DEDUCTION, COLLECTION AND RECOVERY OF TAX

LEARNING OUTCOMES

After studying this chapter, you would be able to - ❑ examine the provisions relating to deduction and collection of tax at source to determine whether tax needs to be deducted/collected at source;

❑ compute the amount of tax to be deducted/collected at source;

❑ analyse and apply the provisions relating to deduction and collection of tax at source to address related issues;

❑ examine the provisions relating to advance tax obligations, the instalments and due dates, and interest and penal consequences of non-payment or delayed payment of advance tax; analyse and apply such provisions to determine the quantum of advance tax payment and interest liability, if any, and address related issues;

❑ analyse and apply the provisions relating to refunds to compute the refund due and address related issues.

15.1 DEDUCTION AT SOURCE AND ADVANCE PAYMENT [SECTION 190]

The total income of an assessee for the previous year is taxable in the relevant assessment year. For example, the total income for the P.Y. 2019-20 is taxable in the A.Y. 2020-21. However, income-tax is recovered from the assessee in the previous year itself through –

(1) Tax deduction at source (TDS)

(2) Tax collection at source (TCS)

(3) Payment of advance tax

Another mode of recovery of tax is from the employer through tax paid by him under section 192(1A) on the non-monetary perquisites provided to the employee.

These taxes are deductible from the total tax due from the assessee. The assessee, while filing his return of income, has to pay self-assessment tax under section 140A, if tax is due on the total income as per his return of income after adjusting, inter alia, TDS, TCS, relief of tax claimed under section 89, relief of tax claimed under section 90, 90A or 91 on account of tax paid in a country outside India or specified territory outside India, tax credit claimed to be set off in accordance with the provisions of section 115JAA or section 115JD and advance tax.

15.2 DIRECT PAYMENT [SECTION 191]

Section 191 provides that in the following cases, tax is payable by the assessee directly –

(1) in the case of income in respect of which tax is not required to be deducted at source; and

(2) income in respect of which tax is liable to be deducted but is not actually deducted.

In view of these provisions of section 191, the proceedings for recovery of tax necessarily had to be taken against the assessee whose tax was liable to be deducted, but not deducted.

In order to overcome this difficulty, the Explanation to this section provides that if any person, including the principal officer of the company –

(1) who is required to deduct tax at source; or

(2) an employer paying tax on non-monetary perquisites under section 192(1A), does not deduct the whole or part of the tax, or after deducting fails to pay such tax deducted, then, such person shall be deemed to be an assessee-in-default.

However, if the assessee himself has paid the tax, this provision will not apply.

15.3 DEDUCTION OF TAX AT SOURCE

15.3.1 Salary [Section 192]

(1) Applicability of TDS under section 192

This section casts an obligation on every person responsible for paying any income chargeable to tax under the head 'Salaries' to deduct income-tax on the amount payable.

(2) Manner of deduction of tax

(i) Such income-tax has to be calculated at the average rate of income-tax computed on the basis of the rates in force for the relevant financial year in which the payment is made, on the estimated total income of the assessee. Therefore, the liability to deduct tax at source in the case of salaries arises only at the time of payment.

(ii) Average rate of income-tax means the rate arrived at by dividing the amount of income-tax calculated on the total income, by such total income.

(iii) The concept of payment of tax on non-monetary perquisites has been provided in sections 192(1A) and (1B). These sections provide that the employer may pay this tax, at his option, in lieu of deduction of tax at source from salary payable to the employee. Such tax will have to be worked out at the average rate applicable to aggregate salary income of the employee and payment of tax will have to be made every month along with tax deducted at source on monetary payment of salary, allowances etc.

(iv) In cases where an assessee is simultaneously employed under more than one employer or the assessee takes up a job with another employer during the financial year after his resignation or retirement from the services of the former employer, he may furnish the details of the income under the head "Salaries" due or received by him from the other employer, the tax deducted therefrom and such other particulars to his current employer. Thereupon, the subsequent employer should take such information into consideration and then deduct the tax remaining payable in respect of the employee's remuneration from both the employers put together for the relevant financial year.

(v) For purposes of deduction of tax out of salaries payable in a foreign currency, the value of salaries in terms of rupees should be calculated at the prescribed rate of exchange as specified in Rule 26 of the Income-tax Rules, 1962.

(vi) In respect of salary payments to employees of Government or to employees of companies, co-operative societies, local authorities, universities, institutions, associations or bodies, deduction of tax at source should be made after allowing relief under section 89(1), where eligible.

(vii) A tax payer having salary income in addition to other income chargeable to tax for that financial year, may send to the employer, the following:

(a) particulars of such other income;

(b) particulars of any tax deducted under any other provision;

(c) particulars of the loss, if any, under the head 'Income from house property'.

The employer shall take the above particulars into account while calculating tax deductible at source.

(viii) It is also provided that except in cases where loss from house property has been adjusted against salary income, the tax deductible from salary should not be reduced as a consequence of making the above adjustments.

(3) Furnishing of statement of particulars of perquisites or profits in lieu of salary by employer to employee

Sub-section (2C) provides that the employer shall furnish to the employee, a statement in Form No. 12BA giving correct and complete particulars of perquisites or profits in lieu of salary provided to him and the value thereof. The statement shall be in the prescribed form and manner. This requirement is applicable only where the salary paid/payable to an employee exceeds ₹ 1,50,000. For other employees, the particulars of perquisites/profits in lieu of salary shall be given in Form 16 itself.

(4) Circular issued by CBDT

Every year, the CBDT issues a circular giving details and direction to all employers for the purpose of deduction of tax from salaries payable to the employees during the relevant financial year. These instructions should be followed.

(5) Requirement to obtain evidence/ proof/ particulars of claims from the employee by the employer

Sub-section (2D) casts responsibility on the person responsible for paying any income chargeable under the head "Salaries" to obtain from the assessee, the evidence or proof or particulars of prescribed claims (including claim for set-off of loss) under the provisions of the Act in the prescribed form and manner, for the purposes of –

(1) estimating income of the assessee; or

(2) computing tax deductible under section 192(1).

Rule 26C has been inserted in the Income-tax Rules, 1962, with effect from 1st June, 2016, to require furnishing of evidence of the following claims by an employee to the person responsible for making payment under section 192(1) in Form No.12BB for the purpose of estimating his income or computing the tax deduction of tax at source:

S. No.	Nature of Claim	Evidence or particulars
1.	House Rent Allowance	Name, address and PAN of the landlord(s) where the aggregate rent paid during the previous year exceeds ₹ 1 lakh.
2.	Leave Travel Concession or Assistance	Evidence of expenditure
3.	Deduction of interest under the head "Income from house property"	Name, address and PAN of the lender
4.	Deduction under Chapter VI-A	Evidence of investment or expenditure.

Section 192(1) requires any person responsible for paying any income chargeable under the head "Salaries" to deduct tax at source at the time of payment. If an employee receives income chargeable under a head other than "Salaries", section 192 does not get attracted at all.

In the case of ITC Ltd v. CIT (2016) 384 ITR 14, the issue under consideration before the Supreme Court was whether "tips" received by the hotel-company from its customers and distributed to the employees fell within the meaning of "Salaries" to attract tax deduction at source under section 192.

The Supreme Court observed that in respect of tips collected by the company from the customers and distributed to the employees, the person responsible for paying the employee was not the employer at all, but a third person, namely the customer. As income from tips would be chargeable in the hands of the employees as "Income from Other Sources", on account of such tips being received from customers and not from the employer, section 192 would not get attracted at all.

The Supreme Court further observed that there was no vested right in the employee to claim any amount of tip from his employer. Tips are purely voluntary amounts that may or may not be paid by customers for services rendered to them, and hence, would not fall within the meaning and scope of section 15. Further, the amount of tips collected from the customers by the employer and paid to the employees has no reference to the contract of employment at all. Tips were received by the employer in a fiduciary capacity as trustee for payments that were received from customers which they disbursed to their employees for service rendered to the customer. There was, therefore, no reference to the contract of employment when these amounts were paid by the employer to the employee. Due to this reason the tips received by the employees could not be regarded as profits in lieu of salary in terms of section 17(3). The payments of collected tips included and paid by way of a credit card by a customer, would not be payments made "by or on behalf of" an employer. The contract of employment not being the proximate cause for the receipt of tips by the employee from a customer, such payments would be outside the scope of sections 15 and 17.

ILLUSTRATION 1

LL Limited paid leave travel facility to its employees and considered exemption under section 10(5), based on the self-declaration furnished by the employees. The Assessing Officer held that the company as an employer ought to have verified the genuineness of the claim of exemption by obtaining from them, the proof of actual expenditure incurred by availing leave travel facility. Accordingly, the Assessing Officer treated the assessee company as assessee in default. Decide the correctness of action.

SOLUTION

Section 192 casts liability on the employer to deduct tax at source from the salary paid to its employees.

In this case, the employer has paid leave travel concession / facility to its employees and the said concession / facility would be eligible for exemption subject to the conditions laid down in section 10(5) read with Rule 2B of the Income-tax Rules, 1962.

Section 192(2D) casts responsibility on the person responsible for paying any income chargeable under the head 'Salaries' to obtain from the assessee, the evidence or proof or particulars of prescribed claims under the provisions of the Act in the prescribed form and manner for the purposes of –

(1) estimating income of the assesses; or

(2) computing tax deductible under section 192(1).

Rule 26C of the Income-tax Rules, 1962 mandates a salaried assessee claiming, inter alia, leave travel concession or assistance to furnish evidence of expenditure incurred in relation thereto to the person responsible for making such for payment under section 192(1), for the purpose of estimating his income for computing the tax deductible under section 192.

Thus, the action of the Assessing Officer is correct in law.

15.3.2 Premature withdrawal from Employees Provident Fund [Section 192A]

(1) Compliance with Rule 9 of Part A of the Fourth Schedule: Certain Concerns

(i) Under the Employees Provident Fund and Miscellaneous Provisions Act, 1952 (EPF & MP Act, 1952), certain specified employers are required to comply with the Employees Provident Fund Scheme, 1952 (EPFS). However, these employers are also permitted to establish and manage their own private provident fund (PF) scheme subject to fulfillment of certain conditions.

(ii) The provident funds established under a scheme framed under EPF & MP Act, 1952 or Provident Fund exempted under section 17 of the said Act and recognised under the Income-tax Act, 1961 are termed as Recognised Provident fund (RPF) under the Act.

(iii) Part A of the Fourth Schedule to the Income-tax Act, 1961 contains the provisions relating to RPFs. Under the existing provisions of Rule 8 of Part A of the Fourth Schedule, the withdrawal of accumulated balance by an employee from the RPF is exempt from taxation.

(iv) For the purpose of discouraging pre-mature withdrawal and promoting long term savings, if the employee makes withdrawal before continuous service of five years (other than the cases of termination due to ill health, contraction or discontinuance of business, cessation of employment etc.) and does not opt for transfer of accumulated balance to new employer, the withdrawal would be subject to tax.

(v) Rule 9 of Part A of the Fourth Schedule provides the manner of computing the tax liability of the employee in respect of such pre-mature withdrawal. In order to ensure collection of tax in respect of such pre-mature withdrawals, Rule 10 of Part A of the Fourth Schedule casts responsibility on the trustees of the RPF to deduct tax as computed in Rule 9 at the time of payment.

(vi) Rule 9 provides that the tax on withdrawn amount is required to be calculated by re-computing the tax liability of the years for which the contribution to RPF has been made by treating the same as contribution to unrecognized provident fund. The trustees of private provident fund schemes, are generally a part of the employer group and hence, have access to or can easily obtain the information regarding taxability of the employee making pre-mature withdrawal for the purposes of computation of the amount of tax liability under Rule 9. However, it may not always be possible for the trustees of EPFS to get the information regarding taxability of the employee such as year-wise amount of taxable income and tax payable for the purposes of computation of the amount of tax liability under Rule 9.

(2) Applicability and Rate of TDS

Section 192A provides for deduction of tax @10% on premature taxable withdrawal from employees provident fund scheme. Accordingly, in a case where the accumulated balance due to an employee participating in a recognized provident fund is includible in his total income owing to the provisions of Rule 8 of Part A of the Fourth Schedule not being applicable, the trustees of the Employees Provident Fund Scheme, 1952 or any person authorised under the scheme to make payment of accumulated balance due to employees are required to deduct income-tax@10%.

(3) Time of tax deduction at source

Tax should be deducted at the time of payment of accumulated balance due to the employee.

(4) Non-applicability of TDS under section 192A

No tax deduction is to be made under this section, if the amount of such payment or aggregate amount of such payment to the payee is less than ₹ 50,000.

(5) Deduction at maximum marginal rate in case of non-submission of PAN

Any person entitled to receive any amount on which tax is deductible under this section has to furnish his PAN to the person responsible for deducting such tax. In case he fails to do so, tax would be deductible at the maximum marginal rate.

Mr. Sharma, an employee of M/s. ABC Ltd. since 10-04-2016 resigned on 31-03-2020 and withdrew ₹ 60,000 being the balance in his EPF account. Discuss with reasons whether the provisions of Chapter XVII-B are attracted and if so, what is the net amount receivable by the payee, Mr. Sharma?

SOLUTION

As per section 192A, in a case where the accumulated balance due to an employee participating in a recognized provident fund is includible in his total income owing to the provisions of Rule 8 of Part A of the Fourth Schedule not being applicable, the trustees of the Employees Provident Fund Scheme, 1952 or any person authorised under the scheme to make payment of accumulated balance due to employees are required to deduct income-tax@10% at the time of payment of accumulated balance due to the employee. Tax deduction at source has to be made only if the amount of such payment or aggregate amount of such payment of the payee is ₹ 50,000 or more.

Rule 8 of Part A of the Fourth Schedule, inter alia, provides that only if an employee has rendered continuous service of five years or more with the employer, then accumulated balance in a recognized provident fund payable to an employee would be excluded from the total income of that employee.

In the present case, Mr. Sharma has withdrawn an amount exceeding ₹ 50,000 on his resignation after rendering a continuous service of four years with M/s. ABC Ltd. Therefore, tax has to be deducted at source@10% under section 192A on ₹ 60,000, being the amount withdrawn on his resignation without rendering continuous service of a period of five years with M/s. ABC Ltd.

The net amount receivable by Mr. Sharma is ₹ 54,000 [i.e., ₹ 60,000 – ₹ 6,000, being tax deducted at source].

Note – It is assumed that Mr. Sharma has furnished his permanent account number (PAN) to the person responsible for deducting tax at source. Otherwise, tax would be deductible at the maximum marginal rate. It may be noted that with effect from 1.6.2015 such employee can furnish declaration in Form No.15G for non-deduction of tax at source under section 192A by virtue of section 197A(1A).

15.3.3 Interest on securities [Section 193]

(1) Person responsible for deduction of tax at source

This section casts responsibility on every person responsible for paying to a resident any income by way of interest on securities.

(2) Rate of TDS

Such person is vested with the responsibility to deduct income-tax at the rates in force from the amount of interest payable.

The rate at which tax is deductible under section 193 is 10%, both in the case of domestic companies and resident non-corporate assessees.

(3) Time of tax deduction at source

Tax should be deducted at the time of credit of such income to the account of the payee or at the time of payment thereof in cash or by issue of a cheque or draft or by any other mode, whichever is earlier.

Where any income by way of interest on securities is credited to any account in the books of account of the person liable to pay such income, such crediting is deemed to be credit of such income to the account of the payee and tax has to be deducted at source. The account to which such interest is credited may be called “Interest Payable account” or “Suspense account” or by any other name.

(4) Non-applicability of TDS under section 193

No tax deduction is to be made from any interest payable:

(i) on 4¼% National Defence Bonds 1972, where the bonds are held by an individual not being a non-resident;

(ii) on 4¼% National Defence Loan, 1968 or 4¾% National Defence Loan, 1972, where the interest is payable to an individual;

(iii) on National Development Bonds;

(iv) on 7-year National Savings Certificates (IV Issue);

(v) on debentures issued by any institution or authority or any public sector company or any co-operative society (including a co-operative land mortgage bank or a co-operative land development bank), as notified by the Central Government;

Accordingly, the Central Government has, vide Notification No. 27 & 28/2018, dated 18-06-2018, notified-

(i) “Power Finance Corporation Limited 54EC Capital Gains Bond” issued by Power Finance Corporation Limited {PFCL} and

(ii) “Indian Railway Finance Corporation Limited 54EC Capital Gains Bond” issued by Indian Railway Finance Corporation Limited {IRFCL}

Thus, no tax is required to be deducted at source on interest payable on “Power Finance Corporation Limited 54EC Capital Gains Bond” and “Indian Railway Finance Corporation Limited 54EC Capital Gains Bond”.

> The benefit of this exemption would, however, be admissible in the case of transfer of such bonds by endorsement or delivery, only if the transferee informs PFCL/IRFCL by registered post within a period of sixty days of such transfer.

(vi) on 6½% Gold Bonds, 1977 or 7% Gold Bonds, 1980, where the bonds are held by an individual (other than a non-resident), provided that the holders of the bonds make a written declaration that the total nominal value of the bonds held by him or on his behalf did not in either case exceed ₹10,000 at any time during the period to which the interest relates;

(vii) on any security of the Central Government or a State Government;

Note – It may be noted that tax has to be deducted at source in respect of interest payable on 8% Savings (Taxable) Bonds, 2003, or 7.75% Savings (Taxable) Bonds, 2018, only if such interest payable exceeds ₹ 10,000 during the financial year.

(viii) on any debentures (whether listed or not listed on a recognized stock exchange) issued by the company in which the public are substantially interested to a resident individual or HUF. However,

(a) the interest should be paid by the company by an account payee cheque;

(b) the amount of such interest or the aggregate thereof paid or likely to be paid during the financial year by the company to such resident individual or HUF should not exceed ₹ 5,000.

(ix) on securities to LIC, GIC, subsidiaries of GIC or any other insurer, provided –

(a) the securities are owned by them or

(b) they have full beneficial interest in such securities.

(x) on any security issued by a company, where such security is in dematerialised form and is listed on a recognised stock exchange in India in accordance with the Securities Contracts (Regulation) Act, 1956 and the rules made thereunder.

15.3.4 Interest other than interest on securities [Section 194A]

This section deals with the scheme of deduction of tax at source from interest other than interest on securities. The main provisions are the following:

(1) Applicability of TDS under section 194A

This section applies only to interest, other than "interest on securities", credited or paid by assessees other than individuals or Hindu undivided families whose total sales, gross receipts or turnover from the business or profession carried on by him do not exceed the monetary limits of ₹ 1 crore and ₹ 50 lakhs, respectively, under section 44AB during the immediately preceding financial year.

These provisions apply only to interest paid or credited to residents.

(2) Time of tax deduction at source

The deduction of tax must be made at the time of crediting such interest to the payee or at the time of its payment in cash or by any other mode, whichever is earlier.

Where any such interest is credited to any account in the books of account of the person liable to pay such income, such crediting is deemed to be credit of such income to the account of the payee and the tax has to be deducted at source. The account to which such interest is credited may be called "Interest Payable account" or "Suspense account" or by any other name.

The CBDT has, vide Circular No.3/2010 dated 2.3.2010, given a clarification regarding deduction of tax at source on payment of interest on time deposits under section 194A by banks following Core-branch Banking Solutions (CBS) software.

It has been clarified that Explanation to section 194A is not meant to apply in cases of banks where credit is made to provisioning account on daily/monthly basis for the purpose of macro monitoring only by the use of CBS software. It has been further clarified that since no constructive credit to the depositor's/ payee's account takes place while calculating interest on time deposits on daily or monthly basis in the CBS software used by banks, tax need not be deducted at source on such provisioning of interest by banks for the purposes of macro monitoring only. In such cases, tax shall be deducted at source on accrual of interest at the end of financial year or at periodic intervals as per practice of the bank or as per the depositor's/ payee's requirement or on maturity or on encashment of time deposits, whichever event takes place earlier, whenever the aggregate of amounts of interest income credited or paid or likely to be credited or paid during the financial year by the banks exceeds the limits specified in section 194A.

Note - The time for making the payment of tax deducted at source would reckon from the date of credit of interest made constructively to the account of the payee.

(3) Rate of TDS

The rate at which the deduction is to be made is given in Part II of the First Schedule to the Annual Finance Act. The rate at which tax is to be deducted is 10% both in the case of resident non-corporate assessees and domestic companies.

(4) Non-applicability of TDS under section 194A

No deduction of tax shall be made in the following cases:

(a) If the aggregate amount of interest paid or credited during the financial year does not exceed ₹ 5,000.

This limit is ₹ 40,000 in respect of interest paid on –

(i) time deposits with a banking company;

(ii) time deposits with a co-operative society engaged in banking business; and

(iii) deposits with post office under notified schemes.

In respect of (i), (ii) and (iii) above, the limit is ₹ 50,000, in case of payee, being a resident senior citizen.

The limit will be calculated with respect to income credited or paid by a branch of a banking company or a co-operative society or a public company in case of:

(i) time deposits with a banking company

(ii) time deposits with a co-operative society carrying on the business of banking; and

(iii) deposits with housing finance companies, provided:

- they are public companies formed and registered in India
- their main object is to carry on the business of providing long-term finance for construction or purchase of houses in India for residential purposes
- they are eligible for deduction under section 36(1)(viii).

In the case of income credited or paid in respect of time deposits with a banking company or a co-operative bank or a public company with the main object of providing long-term finance for construction or purchase of houses in India for residential purposes, the threshold limit for deduction of tax at source (i.e., ₹ 50,000, ₹ 40,000 or ₹ 5,000, as the case may be) shall be computed with reference to the income credited or paid by a branch of the banking company or the co-operative society or the public company.

The threshold limit will be reckoned with reference to the total interest credited or paid by the banking company or the co-operative society or the public company, as the case may be, (and not with reference to each branch), where such banking company or co-operative society or public company has adopted core banking solutions.

(b) Interest paid or credited by a firm to any of its partners;

(c) Income paid or credited by a co-operative society (other than a co-operative bank) to a member thereof or to such income credited or paid by a co-operative society to any other co-operative society;

(d) Interest paid or credited in respect of deposits under any scheme framed by the Central Government and notified by it in this behalf;

(e) Interest income credited or paid in respect of deposits (other than time deposits made on or after 1.7.1995) with

(i) a bank to which the Banking Regulation Act, 1949 applies; or

(ii) a co-operative society engaged in carrying on the business of banking.

(f) Interest credited or paid in respect of deposits with primary agricultural credit society or a primary credit society or a co-operative land mortgage bank or a co-operative land development bank.

(g) Interest credited or paid in respect of deposits (other than time deposits) with a co-operative society, other than a co-operative society or bank referred to in (f) above, engaged in carrying on the business of banking.

(h) Interest income credited or paid by the Central Government under any provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961, the Estate Duty Act, the Wealth-tax Act, 1957, the Gift-tax Act, the Companies (Profits) Surtax Act or the Interest Tax Act.

(i) Interest paid or credited to the following entities:

(i) banking companies, or co-operative societies engaged in the business of banking, including co-operative land mortgage' banks;

(ii) financial corporations established under any Central, State or Provincial Act.

(iii) the Life Insurance Corporation of India.

(iv) companies and co-operative societies carrying on the business of insurance.

(v) the Unit Trust of India; and

(vi) notified institution, association, body or class of institutions, associations or bodies (National Skill Development Fund and Housing and Urban Development Corporation Ltd.(HUDCO) has been notified by the Central Government for this purpose)

(j) income credited by way of interest on the compensation amount awarded by the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal;

(k) income paid by way of interest on the compensation amount awarded by the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal where the amount of such income or, as the case may be, the aggregate of the amounts of such income paid during the financial year does not exceed ₹ 50,000.

(l) income paid or payable by an infrastructure capital company or infrastructure capital fund or public sector company or scheduled bank in relation to a zero coupon bond issued on or after 1.6.2005.

Note - The expression "time deposits" [for the purpose of (4)(a), (e) and (g) above] means the deposits, including recurring deposits, repayable on the expiry of fixed periods.

No tax to be deducted at source under section 194A, in case of Senior Citizens if the aggregate amount of interest does not exceed ₹ 50,000 [Notification No. 6/2018, dated 6-12-2018]

As per the third proviso to section 194A(3), no tax is required to be deducted at source in the case of senior citizens where the amount of interest or the aggregate of the amount of interest credited or paid during the financial year by a banking company, co-operative society engaged in banking business or post office does not exceed ₹ 50,000. However, it has come to the notice of the CBDT, that, some tax deductors/banks are making tax deductions even when the amount of interest does not exceed ₹ 50,000.

Under Rule 31A(5) of the Income-tax Rules, 1962, the DGIT (Systems) is authorized to specify the procedures, formats and standards for the purposes of furnishing and verification of the statements or claim for refund and shall be responsible for the day-to-day administration in relation to furnishing and verification of the statements or claim for refund in the manner so specified.

Accordingly, the Principal Director General of Income-tax (Systems) has, in exercise of the powers delegated by the CBDT under Rule 31A(5), clarified that no tax deduction at source under section 194A shall be made in the case of senior citizens where the amount of such income or the aggregate of the amounts of such income credited or paid during the financial year does not exceed ₹ 50,000.

Applicability of provisions for deduction of tax at source under section 194A on interest on fixed deposit made in the name of the Registrar General of Court or the depositor of the Fund on directions of Courts [Circular No.23/2015, dated 28-12-2015]

Section 194A stipulates deduction of tax at source (TDS) on interest other than interest on securities if the aggregate of amount of such interest credited or paid to the account of the payee during the financial year exceeds the specified amount.

In the case of UCO Bank in Writ Petition No. 3563 of 2012 and CM No. 7517/2012 vide judgment dated 11/11/2014, the Hon'ble Delhi High Court has held that the provisions of section 194A do not apply to fixed deposits made in the name of Registrar General of the Court on the directions of the Court during the pendency of proceedings before the Court. In such cases, till the Court passes the appropriate orders in the matter, it is not known who the beneficiary of the fixed deposits will be. Amount and year of receipt is also unascertainable. The Delhi High Court, thus, held that the person who is ultimately granted the funds would be determined by orders that are passed subsequently. At that stage, undisputedly, tax would be required to be deducted at source to the credit of the recipient. The High Court has also quashed Circular No.8/2011.

The CBDT has accepted the aforesaid judgment. Accordingly, it is clarified that interest on FDRs made in the name of Registrar General of the Court or the depositor of the fund on the directions of the Court, will not be subject to TDS till the matter is decided by the Court. However, once the Court decides the ownership of the money lying in the fixed deposit, the provisions of section 194A will apply to the recipient of the income.

