 in following case shall be subject to tax in the A.Y. 2020-21:

A political party, duly registered under section 29A of the Representation of the People Act, 1951, received rent of ₹ 1,25,000 per month of one of its building let out to a bank from 01.06.2019.

SOLUTION

Rent received by the political party from the bank is an income chargeable under the head "Income from house property". However, according to the provisions of section 13A, income from, inter alia, house property shall not be included in total income of a political party registered under section 29A of the Representation of the People Act, 1951, provided the political party fulfils the conditions as specified therein including furnishing a return of income for the previous year in accordance with the provisions of section 139(4B) on or before the due date under section 139. Therefore, if the stipulated conditions are fulfilled by the political party, rent of ₹ 1,25,000 per month received by the registered political party from letting out of its building to a bank would not be included in its total income.

13.6 EXEMPTION FOR VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTIONS RECEIVED BY ELECTORAL TRUSTS [SECTION 13B]

(1) Any voluntary contribution received by an electoral trust (as may be approved by the CBDT in accordance with the scheme to be made by the Central Government) shall be treated as its income under section 2(24), but shall be exempt under section 13B, if the trust distributes to a registered political party during the year, 95% of the aggregate donations received by it during the year along with the surplus if any, brought forward from any earlier previous year.

(2) Another condition for availing the benefit under this section is that the electoral trust should function in accordance with the rules made by the Central Government. Accordingly, the Central Government has notified Rule 17CA which provides that the following shall be the functions of an electoral trust referred to in section 13B –

(i) The electoral trust may receive voluntary contributions from

(a) an individual who is a citizen of India;

(b) a company which is registered in India; and

(c) a firm or Hindu undivided family or an Association of persons or a body of individuals, resident in India.

(ii) A receipt indicating the following shall be issued by the trust immediately on receipt of any contribution indicating the following:

(a) name and address of the contributor;

(b) Permanent account number of the contributor or passport number in the case of a citizen who is not a resident;

(c) amount and mode of contribution including name and branch of the Bank and date of receipt of such contribution;

(d) name of the electoral trust;

(e) Permanent account number of the electoral trust;

(f) date and number of approval by the prescribed authority; and

(g) Name and designation of the person issuing the receipt.

(iii) The electoral trust shall not accept contributions-

(a) from an individual who is not a citizen of India or from any foreign entity whether incorporated or not;

(b) from any other electoral trust which has been registered a company under section 25 of the Companies Act, 1956[3] and approved as an electoral trust under the Electoral Trusts Scheme, 2013;

(c) from a Government company as defined in section 2(45) of the Companies Act, 2013; and

(d) from a foreign source as defined in section 2(j) of the Foreign Contribution (Regulation) Act, 2010.

(iv) The electoral trust shall accept contributions only by way of an account payee cheque drawn on a bank or account payee bank draft or by electronic transfer to its bank account and shall not accept any contribution in cash.

(v) The electoral trust shall not accept any contribution without the PAN of the contributor, who is a resident and the passport number in the case of a citizen of India, who is not a resident.

(vi) A political party registered under section 29A of the Representation of the People Act, 1951 shall be an eligible political party and an electoral trust shall distribute funds only to the eligible political parties.

(vii) (a) The electoral trust may, for the purposes of managing its affairs, spend upto 5% of the total contributions received in a year subject to an aggregate limit of ₹ 5 lakh in the first year of incorporation and ₹ 3 lakh in subsequent years;

(b) the total contributions received in any financial year along with the surplus from any earlier financial year, if any, as reduced by the amount spent on managing its affairs, shall be the distributable contributions for the financial year;

(c) an electoral trust shall be required to distribute the distributable contributions received in a financial year, referred to in item (ii), to the eligible political parties before 31st March of the said financial year, subject to the condition that at least 95% of the total contributions received during the financial year along with the surplus brought forward from earlier financial year, if any, are distributed.

(viii) The trust shall obtain a receipt from the eligible political party indicating the name of the political party, its permanent account number, registration number, amount of fund received from the trust, date of the receipt and name and designation of person signing such receipt.

[3] Section 8 of the Companies Act, 2013

(ix) The electoral trust shall not utilize any contributions for the direct or indirect benefit of the members or contributors, or for any of the following persons, namely:

(a) the members (including members of its Executive Committee, Governing Committee or Board of Directors) of the electoral trust;

(b) any relative of such Members;

(c) where such member or contributor is a Hindu undivided family, a member of that Hindu undivided family;

(d) any person who has made a contribution to the trust;

(e) any person referred in section 13(3); and

(f) any concern in which any of the persons referred to in clauses (a),(b),(c),(d) and (e) has a substantial interest.

(x) (a) An electoral trust shall keep and maintain such books of account and other documents in respect of its receipts, distributions and expenditure as may enable the computation of its total income in accordance with the provisions of the Act;

(b) The electoral trust shall also maintain a list of persons from whom contributions have been received and to whom the same have been distributed, containing the name, address and permanent account number (PAN) of each such person along with the details of the amount and mode of its payment including the name and branch of the bank.

(xi) Every electoral trust shall get its accounts audited by an accountant as defined in the Explanation below section 288(2) and furnish the audit report in Form No.10BC along with particulars forming part of its Annexure, to the Commissioner of Income-tax or the Director of Income-tax, as the case may be, having jurisdiction over the electoral trust, on or before the due date specified for furnishing the return of income by a company under section 139.

(xii) An electoral trust shall maintain a regular record of proceedings of all meetings and decisions taken therein.

(xiii) Every electoral trust shall furnish a certified copy of list of contributors and a list of political parties, to whom sums were distributed in the manner prescribed in (vii) above, to the Commissioner of Income-tax or the Director of Income-tax, as the case may be, every year along with the audit report;

(xiv) Any change in the shareholders, subsequent to the approval granted under the Electoral Trusts Scheme, 2013 shall be intimated to the Board within thirty days of such change.

Section 2(22AAA) defines 'Electoral Trust' to mean a trust so approved by the CBDT, in accordance with the scheme made in this regard by the Central Government.

In exercise of the powers conferred by section 2(22AAA), the Central Government, has through Notification No.9/2013 dated 31.1.2013, notified the Electoral Trusts Scheme, 2013 to lay down the procedure for grant of approval to an electoral trust which will receive voluntary contributions and distribute the same to political parties.

Eligibility

A company registered for the purposes of section 25 of the Companies Act, 1956 satisfying all of the following conditions shall be eligible to make an application for approval as an electoral trust, namely –

1. The company should be registered on or after 1.4.2012 for the purposes of section 25 of the Companies Act, 1956;
2. The name of the company registered for the purposes of section 25 of the Companies Act, 1956 has to include the phrase "electoral trust";
3. The sole object of the electoral trust should be to distribute the contributions received by it to the political party, registered under section 29A of the Representation of the People Act, 1951;
4. The electoral trust should have a permanent account number.

Criteria for Approval

An electoral trust shall be considered for approval if it fulfills all of the following conditions, namely –

1. The company registered for the purposes of section 25 of the Companies Act, 1956, which satisfies the above conditions;
2. The object of the electoral trust shall not be to earn any profit or pass any direct or indirect benefit to its members or contributors, or to any person referred to in section 13(3) or any person referred to in Rule 17CA(10) of the Rules;
3. It has made adequate arrangement for recording the receipts from the contributors in accordance with Rule 17CA;
4. The stipulations contained in Rule 17CA for functioning of the electoral trust are specifically included in the articles of association of the company registered for the purposes of section 25 of the Companies Act, 1956.

Renewal of approval

1. The approval shall be valid for the assessment year relevant to the financial year in which such application has been made and for a further period, not exceeding three assessment years, as may be specified in the approval.

2. The electoral trust may apply for renewal of approval at any time during the financial year immediately preceding the last assessment year, for which the approval has been originally granted, and such renewal of approval may be granted after examining the application in the same manner as laid out for approval in this scheme.

Withdrawal of approval

1. The CBDT may withdraw the approval granted under this Scheme if it is satisfied that the electoral trust has ceased its activities or its activities are not genuine or are not carried out in accordance with all or any of the conditions laid down under this Scheme or the provisions of Rule 17CA of the Rules, or any other condition imposed in the approval granted.
2. In order to ascertain whether an electoral trust, after its approval, is functioning in accordance with the provisions of Rule 17CA of the Rules, the CBDT may call for information or documents as it may deem fit from the electoral trust or may get an enquiry conducted in this regard by an income-tax authority or any other agency.
3. If the Commissioner of Income-tax or the Director of Income-tax is satisfied that an approved electoral trust is not fulfilling any of the conditions specified under this Scheme or the conditions subject to which approval was granted to it or does not function in accordance with Rule 17CA, he may, after making appropriate enquiries, furnish a report to the CBDT in this regard and the Board may take such action on the report as it may deem fit.
4. An order for withdrawal of the approval shall be passed after giving the electoral trust an opportunity of being heard, and shall record the reasons in writing for the withdrawal of approval.
5. A copy of the order withdrawing the approval shall be sent to the applicant, the Assessing Officer and the Commissioner of Income-tax or the Director of Income-tax, as the case may be.

ILLUSTRATION 13

The books of account maintained by a National Political Party registered with Election Commission for the year ended on 31.3.2020 discloses the following receipts:

(a)	Rent of property let out to a departmental store at Chennai	6,00,000
(b)	Interest on deposits other than banks	5,00,000
(c)	Contribution from 100 persons (who have secreted their names) of ₹ 21,000 each	21,00,000
(d)	Contribution from 10 persons by way of electoral bonds of ₹ 25,000 each	2,50,000

(e)	Cash contribution @ ₹ 2,100 each from 1,000 members (recorded in books of account)	21,00,000
(f)	Net profit of cafeteria run in the premises at Delhi	3,00,000

Compute the total income of the political party for the assessment year 2020-21, with reasons for inclusion or otherwise.

SOLUTION

The total income of a political party registered with the Election Commission is to be computed as per section 13A under which the income derived from house property, income from other sources and income by way of voluntary contributions received from any person, on fulfilling of the conditions as mentioned thereunder, are exempt from tax. However, in this case, since cash contribution in excess of ₹ 2,000 is received from 1000 persons, the political party has violated the condition of receipt of donation through account payee cheque/draft or prescribed electronic modes. Further, the political party has also violated the condition of maintenance of records in case of donations exceeding ₹ 20,000 received otherwise than by way of electoral bonds. Hence, its total income has to be computed as under without providing for exemption available under section 13A:

Computation of total income of National Political Party

	Particulars	₹
(a)	The rent of the property of ₹ 6 lacs located at Chennai [assuming the same to be the Gross Annual Value] less 30% of Rs.6 lacs, being deduction u/s 24	4,20,000
(b)	Interest received on deposits	5,00,000
(c)	Contribution from 100 persons (who have secreted their names) of ₹ 21,000 each	21,00,000
(d)	Contribution from 10 persons by way of electoral bonds of ₹ 25,000 each	2,50,000
(e)	Cash contribution @ ₹ 2,100 each from 1,000 members (recorded in books of account)	21,00,000
(f)	Net profit of cafeteria at Delhi	3,00,000
Total Income		56,70,000

Note – Alternatively, the political party can contend that only ₹ 45 lakh is taxable on account of non-maintenance of records and receipt of cash donations, in which the case the total income would be computed as under:

Computation of total income of National Political Party

	Particulars	₹
(a)	Rent of the property of ₹ 6 lacs located at Chennai	Exempt
(b)	Interest received on deposits	Exempt

(c)	Contribution from 100 persons (who have secreted their names) of ₹ 21,000 each	21,00,000
(d)	Contribution from 10 persons by way of electoral bonds of ₹ 25,000 each	Exempt
(e)	Cash contribution @ ₹ 2,100 each from 1,000 members (recorded in books of account)	21,00,000
(f)	Net profit of cafeteria at Delhi	3,00,000
	Total Income	45,00,000

Note: It is presumed that the conditions regarding maintenance of books of account, audit, submission of report under section 29C of the Representation of the People Act, 1951 and filing of return of income under section 139(4B) are fulfilled by the political party, and hence it is eligible for exemption of income under section 13A.

EXERCISE

Question 1

A trust, unless created for "charitable purpose", does not qualify to claim exemption under Chapter III of the Act. In this context, explain the meaning of "charitable purpose" and examine whether the following objects constitute part of it:

(i) Rural reconstruction and upliftment of the masses through Cottage Industry.

(ii) Welfare of industrial workers with a stipulation that the workers of settlor of trust have got preference over others.

Answer

Section 2(15) defines "charitable purpose" to include relief of the poor, education, medical relief, yoga, preservation of environment (including watersheds, forests and wildlife) and preservation of monuments or places or objects of artistic or historic interest and the advancement of any other object of general public utility. However, "advancement of any other object of general public utility" would not be a charitable purpose, if it involves carrying on of any activity in the nature of trade, commerce or business or, any activity of rendering of any service in relation to any trade, commerce or business, for a fee or cess or any other consideration, irrespective of the nature of use or application of the income from such activity or the retention of such income, by the concerned entity.

"Advancement of any other object of general public utility" would continue to be a "charitable purpose", if the total receipt from any activity in the nature of trade, commerce or business, or any activity of rendering any service in relation to any trade, commerce or business does not exceed 20% of the total receipts of the trust in the previous year, and such activity is undertaken in the course of actual carrying out of such advancement of any other object of general public utility.

(i) The Supreme Court has, in Thiagarajar Charities vs. Addl. CIT (1997) 225 ITR 1010, observed that "cottage industry" is associated with the idea of a small, simple enterprise or industry in which employees work in their own houses or in a small place, gathered together for the purpose, using their own equipments and is usually found in rural areas or so carried on, by the poorer section of the society. In substance, the activity of rural reconstruction and upliftment of masses through cottage industry is to afford relief to the poor and consequently, it is for charitable purpose.

(ii) The welfare of industrial workers with a stipulation that the workers of settlor of trust have preference over others would also constitute "charitable purpose" within the meaning of section 2(15). The Patna High Court has, in CIT v. Tata Steel Charitable Trust (1993) 203 ITR 764, observed that exemption under section 11(1) can be availed only if the following conditions are satisfied –

(1) the trust is created for a charitable purpose; and

(2) no part of the income of such trust enures or has been used or applied directly or indirectly for the benefit of any person referred to in section 13(3).

The list of persons contained in section 13(3) does not include employees of the settlor of the trust. Section 13(3)(d), which includes any relative of the author, can have no application because “relative” means a person connected by birth or marriage with another person. A person having relationship pursuant to a contract like that of an employer and an employee cannot be said to be a relative. The High Court concluded that it was immaterial that any employee of the settler of the trust had acquired any benefit out of the income of the trust as an ordinary member of the community. Therefore, the application of part of the income of the trust for the benefit of the employees of the settler cannot disentitle the trust from claiming exemption under section 11.

Question 2

How do you deal with the following situation? Give reasons for your answer.

Ramji Charitable Trust has filed return of income for the Assessment Year 2020-21 within the stipulated time under section 139(1) and applied only 50% of its income for specified purposes. It intends to accumulate the balance 35% of income to be spent in future years. While completing the assessment, the Assessing Officer disallowed the accumulated income of 35% and taxed the same on the ground that the trust has not made any application under section 11(2) along with return of income. Discuss the validity of the action of the Assessing Officer in this case.

Answer

Section 11(2) provides that a charitable trust has to apply 85% of its income to charitable purposes and where 85% of its income is not applied for such purposes, the trust may accumulate or set apart either the whole or part of its income for future application for such purposes in India. The requirement of the Act is that the trust has to make an application/intimation in the prescribed form, for accumulation of income, specifying the purpose and the period (not exceeding 5 years). The application should be filed or furnished before the assessing authority on or before the due date specified under section 139(1). Further, the money so set apart or accumulated should be invested/deposited in any one or more of these modes or forms specified under section 11(5).

Thus, this requirement of filing application is mandatory and without those particulars, the assessing authority cannot entertain the claim of the assessee under section 11. In case the statement in Form 10 is not submitted on or before the due date of filing return of income under section 139(1), then, the benefit of accumulation would not be available and such income would be taxable at the applicable rate. Further, the benefit of accumulation would also not be available if return of income is not furnished on or before the due date of filing of return of income under section 139(1). Therefore, the action of the Assessing Officer in this case is valid.

Question 3

An institution operating for promotion of education claiming exemption under section 11 since 1994 furnishes the following data for the assessment year 2020-21:

S. No.	Particulars	₹ in crores
(i)	Fees collected from students	14
(ii)	Construction of a new computer science laboratory	0.50
(iii)	Land acquired to be used as a cricket field for the students	2
(iv)	Amount earmarked and set apart for construction of an arts block within the next 4 years.	4

Compute the total income of the institution for the A.Y.2020-21.

Answer

Particulars	₹ (in crores)
Fees received	14.00
Less : 15% (exempt even if not spent for the objects of the institution)	2.10
	11.90
Less : Accumulated for specified purpose (See Note 2)	4.00
Balance to be spent	7.90
Actual amount spent on construction of computer science lab (See Note 1)	0.50
Actual amount spent on purchase of land for cricket field (See Note 1)	2.00
Total Income	5.40

Notes:

(1) The institution must utilise 85% of its income within the previous year for the objects of the institution. The institution can apply its income either for revenue expenditure or for capital expenditure provided the expenditure is incurred for promoting the objects of the institution. Land acquired and meant for use as cricket field for students is a capital expenditure incurred for promoting the objects of the institution and hence, eligible for deduction. Likewise, the amount spent on construction of computer science laboratory is also eligible for deduction.

(2) Section 11(2) provides that a trust/institution can accumulate or set apart its income for a specified purpose by furnishing statement in prescribed format to the concerned Assessing Officer. However, the period for which the funds can be accumulated cannot exceed 5 years. The amount so accumulated should be invested in the specified forms and modes. In this case, the institution has to furnish statement in Form 10 on or before the due date of filing return of income to the Assessing Officer, stating the purpose for which the income is being accumulated or set apart and the period for which the income is being accumulated or set apart, which shall, in no case, exceed five years. Further, the institution has to invest ₹ 4 crore in the specified forms and modes.

Question 4

A public charitable trust registered under section 12AA, for the previous year ending 31.3.2020, derived gross income of ₹ 21 lakhs, which consists of the following:

		(₹ in Lacs)
(a)	Income from properties held by trust (net)	10
(b)	Income (net) from business (incidental to main objects)	4
(c)	Voluntary contributions from public	7

The trust applied a sum of ₹ 11.60 lacs towards charitable purposes during the year which includes repayment of loan taken for construction of orphanage ₹ 3.60 lacs.

Determine the taxable income of the trust for the assessment year 2020-21..

Answer

Computation of taxable income of public charitable trust

	Particulars	₹
(i)	Income from property held under trust (net)	10,00,000
(ii)	Income (net) from business (incidental to main objects)	4,00,000
(iii)	Voluntary contributions from public	7,00,000
	Voluntary contribution made with a specific direction towards corpus are alone to be excluded under section 11(1)(d). In this case, there is no such direction and hence, included.
		21,00,000
	Less: 15% of the income eligible for retention / accumulation without any conditions	3,15,000
		17,85,000
	Less: Amount applied for the objects of the trust
	(i) Amount spent for charitable purposes (₹ 11,60,000 - ₹ 3,60,000)	8,00,000
	(ii) Repayment of loan for construction of orphan home	3,60,000
	Taxable Income	6,25,000

Question 5

A charitable trust registered under section 12AA of the Income-tax Act, 1961 has, out of its income of ₹ 3,90,000 for the year ending 31.3.2020 and sale proceeds of a capital asset, held by it for less than 24 months, amounting to ₹ 9,60,000, purchased a building during the year ending 31.3.2020 for ₹ 13,50,000. The capital asset was sold during the year ending 31.3.2020. The building is held only for charitable purposes. The trust claims that the purchase of the building amounts to application of its income for charitable purposes and that the capital gain arising on the sale of the capital asset is deemed to have been applied to charitable purposes. Is the claim made by the charitable trust valid in law?

Answer

Section 11(1)(a) stipulates that in order to avail exemption of income derived from property held under trust wholly for charitable or religious purposes, the trust is required to apply for charitable or religious purposes, 85% of its income from such property. In this case, the trust has earned income of ₹ 3,90,000 for the year ended 31.3.2020. It has also earned short term capital gain from sale of capital asset for ₹ 9,60,000. The trust had utilized the entire amount of ₹ 13,50,000 for the purchase of a building meant for charitable purposes.

The Supreme Court, in S.RM. M. CT. M. Tiruppani Trust v. CIT (1998) 230 ITR 636, ruled that the assessee-trust, which applied its income for charitable purposes by purchasing a building for use as a hospital, was entitled to exemption under section 11(1) in respect of such income.

The ratio of the decision squarely applies to the case of the charitable trust in question. Therefore, the charitable trust is justified in claiming that the purchase of the building amounted to application of its income for charitable purposes.

Under section 11(1A), where the whole of the sale proceeds of a capital asset held by a charitable trust is utilised by it for acquiring another capital asset, the capital gain arising therefrom is deemed to have been applied to charitable purposes and would be exempt. Section 11(1A) does not make any distinction between a long-term capital asset and a short-term capital asset. The claim of the charitable trust to the effect that the capital gain is deemed to have been applied to charitable purposes is tenable in law.

Question 6

Work out, from the following particulars, the amount of capital gain which shall be deemed to have been applied for charitable or religious purpose arising out of sale of a capital asset utilized for the purposes of trust to the extent of 60%:

Particulars	₹
Cost of transferred asset	2,40,000
Sale consideration	3,60,000
Cost of new asset purchased	3,00,000

Answer

In this case, since the asset which is transferred is utilized for the purposes of the trust only to the extent of 60%, only the proportionate amount (i.e. 60%) of the capital gain would be regarded as having been applied for charitable or religious purposes.

As per section 11(1A), where a capital asset held under trust is transferred, and only a part of the net consideration is utilized for acquiring a new capital asset, only so much of the capital gain as is equal to the amount, if any, by which the amount so utilized exceeds the cost of the transferred asset shall be considered to have been applied for the objects of the trust.

In this case, only a part of the net consideration of ₹ 3,60,000 is utilized for acquiring the new capital asset costing ₹ 3,00,000. The amount utilized in acquiring the new asset (i.e. ₹ 3,00,000) exceeds the cost of the transferred asset (i.e. ₹ 2,40,000) by ₹ 60,000.

Therefore, only 60% of (₹ 3,00,000 – ₹ 2,40,000) = 60% of ₹ 60,000 = ₹ 36,000 is deemed to be applied for the objects of the trust.

Question 7

An electoral trust approved by the CBDT is not liable to income-tax in respect of voluntary contribution received and other income - Examine the correctness of the statement.

Answer

Section 13B provides exemption in respect of voluntary contribution received by an electoral trust approved by the CBDT in accordance with the scheme to be made by the Central Government.

Voluntary contribution received by an electoral trust would be treated as its income under section 2(24), but shall be exempt under section 13B if the trust distributes to a registered political party during the year, 95% of the aggregate donations received by it during the year along with surplus brought forward from any earlier years. Another condition for availing the benefit under this section is that the electoral trust should function in accordance with the rules framed by the Central Government.

It may be noted that the exemption under section 13B will be available only in respect of voluntary contribution received by an electoral trust. The exemption cannot be claimed in respect of any other income of the electoral trust.

Therefore, the given statement is not correct.

SIGNIFICANT SELECT CASES

1. Where an institution engaged in imparting education incidentally makes profit, would it lead to an inference that it ceases to exist solely for educational purposes?

Queen's Educational Society v. CIT (2015) 372 ITR 699 (SC)

Facts of the case: The assessee, an educational institution, showed a net surplus of ₹ 6.59 lakhs and ₹ 7.83 lakhs, respectively, for the assessment years 2000-01 and 2001-02. Since it was established with the sole object of imparting education, it claimed exemption under section 10(23C)(iiiad). The Assessing Officer rejected the claim of exemption on the ground that the assessee has made profits and did not exist solely for educational purposes. The Commissioner (Appeals) allowed the assessee's claim and the Tribunal dismissed the Revenue's appeal holding that the assessee was engaged undoubtedly in imparting education and the profit was only incidental to the main object of spreading education. However, the High Court restored the order of the Assessing Officer on the reasoning that the institution made profit, year on year, and hence, was not eligible for tax exemption.

Supreme Court's Observations: The Supreme Court observed that the provisions of section 10(23C)(iiiad) provide for three requirements, namely,

(i) the education institution must exist solely for educational purposes;

(ii) it should not be for purposes of profit; and

(iii) the aggregate annual receipts of such institution should not exceed the amount as may be prescribed. Such monetary limit is ₹ 1 crore as per Rule 2BC.

The Supreme Court concurred with the Tribunal's reasoning that profit is only incidental to the main object of spreading education. If there is no surplus arising out of the difference between receipts and outgoings, the trust will not be able to achieve the objectives. Any education institution cannot be run in rented premises for all the times and without necessary equipment and without paying to the staff engaged in imparting education. The assessee is not getting any financial aid/assistance from the Government or other philanthropic agency and, therefore, to achieve the objective, it has to raise its own funds. However, such surplus would not come within the ambit of denying exemption under section 10(23C)(iiiad).

Further, the Apex Court made reference to the tests culled out in its own decisions in the case of Addl. CIT v. Surat Art Silk Cloth Manufacturers Association [1980] 121 ITR 1, Aditanar Educational Institution v. Addl. CIT [1997] 224 ITR 310 and American Hotel and Lodging Association Educational Institute v. CBDT [2008] 301 ITR 86, which would apply for determining whether an educational institution exists solely for education purposes and not for purposes of profit.

The Apex Court, after analyzing the legal provisions and precedents, summed up the law common to section 10(23C)(iiiad)/(vi):

(a) Where an educational institution carries on the activity of education primarily for educating persons, the fact that it makes a surplus does not lead to the conclusion that it ceases to exist solely for educational purposes and becomes an institution for the purpose of making profit;

(b) The predominant object test must be applied – the purpose of education should not be submerged by a profit making motive;

(c) A distinction must be drawn between the making of surplus and an institution being carried on "for profit". Merely because imparting of education results in making a profit, it cannot be inferred that it becomes an activity for profit;

(d) If after meeting expenditure, surplus arises incidentally from the activity carried on by the educational institution, it will not cease to be one existing solely for educational purposes; and

(e) The ultimate test is whether on an overall view of the matter in the concerned assessment year, the object is to make profit as opposed to educating persons.

Apex Court's Decision: Based on the above principles and tests, the Apex Court upheld the Tribunal's view that the assessee was engaged in imparting education and the profit was only incidental to the main object of spreading education. Hence, it satisfies the conditions laid down in section 10(23C)(iiiad) for claim of exemption thereunder.

2. Would imparting education/training in specialized field like communication, advertising etc. and awarding diplomas/certificates constitute an "educational purpose" for grant of exemption under section 10(23C)(vi)?

CIT v. St. Peter's Educational Society (2016) 385 ITR 66 (SC)

Facts of the case: The assessee-society registered under the Societies Registration Act, 1860 as well as under the provisions of the Bombay Public Trust Act, 1950 was engaged in imparting higher and specialized education. It imparted education in the field of communication including advertising and its related subjects. It was granted registration under section 12A of the Act originally.

The assessee later submitted an application for exemption under section 10(23C)(vi) and for which after calling for details, the CIT refused to grant exemption under section 10(23C)(vi). The reasons for refusal were (i) the society was not having education as the sole purpose; (ii) it is engaged in conducting coaching / training courses for and on behalf of industry, trade and commercial organizations; (iii) it is engaged in various social activities of general public utility; and (iv) it was not conducting educational courses as charitable activity but for the purpose of making profit.

High Court's view: The Court noted that the object clause of the society which indicated that the institution was awarding diplomas, certificates etc after providing training in communication, advertising and related subjects. The memorandum of the assessee showed that the fee collected shall not exceed the cost of training, hostel expenses etc and it is not precluded from subsidizing such costs. It observed that providing training to the individuals as well as those persons who have been sponsored by the companies to meet the needs of Indian industry and commerce, would not make the assessee-society as carrying on activity of service in relation to any trade, commerce and industry.

It held that teaching does not mean teaching the students only in the manner and method, the regular schools or colleges adopt to teach. In the progressive world, it is expected from certain institutions that they educate, teach and train persons so that those persons can compete with similar experts worldwide. It thus rejected the argument of the Revenue and held that providing latest information and training to persons to become super specialists in a particular field would still be treated as education.

Supreme Court's Observations: The Apex Court took note of the observations of the High Court and made reference to its own precedent in the case of Queen's Educational Society v. CIT (2015) 372 ITR 699 (SC) where it had summarized the legal position as under:

"The law common to sections 10(23C)(iiiad) and (vi) may be summed up as follows:

(i) Where an educational institution carries on the activity of education primarily for educating persons, the fact that it makes a surplus does not lead to the conclusion that it ceases to exist solely for educational purposes and becomes an institution for the purpose of making profit;

(ii) The predominant object test must be applied – the purpose of education should not be submerged by a profit making motive;

(iii) A distinction must be drawn between making of a surplus and the institution being carried on 'for profit'. No inference arises that merely because imparting education results in making a profit, it becomes an activity for profit;

(iv) If after meeting the expenditure, a surplus arises incidentally from the activity carried on by the educational institution, it will not cease to be one existing solely for educational purposes;

(v) The ultimate test is whether on an overall view of the matter in the concerned assessment year, the object is to make profit as opposed to educating persons".

The Apex Court, in Queen's Educational Society's case, noted the divergence of opinion among various High Courts on this issue. In that case, it had approved the decision of Delhi, Bombay and Punjab & Haryana High Courts and set aside the judgement of Uttarakhand High Court.

The Apex Court held that the correct tests for determining whether an institution exists solely for educational purposes and not for the purposes of profit were laid down in the Supreme Court decisions in CIT (Addl.) v. Surat Art Silk Mfg. Association (1980) 121 ITR 1; Aditanar Educational Institution v. Addl. CIT (1997) 224 ITR 310; and American Hotel & Lodging Assn. Educational Institute v. CBDT (2008) 301 ITR 86.

It further observed that the Thirteenth proviso to section 10(23C) is of great importance to the assessing authorities who must continuously monitor from assessment year to assessment year to know whether such institutions continues to apply their income and invest or deposit their funds in accordance with the law laid down. The activities of such institutions must be looked at carefully. If they are not genuine or are not being carried out in accordance with all or any of the conditions subject to which approval was given earlier, such approval and exemption must forthwith be withdrawn.

Supreme Court's Decision: Applying the rationale of the Supreme Court ruling in Queen's Educational Society's case, the Apex Court, in this case, held that the institution is established for the sole purpose of imparting education in a specialized field. The Supreme Court, thus, allowed the petition and set aside the order of the Chief Commissioner of Income-tax refusing exemption under section 10(23C)(vi).

Note: Institutions engaged in providing specialized training in certain fields and awarding diplomas and certificates are also eligible for tax exemption in terms of section 10(23C)(vi). It is not mandatory for such institutions to impart education in formalized manner or conduct only recognized educational courses. Further, when corporates depute employees for gaining specialized knowledge, such imparting of knowledge by the institution would not mean that the institution is engaged in the activity of general public. Making of profit incidentally will not make the institution as existing for making profit. This is the jist of the above Supreme Court ruling.

3. In a case where the charitable trust is deemed to be registered under section 12A due to non-disposal of application within the period of 6 months, as stipulated under section 12AA(2), from when would such deemed registration take effect?

CIT v. Society for the Promotion of Education (2016) 382 ITR 6 (SC)

Facts of the case: In the present case, the Allahabad High Court held that once an application for registration of the trust is made under section 12A and in case the same is not responded to within six months, the trust would be deemed to be registered under section 12AA. The High Court opined that non-consideration of the application for registration within the time fixed by the legal provision would lead to deemed grant of registration and there is no reason to make the assessee suffer merely because the Income Tax Department is not able to keep its officers under check and control so as to take timely decisions on the matter.

The Revenue appealed against this decision and raised an apprehension that since the date of application was February 24, 2003, the deemed registration would operate only after six months from the date of application.

Supreme Court's Decision: The Apex Court clarified that deemed registration would commence only after 6 months from the date of application. Therefore, the registration of the application under section 12AA of the Income-tax Act, in the case of the assessee trust shall take effect from August 24, 2003.

Note:

This decision is based on the provisions of section 12A prior to insertion of clause (aa) in sub-section (1) of section 12A and sub-section (2) in section 12A by the Finance Act, 2007 with effect from 1st June, 2007. The position prior to the amendment by the Finance Act, 2007 was that an application for registration has to be made before the expiry of one year from the date of creation of the trust. However, where an application for registration was made thereafter, the exemption provisions under sections 11 and 12 would apply from the date of creation of the trust, if the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, for reasons to be recorded in writing, is satisfied that the person in receipt of the income was prevented from making the application before the expiry of one year. If he is not so satisfied, the exemption would apply from 1st day of the financial year in which the application was made.

The Finance Act, 2007 has inserted sub-section (2) in section 12A to provide that where an application has been made on or after 01.06.2007, the provisions of section 11 and 12 shall apply in relation to the income of such trust from the assessment year immediately following the financial year in which such application is made*.*

In Society for the Promotion of Education's case, the Supreme Court has decided that the deemed registration would be effective only after six months from the date of application, in the sense, that it would not have retrospective application. The Supreme Court ruling assumes significance in the current context, since it affirms that non-consideration of application within the time period of six months from the end of the month in which application is received would tantamount to deemed registration. However, in the light of the current provisions of section 12A(2), the exemption provisions of sections 11 and 12 would apply in relation to the income of the trust from the assessment year immediately following the financial year in which such application is made, even though the effective date of deemed registration would be after expiry of the six month period as per the above Supreme Court ruling.

4. Where a charitable trust applied for issuance of registration under section 12A within a short time span (nine months, in this case) after its formation, can registration be denied by the concerned authority on the ground that no charitable activity has been commenced by the trust?

DIT (Exemptions) v. Meenakshi Amma Endowment Trust (2013) 354 ITR 219 (Kar.)

Facts of the case: In the present case, the assessee, being a trust, made an application under section 12A for issuance of registration within nine months of its formation. The registration authority issued a show cause notice to the assessee-trust to furnish its audited accounts as also material indicating the actual activities undertaken by the trust. In response to the said notice, the assessee-trust furnished the details, wherein it indicated that it has not yet commenced any charitable activity. The concerned registration authority, not being satisfied with the reply, refused to grant registration to the trust on the ground that it has not commenced any charitable activity.

Issue: The issue under consideration is whether registration under section 12AA can be denied on the ground of non-commencement of charitable activity, where an application for registration has been made within a short-time span after the formation of the trust.

High Court's Observations: On this issue, the Karnataka High Court opined that an application under section 12A for registration of the trust can be sought even within a week of its formation. The activities carried on by the trust are to be seen in case the registration is sought much later after formation of the trust.

The High Court further observed that, in this case, the corpus fund included contribution made by the trustees only, which indicated that the trustees were contributing the funds by themselves in a humble way and were intending to commence charitable activities. Also, it was not the Revenue's contention that the assessee-trust had collected lots of donations for the activities of the trust, by the time its application came up for consideration before them. When the application for registration was made, the trust, therefore, did not have sufficient funds for commencement of its activities.

High Court's Decision: The High Court observed that, with the money available with the trust, it cannot be expected to carry out activity of charity immediately. Consequently, in such a case, it cannot be concluded that the trust has not intended to do any activity of charity. In such a situation, the objects of the trust as mentioned in the trust deed have to be taken into consideration by the authorities for satisfying themselves about the genuineness of the trust and not the activities carried on by it. Later on, if it is found from the subsequent returns filed by the trust, that it is not carrying on any charitable activity, it would be open to the concerned authorities to withdraw the registration granted or cancel the registration as per the provisions of section 12AA(3).

5. In a case where properties bequeathed to a trust could not be transferred to it due to ongoing court litigation and pendency of probate proceedings, can violation of the provisions of section 11(5) be attracted?

DIT (Exemption) v. Khetri Trust (2014) 367 ITR 723 (Del)

Facts of the case: As per the 'will' of Late Raja Bahadur Sardar Singh, the entire property, including immovable property and shares in foreign companies, were bequeathed to the trust. However, the properties could not be transferred to or acquired by the trust because of ongoing litigation in the Court. In the probate proceedings, the 'will' was challenged and the probate proceedings are still pending.

The trustees paid ₹ 1,10,000 for raising a memorial for late Raja Bahadur Sardar Singh and the said amount was given to a business entity for this purpose, but due to the ongoing dispute, such project was not completed. The business entity, however, paid interest on the said amount. The Assessing Officer denied the benefit of exemption under section 11, on the ground that the asset held in the form of shares of foreign company and the advance given to business entity were contrary to the mandate of section 11(5) and thus, the condition specified in section 13(1)(d) has been violated.

Appellate Authorities' views: The Commissioner (Appeals) observed that the validity of the will has been challenged in the probate proceedings; therefore, till the 'will' is probated and affirmed as genuine, the trust would not acquire the legal right on the property for the purpose of Income-tax Act, 1961. In case the probate is denied, the properties would not devolve on the trust. The shares in foreign company were still in the name of the donor, Late Raja Bahadur Sardar Singh, and its acquisition by the trust is dependent upon the adjudication of the probate.

Further, with regard to the advance given to the business entity, the Commissioner (Appeals) found that the said amount cannot be treated as an investment which was covered and regulated by section 11(5), since the intent and purpose behind the payment was not investment.

These views of the Commissioner (Appeals) were confirmed by the Tribunal.

High Court's Decision: Based on the above factual findings, elucidated and affirmed by the Commissioner (Appeals) and the Tribunal, the High Court held that there was no violation of section 11(5) in this case.

6. Is the cancellation of registration of a trust under section 12AA, on the basis of search conducted in the premises of its Secretary General and the statement recorded by him under section 132(4), valid?

U.P. Distillers Association (UPDA) v. CIT [2017] 399 ITR 143 (Del)

Facts of the case: A search and seizure operation took place in the premises of the Secretary General of the assessee, that is, Uttar Pradesh Distillers Association, in February 2006. During the search, the Secretary General's statement was recorded under section 132(4) of the Act. The statement was retracted after two years. In the meanwhile, the Commissioner of Income-tax (CIT) cancelled the assessee's registration under section 12AA(3) on the basis of the search operation and the statement made. The order was upheld by the Appellate Tribunal. The assessee contended that Secretary General's statement was made in the course of search in respect of his premises and not those of the assessee. Hence, the Secretary General's statement was not attributable to the assessee nor could the materials indicated by him be the basis for cancellation of registration of the trust under section 12AA

Issue: The issue under consideration is whether the cancellation of registration under section 12AA as a charitable trust on the basis of search conducted in the premises of the Secretary General of the assessee-trust and the statement recorded by him under section 132(4) is valid.

Delhi High Court's Observations: The Court dismissed the appeal to hold that although the premises, in which the search under section 132 took place, belonged to the Secretary General, he virtually ran the assessee-trust's activities from the same premises. The information which he provided in the course of the search pointed out to the activities of the assessee-trust and not to his own activities. Further, the Tribunal had expressly recorded that the search proceedings took place in the context of section 153A, in the very premises of the Secretary General, with respect to the assessee-trust.

Delhi High Court's Decision: The Delhi High Court, accordingly, held that cancellation of the trust's registration under section 12AA on the basis of search conducted in the premises of the Secretary General and the statement recorded under section 132(4) from him, is valid.

Note: The special leave petition filed against the aforementioned decision of the Delhi High Court was dismissed by the Supreme Court.

7. Is the approval of Civil Court mandatory for amendment of trust deed, even in a case where the settler has given power to the trustees to alter the trust deed?

DIT (Exemptions) v. Ramoji Foundation (2014) 364 ITR 85 (AP)

Facts of the case: The settler gave power to the trustees to amend, alter, change or modify the objects of the trust deed with the approval of two-third majority. Such additional or altered object, however, must be of charitable nature falling within the definition thereof under the relevant provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961. Based on these provisions of the trust deed and referring to the Supreme Court decision in CIT v. Kamla Town Trust (1996) 217 ITR 699, the Tribunal held that the trust deed can be amended without approaching the Civil Court. Therefore, the Tribunal directed the DIT (Exemptions) to grant registration to the assessee-trust under section 12AA on the basis of the amended trust deed.

Issue: The issue under consideration before the High Court is whether the Tribunal was correct in holding that the amendment to the trust deed can be made without approaching the Civil Court, on the basis of the decision in the case of Kamla Town Trust (Supra).

High Court's Observations: The High Court observed that the power has been given to the trustees by the settler to amend the trust deed without approaching the Civil Court, provided all the conditions laid down by the settler are fulfilled. The sanction of Civil Court is required only when there is no such power. When the power has been specifically given to the trustees by the settler, no further power from the Civil Court is required.

The High Court made reference to the Kamla Town Trust's case and observed that it has not been stated anywhere in the Supreme Court's decision that in spite of the power given to them by settler to amend the trust deed, the trustees have to approach the Civil Court to get the trust deed rectified.

High Court's Decision: Accordingly, in this case, the High Court held that the Tribunal has correctly dealt with the matter and the trust deed amended by the trustees can be relied upon by the Revenue authorities for the purpose of granting registration under section 12AA.

TAX PLANNING, TAX EVASION AND TAX AVOIDANCE

LEARNING OUTCOMES

After studying this chapter, you would be able to -

- distinguish between tax planning, tax avoidance and tax evasion;
- analyse whether a specified activity resulting in reduction of tax liability would be considered as tax planning, tax avoidance or tax evasion;
- examine the doctrine of form and substance in the context of tax planning;
- advise salaried individuals and HUFs to plan their investments/ payments to minimise tax liability;
- advise corporates and businesses to plan their activities/structures in a tax-efficient manner.

14.1 TAX PLANNING, TAX EVASION AND TAX AVOIDANCE – AN OVERVIEW

Tax planning involves an intelligent application of the various provisions of the direct tax laws to practical situations in such a manner as to reduce the tax impact on the assessee to the minimum. A thorough understanding of the principles, practices and procedures of tax laws and the ability to apply such knowledge to various practical situations is expected at the final level.

(1) Method of study of tax planning: A thorough up-to-date knowledge of tax laws is a pre-requisite for a successful study of tax planning techniques. Not only an up-to-date knowledge of the statute is necessary, but one must also be aware of the contents of the various circulars issued by the CBDT and also of case laws in the form of various decisions of the Courts. One of the best methods to study tax planning in action is to analyze the case laws. In view of this position, students should realise the importance and usefulness of keeping track of the judgments of Supreme Court and of various High Courts reported in tax law journals from time to time. Students should make it a point to go through the relevant cases and understand the issues involved and the rationale of the judgments. Of course, tax planning in a particular case would depend on the facts and circumstances of that particular case.

Apart from the above, students are advised to go through the articles on tax laws published in tax journals and financial papers. With this brief introduction, let us go into the basic concepts of tax planning.

(2) Concept of tax planning: Planning is the formulation of a system which in its implementation is designed to achieve a specific result. Economic planning is the privilege of the State; tax planning is that of the subject. Men, material and money are the resources available at the disposal of a nation and to conserve the same, the State resorts to economic planning. Tax planning aims to reduce the outflow of cash resources made available to the Government by way of taxes so that the same may be effectively utilised for the benefit of the individual or the business, as the case may be. Just as sound economic planning is indispensable for a welfare State, a sound tax planning is equally indispensable for the welfare of the citizen.

Before entering into a transaction or before starting a business, one normally considers its profitability and other aspects. Amongst other aspects, the tax implications of the transactions of the business have to be thought out before actually embarking on the deal. Otherwise one may be caught unwittingly in huge tax liability. Planning from the point of view of taxation helps in generating greater savings of investible surplus.

Tax planning may be defined as an arrangement of one's financial affairs in such a way that, without violating in any way the legal provisions, full advantage is taken of all tax exemptions, deductions, concessions, rebates, allowances and other reliefs or benefits permitted under the Act so that the burden of taxation on the assessee is reduced to the minimum.

It involves arranging one's financial affairs by intelligently anticipating the effects which the tax laws will have on the arrangements now being adopted. As such it is a very stimulating intellectual exercise.

Any tax planning scheme should be a natural one and should not give an appearance of an artificial arrangement on the face of it. The tax planner or the tax adviser should exercise great care and caution in designing any tax planning scheme as its failure will result in great difficulties and heavy burden of tax on the assessee for whom the scheme is evolved.

(3) Tax planning, tax evasion and tax avoidance: Three methods of saving taxes have been developed in most countries of the world in the past few decades: tax evasion, tax avoidance and tax planning.

Reduction of taxes by legitimate means may take two forms — tax planning and tax avoidance. 'Tax planning' is wider in range. At this stage, the distinction between 'tax avoidance' and 'tax evasion' may be noted. The dividing line between tax evasion and tax avoidance is very thin. The Direct Taxes Enquiry Committee (Wanchoo Committee) has tried to draw a distinction between the two items in the following words.

"The distinction between 'evasion' and 'avoidance', therefore, is largely dependent on the difference in methods of escape resorted to. Some are instances of merely availing, strictly in accordance with law, the tax exemptions or tax privileges offered by the Government. Others are maneuvers involving an element of deceit, misrepresentation of facts, falsification of accounting calculations or downright fraud. The first represents what is truly tax planning, the latter tax evasion. However, between these two extremes, there lies a vast domain for selecting a variety of methods which, though technically satisfying the requirements of law, in fact, circumvent it with a view to eliminate or reduce tax burden. It is these methods which constitute "tax avoidance".

Thus, tax evasion refers to any attempt to avoid payment of taxes by using illegal means. Some of the common forms of tax evasion are:

- misrepresentation or suppression of facts;
- failure to record investments in books of account;
- claim of expenditure not substantiated by any evidence;
- recording of any false entry in books of account;
- failure to record any receipt in books of account having a bearing on total income; and
- failure to report any international transaction or deemed international transaction or specified domestic transaction under Chapter X.

These constitute misreporting of income attracting penalty @ 200% under section 270A.

(4) Judicial thinking—A brief study: The judicial attitude towards tax avoidance schemes is very strict and the landmark judgment of the Supreme Court in M/s. Mc Dowell and Co. Ltd. vs.