Deduction of tax at source on interest income accrued to minor child, where both the parents have deceased [Notification No. 05/2017, dated 29.05.2017]

Under Rule 31A(5) of the Income-tax Rules, 1962, the Director General of Income-tax (Systems) is authorized to specify the procedures, formats and standards for the purposes of furnishing and verification of, inter alia, the statements and shall be responsible for the day-to-day administration in relation to furnishing and verification of the statements in the manner so specified.

The Principal Director General of Income-tax (Systems) has, in exercise of the powers delegated by the CBDT under Rule 31A(5), specified that in case of minors where both the parents have deceased, TDS on the interest income accrued to the minor is required to be deducted and reported against PAN of the minor child unless a declaration is filed under Rule 37BA(2) that credit for tax deducted has to be given to another person.

Deduction of tax at source on interest on deposits made under Capital Gains Accounts Scheme, 1988 where depositor has deceased [Notification No. 08/2017, dated 13.09.2017]

The Principal Director General of Income-tax (Systems) has, in exercise of the powers delegated by the CBDT under Rule 31A(5), vide this notification, specified that in case of deposits under the Capital Gains Accounts Scheme, 1988 where the depositor has deceased:

(i) TDS on the interest income accrued for and upto the period of death of the depositor is required to be deducted and reported against PAN of the depositor, and

(ii) TDS on the interest income accrued for the period after death of the depositor is required to be deducted and reported against PAN of the legal heir, unless a declaration is filed under Rule 37BA(2) that credit for tax deducted has to be given to another person.

ILLUSTRATION 3

Examine the TDS implications under section 194A in the cases mentioned hereunder –

(i) On 1.10.2019, Mr. Harish, aged 40 years, made a six-month fixed deposit of ₹ 10 lakh @9% p.a. with ABC Co-operative Bank. The fixed deposit matures on 31.3.2020.

(ii) On 1.6.2019, Mr. Ganesh, aged 45 years, made three nine month fixed deposits of ₹ 3 lakh each carrying interest@9% with Dwarka Branch, Janakpuri Branch and Rohini Branch of XYZ Bank, a bank which has adopted CBS. The fixed deposits mature on 28.2.2020.

(iii) On 1.4.2019, Mr. Rajesh, aged 35 years, started a 1 year recurring deposit of ₹ 80,000 per month@8% p.a. with PQR Bank. The recurring deposit matures on 31.3.2020.

SOLUTION

(i) ABC Co-operative Bank has to deduct tax at source@10% on the interest of ₹ 45,000 (9% × ₹ 10 lakh × ½) under section 194A. The tax deductible at source under section 194A from such interest is, therefore, ₹ 4,500.

(ii) XYZ Bank has to deduct tax at source@10% under section 194A, since the aggregate interest on fixed deposit with the three branches of the bank is ₹ 60,750 [₹ 3,00,000 × 3 × 9% × 9/12], which exceeds the threshold limit of ₹ 40,000. Since XYZ Bank has adopted CBS, the aggregate interest credited/paid by all branches has to be considered. Since the aggregate interest of ₹ 60,750 exceeds the threshold limit of ₹ 40,000, tax has to be deducted@10% under section 194A.

(iii) Tax has to be deducted under section 194A by PQR Bank on the interest of ₹ 41,600 falling due on recurring deposit on 31.3.2020 to Mr. Rajesh, since –

(1) "recurring deposit" is included in the definition of "time deposit"; and

(2) such interest exceeds the threshold limit of ₹ 40,000.

ILLUSTRATION 4

Maya Bank credited ₹ 73,50,000 towards interest on the deposits in a separate account for macro-monitoring purposes by using Core-branch Banking Solutions (CBS) software. No tax was deducted at source in respect of interest on deposits so credited even where the interest in respect of some depositors exceeded the limit of ₹ 40,000.

The Assessing Officer disallowed 30% of interest expenditure, where the interest on time deposits credited exceeded the limit of ₹ 40,000 and also levied penalty under section 271C.

Decide the correctness of action of the Assessing Officer.

SOLUTION

The Explanation below section 194A(1) provides that where any income by way of interest other than interest on securities is credited to any account, whether called 'interest payable account' or 'suspense account' or by any other name, in the books of account of the person liable to pay such income, such crediting shall be deemed to be credit of such income to the account of the payee and provisions of section 194A, shall, thus, apply.

However, the CBDT has, vide Circular No.3/2010 dated 2.3.2010, clarified that Explanation to section 194A will not apply in cases of banks where credit is made to provisioning account on daily/monthly basis for the purpose of macro monitoring only by the use of CBS software.

Since no constructive credit to the depositor's / payee's account takes place while calculating interest on daily / monthly basis in the CBS software used by banks, tax need not be deducted at source on such provisioning of interest by banks for the purposes of macro monitoring only.

In such cases, tax shall be deducted at source on accrual of interest at the end of the financial year or at periodic intervals as per practice of the bank or as per the depositor's or payee's requirement or on maturity or on encashment of time deposit, whichever event takes place earlier and wherever the aggregate amount of interest income credited or paid or likely to be credited or paid during the financial year by the bank exceeds the limits specified in section 194A i.e., ₹ 40,000.

In view of the above, the action of the Assessing Officer in disallowing the interest expenditure credited in a separate account for macro monitoring purpose is not valid and consequent initiation of penalty proceedings under section 271C is not tenable in law.

15.3.5 Winnings from lotteries, crossword puzzles and horse races [Sections 194B and 194BB]

(1) Rate of tax on casual income

Any income of a casual and non-recurring nature of the type of winnings from lotteries, crossword puzzles, card game and other game of any sort, races including horse races, etc. will be charged to income-tax at a flat rate of 30% [Section 115BB].

(2) TDS on winning from lotteries, crossword puzzles etc.

According to the provisions of section 194B, every person responsible for paying to any person, whether resident or non-resident, any income by way of winnings from lottery or crossword puzzle or card game and other game of any sort, is required to deduct income-tax therefrom at the rate of 30% if the amount of payment exceeds ₹ 10,000.

(3) Cases where winnings are partly in kind and partly in cash

In a case where the winnings are wholly in kind or partly in cash and partly in kind but the part in cash is not sufficient to meet the liability of deduction of tax in respect of whole of the winnings, the person responsible for paying shall, before releasing the winnings, ensure that tax has been paid in respect of the winnings.

(4) Person responsible for deduction of tax under section 194BB

Section 194BB casts responsibility on the following persons to deduct tax at source -

(i) a bookmaker; or

(ii) a person to whom a license has been granted by the Government under any law for the time being in force -

(a) for horse racing in any race course; or

(b) for arranging for wagering or betting in any race course.

(5) Threshold limit and rate of TDS under section 194BB

The obligation to deduct tax at source under section 194BB arises when the abovementioned persons make payment to any person of any income by way of winnings from any horse race in excess of ₹ 10,000. The rate applicable for deduction of tax at source is 30%.

Tax will have to be deducted at source from winnings from horse races even though the winnings may be paid to the person concerned in instalments of less than ₹ 10,000. Similarly, in cases where the book-maker or other person responsible for paying the winnings, credits such winnings and debits the losses to the individual account of the punter, tax has to be deducted @30% on winnings before set-off of losses. Thereafter, the net amount, after deduction of tax and losses, has to be paid to the winner.

In the context of the provisions of section 194BB, the expression 'any horse race' used therein must be taken to include, wherever the circumstances so necessitate, more than one horse race. Therefore, winnings by way of jack pot would also fall within the scope of section 194BB.

ILLUSTRATION 5

Mr. Govind won the first prize in a lottery ticket and the prize was a Maruti car worth ₹ 5 lacs. What is the procedure to be adopted before handing over the Maruti Car to Mr. Govind?

SOLUTION

Section 194B provides that the person responsible for paying to any person, any income by way of winnings from any lottery or crossword puzzle, card game or any other game of any sort and the amount of winning exceeds ₹ 10,000, tax shall be deducted at source @30%.

However, in case where the winning is wholly in kind, the person responsible for paying the prize shall before releasing the winning, ensure that the tax has been paid in respect of such winning.

The Karnataka High Court in the case of CIT v. Hindustan Lever Ltd. (2014) 361 ITR 1 has held that where the winnings are wholly in kind, the responsibility cast under section 194B is to ensure that the tax is paid by the winner of the prize before the prize is released in his favour. In this regard, the CBDT Circular No.763 dated 18/2/1998 clarifies that the person responsible for paying the winnings shall, before releasing such winnings, ensure that the tax is paid by the winner. He can do so, for example, by collecting from the winner a sum equal to the tax deductible at source on the winnings in kind, before releasing the winnings. For this purpose, the value of the winnings in kind shall be taken as the cost incurred by the payer in acquiring the said winnings in kind.

Therefore, in this case since the entire winning is in kind, it must be ensured that the sum equal to the tax deductible at source (i.e., ₹ 1,50,000, being @ 30% of ₹ 5 lacs) is paid by Mr. Govind, before the car is released in his favour. This can be done by collecting ₹ 1,50,000 from Mr. Govind before releasing the Maruti car to him and remitting the said sum to the Government account or verifying the tax payment by the winner and thereafter releasing the prize.

15.3.6 Payments to contractors and sub-contractors [Section 194C]

(1) Applicability of TDS under section 194C

Section 194C provides for deduction of tax at source from the payment made to resident contractors and sub-contractors.

Any person responsible for paying any sum to a resident contractor for carrying out any work (including supply of labour for carrying out any work) in pursuance of a contract between the contractor and the Central Government, a State Government, local authority, statutory corporation, a company, co-operative society, any statutory authority dealing with housing accommodation, any society registered under the Societies Registration Act, 1860, any trust or any university or any firm or any Government of a foreign State or foreign enterprise or any association or body established outside India or an individual, HUF, AOP or BOI subject to tax audit under section 44AB(a)/(b) in the immediately preceding financial year must deduct tax at source at the prescribed rate from such sum.

(2) Time of deduction

Tax has to be deducted at the time of payment of such sum or at the time of credit of such sum to the account of the contractor, whichever is earlier.

Where any such sum is credited to any account in the books of account of the person liable to pay such income, such crediting is deemed to be credit of such income to the account of the payee and the tax has to be deducted at source. The account to which such sum is credited may be called "Suspense account" or by any other name.

However, no tax has to be deducted at source in respect of payments made by individuals/ HUF to a contractor exclusively for personal purposes.

(3) Rate of TDS

The rate of TDS under section 194C on payments to contractors would be 1%, where the payee is an individual or HUF and 2% in respect of other payees. The same rates of TDS would apply for both contractors and sub-contractors.

The applicable rates of TDS under section 194C are as follows –

Payee	TDS rate
Individual / HUF contractor/sub-contractor	1%
Other than individual / HUF contractor/sub-contractor	2%
Contractor in transport business (if PAN is furnished)	Nil
Sub-contractor in transport business (if PAN is furnished)	Nil

(4) Threshold limit for deduction of tax at source under section 194C

No deduction will be required to be made if the consideration for the contract does not exceed ₹ 30,000. However, to prevent the practice of composite contracts being split up into contracts valued at less than ₹ 30,000 to avoid tax deduction, it has been provided that tax will be required to be deducted at source where the amount credited or paid or likely to be credited or paid to a contractor or sub-contractor exceeds ₹ 30,000 in a single payment or ₹ 1,00,000 in the aggregate during a financial year.

Therefore, even if a single payment to a contractor does not exceed ₹ 30,000, TDS provisions under section 194C would be attracted where the aggregate of the amounts of such sums credited or paid or likely to be credited or paid to the contractor during the financial year exceeds ₹ 1,00,000.

₹ 28,000 on 1.12.2019

On 1.3.2020, a payment of ₹ 30,000 is due to Mr. X on account of a contract work.

Discuss whether ABC Ltd. is liable to deduct tax at source under section 194C from payments made to Mr. X.

SOLUTION

In this case, the individual contract payments made to Mr. X does not exceed ₹ 30,000. However, since the aggregate amount paid to Mr. X during the P.Y.2019-20 exceeds ₹ 1,00,000 (on account of the last payment of ₹ 30,000, due on 1.3.2020, taking the total from ₹ 73,000 to ₹ 1,03,000), the TDS provisions under section 194C would get attracted. Tax has to be deducted@1% on the entire amount of ₹ 1,03,000 from the last payment of ₹ 30,000 and the balance of ₹ 28,970 (i.e., ₹ 30,000 – ₹ 1,030) has to be paid to Mr. X.

(5) Definition of work

Work includes –

(a) advertising;

(b) broadcasting and telecasting including production of programmes for such broadcasting or telecasting;

(c) carriage of goods or passengers by any mode of transport other than by railways;

(d) catering;

(e) manufacturing or supplying a product according to the requirement or specification of a customer by using material purchased from such customer.

However, "work" shall not include manufacturing or supplying a product according to the requirement or specification of a customer by using raw material purchased from a person, other than such customer, as such a contract is a contract for 'sale'. However, this will not be applicable to a contract which does not entail manufacture or supply of an article or thing (e.g. a construction contract).

It may be noted that the term "work" would include manufacturing or supplying a product according to the requirement or specification of a customer by using material purchased from such customer. In such a case, tax shall be deducted on the invoice value excluding the value of material purchased from such customer if such value is mentioned separately in the invoice. Where the material component has not been separately mentioned in the invoice, tax shall be deducted on the whole of the invoice value.

(6) Non-applicability of TDS under section 194C

No deduction is required to be made from the sum credited or paid or likely to be credited or paid during the previous year to the account of a contractor, during the course of the business of plying, hiring or leasing goods carriages, if he furnishes his PAN to the deductor.

In order to convey the true intent of law, it has been clarified that this relaxation from the requirement to deduct tax at source shall only be applicable to the payment in the nature of transport charges (whether paid by a person engaged in the business of transport or otherwise) made to a contractor, who fulfills the following three conditions cumulatively - is engaged in the business of plying, hiring or leasing goods carriages owns ten or less goods carriages at any time during the previous year has furnished a declaration to this effect along with his PAN Exemption u/s 194C(6)

Meaning of Goods carriage:

Goods carriage means -

(i) any motor vehicle constructed or adapted for use solely for the carriage of goods; or

(ii) any motor vehicle not so constructed or adapted, when used for the carriage of goods.

The term "motor vehicle" does not include vehicles having less than four wheels and with engine capacity not exceeding 25cc as well as vehicles running on rails or vehicles adapted for use in a factory or in enclosed premises.

(7) Important points

(i) The deduction of income-tax at source from payments made to non-resident contractors will be governed by the provisions of section 195.

(ii) The deduction of income-tax will be made from sums paid for carrying out any work or for supplying labour for carrying out any work. In other words, the section will apply only in relation to 'works contracts' and 'labour contracts' and will not cover contracts for sale of goods.

(iii) Contracts for rendering professional services by lawyers, physicians, surgeons, engineers, accountants, architects, consultants etc., cannot be regarded as contracts for carrying out any "work" and, accordingly, no deduction of income-tax is to be made from payments relating to such contracts under this section. Separate provisions for fees for professional services have been made under section 194J.

(8) Deduction of tax at source on payment of gas transportation charges by the purchaser of natural gas to the seller of gas [Circular No. 9/2012 dated 17.10.2012]

In case the Owner/Seller of the natural gas sells as well as transports the gas to the purchaser till the point of delivery, where the ownership of gas to the purchaser is simultaneously transferred, the manner of raising the sale bill (whether the transportation charges are embedded in the cost of gas or shown separately) does not alter the basic nature of such contract which remains essentially a 'contract for sale' and not a 'works contract' as envisaged in section 194C. Therefore, in such circumstances, the provisions of Chapter XVIIB are not applicable on the component of Gas Transportation Charges paid by the purchaser to the Owner/Seller of the gas. Further, the use of different modes of transportation of gas by Owner/Seller will not alter the position.

However, transportation charges paid to a third party transporter of gas, either by the Owner/Seller of the gas or purchaser of the gas or any other person, shall continue to be governed by the appropriate provisions of the Act and tax shall be deductible at source on such payment to the third party at the applicable rates.

(9) Applicability of TDS provisions on payments by broadcasters or Television Channels to production houses for production of content or programme for telecasting [Circular No. 04/2016, dated 29-2-2016]

The issue under consideration is whether payments made by the broadcaster/telecaster to production houses for production of content/programme are payments under a 'work contract' liable for tax deduction at source under section 194C or a contract for 'professional or technical services' liable for tax deduction at source under section 194J.

In this regard, the CBDT has clarified that while applying the relevant provisions of TDS on a contract for content production, a distinction is required to be made between:

(i) a payment for production of content/programme as per the specifications of the broadcaster/telecaster; and

(ii) a payment for acquisition of broadcasting/ telecasting rights of the content already produced by the production house.

In the first situation where the content is produced as per the specifications provided by the broadcaster/ telecaster and the copyright of the content/programme also gets transferred to the telecaster/ broadcaster, such contract is covered by the definition of the term `work' in section 194C and, therefore, subject to TDS under that section.

However, in a case where the telecaster/broadcaster acquires only the telecasting/ broadcasting rights of the content already produced by the production house, there is no contract for ''carrying out any work", as required in section 194C(1). Therefore, such payments are not liable for TDS under section 194C. However, payments of this nature may be liable for TDS under other sections of Chapter XVII-B of the Act.

ILLUSTRATION 7

Bharathi Cements Ltd. purchased jute bags from Raj Kumar & Co. The latter has to supply the jute bags with the logo and address of the assessee, printed on it. From 01.09.2019 to 20.03.2020, the value of jute bags supplied is ₹ 8,00,000, for which the invoice has been raised on 20.03.2020. While effecting the payment for the same, is the assessee bound to deduct tax at source, assuming that the value of the printing component involved is ₹ 1,10,000. You are informed that the assessee has not sold any material to Raj Kumar & Co. and that the latter has to manufacture the jute bags in its plant using raw materials purchased by it from outsiders.

SOLUTION

As per the definition under section 194C, "work" shall not include manufacturing or supplying a product according to the requirement or specification of a customer by using raw material purchased from a person, other than such customer. This is regardless of the quantum of expenditure incurred towards printing or processing comprised in the bill amount.

The problem clearly states that Raj Kumar & Co. has to manufacture the jute bags using raw materials purchased from outsiders and that the assessee Bharathi Cements Ltd has not sold any material to them. Therefore, in this case, it is a contract of sale. Hence, the provisions of section 194C are not attracted and no liability to deduct tax at source would arise.

Alap Ltd. claims that it is not liable for deduction of tax at source under section 194C. Examine the correctness of the claim made by the company. What would be the position if the value of the contract no. 5 is ₹ 14,000 only and there was no further contract during the year?

SOLUTION

As per section 194C(5), tax has to be deducted at source where the amount credited or paid or likely to be credited or paid to a contractor or sub-contractor exceeds ₹ 30,000 in a single payment or ₹ 1,00,000 in aggregate during the financial year.

Therefore, in the given case, even though the value of each individual contract does not exceed ₹ 30,000, the aggregate amount exceeds ₹ 1,00,000. Hence, Alap Ltd's contention is not correct and tax is required to be deducted at source on the whole amount of ₹ 1,02,000 from the last payment of ₹17,000 towards Contract No.5 on account of which the aggregate amount exceeded ₹ 1,00,000.

However, no tax deduction is to be made if the value of the last contract is ₹ 14,000 as the aggregate amount in such case would only be ₹ 99,000, which is below the aggregate monetary limit of ₹ 1,00,000.

15.3.7 Insurance Commission [Section 194D]

(1) Applicability of TDS under section 194D

Section 194D casts responsibility on any person responsible for paying to a resident any income by way of remuneration or reward, whether by way of commission or otherwise, for soliciting or procuring insurance business (including the business relating to the continuance, renewal or revival of policies of insurance) to deduct tax at source.

(2) Rate of TDS

Such person is required to deduct income-tax at the rate of 5%.

(3) Time of deduction

The deduction is to be made at the time of the credit of the income to the account of the payee or at the time of making the payment (by whatever mode) to the payee, whichever is earlier.

(4) Threshold limit

The tax under this section has to be deducted at source only if the amount of such income or the aggregate of the amounts of such income credited or paid during the financial year to the account of the payee exceeds ₹ 15,000.

15.3.8 Payment in respect of life insurance policy [Section 194DA]

(1) Taxability of sum received under a life insurance policy

Under section 10(10D), any sum received under a life insurance policy, including the sum allocated by way of bonus on such policy is exempt subject to fulfillment of conditions specified under the said section.

Consequently, the sum received under a life insurance policy which does not fulfill the conditions specified under section 10(10D) is taxable.

(2) Rate of TDS

For ensuring a proper mechanism for reporting of transactions and collection of tax in respect of sum paid under life insurance policies which are not exempt under section 10(10D), section 194DA provides for deduction of tax at the rate of 1% on any sum paid to a resident under a life insurance policy, including the sum allocated by way of bonus, which are not exempt under section 10(10D). However, with effect from 1.9.2019, tax is to be deducted at source @5% on the amount of income comprised therein i.e., after deducting the amount of insurance premium paid by the resident assessee from the total sum received.

(3) Threshold limit

Tax deduction is required only if the payment or aggregate payment in a financial year to an assessee is ₹ 1,00,000 or more. This is for alleviating the compliance burden on the small tax payers.

ILLUSTRATION 9

Examine the applicability of the provisions for tax deduction at source under section 194DA in the following cases -

(i) Mr. X, a resident, is due to receive ₹ 4.50 lakhs on 31.3.2020, towards maturity proceeds of LIC policy taken on 1.4.2017, for which the sum assured is ₹ 4 lakhs and the annual premium is ₹ 1,10,000.

(ii) Mr. Y, a resident, is due to receive ₹ 3.25 lakhs on 31.3.2020 on LIC policy taken on 31.3.2012, for which the sum assured is ₹ 3 lakhs and the annual premium is ₹ 35,000.

(iii) Mr. Z, a resident, is due to receive ₹ 95,000 on 1.8.2019 towards maturity proceeds of LIC policy taken on 1.8.2013 for which the sum assured is ₹ 90,000 and the annual premium is ₹ 12,000.

SOLUTION

(i) Since the annual premium exceeds 10% of sum assured in respect of a policy taken after 31.3.2012, the maturity proceeds of ₹ 4.50 lakhs due on 31.3.2020 are not exempt under section 10(10D) in the hands of Mr. X. Therefore, tax is required to be deducted@5% under section 194DA on the amount of income comprised therein i.e., on ₹ 1,20,000 (₹ 4,50,000, being maturity proceeds - ₹ 3,30,000, being the entire amount of insurance premium paid).

(ii) Since the annual premium is less than 20% of sum assured in respect of a policy taken before 1.4.2012, the sum of ₹ 3.25 lakhs due to Mr. Y would be exempt under section

10(10D) in his hands. Hence, no tax is required to be deducted at source under section 194DA on such sum payable to Mr. Y.

(iii) Even though the annual premium exceeds 10% of sum assured in respect of a policy taken after 31.3.2012, and consequently, the maturity proceeds of ₹ 95,000 due on 1.8.2019 would not be exempt under section 10(10D) in the hands of Mr. Z, the tax deduction provisions under section 194DA are not attracted since the maturity proceeds are less than ₹ 1 lakh.

15.3.9 Payments to non-resident sportsmen or sports association [Section 194E]

(1) Applicability

This section provides for deduction of tax at source in respect of any income referred to in section 115BBA payable to a non-resident sportsman (including an athlete) or an entertainer who is not a citizen of India or a non-resident sports association or institution.

(2) Rate of TDS

Deduction of tax at source @20.8% should be made by the person responsible for making the payment. Health and education cess @4% on TDS rate of 20% would be leviable, since payment is made to a non-resident.

(3) Time of deduction of tax

Such tax deduction should be at the time of credit of such income to the account of the payee or at the time of payment thereof in cash or by issue of a cheque or draft or by any other mode, whichever is earlier.

(4) Income referred to in section 115BBA

(i) income received or receivable by a non-resident sportsman (including an athlete) by way of-

(a) participation in any game or sport in India (However, games like crossword puzzles, horse races etc. taxable under section 115BB are not included herein); or

(b) advertisement; or

(c) contribution of articles relating to any game or sport in India in newspapers, magazines or journals.

(ii) Guarantee amount paid or payable to a non-resident sports association or institution in relation to any game or sport played in India. However, games like crossword puzzles, horse races etc. taxable under section 115BB are not included herein.

(iii) income received or receivable by a non-resident entertainer (who is not a citizen of India) from his performance in India.

ILLUSTRATION 10

Calculate the amount of tax to be deducted at source (TDS) on payment made to Ricky Ponting, an Australian cricketer, by a newspaper for contribution of articles ₹ 25,000.

SOLUTION

Under section 194E, the person responsible for payment of any amount to a non-resident sportsman for contribution of articles relating to any game or sport in India in a newspaper shall deduct tax @20%. Further, since Ricky Ponting is a non-resident, health and education cess@4% on TDS would also be added.

Therefore, tax to be deducted = ₹ 25,000 x 20.80% = ₹ 5,200.

15.3.10 Payments in respect of deposits under National Savings Scheme etc. [Section 194EE]

(1) Rate of TDS

The person responsible for paying to any person any amount from National Savings Scheme Account shall deduct income-tax thereon at the rate of 10% at the time of payment.

(2) Threshold limit

No such deduction shall be made where the amount of payment or the aggregate amount of payments in a financial year is less than ₹ 2,500.

(3) Non-applicability of TDS under section 194EE

The provisions of this section shall not apply to the payments made to the heirs of the assessee.

15.3.11 Repurchase of units by Mutual Fund or Unit Trust of India [Section 194F]

A person responsible for paying to any person any amount on account of repurchase of units covered under section 80CCB(2)[1] shall deduct tax at source at the rate of 20% at the time of payment of such amount.

15.3.12 Commission etc. on the sale of lottery tickets [Section 194G]

(1) Applicability and Rate of TDS

Under section 194G, the person responsible for paying to any person, who is or has been stocking, distributing, purchasing or selling lottery tickets, any income by way of commission, remuneration or prize (by whatever name called) on lottery tickets in an amount exceeding ₹ 15,000 shall deduct income-tax thereon at the rate of 5%.

[1] Deduction u/s 80CCB was available in respect of investment made in notified units of UTI or Mutual Funds during the PYs 1990-91 and 1991-92

(2) Time of deduction of tax

Such deduction should be made at the time of credit of such income to the account of the payee or at the time of payment of such income by cash, cheque, draft or any other mode, whichever is earlier.