Commercial Tax Officer 1985 Taxman 77(3) (1985) 154 I.T.R. 148 (SC) is proof of the same. Though this decision was rendered in the context of A.P. General Sales Tax Act, the principles emerging out of this decision will have relevance to direct taxes also.

Before discussing the relevant observations of the Supreme Court in relation to tax avoidance scheme it will be instructive to have an idea of the development in judicial thinking in England since our own judicial thinking on the subject has been largely derived from English thinking.

English Scene: In Inland Revenue Commissioner vs. Duke of Westminster 1936 AC 1 it was held "Every man is entitled if he can, to order his affairs so that the tax attaching under the appropriate Acts is less than it otherwise would be. If he succeeds in ordering them so as to secure this result, then, however unappreciative the Commissioners of Inland revenue or his fellow taxpayers may be of his ingenuity, he cannot be compelled to pay an increased tax."

After the World War II and the consequent huge profiteering and racketeering the attitude of the courts towards the avoidance of tax perceptibly changed and hardened. Commenting on a tax avoidance scheme, the court observed that it scarcely lies in the mouth of the taxpayer who plays with fire to complain of burnt fingers.

It was felt that there must be some limit to the devices which courts can put up with in order to defeat the fiscal intentions of the legislature. A very significant departure from the Westminster Principle was made in Ramsay vs. Inland Revenue Commissioners (1982) AC 300. It was felt in that case that even though the doctrine that courts could not go behind a given genuine document or transaction to some supposed underlying substance was a cardinal principle, it must not be overstated or over-extended. While obliging the courts to accept documents or transactions, found to be genuine, as such, the doctrine did not compel the court to look at the document or transaction in blinkers isolated from any context to which it properly belonged. If it could be seen that a document or transaction was intended to have effect as a part of a nexus or series of transactions or as an ingredient of a wider transaction intended as a whole, there was nothing in the doctrine to prevent it being so regarded. To do so was not to prefer form to substance or substance to form. It was the task of the court to ascertain the legal nature of any transaction to which it was sought to attach a tax consequence and if that emerged from a series or combination of transactions, intended, apart as such, as was that series or combination which might be regarded.

Thus, two points were established. The first was a significant change in the approach adopted by the court with regard to its judicial role towards tax avoidance scheme. The second was that it was crucial when considering any such scheme to take the analysis far enough to determine where the profit, gain or loss was really to be found. It was also stated that the fact that the court accepted that each step in a transaction was a genuine step producing its intended legal results did not confine the court to consider each step in isolation for the purpose of assessing the fiscal results. Thus, we can say that the true principle of the decision in Ramsey was that the fiscal consequence of a preordained series of transactions intended to operate as such, are generally to be ascertained by considering the result of the series as a whole and not by dissecting the scheme and considering each transaction separately.

In I.R.C. vs. Burmah Shell Co. Ltd. (1982) STC 30 (Burmah) and Furniss (Inspector of Taxes) vs. Dawson (1984) 1 All E.R.530, it was held that where tax avoidance was targeted through a series of transactions with no commercial or substantial value but with the only aim of avoiding tax, the Courts have to ignore the transactions and the tax liability has to be determined as if these transactions never took place.

Indian Scenario: In CIT vs. A. Raman & Co. 1 SCR 10, the Supreme Court followed the dictum of the Westminster's case. It observed that avoidance of tax liability by so arranging commercial affairs that charge of tax is distributed is not prohibited. The tax payer may resort to a device to divert the income before it accrues or arises to him. Effectiveness of the device depends not upon consideration of morality but on the operation of the Income-tax Act, 1961. Legislative injunction in taxing statutes may not, except on pain of penalty, be violated but it may lawfully be circumvented. The same view was expressed in CIT vs. Kharwar (1969) 72 ITR 603 (SC) as follows:

"The taxing authority is entitled and is indeed bound to determine the true legal relation resulting from a transaction, if the parties have chosen to conceal by a device the legal relation, it is open for the taxing authorities to unravel the device and to determine the true character of relationship. The legal effect of a transaction, however, cannot be displaced by probing into the substance of the transaction."

However, the Supreme Court in Mc Dowell's case clearly departed from the above views and expressly disassociated itself with the earlier observations of the Supreme Court echoing the sentiments of Westminster principle. The court enumerated the evil consequences of tax avoidance as follows:

(1) Substantial loss of much needed public revenue.

(2) Serious disturbance caused to the economy of the country by the piling up of mountains of black money, directly causing inflation.

(3) Large hidden loss to the community by some of the best brains of the country involved in perpetual litigation.

(4) Sense of injustice and inequality which tax avoidance arouses in the minds of those who are unwilling or unable to profit by it.

(5) The unethical practice of transferring the burden of tax liability to the shoulders of the guileless, good citizens from those of the 'artful dodgers'.

The court felt that there was as much moral sanction behind taxation laws as behind any other welfare legislation and avoidance of taxation was not ethical.

In the view of the Court, the proper way to construe a taxing statute while considering a device to avoid tax was not to ask whether the provisions should be construed literally or liberally, nor whether the transaction was not unreal and not prohibited by the statute, but whether the transaction was as device to avoid tax and whether the transaction was such that the judicial process might record its approval to it.

The court felt that it was neither fair nor desirable to expect the legislature to intervene and take care of every device to avoid taxation. It was up to the court to take stock to determine the nature of the new and sophisticated legal devices to avoid tax and consider whether the situation created by the devices could be related to the existing legislation with the aid of emerging techniques of interpretation as was done in Ramsey's case to expose the devices for what they are really worth and to refuse to give judicial benediction.

The Supreme Court emphasised that tax planning may be legitimate provided it is within the framework of law and colourable devices cannot be part of tax planning. It is wrong to encourage or entertain the belief that it is honourable to avoid the payment of tax by resorting to dubious methods. The Supreme Court also recommended that it is the obligation of every citizen to pay the taxes honestly without resorting to subterfuge.

It is significant to note that in deciding Mc Dowell's case, the Supreme Court was not content in merely adjudicating the dispute as to whether sales tax was leviable on the Central Excise paid by the purchaser on behalf of the seller and not exhibited in the bill. It also stated in this case that it decided to break away from the long tradition of earlier cases holding that tax avoidance is both legitimate and legal.

Another significant case decided by the Supreme Court, though involving a dispute relating to payment of bonus, is worthy of reference at this stage as it also reflects the same thinking as in Mc Dowell's case. In Associated Rubber Industries case (1986) 157 ITR 77(SC), a new wholly owned subsidiary company was created with no asset of its own except investments transferred by the holding company with no business income, except receiving dividend from the transferred investments. The Supreme Court held that on facts, the purpose of such a transfer of investments was nothing but to reduce the gross profits of the holding company and thereby to reduce the payment of bonus. There was no direct evidence that the subsidiary was formed as a device to reduce the gross profits of the principal company for whatever purpose. But Justice Chinnappa Reddy in passing his judgment was following the principles earlier laid down by him in Mc Dowell's case and was of the opinion that the transfer of shares was nothing but a device like tax evasion to avoid a welfare legislation like the Payment of Bonus Act. It was observed that it is the duty of the Court in every case where ingenuity is expended to avoid liability to taxation and welfare legislation, to get behind the smoke screen and discover the true state of affairs.

The above decision seems to have introduced a new doctrine that it is upto the court to take stock, weigh out sophisticated legal devices and expose the devices for what they really are. The fact that this new doctrine has started gaining ground very fast is seen from a quick succession of decisions, after Mc Dowell in Kartikeya vs. Sarabhai and in Associated Rubber's case. The above change in the trend of judicial thinking clearly shows that the line of demarcation between Tax Planning and Tax avoidance.

In order to curb tax avoidance, provisions such as applicability of transfer pricing provisions in respect of specified domestic transactions, treating any transaction with the person located in the notified jurisdiction areas to be treated as international transaction, General Anti-avoidance Rules, provisions relating to furnishing of Tax Residency Certificate for claiming benefit of double tax avoidance agreements have been introduced.

The decision in Mc Dowell's case and the subsequent developments have evoked lot of debate in all legal and tax circles.

The Gujarat High Court in CIT vs. Smt. Minal Rameshchandra (1987) 61 CTR (Guj) 80 had occasion to consider the impact of Mc Dowell's case. The following propositions appear to emerge from the same.

(1) Mc Dowell's case and observations therein cannot be ignored and these are binding on all courts.

(2) Mc Dowell's case and observation therein should be understood in the context of questioning the legitimacy of use of artificial and transparent device and sham practices to circumvent the law.

(3) Where the arrangement cannot be dismissed as an artificial tax device (and not as a legitimate transaction), the subject can be taxed only having "regard to strict letter of the law and not merely to the spirit of the statute or the substance of the law" and had been consistently laid down earlier. In this sense there is no radical departure from law, prior to Mc Dowell case.

In C.W.T. vs. Arvind Narottam 173 ITR 479 (SC) judge Sabyasachi Mukerji made the following significant observations:

1. Where the language of the deed of settlement is plain and admits of no ambiguity there is no scope for considerations of tax avoidance.

2. One would wish as noted by Chinnappa Reddy in Mc Dowell's case that one could get the enthusiasm of Justice Holmes that taxes are the price of civilization and one would like to pay that price to buy civilization. But the question which many ordinary tax payers very often in a country of shortages (with ostentatious consumption and deprivation for the large masses) ask is does he with taxes buy civilization or does he facilitate the waste and ostentation of the few. Unless waste and ostentation in government spending are avoided or eschewed no amount of moral sermons would change people's attitude to tax avoidance.

3. Where the true effect on the construction of the deeds is clear, appeal to discourage tax avoidance is not a relevant consideration".

In the light of the above development we have to ascribe a proper meaning to the concept of tax-planning. We can take a cue from the structure of our tax laws.

Our tax laws tend to serve a dual purpose of collecting revenue and of achieving certain social objectives. There are in-built tax incentives which promote savings and investments in new enterprises and facilitate development of backward areas. A lot of exemptions and incentives are provided in all the direct taxes. If an assessee takes maximum advantage of these incentives, exemptions etc. and enlarges the scope of his disposable resources, there can be no objection because the legislature wants the optimum utilisation of these incentives to promote economic activity in the country. The complexity of our tax-laws makes it impossible for even an intelligent assessee to comprehend them properly and avail all the reliefs which may be genuinely provided by such laws. Moreover, the interaction of other laws such as MRTP Act, FERA, Companies Act etc. make the exercise much more complicated. It requires, therefore, meticulous planning to bring down the tax commitments keeping in view not only the statutes but also the judge-made law. We may say that the above area properly belongs to tax-planning. In this sense there is nothing unethical about tax-planning.

Due to constant changes in the law and new court decisions, it is always necessary to have a continuous review in relation to all matters of tax planning so that appropriate changes are introduced without delay.

It may be noted that the scope of the three English cases of Ramsay, Burmah Oil Company and Dawson have been substantially narrowed by a more balanced view on tax planning in the case of 'Craven vs. White'

(5) Doctrine of form and substance: One of the reasons which prompts a tax payer to resort to tax planning is the existence of the doctrine of form and substance. The principle involved in this doctrine is simple. How far Court may stretch the wording of a Statute to cover a particular set of facts, where those facts have clearly been created by a tax payer in order to avoid or minimise his tax and the literal interpretation of the Statute is not, at first sight apt to cover them? Is it possible to ignore the form of a transaction and determine the substance thereof?

In Commissioner of Income tax vs. Motor and General Stores (P) Ltd. (1967) 66 ITR 692 (SC.) the Supreme Court had observed that in the absence of any suggestion of bad faith or fraud the true principle is that the taxing statute has to be applied in accordance with the legal rights of the parties to the transaction. According to the court, when the transaction is embodied in a document the liability to tax depends upon the-meaning and content of the language used in accordance with the ordinary rules of construction. The House of Lords in Duke of Westminster vs. ICR (1936) 19 ATC 498 held that in considering the substance of the transaction, the legal form cannot be disregarded.

It was held in CIT vs. B.M. Kharwar (1969) 72 ITR 603 (SC) that the taxing authority is entitled and is indeed bound to determine the true legal relation resulting from a transaction. If the parties have chosen to conceal by device the legal relation, it is open to the taxing authority to unravel the device and to determine the true character of the relationship. However, the legal effect of a transaction cannot be displaced by probing into 'the substance of the transaction'. This principle applies alike to cases in which the legal relation is recorded in a formal document and to cases where it has to be gathered from the evidence - oral and documentary - and the conduct of the parties to the transaction. However, this view of the Supreme Court has now been expressly disapproved by the Supreme Court in Mc Dowell & Co. Ltd's case.

Justice Shah, in Ram Laxman Sugar Mills vs. CIT (1967) 66 ITR 613, 617 (SC), has stated that to ascertain the legal effect of a transaction, the court seeks, in the first instance, to determine the intention of the parties and if ambiguous expressions are used, the court may normally adopt such interpretation consistent with the parties thereto having acted on the assumption of its validity. Thus, any claim made by a tax-payer will be scrutinized from the point of view of his intention and if there was any intention to defraud the revenue, the court will consider the transaction or the claim as fraud.

Thus, we can say that unless there is clear evidence of malafide intention resulting in a form which is a "colourable device" or "mere legal facade" or "non-genuine" form the tax authorities are not justified in disregarding the legal form and probing into the substance of the transaction.

Principles governing the form and substance: Theory of interpretation of a taxing statute:

(i) It is well settled that when a transaction is arranged in one form known to law, it will attract tax liability while, if it is entered into in another form which is equally lawful, it may not. In considering, therefore, whether a transaction attracts tax or not, the form of the transaction put through by the assessee is to be considered and not the substance thereof.

(ii) The above rule cannot naturally apply where the transaction, as put through by the assessee, is not genuine but colourable or is a mere device. For here, the question is not one between 'form' and 'substance' but between appearance and truth.

(iii) In deciding whether the transaction is a genuine or colourable one, it will be open to the authorities to pierce the corporate veil and look behind the legal facade at the reality of the transaction.

(iv) Where the authorities are charged under the Act with the duty of determining the nature or purpose of and payment or receipt on the facts of a case, it is open to them to work at the substance of the matter and the formal aspect may be ignored.

(v) Where the terms of a transaction are embodied in a document, it should not be construed only in its formal or technical aspect. While the words used should be looked at, too much importance should not be attached to the name or label given by the parties and the document should be interpreted so as to accord with the real intention of the parties as appearing from the instrument.

As noted earlier, the decisions of the Supreme Court in the cases of Mc Dowell, Karthikeya Sarabhai and Associated Rubber Industries, clearly show a preference for the 'substance' over the 'form', if the circumstances of the case warrant such a preference. Where the transactions are genuine, perfectly authentic and not sham, the mere fact that the transaction results in less liability or no liability to tax should not put the transaction to a legal scrutiny questioning the substance of the transaction, attributing a motive behind it. It is up to the Court to take stock of the situation, weigh out sophisticated legal devices and expose the devices for what they really are.

(6) Successful tax planning — tests to be satisfied: Tax planning in any case will entirely depend on the individual facts and circumstances. It is a tool in the hands of the taxpayer and tax practitioners for selective use. It is essential to comprehend (a) that the facts bearing on the issue are evidenced by proof; (b) that the associated legal consequences, both under the personal and under the tax laws, are fully borne in mind; and (c) that the situation warrants implementation of "tax planning". Successful tax planning must conform to two outstanding tests viz, (a) conformity with the current law and (b) flexibility.

In order to satisfy the first test, the essential requisite is a comprehensive knowledge of the law, rules and regulations on the part of the tax planner. This knowledge of law extends not only to the provisions of the taxing statutes and the case law that has developed on those statutes, but also to other branches of law, both civil and personal, so that the tax planner's device does not get defeated by the universal principles of jurisprudence.

The second test of flexibility seeks to ensure that the success of the tax planning device is not nullified by statutory negation. Though the tax planner may be successful in seeking out a device which in his opinion is in conformity with law, the subsequent statutory negation may nullify his success. In order to counter this exigency, his tax plan must be flexible. Flexibility essentially means that the device provides for suitable changes in accepted forms. Flexibility is a practical concept. Its introduction and utilisation depend upon the circumstances of the case. Under certain circumstances, flexibility may be of no avail. As a matter of fact, flexibility may invalidate the tax plan. But when flexibility is permissible, the tax planner will do well to remember to keep this test in mind to counter the measures of statutory negation. In view of this position wherever possible, tax planning schemes should be flexible, designed so as to avoid irretrievable situations. The tax planner should, therefore, be watchful of all significant developments related to his field.

In order to be a successful venture, efforts at tax planning should not ignore the legislative intent; they should be directed in every case to see that not only the tax benefits are obtained but also the tax obligations are discharged without fail so that the penal provisions are not attracted.

(7) Retrospective Legislation: Every tax planner will inevitably have to face the question of retrospective legislation and the specific problems arising from the retrospective application of tax rates and tax amendments. Tax planning often flounders on the rock of retrospective legislation. The cardinal principle of construction is that a statute must always be interpreted prospectively unless the language of the statute makes it retrospective either expressly or by necessary implication. A retrospective operation is not to be given to a statute so as to impair vested rights or the legality of past transactions.

Unless the terms of statute expressly so provide or unless there is a necessary implication, retrospective operation should not be given to the statute so as to affect, alter or destroy any right already acquired or to revive any remedy already lost by efflux of time. If the law is amended so as to make it applicable retrospectively to any assessment year, the question at issue in respect of the assessment year will have to be decided in the light of the law so amended and it shall be so even if the matter is at the appellate, revisional or reference stage.

The history of tax laws of our country is replete with instances of retrospective amendment of law. It is obviously competent for the Legislature, in its wisdom, to make the provisions of an Act of Parliament retrospective and no one denies the competency of the Legislature to pass retrospective statutes if they think fit and many time they have done so, but, before giving such a construction to an Act of Parliament one would require that it should either appear very clearly in the terms of the Act or arise by necessary and distinct interpretation. A retrospective operation is not to be given to a statute as to impair existing right or obligation otherwise than as regards matters of procedure unless that effect cannot be avoided without doing violence to the language of the enactment. If the enactment is expressed in language which is fairly capable of either interpretation, it ought to be construed as prospective only.

In our country, the Government generally follows the principle that the changes in the rates of tax, as also the other amended provisions of tax laws, should ordinarily be made operative prospectively in relation to current incomes and not in relation to incomes of the past year. However, there are cases where the Government have thought it fit to introduce retrospective amendments in tax laws. The Supreme Court has upheld the validity of such retrospective laws. Any retrospective legislation has two aspects. For pending assessments, the amended provision would be applied. The difficulty would arise in the case of completed assessments. The effect of a retrospective legislative amendment is that the provisions as amended, shall, for all legal purposes be deemed to have been included in the statute from the date on which the amendment came into force. All orders relating to periods subsequent to the date of retrospective amendment must be in consonance with the specific and clear provisions, as amended retrospectively. Therefore, the case will be construed as if there is mistake apparent from the record which can be rectified under section 154 [M.K. Venkatachalam vs. Bombay Dyeing and Manufacturing Co. Ltd. (1958) 34 I.T.R. 143 (S.C.)]. Conversely, by virtue of a retrospective amendment, an order which was inconsistent with the clear terms of a provision at the time when the order was made, may become one in consonance with that provision and thereafter, there remains no scope for passing a rectification order [SAL. Narayana Rao vs. Ishwarlal Bhawan Das (1965) 57 L T.R. 149 (S.C.)].

For instance, the Finance Act, 2012 had introduced amendments to certain provisions of income-tax law, which were stated to be clarificatory and, accordingly, introduced with retrospective effect from the date of insertion of the respective provisions. Subsequently, considering the severity of the consequences of such retroactive amendments, the CBDT issued a clarification directing the tax authorities not to reopen completed tax assessments on account of the clarificatory amendments made by the Finance Act, 2012. However, the clarification does not extend to assessment orders which are pending adjudication before a judicial authority or if reassessment proceedings have already been initiated before 1st April 2012.

(8) Systems and methods of tax planning: The systems and methods of tax-planning in any case will depend upon the result sought to be achieved. Broadly, the various methods of tax-planning will either be short-range tax-planning or long-range tax-planning.

The short-range tax planning has limited objective. An assessee whose income is likely to register unusual growth in a particular year on account of say, sale of capital asset like house property, as compared to the preceding year might plan to invest the same in notified bonds, bonds of National Highway Authority of India or Rural Electrification Corporation Limited to claim exemption under section 54EC. This has a lock-in period of 5 years. Such a plan does not involve any permanent or long-term commitment and yet it results in substantial tax saving. This is an example of short-range tax planning.

The long-range tax planning, on the other hand, may not even confer immediate tax benefits. However, it may pay-off in none too distant a future. For instance, in a case where an assessee transfers certain shares to his spouse, the income arising from the shares will, of course, be clubbed with the transferor's income. However, if the company subsequently issues bonus shares in respect of those shares the income arising from the bonus shares will not be clubbed with the transferor's income. Similarly, the income arising out of the investment of the income from the transferred assets will not also be clubbed with the transferor's income. Long range tax planning may be resorted to even for domestic or family reasons.

In relation to income-tax, the following may be noted as illustrative instances of tax-planning measures:

(a) Varying the residential status taking into consideration the number of days of stay in India to be a resident, in case of an individual.

(b) Choosing the suitable form of assessable entity (individual, HUF, Firm, Co-operative society, Association of persons, Company, Trust, etc. to obtain optimal tax concessions)

(c) Choosing suitable forms of investment (share capital, loan capital, lease, mortgages, tax exempt investments, priority sector, etc.), considering deductions available in respect of interest, exemption available in respect of dividend etc.

(d) Programmed replacement of assets to take free advantage of the provisions governing depreciation.

(e) Diversification of the business activities (hotel industry, agro-based industry etc.) considering the various profit-linked and investment-linked benefits available under the provisions of the Act.

(f) The use of the concept of commercial expediency to claim deduction in respect of expenditure, in computing business income.

(9) Tax planning in the context of administrative legislation: It is a common feature of modern legislative enactment to lay down in the section of the Act, the principles and the policy of the Legislature leaving out details to be filled in or worked out by rules or regulations made either by the Government or by some other authority as may be empowered in the legislation. This kind of subordinate or administrative legislation is justified and even necessitated by the fact that the Legislature has neither the time nor the material to consider and enact rules relating to various details as they may not be acquainted fully with the facts and circumstances relating to the subject matter and may have no time to consider such details. Section 295(1) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 vests with the CBDT, the power to make rules for carrying out the requirements of these Acts. This power also enables the Board to give retrospective effect to any of the rules in such a way as not to prejudicially affect the interests of any taxpayer.

The various matters in respect of which the rules may be framed are specified in the relevant sections. Rules are made by the appropriate authority in exercise of the powers conferred on it under the provisions of the Act. Therefore, they have statutory force and fall within the scope of the law made by the Legislature itself. Thus, they are a part of the enactment which imposes the tax. Since the Rules are meant only for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the Act, they cannot take away what is conferred by the Act nor whittle down its effect. Therefore, rules can only be made in consonance with the provisions of the Act. They must be interpreted in the light of the section under which they are made. If there is an irreconcilable conflict between a rule and a provision in the Act, the provision in the Act is to prevail and the rule which is subordinate to the Act must give way.

Similarly, notifications are also issued in exercise of a valid authority bestowed under the statutes. Such notifications, when validly made in exercise of the authority provided for in the law, are binding on all concerned and may be enforced.