Where any such income is credited to any account, whether called "Suspense Account" or by any other name, in the books of account of the person liable to pay such income, such crediting shall be deemed to be credit of such income to the account of the payee and the provisions of this section shall apply accordingly.

15.3.13 Commission or brokerage [Section 194H]

(1) Applicability and Rate of TDS

Any person who is responsible for paying any income by way of commission (other than insurance commission) or brokerage to a resident shall deduct income tax at the rate of 5%.

However, an individual or HUF whose total sales, gross receipts or turnover from the business or profession carried on by him do not exceed the monetary limits of ₹ 1 crore and ₹ 50 lakhs, respectively, specified under section 44AB during the immediately preceding financial year is not liable to deduct tax at source.

(2) Time of deduction

The deduction shall be made at the time such income is credited to the account of the payee or at the time of payment in cash or by issue of cheque or draft or by any other mode, whichever is earlier.

Even where income is credited to some other account, whether called "Suspense account" or by any other name, in the books of account of the person liable to pay such income, such crediting shall be deemed to be credit to the account of the payee for the purposes of this section.

(3) Threshold limit

No deduction is required if the amount of such income or the aggregate of such amount does not exceed ₹ 15,000 during the financial year.

(4) Meaning of "Commission or brokerage"

"Commission or brokerage" includes any payment received or receivable, directly or indirectly, by a person acting on behalf of another person for services rendered, or for any services in the course of buying or selling of goods, or in relation to any transaction relating to any asset, valuable article or thing, other than securities.

(5) Non-applicability of TDS under section 194H

This section is not applicable to professional services. "Professional Services" means services rendered by a person in the course of carrying on legal, medical, engineering or architectural profession or the profession of accountancy or technical consultancy or interior decoration or such other profession as notified by the CBDT for the purpose of compulsory maintenance of books of account under section 44AA.

Further, there would be no requirement to deduct tax at source on commission or brokerage payments by BSNL or MTNL to their public call office (PCO) franchisees.

(6) Applicability of TDS provisions on payments by television channels and publishing houses to advertisement companies for procuring or canvassing for advertisements [Circular No. 05/2016, dated 29-2-2016]

There are two types of payments involved in the advertising business:

(i) Payment by client to the advertising agency, and

(ii) Payment by advertising agency to the television channel/newspaper company

The applicability of TDS on these payments has already been dealt with in Circular No. 715 dated 8-8-1995, where it has been clarified in Question Nos. 1 & 2 that while TDS under section 194C (as work contract) will be applicable on the first type of payment, there will be no TDS under section 194C on the second type of payment e.g. payment by advertising agency to the media company.

However, another issue has been raised in various cases as to whether the fees/charges taken or retained by advertising companies from media companies for canvasing/booking advertisements (typically 15% of the billing) is 'commission' or 'discount' for attracting the provisions of section 194H.

The CBDT has clarified that no TDS is attracted on payments made by television channels/newspaper companies to the advertising agency for booking or procuring of or canvassing for advertisements. It is also further clarified that 'commission' referred to in Question No.27 of the CBDT's Circular No. 715 dated 8-8-1995 does not refer to payments by media companies to advertising companies for booking of advertisements but to payments for engagement of models, artists, photographers, sportspersons, etc. and, therefore, is not relevant to the issue of TDS referred to in this Circular.

B. Airways Ltd. sold tickets to the travel agents in India at a minimum fixed commercial price. The agents were permitted to sell the tickets at a higher price but not exceeding the maximum published price. Commission at the rate of 9% of minimum fixed commercial price was deducted under section 194H by the company. The Assessing Officer contended that the liability for tax deduction at source is attracted on the difference between the minimum fixed commercial price and the maximum published price by treating it as "additional special commission" in the hands of the agents.

Is the contention of Assessing Officer tenable in law?

SOLUTION

As per the provisions of section 194H, a person is liable to deduct tax at source at the time of credit or payment of commission to any resident, whichever is earlier.

In the present case, B. Airways Ltd. correctly deducted tax at source under section 194H from the commission@9% of the minimum fixed commercial price paid to the travel agents, who were allowed to sell the air tickets at any price higher than the minimum fixed commercial price subject to a maximum published price. However, the Assessing Officer contented that the airline company was required to deduct tax at source on the difference between the minimum fixed commercial price and the maximum published price by treating it as "additional special commission" in the hands of the agents.

The facts of the case are similar to the case of CIT v. Qatar Airways (2011) 332 ITR 253, where the Bombay High Court held that the difference between the maximum published price and the minimum fixed commercial price cannot be taken as "additional special commission" in the hands of the agents. This is because the maximum published price is the maximum price and the airline company has granted permission to the agents to sell the tickets at a price lower than the maximum published price. Further, the airline company would have no information about the exact rate at which the tickets were ultimately sold by its agents. In order to deduct tax at source on the difference between actual sale price and minimum fixed commercial price, the exact income in the hands of the agents must be ascertainable by the airline company. However, it is not so ascertainable in this case, since the agents are given discretion to sell the tickets at any rate between the minimum fixed commercial price and the maximum published price. It would be impracticable and unreasonable to expect the airline company to get a feedback from its numerous agents in respect of the price at which the tickets were sold by them.

Applying the rationale of the above case to the case on hand, B. Airways Ltd. is not liable to deduct tax at source under section 194H on the difference between the maximum published price and the minimum fixed commercial price, even though the amount earned by the agent over and above the minimum fixed commercial price is taxable as income in their hands.

Therefore, the contention of the Assessing Officer is not tenable in law.

ILLUSTRATION 12

Moon TV, a television channel, made payment of ₹ 50 lakhs to a production house for production of programme for telecasting as per the specifications given by the channel. The copyright of the programme is also transferred to Moon TV. Would such payment be liable for tax deduction at source under section 194C? Discuss.

Also, examine whether the provisions of tax deduction at source under section 194C would be attracted if the payment was made by Moon TV for acquisition of telecasting rights of the content already produced by the production house.

SOLUTION

In this case, since the programme is produced by the production house as per the specifications given by Moon TV, a television channel, and the copyright is also transferred to the television channel, the same falls within the scope of definition of the term 'work' under section 194C. Therefore, the payment of ₹ 50 lakhs made by Moon TV to the production house would be subject to tax deduction at source under section 194C.

If, however, the payment was made by Moon TV for acquisition of telecasting rights of the content already produced by the production house, there is no contract for ''carrying out any work", as required in section 194C(1). Therefore, such payment would not be liable for tax deduction at source under section 194C.

15.3.14 Rent [Section 194-I]

(1) Applicability and Rate of TDS

Any person who is responsible for paying to a resident any income by way of rent shall deduct income tax at the rate of:

(i) 2% in respect of rent for plant, machinery or equipment;

(ii) 10% in respect of other rental payments (i.e., rent for use of any land or building, including factory building, or land appurtenant to a building, including factory building, or furniture or fixtures).

However, an individual or HUF whose total sales, gross receipts or turnover from the business or profession carried on by him do not exceed the monetary limits of ₹ 1 crore and ₹ 50 lakhs, respectively, specified under section 44AB during the immediately preceding financial year is not liable to deduct tax at source.

Further, no deduction shall be made under this section from rent credited or paid to a business trust, being a REIT, in respect of any real estate asset owned directly by it.

(2) Time of deduction

This deduction is to be made at the time of credit of such income to the account of the payee or at the time of payment thereof in cash or by issue of cheque or draft or by any other mode, whichever is earlier.

Where any such income is credited to any account, whether called "Suspense account" or by any other name, in the books of account of the person liable to pay such income, such crediting shall be deemed to be credit of such income to the account of the payee and the provisions of this section will apply accordingly.

(3) Threshold limit

No deduction need be made where the amount of such income or the aggregate of the amounts of such income credited or paid or likely to be credited or paid during the financial year to the account of the payee does not exceed ₹ 2,40,000.

(4) Meaning of Rent

"Rent" means any payment, by whatever name called, under any lease, sub-lease, tenancy or any other agreement or arrangement for the use of (either separately or together) any –

(a) land; or

(b) building (including factory building); or

(c) land appurtenant to a building (including factory building); or

(d) machinery; or

(e) plant; or

(f) equipment; or

(g) furniture; or

(h) fittings,

whether or not any or all of the above are owned by the payee.

(5) Applicability of TDS provisions under section 194-I to payments made by the customers on account of cooling charges to the cold storage owners

CBDT Circular No.1/2008 dated 10.1.2008 provides clarification regarding applicability of provisions of section 194-I to payments made by the customers on account of cooling charges to the cold storage owners.

The main function of the cold storage is to preserve perishable goods by means of a mechanical process, and storage of such goods is only incidental in nature. The customer is also not given any right to use any demarcated space/place or the machinery of the cold store and thus does not become a tenant. Therefore, the provisions of 194-I are not applicable to the cooling charges paid by the customers of the cold storage.

However, since the arrangement between the customers and cold storage owners are basically contractual in nature, the provision of section 194-C will be applicable to the amounts paid as cooling charges by the customers of the cold storage.

(6) No requirement to deduct tax at source under section 194-I on remittance of Passenger Service Fees (PSF) by an Airline to an Airport Operator [Circular No. 21/2017, dated 12.06.2017]

Section 194-I requires deduction of tax at source at specified percentage on any income payable to a resident by way of rent. Explanation to this section defines the term "rent" as any payment, by whatever name called, under any lease, sub-lease, tenancy or any other agreement or arrangement for the use of any (a) land; or (b) building; or (c) land appurtenant to a building; or (d) machinery; (e) plant; (f) equipment (g) furniture; or (h) fitting, whether or not any or all of them are owned by the payee.

On the issue of whether payment of PSF by an airline to an Airport Operator qualifies as rent to attract TDS under section 194-I, the Bombay High Court relied on the Apex Court ruling in Japan Airlines and Singapore Airlines case, wherein it was observed that the primary requirement for any payment to qualify as rent is that the payment must be for the use of land and building and mere incidental/minor/insignificant use of the same while providing other facilities and service would not make it a payment for use of land and buildings so as to attract section 194-I. Accordingly, the Bombay High Court declined to admit the ground relating to applicability of the provisions of section 194-I on PSF charges holding that no substantial question of law arises.

The CBDT, accepting the view of the Bombay High Court, has clarified that the provisions of section 194-I shall not be applicable on payment of PSF by an airline to Airport Operator.

CBDT Circular No.4/2008 dated 15.4.2008 provides clarification on deduction of tax at source (TDS) on service tax component of rental income under section 194-I.

As per the provisions of 194-I, tax is deductible at source on income by way of rent paid to any resident. Further, rent has been defined in 194-I to mean any payment, by whatever name called, under any lease, sub-lease, tenancy or any other agreement or arrangement for the use of (either separately or together) any,-

(a) land; or

(b) building (including factory building); or

(c) land appurtenant to a building (including factory building); or

(d) machinery; or

(e) plant; or

(f) equipment; or

(g) furniture; or

(h) fittings,

whether or not any or all of the above are owned by the payee.

Service tax paid by the tenant doesn't partake the nature of income of the landlord. The landlord only acts as a collecting agency for Government for collection of service tax. Therefore, tax deduction at source under section 194-I would be required to be made on the amount of rent paid/payable without including the service tax.

Note- It may be noted that the clarification in respect of applicability of TDS provisions under section 194-I to GST component of rental income on similar lines is yet to be issued. Pending such clarification, it is possible to take a view that the clarification given in Circular No.4/2008 would apply in the GST regime also.

Clarification regarding TDS on Goods and Services Tax (GST) component comprised in payments made to residents [Circular No. 23/2017 dated 19.07.2017]

The CBDT had, vide Circular No. 1/2014 dated 13.01.2014, clarified that wherever in terms of the agreement or contract between the payer and the payee, the service tax component comprised in the amount payable to a resident is indicated separately, tax shall be deducted at source on the amount paid or payable without including such service tax component.

In order to harmonize the same treatment with the new system for taxation of services under the GST regime w.e.f. 01.07.2017, the CBDT has, vide this circular, clarified that wherever in terms of the agreement or contract between the payer and the payee, the component of 'GST on services' comprised in the amount payable to a resident is indicated separately, tax shall be deducted at source on the amount paid or payable without including such 'GST on services' component.

GST shall include Integrated Goods and Services Tax, Central Goods and Services Tax, State Goods and Services Tax and Union Territory Goods and Services Tax.

Further, for the purposes of this Circular, any reference to “service tax” in an existing agreement or contract which was entered into prior to 01.07.2017 shall be treated as “GST on services” with respect to the period from 01.07.2017 onward till the expiry of such agreement or contract.

(8) Clarification on applicability of TDS provisions of section 194-I on lumpsum lease premium paid for acquisition of long term lease [Circular No.35/2016, dated 13-10-2016]

The issue of whether or not TDS under section 194-I is applicable on 'lump sum lease premium' or 'one-time upfront lease charges" paid by an assessee for acquiring long-term leasehold rights for land or any other property has been examined by the CBDT.

Accordingly, the CBDT has, vide this clarified that lump sum lease premium or one-time upfront lease charges, which are not adjustable against periodic rent, paid or payable for acquisition of long-term leasehold rights over land or any other property are not payments in the nature of rent within the meaning of section 194-I. Therefore, such payments are not liable for TDS under section 194-I.

The issue as to whether the charges fixed by the Airport Authority of India (AAI) for landing and parking facility for the aircraft are for the "use of the land" by the airline company came up before the Supreme Court in Japan Airlines Co. Ltd. v. CIT / CIT v. Singapore Airlines Ltd. (2015) 377 ITR 372.

The Supreme Court observed that the charges which are fixed by the AAI for landing and take-off services as well as for parking of aircrafts are not for the "use of the land". These charges are for services and facilities offered in connection with the aircraft operation at the airport which include providing of air traffic services, ground safety services, aeronautical communication facilities, installation and maintenance of navigational aids and meteorological services at the airport.

There are various international protocols which mandate all authorities manning and managing these airports to construct the airport of desired standards which are stipulated in the protocols. The services which are required to be provided by these authorities, like AAI, are aimed at passengers' safety as well as for safe landing and parking of the aircrafts. Therefore, the services are not restricted to merely permitting "use of the land" of airport. On the contrary, it encompasses all the facilities that are to be compulsorily offered by the AAI in tune with the requirements of the protocol.

The Supreme Court observed that the charges levied on air-traffic includes landing charges, lighting charges, approach and aerodrome control charges, aircraft parking charges, aerobridge charges, hangar charges, passenger service charges, cargo charges, etc. Thus, when the airlines pay for these charges, treating such charges as charges for "use of the land" would tantamount to adopting a totally simplistic approach which is far away from the reality.

The Supreme Court opined that the substance behind such charges has to be considered and when the issue is viewed from this angle, keeping the larger picture in mind, it becomes very clear that the charges are not for use of the land per se and, therefore, it cannot be treated as "rent" within the meaning of section 194-I. The Supreme Court, thus, concurred with the view taken by the Madras High Court in Singapore Airlines case and overruled the view taken by the Delhi High Court in United Airlines/Japan Airlines case.

ABC Ltd. took on sub-lease a building from J, an individual, with effect from 1.9.2019 on a rent of ₹ 25,000 per month. It also took on hire machinery from J with effect from 1.10.2019 on hire charges of ₹ 15,000 per month. ABC Ltd. entered into two separate agreements with J for sub-lease of building and hiring of machinery. The rent of building and hire charges of machinery for the financial year 2019-20 were ₹ 1,75,000 and ₹ 90,000, respectively, which were credited by ABC Ltd. to the account of J in its books of account on 31.3.2020. Examine the obligation of ABC Ltd. with regard to deduction of tax at source in respect of the rent and hire charges.

SOLUTION

As per section 194-I dealing with deduction of tax at source from payment of rent, the rate of TDS applicable is 2% for machinery hire charges and 10% for building lease rent. The scope of the section includes within its ambit, rent for machinery, plant and equipment. Tax is required to be deducted at source from payment of rent, by whatever name called, under any lease, sub-lease, tenancy or any other agreement or arrangement for the use of building and machinery, irrespective of whether such assets are owned or not by the payee.

The limit of ₹ 2,40,000 for tax deduction at source will apply to the aggregate rent of all the assets. Even if two separate agreements are entered into, one for sub-lease of building and another for hiring of machinery, rent and hire charges under the two agreements have to be aggregated for the purpose of application of the threshold limit of ₹ 2,40,000. In this case, since the payment for rent and hire charges credited to the account of J, the payee, aggregates to ₹ 2,65,000 (₹ 1,75,000 + ₹ 90,000), tax is deductible at source under section 194-I. Tax is deductible@10% on ₹ 1,75,000 (rent of building) and @2% on ₹ 90,000 (hire charges of machinery).

15.3.15 Payment on transfer of certain immovable property other than agricultural land [Section 194-IA]

(1) Applicability and Rate

Every transferee responsible for paying any sum as consideration for transfer of immovable property (land, other than agricultural land, or building or part of building) to a resident transfer shall deduct tax, at the rate of 1% of such sum.

(2) Time of deduction

The deduction is to be made at the time of credit of such sum to the account of the resident transferor or at the time of payment of such sum to a resident transferor, whichever is earlier.

(3) Threshold limit

Tax is not required to be deducted at source where the total amount of consideration for the transfer of immovable property is less than ₹ 50 lakh.

(4) Non-applicability of TDS under section 194-IA

Since tax deduction at source for compulsory acquisition of immovable property is covered under section 194LA, the provisions of section 194-IA do not get attracted in the hands of the transferee in such cases.

(5) No requirement to obtain TAN

The provisions of section 203A containing the requirement of obtaining Tax deduction account number (TAN) shall not apply to the person required to deduct tax in accordance with the provisions of section 194-IA.

(6) Meaning of consideration for transfer of any immovable property

Consideration for transfer of any immovable property includes all charges of the nature of club membership fee, car parking fee, electricity or water facility fee, maintenance fee, advance fee or any other charges of similar nature, which are incidental to transfer of the immovable property.

Time and mode of payment of tax deducted at source under section 194-IA to the credit of Central Government, furnishing challan-cum-statement and TDS Certificate [Rules 30, 31A & 31]

(i) Such sum deducted under section 194-IA shall be paid to the credit of the Central Government within a period of 30 days from the end of the month in which the deduction is made and shall be accompanied by a challan-cum-statement in Form No.26QB [Rule 30].

(ii) The amount so deducted has to be deposited to the credit of the Central Government by electronic remittance within the above mentioned time limit, into RBI, SBI or any authorized bank [Rule 30].

(iii) Every person responsible for deduction of tax under section 194-IA shall also furnish to the DGIT (Systems) or any person authorized by him, a challan-cum-statement in Form No.26QB electronically within 30 days from the end of the month in which the deduction is made [Rule 31A].

(iv) Every person responsible for deduction of tax under section 194-IA shall furnish the TDS certificate in Form No.16B to the payee within 15 days from the due date for furnishing the challan-cum-statement in Form No.26QB under Rule 31A, after generating and downloading the same from the web portal specified by the DGIT (Systems) or the person authorized by him [Rule 31].

ILLUSTRATION 14

Mr. X sold his house property in Bangalore as well as his rural agricultural land for a consideration of ₹ 60 lakh and ₹ 15 lakh, respectively, to Mr. Y on 1.8.2019. He has purchased the house property and the land in the year 2018 for ₹ 40 lakh and ₹ 10 lakh, respectively. The stamp duty value on the date of transfer, i.e., 1.8.2019, is ₹ 85 lakh and ₹ 20 lakh for the house property and rural agricultural land, respectively. Determine the tax implications in the hands of Mr. X and Mr. Y and the TDS implications, if any, in the hands of Mr. Y, assuming that both Mr. X and Mr. Y are resident Indians.

SOLUTION

(i)	Tax implications in the hands of Mr. X
	As per section 50C, the stamp duty value of house property (i.e. ₹ 85 lakh) would be deemed to be the full value of consideration arising on transfer of property since stamp duty value exceeds 105% of the actual consideration. Therefore, ₹ 45 lakh (i.e., ₹ 85 lakh – ₹ 40 lakh, being the purchase price) would be taxable as short-term capital gains in the A.Y.2020-21. Since rural agricultural land is not a capital asset, the gains arising on sale of such land is not taxable in the hands of Mr. X.

(ii)	Tax implications in the hands of Mr.Y
	In case immovable property is received for inadequate consideration, the difference between the stamp value and actual consideration would be taxable under section 56(2)(x), if such difference exceeds higher of ₹ 50,000 or 5% of the consideration. Therefore, in this case ₹ 25 lakh (₹ 85 lakh – ₹ 60 lakh) would be taxable in the hands of Mr. Y under section 56(2)(x). Since agricultural land is not a capital asset, the provisions of section 56(2)(x) are not attracted in respect of receipt of agricultural land for inadequate consideration, since the definition of "property" under section 56(2)(x) includes only capital assets specified thereunder.
(iii)	TDS implications in the hands of Mr. Y
	Since the sale consideration of house property exceeds ₹ 50 lakh, Mr. Y is required to deduct tax at source under section 194-IA. The tax to be deducted under section 194-IA would be ₹ 60,000, being 1% of ₹ 60 lakh. TDS provisions under section 194-IA are not attracted in respect of transfer of rural agricultural land.

15.3.16 Payment of rent by certain individuals or Hindu undivided family [Section194-IB]

(1) Applicability and Rate of TDS

Section 194-IB requires any person, being an individual or a HUF, other than those individual or HUF whose total sales, gross receipts or turnover from the business or profession carried on by him exceed the monetary limits of ₹ 1 crore and ₹ 50 lakhs, respectively, specified under section 44AB in the immediately preceding financial year, responsible for paying to a resident any income by way of rent, to deduct income tax at the rate of 5%.

(2) Threshold limit

Under this section, tax has to be deducted at source only if the amount of such rent exceeds ₹ 50,000 for a month or part of a month during the previous year.

(3) Time of deduction

This deduction is to be made at the time of credit of such rent, for the last month of the previous year or the last month of tenancy, if the property is vacated during the year, as the case may be, to the account of the payee or at the time of payment thereof in cash or by issue of cheque or draft or by any other mode, whichever is earlier.

(4) No requirement to obtain TAN

The provisions of section 203A containing the requirement of obtaining Tax deduction account number (TAN) shall not apply to the person required to deduct tax in accordance with the provisions of section 194-IB.

(5) Meaning of "Rent"

"Rent" means any payment, by whatever name called, under any lease, sub-lease, tenancy or any other agreement or arrangement for the use of any land or building or both.

(6) Deduction not to exceed rent for last month

Section 206AA requires providing of Permanent Account Number (PAN) of the deductee to the deductor, failing which tax shall be deducted at a higher rate (i.e., higher of the rate provided in the relevant section, rates in force and 20%). Where the tax is required to be deducted as per the provisions of section 206AA, such deduction shall not exceed the amount of rent payable for the last month of the previous year or the last month of the tenancy, as the case may be.

ILLUSTRATION 15

Mr. X, a salaried individual, pays rent of ₹ 55,000 per month to Mr. Y from June, 2019. Is he required to deduct tax at source? If so, when is he required to deduct tax? Also, compute the amount of tax to be deducted at source.

Would your answer change if Mr. X vacated the premises on 31st December, 2019?

Also, what would be your answer if Mr. Y does not provide his PAN to Mr. X?

SOLUTION

Since Mr. X pays rent exceeding ₹ 50,000 per month in the F.Y. 2019-20, he is liable to deduct tax at source @5% of such rent for F.Y. 2019-20 under section 194-IB. Thus, ₹ 27,500 [₹ 55,000 x 5% x 10] has to be deducted from rent payable for March, 2020.

If Mr. X vacated the premises in December, 2019, then tax of ₹ 19,250 [₹ 55,000 x 5% x 7] has to be deducted from rent payable for December, 2019.

In case Mr. Y does not provide his PAN to Mr. X, tax would be deductible @20%, instead of 5%.

In case 1 above, this would amount to ₹ 1,10,000 [₹ 55,000 x 20% x 10] but the same has to be restricted to ₹ 55,000, being rent for March, 2020.

In case 2 above, this would amount to ₹ 77,000 [₹ 55,000 x 20% x 7] but the same has to be restricted to ₹ 55,000, being rent for December, 2019.

15.3.17 Payment under specified agreement [Section 194-IC]

(1) Applicability and Rate

This section casts responsibility on any person responsible for paying to a resident any sum by way of consideration, not being consideration in kind, under a specified agreement under section 45(5A), to deduct income-tax at the rate of 10%.

(2) Time of deduction

This deduction is to be made at the time of credit of such sum to the account of the payee or at the time of payment thereof in cash or by issue of cheque or draft or by any other mode, whichever is earlier.

(3) Non-applicability of section 194-IA

Since tax deduction at source for specified agreement under section 45(5A) is covered under section 194-IC, the provisions of section 194-IA do not get attracted in the hands of the transferee in such cases.

(4) Meaning of specified agreement

Specified agreement under section 45(5A):

- It means a registered agreement in which a person owning land or building or both, agrees to allow another person to develop a real estate project on such land or building or both.
- The consideration, in this case, is a share, being land or building or both in such project; Part of the consideration may also be in cash.

15.3.18 Fees for professional or technical services [Section 194J]

(1) Applicability and Rate of TDS

Every person, who is responsible for paying to a resident any sum by way of –

(i) fees for professional services; or

(ii) fees for technical services; or

(iii) any remuneration or fees or commission, by whatever name called, other than those on which tax is deductible under section 192, to a director of a company; or

(iv) royalty, or

(v) non-compete fees referred to in section 28(va)

shall deduct tax at source at the rate of 10%.

However, in case of a payee, engaged only in the business of operation of call centre, the tax shall be deducted at source @2%

(2) Time of deduction

The deduction is to be made at the time of credit of such sum to the account of the payee or at the time of payment thereof in cash or by issue of a cheque or draft or by any other mode, whichever is earlier.

Where any sum referred to in (1) is credited to any account, whether called suspense account or by any other name, in the books of accounts of the person liable to pay such sum, such crediting shall be deemed to be credit of such sum to the account of the payee and tax has to be deducted accordingly.

(3) Threshold limit

No tax deduction is required if the amount of fees or the aggregate of the amounts of fees credited or paid or likely to be credited or paid during a financial year does not exceed ₹ 30,000 in the case of fees for professional services, ₹ 30,000 in the case of fees for technical services, ₹ 30,000 in the case of royalty and ₹ 30,000 in the case of non-compete fees.

The limit of ₹ 30,000 under section 194J is applicable separately for fees for professional services, fees for technical services, royalty and non-compete fees referred to in section 28(va). It implies that if the payment to a person towards each of the above is less than ₹ 30,000, no tax is required to be deducted at source, even though the aggregate payment or credit exceeds ₹ 30,000. However, there is no such exemption limit for deduction of tax on any remuneration or fees or commission payable to director of a company.