The following principles emerging from various rulings are relevant in this context.

1. The rule making authority cannot frame a rule which is contrary to the object and provisions of the Act from which its rule making power is derived.
2. A rule cannot over-reach the subject-matter relevant to the particular provision in the Act.
3. A rule cannot whittle down, negate or take away (directly or by implication or causation) the right, privilege, advantage or benefit granted by the section or the enactment relevant to it.
4. A rule cannot create any disability, limitation or other condition not sanctioned by the Act to which it is relevant or not consistent with the Act.
5. A subordinate authority cannot seek to sit in judgement over the rights of the subject nor decide questions of law and fact or otherwise usurp the functions of a Court.
6. No rule can be framed nor regulation promulgated contrary to the rules of natural justice.
7. A rule cannot seek to impose a tax which the Legislature has not thought it fit or expedient to impose.
8. A rule has to strictly confine itself to the subject-matter for which the rule-making authority has been empowered by the enactment.
9. In providing for a rule-making power, however wide the terms of that power be, as long as the Legislature has laid down the necessary guidelines for exercise of such rule-making power of the subordinate authority and as long as the Legislature has clearly laid down in the enactment the legislative object and policy and has retained in itself the ultimate legislative power, the enactment delegating power to a subordinate authority cannot be said to be ultra vires the Legislature or the enactment.

10. Both a rule and a provision of law are equally bound to respect the constitutional protection and fundamental right of the citizen enshrined in Article 14 of the Constitution.

11. Merely because a rule is subsequently laid before the Parliament, it cannot be given the status of a law of Parliament.

12. As in the case of an enactment, if a rule classifies persons and objects into identifiable classes and such classification is relevant to the purpose of the enactment and for carrying out the provisions of the Act, it cannot be called in question.

13. A rule has no retrospective operation unless the Act to which it is relevant specifically provides for the making of rules having retrospective operation.

14. The power to notify or to exempt also carries with it necessarily the power to denotify, rescind or withdraw the notification or exemption.

The above principles may be kept in mind while deciding about embarking on tax-planning.

Section 119(1) enacts that all officers and other persons employed in the execution of that Act shall observe and follow the orders and instruction or direction of the Board, provided that no such orders, instructions or directions shall be given so as to interfere with the discretion of the Commissioner (Appeals) 'in the exercise of his appellate functions. It is judicially settled that the Circulars issued by the Board would be binding under Section 119 on all the officers and persons employed in the execution of the Act [Navnilal vs. Sen (1965) 56 I.T.R. (198 SC)]. Consequently, if the Assessing Officer contravenes any circular issued by the Board in respect of, say, non-eligibility to tax of a certain item of receipt, he can be called upon by the appellate authority [the Commissioner (Appeals) or the Appellate Tribunal] to obey such a circular. The circular is not such a law that it should be taken judicial notice of; but after the circular has been brought to the notice of appellate authority, it would be competent to the appellate authority to direct the Assessing Officer to correct his mistakes in his not giving effect to the circular. However, it may be noted that opinions expressed by the CBDT in its individual communication to the assessee on issues affecting (for example, as to when the new industrial undertaking eligible for deduction under section 80-IC established by the assessee began to manufacture or produce articles in specified States) cannot be considered as directions binding on the Income-tax authorities under section 119. The CBDT is not competent to give directions regarding the exercise of any judicial power by its subordinate authorities [J.K. Synthetics Ltd. and other vs. CBDT (1972) 83 ITR 335 (SC)].

The various judicial rulings which have considered the legal aspects of Circulars under the Income-tax Act, 1961 point out the following:

(i) The instructions of the Board are binding on the Department but not on the assessee.

(ii) The instructions in favour of the assessee should be followed by the Department, irrespective of the question of their legality; but the instructions adverse to the assessee can be challenged by the assessee.

(iii) Instructions adverse to the assessee cannot be issued with retrospective effect, while instructions favourable to the assessee can be so issued.

(iv) Instruction withdrawn subsequently should be given effect to by the Assessing Officer for the assessment year for which they were in force even though they are withdrawn at the a time he makes the assessment.

(v) In the exercise of its power, the Board cannot impose a burden or put the assessee in a worse position but the Board can grant relief or relax the rigour of the law.

(vi) No instruction or circular can go against the provisions of the Act. While the Board can relax the rigours of the law or grant relief which is not to be found in the terms of the statute, it cannot issue any instruction which will be ultra vires of the provisions of the statute.

(vii) No such orders, instructions or directions shall be issued — (a) so as to require any income-tax authority to make a particular assessment or to dispose of a particular case in a particular manner or (b) so as to interfere with the discretion of the Deputy Commissioner (Appeals) or the Commissioner (Appeals) in the exercise of his appellate functions.

In making an assessment or levying a penalty, the Assessing Officer exercises a quasi-judicial power conferred on him by the Statute and has to act independently. He cannot act on advice of a stranger even though that person may be an authority superior to him in official hierarchy — Sheo Shankar Sitaram (1974) 95 ITR 523 (All).

(viii) Administrative instructions cannot also override the statutory rules.

In view of this position, the tax planner, while planning his affairs or that of his clients must take into account not only the relevant legal provisions which affect him but also all relevant rules, notifications, circulars, etc. As for circulars, since they are in the nature of administrative or executive instructions, the possibility that they might be withdrawn by the Board at any time, should also be taken into account. They may be challenged in the Courts although, otherwise they are binding at the administrative level (i.e., below thee High Court or the Tribunal). In case where the circulars are based on erroneous and untenable footings, they are also liable to be quashed by the Court/Government.

(10) System of advance rulings: A ruling is a statement in writing to a taxpayer from the prescribed tax administering authority which interprets and applies the law and regulation to a specific set of facts and states a conclusion as to the tax consequences of that particular transaction. As the rulings are given in advance of the concerned transactions they are called advance rulings. The advance rulings given are binding on the tax authorities and the applicant who had sought such ruling, with reference to the particular cases in respect of which they are given. A change in the facts can affect the basis of the rulings because the law often pivots on a date, an amount, type of tax payer and so on. Likewise, a ruling issued with respect to one transaction may not be good to the same tax payer for a subsequent transaction even on what might appear to be identical facts.

Advance rulings are an excellent device for fostering and encouraging the self-assessment system and would contribute to good relations between the administration and tax paying public. From the tax payer's point of view, these rulings are most desirable because they give more assurance of certainty prior to entering into a transaction and guarantee more uniformity in the application of the tax legislation. They are desirable for the administration also as they minimise the scope for controversy and litigation, reduce the time spent in answering question from tax payers and help to achieve a fair and co-ordinated tax administration.

Advance Ruling means written opinion or authoritative decision by an Authority empowered to render it with regard to the tax consequences of a transaction or proposed transaction or an assessment in regard thereto. The term has been defined in section 245N(a) of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

Chapter XIX-B of the Income-tax Act, 1961, provides for a scheme of advance rulings. For detailed reading, students may refer to Chapter 4 of Part II: International Taxation.

(11) Construction and Interpretation: No tax can be imposed on the subject without words in the Act clearly showing an intention to lay a burden upon him. In other words, the subject cannot be taxed unless he comes within the letter of the law.

(a) Natural Justice: This, however, does not mean that there is no scope for natural justice. Tax laws have to be interpreted reasonably and in consonance with justice. Where a literal construction would defeat the obvious intention of the legislation and produce a wholly unseasonable result, the court must achieve that obvious intention and produce a rational construction. If the interpretation of a fiscal enactment is open to doubts, the construction most beneficial to the subject should be adopted, even if it results in his obtaining "a double advantage". A provision for exemption of relief should be construed liberally and in favour of the assessee. Likewise, a provision for appeal should be liberally construed. In cases of doubt regarding the construction, assistance may be sought from previous judicial interpretation or from previous legislation or by adverting to the mischief intended to be suppressed. A subsequent enactment affords no useful guide to the interpretation of earlier law, unless it is on the same subject and the earlier law is ambiguous.

Generally speaking, the sections in the Act do not overlap one another and each section completely covers the matter with which it deals. As far as possible the Act should be construed in such a way as to reconcile the various provisions and unravel apparent conflict into harmony bearing in mind that a general provision cannot derogate from a special provision regarding a certain class of cases. If a case appears to be governed by either of two provisions, it is clearly the right of the assessee to claim that he should be assessed under that one which leaves him with a lighter burden.

Those sections which impose the change of levy should be strictly construed but those which deal merely with the machinery of assessment and collection should not be subjected to a rigorous construction but should be construed in a way that makes the machinery workable.

The draft of a Bill which is afterwards enacted in the form of a statute and the report of a Commission or Select Committee appointed to deal with the subject are not admissible as aids in construing the provisions of the Act but the statement of objects and reasons may be referred to for the limited purpose of ascertaining the conditions prevailing at the time and the extent and urgency of the defect sought to be remedied.

(b) Definition clause and undefined words: A definition or interpretation clause which extends the meaning of a word should not be construed as taking away its ordinary meaning. Further, such a clause should be so interpreted as not to destroy the basic concept or essential meaning of the expression defined, unless there are competing words to the contrary. Words used in the sections of the Act are presumed to have been used correctly and exactly as defined in the Act and it is for those who assert the contrary to show that there is something repugnant in the subject or context. Words which are not specifically defined must be taken in their legal sense or their dictionary meaning or their popular or commercial sense as distinct from their scientific or technical meaning unless a contrary intention appears.

(c) Legal fiction: The word "deemed" may include the obvious, the uncertain and the impossible. A legal fiction has to be carried to its logical conclusion but only within the field of definite purpose for which the fiction is created. As far as possible, a legal fiction should not be so interpreted as to work injustice.

(d) Marginal Notes: Marginal notes to the sections cannot control the construction of the statute but they may throw light on the intention of the legislature.

(e) Provisos: A proviso cannot be held to control the substantial enactment or to withdraw by mere implication any part of what the main provision has given. A proviso is not applicable unless the substantive clause is applicable to the facts of the case. The proper function of a proviso is to provide an exception to a case which would otherwise fall within the general language of the main enactment and its effect as confined to that case. However, a proviso may be read as an independent substantive enactment where the context warrants such construction. Whether a proviso is construed as restricting the main provision or as a substantive clause, it cannot be divorced from the provision to which it stands as a proviso. It must be construed harmoniously with the main enactment.

(12) Doctrine of Precedence: Doctrine of Precedence would be applicable in case of tax laws. The following principles which govern the rule of precedence may be noted.

- Supreme Court:

    (i) The Supreme Court judgments are absolutely binding on all the courts, Tribunals and authorities.

(ii) Not only the ratio decidendi, but also obiter dicta of the Supreme Court are binding on all the Courts.

(iii) When there are two irreconcilable decisions of the Supreme Court on some point of law, the decision of a larger Bench shall prevail.

(iv) When there are two irreconcilable decisions of two Benches of similar strength, the decision later in time will have to be followed by the lower courts.

(v) The Supreme Court judgments cannot be ignored by the lower courts though such judgments are per incuriam.

(vi) The Supreme Court, though expected to follow its own judgments, is not bound to follow them and in appropriate cases it can review its earlier judgment.

♦ High Courts:

(i) A Division Bench of a High Court is generally bound by its earlier decision, but it may refuse to follow the same if the earlier judgment is per incuriam.

(ii) If the Division Bench of a High Court does not agree with its earlier judgment it will have to either follow the same or refer the issue to a Full Bench.

(iii) A Division Bench of High Court is bound to follow a decision of the Full Bench of the same High Court.

(iv) A single judge of a High Court is bound by a decision of a Division Bench or of the Full Bench of the same High Court.

(v) A single judge of a High Court is not bound to follow the decision of another single judge, though he is expected to follow the same.

(vi) All the lower authorities, courts and tribunals are absolutely bound to follow the decision of a High Court within whose jurisdiction they function. Here, the High Court decisions include decision of a single judge.

(vii) The lower authorities and courts can ignore a decision of a High Court only if it is overruled by a larger Bench of the same High Court, or by the Supreme Court or by a later enactment.

♦ Others:

(i) The Assessing Officer and the Commissioner, while acting under section 263, cannot refuse to follow the decision of High Court. They cannot pass orders which are inconsistent with the decisions of the High Court within whose jurisdiction they function, even for the purpose of keeping the issue alive.

(ii) In all Indian Acts like the Income-tax Act, 1961, to keep the uniformity of law, a High Court should normally follow the decision of another High Court, unless it finds an overriding reason not to follow the same.

(iii) The lower appellate authorities are bound to follow the decision of another High Court, though they do not function within the jurisdiction of the said High Court, if there is no contrary decision of any other High Court.

(iv) The Assessing Officer or the Commissioner need not follow the decision of another High Court if the department has not accepted the said decision and has taken the matter to Supreme Court.

(v) The Bench of the Appellate Tribunal, should generally follow the orders of other Benches of the Tribunal, unless those orders of the Tribunal are per incuriam.

(vi) An order of a Full Bench of a Tribunal is binding on the ordinary Bench of the Tribunal.

(vii) If an ordinary bench of a Tribunal does not agree with an order of another Bench of the Tribunal, and that order of the another Bench of the Tribunal is not per incuriam, the Bench cannot differ from the view taken by the other Bench. It can only get the matter referred to a larger Bench. But this is subject to the general rule that as far as possible, the Bench should try to follow the orders of the Benches.

(viii) The Tribunal orders are binding on the Commissioner (Appeals) falling within the territorial jurisdiction of the Tribunal passing the order in question.

(ix) The Assessing Officer and the Commissioner are bound by the order of the Tribunal (falling within the jurisdiction of the Tribunal unless the Department has not accepted the decision of the Tribunal.)

(13) Diversion of income by overriding title and application of income: The concept of 'diversion of income by overriding title' signifies diversion of income at source by an overriding title before it reaches an assessee. Such a diversion can take place either under a legal compulsion or under a contractual obligation or otherwise. An obligation to apply the income in a particular way before it has accrued or arisen to the assessee results in the diversion of the income. On the other hand, an obligation to apply income which has accrued or arisen or has been received amounts merely to the apportionment or application of the income and not to its diversion. Sometimes the dividing line between diversion by overriding title and the application of income after it has accrued is somewhat thin.

When income or a portion of income is diverted at the source by an overriding title before it started flowing into the channel which was to reach the assessee concerned it could be excluded from his assessable income. Wherever there is such diversion of income, such diverted income, cannot be included in the total income of the assessee who claims that there has been a diversion. On the other hand, where income has accrued or arisen in the hands of the assessee, its subsequent application in any way will not affect the tax liability.

In order to decide whether a particular disbursement amounts to diversion or application of income, the true test is to probe into and decide whether the amount sought to be deducted, in truth, did not reach the assessee as his own income. It is the nature of the obligation that is the decisive fact. There is a difference between an amount which a person is obliged to apply out of his income and an amount which by the nature of the obligation cannot be said to be a part of his income. It is the nature of the obligation that is the decisive fact. There is a difference between an amount which a person is obliged to apply out of his income and an amount which by the nature of the obligation cannot be said to be a part of his income. Where, by obligation, income is diverted before it reaches the assessee, it is deductible; but where the income is required to be applied to discharge an obligation after such income reaches the assessee, the same consequence, in law, does not follow. In order that there is diversion at source of the income, the obligation is to attach to the source which yields income and not to the income only. This was so held in CIT vs. Sital Doss Twath 41 ITR 367 (SC), M.K. Brothers Pvt. Ltd. vs. CIT 86 ITR 38 (SC). In many cases, it would really be a matter of proper drafting of the document creating the obligation, though, in substance, the result in both the situations may appear similar.

For the purpose of tax planning, the concept of 'diversion by overriding title' would have better scope for exploitation than the concept of 'application of income'. This is because, as pointed out above, where income is diverted by overriding title such diverted income is not taxed in the hands of the person who claims such diversion. On the other hand, the concept of application of income envisages first the accruing or arising of income and when once it has come within the grasp of the Income-tax Act, 1961 it is liable to income-tax whatever may be its destination or whomever it may be applied for. Therefore, if an overriding charge is created by the assessee either voluntarily or in pursuance of an obligation, whether pre-existing or not, the assessee may be able to invoke the principle of diversion of income by overriding charge. This is, of course, subject to the provisions of sections 60 to 64, which have the effect of getting over this principle in some situations.

14.2 TAX PLANNING CONSIDERATIONS IN RESPECT OF SALARY INCOME

The scope for tax planning from the angle of employees is limited. The definition of salary is very wide and includes not only monetary salary but also benefits and perquisites in kind. The only deductions available in respect of salary income are the deduction for entertainment allowance and deduction for professional tax. Therefore, the scope for tax planning in respect of salary income is severely limited. However, the following are some ideas of tax planning in regard to salary income.

(1) Salary Structure: The employer should not pay a consolidated amount as salary to the employee. If it is so paid, the entire amount of salary will become taxable without any exemption. Therefore, he can split the same and pay it as basic salary plus various allowances and perquisites.

For example, the employer should include allowances as part of the salary structure of the employees for which exemption can be claimed under Rule 2BB, eg. Children education allowance, hostel allowance, house rent allowance etc. The employer will get a deduction of all the above amounts paid in his assessment.

Further, the employer can give such allowances like special compensatory allowance, border area allowance or remote area allowance or difficult area allowance or disturbed area allowance depending upon the posting of the employee. Some exemptions are available in respect of these allowances. In this connection, Rule 2BB specifies the exempt allowances. The employer has to make a careful study and fix the salary structure in such a manner that it will include allowances which are exempt.

Standard deduction of ₹ 50,000 or the amount of gross salary, whichever is less, is allowed as deduction under section 16(ia).

(2) Employees' welfare schemes: There are several employees' welfare schemes such as recognised provident fund, approved superannuation fund, gratuity fund. Payments received from such funds by the employees are totally exempt or exempt upto significant amounts.

For example, gratuity received by an employee covered under the Payment of Gratuity Act, 1972 is exempt upto ₹ 20 lakh. The entire provident fund received by the employee from recognised provident fund is exempt. The employer is well advised to institute such welfare schemes for the benefit of the employees. Such amount contributed by the employer towards the above funds are deductible. However, a note of caution is necessary here in view of the restrictive provisions of section 40A(9) which disallows any contribution made to any welfare funds except where such contributions are covered by section 36(1)(iv)/(iva)/(v) or as required by or under any other law for the time being in force. In this connection, it may be noted that section 10(23AAA) exempts any income of a staff welfare fund subject to the satisfaction of certain conditions. However, in the absence of an amendment to section 40A(9), contribution to such welfare trusts can be disallowed by the Assessing Officer. Further, the employer can contribute to recognized provident fund account of the employee upto 12% of salary, and the same would not be taxable in the hands of the employees.

(3) Insurance policies: Any payment made by an employer on behalf of an employee to maintain a life policy will be treated as perquisite in the hands of the employee. Further, payments received from the employer in respect of keyman insurance policies constitute income in the hands of the employees. However, the payment of premium by the employer on behalf of the employee will not be treated as a perquisite in the case of accident insurance policies. This is due to the fact that the employer has a vested interest in the safety of the life of his employee who is engaged in such dangerous occupations. [CIT v Lala Shri Dhar (1972) 84 ITR 192 (Del) and CIT v Vinay Bharat Ram (1981) 129 ITR 128 (Del)]. Further, any sum paid by the employer in respect of any mediclaim premium paid by the employee to keep in force an insurance on his health or the health of any member of his family under any scheme approved by the Central Government or IRDA for the purpose of section 80D is not a perquisite in the hands of the employee.

(4) Dearness allowance, dearness pay: The employer should ensure that dearness allowance and dearness pay should form part of "salary". This is because certain items like entertainment allowance, gratuity, commuted pension and the employer's contribution to the recognised provident fund etc. are calculated on the basis of salary. Therefore, if dearness allowance, dearness pay etc. are included in salary, the above benefits will also increase leading to higher exemption in the hands of the employee.

(5) Commission: The Supreme Court, in Gestetner Duplicators Pvt. Ltd. v. CIT 117 ITR 1, has held that if, under the terms of employment, commission is payable at a fixed percentage of turnover achieved by an employee such commission should be taken into account for calculating "salary" for the purpose of gratuity etc. The employer will be well advised to provide for such commission.

(6) Leave travel facility : The employer should extend leave travel facility to the employees at all levels. Under section 10(5) of the Income-tax Act, 1961, exemption is provided in the hands of the employee in respect of leave travel concession. Such exemption is available for the employee, spouse, children (to a maximum of 2 children), dependent parents, dependent brothers and dependent sisters.

(7) Rent free accommodation / House Rent Allowance (HRA): An employee should analyse the tax incidence of a perquisite and an allowance, whenever he is given an option, in order to choose the one which is more beneficial to him. In the case of Rent Free Accommodation vs. HRA, it must be noted that the perquisite of rent free accommodation is taxed as per Rule 3(1) of the Income-tax Rules, 1962 and HRA is exempt to the extent mentioned in section 10(13A) read with Rule 2A. The employee should therefore work out his tax liability and net cash flow under both the options and then, decide on whether to receive HRA or choose a rent free accommodation.

(8) Uncommuted/Commuted pension: Uncommuted pension is fully taxable. Therefore, the employees should get their pension commuted. Commuted pension is fully exempt from tax in the case of government employees and partly exempt from tax in the case of non-government employees.

(9) Provident Fund: Where an employee who is a member of a recognised provident fund and who resigns before completing five years of continuous service should ensure that he joins a firm which maintains a recognised provident fund. The accumulated balance of the provident fund with the previous employer will be exempt from tax provided the same is transferred to the new employer who also maintains a recognised provident fund.

(10) Retirement benefits: Incidence of tax on retirement benefits like gratuity, commuted pension, accumulated balance of unrecognized provident fund is lower if they are paid in the beginning of the financial year.

The employer and the employees should mutually plan their affairs in such a way that retirement takes place in the beginning of a financial year.

(11) Pension received by non-residents: Pension received in India by a non-resident assessee from abroad is taxable in India. If, however, such pension is first received by or on behalf of the employee in a foreign country and later on remitted to India, it will be exempt from tax.

(12) Accident insurance: In respect of accident insurance policies, the decision of the Supreme Court in CIT v. L.W.Russel (1964) 53 ITR 91 points out that the term perquisite applied to only such sums in regard to which there was an obligation on the part of the employer to pay and a vested right on the part of the employee. If the employee has no vested interest in the policy, it cannot be considered as a perquisite. In view of this position, in cases where an employer takes out accident insurance policy covering all workmen and staff members and pays insurance premium and whenever any worker/staff member meets with an accident and the amount of claim is received from the insurance company and the same is paid away by the employer to the said worker or his family members, the premium paid by the employer in respect of group accident policies could not be considered as a perquisite, under section 17 to be added in the salary income of any employee [CIT v. Lala Shri Dhar (1972) 84 ITR 192(Delhi)]. The amount received from insurance company on accident or death by employee or his dependents will not also be in the nature of income but a capital receipt and therefore the same will not be taxable.

(13) Exempt perquisites: The following are the perquisites which are exempt from tax–

(i) Use of computers and laptop by employee;

(ii) Medical facility in employer's own hospital or a public hospital or Government or other approved hospital;

(iii) Educational benefit in a school run by employer provided value of benefit does not exceed ₹ 1,000 per month per child.

(14) Considerations for salary structuring: The perquisite valuation rules prescribe the method for valuing the various perquisites provided by the employer to his employees on the basis of the cost of such perquisites to the employee. For a detailed study, students are advised to refer to the chapter on 'Salaries'. Accordingly, the entire salary structuring for employees will have to be done after carefully weighing the pros and cons of paying cash salary or allowing the benefit of perquisites in kind to the employees.

14.3 TAX PLANNING CONSIDERATIONS IN RELATION TO BUSINESS

The scope of income liable to tax under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" covered by Section 28 to 44D of the Income-tax Act, 1961 has been discussed earlier. The object of this part of the study material is to discuss from the angle of tax planning the various areas in which tax payer will have to take appropriate decisions to ensure that the incidence of tax in respect of his income chargeable under this head is reduced to the extent possible, by taking advantage of the various allowances, deductions and other tax concessions provided under the law.

For a new business, the spheres in which the question of tax planning is relevant are as follows:

(i) Form of the organisation

(ii) Nature of the business

(iii) Financial Structure

(iv) Acquisition of plant and machinery and other fixed assets

(v) Setting up and commencement of business

Each of these aspects will be considered briefly in the following paragraphs. In addition, there is lot of scope for planning with reference to the method of accounting to be employed and the various deductions and special incentives provided under the Income-tax Act, 1961. Certain special tax planning considerations relevant to specific management decisions, foreign collaboration agreements and other related matters are also discussed.

(1) Form of Business Organisation: The choice of the appropriate form of business organisation will have to be thought of and decided by the person who intends to carry on business or profession at the beginning itself, because a change in the form of business organisation after the commencement of the business, may attract liability to tax.

A new business can be organised under any of the following forms:

(i) Sole proprietorship

(ii) Hindu undivided family

(iii) Association of persons or Body of Individuals

(iv) Partnership firm/LLP

(v) Company

(vi) Co-operative society

The selection of a particular form of organisation would depend not only on the tax aspect but on other considerations also, e.g., financial requirements and resources, requirement of limited liability and many other practical considerations.

However, depending upon the taxable status and level of tax liability of the owners, a selection can be made from the various forms available for setting up a new unit.

♦ Sole Proprietorship: In the case of a sole proprietorship concern, one of the important tax disadvantages would be that no allowance or relief would be available to the tax payer in computing his income from business in respect of even a reasonable amount of remuneration attributable to the services rendered by him for carrying on the business. As a result, the taxable income arrived at would be a larger amount than what it would have been if it had been the case of, say, a firm paying remuneration to partners, such remuneration is allowable subject to the limits specified in section 40(b)(v). The taxable income from business would get reduced and correspondingly, the incidence of tax would also be reduced.

Under sole proprietorship, the entire income of a business unit gets assessed in the hands of the same person along with other income, while the entire loss and other allowances shall be available for set off in his hands against other income. This may have some advantage in the initial years, after which the possibility of converting it into company/firm may be considered; on such conversion, the questions of possible capital gains tax, etc., will have to be considered.

- Hindu Undivided Family: The Hindu undivided family as a unit of taxation continues to exist for the purpose of carrying on business as well and there is a large number of cases where business is carried on by the members of the family on behalf on the family. Since the law does not specifically provide for the disallowance of such expenses, it is advantageous to carry on a business through the HUF wherever possible. The income of the family is computed and first taxed in the hands of the family at the rates applicable to it. The income of the family may, thereafter, be divided amongst the members of the family and the members, in such cases, do not attract any liability to tax in view of the specific exemption granted under section 10(2) of the Income-tax Act, 1961. Thus, if a business is carried on by a Hindu undivided family, the advantages which are available in the case of a company could be fully availed of and in addition, the members of the family would not become liable to tax when they receive any portion of the family's income.

- Partnership Firm/LLP: All firms and LLPs will be taxed at a flat rate of 30%. If the total income exceeds ₹ 1 crore, surcharge @ 12% would be attracted. Further, health and education cess @4% would be applicable. There will be no initial exemption and the entire income will be taxed. In computing the taxable income of a firm, certain prescribed deductions in respect of interest and remuneration have to be allowed. The share income of a firm in the hands of the partners of the firm which is separately assessed as such is fully exempt under section 10(2A).

Note: An Individual, HUF or a partnership firm (but not an LLP), who is a resident carrying on eligible business can declare income on presumptive basis as per the provisions of section 44AD @ 8% of gross receipts (6% in case gross receipts are received by an account payee cheque/bank draft/use of ECS through bank account/through any other electronic mode as may be prescribed).

An assessee, being a resident in India, carrying on notified profession can declare income on presumptive basis@ 50% of gross receipts as per the provisions of section 44ADA. In such a case, they need not get their books of account audited as per section 44AB.

- Company: For any large venture requiring substantial investment and recourse to borrowed funds from banks and institutions, ordinarily the form of a limited company will have to be adopted. Within the company form of organisation, however, several alternatives exist. On the basis of the ownership and control, a company can either be organised as a widely held company, i.e. a company in which the public are substantially interested within the meaning of section 2(18) of the Income-tax Act, 1961. Alternatively, it can be organised as a closely held company. Depending upon the choice of the form of organisation of the company, the following important tax consequences would have to be considered from the view point of tax planning:

(i) The provisions of section 79 regarding restrictions on carry forward of losses in the event of substantial change in the shareholding of the company also become applicable if the company is one in which the public are not substantially interested. This aspect would assume particular significance in the case of closely held companies where losses are made and shareholdings are transferred before such losses are fully absorbed.

(ii) It is significant to note that domestic companies have to pay tax @ 17.472% (15% plus surcharge @ 12% plus cess @ 4%) on dividend declared, distributed or paid by applying grossing up. In case deemed dividend under section 2(22)(e), the rate of dividend distribution tax is 34.944% (i.e., tax @ 30% plus surcharge @ 12% plus cess @ 4% without grossing up).

For further details students may refer to Chapter 12 on "Assessment of Various Entities".

(iii) Also, MAT provisions are applicable to companies. It so happens that in case of companies enjoying tax holiday benefits still have to pay tax under MAT provisions, credit of which also cumulated for number of years without being used causing significant outflow of funds in the initial years.

Thus, it can be seen that the concept of deemed dividend under section 2(22)(e) and the provisions of section 79 do not apply to a widely held company.

Place of Effective Management (PoEM) framework is introduced to determine the tax payable by a foreign company that for all purposes is managed from India and yet does not pay tax domestically. Many Indian companies that have traditionally used holding companies and subsidiaries overseas for various reasons are assessing how they may be affected and are racing to put new structures in place before they come under scrutiny. These provisions provide for a foreign company to be a resident of India, if the company's place of effective management is in India. If a company's POEM is situated in India; it will be treated as Indian resident. Its global income will be taxable in India. It will have to file its tax returns, audit reports etc. with income tax department in India.

Rate of tax: The income-tax rate on foreign companies is higher at 40% plus surcharge @ 2% (if total income exceeds ₹ 1 crore but does not exceed ₹ 10 crore) and @ 5%, if the total income exceeds ₹ 10 crore as against 30% (plus surcharge @ 7%, if total income exceeds ₹ 1 crore but does not exceed ₹ 10 crore and @ 12%, if total income exceeds ₹ 10 crore) on domestic companies. This is so because distributions by the former are generally not liable to tax in India.

Note – The Taxation Laws (Amendment) Ordinance, 2019 was promulgated by the President of India on 20.9.2019 to amend the Income-tax Act, 1961 and the Finance (No.2) Act, 2019 and is in force[1]. This Ordinance has inserted two new sections, section 115BAA and 115BAB, in the Income-tax Act, 1961 to be applicable from A.Y.2020-21.

Section 115BAA provides for concessional rate of tax@22% (plus surcharge@10% and HEC@4%) for domestic companies, subject to certain conditions, like non-availability of profit-linked deductions and investment-linked tax deduction under the Act, non-availability of deduction (weighted or otherwise) for contribution to research and development, additional depreciation etc.

Section 115BAB provides for concessional rate of tax@15% (plus surcharge@10% plus HEC@4%) to new manufacturing domestic companies set up and registered on or after 1.10.2019, and commences manufacturing on or before 31.3.2023, subject to certain conditions, like non-availability of profit-linked deductions and investment-linked tax deduction under the Act, non-availability of deduction (weighted or otherwise) for contribution to research and development, additional depreciation etc.

Domestic Companies have to exercise the option to be governed by these special provisions of the Act. The option for section 115BAB has to be exercised in the very first year in which the eligible company is set up, failing which it cannot exercise such option in the future years. However, a company eligible to exercise option u/s 115BAA can defer exercise of such option to a future year, if it is availing sizable profit-linked or investment-linked deductions or additional depreciation in the P.Y.2019-20. However, once the company exercises such option in any year, it would continue to be governed by the special provisions u/s 115BAA thereafter and cannot opt for regular provisions in any subsequent year.

It may be noted that companies exercising option under section 115BAA or section 115BAB are not liable to minimum alternate tax under section 115JB.

These two sections, namely sections 115BAA and 115BAB have been detailed in Annexure. These sections would come into effect from A.Y.2020-21 after passing of the Taxation Laws (Amendment) Ordinance, 2019 by the Parliament.

Also, certain tax incentives available to domestic companies are not available to foreign companies like amortisation of preliminary expenses. It is advantageous, from tax angle, for foreign corporations intending to do business in India to do so through a subsidiary instead of directly through a branch.

- Co-operatives: The co-operative form of business organisation, i.e., a co-operative society would also be advantageous from the tax angle and, in addition to the general benefits flowing from the co-operative form the society, can claim deduction in respect of the reasonable amount of remuneration payable to the members of the society for their services rendered, including the amount of commission, if any, payable to them and the interest on the deposits or loans given by them. The co-operative society is entitled to a further tax benefit arising from section 80P under which the income of a co-operative society is exempted from tax under different circumstances depending upon the nature of the income and/or the amount thereof. In addition to the various tax concessions which are available to all assessees, the co-operative society stands to gain substantially by virtue of the special benefits available to it under section 80P. The profits of the society remaining after payment of tax would be distributed by it amongst its members in the form of dividends subject to the relevant legislation.

However, it may be noted that benefit under section 80P has been withdrawn w.e.f. A.Y.2007-08 in respect of all co-operative banks, other than primary agricultural credit societies (i.e. as defined in Part V of the Banking Regulation Act, 1949) and primary co-operative agricultural and rural development banks (i.e. societies having its area of operation confined to a taluk and the principal object of which is to provide for long-term credit for agricultural and rural development activities). This is for the purpose of treating co-operative banks at par with other commercial banks, which do not enjoy similar tax benefits.

From the above analysis of various forms of the organisation and their treatment for income-tax purposes, it may be appreciated that the provisions of the taxation laws have a considerable influence on the entrepreneurs in their choice of particular form of the organisation that they should establish.

ILLUSTRATION 1

Mr. Gavaskar sought voluntary retirement from a Government of India Undertaking and received compensation of ₹ 40 lacs on 31st January, 2019. He is planning to use the money as capital for a business dealership in electronic goods. The manufacturer of the product requires a security deposit of ₹ 15 lacs, which would carry interest at 8% p.a. Gavaskar’s wife is a graduate and has worked as marketing manager in a multinational company for 15 years. She now looks for a change in employment. She is willing to join her husband in running the business. She expects an annual income of ₹ 5 lacs. Mr. Gavaskar would like to draw a monthly remuneration of ₹ 40,000 and also interest @ 10% p.a. on his capital in the business. Mr. Gavaskar has approached you for a tax efficient structure of the business.

Discuss the various issues, which are required to be considered for formulating your advice. Computation of income or tax liability is not required.

SOLUTION

The selection of the form of organisation to carry on any business activity is essential in view of the differential tax rates prescribed under the Income-tax Act, 1961 and specific concessions and deductions available under the Act in respect of different entities. For the purpose of formulating advice as to the tax efficient structure of the business, it is necessary for the tax consultant to consider the following issues:

(i) In the case of sole proprietary concern, interest on capital and remuneration paid to the proprietor is not allowable as deduction under section 37(1) as the expenditure is of personal nature. On the other hand, in the case of partnership firm, both interest on capital and remuneration payable to partners are allowable under section 37(1) subject to the conditions and limits laid down in section 40(b). The partnership should be evidenced by an instrument and the individual share of partners should be specified in the instrument. Remuneration and interest should however, be authorised by the instrument of partnership and paid in accordance with such instrument. Such interest and salary shall be taxable in the hands of partners to the extent the same is allowed as deduction in the hands of the firm under section 40(b). Interest to partners can be allowed up to 12% on simple interest basis, while the limit for allowability for partners' remuneration is based on book profit under section 40(b). As per section 40(b)(v), partners' remuneration shall be allowed to the extent of aggregate of -

(a) On the first ₹ 3,00,000 of book profit or in case of loss – ₹ 1,50,000 or at the rate of 90% of book profits, whichever is more

(b) On the balance of book profit – at the rate of 60%

Note – However, if the firm is eligible to opt for presumptive taxation under section 44AD, 8% of gross receipts or 6% of gross receipts, as the case may be, would be deemed as its income. All deductions under section 30 to 37 are deemed to be allowed. No deduction is allowable, including deduction for partner's remuneration and interest on capital.

(ii) Partner's share in the profits of firm is not taxed in the hands of the partners by virtue of section 10(2A).

(iii) If a proprietary concern is formed, the salary of Mrs. Gavaskar shall be allowed as deduction under section 37(1).

(iv) The possibility of invoking section 40A(2) cannot be ruled out as salary is payable to a relative, who is an interested person within the meaning of section 40A(2). However, it can be argued successfully that salary of ₹ 5 lacs is justified in view of her long experience as marketing manager of a multinational company and the fair market value of services to be rendered by her to the concern.

(v) An issue arises as to whether remuneration of Mrs. Gavaskar would be includible in the total income of Mr. Gavaskar. Under section 64(1)(ii), remuneration of the spouse of an individual working in a concern in which the individual is having a substantial interest shall be included in the total income of the individual. However, the clubbing provision does not apply if the spouse possesses technical or professional qualification and the income is solely attributable to the application of his or her technical or professional knowledge and experience. Further, technical or professional qualification would not necessarily mean the qualifications obtained by degree or diploma of any recognized body [Batta Kalyani vs. CIT (1985) 154 ITR 0059 (AP)]. The experience of Mrs. Gavaskar as a marketing manager in a multinational company for 15 years may reasonably be considered as a professional qualification for this purpose.

(vi) If Mrs. Gavaskar joins the proprietary concern or partnership concern of her husband as employee, remuneration of ₹ 5 lacs shall be taxed in her hands under the head "salary".

(vii) If she joins as partner in the business, remuneration shall be taxed in her hand as business income under section 28 to the extent such remuneration is allowed in the hands of the firm under section 40(b).

(viii) The tax rate applicable to an individual depends on the level of his/her income, whereas for partnership firms it is flat rate at 30%. Surcharge @ 12% would be attracted only if total income exceeds ₹ 1 crore. For individuals, the rate of tax is 5% on income exceeding ₹ 2.50 lakhs but not exceeding ₹ 5 lakhs; 20% for total income exceeding ₹ 5 lakhs but not exceeding ₹ 10 lakhs and @ 30% in respect of income exceeding ₹ 10 lakhs for the assessment year 2020-21. The surcharge for total income exceeding ₹ 50 lakhs but not exceeding ₹ 1 crore is 10% of tax payable; for total income exceeding ₹ 1 crore but not exceeding ₹ 2 crore is 15% of tax payable; for total income exceeding ₹ 2 crore but not exceeding ₹ 5 crore is 25% of tax payable and for total income exceeding ₹ 5 crore is 37% of tax payable . Health and Education cess @ 4% on income-tax plus surcharge, if applicable, is attracted in all the cases.

(2) Nature of the business: Besides the form of organisation, the choice of the nature of the business also calls for appropriate planning with reference to the various special benefits available under the taxation laws to the particular kinds of industries which are not available to other kinds. Some of these benefits are of such a substantial nature that they constitute one of the major factors in the determination of the nature of the business.

Broadly, business for this purpose may be divided into two categories - trading and manufacturing business. There could be a third category involving combination of both. Deduction is available under section 10AA to newly established units in Special Economic Zones.

A taxpayer carrying on manufacturing or industrial activities would be in a position to avail of the various concessions such as depreciation allowance, benefit of amortisation under sections 32, 35ABA, 35ABB, 35D and 35E.

Tax holiday benefit under section 80-IAC would be available in case of eligible start-up, under section 80-IBA in case of developing and building housing projects and under section 80LA in case of offshore banking unit and IFSC located in Special Economic Zone.

While deciding the nature of the business, the benefit of tax exemption or concessional treatment available in respect of certain types of income such as agricultural income, new industrial undertakings, ships, business of repairs to ocean going vessels, business of exploration, etc. of mineral oils, etc. should also be taken into account.

(3) Sources of Funds or Financial Structure: Broadly speaking, the choice in the matter of financing a new unit or business would be between capital and borrowings. New units being set up by existing units or companies would have the possibility of using retained profits. In the case of a company, the means of finance are as follows:

(i) Share capital.

(ii) Debentures.

(iii) Other borrowed moneys.

(iv) Generation of funds through profits.

While the return on share capital is a charge on the profits after tax, the return on loans to the lenders is a charge on the profits before tax. Thus, recourse to borrowings would offer a tax advantage which will be reflected in a higher rate of return on the owner's capital.

(4) Acquisition of 'Fixed Assets': Apart from other considerations relevant in the context, the consequences may require a careful choice between buying or leasing some or more of the fixed assets. Assets can be bought or hired. If these are bought and are depreciable, e.g. building, plant and machinery and furniture, the assessee can claim depreciation on the cost and over the years. The entire cost can be claimed as deduction against the profit. If hired, however, the charge for hire becomes an admissible deduction. Having regard to the fact that the acquisition of an asset requires a larger immediate outlay than what is necessary in the case of hiring, the company may opt for hiring in some cases rather than for straight acquisition. For example, taking the business premises on rent rather than purchasing the same may be a better proposition.

But in the case of plant and machinery, two additional considerations may arise. New plant and machinery in certain industries may enable a company to claim deduction on account of depreciation and additional depreciation which may outweigh other considerations. Similarly, if there can be a new industrial undertaking, substantial tax benefits may be available by way of tax holiday benefit, etc. but that would require employment of new plant and machinery to a large extent. These considerations are out and out tax considerations which may prompt an assessee to make two choices—(i) not to hire plant and machinery but to purchase them and (ii) not to purchase second hand plant and machinery but to purchase them new.

In appropriate cases, the assessee may go in for second hand imported plant and machinery, satisfying the conditions laid down. In cases where an assessee opts to go for old plant and machinery, the limit regarding the use of old plant and machinery, as laid down in Section 80-IAC should be taken into consideration. Difficulties may arise in applying the 20% limit for the value of old plant or machinery for the purpose of section 80-IA etc. since the concept of value to be adopted for this purpose has not been spelt out in the law and it is not clear whether such value should refer to the cost or market value or the written down value as per books or as per income-tax records. Particular care will have to be taken while planning for such a situation.

The assessee engaged in the specified business mentioned in section 35AD can avail the benefit of deduction of capital expenditure incurred wholly and exclusively of the purpose of such specified business. Capital expenditure incurred prior to commencement of business shall be allowed as deduction during the previous year in which the assessee commences operation of the specified business if, such expenditure incurred is capitalized in the books of accounts of the assessee on the date of commencement of its operation. However, such deduction is not available in respect of capital expenditure incurred on acquisition of any land, goodwill or financial instrument. In case the deduction under this section is claimed, no deduction shall be allowed under Chapter VI-A under "Deduction in respect of certain incomes" in relation to the specified business for the same or any other assessment year.

(5) Setting up and commencement of production: Setting up of business in the context of the Income-tax Act, 1961 is a concept entirely confined to that Act. It is not the same as the commencement of the business and these two concepts have been clearly distinguished for income-tax purpose. Between the date of the setting up and date of commencement, there may be an interregnum during which the assessee may be incurring expenses of a revenue nature.

Under the taxation laws, the expenditure incurred prior to the date of setting up is not normally admissible for income-tax purposes. But if those are incurred on and from the date of setting up, but before commencement of the business, they may be allowed as deduction for tax purposes provided of course they are revenue in nature and are incurred wholly and exclusively for the purposes of business.

It is now practically well settled by various judicial rulings that a business is set up as soon as it is ready to commence production and it is not necessary that actual production should be so commenced. Thus, in the case of a company established for manufacturing cement, the business is set up as soon as acquiring of limestone is commenced even if at that time the plant and machinery may not have been installed so that actual manufacturing operations may commence.

A tax planner should accordingly fix the setting up date in such a manner that the company gets the maximum scope for allowability of expenses incurred contemporaneously to the date of setting up remembering that if those are incurred prior to the setting up date those are inadmissible as direct deductions while, if such expenses are of a revenue nature and they are wholly and exclusively incurred for business purpose, and are incurred subsequent to the date of setting up, they will be admissible as normal deductions. The following examples may be noted:

(a) Such expenditure may be allowed as revenue expenditure. Expenditure by way of brokerage, legal charges, etc. for arranging long term loans, interest on borrowing— India Cement Ltd. vs. CIT 60 ITR 52 (SC).

(b) Such expenditure may form part of the cost of assets on which depreciation may be available - Challapalli Sugars Ltd. vs. CIT 98 ITR 167 (SC).

In this context, the provisions of Explanation 8 to Section 43(1) to the effect that any interest paid or payable in connection with the acquisition of an asset, which is relatable to any period after such asset is first put to use cannot be capitalised, are relevant.

(c) Such expenditure may constitute preliminary expenditure and may be eligible for amortisation over a five year period under section 35D.

(d) Such expenditure, if being of a capital nature and if not falling under any of the three categories noted above may be disallowed and there may not be relief either on account of depreciation or amortisation.

(6) Tax planning for business deductions — Some general considerations: There are several matters which affect the assessee's ability to deduct various expenses for income-tax purposes. Some of the principal considerations to be borne in mind planning for business deductions, are given below:

Successful tax planning for business deductions pre-supposes a clear and thorough understanding of the various statutory provisions governing the deductions and an awareness of the statutory rights as well as various restrictions and conditions governing such rights. The general considerations applicable to tax planning in the field of business deductions, revolve round their-

(a) allowability.

(b) year of allowability.

(c) extent of allowability (disallowing provisions if any), and

(d) carry-forward to future years.

Often, the question of expenditure being capital or revenue and the consequences attaching to the likely treatment eventually may also be an important part of the tax planning exercise. This aspect has been discussed at a later stage.

One of the important aspects of tax planning would be to see that the maximum deduction or allowance is obtained in the earliest possible time for the purpose of determination of taxable income. Therefore, while deciding about incurring of capital and revenue expenditure, the assessee should consider the tax treatment of such expenditures and the period within which the benefit of deduction or amortisation would be obtained so that he can estimate and work out cash flow position over a period of time. While tax considerations play a major role in investment decisions, the general principles of financial management and their effect on investment decisions should not be ignored.

The tax planner should keep in mind the advantage arising out of minimising the expenditure, especially in the initial years of a business, so that the profits may be maximised and the assessee may be in a position to avail of the various tax incentives like depreciation as also the tax holiday provisions.