ILLUSTRATION 16

XYZ Ltd. makes a payment of ₹ 28,000 to Mr. Ganesh on 2.8.2019 towards fees for professional services and another payment of ₹ 25,000 to him on the same date towards fees for technical services. Discuss whether TDS provisions under section 194J are attracted.

SOLUTION

TDS provisions under section 194J would not get attracted, since the limit of ₹ 30,000 is applicable for fees for professional services and fees for technical services, separately. It is assumed that there is no other payment to Mr. Ganesh towards fees for professional services and fees for technical services during the P.Y.2019-20.

(4) Non-applicability of TDS under section 194J

(i) An individual or a Hindu undivided family, whose total sales, gross receipts or turnover from the business or profession carried on by him do not exceed the monetary limit of ₹ 1 crore and ₹ 50 lakhs, respectively, specified under section 44AB during the immediately preceding the financial year is not liable to deduct tax at source.

However, an individual or HUF, whose total sales, gross receipts or turnover from business or profession carried by him exceeds the above monetary limits under section 44AB in the immediately preceding financial year is required to deduct tax on fees for professional services or fees for technical services credited or paid.

(ii) Further, an individual or Hindu Undivided family, shall not be liable to deduct income-tax on the sum payable by way of fees for professional services, in case such sum is credited or paid exclusively for personal purposes.

(5) Meaning of "Professional services"

"Professional services" means services rendered by a person in the course of carrying on legal, medical, engineering or architectural profession or the profession of accountancy or technical consultancy or interior decoration or advertising or such other profession as is notified by the CBDT for the purposes of section 44AA or of this section.

Other professions notified for the purposes of section 44AA are as follows:

(a) Profession of "authorised representatives";

(b) Profession of "film artist";

(c) Profession of "company secretary".

The CBDT has notified the services rendered by following persons in relation to the sports activities as Professional Services for the purpose of the section 194J:

(i) Sports Persons,

(ii) Umpires and Referees,

(iii) Coaches and Trainers,

(iv) Team Physicians and Physiotherapists,

(v) Event Managers,

(vi) Commentators,

(vii) Anchors and

(viii) Sports Columnists.

Accordingly, the requirement of TDS as per section 194J would apply to all the aforesaid professions. The term "profession", as such, is of a very wide import. However, the term has been defined in this section exhaustively. For the purposes of TDS, therefore, all other professions would be outside the scope of section 194J. For example, this section will not apply to professions of teaching, sculpture, painting etc. unless they are notified.

(6) Meaning of "Fees for technical services"

Explanation (b) to section 194J provides that the term 'fees for technical services' shall have the same meaning as in Explanation 2 to section 9(1)(vii). The term 'fees for technical services' as defined in Explanation 2 to section 9(i)(vii) means any consideration (including any lump sum consideration) for rendering of any of the following services:

(i) Managerial services;

(ii) Technical services;

(iii) Consultancy services;

(iv) Provision of services of technical or other personnel.

It is expressly provided that the term 'fees for technical services' will not include following types of consideration:

(i) Consideration for any construction, assembly, mining or like project, or

(ii) Consideration which is chargeable under the head 'Salaries'.

(7) TPAs liable to deduct tax under section 194J on payment to hospitals on behalf of insurance companies

The CBDT has, through Circular No.8/2009 dated 24.11.2009, clarified that TPAs (Third Party Administrator's) who are making payment on behalf of insurance companies to hospitals for settlement of medical/insurance claims etc. under various schemes including cashless schemes are liable to deduct tax at source under section 194J on all such payments to hospitals etc. This is because the services rendered by hospitals to various patients are primarily medical services and, therefore, the provisions of section 194J are applicable to payments made by TPAs to hospitals etc.

Consequently, all such past transactions between TPAs and hospitals would fall within the provisions of section 194J and consequence of failure to deduct tax or after deducting tax failure to pay on all such transactions would make the deductor (TPAs) deemed to be an assessee-in-default in respect of such tax and also liable for charging of interest under section 201(1A).

However, no proceedings under section 201 may be initiated after the expiry of six years from the end of the financial year in which payments have been made without deducting tax at source etc. by the TPA's. Further, the tax demand arising out of section 201(1) in situations arising above, may not be enforced if the deductor (TPA) satisfies the officer in charge of TDS that the relevant taxes have been paid by the deductee-assessee (hospitals etc.). A certificate from the auditor of the deductee-assessee stating that the tax and interest due from deductee-assessee has been paid for the assessment year concerned would be sufficient compliance for the above purpose. However, this will not alter the liability to charge interest under section 201(1A) till payment of taxes by the deductee-assessee or liability for penalty under section 271C, as the case may be.

In the case of CIT v. Kotak Securities Ltd (2016) 383 ITR 1 (SC) the Supreme Court dealt on whether transaction charges paid by the members of the stock exchange for availing fully automated online trading facility, being a facility provided by the stock exchange to all its members, constitute fees for technical services to attract the provisions of tax deduction at source under section 194J.

It observed that technical services like managerial and consultancy service are in the nature of specialised services made available by the service provider to cater to the special needs of the customer-user as may be felt necessary. It is the above feature that would distinguish or identify a service provider from a facility offered

The Apex Court, accordingly, held that the service provided by the BSE for which transaction charges are paid failed to satisfy the test of specialized, exclusive and individual requirement of the user or the consumer who may approach the service provider for such assistance or service.

Therefore, the transaction charges paid to BSE by its members are not for technical services but are in the nature of payments made for facilities provided by the stock exchange. Such payments would, therefore, not attract the provisions of tax deduction at source under section 194J.

(8) Consideration for use or right to use of computer software is royalty within the meaning of section 9(1)(vi)

As per section 9(1)(vi), any income payable by way of royalty in respect of any right, property or information is deemed to accrue or arise in India. The term "royalty" means consideration for transfer of all or any right in respect of certain rights, property or information.

The consideration for use or right to use of computer software is royalty by clarifying that, transfer of all or any rights in respect of any right, property or information includes and has always included transfer of all or any right for use or right to use a computer software (including granting of a licence) irrespective of the medium through which such right is transferred.

Consequently, the provisions of tax deduction at source under section 194J and section 195 would be attracted in respect of consideration for use or right to use computer software since the same falls within the definition of royalty.

Note - The Central Government has, vide Notification No.21/2012 dated 13.6.2012, effective from 1st July, 2012, exempted certain software payments from the applicability of tax deduction under section 194J. Accordingly, where payment is made by the transferee for acquisition of software from a resident-transferor, the provisions of section 194J would not be attracted if -

(1) the software is acquired in a subsequent transfer without any modification by the transferor;

(2) tax has been deducted either under section 194J or under section 195 on payment for any previous transfer of such software; and

(3) the transferee obtains a declaration from the transferor that tax has been so deducted along with the PAN of the transferor.

ILLUSTRATION 17

East Bengal Club, a renowned football club, has engaged Raghu, a resident in India, as its coach at a remuneration of ₹ 6 lacs per annum. The club wants to know from you whether it is liable to deduct tax at source from such remuneration.

SOLUTION

Section 194J requires deduction of tax at source @10% from the amount credited or paid by way of fees for professional services, where such amount or aggregate of such amounts credited or paid to a person exceeds ₹ 30,000 in a financial year. As per Explanation (a) to section 194J, professional services includes services rendered by a person in the course of carrying on such other profession as is notified by the CBDT for the purposes of section 194J.

Accordingly, the CBDT has, vide Notification No.88 dated 21.8.2008, in exercise of the powers conferred by clause (a) of the Explanation to section 194J notified the services rendered by coaches and trainers in relation to the sports activities as professional services for the purposes of section 194J.

Therefore, the club is liable to deduct tax at source under section 194J from the remuneration payable to the Coach, Raghu.

15.3.19 Payment of compensation on acquisition of certain immovable property [Section 194LA]

(1) Applicability

Section 194LA provides for deduction of tax at source by a person responsible for paying to a resident any sum in the nature of –

(i) compensation or the enhanced compensation or

(ii) the consideration or the enhanced consideration on account of compulsory acquisition, under any law for the time being in force, of any immovable property (other than agricultural land).

Immovable property means any land (other than agricultural land) or any building or part of a building.

(2) Rate of TDS

The amount of tax to be deducted is 10% of such sum mentioned in (1) above.

(3) Time of deduction

The tax should be deducted at the time of payment of such sum in cash or by issue of a cheque or draft or by any other mode, whichever is earlier.

(4) Threshold limit

(5) Non-applicability of TDS under section 194LA

No tax is required to be deducted where payment is made in respect of any award or agreement which has been exempted from levy of income tax under section 96 of the Right to Fair Compensation and Transparency in Land Acquisition, Rehabilitation and Resettlement Act, 2013.

(1) Special rate of tax on interest received by non-residents from notified infrastructure debt funds

Interest income received by a non-corporate non-resident or a foreign company from notified infrastructure debt funds set up in accordance with the prescribed guidelines would be subject to tax at a concessional rate of 5% under section 115A on the gross amount of such interest income as compared to tax @20% on other interest income of non-resident. The concessional rate of tax is expected to give a fillip to infrastructure and encourage inflow of long-term foreign funds to the infrastructure sector.

(2) Rate of TDS

Accordingly, tax would be deductible @5% on interest paid/credited by such fund to a non-resident/foreign company.

(3) Time of deduction

The person responsible for making the payment shall, at the time of credit of such income to the account of the payee or at the time of payment thereof in cash or by issue of a cheque or draft or by any other mode, whichever is earlier, deduct income-tax @5%.

Interest paid by an Indian company or business trust[2] to a foreign company or a non-corporate non-resident in respect of borrowing made in foreign currency from sources outside India between 1.7.2012 and 30.6.2020 would be subject to tax at a concessional rate of 5% on gross interest (as against the rate of 20% of gross interest applicable in respect of other interest received by a non-corporate non-resident or foreign company from Government or an Indian concern on money borrowed or debt incurred by it in foreign currency).

To avail this concessional rate, the borrowing should be from a source outside India

- under a loan agreement at any time between 1.7.2012 and 30.6.2020 or
- by way of issue of long-term infrastructure bonds during the period between 1.7.2012 and 30.9.2014 or
- by way of issue of any long-term bond, including long-term infrastructure bonds during the period between 1.10.2014 and 30.6.2020 and approved by the Central Government in this behalf.

The interest to the extent the same does not exceed the interest calculated at the rate approved by the Central Government, taking into consideration the terms of the loan or the bond and its repayment, will be subject to tax at a concessional rate of 5%.

(2) Rate of TDS

Such interest paid by an Indian company to a non-corporate non-resident or a foreign company would be subject to TDS@5% under section 194LC.

(3) Extension of applicability of concessional rate of TDS

The benefit of concessional rate of TDS under section 194LC is extended to interest payable in respect of monies borrowed by an Indian company or business trust from a source outside India by way of issue of rupee denominated bond issued before 1st July, 2020.

However, interest payable by an Indian company or a business trust to a non-resident, including a foreign company, in respect of rupee denominated bond issued outside India during the period from 17.9.2018 to 31.3.2019, shall be exempt from tax, and consequently, no tax shall be deducted on the payment of interest in respect of the said bond.

(4) Non-applicability of higher rate of TDS under section 206AA for non-furnishing of PAN

Levy of higher rate of TDS@20% under section 206AA in the absence of PAN would not be attracted in respect of payment of interest on long-term bonds, as referred to in section 194LC, to a non-corporate non-resident or to a foreign company.

15.3.22 Interest on Government securities or rupee-denominated bonds of an Indian company payable to a Foreign Institutional Investor (FII) or a Qualified Foreign Investor (QFI) [Section 194LD]

15.3.23 Payment made by an individual or a HUF for contract work or by way of fees for professional services or commission or brokerage [Section 194M]

(1) Applicability and rate of TDS

Section 194M, inserted with effect from 1.9.2019, provides for deduction of tax at source @5% by an individual or a HUF responsible for paying any sum during the financial year to any resident –

(i) for carrying out any work (including supply of labour for carrying out any work) in pursuance of a contract; or

(ii) by way of commission (not being insurance commission referred to in section 194D) or brokerage; or

(iii) by way of fees for professional services.

It may be noted that only individuals and HUFs (other than those who are required to deduct income-tax as per the provisions of section 194C or 194H or 194J) are required to deduct tax in respect of the above sums payable during the financial year to a resident.

(2) Time of deduction

The tax should be deducted at the time of credit of such sum or at the time of payment of such sum, whichever is earlier.

(3) Threshold limit

No tax is required to be deducted where such sum or, as the case may be, aggregate amount of such sums credited or paid to a resident during the financial year does not exceed ₹ 50,00,000.

(4) Non-applicability of TDS under section 194M

An individual or a Hindu undivided family is not liable to deduct tax at source under section 194M, if –

4.	Mr. Dheeraj, a pensioner	Contract payment made during October-November 2019 for reconstruction of residential house	₹ 48 lakhs

SOLUTION

	Particulars of the payer	Nature of payment	Aggregate of payments in the F.Y.2019-20	Whether TDS provisions are attracted?
1	Mr. Ganesh, an individual carrying on retail business with turnover of ₹ 2.5 crores in the P.Y.2018-19	Contract Payment for repair of residential house	₹ 5 lakhs	No, TDS u/s 194C is not attracted since the payment is for personal purpose and TDS u/s 194M is not attracted as aggregate of contract payment to the payee in the P.Y.2019-20 does not exceed ₹ 50 lakh.
		Payment of commission to Mr. Vallish for business purposes	₹ 80,000	Yes, u/s 194H, since the payment exceeds ₹ 15,000, and Mr. Ganesh's turnover exceeds ₹ 1 crore in the P.Y.2018-19.
2.	Mr. Rajesh, a wholesale trader who declares profits under section 44AD for P.Y.2018-19 and P.Y.2019-20.	Contract Payment for reconstruction of residential house	₹ 55 lakhs	Yes, u/s 194M, since the aggregate of payments (i.e., ₹ 55 lakhs) exceed ₹ 50 lakhs, and the payments are made after 1.9.2019. Since he declares profits on presumptive basis u/s 44AD, he is not subject to tax audit in the P.Y.2018-19. Hence, TDS provisions u/s 194C are not attracted in respect of payments made in the P.Y.2019-20.
3.	Mr. Satish, a salaried individual	Payment of brokerage for buying a residential house	₹ 51 lakhs	Yes, under section 194M, since the payment of ₹ 51 lakhs made in March 2020 exceeds the threshold of ₹ 50 lakhs. Since Mr. Satish is a salaried individual, the provisions of section 194H are not applicable in this case.
4.	Mr. Dheeraj, a pensioner	Contract payment for reconstruction of residential	₹ 48 lakhs	TDS provisions u/s 194C are not attracted since Mr. Dheeraj is a pensioner and hence, not subject to tax audit. TDS provisions u/s house		194M are also not applicable in this case, since the payment of ₹ 48 lakhs, even though made after 1.9.2019, does not exceed the threshold of ₹ 50 lakhs.

15.3.24 TDS on cash withdrawal [Section 194N]

(1) Applicability and rate of TDS

Section 194N, inserted with effect from 1.9.2019, provides that every person, being

- a banking company to which the Banking Regulation Act, 1949 applies (including any bank or banking institution referred under section 51 of that Act)
- a co-operative society engaged in carrying on the business of banking or
- a post office

who is responsible for paying, in cash, any sum or aggregate of sums exceeding ₹ 1 crore during the previous year to any person from one or more accounts maintained by such recipient-person with it, shall deduct tax at source @2% of sum exceeding ₹ 1 crore.

(2) Time of deduction

This deduction is to be made at the time of payment of such sum.

(3) Non-applicability of TDS under section 194N

Liability to deduct tax at source under section 194N shall not be applicable to any payment made to –

- the Government
- any banking company or co-operative society engaged in carrying on the business of banking or a post-office
- any business correspondent of a banking company or co-operative society engaged in carrying on the business of banking, in accordance with the RBI guidelines
- any white label ATM operator of a banking company or co-operative society engaged in carrying on the business of banking, in accordance with the authorisation issued by the RBI under the Payment and Settlement Systems Act, 2007
- such other person or class of persons notified by the Central Government in consultation with the RBI.

Accordingly, the Central Government has, in consultation with the RBI, notified the following class of persons, payment to whom would not attract liability to deduct tax at source u/s 194N –

(i) Cash Replenishment Agencies (CRAs) and franchise agents of White Label Automated Teller Machine Operators (WLATMO's) – For availing exemption from applicability of TDS u/s 194N, CRAs and franchise agents of WLATMOs should maintain a separate bank account from which withdrawal is made only for the purposes of replenishing cash in the Automated Teller Machines (ATMs) operated by such WLATMOs. Further, the WLATMO should furnish a certificate every month to the bank certifying that the bank account of the CRAs and the franchise agents of the WLATMOs have been examined and the amounts being withdrawn from their bank accounts has been reconciled with the amount of cash deposited in the ATM's of the WLATMO's.

(ii) Commission agent or trader, operating under Agriculture Produce Market Committee (APMC), and registered under any law relating to Agriculture Produce Market of the concerned State - For availing exemption from the applicability of TDS u/s 194N, the commission agent/trader should intimate to the banking company or co-operative society or post office, his account number through which he wishes to withdraw cash in excess of ₹ 1 crore in the previous year along with his Permanent Account Number (PAN) and the details of the previous year. Also, he should certify to the banking company or co-operative society or post office that the withdrawal of cash from the account in excess of ₹ 1 crore during the previous year is for the purpose of making payments to the farmers on account of purchase of agriculture produce. Further, the banking company or co-operative society or post office has to ensure that the PAN quoted is correct and the commission agent or trader is registered with the APMC, and for this purpose, collect necessary evidences and place the same on record.

(4) Person to whom credit is to be given for tax deducted and paid: Rule 37BA provides the manner of giving credit for tax deducted and remitted to the Central Government i.e., it specifies the person to whom credit for tax deducted is to be given and also the assessment year for which the credit may be given. Accordingly, sub-rule (3A) has been inserted in Rule 37BA, to provide that, for the purposes of section 194N, credit for tax deducted at source shall be given to the person from whose account tax is deducted and paid to the Central Government account for the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which such tax deduction is made.

15.3.25 Other sums (payable to non-residents) [Section 195]

(1) Applicability

Any person responsible for paying interest (other than interest referred to in section 194LB or section 194LC or section 194LD*)* or any other sum chargeable to tax (other than salaries) to a non-corporate non-resident or to a foreign company is liable to deduct tax at source at the rates prescribed by the relevant Finance Act. Such persons are also required to furnish the information relating to payment of any sum in such form and manner as may be prescribed by the CBDT.

Payee to be a non-resident - In order to subject an item of income to deduction of tax under this section the payee must be a non-corporate non-resident or a foreign company.

Payer may be a resident or non-resident - Under section 195(1), the obligation to deduct tax at source from interest and other payments to a non-resident, which are chargeable to tax in India, is on "any person responsible for paying to a non-resident or to a foreign company". The words "any person" used in section 195(1) is intended to include both residents and non-residents. Therefore, a non-resident person is also required to deduct tax at source before making payment to another non-resident, if the payment represents income of the payee non-resident, chargeable to tax in India. Therefore, if the income of the payee non-resident is chargeable to tax, then tax has to be deducted at source, whether the payment is made by a resident or a non-resident.

Explanation 2 clarifies that the obligation to comply with section 195(1) and to make deduction thereunder applies and shall be deemed to have always applied and extends and shall be deemed to have always extended to all persons, resident or non-resident, whether or not the non-resident has:-

(a) a residence or place of business or business connection in India; or

(b) any other presence in any manner whatsoever in India.

(2) Time of deduction

The tax is to be deducted at source at the time of credit of such income to the account of the payee or at the time of payment thereof in cash or by the issue of a cheque or draft or by any other mode, whichever is earlier.

Where any interest or other sum as aforesaid is credited to any account, whether called "Interest payable account" or "Suspense account" or by any other name, in the books of account of the person liable to pay such income, such crediting shall be deemed to be credit of such income to the account of the payee.

However, in the case of interest payable by the Government or a public sector bank within the meaning of section 10(23D) or a public financial institution within the meaning of section 10(23D), deduction of tax shall be made only at the time of payment thereof in cash or by the issue of a cheque or draft or by any other mode.

(3) Payments subject to tax deduction

The statutory obligation imposed under this section would apply for the purpose of deduction of tax at source from any sum being income assessable to tax (other than salary income) in the hands of the non-resident/foreign company. However, no deduction shall be made in respect of any dividends declared/distributed/paid by a domestic company, which is exempt in the hands of the shareholders under section 10(34).

Payment to a non-resident by way of royalties and payments for technical services rendered in India are common examples of sums chargeable under the provisions of the Act to which the liability for deduction of tax at source would apply.

(4) Certificate of non-deduction of tax at source

(i) Any person entitled to receive any interest or other sum on which income-tax has to be deducted under section 195(1) may make an application in the prescribed form to the Assessing Officer for grant of certificate authorizing him to receive such interest or other sum without deduction of tax thereunder.

(ii) Where any such certificate is granted, every person responsible for paying such interest or other sum to the person to whom certificate is granted make payment of such interest or other sum without deduction of tax at source under section 195(1), so long as the certificate in force.

(iii) Such certificate shall remain in force till the expiry of the period specified therein. However, if it is cancelled by the Assessing Officer before the expiry of such period, the certificate shall remain in force till such cancellation.

(iv) The CBDT is empowered to make rules specifying the cases in which, and the circumstances under which, an application may be made for the grant of certificate. While doing so, it should take into account the convenience of the assessees and the interests of the revenue.

(v) Such Rules would provide for the conditions subject to which such certificate may be granted and any other matter connected therewith.

(5) Person responsible for paying any sum to non-resident to furnish prescribed information

Section 195(6) provides that the person responsible for paying any sum, whether or not chargeable to tax under the provisions of the Act, to a non-corporate non-resident or to a foreign company, shall be required to furnish the information relating to payment of such sum in the prescribed form and prescribed manner.

(6) Specified class or classes of persons, making payment to the non-resident, to mandatorily make application to Assessing Officer to determine the appropriate proportion of sum chargeable to tax

(i) Under section 195(1), any person responsible for paying to a non-corporate non-resident or to a foreign company, any interest or any other sum chargeable under the provisions of the Act (other than salary), has to deduct tax at source at the rates in force.

(ii) Under section 195(2), where the person responsible for paying any such sum chargeable to tax under the Act (other than salary) to a non-resident, considers that the whole of such sum would not be income chargeable in the hands of the recipient, he may make an application in such form and manner to the Assessing Officer, to determine in such manner, as may be prescribed, the appropriate proportion of such sum so chargeable. When the Assessing Officer so determines, the appropriate proportion, tax shall be deducted under section 195(1) only on that proportion of the sum which is so chargeable.

(iii) Consequent to the retrospective amendments in section 2(47), section 2(14) and section 9(1) by the Finance Act, 2012, sub-section (7) in section 195 provides that, notwithstanding anything contained in sections 195(1) and 195(2), the CBDT may, by notification in the Official Gazette, specify a class of persons or cases, where the person responsible for paying to a non-corporate non-resident or to a foreign company, any sum, whether or not chargeable under the provisions of this Act, shall make an application in such form and manner to the Assessing Officer, to determine in such manner, as may be prescribed, the appropriate proportion of sum chargeable to tax. Where the Assessing Officer determines the appropriate proportion of the sum chargeable, tax shall be deducted under sub-section (1) on that proportion of the sum which is so chargeable.

(iv) Consequently, where the CBDT specifies a class of persons or cases, the person responsible for making payment to a non-corporate non-resident or a foreign company in such cases has to mandatorily make an application to the Assessing Officer, whether or not such payment is chargeable under the provisions of the Act.

(7) Procedure for refund of TDS under section 195 to the person deducting tax in cases where tax is deducted at a higher rate prescribed in the DTAA

(i) The CBDT has, through Circular No.7/2011 dated 27.9.2011, modified Circular No.07/2007, dated 23.10.2007 which laid down the procedure for refund of tax deducted at source under section 195 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 to the person deducting tax at source from the payment to a non-resident. The said Circular allowed refund to the person making payment under section 195 in the circumstances indicated therein as the income does not accrue to the non-resident or if the income is accruing, no tax is due or tax is due at a lesser rate. The amount paid to the Government in such cases to that extent does not constitute tax.

(ii) The said Circular, however, did not cover a situation where tax is deducted at a rate prescribed in the relevant DTAA which is higher than the rate prescribed in the Income-tax Act, 1961. Since the law requires deduction of tax at a rate prescribed in the relevant DTAA or under the Income-tax Act, 1961, whichever is lower, there is a possibility that in such cases excess tax is deducted relying on the provisions of relevant DTAA.

(iii) Accordingly, in order to remove the genuine hardship faced by the resident deductor, the CBDT has modified Circular No. 07/2007, dated 23-10-2007 to the effect that the beneficial provisions under the said Circular allowing refund of tax deducted at source under section 195 to the person deducting tax at source shall also apply to those cases where deduction of tax at a higher rate under the relevant DTAA has been made while a lower rate is prescribed under the domestic law.

15.3.26 Non-applicability of TDS provisions on payments made to Corporations whose income is exempt under section 10(26BBB) [Circular No.7/2015, dated 23-04-2015]

The CBDT had earlier issued Circular No.4/2002 dated 16.07.2002 which laid down that there would be no requirement for tax deduction at source in respect of payments made to such entities, whose income is unconditionally exempt under section 10 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 and who are statutorily not required to file return of income as per the section 139. The said Circular also lists the entities which are unconditionally exempt under section 10 and who are statutorily not required to file return of income as per section 139.

Subsequently, section 10(26BBB) was inserted in the Income-tax Act, 1961 vide Finance Act, 2003 w.e.f. 1.4.2004 to provide that any income of a corporation established by a Central, State or Provincial Act for the welfare and economic upliftment of ex-service-men being the citizens of India does not form part of the total income. The corporations covered under section 10(26BBB) are also statutorily not required to file return of income as per the section 139.

The corporations covered under section 10(26BBB) satisfy the two conditions of Circular No. 4/2002 i.e., such corporations are statutorily not required to file return of income as per section 139 and their income is also unconditionally exempt under section 10 of the Income-tax Act, 1961. Accordingly, the CBDT has examined the matter and extended the benefit of the said Circular to such corporations whose income is exempt under section 10(26BBB). Hence, there would be no requirement for tax deduction at source from the payments made to such corporations, since their income is anyway exempt under the Income-tax Act, 1961.

(1) Where, under an agreement or other arrangement, the tax chargeable on any income referred to in the foregoing provisions of this Chapter is to be borne by the person by whom the income is payable, then, for the purposes of deduction of tax under those provisions such income shall be increased to such amount as would, after deduction of tax thereon, be equal to the net amount payable under such agreement or arrangement.

(2) However, no grossing up is required in the case of tax paid [under section 192(1A)] by an employer on the non-monetary perquisites provided to the employee.

ILLUSTRATION 19

'X' while making payment "net of tax" to a non-resident for providing technical services on a world bank aided project had deducted tax out of such payments as per rates prescribed but says that the payee is not entitled for the TDS certificate. Examine.

SOLUTION

As per section 198, any sum deducted in accordance with the provisions of Chapter XVII-B of the Income-tax Act, 1961 is deemed to be income received while computing the income of the payee.

As per section 203, every person deducting tax at source shall furnish to the payee a certificate in the prescribed form within the prescribed time.

Even in a case where ‘X undertakes to pay the tax on the grossed up amount, the non-resident shall be entitled for issue of certificate for tax deducted at source in respect of payment made ‘net of tax’ in terms of section 195A. This has been clarified vide CBDT Circular No.785 dated 24.11.1999.

Therefore, X has a legal obligation to issue TDS certificate to the non-resident, even if he has made payment of income “net of tax” to him.

15.3.28 Interest or dividend or other sums payable to Government, Reserve Bank or certain corporations [Section 196]

(1) No deduction of tax shall be made by any person from any sums payable to -

(i) the Government; or

(ii) the Reserve Bank of India; or

(iii) a corporation established by or under a Central Act, which is, under any law for the time being in force, exempt from income-tax on its income; or

(iv) a Mutual Fund specified under section 10(23D).

(2) This provision for non-deduction is when such sum is payable to the above entities by way of -

(i) interest or dividend in respect of securities or shares -

(a) owned by the above entities; or

(b) in which they have full beneficial interest or

(ii) any income accruing or arising to them.

15.4 CERTIFICATE FOR DEDUCTION OF TAX AT A LOWER RATE [SECTION 197]

(1) This section applies where, in the case of any income of any person or sum payable to any person, income-tax is required to be deducted at the time of credit or payment, as the case may be at the rates in force as per the provisions of sections 192, 193, 194, 194A, 194C, 194D, 194G, 194H, 194-I, 194J 194K, 194LA, 194LBB, 194LBC, 194M and 195.

(2) In such cases, the assessee can make an application to the Assessing Officer for deduction of tax at a lower rate or for non-deduction of tax.

(3) If the Assessing Officer is satisfied that the total income of the recipient justifies the deduction of income-tax at lower rates or no deduction of income-tax, as the case may be, he may give to the assessee such certificate, as may be appropriate.

(4) Where the Assessing Officer issues such a certificate, then the person responsible for paying the income shall deduct income-tax at such lower rates specified in the certificate or deduct no tax, as the case may be, until such certificate is cancelled by the Assessing Officer.

(5) Enabling powers have been conferred upon the CBDT to make rules for prescribing the procedure in this regard.

15.5 NO DEDUCTION IN CERTAIN CASES [SECTION 197A]

The restriction contained in sub-section (1B) will not apply to resident senior citizens.

Further, declaration in Form 15H can also be made in a case where income of the assessee, who is eligible for rebate of income-tax under section 87A, is higher than the basic exemption limit (after allowing for deduction(s) under Chapter VI-A, if any, or set off of loss, if any, under the head "Income from house property" for which, the declarant is eligible) but his tax liability would be nil after taking into account the rebate available to him under section 87A.

(5) Non-deduction of tax in certain cases

(i) Interest payments by an Offshore Banking Unit to a non-resident/not ordinarily resident in India [Sub-section (1D)]

No deduction of tax shall be made by an Offshore Banking Unit from the interest paid on -

Rule 31A(2) prescribed differential due dates for Government deductors and other deductors. 15.6.4 Correction of arithmetic mistakes and adjustment of incorrect claim during computerized processing of TDS statements [Section 200A]

(1) At present, all statements of tax deducted at source are filed in an electronic mode, thereby facilitating computerised processing of these statements. Therefore, in order to process TDS statements on computer, electronic processing on the same lines as processing of income-tax returns has been provided in section 200A.

(2) The following adjustments can be made during the computerized processing of statement of tax deducted at source or a correction statement –

(i) any arithmetical error in the statement; or

(ii) an incorrect claim, if such incorrect claim is apparent from any information in the statement.

(3) The term "an incorrect claim apparent from any information in the statement" shall mean such claim on the basis of an entry, in the statement, –

(i) of an item, which is inconsistent with another entry of the same or some other item in such statement;

(ii) in respect of rate of deduction of tax at source, where such rate is not in accordance with the provisions of the Act.

(4) The interest, if any, has to be computed on the basis of the sums deductible as computed in the statement;

(5) The fee, if any, has to be computed in accordance with the provision of section 234E. A fee of ₹ 200 for every day would be levied under section 234E for late furnishing of TDS statement from the due date of furnishing of TDS statement to the date of furnishing of TDS/ statement. However, the total amount of fee shall not exceed the total amount of tax deductible/collectible and such fee has to be paid before delivering the TDS statement.

(6) The sum payable by, or the amount of refund due to, the deductor has to be determined after adjustment of interest and fee against the amount paid under section 200 or section 201 or section 234E and any amount paid otherwise by way of tax or interest or fee.

(7) An intimation will be prepared and generated and sent to the deductor, specifying his tax liability or the refund due, within one year from the end of the financial year in which the statement is filed. The refund due shall be granted to the deductor.

For this purpose, the CBDT is empowered to make a scheme for centralized processing of statements of TDS to determine the tax payable by, or refund due to, the deductor.

15.6.5 Consequences of failure to deduct or pay [Section 201]

(1) Deemed assessee-in-default

The following persons shall be deemed to be an assessee in default if they do not deduct the whole or any part of the tax or after deducting fails to pay the tax -

(i) any person including the principal officer of a company, who is required to deduct any sum in accordance with the provisions of the Act; and

(ii) an employer paying tax on non-monetary perquisites under section 192(1A).

(2) Non-applicability of deeming provision

Any person (including the principal officer of the company) who fails to deduct the whole or any part of the tax on the amount credited or payment made to a payee shall not be deemed to be an assessee-in-default in respect of such tax if such payee –

(i) has furnished his return of income under section 139;

(ii) has taken into account such sum for computing income in such return of income; and

(iii) has paid the tax due on the income declared by him in such return of income, and the payer furnishes a certificate to this effect from an accountant in such form as may be prescribed.

(3) No penalty under section 221

No penalty shall be charged under section 221 from such person unless the Assessing Officer is satisfied that such person has failed to deduct and pay the tax without good and sufficient reasons.

(4) Interest Liability

(i) A person deemed to be an assessee-in-default under section 201(1), for failure to deduct tax or to pay the tax after deduction, is liable to pay simple interest @1% for every month or part of month on the amount of such tax from the date on which tax was deductible to the date on which such tax was actually deducted and simple interest @1½% for every month or part of month from the date on which tax was deducted to the date on which such tax is actually paid [Section 201(1A)].

ILLUSTRATION 20

An amount of ₹ 40,000 was paid to Mr. X on 1.7.2019 towards fees for professional services without deduction of tax at source. Subsequently, another payment of ₹ 50,000 was due to Mr. X on 28.2.2020, from which tax @10% (amounting to ₹ 9,000) on the entire amount of ₹ 90,000 was deducted. However, this tax of ₹ 9,000 was deposited only on 22.6.2020. Compute the interest chargeable under section 201(1A).

SOLUTION

Interest under section 201(1A) would be computed as follows –

Particulars	₹
1% on tax deductible but not deducted i.e., 1% on ₹ 4,000 for 8 months	320
1½% on tax deducted but not deposited i.e. 1½% on ₹ 9,000 for 4 months[4]	540

(ii) Such interest should be paid before furnishing the statements in accordance with section 200(3).

(iii) Where the payer fails to deduct the whole or any part of the tax on the amount credited or payment made to a payee and is not deemed to be an assessee-in-default under section 201(1) on account of payment of taxes by such payee, interest under section 201(1A)(i) i.e., @1% p.m. or part of month, shall be payable by the payer from the date on which such tax was deductible to the date of furnishing of return of income by such payee. The date of deduction and payment of taxes by the payer shall be deemed to be the date on which return of income has been furnished by the payee.

(iv) Where the tax has not been paid after it is deducted, the amount of the tax together with the amount of simple interest thereon shall be a charge upon all the assets of the person or the company, as the case may be.

Guidelines for waiver of interest charged under section 201(1A) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 – [Circular No. 11/2017, dated 24.03.2017]

In exercise of the powers conferred under section 119(2)(a), the CBDT has directed that the Chief Commissioner of Income-tax and Director General of Income-tax may reduce or waive interest charged under section 201(1A)(i) in the classes of cases specified below for the period and to the extent the Chief Commissioner of Income-tax/Director General of Income-tax may deem fit. However, no reduction or waiver of such interest shall be ordered unless the principal demand under sections 200A, 201(1) or 234E, as the case may be, stands fully paid or satisfactory arrangements for payment of the principal demand under these sections have been made. The Chief Commissioner of Income-tax or Director General of Income-tax may also impose any other condition as deemed fit for the said reduction or waiver of interest.

The class of cases in which the reduction or waiver of interest under section 201(1A)(i) can be considered, are as follows:

(i) Where during the course of proceedings for search and seizure under section 132, or otherwise, the books of account and other documents necessary for making deduction under Chapter XVIIB of the Act were seized and the assessee was not able to, within the time specified, deduct tax at source from any sum credited to any account (whether called "suspense account" or by any other name) in his books of account.

(ii) Where any sum paid or payable was not liable for deduction of tax at source in the case of a deductor on the basis of any order passed by the jurisdictional High Court, and as a result, he did not deduct tax at source in relation to such sum, and subsequently, in consequence of any retrospective amendment of law or a decision of the Supreme Court of India or a decision of a Larger Bench of the jurisdictional High Court (which was not challenged before the Supreme Court and has become final) in any proceedings, as the case may be, tax was held to be deductible or the tax deducted by the deductor during such financial year was found to be less than the tax deductible on such sums paid or payable.

(iii) Where the default under section 201 relates to non-deduction or a lower deduction of tax under section 195 in respect of a payment made to a non-resident (including a foreign company) being a resident of a country or specified territory outside India with whom India has entered into an agreement referred to in section 90 or 90A of the Act, and where —

(a) a dispute regarding the tax payable in India in respect of the said payment had been referred to the Competent Authority in India mentioned in Rule 44H of the Income-tax Rules, 1962 under the said agreement under section 90 or 90A of the Act;

(b) such reference had been received by the Competent Authority in India within a period of two years of the date on which the notice of demand determining the tax payable was received by the person in default under section 201;

(c) the dispute has been settled by way of a resolution arrived at under the Mutual Agreement Procedure (MAP) provided in the said agreement; and

(d) the person in default under section 201 has given his acceptance to the resolution and has withdrawn his appeal(s) pending on the issue, within the meaning of Rule 44H(4) of the Income-tax Rules, within a period of one month of the date on which the resolution is communicated to him.

Even if the interest under section 201(1A)(i) has already been paid by the deductor, the same can be considered for waiver, subject to the conditions above and a refund may be given to the deductor, if waiver is ordered.

The Chief Commissioner of Income-tax or Director General of Income-tax examining an application for waiver of interest under this order shall pass a speaking order after providing adequate opportunity of being heard to the applicant.

The CBDT reserves the power to examine any grievance arising out of an order passed or not passed by Chief Commissioner of Income-tax or Director General of Income-tax, as the case may be, and issue suitable directions to these authorities for proper implementation of this order. However, no review of or appeal against the orders passed on merits by such authorities would be entertained by the CBDT.

(5) Time limit for deeming a person to be an assessee-in-default for failure to deduct tax at source

No order under section 201(1), deeming a person to be an assessee-in-default for failure to deduct the whole or any part of the tax from a person resident in India, shall be passed at any time after the expiry of

- seven years from the end of the financial year in which the payment is made or credit is given; or
- two years from the end of the financial year in which the correction statement is delivered under the proviso to section 200(3)

whichever is later

Further, the exclusions from the time limit, as specified in Explanation 1 to section 153, would also apply to the above time limit for passing an order deeming a person to be an assessee-in-default. Also, the time limit would not apply to an order passed consequent to the direction contained in an order of the Commissioner under sections 263 and 264, Commissioner (Appeals) under section 250, Appellate Tribunal under section 254, Supreme Court/National Tax Tribunal under section 260 and Supreme Court under section 262. Thus, the time limit would be extended where effect is to be given to various appellate proceedings or where proceedings are stayed.

(6) Non-specification of time limit where tax has been deducted but not paid

Section 201(1) deems a person to be an assessee-in-default if he –

(i) does not deduct tax; or

(ii) does not pay; or

(iii) after so deducting fails to pay the whole or any part of the tax, as required by or under this Act.

Thus, section 201(1) contemplates three types of defaults. The default contemplated in (ii) is covered by the default contemplated in (iii). However, the time limit has been specified only for passing of orders relating to default contemplated in (i) above. There is no time limit specified in respect of the other defaults.

Therefore, no time-limits have been prescribed for the order under section 201(1) where –

(i) the deductor has deducted but not deposited the tax deducted at source, as this would be a case of defalcation of government dues,

(ii) the employer has failed to pay the tax wholly or partly, under sub-section (1A) of section 192, as the employee would not have paid tax on such perquisites,

(iii) the deductee is a non-resident as it may not be administratively possible to recover the tax from the non-resident.

15.6.6 Deduction only one mode of recovery [Section 202]

(1) Recovery of tax through deduction at source is only one method of recovery.

(2) The Assessing Officer can use any other prescribed methods of recovery in addition to tax deducted at source.

15.6.7 Certificate for tax deducted [Section 203]

(1) Every person deducting tax at source shall issue a certificate to the effect that tax has been deducted and specify the amount so deducted, the rate at which tax has been deducted and such other particulars as may be prescribed.

(2) Every person, being an employer, referred to in section 192(1A) shall, within such period, as may be prescribed, furnish to the person in respect of whose income such payment of tax has been made, a certificate to the effect that tax has been paid to the Central Government, and specify the amount so paid, the rate at which the tax has been paid and such other particulars as may be prescribed.

(3) Certificate of TDS to be furnished under section 203 [Rule 31]

The certificate of deduction of tax at source to be furnished under section 203 shall be in Form No.16 in respect of tax deducted or paid under section 192 and in any other case, Form No.16A.

Form No.16 shall be issued to the employee annually by 15th June of the financial year immediately following the financial year in which the income was paid and tax deducted. Form No.16A shall be issued quarterly within 15 days from the due date for furnishing the statement of TDS under Rule 31A.

15.6.8 Common number for TDS and TCS [Section 203A]

(1) Persons responsible for deducting tax or collecting tax at source should apply to the Assessing Officer for the allotment of a “tax-deduction and collection-account number”.

(2) Section 203A(2) enlists the documents/certificates/returns/challans in which the “tax deduction account number” or “tax collection account number” or “tax deduction and collection account number” has to be compulsorily quoted. They are -

(i) challans for payment of any sum in accordance with the provisions of section 200 or section 206C(3);

(ii) certificates furnished under section 203 or section 206C(5);

(iii) statements prepared and delivered or caused to be delivered in accordance with the provisions of section 200(3) or section 206C(3);

(iv) returns delivered in accordance with the provisions of section 206 or section 206C(5A)/(5B); and

(v) in all other documents pertaining to such transactions as may be prescribed in the interests of revenue.

(3) The requirement of obtaining and quoting of TAN under section 203A shall not apply to such person, as may be notified by the Central Government in this behalf.

15.6.9 Furnishing of statement of tax deducted [Section 203AA]

(1) This section provides for furnishing of a statement of the tax deducted on or after 1st April, 2008 by the prescribed income-tax authority or the person authorised by such authority referred to in section 200(3)

(2) Such statement should be prepared and delivered to every person -

(a) from whose income, tax has been deducted or

(b) in respect of whose income, tax has been paid.

(3) Such statement should be in the prescribed form specifying the amount of tax deducted or paid and other prescribed particulars.

(4) Accordingly, the DGIT (Systems) has to deliver statement of TDS in Form 26AS by 31st July the following year.

15.6.10 Person responsible for paying taxes deducted at source [Section 204]

For purposes of deduction of tax at source the expression "person responsible for paying" means:

(i) the drawing and disbursing officer; or (ii) any other person, by whatever name called, responsible for crediting, or as the case may be, paying such sum.

15.6.11 Bar against direct demand on assessee [Section 205]

Where tax is deductible at source under any of the aforesaid sections, the assessee shall not be called upon to pay the tax himself to the extent to which tax has been deducted from that income.

15.6.12 Furnishing of statements in respect of payment of any income to residents without deduction of tax [Section 206A]

(1) This section casts responsibility on every banking company or co-operative society or public company referred to in the proviso to section 194A(3)(i) [i.e., a public company formed and registered in India with the main object of carrying on the business of providing long-term finance for construction or purchase of residential houses in India and which is eligible for deduction under section 36(1)(viii)] to prepare such statement, for such period as may be prescribed –

— if they are responsible for paying to a resident*,*

— the payment should be of any income not exceeding ₹ 40,000*, where the payer is a banking company or a co-operative society, and* ₹ 5,000 in any other case.

— such income should be by way of interest (other than interest on securities)

(2) The statements have to be delivered or caused to be delivered to the prescribed income-tax authority or the person authorised by such authority.

(3) The statements have to be in the prescribed form, containing such particulars verified in the prescribed manner. The statement has to be filed within the prescribed time.

(5) Such persons may be required to prepare statement for such period as may be prescribed in the prescribed form and deliver or cause to be delivered such statement within the prescribed time to the prescribed income-tax authority or the person authorized by such authority.

(6) Such statements should be in the prescribed form, containing such particulars and verified in the prescribed manner.

(7) Such person referred to in (1) and (4) above may also deliver to the prescribed authority, a correction statement -

   (a) for rectification of any mistake; or

   (b) to add, delete or update the information furnished in the statement delivered referred in (2) & (5) above.

Note – The above section has been substituted with effect from 1st September, 2019 to enable online filing of such statements (where tax has not been deducted on payment of interest to residents) in the prescribed form and manner. Prior to this date, the section provided for filing of such statements on a floppy, diskette, magnetic tape, CD-ROM or any other computer readable media. The new section also provides for correction of such statements to rectify a mistake or to add, delete or update the information furnished. Consequential amendment arising out of increased in threshold limit for TDS on payment of interest by a banking company or co-operative society to ₹40,000 has also been made.

15.6.13 Mandatory requirement of furnishing PAN in all TDS statements, bills, vouchers and correspondence between deductor and deductee [Section 206AA]

(1) The non-quoting of PAN by deductees in many cases led to delay in issue of refund on account of problems in the processing of returns of income and in granting credit for tax deducted at source.

(2) With a view to strengthening the PAN mechanism, section 206AA provides that any person whose receipts are subject to deduction of tax at source i.e. the deductee, shall mandatorily furnish his PAN to the deductor failing which the deductor shall deduct tax at source at higher of the following rates –

   (i) the rate prescribed in the Act;

   (ii) at the rate in force i.e., the rate mentioned in the Finance Act; or

(iii) at the rate of 20%.

For instance, in case of rental payment for plant and machinery, where the payee does not furnish his PAN to the payer, tax would be deductible @20% instead of @2% prescribed under section 194-I. However, non-furnishing of PAN by the deductee in case of income by way of winnings from lotteries, card games etc., would result in tax being deducted at the existing rate of 30% under section 194B. Therefore, wherever tax is deductible at a rate higher than 20%, this provision would not have any impact.

(3) Tax would be deductible at the rates mentioned above also in cases where the taxpayer files a declaration in Form 15G or 15H (under section 197A) but does not provide his PAN.

(4) Further, no certificate under section 197 will be granted by the Assessing Officer unless the application contains the PAN of the applicant.

(5) Both the deductor and the deductee have to compulsorily quote the PAN of the deductee in all correspondence, bills, vouchers and other documents exchanged between them.

(6) If the PAN provided to the deductor is invalid or it does not belong to the deductee, it shall be deemed that the deductee has not furnished his PAN to the deductor. Accordingly, tax would be deductible at the rate specified in (ii) above.

(7) The provisions of section 206AA shall not apply in respect of payment of interest on long-term bonds, as referred to in section 194LC, to a non-corporate non-resident or to a foreign company.

(8) Non-applicability of section 206AA to non-residents subject to fulfilment of certain conditions:

For the purpose of reducing the compliance burden, section 206AA provides for non-applicability of the requirements contained in section 206AA to a non-corporate non-resident or a foreign company not having PAN in respect of payment in the nature of interest, royalty, fees for technical services and payments on transfer of any capital asset, subject to the deductee furnishing the following details and documents to the deductor, namely:-

a. name, e-mail id, contact number;

b. address in the country or specified territory outside India of which the deductee is a resident;

c. a certificate of his being resident in any country or specified territory outside India from the Government of that country or specified territory if the law of that country or specified territory provides for issuance of such certificate;

d. Tax Identification Number of the deductee in the country or specified territory of his residence and in case no such number is available, then a unique number on the basis of which the deductee is identified by the Government of that country or the specified territory of which he claims to be a resident. [Notification No. 53/2016 dated 24th June, 2016]

15.9 PAN QUOTING MECHANISM IN THE TCS REGIME [SECTION 206CC]

In order to strengthen the PAN mechanism, section 206CC provides the following:

(1) Tax collectible at higher rate if PAN not furnished [Section 206CC(1)] - Any person paying any sum or amount, on which tax is collectible at source (collectee) shall furnish his PAN to the person responsible for collecting such tax (collector), failing which tax shall be collected at the higher of the following rates -

15.10 ADVANCE PAYMENT OF TAX [SECTION 207 TO 219]

15.10.1 Liability for payment of advance tax

(1) Tax shall be payable in advance during any financial year, in accordance with the provisions of sections 208 to 219, in respect of an assessee's current income i.e. the total income of the assessee which would be chargeable to tax for the assessment year immediately following that financial year [Section 207].

(2) Under section 208, obligation to pay advance tax arises in every case where the advance tax payable is ₹ 10,000 or more.

Note - An assessee who is liable to pay advance tax of less than ₹ 10,000 will not be saddled with interest under sections 234B and 234C for defaults in payment of advance tax. However, the consequences under section 234A regarding interest for belated filing of return would be attracted.*

(3) In case of senior citizens who have passive source of income like interest, rent, etc., the requirement of payment of advance tax causes genuine compliance hardship. Therefore, in order to reduce the compliance burden on such senior citizens, exemption from payment of advance tax has now been provided to a resident individual-

(i) not having any income chargeable under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession"; and

(ii) of the age of 60 years or more.

Such senior citizens need not pay advance tax and are allowed to discharge their tax liability (other than TDS) by payment of self-assessment tax.

15.10.2 Computation of advance tax

(1) An assessee has to estimate his current income and pay advance tax thereon. He need not submit any estimate or statement of income to the Assessing Officer, except where he has been served with notice by the Assessing Officer.

(2) Where an obligation to pay advance tax has arisen, the assessee shall himself compute the advance tax payable on his current income at the rates in force in the financial year and deposit the same, whether or not he has been earlier assessed to tax.

(3) In the case of a person who has been already assessed by way of a regular assessment in respect of the total income of any previous year, the Assessing Officer, if he is of the opinion that such person is liable to pay advance tax, can serve an order under section 210(3) requiring the assessee to pay advance tax.

(4) For this purpose, the total income of the latest previous year in respect of which the assessee has been assessed by way of regular assessment or the total income returned by the assessee in any return of income for any subsequent previous year, whichever is higher, shall be taken as the basis for computation of advance tax payable.

(5) The above order can be served by the Assessing Officer at any time during the financial year but not later than the last date of February.

(6) If, after sending the above notice, but before 1st March of the financial year, the assessee furnishes a return relating to any later previous year or an assessment is completed in respect of a later return of income, the Assessing Officer may amend the order for payment of advance tax on the basis of the computation of the income so returned or assessed.

(7) If the assessee feels that his own estimate of advance tax payable would be less than the one sent by the Assessing Officer, he can file estimate of his current income and advance tax payable thereon.

(8) Where the advance tax payable on assessee's estimation is higher than the tax computed by the Assessing Officer, then, the advance tax shall be paid based upon such higher amount.

(9) In all cases, the tax calculated shall be reduced by the amount of tax deductible at source.

No reduction of 'tax deductible but not deducted' while computing advance tax liability

(i) As per the provisions of section 209, the amount of advance tax payable by a person is computed by reducing the amount of income-tax which would be deductible at source during the financial year from any income which has been taken into account in computing the total income.

(ii) Some courts have opined that in case where the payer pays any amount (on which tax is deductible at source) without deduction of tax at source, the payee shall not be liable to pay advance tax to the extent tax is deductible from such amount.

(iii) With a view to make such a person (payee) liable to pay advance tax, the proviso to section 209(1)(d) provides that the amount of tax deductible at source but not so deducted by the payer shall not be reduced from the income tax liability of the payee for determining his liability to pay advance tax.

(iv) In effect, only if tax has actually been deducted at source, the same can be reduced for computing advance tax liability of the payee. Tax deductible but not so deducted cannot be reduced for computing advance tax liability of the payee.

(v) Similarly, only if tax has actually been collected at source, the same can be reduced for computing advance tax liability of the buyer or licensee or lessee. Tax collectible but not so collected cannot be reduced for computing advance tax liability of the buyer or licensee or lessee.

(10) The amount of advance tax payable by an assessee in the financial year calculated by -

(i) the assessee himself based on his estimation of current income; or

(ii) the Assessing Officer as a result of an order under section 210(3) or amended order under section 210(4) is subject to the provisions of section 209(2), as per which the net agricultural income has to be considered for the purpose of computing advance tax.

15.10.3 Installments of advance tax and due dates

(1) Common advance tax payment schedule for both corporates and non-corporates [other than an assessee who declares profits and gains in accordance with section 44AD(1) or section 44ADA(1)]:

Note - Any amount paid by way of advance tax on or before 31st March shall also be treated as advance tax paid during each financial year on or before 15th March.