Normally, deductions of expenditure is allowable in the year in which it is incurred or paid depending on the method of accounting followed, viz, mercantile or cash. In other words, the expenditure to be claimed as deduction should be claimed in the relevant year. Where the assessee follows the cash system of accounting, the allowance in respect of expenses would be available only when the moneys in respect of them are actually paid by the assessee. Whereas in the case of mercantile system of accounting, if a business liability has definitely arisen in the accounting year, a deduction should be allowed. Where accounts are kept on a mercantile basis, if an expenditure is claimed on the ground that it is legally deductible, it can be claimed in the year in which the liability for the expenditure is incurred even though the payment itself is made in a subsequent year. If an assessee following mercantile system fails to claim an expense in the year in which it accrues he loses the right to claim it as a deduction altogether. He cannot claim or make any attempt to reopen the accounts of the earlier year to which the expense relates.

The Supreme Court's decision in C.I.T. vs. Gemini Cashew Sales Corporation (1967) 65 ITR 643 emphasizes the principle that if the liability to make the payment has arisen during the previous year, it must be appropriately regarded as the expenditure of that year and merely because the payment in respect of the expenditure is made in the subsequent year, the assessee would not be entitled to claim deduction in respect thereof in the subsequent year. As pointed out earlier, this is subject to the provisions of section 43B.

Normally, deduction can be claimed by the assessee only in respect of those expenses and losses which have been actually incurred by the assessee during the previous year, i.e. after the business is set up. However, there are some exceptions to this rule and a tax planner should be aware of the exceptions and make use of them in appropriate cases. For example, expenditure incurred on scientific research before the commencement of the business — capital or revenue during the three years immediately preceding the commencement of the business and coming within the scope of the Explanation to sections 35(1)(i) and 35(1)(ii), capital expenditure incurred prior to commencement of specified business allowed as deduction in the year of commencement of business, in case capitalized under section 35AD, preliminary expenses incurred before commencement of the business and coming within the scope of section 35D, expenditure on prospecting for minerals coming within the scope of section 35E, are cases where the assessee could claim deduction in respect of the expenditure even though the expenditure was not incurred during the previous year.

Similarly, the expenditure in respect of which deduction is claimed by the assessee should not be in the nature of capital expenditure. This is again subject to the statutory exceptions contained in provisions like section 35 and 35AD. Again, subject to the statutory exceptions, the expenditure should be incurred wholly and exclusively for the purpose of the business.

Various other expenses incurred prior to the commencement of commercial operations may, in appropriate cases, be accumulated and capitalised by being spread over the cost of various assets constructed or acquired during the pre-production period. If this is done on a proper basis, the cost of the various assets including the indirect expenses capitalised can be depreciated for tax purposes to the extent that the cost relates to assets which are themselves depreciable for income-tax purposes. This is a matter which the tax planner should bear in mind in order to ensure that expenses incurred during the construction period are properly accounted and allocated.

Interest on borrowed capital

Under clause (iii) of section 36(1), deduction of interest is allowed in respect of capital borrowed for the purposes of business or profession in the computation of income under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession". As per the proviso to section 36(1)(iii), any amount of interest paid, in respect of capital borrowed for acquisition of an asset for any period beginning from the date on which the capital was borrowed for acquisition of the asset till the date on which such asset was first put to use, shall not be allowed as deduction.

ICDS IX on Borrowing Costs deals with the treatment of borrowing costs. It requires borrowing costs which are directly attributable to the acquisition, construction or production of a qualifying asset to be capitalized as part of the cost of that asset.

Qualifying asset has been defined to mean –

- land, building, machinery, plant or furniture, being tangible assets;
- know-how, patents, copyrights, trademarks, licences, franchises or any other business or commercial rights of similar nature, being intangible assets;
- inventories that require a period of twelve months or more to bring them to a saleable condition.

This ICDS requires capitalization of specific borrowing costs (in respect of funds borrowed specifically for the purpose of acquisition, construction or production of a qualifying asset) and general borrowing costs. In case of qualifying assets being tangible and intangible assets, the capitalization shall commence from the date on which funds were borrowed and cease when such asset is first put to use.

This ICDS also provides the formula for capitalization of borrowing costs when funds are borrowed generally and used for the purpose of acquisition, construction or production of a qualifying asset. For this restricted purpose, a qualifying asset shall be such asset that necessarily require a period of 12 months or more for its acquisition, construction or production. In this case, the capitalization of borrowing costs shall commence from the date on which funds were utilized.

Thin Capitalisation Rules

Equity and debt are the two ways through which a company can source its funding. 'Thin capitalisation' refers to a situation where a company is financed through a substantially higher amount of debt than equity. The capital structure of a company has consequential effects on the amount of profit it reports for tax purposes. The Act allows a deduction on interest paid or payable for arriving at taxable profit while dividend paid on equity is not deductible. Therefore, a higher level of debt entails lower levels of taxable profit, thereby providing an incentive to finance operations with debt rather than equity. Companies structure their mix of finance in such a way that they maximise the benefit of claims of deduction of interest. The Finance Act, 2017 has sought to restrict interest expenses claimed by an Indian company or a permanent establishment of a foreign company on payments to its non-resident associated enterprises (or a permanent establishment thereof) to 30% of earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization. With a view to targeting only large interest payments, this provision would be applicable only in cases where the interest expense exceeds ₹ 1 crore. Banks and insurance companies have been exempted from these provisions.

Specific deductions under the Income-tax Act, 1961

The Income-tax Act, 1961 lists several specific deductions. A deduction falling under each category is allowable subject to the conditions and limitations, if any which may be specified. At times the restrictive conditions apply to expenditure which is prima facie suspect as, for example, transactions with relatives or associates or within the same group coming within the scope of section 40A(2). While planning for business deductions, due regard must be had to these limitations.

In addition to the specific provisions the omnibus provision in section 37 also enables an assessee to claim deduction in respect of expenditure laid out 'wholly and exclusively for the purpose of the business' the tax planner has to take into consideration the principles emerging from the innumerable relevant judicial rulings while availing of the facility of deduction under this provision. Any expenditure incidental to business, may be deducted except those prohibited by any provision of the Act.

Ordinarily, an expenditure which is specifically provided for should be claimed under the relevant section rather under the omnibus provision. To justify the deduction under the residual clause, all that is required is that the expenditure must have been incurred wholly and exclusively and it is not necessary to prove that the expenditure was also incurred 'necessarily' or 'reasonably". The expenditure must have been incurred 'for the purpose of business'. These words are wider than the phrase "for the purpose of earning profits". A specific quid pro quo is not essential. It is not necessary to show that the expenditure resulted in commensurate benefit or advantage either during the same year or subsequently.

An expenditure is liable to be disallowed if it is either of a personal nature or of a capital nature. The question whether a particular expenditure is of a personal nature must be judged by reference to the assessee himself and not any other person.

- Capital or Revenue:* Generally speaking, an expenditure is regarded as being of a capital nature, if it results in the acquisition of an asset or of an advantage or benefit of an enduring nature.

The test with regard to the nature of the expenditure-capital or revenue - is to be applied with reference to its purpose rather than its effect. The test must be applied by reference to the assessee himself and not any other person. For instance, a company must be obliged to construct pipelines for the purpose of its business but under conditions whereby the pipelines ultimately become the property of a municipal corporation rather than the company itself. In such a case, although the pipelines undoubtedly constitute tangible assets the expenditure may not be regarded as of a capital nature, since the assets do not belong to the company but to some other person. There are many judicial rulings to support this view. A leading case that maybe referred to in this context is Lakshmiji Sugar Mills Co. P. Ltd. vs. CIT (1971) 82 ITR 376 (SC)].

If the purpose of the expenditure is to secure a commercial advantage, rather than acquisition of a capital asset, it is likely to be allowed as revenue expenditure even though the advantage may endure for an indefinite period. However, this rule is by no means inflexible or capable of universal application. Conversely, if the purpose of the expenditure is the acquisition of an advantage or benefit of an enduring nature the expenditure is liable to be treated as capital expenditure even if the period or durability of the asset acquired as the result of the expenditure is very short. For example, if a company making shoes acquires knives and lasts, whose life is only three years, the expenditure may nevertheless be regarded as capital expenditure.

In applying the various case laws on the subject of distinction between capital and revenue, it should be recognised that circumstances do change and the law normally keeps pace with such changing circumstances. The expenditure that was regarded as capital expenditure resulting in long-term benefit during the relatively laissez faire days of the 19th century may not perhaps, be regarded as capital expenditure in the context of the rapid technological changes which are the feature of industrial life today. The decision of the Supreme Court in Shahzada Nund & Sons vs. CIT 108 ITR 358 also supports this view. A tax planner would do well to keep track of the various cases reported from time to time so as to keep himself informed of the trend of judicial thinking in this regard.

In this context, the requirements spelt out in the various income computation and disclosure standards have also to be kept in mind while considering the point in time of deductibility of expenditure.

♦ Expenditure specifically allowed: The Income-tax Act, 1961 specifically allows many types of expenditure such as depreciation, expenditure on scientific research, expenditure on know-how, preliminary expenses, bad debts etc. The Act prescribes several conditions and restrictions for the allowance of such expenditure. The tax-planner should take care to see that all the prescribed conditions are complied with so that deductions may not be denied.

Note - A company opting for the special provisions under section 115BAA or 115BAB would, however, not be eligible to claim deduction on account of, inter alia, additional depreciation and expenditure on scientific research. See Annexure at the end of Chapter 12.

- Other business expenses:* As already explained earlier, section 37(1) deals with the various items of expenses which are otherwise not covered by the provisions of Section 30 to 36 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 and specifically provides that all expenses which are incurred wholly and exclusively (though not necessarily) for the purpose of the business or profession carried on by the assessee would be deductible in computing the assessee's business income. In order to qualify for deduction under this provision, the following important conditions will have to be fulfilled:

  (i) The expenditure should have been incurred by the assessee in the ordinary course of his business or profession;

  (ii) The expenditure should be of a revenue nature and should not be of capital nature;

  (iii) The expenditure should not be of a personal nature;

  (iv) The expenditure should not be covered by any other provisions of sections 30 to 36 for purposes of allowance and it should not also be covered by any of the provisions of disallowance contained in sections 40 to 44D; and

  (v) The expenditure should not be one which is in the nature of an appropriation of income or diversion of profits by an overriding title. It should not also be one in respect of which deduction is permissible under Chapter VI-A of the Income-tax Act, 1961 from the gross total income of the assessee.

- Commercial expediency:* The concept of 'commercial expediency' helps a tax payer in insisting that a reasonable view is taken of his right to deduct normal expenditure. The trend in judicial thinking has also recognised this concept. This concept reflects the fact that it is virtually impossible for the legislation to list all possible deductions to which an assessee would be entitled in computing his taxable income and therefore the fact that a business has to be run by the assessee himself under normal commercial conditions must be recognised in determining the allowability of certain expenditure. The test of commercial expendiency should be applied from the point of view of a normal prudent businessman, by reference to modern concepts of business responsibility and not by reference to the subjective standards of the revenue department.

  A claim on the ground of commercial expediency is subject to the under-noted conditions and limitations:

  (a) If the expenditure is covered by one of the express provisions in the Act, it must conform to the requirements stipulated therein.

  (b) An expenditure which is expressly disallowed under the Act cannot be claimed on grounds of commercial expediency.

  (c) An expenditure cannot be claimed on grounds of commercial expediency if it is improper or illegal. It may be commercially expedient to pay a bribe or incur a penalty but this does not mean that the bribe or penalty would be normally deductible for tax purposes.

There is also a distinction between a payment made for a violation or breach of law and payment made for a breach of contract. Courts have taken the view that where the payments are not in the nature of penalties for infraction of any law but made in pursuance of the exercise of an option given in a particular scheme and where the assessee opts for it out of commercial expediency and business consideration, it could be allowed as deduction.

(7) Tax consideration governing Management/Investment decision: Though management/ investment decisions are not based on the tax factor alone, yet it has become imperative to consider tax factors before adopting any course of action because the effect of this factor is not only significant but it may also differ from one alternative to another. To illustrate this point, tax implications that are relevant while taking some specific management decisions are explained below:

- Make or buy decision: In making 'make or buy' decisions, the variable cost of making the product or part/component of product is compared with its purchase price in the market. The article is brought if the former is greater than the latter. Alternatively, if the decision to make involves establishment of a separate industrial unit for this purpose, a decision may be taken on the basis of total cost rather than variable cost. In such an event, the assessee would also be in a position to get the tax benefits arising from allowances such as depreciation, tax holiday benefit and deduction in respect of profits from new industrial undertakings, wherever they are applicable.

  There are many other costing and non-costing considerations which are kept in mind at the time of taking the decision, like capacity utilisation, supply position of the article to be bought, terms of purchase, etc. The basis of taking make or buy decision should be 'saving after tax'. The net saving can be ascertained after deducting from gross savings, income-tax payable on the amount of saving. The long-term advantages arising out of a decision to make should also be given due weightage in arriving at a decision.

  At the time of ascertaining variable cost of the product (for taking make or buy decision) all taxes such as GST, customs duty etc., payable in the process of manufacture should be taken into account and in determining purchase price of the product. All taxes to be borne by the purchaser should be added for the purpose of comparison and cost of purchasing.

- Own or lease: Another important area of decision making is whether to own or lease (or sale and lease back). There are advantages as well as disadvantages in leasing. Leasing avoids ownership and with it, the accompanying risks of obsolescence and terminal value losses. In leasing, immediate payment of capital costs is avoided but fixed rental obligation arises. There are many factors which are required to be considered before making 'own or lease' decision such as cost of asset to be owned, rent of the asset to be taken on lease, source of financing the asset, risk involved in the alternatives, impact of tax concessions such as depreciation, tax holiday benefit, etc.

Leasing can also provide important tax advantages. If the asset is taken on lease, the firm can deduct for income-tax purposes, the entire rental payment. If the rate of tax is 30%, then, the effective rent obligation is reduced to that extent. Another tax advantage of the lease is that the life of the lease can be shortened compared to the depreciable life otherwise allowed if the assessee purchased the asset. Thus, there is a delay in paying taxes and in effect an interest free loan by the Government to the extent of the delay in taxes. There is one more tax advantage arising out of lease which arises from the opportunity to depreciate otherwise non-depreciable assets. The principal asset of this type is land. The lease rental covers the cost of the land which thus becomes deductible. This arrangement may prove particularly attractive where the land value constitutes a high percentage of the total value of the real estate or where the building is already fully depreciated. Leasing is becoming popular in India.

Wherever possible or appropriate, the concept of sale and lease back can also be made use of as a tool for tax planning with its attendant advantages.

♦ Lease rent paid: As regards the consideration for the lease, there could be two types of receipts in the hands of the lessor-receipt on capital account termed 'premium' or 'salami' in respect of the transfer of rights and receipts on revenue account termed 'rent' for the right or liberty to use the property for a term of years.

The lease rental paid is chargeable to revenue every year. The lease rental may be split into three components—the recovery of principal, cost, the interest chargeable and an element of profit. It is generally believed that the interest rate in-built into the rent would be more than the going market interest rate for term loans for purchase of equipment. Since the entire lease rental is chargeable to revenue the lessee could claim tax benefits on even the principal investment in the equipment. Tax advantage in such cases is reported to be more in a leasing transaction than in a similar loaning transaction.

♦ Retain or Replace Decision*:* One of the important decisions which involves alternative choice is whether or not to buy new capital equipment. Both have their own merits and demerits. Generally, replacement offers cost saving which results in increase in profit. However, replacement requires investment of large funds resulting in extra cost. The decision is based on the relative profitability and other financial and non-financial considerations. Tax considerations should also be taken into account in this context. Some of the important considerations from the tax angle to which attention will have to be paid relate to the allowance of depreciation, as also the allowance on account of expenditure on scientific research. The applicability of the provisions for allowances should be considered and their impact ascertained before any decision is taken.

(8) Tax Planning with reference to Foreign Collaborations: Very often, Indian concerns enter into foreign collaboration agreements. The tax implications of these agreements both on the foreign party and on the Indian concern are required to be known in advance. The foreign collaborator wants to make sure about his tax liabilities in India and unless assured of involvement with a not too high amount of tax, the foreign party is not very eager to conclude an agreement with an Indian party. In such a case, the foreign collaborator can seek advance ruling under the provisions of Chapter XIX-B of the Income-tax Act, 1961, for determination of tax implication of the transaction to be undertaken by the non-resident applicant. The Indian party must examine all the tax angles and devise a method which will saddle the foreign collaborator with the minimum amount of tax in India. The aim should be to arrange the affairs in such a way within the four corners of the law so as to attract the minimum amount of tax.

♦ Double Taxation Avoidance Agreements*:* For the determination of the taxability of foreign collaborators, the provisions of section 90 are very relevant. This provision empowers the Central Government to enter into double taxation avoidance agreement with foreign countries. In exercise of this power, the Government has entered into such agreements with a number of foreign countries.

Where there is an agreement between the Government of India and the Government of a foreign country, the tax liability of the foreign participant is determined in accordance with and subject to the provisions of the agreement and the Income-tax Act, 1961, to that extent, stands superseded by such agreement. In fact, Circular No. 333 dated 2.4.1982, issued by the CBDT clarifies that where a double taxation avoidance agreement provides for a particular mode of computation of income the same should be followed irrespective of the provision of the Income-tax Act, 1961. Where there is no specific provision in the agreement, it is the basic law, i.e., the Income-tax Act, 1961 which will govern the taxation of income.

Generally, the foreign party happens to be a non-resident for tax purposes. The status in which the chargeability to tax usually arises in the hands of the foreign party is either that of a company, or of an association of persons or of an individual. Body corporates incorporated outside India are treated as 'companies' for the purposes of section 2(17)(ii).

Note - The Multi-lateral Instrument (MLI) helps fight against base erosion and profit shifting (BEPS) by implementing tax treaty-related measures developed through the BEPS Project in existing bilateral treaties in a synchronized and efficient manner to –*

- prevent treaty abuse,

- improve dispute resolution

- prevent the artificial avoidance of PE status

- neutralize the effects of hybrid mismatch arrangements.

The MLI is flexible instrument which modifies tax treaties that are "Covered Tax Agreements". A Covered Tax Agreement is an agreement for the avoidance of double taxation that is in force between Parties to the MLI and for which both Parties have made a notification that they wish to modify the agreement using the MLI.

The Multilateral Convention to implement tax treaty related measures to prevent Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS) was signed by India at Paris, France on 7th June, 2017. India had ratified the said Convention and had deposited the instrument of ratification along-with the list of Covered Tax Agreements, reservations and notifications (India's Position under the said Convention) to the Depositary on 25th June, 2019. The date of entry into force of the said Convention for India is 1st October, 2019, being the first day of the month following the expiry of a period of three calendar months beginning on 25th June, 2019, being the date of deposit by India of the instrument of ratification. The earliest date when the provisions of this Convention can take effect in India is 1st April, 2020 (six months from 1st October, 2019, the date of entry into force for India). Since the provisions of this Convention takes effect only from F.Y.2020-21, the same have not been discussed in detail in this Study Material.

- Advance Rulings: In appropriate cases, the facility of getting Advance Rulings, envisaged by section 245N-245V could also be availed of.

- Double taxation relief: Taxpayers deriving income chargeable to tax both in India and in a foreign country by virtue of their business being carried on in more countries than one or otherwise, should avail of the benefit of double taxation relief granted under sections 90, 90A and 91 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 subject to GAAR provisions in Chapter X-A of the Act. In order to get the benefit of relief, before starting to carry on business operations in a foreign country, the assessee should be certain whether India has entered into a double taxation avoidance agreement with the foreign country and, if so, the extent to which and the manner in which the relief has to be availed of. Taxpayers should prefer to derive income from those countries with which India has entered into agreement for granting relief from double taxation as compared to those countries with which no such agreement exists. Even in cases where the income is derived from a country with which India has not entered into double taxation avoidance agreement, the assessee should claim the unilateral relief available under section 91 by proving that he has paid tax in that country on the income which accrued or arose there during the previous year. In such a case, he would be entitled to a deduction from the Indian-tax-payable by him, of a sum calculated on such doubly taxed income at the Indian rate of tax or at the rate of tax of the concerned country, whichever is the lower, or at the Indian rate of tax, if both the rates are equal. The claiming of this statutory relief would help to reduce the total incidence of tax on such doubly taxed income. However the arrangement's main purpose should not be to obtain a tax benefit, thus, not void of commercial substance and should not result in abuse/misuse of the provisions of the Act.

  Another aspect which will require consideration is the effect of double taxation avoidance agreements wherever they exist. To the extent specific provisions exist in such agreements, the corresponding provisions in the national law will not have application. Therefore, in understanding the tax liability in respect of technical tie-ups with foreign parties, attention will have to be paid to the relevant provisions of the double taxation avoidance agreements vis-à-vis the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

(9) Tax planning in case of losses: The provisions of sections 70, 71 and 72 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 regulate the manner in which losses incurred in the business carried on by any tax payer will have to be dealt with for tax purposes. The consideration to be given by tax payers in the matter of taking the full benefit of set-off of losses permissible under the law is as important as the considerations for tax planning which are taken into account in regard to business expenses or claiming the maximum allowances and deductions particularly in view of the fact that the provisions of set-off of losses offer valuable scope for planning.

Under section 73, losses incurred in speculation business are to be set off only against the income from the business of speculation, if any, which the assessee may derive in the same year or in the subsequent four years. In view of the prohibition in the matter of set-off of losses incurred in speculation business, it would be in the interest of the assessee to avoid indulging in the business of speculation if it is likely to result in losses and there is no possibility of setting it off against future speculation profits within the specified period. Where the business of speculation carried on by the assessee is not profitable, he could discontinue the business of speculation in the same line so that the quantum of losses could be reduced and the assessee could resort to speculation in any other profitable field thereby taking the benefit of exception provided under the law.

Loss from specified business referred to in section 35AD can be carried forward indefinitely under section 73A for set-off against income from the same or any other specified business. Such loss cannot, however, be set-off against income from non-specified business or income under any other head.

The Supreme Court, in CIT vs. Shantilal P. Ltd. (1983) 144 ITR 57, held that a transaction cannot be described as a 'speculative transaction' within the meaning of section 43(5), where there is a breach of a contract and on a dispute between the parties, damages are awarded as compensation by an arbitration award. However, where there is no dispute and damages on a pre-determined basis are payable under the contract, without actual delivery of the goods contracted for, the transaction would be a speculative one. If any loss arises out of such a speculative transaction, such speculation loss would not be available for adjustment against other business profits, if any.

The assessee should exercise his right of set off of brought forward loss at the first available opportunity. The Madras High Court, in Tyresoles (India) vs. CIT [1963] 49 ITR 515, held that where losses sustained are not set off against the profits of the immediately succeeding year or years, they cannot be set off against profits at a later date. This has been followed by the Punjab and Haryana High Court in B.C.S. Kartar Chit Fund and Finance Co. (P.) Ltd. vs. CIT [1989] 79 CTR (P & H) 232. Hence, as a matter of proper tax planning, the assessee should exercise the right under section 72 in the immediately succeeding year/years when the profits allow such a set off.