(2) Eligible assessee computing profits on presumptive basis under section 44AD(1) or section 44ADA(1) to pay advance tax by 15th March

An eligible assessee, opting for computation of profits or gains of business on presumptive basis in respect of eligible business referred to in section 44AD(1) or for computation of profits or gains of profession on presumptive basis in respect of eligible profession referred to in section 44ADA(1), shall be required to pay advance tax of the whole amount in one instalment on or before the 15th March of the financial year.

However, any amount paid by way of advance tax on or before 31st March shall also be treated as advance tax paid during each financial year on or before 15th March.

(3) If the last day for payment of any installment of advance tax is a day on which the receiving bank is closed, the assessee can make the payment on the next immediately following working day, and in such cases, the mandatory interest leviable under sections 234B and 234C would not be charged.

(4) Where advance tax is payable by virtue of the notice of demand issued under section 156 by the Assessing Officer, the whole or the appropriate part of the advance tax specified in such notice shall be payable on or before each of such due dates as fall after the date of service of notice of demand.

(5) Where the assessee does not pay any installment by the due date, he shall be deemed to be an assessee in default in respect of such installment.

(a) where the return is furnished after the due date, ending on that date of furnishing the return; and

(b) where no return has been furnished, ending on the date of completion of assessment under section 144.

(ii) Where in relation to an assessment year an assessment is made for the first time under section 147 or section 153A, the assessment so made shall be regarded as regular assessment for the purposes of this section.

(3) Computation of interest where return is furnished after the time period specified in notice under section 148 or 153A - Where the return of income for any assessment year, required by a notice under section 148 issued after the determination of income under section 143(1) or after completion of assessment under section 143(3) or section 144 or section 147, is furnished after the expiry of the time allowed under such notice, or is not furnished, the assessee shall be liable to pay simple interest at the rate of 1% for every month or part of a month comprised in the period commencing on the date immediately following the expiry of the time allowed as aforesaid and ending on the following dates specified in column (3) below:

(6) Interest under section 234A not chargeable on self assessment tax paid before the due date of filing of return of income [Circular No. 2/2015, dated 10-2-2015]

The Hon'ble Supreme Court has, in the case of CIT vs Prannoy Roy (2009) 309 ITR 231, held that interest under section 234A on default of furnishing return of income shall be payable only on the amount of tax that has not been deposited before the due date of filing of the Income-tax return for the relevant assessment year.

Accordingly, the CBDT has clarified that no interest under section 234A shall be charged on self assessment tax paid by the assessee on or before the due date of filing of return.

15.11.2 Interest for defaults in payment of advance tax [Section 234B]

(1) Rate and period of interest : Interest under section 234B would be attracted where an assessee, who is liable to pay advance tax, fails to pay such tax or the advance tax paid is less than 90% of assessed tax. Accordingly, interest would be leviable at the rate of 1% for every month or for part of month for the following period, if the advance tax paid falls short of 90% of the 'assessed tax'.

(ii) Tax on the total income determined under section 143(1) shall not include the additional income-tax, if any, payable.

(3) Interest paid on Self-assessment: Where before the date of determination of total income under section 143(1) or completion of regular assessment, tax is paid by the assessee under section 140A, interest shall be calculated up to the date on which the tax is so paid and reduced by the interest paid under section 140A towards interest under section 234B.

Thereafter, interest shall be calculated on the amount by which the tax paid under section 140A together with the advance tax paid falls short of the assessed tax.

(4) Where an application under section 245C(1) for any assessment year has been made: In such a case, the assessee shall be liable to pay simple interest at the rate of 1% for every month or part of a month comprised in the following period:

(5) Where total income is increased on reassessment under section 147 or section 153A: As per section 234B(3), where the total income is increased on reassessment under section 147 or section 153A, the assessee shall be liable for interest@1% for every month or part of a month on the amount of the increase in tax on total income as a consequence of reassessment or recomputation [Tax on total income determined on the basis of reassessment or recomputation – Tax on total income determined under section 143(1) or on the basis of regular assessment].

15.11.3 Interest for deferment of advance tax [Section 234C]

(1) Manner of computation of interest under section 234C for deferment of advance tax by corporate and non-corporate assessees:

In case an assessee, other than an assessee who declares profits and gains in accordance with the provisions of section 44AD(1) or section 44ADA(1), who is liable to pay advance tax under section 208 has failed to pay such tax or the advance tax paid by such assessee on its current income on or before the dates specified in column (1) is less than the specified percentage [given in column (2)] of tax due on returned income, then simple interest@1% per month for the period specified in column (4) on the amount of shortfall, as per column (3) is leviable under section 234C.

Specified date	Specified%	Shortfall in advance tax	Period
(1)	(2)	(3)	(4)
15th June	15%	15% of tax due on returned income (-) advance tax paid up to 15th June	3 months
15th September	45%	45% of tax due on returned income (-) advance tax paid up to 15th September	3 months

Note – However, if the advance tax paid by the assessee on the current income, on or before 15th June or 15th September, is not less than 12% or, as the case may be, 36% of the tax due on the returned income, then, the assessee shall not be liable to pay any interest on the amount of the shortfall on those dates.*

(2) Computation of interest under section 234C in case of an assessee who declares profits and gains in accordance with the provisions of section 44AD(1) or section 44ADA(1):

In case an assessee who declares profits and gains in accordance with the section 44AD(1) or section 44ADA(1), as the case may be, who is liable to pay advance tax under section 208 has failed to pay such tax or the advance tax paid by the assessee on its current income on or before 15th March is less than the tax due on the returned income, then, the assessee shall be liable to pay simple interest at the rate of 1% on the amount of the shortfall from the tax due on the returned income.

(3) Non-applicability of interest under section 234C in certain cases:

Interest under section 234C shall not be leviable in respect of any shortfall in payment of tax due on returned income, where such shortfall is on account of under-estimate or failure to estimate –

(i) the amount of capital gains;

(ii) income of nature referred to in section 2(24)(ix) i.e., winnings from lotteries, crossword puzzles etc.;

(iii) income under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" in cases where the income accrues or arises under the said head for the first time;

(iv) income of the nature referred to in section 115BBDA i.e., dividend in aggregate exceeding of ₹ 10 lakhs received during the previous year.

However, the assessee should have paid the whole of the amount of tax payable in respect of such income referred to in (i), (ii), (iii) or (iv), as the case may be, had such income been a part of the total income, as part of the remaining instalments of advance tax which are due or where no such instalments are due, by 31st March of the financial year.

(4) Tax due on the returned income: means the tax chargeable on the total income declared in the return of income furnished by the assessee for the assessment year immediately following the financial year in which the advance tax is paid or payable, as reduced by the amount of –

(i) any tax deductible or collectible at source on any income which is taken into account for calculating the total income;

(iii) any relief of tax allowed under section 90 or 90A;

(iv) any deduction of tax allowed under section 91;

(v) any tax credit allowed to be set-off in accordance with the provisions of section 115JAA or section 115JD.

15.11.4 Interest on excess refund granted at the time of summary assessment [Section 234D]

(1) Applicability: Under section 143(4), where a regular assessment under section 143(3) or section 144 is made, any tax or interest paid under section 143(1) shall be deemed to have been paid towards such regular assessment and if no refund is due on regular assessment or the amount refunded under section 143(1) exceeds the amount refundable on regular assessment, the whole or the excess amount so refunded is deemed to be tax payable by the assessee. In order to charge interest for the period during which the refund amount has been utilised by the assessee, section 234D levies interest on excess refund granted at the time of summary assessment.

(2) Rate and period of interest: Where any refund is granted to the assessee under section 143(1) and no refund is due on regular assessment or the amount refunded under section 143(1) exceeds the amount refundable on regular assessment, then, the assessee shall be liable to pay simple interest at the rate of ½% on the whole or the excess amount so refunded for every month or part of the month from the date of grant of the refund to the date of such regular assessment.

Note - An assessment made for the first time under section 147 or section 153A shall be regarded as regular assessment for the purpose of this section.

(3) Reduction of interest: The interest chargeable under sub-section (1) shall be reduced, where, as a consequence to the order passed due to rectification, appeal, revisions etc. under sections 154/155/250/254/260/262/263/264 or an order of the Settlement Commission under section 245D(4), the amount of refund granted under section 143(1) is held to be correctly allowed.

15.11.5 Fee for default in furnishing TDS/TCS Statements [Section 234E]

(1) Quantum of fee: A fee of ₹ 200 for every day would be levied under section 234E for late furnishing of TDS/TCS statement from the due date of furnishing of TDS/TCS statement to the date of furnishing of TDS/TCS statement. However, the total amount of fee shall not exceed the total amount of tax deductible/collectible and such fee has to be paid before delivering the TDS/TCS statement.

(2) Penalty: In addition to said fee, a penalty ranging from a minimum of ₹ 10,000 to a maximum of ₹ 1,00,000 shall also be levied under section 271H for not furnishing TDS/TCS statement within the prescribed time or furnishing incorrect information in the said statements in respect of tax deducted or collected at source on or after 01.07.2012. Consequently, with effect from 1.7.2012, penalty shall not be leviable under section 272A in respect of such failure.

(3) Fee and penalty where TDS/TCS statement is furnished after one year : Since late furnishing of TDS/TCS statements would attract levy of fees under section 234E, no penalty under section 271H shall be levied for delay in furnishing of TDS/TCS statement, if the TDS/TCS statement is furnished within one year of the prescribed due date after payment of tax deducted or collected along with applicable interest and fee. However, if the delay is beyond the period of one year, both fee under section 234E and penalty under section 271H would be leviable.

15.11.6 Fee for default in furnishing return of income [Section 234F]

Where a person, who is required to furnish a return of income under section 139, fails to do so within the prescribed time limit under section 139(1), he shall pay, by way of fee, a sum of –

Fee	Circumstances
₹ 5,000	if the return is furnished on or before the 31st December of the assessment year;
₹ 10,000	in any other case
However, if the total income of the person does not exceed ₹ 5 lakhs, the fees payable shall not exceed ₹ 1,000

15.12 COLLECTION AND RECOVERY OF TAX - OTHER METHODS

15.12.1 Payment of tax and defaults by the assessee [Section 220]

(1) Under section 220(1), any amount specified as payable in a notice of demand under section 156 shall be paid within thirty days of the service of notice at the place and to the person mentioned in the notice.

(2) If the amount specified in the notice is not paid within the period, the assessee shall be liable to pay simple interest at 1% for every month or part of a month comprised in the period commencing from the day immediately following the end of the period mentioned in section 220(1) and ending with the day on which the amount is paid. This is provided for in section 220(2).

(3) The first proviso to section 220(2) states that where as a result of an order under sections 154/155/250/254/260/262/264/245D(4), the amount on which interest payable under this section had been reduced, the interest shall be reduced accordingly and the excess interest paid, if any, shall be refunded.

(4) The liability of the assessee to pay interest is based on the theory of continuity of the proceedings and the doctrine of relation back.

(5) Accordingly, section 220(1A) provides that where any notice of demand has been served upon an assessee and any appeal or other proceeding, as the case may be, is filed or initiated in respect of the amount specified in the said notice of demand, then such demand shall be deemed to be valid till the disposal of appeal by the last appellate authority or disposal of proceedings, as the case may be, and any such notice of demand shall have effect as provided in section 3 of the Taxation Laws (Continuation and Validation of Recovery Proceedings) Act, 1964 [See Note below]

(6) Further, the second proviso to section 220(2) provides that if as a result of order under the sections specified in the first proviso to section 220(2), the amount of interest payable was reduced, and thereafter, as a result of another order under any of the sections given in the first proviso or section 263, the interest payable was increased, the assessee would be liable to pay interest under section 220(2) from the day immediately following the end of the period mentioned in the first notice of demand referred to in section 220(1) till the date on which the amount is paid.

Note - Section 3 of the Taxation Laws (Continuation and Validation of Recovery Proceedings) Act, 1964

Continuation and validation of certain proceedings

(1) Where any notice of demand in respect of any Government dues is served upon an assessee by a Taxing Authority under any scheduled Act, and any appeal or other proceeding is filed or taken in respect of such Government dues, then,-

(a) where such Government dues are enhanced in such appeal or proceeding, the Taxing Authority shall serve upon the assessee another notice of demand only in respect of the amount by which such Government dues are enhanced and any proceeding in relation to such Government dues as are covered by the notice or notices of demand served upon him before the disposal of such appeal or proceeding may, without the service of any fresh notice of demand, be continued from the stage at which such proceedings stood immediately before such disposal;

(b) where such Government dues are reduced in such appeal or proceeding,-

(i) it shall not be necessary for the Taxing Authority to serve upon the assessee a fresh notice of demand;

(ii) the Taxing Authority shall give intimation of the fact of such reduction to the assessee. Further, where a certificate has been issued to the Tax Recovery Officer for the recovery of such amount, intimation of the fact of reduction shall also be given to him;

(iii) any proceedings initiated on the basis of the notice or notices of demand served upon the assessee before the disposal of such appeal or proceeding may be continued in relation to the amount so reduced from the stage at which such proceedings stood immediately before such disposal;

(c) no proceedings in relation to such Government dues (including the imposition of penalty or charging of interest) shall be invalid by reason only that no fresh notice of demand was served upon the assessee after the disposal of such appeal or proceeding or that such Government dues have been enhanced or reduced in such appeal or proceeding:

(2) No fresh notice of demand shall be necessary in any case where the amount of Government dues is not varied as a result of any order passed in any appeal or other proceeding under any scheduled Act.

(3) The provisions of this section shall have effect notwithstanding any judgment, decree or order of any court, tribunal or other authority.

ILLUSTRATION 21

The Assessing Officer issued a notice of demand under section 156 to Mr. X on 1.10.2019 for payment of ₹ 15 lakhs towards his income-tax liability for the A.Y.2018-19, requiring him to pay the said amount within 30 days.

(a) Is he required to issue fresh notice of demand and if so, for what amount, in the following two cases (each case has to be considered independently) –

(i) If the tax demand is reduced to ₹ 12 lakhs by the Commissioner (Appeals) by issue of order under section 250;

(ii) If the tax demand is increased to ₹ 20 lakhs by the Appellate Tribunal, by issue of an order under section 254.

(b) How would the interest liability under section 220(2) be calculated if the tax demand is reduced to ₹ 12 lakhs by the Commissioner (Appeals) by issue of order under section 250 and subsequently increased to ₹ 15 lakhs by the Appellate Tribunal by way of issue of order under section 254?

SOLUTION

(a) (i) No fresh notice of demand is required to be served on Mr. X. The Assessing Officer is only required to give an intimation of the fact of reduction of demand to ₹ 12 lakhs to Mr. X. The proceedings initiated on the basis of the original notice of demand may be continued in relation to the reduced amount of ₹ 12 lakhs from the stage at which such proceedings stood immediately before disposal of appeal.

(ii) A fresh notice of demand has to be given only in respect of ₹ 5 lakhs, being the amount of enhancement. Any proceedings in relation to ₹ 15 lakhs covered by the original notice of demand served upon Mr. X may be continued from the stage at which such proceedings stood immediately before disposal of appeal.

(b) The interest under section 220(2) has to be paid on ₹ 15 lakhs @1% per month or part of the month comprised in the period commencing from 1.11.2019 and ending with the date on which the amount is paid, assuming that Mr. X has not paid any interest so far.

(7) Reduction or waiver of interest payable under section 220(2) - Section 220(2A) empowers the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner of Principal Commissioner or Commissioner to reduce or waive any interest payable under section 220(2) if he is satisfied that:

(i) payment of such amount has caused or would cause genuine hardship to the assessee;

(ii) default in the payment of the amount on which interest was made payable under the said sub-section was due to circumstances beyond the control of the assessee; and

(iii) the assessee has co-operated in any enquiry relating to the assessment or any proceeding for the recovery of any amount due from him.

(8) Interest under section 220(2) not leviable where interest is charged u/s 201(1A) or section 206C(7) -

Since the intimation generated after processing the TDS statement under section 200A(1) would be deemed as a notice of demand under section 156, consequently, interest under section 220 would be attracted for failure to pay the tax specified in the intimation. However, interest under section 201(1A) is leviable for non-payment of tax specified in the intimation. Therefore, it has been provided that in cases where interest is charged for any period under section 201(1A) on the tax specified in the intimation under section 200A, then, interest under section 220(2) would not be levied on the same amount for the same period.

Likewise, since the intimation generated after processing of TCS statement shall be deemed as a notice of demand under section 156, failure to pay the tax specified in the intimation shall attract levy of interest as per the provisions of section 220(2). Section 206C(7) also provides for levy of interest for non-payment of tax specified in the intimation to be issued. In order to remove the possibility of charging interest on the same amount for the same period of default both under section 206C(7) and section 220(2), sub-section (2C) of section 220 specifically provides that where interest is charged for any period under section 206C(7) on the amount of tax specified in the intimation issued under 206CB(1), no interest shall be charged under section 220(2) on the same amount for the same period.

15.12.2 Penalty payable [Section 221]

(1) Penalty for default in payment of tax - Where an assessee is in default in payment of tax including advance tax and interest payable thereon, the Assessing Officer shall impose a penalty which in cases of continuing default, may be increased from time to time. However, the total penalty should not exceed the tax in arrears. The Assessing Officer should give the assessee a reasonable opportunity of being heard before levying such a penalty.

No penalty shall be levied on the assessee for default in payment of tax in cases where he proves to the satisfaction of the Assessing Officer that default was for good and sufficient reasons.

(2) Payment of tax before levy of penalty not to absolve the assessee from penalty - The Explanation to section 221(1) provides that an assessee would not cease to be liable to pay any penalty for his default or delay in payment of the tax merely by reason of the fact that before the date of levy of such penalty the tax which was in arrears had actually been paid by him.

Thus wherever there is delay on the part of the assessee, he would be liable to penalty even though by the time the Assessing Officer initiates action for the levy of penalty the amount of tax in arrears is actually paid.

An order imposing penalty is appealable and the assessee's right of appeal is subject to the condition that he must first pay the tax or penalty; the assessee should first pay the tax before filing the appeal.

(3) Circumstance when penalty levied will be cancelled – If, as a consequence of any final order, the amount of tax, with respect to the default in the payment of which the penalty was levied, has been wholly reduced, the penalty levied shall be cancelled and the amount of penalty paid shall be refunded.

15.12.3 Certificate to Tax Recovery Officer (TRO) [Section 222]

(1) TRO to draw up statement specifying amount of arrears due from an assessee-in-default [Section 222(1)] - When an assessee is in default or is deemed to be in default in making a payment of tax the TRO may draw up under his signature a statement in the prescribed form and specifying the amount of arrears due from the assessee and shall proceed to recover from such assessee the amount specified in the certificate by one of more of the modes mentioned below in accordance with the Second Schedule.

(a) Attachment and sale of the assessee's movable property.

(b) Attachment and sale of assessee's immovable properties.

(c) Arrest of the assessee and his detention in prison.

(d) Appointing a receiver for the management of assessee's movable and immovable properties.

(2) Property to include property transferred to spouse/minor child/son's wife/son's minor child for inadequate consideration [Proviso to section 222(1)] - For the purpose of this section, the assessee's movable or immovable property shall include any property which has been transferred directly or indirectly by the assessee to his spouse or minor child or son's wife or son's minor child otherwise than for adequate consideration and which is held by any of the persons aforesaid. So far as the movable or immovable property so transferred to his minor child or his son's minor child is concerned, they shall even after the date of attainment of majority by such minor child or son's minor child continue to be included in the assessee's movable or immovable property for recovering any arrears.

(3) The TRO may take action under sub-section (1) notwithstanding that proceedings or recovery of the arrears by any special mode have been taken.

15.12.4 Tax Recovery Officer (TRO) by whom recovery is to be effected [Section 223]

(1) TRO competent to take action under section 222: The TRO competent to take action under section 222 shall be the TRO within whose jurisdiction:

(i) the assessee carries on business or profession.

(ii) the principal place of his business or profession is situated.

(iii) the assessee resides or any movable or immovable property of the assessee is situated.

(2) Assignment of jurisdiction: The jurisdiction is assigned either by the CBDT or the Chief Commissioner or Commissioner who is authorised in this behalf by the CBDT under section 120.

(3) Procedure where an assessee has property within the jurisdiction of more than one TRO: In such a case, if the TRO by whom the certificate is drawn up is not able to recover the entire amount by sale of the property within his jurisdiction, he may send the certificate to a TRO within whose jurisdiction the assessee has property. Thereupon, that TRO shall proceed to recover the amount as if the certificate was drawn up by him.

15.12.5 Validity of certificate and cancellation and amendment thereof [Section 224]

(1) The assessee cannot dispute the correctness of any certificate drawn up by the TRO on any ground whatsoever.

(2) However, the TRO is empowered to cancel the certificate if, for any reason, he thinks it necessary so to do, or to correct any clerical or arithmetical mistake therein.

15.12.6 Stay of proceedings in pursuance of certificate and amendment or cancellation thereof [Section 225]

(1) TRO empowered to grant time for payment of tax: It shall be lawful for the TRO to grant time for the payment of any tax and when he does so he shall stay proceedings for the recovery of such tax until the expiry of the time so granted.

(2) TRO empowered to stay proceedings where demand is reduced in appeal but subject matter of further proceedings: Where as a result of appeal, the demand is reduced but the order is the subject matter of further proceedings, the TRO shall stay the recovery of such part of the amount specified in the certificate as pertains to such deduction for the period in which an appeal or other proceedings remains pending.

(3) TRO empowered to modify or cancel certificate where demand is reduced on appeal: Where a certificate has been drawn up and subsequently, as a result of appellate order the amount is reduced, the TRO shall modify the certificate or cancel it if it is necessary, when the order which was the subject matter of appeal or other proceeding becomes final and conclusive.

15.12.7 Other modes of recovery [Section 226 & 227]

(1) Recovery of tax where certificate has/has not been drawn up under section 222:

	Whether Certificate has been drawn up under section 222?	Income-tax authority empowered to recover taxes by one or more of the modes specified in section 226
(i)	No	Assessing Officer
(ii)	Yes	TRO, without prejudice to the modes of recovery specified in section 222

Note - This section enumerates the various modes of recovery by the Assessing Officer and Tax TRO. Students may refer to the section in the Bare Act for details.

(2) Non-validity of claim in regard to any property where notice is issued: Any claim in regard to any property in relation to which a notice under this section is issued, shall be void as against any demand contained therein.

(3) Consequences where the person on whom notice is served objects on oath: Where a person, on whom a notice (garnishee order) under this section has been served, objects on oath that the amount demanded from him is not due to the assessee or that he does not hold any money for or on account of the assessee, he cannot be compelled by the Assessing Officer to make the payment. However, if it is later on found that such a statement made by him was false, he would personally become liable to pay the amount to the Assessing Officer or TRO to the extent of his own liability to the assessee or to the extent of the assessee's liability, whichever is less.

Such personal liability would arise even in cases where the person in receipt of a notice from the Assessing Officer or TRO, makes a payment in disregard of the notice served on him.

(4) Recovery of tax dues from money in custody of a Court or Receiver and distraint and sale of movable property: Moneys belonging to the assessee-in-default which are in the custody of a Court or Receiver are also liable for attachment. For details, students may refer to the Third Schedule in the Act.

(5) Recovery through State Government: In addition, tax may be recovered through the State Government if the recovery of tax in any area has been entrusted to it under the Constitution. In such a case, the State Government may direct that the tax shall be recovered in respect of any particular area together with the municipal taxes or local rates by the municipality or local authority [Section 227].

(3) The TRO shall proceed to recover the amount specified in the certificate in the manner in which he would proceed to recover the amount specified in a certificate drawn up by him under section 222.

(4) Thereafter, the TRO has to remit any sum so recovered to the CBDT after deducting the expenses in connection with the recovery proceedings.

(5) Where an assessee is in default or is deemed to be in default in making a payment of tax, the TRO may, if the assessee is a resident of a country (being a country with which the Central Government has entered into an agreement for the recovery of income-tax under the Income-tax Act, 1961 and the corresponding law in force in that country) or has any property in that country, forward to the CBDT a certificate drawn up by him under section 222 and the CBDT may take such action thereon as it may deem appropriate having regard to the terms of the agreement with such country.

(iii) However, where an income-tax authority opines that there exist circumstances which render an Indian domiciled to obtain a certificate under this section, such person shall not leave the territory of India by land, sea or air unless -

(a) he obtains a certificate from the income-tax authority stating that he has no liabilities under the Income-tax Act 1961 and the Wealth-tax Act, 1957 or

In such a case, the owner or charterer shall be deemed to be an assessee in default for such sum and recovery shall be as if it were an arrear of tax.

Note - The expressions "owner" and "charterer" include any representative, agent or employee empowered by the owner or charterer to allow persons to travel by the ship or aircraft.*

(4) Power to make Rules [Section 230(4)]

The CBDT is empowered to make Rules for carrying out the provisions of this section.

(1) Eligibility [Sections 237 and 242]

(ii) This may arise usually as a result of excess deduction of tax at source from salaries, dividends, interest, to or as a result of excess payment of advance tax or when the tax originally paid on assessment is reduced on appeal, revision, rectification or reference.

(iii) Where such a claim or refund is made, the assessee cannot question the correctness or validity of the assessment or any other matter related thereto which has become final and conclusive. He is also debarred from asking for a review or revision of the assessment.

(2) Persons entitled to claim refund in certain cases [Section 238]

In order to simplify the procedure for claim of refund, it has been provided that every claim for refund should be made by furnishing return in accordance with the provisions of section 139.

(i) Where refund becomes due to the assessee as a result of an order passed in appeal or any other proceeding under the Income-tax Act, 1961, he need not make an application to claim the same.

(ii) In such a case, the Assessing Officer is bound to pass an order of refund without waiting for the application from the assessee.

(iii) Where, by the order aforesaid, an assessment is set aside or cancelled and an order of fresh assessment is directed to be made, the refund shall become due only on the making of such fresh assessment.

(iv) Where the assessment is annulled the refund shall become due only of the amount of tax paid in excess of the tax chargeable on the total income returned by the assessee.

(5) Withholding of refund in certain cases [Section 241A]

(i) In a case where refund of any amount becomes due to the assessee under section 143(1) and the Assessing Officer is of the opinion, having regard to the fact that notice has been issued under section 143(2) in respect of such return, that the grant of the refund is likely to adversely affect the revenue, he may, withhold refund upto the date on which the assessment is made.

(ii) However, for withholding the refund, he has to satisfy the following two conditions:

(a) The prior approval of the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner has to be obtained; and

(b) The reasons have to be recorded in writing.

(iii) The above provisions would apply for A.Y.2017-18 and subsequent years.