It is also significant to note that, under section 79, a closely held company will be entitled to claim the benefit of carry forward and set-off of losses, only if shares carrying at least 51% of the voting power is held on the last day of the previous year by the same persons who held such shares on the last day of the previous year in which the loss was incurred. In case of a closely held company, being an eligible start up referred to in section 80-IAC, the loss incurred in any year prior to the previous year (say, in P.Y.2016-17) can be carried forward for set-off against the income of the relevant previous year (i.e., P.Y.2019-20), if shares carrying at least 51% of the voting power is held on the last day of the previous year (i.e., as on 31.3.2020) by the same persons who held such shares on the last day of the previous year in which the loss was incurred (i.e., as on 31.3.2017). In the alternative, all shareholders of such company holding shares carrying voting power on the last day of the previous year in which the loss was incurred (i.e., as on 31.3.2017), should continue to hold those shares on the last day of the previous year in which the loss is to be set-off (i.e., as on 31.3.2020) and such loss should have been incurred during the seven years beginning from the date of incorporation of such company. This benefit will not be denied, if the change has occurred on account of death of a shareholder or on account of transfer by a shareholder to his relative by way of a gift. This benefit will also not be denied if the change in shareholding of an Indian company, which is a subsidiary of a foreign company, is the result of an amalgamation or demerger. However, this is subject to the condition that 51% shareholders of the amalgamating or demerged foreign company continue to be the shareholders of the amalgamated or resulting foreign company. Further, the benefit of carry forward and set-off would not be denied to accompany, where a change in the shareholding takes place in a previous year pursuant to a resolution plan approved under the Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code, 2016, after affording a reasonable opportunity of being heard to the jurisdictional Principal Commissioner or Commissioner.

It should be kept in mind that section 79 applies to carry forward and set off of losses and not to the benefit of deduction in respect of unabsorbed depreciation.

Loss Returns: In the context of discussion on losses it would be relevant to point out that the tax planner would do well to keep in mind the implications of the provisions of section 139(3) read with section 80.

If an assessee is to get the benefit of the determination of the loss and its carry forward under section 72(1) or 73(2) or 73A(2) or 74(1) or 74A(3), he should file a return voluntarily within the period specified in section 139(1).

However, filing of return within the period specified in section 139(1) is not necessary for carry forward of loss from house property under section 71B and unabsorbed depreciation.

The profits and gains allowed as deduction under section 10AA or under any provision of Chapter VI-A under the heading "C.-Deductions in respect of certain incomes" in any assessment year, shall not be allowed as deduction, if the deduction has not been claimed in the return of income.

14.4 GENERAL ANTI-AVOIDANCE RULES

There is a growing concern amongst the revenue in many countries that taxpayers structure transactions to reduce the tax costs. The Base Erosion and Profits Shifting (BEPS) project of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development ("OECD") along with G-20 countries sort to tackle this issue. The BEPS Action plans have come out with various recommendations on the issue, both to address it within the international treaty framework (for example, introducing the principle purpose test, limitation of benefits clause, amending the permanent establishment clause, etc.) and in the domestic tax law context (for example, controlled foreign corporation rules, equalization levy, etc.).

Tax avoidance is not defined in taxing statutes. Tax avoidance is, nevertheless, the outcome of actions taken by the assessee, none of which or no combination of which is illegal or forbidden by the law as such. International literature on the subject tends to describe it in the following ways:

- Tax avoidance involves the legal exploitation of tax laws to one‘s own advantage.
- Every attempt by legal means to prevent or reduce tax liability which would otherwise be incurred, by taking advantage of some provisions or lack of provisions in the law.
- An arrangement entered into solely or primarily for the purpose of obtaining a tax advantage.

Taxpayers consider it their legitimate right to arrange their affairs in a manner as to pay the least tax possible. However, tax authorities internationally consider aggressive tax planning schemes by taxpayers to erode the tax base unnaturally, particularly when effective rates of tax diminish significantly. Several countries have, therefore, legislated to prevent tax avoidance in various ways

The General Anti-Avoidance Rules (GAAR) provisions aim at combating 'impermissible tax avoidance'. Many countries, like United Kingdom, China, South Africa, Australia, Canada, Brazil have incorporated General Anti-Avoidance Rules in their domestic tax laws to deal with aggressive tax planning.

The Indian GAAR

In India, the GAAR concept was initially introduced in the Direct Taxes Code Bill, 2009 [DTC Bill, 2009]. Later, a Revised Discussion Paper was released. The Direct Taxes Code Bill, 2010 [DTC Bill, 2010] proposed to introduce GAAR from 1st April 2012 onwards. The GAAR provisions were introduced in the Income-tax Act, 1961 vide the Finance Act, 2012 by insertion of new Chapter X-A. Chapter X-A was substituted by the Finance Act, 2013.

The Government subsequently set up a panel under Parthasarathy Shome to review the proposals. The Committee suggested that the rules be deferred by three years to 2016-17, arguing that more time is needed to create administrative machinery for its implementation and called for intensive training of officials.

The Shome Committee Report explains the need for and rationale of GAAR as under:

(i) GAAR has been enacted as a codification of the proposition that, while interpreting the tax legislation, substance should be selected over a legal form.

(ii) Transactions have to be real and are not to be looked at in isolation.

(iii) The fact that the transactions are legal, does not imply that they are acceptable with reference to the underlying meaning embedded in the fiscal statute.

(iv) Thus, where there is no business purpose except to obtain a tax benefit, the GAAR provisions would not allow such a tax benefit to be availed through the tax statute. These propositions have comprised part of jurisprudence in direct tax laws as reflected in various judicial decisions.

(v) The GAAR provisions codify this 'substance over form' basis of the tax law.

The CBDT, vide Press Release dated January 27, 2017, clarified that the GAAR provisions shall be effective from A.Y.2018-19 onwards, i.e., financial year 2017-18 onwards. The provisions of GAAR are contained in Chapter X-A of the Income-tax Act, 1961. The necessary procedures for application of GAAR and conditions under which it shall not apply, have been enumerated in Rules 10U to 10UC of the Income-tax Rules, 1962.

Prior to A.Y. 2018-19, the Act contained only Specific Anti-Avoidance Rules (SAARs) to prevent tax avoidance. SAAR targets known tax planning schemes which are commonly used by taxpayers but are not acceptable owing to misuse or abuse of tax laws, or they result in a consequence unintended in the law. In the Act, the following may, inter alia, be considered specific examples of SAAR -

(i) Section 40A(2) on excessive or unreasonable payments to related parties not deductible

(ii) Section 80-IA(8) on transactions with tax exempt entities to be valued at market value.

(iii) Sections 92 to 92F on transfer pricing regulations applicable to international transactions. These provisions also made applicable to specified domestic transactions by the Finance Act, 2012.

(iv) Section 93 on avoidance of tax by transfer of income to non-residents through transfer of assets, rights or interest.

(v) Section 94 on avoidance of tax by certain transactions in securities.

(vi) Section 94A on transactions with persons located in notified jurisdictions.

(vii) Section 2(22)(e) on deemed dividend.

(viii) Section 40(a)(i) and (ia) on disallowance of expenses for non-deduction of tax at source.

(ix) Section 9 on scope of 'income deemed to accrue or arise in India'. The Finance Act, 2012 had widened its scope to overcome the Supreme Court's ruling in Vodafone and some other cases.

(x) Explanations 1 to 13 to section 43(1) on determination of actual cost of assets ignoring agreements, etc., in certain cases.

Tax treaties also provide certain anti-avoidance rules for instance, Limitation of Benefit (LOB) Clause and concept of Beneficial Ownership.

Applicability of General Anti-Avoidance Rule [Section 95]

(1) Section 95 of the Act with regard to the applicability of GAAR provides that an arrangement entered into by an assessee may be declared to be an impermissible avoidance arrangement and the consequence in relation to tax arising there from may be determined subject to the provisions of this Chapter.

(2) The section further clarifies that the provisions of this Chapter may be applied to any step in, or a part of, the arrangement as they are applicable to the arrangement.

(3) The section starts with a non-obstante clause which means, if there is a conflict with provisions in other sections, then this section shall prevail over other conflicting provisions.

(4) The term arrangement referred to in section 95 of the Act, has been defined in section 102 under clause (1) and means any step in, or a part or whole of, any transaction, operation, scheme, agreement or understanding, whether enforceable or not, and includes the alienation of any property in such transaction, operation, scheme, agreement or understanding;

The term 'Step' has been defined in section 102 under clause (9) to include a measure or an action, particularly one of a series taken in order to deal with or achieve a particular thing or object in the arrangement.

Example 1

Facts:

M/s India Chem Ltd. is a company incorporated in India. It sets up a unit in a Special Economic Zone (SEZ) in F.Y. 2018-19 for manufacturing of chemicals. It claims 100% deduction of profits earned from that unit in F.Y. 2020 -21 and subsequent years as per section 10AA of the Act. Is GAAR applicable in such a case?

Interpretation:

There is an arrangement of setting up of a unit in SEZ which results in a tax benefit. However, this is a case of tax mitigation where the tax payer is taking advantage of a fiscal incentive offered to him by complying with the conditions imposed and economic consequences of the provisions in the legislation e.g., setting up the business unit in SEZ area. Hence, the Revenue would not invoke GAAR as regards this arrangement.

Example 1A

Facts:

In the above example 1, let us presume M/s India Chem Ltd. has another unit for manufacturing chemicals in a non-SEZ area. It then diverts its production from such manufacturing unit and shows the same as manufactured in the tax exempt SEZ unit, while doing only the process of packaging there. Is GAAR applicable in such a case?

Interpretation:

This is a case of misrepresentation of facts by showing production of non-SEZ unit as production of SEZ unit. Hence, this is an arrangement of tax evasion and not tax avoidance.

Tax evasion, being unlawful, can be dealt with directly by establishing correct facts. GAAR provisions will not be invoked in such a case.

Example 1B

Facts:

In the above example 1A, let us presume that M/s India Chem Ltd. does not show production of non-SEZ unit as a production of SEZ unit but transfers the product of non-SEZ unit at a price lower than the fair market value and does only some insignificant activity in SEZ unit. Thus, it is able to show higher profits in SEZ unit than in non-SEZ unit, and consequently claims higher deduction in computation of income. Can GAAR be invoked to deny the tax benefit?

Interpretation:

As there is no misrepresentation of facts or false submissions, it is not a case of tax evasion. The company has tried to take advantage of tax provisions by diverting profits from non-SEZ unit to SEZ unit. This is not the intention of the SEZ legislation. However, such tax avoidance is specifically dealt with through transfer pricing regulations that deny tax benefits. Hence, the Revenue need not invoke GAAR in such a case, though GAAR and SAAR can co-exist as per clarification given in the CBDT Circular.

Example 1C

Facts:

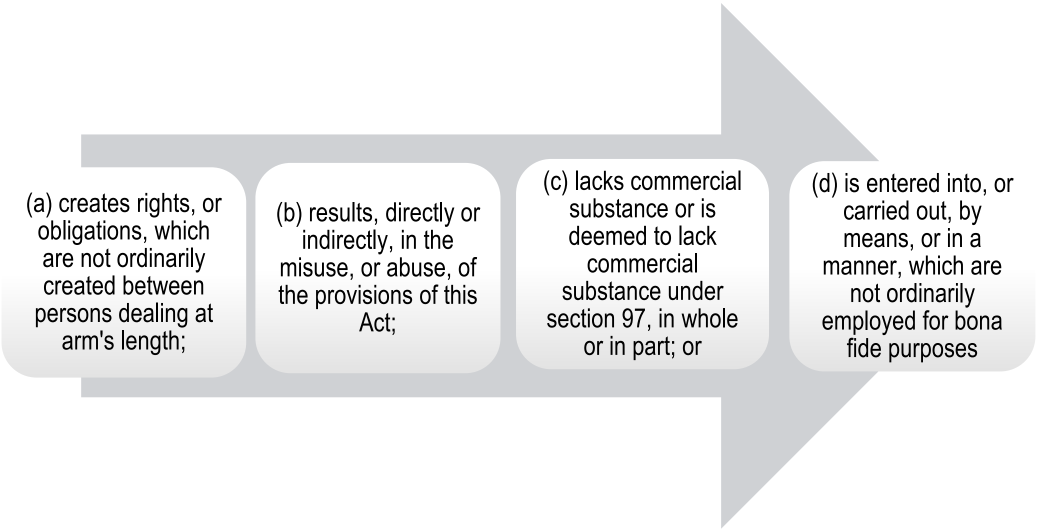
In the above example 1B, let us presume, that both units in SEZ area (say A) and non-SEZ area (say B) work independently. M/s India Chem Ltd. started taking new export orders from existing as well as new clients for unit A and gradually, the export from unit B declined. There has not been any shifting of equipment from unit B to unit A. The company offered lower profits from unit B in computation of income. Can GAAR be invoked on the ground that there has been shifting or reconstruction of business from unit B to unit A for the main purpose of obtaining tax benefit?

Interpretation:

The issue of tax avoidance through shifting/reconstruction of existing business from one unit to another has been specifically dealt with in section 10AA of the Act. Hence, the Revenue need not invoke GAAR in such a case, though GAAR and SAAR can co-exist as per clarification given in the CBDT Circular.

Impermissible Avoidance Agreement [Section 96]

(1) An impermissible avoidance arrangement (IAA) means an arrangement, the main purpose or one of the main purposes of which is to obtain a tax benefit and also any of the following tests is satisfied:



(a) creates rights, or obligations, which are not ordinarily created between persons dealing at arm's length;

(b) results, directly or indirectly, in the misuse, or abuse, of the provisions of this Act;

(c) lacks commercial substance or is deemed to lack commercial substance under section 97, in whole or in part; or

(d) is entered into, or carried out, by means, or in a manner, which are not ordinarily employed for bona fide purposes

(2) The purpose test of obtaining tax benefit and tainted element test as under clauses (a) to (d) above are twin conditions that satisfy an impermissible avoidance arrangement. The purpose test requires that the main purpose or one of the main purposes is to obtain tax benefit. The term "tax benefit" has been defined in section 102 clause (10) as under -

(a) a reduction or avoidance or deferral of tax or other amount payable under this Act; or

(b) an increase in a refund of tax or other amount under this Act; or

(c) a reduction or avoidance or deferral of tax or other amount that would be payable under this Act, as a result of a tax treaty; or

(d) an increase in a refund of tax or other amount under this Act as a result of a tax treaty; or

(e) a reduction in total income or

(f) an increase in loss,

in the relevant previous year or any other previous year.

(3) The first tainted element refers to non-arm's length dealings where an arrangement creates rights and obligations, which are not normally created between parties dealing at arm's length. As there are specific transfer pricing regulations (SAAR) applicable to international transactions and certain specified domestic transactions, this tainted element is to be examined only in those transactions which are not covered by Transfer Pricing regulations and where the main purpose of the arrangement is to obtain tax benefit.

Example -2

Facts:

Y Tech Ltd. is a company resident of country C1. It enters into an agreement with Z Energy Ltd., an Indian company for setting up a power plant in India. It is a composite contract for an agreed price of US$ 100 million. The payment has been split in the following parts as per separate agreements

(i) US$ 10 million for design of power plant outside India (payment for which is taxable at 10% on gross basis)

(ii) US$ 70 million for offshore supplies of equipment etc (not taxable as no role is played by any PE in India. These are not subject to import duty)

(iii) US$ 20 million for local supplies and installation charges (taxable on net income basis)

It is found that the fair market value of offshore design is about USD 30 million; therefore, it is under invoiced. On the other hand, offshore supplies were over invoiced. The arrangement resulted in significant tax benefit to the taxpayer. Can GAAR be invoked in such a case?

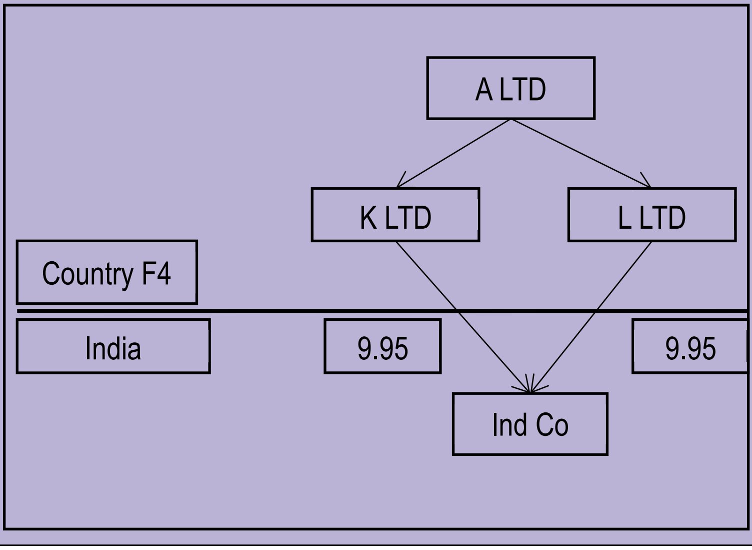
Interpretation:

The allocation of price to different parts of the contract has been decided in such a manner as to reduce tax liability of the foreign company in India. Both conditions for declaring an arrangement as impermissible are satisfied. (1) The main purpose of this arrangement is to obtain tax benefit; and (2) the transactions are not at arm's length. Consequently, GAAR may be invoked and prices would be reallocated. However, determination of arm's length price should be based on transfer pricing regulations under the Act.

(4) The second tainted element refers to an arrangement which results in misuse or abuse of the provisions of the Act. It implies cases where the law is followed in letter or form but not in spirit or substance, or where the arrangement results in consequences which are not intended by the legislation, revealing an intent to misuse or abuse the law.

Example-3

Facts:



Under the provisions of a tax treaty between India and country F4, any capital gains arising from the sale of shares of Indco, an Indian company would be taxable only in F4 if the transferor is a resident of F4 except where the transferor holds more than 10% interest in the capital stock of Indco. A company, A Ltd., being resident in F4, makes an investment in Indco through two wholly owned subsidiaries (K Ltd. and L Ltd.) located in F4. Each subsidiary holds 9.95% shareholding in the Indian Company, the total adding to 19.9% of equity of Indco. The subsidiaries sell the shares of Indco and claim exemption as each is holding less than 10% equity shares in the Indian company. Can GAAR be invoked to deny treaty benefit?

Interpretation:*

The above arrangement of splitting the investment through two subsidiaries appears to be with the intention of obtaining tax benefit under the treaty. Further, there appears to be no commercial substance in creating two subsidiaries as they do not change the economic condition of investor A Ltd. in any manner (i.e. on business risks or cash flow), and reveals a tainted element of abuse of tax laws. Hence, the arrangement can be treated as an impermissible avoidance arrangement by invoking GAAR. Consequently, treaty benefit would be denied by ignoring K and L, the two subsidiaries, or by treating K and L as one and the same company for tax computation purposes.

*(5) The third tainted element refers to an arrangement which lacks commercial substance or is deemed to lack commercial substance. [Dealt with in detail below]

(6) The fourth element refers to an arrangement which is entered into, or carried out, by means of, or in a manner which is normally not employed for a bona fide purpose. In other words, it means an arrangement that possesses abnormal features. This is not a purpose test but a manner test.

Arrangement to lack commercial substance [Section 97]

Another alternate condition of an impermissible avoidance arrangement is that the arrangement lacks commercial substance or is deemed to lack commercial substance in whole or in part.

(1) Under section 97, certain arrangements have been deemed to lack commercial substance as under –

(a) the substance or effect of the arrangement as a whole, is inconsistent with, or differs significantly from, the form of its individual steps or a part; or

(b) it involves or includes—

(i) round trip financing;

(ii) an accommodating party;

(iii) elements that have effect of offsetting or cancelling each other; or

(iv) a transaction which is conducted through one or more persons and disguises the value, location, source, ownership or control of funds which is the subject matter of such transaction; or

(c) it involves the location of an asset or of a transaction or of the place of residence of any party which is without any substantial commercial purpose other than obtaining a tax benefit (but for the provisions of this Chapter) for a party.

(d) it does not have a significant effect upon the business risks or net cash flows of any party to the arrangement apart from any effect attributable to the tax benefit that would be obtained (but for the provisions of this Chapter)

(2) Clause (a) is the codification of substance v. form doctrine. It implies that where substance of an arrangement is different from what is intended to be shown by the form of the arrangement, then tax consequence of a particular arrangement should be assessed based on the ―substance of what took place. In other words, it reflects the inherent ability of the law to remove the corporate veil and look beyond form.

(3) Sub-clause (i) of clause (b) deems an arrangement, which includes round tripping of funds, to lack commercial substance. For this purpose, the phrase round trip financing has been further defined. Round trip financing includes any arrangement in which, through a series of transactions—

(a) funds are transferred among the parties to the arrangement; and

(b) such transactions do not have any substantial commercial purpose other than obtaining the tax benefit (but for the provisions of this Chapter), without having any regard to—

(A) whether or not the funds involved in the round trip financing can be traced to any funds transferred to, or received by, any party in connection with the arrangement;

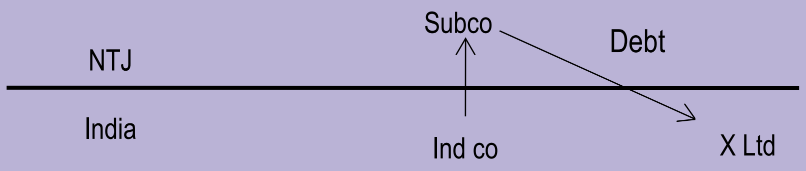
(B) the time, or sequence, in which the funds involved in the round trip financing are transferred or received; or

(C) the means by, or manner in, or mode through, which funds involved in the round trip financing are transferred or received.

Example-4

Facts:

Indco incorporates a Subco in a NTJ (Low Tax Jurisdiction) with equity of US $100. Subco gives a loan of US $ 100 to another Indian company (X Ltd.) at the rate of 10% p.a. X Ltd. claims deduction of interest payable to Subco from the profit of business. There is no other activity in Subco. Can GAAR be invoked in such a case?



Interpretation:

The arrangement appears to be to avoid payment of tax on interest income by Indco in case loan is directly provided by Indco to X Ltd. The arrangement involves round tripping of funds even though the funds emanating from Indco are not traced back to Indco in this case. Hence, the arrangement may be deemed to lack commercial substance.

Consequently, in the case of Indco, Subco may be disregarded and the interest income may be taxed in the hands of Indco.

(4) Sub-clause (ii) of clause (b) deems an arrangement which includes an accommodating party to lack commercial substance. For this, the phrase “accommodating party” has been further defined. A party to an arrangement shall be an accommodating party, if the main purpose of the direct or indirect participation of that party in the arrangement, in whole or in part, is to obtain, directly or indirectly, a tax benefit (but for the provisions of this Chapter) for the assessee whether or not the party is a connected person in relation to any party to the arrangement.

It means that where a party is included in an arrangement mainly for obtaining tax benefit to the taxpayer, then such party may be treated as an accommodating party and consequently the arrangement shall be deemed to lack commercial substance. Also, it is not necessary that such party should be connected to the taxpayer.

(5) Sub-clause (iii) of clause (b) deems an arrangement, which includes elements that have effect of offsetting or cancelling each other to lack commercial substance.

(6) Sub-clause (iv) of clause (b) deems an arrangement, which disguises value, source or location etc. of funds, to lack commercial substance. In other words, such arrangements have an element of deceit as regards funds.