(6) Correctness of assessment not to be questioned [Section 242]

(i) While making a claim for refund, an assessee cannot question the correctness of any assessment or other matter decided which has become final and conclusive or ask for a review of the same.

(ii) The assessee shall not be entitled to any relief on such claim except refund of tax wrongly paid or paid in excess.

(7) Interest on Refunds [Section 244A]

(i) Applicability and Rate: interest at ½% for every month or part of a month shall be payable on tax or penalty becoming refundable on account of excess payment of advance tax, advance tax on fringe benefits, tax deducted at source or collected at source and other tax or penalty becoming refundable.

(iii) Additional interest payable on refund arising out of fresh assessment order giving effect to appellate or revisionary order : Where a refund arises as a result of giving effect to an order under section 250/254/260/262/264, wholly or partly, otherwise than by making a fresh assessment or reassessment, the assessee shall be entitled to receive, in addition to the interest payable under section 244A(1), an additional interest on such refund amount calculated at the rate of 3% p.a., for the period beginning from the date following the date of expiry of the time allowed under section 153(5) to the date on which the refund is granted. (iv) Interest on refund payable to deductor [Section 244A(1B] : Interest @0.5% for every month or part of a month for the period specified in the following table for each of the cases mentioned in column (1) hereunder –

Case	Period for grant of interest on refund
	Beginning from	Ending with
(1)	(2)	(3)

In case any question arises as to the period of delay attributable to the assessee, it shall be decided by the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Principal Commissioner or Commissioner.

(vi) Increase or reduction of interest of refund as a result of assessment/ rectification/appellate/revisionary order [Section 244A(3)]

(a) Where as a result of an order under sections 143(3)/144/147/154/155/ 250/254/260/262/264/245D(4), the amount on which interest payable under this section has been increased or reduced, the interest shall be increased or reduced.

(b) If the interest is reduced, the Assessing Officer has to serve a notice of demand on the assessee in the prescribed form specifying the amount of excess interest paid and require him to pay such amount.

(c) Such notice of demand shall be deemed to be notice under section 156 and the provisions of the Act shall accordingly apply.

(vii) Interest under section 244A is income of the P.Y. in which it is allowed

Interest allowed under section 244A is the income of the previous year in which it is allowed, and should be declared in the return of income furnished in the assessment year relevant to the previous year.

The procedure for refund of tax deducted at source under section 195 to the person deducting the tax is set out in CBDT Circular No.7/2007 dated 23.10.2007. Circular No.7/2007 states that no interest under section 244A is admissible on refunds to be granted in accordance with the circular or on the refunds already granted in accordance with Circular No.769 or Circular No.790 dated 20.4.2000.

The issue of eligibility for interest on refund of excess TDS to a tax deductor has been a subject matter of controversy and litigation. The Supreme Court of India, in Tata Chemical Limited 1, Civil Appeal No. 6301 of 2011 vide order dated 26.02.2014, held that refund due and payable to the assessee is debt-owed and payable by the Revenue. The State having received the money without right, and having retained and used it, is bound to make the party good, just as an individual would be under like circumstances. The obligation to refund money received and retained without right implies and carries with it the right to interest."

In view of the above judgment of the Apex Court, it is settled that if a resident deductor is entitled for the refund of tax deposited under section 195, then, it has to be refunded with interest under section 244A from the date of payment of such tax.

(8) Set off of refunds against tax remaining payable [Section 245]

(i) Set-off of refunds against tax or interest payable: Where a refund is found due to any person, the Assessing Officer, Commissioner (Appeals) or Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Principal Commissioner or Commissioner may, in lieu of payment of the refund, set off the amount to be refunded or any part of that amount, against any tax or interest remaining payable by the said person under the Act.

(ii) Intimation to be given before setting off: The set off can, however, be done only after giving intimation in writing to such person of the action proposed to be taken under this section.

EXERCISE

Question 1

Mr. Madhusudan is regular in deducting tax at source and depositing the same. In respect of the quarter ended 31st December, 2019 a sum of ₹ 80,000 was deducted at source from the contractors. The statement of tax deducted at source under section 200 was filed on 23rd March, 2020 for the quarter ended 31.12.2019.

(i) Is there any delay on the part of Mr. Madhusudan in filing the statement of TDS?

(ii) If the answer to (i) above is in the affirmative, how much amount can be levied on Mr. Madhusudan for such default under section 234E?

(iii) Is there any remedy available to him for reduction/waiver of the levy?

Answer

(i) Yes, there has been a delay on the part of Mr. Madhusudan in filing the statement of TDS.

As per section 200(3) read with Rule 31A, the statement of tax deducted at source for the quarter ended 31st December, 2019 has to be filed on or before 31st January, 2020. However, the same has been filed only on 23rd March, 2020. Hence, there has been a 52 day delay on the part of Mr. Madhusudan in filing the statement of TDS.

(ii) As per section 234E of the Income-tax Act, 1961, where a person fails to file deliver or cause to be delivered the statement of tax deducted at source within the prescribed time, then, he shall be liable to pay, by way of fee, a sum of ₹ 200 for every day during which the failure continues.

The amount of fee shall not, however, exceed the amount of tax deductible.

In this case, since Mr. Madhusudhan has delayed filing the statement of TDS by 52 days, he would be liable to pay a fee of ₹ 10,400 (₹ 200 x 52 days) under section 234E. The said fee does not exceed the tax deductible (₹ 80,000, in this case).

(iii) The CBDT is empowered to issue general or special orders, whether by way of relaxation of any of the provisions of sections 139, 143, 144, 147 etc. or otherwise, in respect of any class of incomes or class of cases. The CBDT may issue such order(s) from time to time if it considers expedient so to do, for the purpose of proper and efficient management of the work of assessment and collection of revenue. Section 234E is included in the list of sections in respect of which the CBDT is empowered to issue order for relaxation of the provisions of the Act.

Hence, the remedy available to Mr. Madhusudhan is that he can file an application to the CBDT under section 119 and seek waiver/reduction of the penalty levied/leviable under section 234E.

Smt. Vijaya, proprietor of Lakshmi Enterprises, made turnover of ₹ 210 lakhs during the previous year 2018-19. Her turnover for the year ended 31-3-2020 was ₹ 90 lakhs.

Decide whether provisions relating to deduction of tax at source are attracted for the following payments made during the financial year 2019-20:

(i) Purchase commission paid to one agent ₹ 25,000 on 13.6.2019 towards purchases made during the year.

(ii) Payments to Civil engineer of ₹ 5,00,000 for construction of residential house for self use.

Answer

Since Smt. Vijaya's turnover was ₹ 210 lakhs in the immediately preceding financial year (i.e., F.Y.2018-19), she is liable to deduct tax at source in the P.Y.2019-20, irrespective of her turnover being only ₹ 90 lakhs in the F.Y.2019-20.

(i) Tax@5% has to be deducted under section 194H in respect of purchase commission of ₹ 25,000 to an agent for purchases made during the year, since the same exceeds the threshold limit of ₹ 15,000 for non-deduction of tax at source thereunder.

(ii) Tax has to be deducted under section 194C in case of payment to resident contractors. The rate of tax is 1% if the payee is an individual or HUF and 2% in case of payees, other than individuals and HUFs.

However, as per section 194C(4), no individual or Hindu undivided family shall be liable to deduct income tax on the sum credited or paid to the account of the contractor where such sum is credited or paid exclusively for personal purposes of such individual or any member of the Hindu undivided family.

In this case, since Smt. Vijaya, an individual, makes payment of ₹ 5 lakh to a civil engineer for construction of residential house for self use, she is not liable to deduct tax at source under section 194C from such sum.

Question 3

What is the rate at which the tax is either to be deducted or collected under the provisions of the Act in the following cases?

(i) A partnership firm making sales of timber which was procured and obtained under a forest lease.

(ii) Payment of income of Rs.25 lakh on investments in the securities to the Foreign Institutional Investor.

(iii) A nationalized bank receiving professional services from a registered society made provision on 31-03-2020 of an amount of ₹ 25 lakh against the service charges bills to be received.

(iv) Payment of ₹ 5 lakh made to Mr. Phelps who is an athlete by a manufacturer of a swim wear for brand ambassador.

Answer

Applicable Rate of TDS/TCS

Situation	TCS/TDS	Rate	Note
(i) Partnership firm selling timber obtained under forest lease	TCS	2.5%	1
(ii) Payment of income on investments in the securities to the Foreign Institutional Investors	TDS	20.8%	2
In case the securities are Government securities		5.20%
(iii) Professional services rendered by a registered society to a nationalised bank	TDS	10%	3
(iv) Payment by a manufacturer of swim wear to its brand ambassador Mr. Phelps, an athlete	TDS		4
If Mr. Phelps is a resident		10%
If Mr. Phelps is a non-resident		20.8%

Notes:

(1) As per section 206C(1), tax has to be collected at source@2½% by the partnership firm, being a seller, at the time of debiting of the amount payable by the buyer to the account of the buyer or at the time of receipt of such amount, whichever is earlier.

(2) As per section 196D, tax has to be deducted at source @ 20.8% (20% plus cess@4%) by any person who is responsible for paying to a Foreign Institutional Investor, any income by way of interest on securities at the time of credit of such income to the account of the payee or at the time of payment of such income, whichever is earlier.

Alternatively, if the said securities are assumed to be government securities, tax is deductible@5.20% (i.e., 5% plus cess@4%) under section 194LD.

(3) Tax has to be deducted at source@10% under section 194J, by the nationalized bank at the time of credit of fees for professional services to the account of the registered society (i.e., on 31.3.2020), even though payment is to be made after that date.

(4) Tax has to be deducted at source@10% under section 194J[6] in respect of income of ₹ 5 lakh paid to Mr. Phelps, athlete, for advertisement, on the inherent presumption that Mr. Phelps is a resident.

[6] CBDT Circular No.715 dated 8.8.1995

Alternatively, if Mr. Phelps is assumed to be a non-resident, who is not a citizen of India, tax has to be deducted at source@20.8% (20% plus cess 4%) under section 194E in respect of income of ₹ 5 lakh paid to Mr. Phelps, an athlete, for advertisement referred under section 115BBA.

Question 4

Examine the liability for tax deduction at source in the following cases for the assessment year 2020-21:

(i) Wings Ltd. has paid amount of ₹ 15 lacs during the year ended 31-3-2020 to Airports Authority of India towards landing and parking charges.

(ii) Omega Ltd., an event management company, organized a concert of international artists in India. In this connection, it engaged the services of an overseas agent Mr. John from UK to bring artists to India. He contacted the artists and negotiated with them for performance in India in terms of the authority given by the company. He did not take part in event organized in India. The company made the payment of commission equivalent to ₹ 1 lac to the overseas agent.

(iii) Ramesh gave a building on sub-lease to Mac Ltd. with effect from 1-7-2019 on a rent of ₹ 20,000 per month. The company also took on hire machinery from Ramesh with effect from 1-11-2019 on hire charges of ₹ 15,000 per month. The rent of building and hire charges of machinery for the year 2019-20 were credited by the company to the account of Ramesh in its books of account on 31-3-2020.

(iv) ₹ 2,45,000 paid to Mr. X on 01-02-2020 by Karnataka State Government on compulsory acquisition of his urban land. What would be your answer if the land is agricultural land?

Answer

(i) TDS on landing and parking charges: The landing and parking charges which are fixed by the Airports Authority of India are not merely for the "use of the land". These charges are also for services and facilities offered in connection with the aircraft operation at the airport which include providing of air traffic services, ground safety services, aeronautical communication facilities, installation and maintenance of navigational aids and meteorological services at the airport [Japan Airlines Co. Ltd. v. CIT / CIT v. Singapore Airlines Ltd. (2015) 377 ITR 372 (SC)]. Thus, tax is not deductible under section 194I which provides deduction of tax for payment in the nature of rent.

Hence, tax is deductible @2% under section 194C by the airline company, Wings Ltd., on payment of ₹ 15 lacs made towards landing and parking charges to the Airports Authority of India for the previous year 2019-20.

(ii) TDS on services of overseas agent outside India: An overseas agent of an Indian company operates in his own country and no part of his income accrues or arises in India. His commission is usually remitted directly to him and is, therefore, not received by him or on his behalf in India. The commission paid to the non-resident agent for services rendered outside India is, thus, not chargeable to tax in India.

Since commission income for contacting and negotiating with artists by Mr. John, a non-resident, who remains outside India is not subject to tax in India, consequently, there is no liability for deduction of tax at source. It is assumed that the commission equivalent to ₹ 1 lakh was remitted to Mr. John outside India.

(iii) TDS on rent for building and machinery: Tax is deductible on rent under section 194-I, if the aggregate amount of rental income paid or credited to a person exceeds ₹ 2,40,000. Rent includes payment for use of, inter alia, building and machinery.

The aggregate payment made by Mac Ltd. to Ramesh towards rent in P.Y.2019-20 is ₹ 2,55,000 (i.e., ₹ 1,80,000 for building and ₹ 75,000 for machinery). Hence, Mac Ltd. has to deduct tax@10% on rent paid for building and tax@2% on rent paid for machinery.

(iv) TDS on compensation for compulsory acquisition: Tax is deductible at source @10% under section 194LA, where payment is made to a resident as compensation or enhanced compensation on compulsory acquisition of any immovable property (other than agricultural land).

However, no tax deduction is required if the aggregate payments in a year does not exceed ₹ 2,50,000.

Therefore, no tax is required to be deducted at source on payment of ₹ 2,45,000 to Mr. X, since the aggregate payment does not exceed ₹ 2,50,000.

Since the definition of immovable property specifically excludes agricultural land, no tax is deductible at source on compensation paid for compulsory acquisition of agricultural land.

Question 5

Examine whether tax has to be deducted at source under the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 in the following situations, which have taken place during the year ended 31-3-2020:

(i) M/s. Jiva & Co., a partnership firm, pays a sum of ₹ 43,000 as interest on loan borrowed from an Indian branch of a foreign bank.

(ii) Above firm has paid ₹ 42,000 as interest on capital to partner Mr. A, a resident in India, and ₹ 44,000 as interest on capital to partner Mr. B, a non-resident.

(iii) The above firm paid ₹ 50,000 being share of profit of partner Mr. B, a non-resident

Answer

(i) Section 194A requires deduction of tax on any income by way of interest, other than interest on securities, credited or paid to a resident, at the rates in force.

However, it specifically excludes from its scope, income credited or paid to any banking company to which the Banking Regulation Act, 1949 applies.

An Indian branch of a foreign bank, transacting the business of banking in India, is a banking company to which the Banking Regulation Act, 1949 applies. Therefore, interest payment to such bank will not attract tax deduction under section 194A.

Consequently, no tax is required to be deducted at source under section 194A on interest of ₹ 43,000 paid by M/s. Jiva & Co., a partnership firm, on loan borrowed from an Indian branch of a foreign bank.

(ii) Section 194A requiring deduction of tax at source on any income by way of interest, other than interest on securities, credited or paid to a resident, excludes from its scope, income credited or paid by a firm to its partner. Therefore, no tax is required to be deducted at source under section 194A on interest on capital of ₹ 42,000 paid by the firm to Mr. A, a resident partner.

Section 195, which requires tax deduction at source on payments to non-residents, does not provide for any exclusion in respect of payment of interest by a firm to its non-resident partner. Therefore, tax has to be deducted under section 195 at the rates in force in respect of interest on capital of ₹ 44,000 paid to partner Mr. B, a non-resident.

(iii) As per section 10(2A), share of profit received by a partner from the total income of the firm is exempt from tax. Therefore, the share of profit paid to non-resident partner is not liable for tax deduction at source.

However, section 195(6) provides that the person responsible for paying any sum, whether or not chargeable to tax, to a non-corporate non-resident or to a foreign company, shall be required to furnish the information relating to payment of such sum in the prescribed form and manner.

Question 6

"Come Air Ltd." has paid a sum of ₹ 12 lakhs during the year ended 31-3-2020 to Airports Authority of India towards landing and parking charges. The company has deducted tax at source@2% under section 194C on the said payment and remitted the tax deducted within the prescribed time. The Assessing Officer contended that landing and parking charges were levied for use of the land of the airport and hence, the payment was in the nature of rent attracting TDS@10% under section 194-I. Discuss the correctness or otherwise of the contention of the Assessing Officer.

Answer

The issue as to whether the charges fixed by the Airport Authority of India (AAI) for landing and take-off facilities and parking facility for the aircraft are for the “use of the land” by the airline company came up before the Supreme Court in Japan Airlines Co. Ltd. v. CIT / CIT v. Singapore Airlines Ltd. (2015) 377 ITR 372.

The Supreme Court observed that the charges which are fixed by the AAI for landing and take-off services as well as for parking of aircrafts are not for the "use of the land". These charges are for services and facilities offered in connection with the aircraft operation at the airport which include providing of air traffic services, ground safety services, aeronautical communication facilities, installation and maintenance of navigational aids and meteorological services at the airport.

There are various international protocols which mandate all authorities manning and managing these airports to construct the airport of desired standards which are stipulated in the protocols. The services which are required to be provided by these authorities, like AAI, are aimed at passengers' safety as well as for safe landing and parking of the aircrafts. Therefore, the services are not restricted to merely permitting "use of the land" of airport. On the contrary, it encompasses all the facilities that are to be compulsorily offered by the AAI in tune with the requirements of the protocol.

The Supreme Court observed that the charges levied on air-traffic includes landing charges, lighting charges, approach and aerodrome control charges, aircraft parking charges, aerobridge charges, hangar charges, passenger service charges, cargo charges, etc. Thus, when the airlines pay for these charges, treating such charges as charges for "use of the land" would tantamount to adopting a totally simplistic approach which is far away from reality.

The Supreme Court opined that the substance behind such charges has to be considered and when the issue is viewed from this angle, keeping the larger picture in mind, it becomes very clear that the charges are not for use of the land per se and, therefore, it cannot be treated as "rent" within the meaning of section 194-I. The Supreme Court, thus, concurred with the view taken by the Madras High Court in Singapore Airlines case and overruled the view taken by the Delhi High Court in United Airlines/Japan Airlines case.

Applying the rationale of the Supreme Court ruling to the facts of this case, the contention of the Assessing Officer that landing and parking charges are levied for use of the land of airport and hence, the charges are in the nature of rent to attract the provisions of tax deduction at source under section 194-I is not correct.

Mr. Harish, Vice President of ABC Bank, sold his house property in Chennai as well as his rural agricultural land for a consideration of ₹ 60 lakh and ₹ 15 lakh, respectively, to Mr. Suresh, a retail trader of garments, on 10.10.2019. Mr. Harish had purchased the house property and rural agricultural land in December 2017 for ₹ 40 lakh and ₹ 10 lakh, respectively. The stamp duty value on the date of transfer, i.e., 10.10.2019, is ₹ 85 lakh and ₹ 20 lakh for the house property and rural agricultural land, respectively.

(a) Determine the tax implications in the hands of Mr. Harish and Mr. Suresh, if the date of agreement for sale of house property and rural agricultural land is 1.7.2019 and the stamp duty value on the said date was ₹ 75 lakh and ₹ 15 lakh, respectively. On the said date, Mr. Suresh made payment of ₹ 5 lakh by way of account payee cheque to Mr. Harish for purchase of house property. Also, discuss the TDS implications, if any, in the hands of Mr.

Suresh, assuming that both Mr. Harish and Mr. Suresh are resident Indians.

(b) Would your answer be different if Mr. Harish is a property dealer and sold the house property in the course of his business?

Answer

(a) Tax implications on sale of rural agricultural land and house property representing a capital asset in the hands of Mr. Harish, a salaried employee

(i)	Tax implications in the hands of Mr.Harish, a salaried employee
	Since rural agricultural land is not a capital asset, the gains arising on sale of such land is not taxable in the hands of Mr. Harish. However, capital gains would arise on sale of house property, being a capital asset. As per section 50C(1), the stamp duty value of house property on the date of agreement (i.e., ₹ 75 lakh) would be deemed to be the full value of consideration arising on transfer of property. Therefore, ₹ 35 lakh (i.e., ₹ 75 lakh – ₹ 40 lakh, being the purchase price) would be taxable as short-term capital gains in the A.Y.2020-21. It may be noted that the stamp duty value on the date of agreement can be adopted since the advance was received on the date of agreement through account payee cheque and such stamp duty value exceeds 105% of the consideration. As the date of agreement is different from the date of registration and part of the consideration was received on or before the date of agreement by way of account payee cheque, the stamp duty value on the date of agreement is to be adopted as the deemed sale consideration.
(ii)	Tax implications in the hands of the buyer – Mr.Suresh, a retail trader
	The house property purchased would be a capital asset in the hands of Mr. Suresh, who is a retail trader of garments. The provisions of section 56(2)(x) is attracted in the hands of Mr. Suresh who has acquired the immovable property, being a capital asset, for inadequate consideration. For the purpose of section 56(2)(x), Mr. Suresh can take the stamp duty value on the date of agreement instead of the date of registration since he has paid a part of the consideration by account payee cheque on the date of agreement. Therefore, ₹ 15 lakh, being the difference between the stamp duty value of the property on the date of agreement (i.e., ₹ 75 lakh) and the actual consideration (i.e., ₹ 60 lakh) would be taxable as per section 56(2)(x) under the head "Income from other sources" in the hands of Mr. Suresh, since such difference exceeds the higher of ₹ 50,000 or 5% of consideration. As rural agricultural land is not a capital asset, the provisions of section 56(2)(x) are not attracted in respect of acquisition of agricultural land for inadequate consideration, since the definition of "property" under section 56(2)(x) includes only capital assets specified thereunder.

(iii)	TDS implications in the hands of the buyer, Mr.Suresh
	Since the sale consideration of house property exceeded ₹ 50 lakh, Mr. Suresh is required to deduct tax at source under section 194-IA. The tax deduction under section 194-IA would be ₹ 60,000, being 1% of ₹ 60 lakh. TDS provisions under section 194-IA are not attracted in respect of transfer of rural agricultural land.

Tax implications on sale of house property representing stock-in-trade in the hands of Mr. Harish, a property dealer:

(i)	Tax implications in the hands of Mr. Harish for A.Y.2020-21
	If Mr. Harish is a property dealer who has sold the house property in the course of his business, the provisions of section 43CA would be attracted, since the house property represents his stock-in-trade and he has transferred the same for a consideration less than the stamp duty value. For the purpose of section 43CA, Mr. Harish can take the stamp duty value on the date of agreement instead of the date of registration, since he has received part of the sale consideration by an account payee cheque on the date of agreement and it exceeds 105% of consideration. Therefore, ₹ 35 lakh, being the difference between the stamp duty value on the date of agreement (i.e., ₹ 75 lakh) and the purchase price (i.e., ₹ 40 lakh), would be chargeable as business income in the hands of Mr. Harish.
(ii)	TDS implications and taxability in the hands of Mr. Suresh for A.Y.2020-21
	There would be no difference in the TDS implications or taxability in the hands of Mr. Suresh, whether Mr. Harish is a property dealer or a salaried employee. Therefore, the provisions of section 56(2)(x) would be attracted in the hands of Mr. Suresh who has received house property, being a capital asset, for inadequate consideration. The TDS provisions under section 194-IA would also be attracted since the actual consideration for house property exceeds ₹ 50 lakh.

Question 8

Siddharth Hospitals Pvt. Ltd., has recently been accorded recognition by several insurance companies to admit and treat patients on cashless hospitalization basis. Payment to the assessee hospital will be made by Third Party Administrators (TPA) who will process the claims of the patients admitted and make payments to the various hospitals including the assessee. All TPAs are corporate entities. The assessee wants to know whether the TPAs are bound to deduct tax at source under section 194J or under section 194C?

Answer

This issue has been clarified by the CBDT Circular No.8/2009 dated 24.11.2009. As per provisions of section 194J(1), any person, who is responsible for paying to a resident any sum by way of fees for professional services, shall, at the time of credit of such sum to the account of the payee or at the time of payment thereof in cash or by issue of a cheque or draft or by any other mode, whichever is earlier, deduct an amount equal to 10% of such sum as TDS.

Further, as per clause (a) of Explanation to section 194J "professional services" includes services rendered by a person in the course of carrying on medical profession.

The services rendered by hospitals to various patients are primarily medical services and, therefore, the provisions of section 194J are applicable on payments made by TPAs to hospitals etc. Further, for invoking provisions of section 194J, there is no stipulation that the professional services have to be necessarily rendered to the person who makes payment to hospital. Therefore, TPAs who are making payment on behalf of insurance companies to hospitals for settlement of medical/ insurance claims etc. under various schemes including Cashless Schemes are liable to deduct tax at source under section 194J on all such payments to hospitals etc.

In view of the above, all such transactions between TPAs and hospitals would fall within the ambit of provisions of section 194J.

Question 9

Examine in the context of provisions contained in Chapter XVII of the Act and also work out the amount of tax to be deducted by the payer of income in the following cases:

(i) Payment of ₹ 5 lakh made by JCP & Co. to Pingu Events Co. Ltd. for organizing a debate competition on the subject "Preservation of Rural Heritage of Rajasthan".

(ii) "Profit Commission" of ₹ 1 lakh paid on 10.6.2019 by a re-insurance company to the insurer company after the expiry of the term of insurance and where there was no claim during the treaty.

(iii) KD, a part time director of DAF Pvt. Ltd. was paid an amount of ₹ 2,25,000 as fees which was actually in the nature of commission on sales for the period 1.4.2019 to 30.6.2019.

Answer

(i) The services of Event Managers in relation to sports activities alone have been notified by the CBDT as "professional services" for the purpose of section 194J. In this case, payment of ₹ 5 lakh was made to an event management company for organization of a debate competition. Hence, the provisions of section 194J are not attracted.

However, TDS provisions under section 194C relating to contract payments would be attracted and consequently, tax has to be deducted @ 2% under section 194C. The tax deductible under section 194C would be ₹ 10,000, being 2% of ₹ 5 lakh.

(ii) Section 194D requires deduction of tax at source@5% from insurance commission, where the commission exceeds ₹ 15,000.

Reinsurance is different from insurance since there is no direct contractual relationship between the person insured and the re-insurer.

In order to attract section 194D, the commission or any other payment covered under the section should be a remuneration or reward for soliciting or procuring the insurance business. The insurance companies do not procure business for the reinsurance company nor does the reinsurer pay commission or other payment for soliciting the business from the insurance companies. Therefore, section 194D has no application.

Hence, when profit commission is paid by a reinsurance company to an insurance company, after the expiry of the term of insurance, in respect of cases where there is no claim during the operation of the reinsurance treaty, tax deduction under section 194D is not attracted.