(7) Clause (c) deems an arrangement to lack commercial substance where it involves the location of an asset or of a transaction or of the place of residence of any party and such location is without any substantial commercial purpose. It means if a particular location is selected for an asset or transaction or residence, and such selection has no substantial commercial purpose, then such arrangement shall be deemed to lack commercial substance.

Example 5

Facts:

(i) Y Ltd. is a company incorporated in country C1. It is a non-resident in India.

(ii) Z Ltd. is a company resident in India.

(iii) A Ltd. is a company incorporated in country F1 and it is a 100% subsidiary of Y Ltd.

(iv) A Ltd. and Z Ltd. form a joint venture company X Ltd. in India after the date of commencement of GAAR provisions. There is no other activity in A Ltd.

(v) The India-F1 tax treaty provides for non-taxation of capital gains in the source country and country F1 charges no capital gains tax in its domestic law.

(vi) A Ltd. is also designated as a permitted transferee of Y Ltd. Permitted transferee means that though shares are held by A Ltd, all rights of voting, management, right to sell etc., are vested in Y Ltd.

(vii) As per the joint venture agreement, 49% of X Ltd's equity is allotted to A Ltd. and 51% is allotted to Z Ltd..

(viii) Thereafter, the shares of X Ltd. held by A Ltd. are sold to C Ltd., a company connected to the Z Ltd. group.

As per the tax treaty with country F1, capital gains arising to A Ltd. are not taxable in India. Can GAAR be invoked to deny the treaty benefit?

Interpretation:

The arrangement of routing investment through country F1 results in a tax benefit. Since there is no business purpose in incorporating company A Ltd. in country F1 which is a LTJ, it can be said that the main purpose of the arrangement is to obtain a tax benefit. The alternate course available in this case is direct investment in X Ltd. joint venture by Y Ltd. The tax benefit would be the difference in tax liabilities between the two available courses.

The next question is, does the arrangement have any tainted element? It is evident that there is no commercial substance in incorporating A Ltd. as it does not have any effect on the business risk of Y Ltd. or cash flow of Y Ltd. As the twin conditions of main purpose being tax benefit and existence of a tainted element are satisfied, GAAR may be invoked.

Additionally, as all rights of shareholders of X Ltd. are being exercised by Y Ltd instead of A Ltd, it again shows that A Ltd lacks commercial substance.

Hence, it is possible to invoke GAAR, in this case.

(8) In section 97(4), the following factors are considered relevant but not sufficient for determining whether an arrangement lacks commercial substance or not, namely—

(i) the period or time for which the arrangement (including operations therein) exists;

(ii) the fact of payment of taxes, directly or indirectly, under the arrangement;

(iii) the fact that an exit route (including transfer of any activity or business or operations) is provided by the arrangement.

Consequence of impermissible avoidance arrangement [Section 98]

(1) If an arrangement is declared to be an impermissible avoidance arrangement, then the consequences may include denial of tax benefit or a benefit under a tax treaty. The consequence may be determined in such manner as is deemed appropriate in the circumstances of the case. Certain illustrations of the manner have been provided, namely:—

(a) disregarding, combining or re-characterizing any step in, or a part or whole of, the impermissible avoidance arrangement;

(b) treating the impermissible avoidance arrangement as if it had not been entered into or carried out;

(c) disregarding any accommodating party or treating any accommodating party and any other party as one and the same person;

(d) deeming persons who are connected persons in relation to each other to be one and the same person for the purposes of determining tax treatment of any amount;

(e) reallocating amongst the parties to the arrangement—

(i) any accrual, or receipt, of a capital or revenue nature; or

(ii) any expenditure, deduction, relief or rebate;

(f) treating—

(i) the place of residence of any party to the arrangement; or

(ii) the situs of an asset or of a transaction, at a place other than the place of residence, location of the asset or location of the transaction as provided under the arrangement; or

(g) considering or looking through any arrangement by disregarding any corporate structure.

(2) It has also been provided that –

(i) any equity may be treated as debt or vice versa;

(ii) any accrual, or receipt, of a capital nature may be treated as of revenue nature or vice versa; or

(iii) any expenditure, deduction, relief or rebate may be recharacterised.

Treatment of connected persons and accommodating party [Section 99]

(1) As per section 99, for the purposes of Chapter X-A, in determining whether a tax benefit exists—

(i) the parties who are connected persons in relation to each other may be treated as one and the same person;

(ii) any accommodating party may be disregarded;

(iii) such accommodating party and any other party may be treated as one and the same person;

(iv) the arrangement may be considered or looked through by disregarding any corporate structure.

(2) The term 'connected person' is defined in section 102(4). Connected person means any person who is connected directly or indirectly to another person and includes –

If Connected Person is an				A Company/Firm/AOP/BOI/HUF having substantial interest in the business of the person or any director/partner/member or any relative of such director/partner/member	A Company/Firm/AOP/BOI/HUF whose director/partner/member has substantial interest in the business of the person or family or any relative of such director/partner/member	Any person who carries on business – being an individual or any relative of such person has substantial interest in the business of that other person – being a company/ Firm/AOP/BOI/HUF or any director /partner/member or any relative of such
Individual: any relative or who has substantial interest in the business of the person or any relative of such individual	Company: any director or relative of such director	Firm/ AOP/ BOI: any partner/ member or relative of such partner/ member	HUF: Any member or relative of such member director/partner/ member has substantial interest in the business of that other person

Framing of guidelines under Income-tax Rules [Section 101]

The provisions of Chapter XA shall be applied in accordance with such guidelines and subject to such conditions as may be prescribed. These guidelines are contained in Rules 10U to 10UC.

(1) As per Rule 10U, the provisions of General Anti Avoidance Rule are not applicable to

(a) an arrangement where the tax benefit in the relevant assessment year arising, in aggregate, to all the parties to the arrangement does not exceed a sum of rupees three crores.

(b) a Foreign Institutional Investor -

(i) who is an assessee under the Act;

(ii) who has not taken benefit of an agreement referred to in section 90 or section 90A as the case may be; and

(iii) who has invested in listed securities, or unlisted securities, with the prior permission of the competent authority, in accordance with the Securities and Exchange Board of India (Foreign Institutional Investor) Regulations, 1995 and such other regulations as may be applicable, in relation to such investments.

(c) a person, being a non-resident, in relation to investment made by him by way of offshore derivative instruments or otherwise, directly or indirectly, in a Foreign Institutional Investor.

(d) any income accruing or arising to, or deemed to accrue or arise to, or received or deemed to be received by, any person from transfer of investments made before the 1st day of April, 2017 by such person.

However, the provisions of GAAR shall apply to any arrangement [other than specified in (d) above], irrespective of the date on which it has been entered into, in respect of the tax benefit obtained from the arrangement on or after the 1st day of April, 2017.

(2) Where a part of an arrangement is declared to be an impermissible avoidance arrangement, the consequences in relation to tax shall be determined with reference to such part only [Rule 10UA].

(3) The Assessing Officer shall, before making a reference to the Commissioner under section 144BA(1), issue a notice in writing to the assessee seeking objections, if any, to the applicability of provisions of GAAR in his case [Rule 10UB(1)].

Implementation of GAAR Provisions under the Income Tax Act, 1961

Clarifications on certain queries about implementation of GAAR [Circular No.7 of 2017 dated 27-1-2017]

The provisions of Chapter X-A of the Income Tax Act, 1961 relating to General Anti-Avoidance Rule will come into force from 1st April, 2017. Certain queries have been received by the Board about implementation of GAAR provisions. The Board constituted a Working Group in June, 2016 for this purpose. The Board has considered the comments of the Working Group and the following clarifications are issued:

Question no. 1: Will GAAR be invoked if SAAR applies?

Answer: It is internationally accepted that specific anti avoidance provisions may not address all situations of abuse and there is need for general anti-abuse provisions in the domestic legislation. The provisions of GAAR and SAAR can coexist and are applicable, as may be necessary, in the facts and circumstances of the case.

Question no. 2: Will GAAR be applied to deny treaty eligibility in a case where there is compliance with LOB test of the treaty?

Answer: Adoption of anti-abuse rules in tax treaties may not be sufficient to address all tax avoidance strategies and the same are required to be tackled through domestic anti-avoidance rules. If a case of avoidance is sufficiently addressed by LOB in the treaty, there shall not be an occasion to invoke GAAR.

Question no. 3: Will GAAR interplay with the right of the taxpayer to select or choose method of implementing a transaction?

Answer: GAAR will not interplay with the right of the taxpayer to select or choose method of implementing a transaction.

Question no. 4: Will GAAR provisions apply where the jurisdiction of the FPI is finalised based on non-tax commercial considerations and such FPI has issued P-notes referencing Indian securities? Further, will GAAR be invoked with a view to denying treaty eligibility to a Special Purpose Vehicle (SPV), either on the ground that it is located in a tax friendly jurisdiction or on the ground that it does not have its own premises or skilled professional on its own roll as employees.

Answer: For GAAR application, the issue, as may be arising regarding the choice of entity, location etc., has to be resolved on the basis of the main purpose and other conditions provided under section 96 of the Act. GAAR shall not be invoked merely on the ground that the entity is located in a tax efficient jurisdiction. If the jurisdiction of FPI is finalized based on non-tax commercial considerations and the main purpose of the arrangement is not to obtain tax benefit, GAAR will not apply.

Question no. 5: Will GAAR provisions apply to (i) any securities issued by way of bonus issuances so long as the original securities are acquired prior to 01 April, 2017 (ii) shares issued post 31 March, 2017, on conversion of Compulsorily Convertible Debentures, Compulsorily Convertible Preference Shares (CCPS), Foreign Currency Convertible Bonds (FCCBs), Global Depository Receipts (GDRs), acquired prior to 01 April, 2017; (iii) shares which are issued consequent to split up or consolidation of such grandfathered shareholding?

Answer: Grandfathering under Rule 10U(1)(d) will be available to investments made before 1st April 2017 in respect of instruments compulsorily convertible from one form to another, at terms finalized at the time of issue of such instruments. Shares brought into existence by way of split or consolidation of holdings, or by bonus issuances in respect of shares acquired prior to 1st April 2017 in the hands of the same investor would also be eligible for grandfathering under Rule 10U(1)(d) of the Income Tax Rules.

Question no. 6: The expression "investments" can cover investment in all forms of instrument - whether in an Indian Company or in a foreign company, so long as the disposal thereof may give rise to income chargeable to tax. Grandfathering should extend to all forms of investments including lease contracts (say, air craft leases) and loan arrangements, etc.

Answer: Grandfathering is available in respect of income from transfer of investments made before 1st April, 2017. As per Accounting Standards, 'investments' are assets held by an enterprise for earning income by way of dividends, interest, rentals and for capital appreciation. Lease contracts and loan arrangements are, by themselves, not 'investments' and hence grandfathering is not available.

Question no. 7: Will GAAR apply if arrangement held as permissible by Authority for Advance Ruling?

Answer: No. The AAR ruling is binding on the PCIT / CIT and the Income Tax Authorities subordinate to him in respect of the applicant.

Question no. 8: Will GAAR be invoked if arrangement is sanctioned by an authority such as the Court, National Company Law Tribunal or is in accordance with judicial precedents etc.?

Answer: Where the Court has explicitly and adequately considered the tax implication while sanctioning an arrangement, GAAR will not apply to such arrangement.

Question no. 9: Will a Fund claiming tax treaty benefits in one year and opting to be governed by the provisions of the Act in another year attract GAAR provisions? An example would be where a Fund claims treaty benefits in respect of gains from derivatives in one year and in another year sets-off losses from derivatives transactions against gains from shares under the Act.

Answer: GAAR provisions are applicable to impermissible avoidance arrangements as under section 96. In so far as the admissibility of claim under treaty or domestic law in different years is concerned, it is not a matter to be decided through GAAR provisions.

Question no. 10: How will it be ensured that GAAR will be invoked in rare cases to deal with highly aggressive and artificially pre-ordained schemes and based on cogent evidence and not on the basis of interpretation difference?

Answer: The proposal to declare an arrangement as an impermissible avoidance arrangement under GAAR will be vetted first by the Principal Commissioner / Commissioner and at the second stage by an Approving Panel, headed by judge of a High Court. Thus, adequate safeguards are in place to ensure that GAAR is invoked only in deserving cases.

Question no. 11: Can GAAR lead to assessment of notional income or disallowance of real expenditure? Will GAAR provisions expand the scope of charging provisions or scope of taxable base and/or disallow the expenditure which is actually incurred and which otherwise is admissible having regard to diverse provisions of the Act?

Answer: If the arrangement is covered under section 96, then the arrangement will be disregarded by application of GAAR and necessary consequences will follow.

Question no. 12: A definite timeline may be provided such as 5 to 10 years of existence of the arrangement where GAAR provisions will not apply in terms of the provisions in this regard in section 97(4) of the IT Act.

Answer: Period of time for which an arrangement exists is only a relevant factor and not a sufficient factor under section 97(4) to determine whether an arrangement lacks commercial substance.

Question no. 13: It may be ensured that in practice, the consequences of a transaction being treated as an 'impermissible avoidance arrangement' are determined in a uniform, fair and rational basis. Compensating adjustments under section 98 of the Act should be done in a consistent and fair manner. It should be clarified that if a particular consequence is applied in the hands of one of the participants, there would be corresponding adjustment in the hands of another participant.

Answer: Adequate procedural safeguards are in place to ensure that GAAR is invoked in a uniform, fair and rational manner. In the event of a particular consequence being applied in the hands of one of the participants as a result of GAAR, corresponding adjustment in the hands of another participant will not be made. GAAR is an anti-avoidance provision with deterrent consequences and corresponding tax adjustments across different taxpayers could militate against deterrence.

Question no. 14: Tax benefit of INR 3 crores as defined in section 102(10) may be calculated in respect of each arrangement and each taxpayer and for each relevant assessment year separately. For evaluating the main purpose to be obtaining of tax benefit, the review should extend to tax consequences across territories. The tax impact of INR 3 crores should be considered after taking into account impact to all the parties to the arrangement i.e. on a net basis and not on a gross basis (i.e. impact in the hands of one or few parties selectively).

Answer: The application of the tax laws is jurisdiction specific and hence what can be seen and examined is the Tax Benefit' enjoyed in Indian jurisdiction due to the 'arrangement or part of the arrangement'. Further, such benefit is assessment year specific. Further, GAAR is with respect to an arrangement or part of the arrangement and therefore limit of Rs. 3 crores cannot be read in respect of a single taxpayer only.

Question no. 15: Will a contrary view be taken in subsequent years if arrangement held to be permissible in an earlier year?

Answer: If the PCIT/Approving Panel has held the arrangement to be permissible in one year and facts and circumstances remain the same, as per the principle of consistency, GAAR will not be invoked for that arrangement in a subsequent year.

Question no. 16: No penalty proceedings should be initiated pursuant to additions made under GAAR at least for the initial 5 years.

Answer: Levy of penalty depends on facts and circumstances of the case and is not automatic. No blanket exemption for a period of five years from penalty provisions is available under law. The assessee, may at his option, apply for benefit u/s 273A if he satisfies conditions prescribed therein.

EXERCISE

Question 1

Distinguish between Tax planning and Tax Evasion

Answer

Tax planning is carried out within the framework of law by availing the deductions and exemptions permitted by law and thereby minimizing tax liability. Tax planning is an arrangement by which full advantage is taken of the concessions and benefits conferred by the statute, without violation of legal provisions. Tax evasion on the other hand is an attempt to reduce tax liability by dubious or artificial methods or downright fraud. It is illegal and denies the State its legitimate share of tax.

Question 2

Specify with reason, whether the following acts can be considered as (i) Tax planning; or (ii) Tax management; or (iii) Tax evasion.

(i) Mr. P deposits ₹ 1,00,000 in PPF account so as to reduce his total income from ₹ 5,90,000 to ₹ 4,90,000.

(ii) SQL Ltd. maintains register of tax deduction at source effected by it to enable timely compliance.

(iii) An individual tax payer making tax saver deposit of ₹ 1,00,000 in a nationalised bank.

(iv) A partnership firm obtaining declaration from lenders/depositors in Form No. 15G/15H and forwarding the same to income-tax authorities.

(v) A company installed an air-conditioner costing ₹ 75,000 at the residence of a director as per terms of his appointment but treats it as fitted in quality control section in the factory. This is with the objective to treat it as plant for the purpose of computing depreciation.

(vi) RR Ltd. issued a credit note for ₹ 80,000 as brokerage payable to Mr. Ramana who is the son of the managing director of the company. The purpose is to increase the total income of Mr. Ramana from ₹ 4,20,000 to ₹ 5,00,000 and reduce the income of RR Ltd. correspondingly.

(vii) A company remitted provident fund contribution of both its own contribution and employees' contribution on monthly basis before due date.

Answer

Tax Planning / Tax Management / Tax Evasion

	Answer	Reason
1.	Tax planning	Depositing money in PPF and claiming deduction under section 80C is as per the provisions of law.

2.	Tax management	Maintaining register of payments subject to TDS helps in complying with the obligations under the Income-tax Act, 1961.
3.	Tax planning	Making a tax saver deposit of ₹ 1,00,000 in a nationalized bank for claiming deduction under section 80C by an individual is a permitted tax planning measure under the provisions of income-tax law.
4.	Tax management	Obtaining declaration from lenders/depositors in Form No. 15G/15H by a partnership firm and forwarding the same to Income-tax authorities is in the nature of compliance of statutory obligation under the Income-tax Act, 1961.
5.	Tax evasion	An air conditioner fitted at the residence of a director as per the terms of his appointment would be a furniture qualifying for depreciation @10%, whereas an air conditioner fitted in a factory would be a plant qualifying for a higher depreciation @15%. The wrong treatment unjustifiably increases the amount of depreciation and consequently, reduces profit and consequent tax liability. Treatment of air-conditioner fitted at the residence of a director as a plant fitted at the factory would tantamount to furnishing of false particulars with an attempt to evade tax.
6.	Tax evasion	Issuance of a credit note for ₹ 80,000 by RR Ltd. as brokerage payable to Mr. Ramana, the son of the Managing Director, to increase his total income from ₹ 4.2 lakh to ₹ 5.00 lakh and to correspondingly reduce the company's total income is a method of reducing the tax liability of the company by recording a fictitious transaction. The company is liable to tax at a flat rate of 30%/25%, as the case may be, whereas Mr. Ramana would not be liable to pay any tax, since his total income does not exceed ₹ 5,00,000, consequent to which he would be eligible for tax rebate of ₹ 12,500 under section 87A. Reducing tax liability by recording a fictitious transaction would tantamount to tax evasion.
7.	Tax management	Remitting of own contribution to provident fund and employees contribution to provident fund on a monthly basis before due date is proper compliance of the statutory obligations.

Question 3

Examine the doctrine of form and substance in the context of tax planning.

Answer

The following are certain principles enunciated by the Courts on the question as to whether it is the form or substance of a transaction, which will prevail in income-tax matters:

(i) Form of transaction is to be considered in case of genuine transactions - It is well settled that when a transaction is arranged in one form known to law, it will attract tax liability whereas, if it is entered into in another form which is equally lawful, it may not. Therefore, in considering whether a transaction attracts tax or not, the form of the transaction put through is to be considered and not the substance. However, this rule applies only to genuine transactions. [CIT v. Motor and General Stores (P) Ltd. v. CIT (1967) 66 ITR 692(SC). Moreover, with General Anti Avoidance Rules coming into force with effect from A.Y.2017-18.

(ii) True legal relation is the crucial element for taxability - It is open for the authorities to pierce the corporate veil and look behind the legal facade at the reality of the transaction. The taxing authority is entitled as well as bound to determine the true legal relation resulting from a transaction. The true legal relation arising from a transaction alone determines the taxability of a receipt arising from the transaction [CIT v. B.M. Kharwar (1969) 72 ITR 603 (SC)]

(iii) Substance (i.e. actual nature of expense) is relevant and not the form –

(a) In the case of an expenditure, the mere fact that the payment is made under an agreement does not preclude the department from enquiring into the actual nature of the payment [Swadeshi Cotton Mills Co. Ltd. v. CIT (1967) 63 ITR 57(SC)].

(b) In order to determine whether a particular item of expenditure is of revenue or capital nature, the substance and not merely the form should be looked into. [Assam Bengal Cement Co. Ltd. v. CIT (1955) 27 ITR 34 (SC)].

Question 4

(a) The merger of a loss making company with a profit making one results in losses setting off profits, a lower net profit and lower tax liability for the merged company. Would the losses be disallowed by applying GAAR?

(b) In the above facts, let us presume, the profit making company merges with a loss making one. This results in losses setting off profits, a lower net profit and lower tax liability for both companies taken together. Can this be examined under GAAR?

Answer

(a) As regards setting off of losses, the provisions relating to merger and amalgamation already contain specific anti-avoidance safeguards. Therefore, GAAR need not be invoked when SAAR is applicable, though as per CBDT Circular No. 7/2017 dated 27.01.2017, GAAR and SAAR can co-exist.

(b) In case of merger of a profit-making company with loss making company, there is no specific anti-avoidance safeguards. However, since such merger would be under the order of High Court, GAAR would not be invoked if the High Court has explicitly and adequately considered the tax implication while sanctioning the merger scheme.

Question 5

A choice is made by a company by acquiring an asset on lease over outright purchase. The company claims deduction for lease rentals in case of acquisition through lease rather than depreciation as in the case of purchase of the asset. Would the lease rent payment, being higher than the depreciation, be disallowed as expense under GAAR?

Answer

GAAR provisions would not apply in this case as the taxpayer merely makes a selection out of the options available to him.

Question 6

M/s Global Architects Inc is a company incorporated in country F1. It is engaged in the business of providing architectural design services all over the world. It receives an offer from Lovely Resorts Pvt Ltd, an Indian company, for design and development of resorts all over India.

India-F1 tax treaty provides that architectural services are technical services and payment for the same to a company may be taxed in India. However, if such professional services are provided by a firm or individual, then payment for such services are taxable only if the firm has a fixed base in India or stay of partners/ employees in India exceed 180 days.

M/s Global Architects Inc forms a partnership firm with a third party (director of the company) having only a nominal share in the F1. The firm enters into an agreement to carry out the services in India. The company seconded its trained manpower to the firm.

Thus, the partnership firm claimed the treaty benefit and no tax was paid in India. Can such an arrangement be examined under GAAR?

Answer

It is obvious that there was no commercial necessity to create a separate firm except to obtain the tax benefit. The firm was only on paper as the manpower was drawn from the company. The firm did not have any commercial substance. Moreover, it is a case of treaty abuse. Hence, GAAR may be invoked to disregard the firm and tax payment for architectural services as fee for technical services. However, the rate of tax on such payment shall be as applicable under the treaty, if more beneficial.

Question 7

An Indian holding company Holdco borrows ₹ 10 crore for acquisition of shares of Subco which then became subsidiary of Holdco. Holdco and Subco amalgamate so that the interest payable on the monies borrowed to acquire the shares can be deducted in computing the income from the business of the amalgamated company.

Answer

The borrowing by Holdco followed by the amalgamation by Subco is not abusive and GAAR would not apply in the case of merger which is carried out under the orders of High Court.