(iii) Section 194J provides for deduction of tax at source @10% on any remuneration or fees or commission, by whatever name called, paid to a director, which is not in the nature of salary in respect of which tax is deductible at source under section 192.

Hence, tax is to be deducted at source under section 194J @10% by DAF Pvt. Ltd. on the commission of ₹ 2,25,000 paid to KD, a part-time director. The tax deductible under section 194J would be ₹ 22,500, being 10% of ₹ 2,25,000.

Examine the applicability of the provisions relating to deduction of tax at source in the following transactions:

(i) Max Limited pays ₹ 1,02,000 to Mini Limited, a resident contractor who, under the contract dated 15th October, 2019, manufactures a product according to specification of Max Limited by using materials purchased from Max Limited.

(ii) A company operating a television channel makes payment of ₹ 5 lakh to a former cricketer for making running commentary of a one-day cricket match.

(iii) EL Ltd., a foreign company, pays outside India, salary to its employee, Mr. Raghavan, a foreign national and a non-resident, for services rendered in India.

Answer

(i) The definition of "work" under section 194C includes manufacturing or supplying a product according to the requirement or specification of a customer by using material purchased from such customer. In the instant case, Mini Limited manufactures the product as per the specification given by Max Limited by using the raw materials purchased from Max Limited. Therefore, it falls within the definition of "work" under section 194C. Consequently, tax is to be deducted on the invoice value excluding the value of material purchased from such customer if such value is mentioned separately in the invoice. If the material component is not mentioned separately in the invoice, tax is to be deducted on the whole of the invoice value.

(ii) Provisions for deduction of tax at source under section 194J are attracted in respect of payment of fees for professional services, if the amount of such fees exceeds ₹ 30,000 in the relevant financial year. The service rendered by a commentator in relation to sports activities has been notified by the CBDT as a professional service for the purposes of section 194J vide its Notification No. 88 dated 21st August, 2008. Therefore, tax is required to be deducted@10% from the fee of ₹ 5 lacs payable to the former cricketer.

(iii) Section 195 requires deduction of tax at source by any person responsible for making payment to a non-resident, any interest or any other sum chargeable under the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 (other than income chargeable under the head "Salaries").

Section 192(1) requires "any person" responsible for paying income under the head "Salaries" to deduct tax at source. Therefore, even if the payer is a foreign company, section 192 would be applicable.

TDS provisions under section 192 are attracted, if the salary payable to a non-resident is chargeable to tax in India. Under section 9(1)(ii), income which falls under the head "Salaries" shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India, if it is earned in India. Salary payable for service rendered in India shall be regarded as income earned in India. Therefore, salary paid to Mr. Raghavan, a non-resident, attracts tax liability in India, as he has rendered services in India and the salary is attributable to such services.

Therefore, the foreign company, EL Limited, is liable to deduct tax at source under section 192 from the salary of Mr. Raghavan.

Question 11

Examine in the following cases the obligation of the person paying the income in respect of tax deduction at source and indicate the due date for payment of such tax, wherever applicable:

(i) MNO Ltd., the employer, credited salary due for the financial year 2019-20 amounting to ₹ 3,40,000 to the account of Q, an employee, in its books of account on 31.3.2020. Q has not furnished any information about his income/loss from any other head or proof of investments/ payments qualifying for deduction under section 80C.

(ii) T, an individual whose total sales in business during the year ended 31.3.2019 was ₹ 2.20 crores, paid ₹ 9 lacs by cheque on 1.1.2020 to a contractor (an individual), for construction of his factory building. No amount was credited earlier to the account of the contractor in the books of T.

(iii) BCD Ltd. credited ₹ 28,000 towards fees for professional services and ₹ 27,000 towards fees for technical services to the account of HG in its books of account on 6.10.2019. The total sum of ₹ 55,000 was paid by cheque to HG on 18.12.2019.

Answer

(i) Section 192 requires deduction of tax from salary at the time of payment. Thus, the employer is not required to deduct tax at source when salary has not been paid but is merely credited to the account of the employee in its books of account. MNO Ltd. therefore, is not required to deduct tax at source in respect of the salary merely credited to the account of employee Q which is not paid.

If salary has been paid during the year to Q, then, MNO Ltd has to obtain from Q, the evidence/proof/particulars of prescribed claims (including claim for set-off of loss) under the provisions of the Act in such form and manner as may be prescribed.

If Q has not furnished any information about his income/loss under any other head or proof of investments/expenditure qualifying for deduction under section 80C, then, the employer has to deduct tax without considering any claim for any expenditure or set-off of losses or deduction under section 80C.

(ii) An individual who is liable for tax audit under section 44AB in the immediately preceding financial year 2018-19 is liable to deduct tax at source under section 194C for the financial year 2019-20 in respect of the payment made to contractor exceeding ₹ 30,000 in a single contract and ₹ 1,00,000 in aggregate of contracts during the financial year. Turnover of the individual T is ₹ 2.20 crores in the financial year 2018-19. Therefore, T is liable to get his accounts for that year audited under section 44AB. As the payment during financial year 2019-20 to the contractor has exceeded the limits prescribed in section 194C, tax has to be deducted under section 194C.

The rate of tax deduction is 1% as the contractor is an individual.

(iii) The limit of ₹ 30,000 for non-deduction of tax under section 194J would apply separately for fees for professional services and fees for technical services. This means that if a person has rendered services falling under both the categories, tax need not be deducted if the fee for each category does not exceed ₹ 30,000 even though the aggregate of the amounts credited to the account of such person or paid to him for both the categories of services exceed ₹ 30,000. Therefore, BCD Ltd. is not required to deduct tax at source in respect of the fees either at the time of credit or at the time of payment.

Examine the liability for tax deduction at source in the following cases for the assessment year 2020-21:

(i) Mr. Anand has been running a sole proprietary business whose accounts are audited under section 44AB with turnover of ₹ 202 lakhs for the A.Y. 2019-20. He pays a monthly rent of ₹ 15,000 for the office premises to Mr. R, the owner of building and an individual. Besides, he also pays service charges of ₹ 6,000 per month to Mr. R towards the use of furniture, fixtures and vacant land appurtenant thereto.

(ii) By virtue of an agreement with a nationalised bank, a catering organisation receives a sum of ₹ 50,000 per month towards supply of food, water, snacks etc. during office hours to the employees of the bank.

(iii) An Indian company pays gross salary including allowances and monetary perquisites amounting to ₹ 7,30,000 to its General Manager. Besides, the company provides non-monetary perquisites to him whose value is estimated at ₹ 1,20,000.

(iv) A notified infrastructure debt fund eligible for exemption under section 10(47) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 pays interest of ₹ 5 lakhs to a company incorporated in USA. The US Company incurred expenditure of ₹ 12,000 for earning such interest. The fund also pays interest of ₹ 3 lakhs to Mr. X, who is a resident of a notified jurisdictional area.

Answer

(i) Where the payer is an individual or HUF whose turnover exceeds the monetary limits specified in clause (a) of section 44AB, he has to deduct tax at source. Since the turnover of Mr. Anand was ₹ 202 lakhs for the A.Y.2019-20, he is liable to deduct tax at source under section 194-I in respect of rental payments during the financial year 2019-20.

Accordingly, Mr. Anand is liable to deduct tax at source under section 194-I on the rental payments made. Section 194-I provides that rent includes any payment, by whatever name called, for the use of land or building together with furniture, fittings etc. Therefore, in the given case, apart from monthly rent of ₹ 15,000 p.m., service charge of ₹ 6,000 p.m. for use of furniture and fixtures would also attract TDS under section 194-I. Since the aggregate rental payments of ₹ 2,52,000 to Mr. R during the financial year 2019-20 exceeds ₹ 2,40,000, Mr. Anand is liable to deduct tax at source @10% under section 194-I from rent paid to Mr. R.

(ii) The definition of "work" under Explanation to section 194-C includes catering services and therefore, TDS provisions under section 194C are attracted in respect of payments to a caterer. As the payment exceeds ₹ 30,000, the nationalised bank is required to deduct tax at source at 2% on the payments made to catering organisation under 194-C. If the catering organization is an individual or HUF, then the tax deduction shall be @1%.

Gross salary, allowances and monetary perquisites	7,30,000
Non-Monetary perquisites	1,20,000
	8,50,000
Less: Standard deduction under section 16(ia)	50,000
	8,00,000
Tax Liability	75,400

Average rate of tax (₹ 75,400 / ₹ 8,00,000 × 100)	9.425%

The company can deduct ₹ 75,400 at source from the salary of the General Manager. Alternatively, the company can pay tax on non-monetary perquisites as under –

Tax on non-monetary perquisites = 9.425% of ₹ 1,20,000 = ₹ 11,310

Balance to be deducted from salary = ₹ 64,090

If the company pays tax of ₹ 11,310 on non-monetary perquisites, the same is not a deductible expenditure as per section 40(a). The amount of tax paid towards non-monetary perquisite by the employer, however, is not chargeable to tax in the hands of the employee as per section 10(10CC).

(iv) As per section 194LB, tax would be deductible @ 5% on gross interest paid/credited by a notified infrastructure debt fund, eligible for exemption under section 10(47), to a foreign company.

In the first case, since the payment is to a foreign company, health and education cess @4% has to be added to the applicable rate of TDS. Therefore, the tax deductible under section 194LB would be ₹ 26,000 (i.e., 5.20% of ₹ 5 lakhs).

However, in case the notified infrastructure debt fund pays interest to a person who is a resident of a notified jurisdictional area, section 94A will apply. Accordingly, tax would be deductible @30% (plus health and education cess@4%) under section 94A, even though section 194LB provides for deduction of tax at a concessional rate of 5%. Therefore, the tax deductible in respect of payment of ₹ 3 lakh to Mr. X, who is a resident of a notified jurisdictional area, would be ₹ 93,600, being 31.2% of ₹ 3,00,000.

Question 13

The following issues arise in connection with the deduction of tax at source under Chapter XVII-B. Examine the liability for tax deduction in these cases:

(a) An employee of the Central Government receives arrears of salary for the earlier 3 years. He enquires whether he is liable for deduction of tax on the entire amount during the current year.

(b) A T.V. channel pays ₹ 10 lakh on 1.9.2019 as prize money to the winner of a quiz programme, "Who will be a Millionaire"?

(c) State Bank of India pays ₹ 50,000 per month as rent to the Central Government for a building in which one of its branches is situated.

(d) A television company pays ₹ 80,000 to a cameraman for shooting of a documentary film.

(e) A State Government pays ₹ 22,000 on 2.7.2019 as commission to one of its agents on sale of lottery tickets.

(f) A Turf Club awards a jack-pot of ₹ 5 lakh to the winner of one of its races on 1.2.2020.

Answer

(a) As per section 192, tax is deductible at source by any person who is responsible for paying any income chargeable under the head 'Salaries'. However, as per sub-section (2A) of that section, the employee will be entitled to relief u/s 89 and consequently he will be required to furnish to the person responsible for making the payment, such particulars in the prescribed form (i.e., Form No.10E). The person responsible for making the payment shall compute the relief and take into account the same while deducting tax at source from salary.

(b) Under section 194B, the person responsible for paying by way of winnings from any card game and other game in an amount exceeding ₹ 10,000 shall at the time of payment deduct income-tax at 30%. Therefore, tax of Rs.3 lakh has to be deducted at source from the prize money of ₹ 10 lakh payable to the winner.

(c) Section 194-I, which governs the deduction of tax at source on payment of rent, exceeding ₹ 2,40,000 p.a., is applicable to all taxable entities except individuals and HUFs, whose turnover/gross receipts do not exceed the monetary limits specified under clause (a) of section 44AB. Section 196, however, provides exemption in respect of payments made to Government from application of the provisions of tax deduction at source.

Therefore, no tax is required to be deducted at source by State Bank of India from rental payments to the Government.

(d) If the cameraman is an employee of the T.V. Company, the provisions of section 192 will apply. However, if he is a professional, TDS provisions under section 194-J will apply. Tax at 10% will have to be deducted at the time of credit of ₹ 80,000 or on its payment, whichever is earlier.

(e) Under section 194G, the person responsible for paying to any person stocking, distributing, purchasing or selling lottery tickets shall at the time of credit of the commission or payment thereof, whichever is earlier, amounting to more than ₹ 15,000, deduct income-tax at source @5%.

Accordingly, tax@5% under section 194G amounting to ₹ 1,100 has to be deducted from commission payment of ₹ 22,000 to the agent of the State Government.

(f) The payment by way of winnings from horse race is governed by section 194BB. Under this section, the person responsible for payment shall, at the time of payment, deduct tax at source @ 30%, if the payment exceeds ₹ 10,000.

Accordingly, tax@30% amounting to ₹ 1,50,000 has to be deducted from the winnings of ₹ 5 lakh payable to the winner of the race.

Examine and compute the liability for deduction of tax at source, if any, in the cases stated hereunder, for the financial year ended 31st March, 2020

(i) Mr. X, a resident, acquired a house property at Mumbai from Mr. Y for a consideration of ₹ 90 lakhs, on 20.6.2019. On the same day, Mr. X made two separate transactions, thereby acquiring an urban plot in Kolkata from Mr. C for a sum of ₹ 49,50,000 and rural agricultural land from Mr. D for a consideration of ₹ 60 lakhs.

(ii) On 17.6.2019, a commission of ₹ 50,000 was retained by the consignee 'ABC Packaging Ltd.' and not remitted to the consignor 'XYZ Developers', while remitting the sale consideration. Examine the obligation of the consignor to deduct tax at source.

(iii) Raj is working with AB Ltd. He is entitled to a salary of ₹ 55,000 per month w.e.f. 1.4.2019. He has a house property which is self-occupied. He paid an interest of ₹ 80,000 on loan, during the previous year 2019-20. The loan was taken for construction of house. He has notified his employer AB Ltd. that there will be a loss of ₹ 80,000 in respect of this house property for financial year ended 31.3.2020.

Answer

		Amount of TDS (₹)
(i)	Since the consideration for transfer of house property at Mumbai exceeds ₹ 50 lakhs, Mr. X, being the transferee, is required to deduct tax @1% under section 194-IA on ₹ 90 lakhs, being the amount of consideration for transfer of property.	90,000
	Mr. X is not required to deduct tax as source under section 194-IA from the consideration of ₹ 49,50,000 paid to Mr. C for transfer of urban plot, since the consideration is less than ₹ 50 lakhs.	Nil
	Mr. X is also not required to deduct tax at source under section 194-IA from the consideration of ₹ 60 lakhs paid to Mr. D for transfer of rural agricultural land, since the same is specifically excluded from the scope of immovable property for the purpose of tax deduction under section 194-IA.	Nil
	Note - Section 194-IA requires every transferee responsible for paying any sum as consideration for transfer of immovable property (land, other than agricultural land, or building or part of building) to deduct tax, at the rate of 1% of such sum, at the time of credit of such sum to the account of the resident transferor or at the time of payment of such sum to the resident transferor, whichever is earlier. However, no tax is required to be deducted where the consideration for transfer of an immovable property is less than ₹ 50 lakhs.*
(ii)	Section 194H requires deduction of tax at source@5% from commission and brokerage payments to a resident. However, no tax is to be deducted at source where the amount of such payment does not exceed ₹ 15,000. In the given case, 'ABC Packaging Ltd.', the consignee, has not remitted the commission of ₹ 50,000 to the consignor 'XYZ Developers' while remitting the sales consideration.

	Since the retention of commission by the consignee/agent amounts to constructive payment of the same to him by the consignor/principal, deduction of tax at source is required to be made from the amount of commission [CBDT Circular No.619 dated 4/12/1991].
	Therefore, XYZ Developers has to deduct tax at source on ₹ 50,000 at the rate of 5%.		2,500
(iii)	Section 192 provides that tax is required to be deducted on the payment made as salaries. Tax is to be deducted on the estimated income at the average of income tax computed on the basis of the rates in force for the financial year in which payment is made.
	The employee may declare details of his other incomes (including loss under the head "Income from house property" but not any other loss) to his employer. In this case, since Mr. Raj has notified his employer AB Ltd. of loss from self-occupied house property, the employer has to take the same into consideration for deduction of tax at source.
	Therefore, AB Ltd. is required to deduct tax at source on the salary of ₹ 55,000 per month paid to Mr. Raj, in the following manner:
	Income under the head salaries (₹ 55,000 x 12)	6,60,000
	Less: Standard deduction under section 16(ia)	50,000
		6,10,000
	Income under the head "house property"	(80,000)
	Gross total income	5,30,000
	Less: Deduction under Chapter VI-A	Nil
	Total Income	5,30,000
	Tax on ₹ 5,30,000	18,500
	Add: Health and Education cess@4%	740
	Tax to be deducted at source	19,240	19,240

Question 15

A foreign company seconded some employees to the assessee, an Indian collaborator. These employees worked with the Indian collaborator throughout the P.Y.2019-20. The employees were in receipt of salary from the Indian collaborator. They were also in receipt of special allowance directly from the foreign company in foreign currency outside India. The Indian collaborator deducted tax under section 192, on the component of salary paid by it, without taking into account the special allowance paid abroad by the foreign company in foreign currency to these employees. For this reason, the Revenue authorities treated the Indian collaborator as an 'assessee-in-default' under section 201 for non-deduction of tax at source on the "special allowance" component of salary paid by the foreign company.

Is such treatment by the Revenue Authorities and the consequent levy of interest and penalty justified?

Answer

Section 9(1)(ii) provides that any income which falls under the head "salaries" is deemed to accrue or arise in India, if it is earned in India. The Explanation thereto further clarifies that income payable for services rendered in India shall be regarded as income earned in India.

Section 192(1) requires the person responsible for paying any income chargeable under the head "Salaries" to deduct income-tax, at the time of payment, at the average rate of income-tax computed on the basis of the rates in force for the financial year on the amount payable.

Since the TDS provisions relating to payment of income chargeable under the head "Salaries" form an integrated code along with the charging and computation provisions under the Act, section 192(1) has to be read with section 9(1)(ii) and the Explanation thereto. Therefore, if any payment under the head "Salaries" falls within section 9(1)(ii), then TDS provisions under section 192 gets attracted. Consequently, the Indian tax deductor assessee is duty bound to deduct, from the portion of salary paid by it, tax at source under section 192(1) on the entire salary paid to the employee, including special allowance paid abroad to the employee by the foreign company.

In this case, all the employees are resident in India, since they have worked with the Indian collaborator throughout the previous year 2019-20. If the tax due on special allowance received from the foreign company is paid by the recipient-employees, then, the Indian collaborator would not be treated as an assessee-in-default under section 201(1), if these resident-employees have furnished a return of income under section 139 on or before the due date of filing return of income, disclosing such income, and have also furnished a certificate to this effect from an accountant in the prescribed form. However, interest under section 201(1A)@1% per month or part of month shall be payable by the Indian collaborator from the date on which such tax was deductible to the date of furnishing of return by such resident employee.

In cases where the tax has not been paid by the recipient employee, the Assessing Officer can proceed under section 201(1) to recover the shortfall in payment of tax and interest thereon under section 201(1A).

However, no penalty under section 271C would be attracted, if the Indian collaborator was under the genuine and bona fide belief that it was not under any obligation to deduct tax at source from the special allowance paid by the foreign company. This is provided for under section 273B.

SIGNIFICANT SELECT CASES

1. Whether "tips" received by the hotel-company from its customers (who made payment through credit card) and distributed to the employees would fall within the meaning of "Salaries" to attract tax deduction at source under section 192?

ITC Ltd v. CIT (2016) 384 ITR 14 (SC)

Facts of the case: The assessee company, engaged in the business of owning, operating and managing hotels, allowed its employees to receive tips from customers. In case of credit card payments by the customers, the employer company collected the tips which were later on disbursed to its employees. The Assessing Officer treated the receipt of tips as income under the head "Salaries" in the hands of the employees and contended that the assessee was liable to deduct tax at source from such payments under section 192. As the assessee company had not deducted tax at source on the tips disbursed to the employees, the Assessing Officer treated the assessee as assessee in default under section 201(1).

However, the Commissioner (Appeals) held that the assessee could not be treated as assessee in default under section 201(1) for non-deduction of tax on tips collected by them and disbursed to their employees. Thereafter, the Tribunal also dismissed the appeal of the revenue.

High Court's Decision: The High Court held that the tips would amount to "profit in addition to salary or wages" and hence would fall under section 15 read with section 17(1) and section 17(3). It also held that the while the tips received by the employees directly from customers would be outside the purview of section 192 but the moment a tip is paid by the customer by way of credit card along with the bill amount to the employer, it would assume the character of salary since it goes into the account of the employer after which it is distributed to the employees.

Supreme Court's Observations: The Apex Court analysed the provisions of section 192 and noted that "any person responsible" for paying any income chargeable under the head "salaries" is alone brought into the dragnet of deduction of tax at source. The person responsible for paying an employee an amount which is to be regarded as the employee's income is only the employer. However, in the present case, the person who is responsible for paying the employee is not the employer at all, but a third party, namely, the customer. Thus, income from tips would be chargeable in the hands of employees as "Income from Other Sources". Since such tips are being received from customers and not from the employer, section 192 would not get attracted.

The Supreme Court observed that section 15 applies when an employee has a vested right to claim any salary from an employer or former employer. However, in the case on hand, there is no vested right on the part of the employee to claim any amount of tips from the employer, since tips are purely voluntary amounts that may or may not be paid by customers for services rendered.

The Supreme Court observed that the amount of tips paid by the employer to the employees had no reference to the contract of employment at all. Tips were received by the employer in a fiduciary capacity as trustee for payments that were received from customers which they disbursed to their employees for service rendered to the customer. There was, therefore, no reference to the contract of employment when these amounts were paid by the employer to the employee.

Therefore, the tips received by the employees could not be regarded as "profits in lieu of salary" in terms of section 17(3). The payment by the employer of tips collected from the customers to the employees would not be a payment made "by or on behalf of" an employer. Such payments would be outside the purview of section 15(b) of the Act.

The Apex Court observed that the person who paid the tip was the customer and not the employer. Even though the amounts were with the employer he had no title to the money and it was held in a fiduciary capacity as trustee for and on behalf of the employees.

Supreme Court's Decision: The Supreme Court observed that contract of employment is not the proximate cause for the receipt of tips by the employee from a customer hence, it would be outside the dragnet of sections 15 and 17 of the Act. Therefore, it held that, in such a case, no liability to deduct tax at source under section 192 arises, and hence, the assessee company cannot be treated as an assessee in default for non-deduction of tax at source from the amount of tips collected and distributed to its employees.

2. Is section 194A applicable in respect of interest on fixed deposits in the name of Registrar General of High Court?

UCO Bank v. Dy. CIT (2014) 369 ITR 335 (Del)

Facts of the case: The assessee-bank accepted ₹ 707.46 lakhs as fixed deposit in the name of Registrar General of the High Court and issued a fixed deposit receipt in compliance with a direction passed by the court in relation to certain proceedings. Subsequently, the Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax issued a show cause notice to the bank for not deducting tax at source on the interest accrued and to show cause as to why it should not be treated as an assessee-in-default under section 201(1)/201(1A). The bank replied that the FDRs in the name of Registrar General of the Court was as a custodian because the actual beneficiary was unknown as the matter was sub judice and tax at source would be deducted when the payment is made to beneficiary as and when it is decided by the court. The Assistant Commissioner, however, passed an order treating the bank as assessee-in-default and raised a demand of ₹ 40.33 lakhs and ₹ 14.20 lakhs under sections 201(1) and 201(1A), respectively. Further, he initiated penalty proceedings under section 271C. The assessee preferred a writ challenging the order passed imposing penal interest and initiation of penalty proceedings.

High Court's Opinion and Decision: The High Court opined that in the normal course, the bank is obliged to deduct tax at source in respect of any credit or payment of interest on deposits made with it. However, in this case, the actual payee is not ascertainable and the person in whose name the interest is credited is not a person liable to pay tax under the Act. The deposits kept with the bank under the orders of the court were, essentially, funds which were in custodia legis, that is, funds in the custody of the court. The interest on that account – although credited in the name of the Registrar General – was also part of funds under the custody of the Court. The Registrar General is not the recipient of the income represented by interest that accrues on the deposits made in his name. The credit of interest is not a credit to the account of a person who is liable to be assessed to tax.

The High Court observed that in the absence of a payee, the machinery provisions for deduction of tax to his credit are ineffective. The expression "payee" under section 194A would mean the recipient of income whose account is maintained by the person paying interest. The Registrar General is neither recipient of the amount credited to his account nor to interest accruing thereon. Therefore, he cannot be considered as a 'payee' for the purposes of section 194A. The credit by the bank in the name of the Registrar General would, thus, not attract the provisions of section 194A.

The High Court was of the view that Circular No.8/2011 dated 14.10.2011 makes an assumption that the litigant depositing the money is the account holder with the bank or is the recipient of the income represented by the interest accruing thereon. This assumption is basically erroneous as the litigant who is asked to deposit the money in Court ceases to have any control or proprietary right over these funds. The person to whom the funds would be paid ultimately is determined by the court order and at that stage, tax would be required to be deducted at source to the credit of the recipient. However, the litigant who deposits the funds cannot be stated to be the recipient of income.

The High Court allowed the writ and set aside the orders passed by the tax authorities.

Note - The CBDT has accepted the aforesaid judgment and accordingly, vide Circular No.23/2015 dated 28.12.2015, clarified that interest on FDRs made in the name of Registrar General of the Court or the depositor of the fund on the directions of the Court, will not be subject to TDS till the matter is decided by the Court. However, once the Court decides the ownership of the money lying in the fixed deposit, the provisions of section 194A will apply to the recipient of the income.*

3. Can payment of interest by Canara Bank to NOIDA be exempted from the requirement of tax deduction at source under section 194A on the ground that the same is a corporation established by or under the Uttar Pradesh Industrial Area Development Act, 1976?

CIT (TDS) and Anr v. Canara Bank [2018] 406 ITR 161 (SC)

Facts of the case: The assessee, New Okhla Industrial Development Authority (NOIDA), was constituted by a notification dated April 17, 1976 issued under section 3 of the Uttar Pradesh Industrial Development Act, 1976. Canara Bank, the respondent, made a payment of Rs. 20.10 crores as interest on deposits to the assessee (NOIDA) for the relevant financial year. The Commissioner of Income-tax (TDS) issued notices to the respondent, Canara Bank, asking for information pertaining to interest paid and for showing cause for not deducting tax at source under section 194A.

Section 194A imposes an obligation on persons such as the respondent to deduct tax at source while making interest payments. However, under section 194A(3)(iii)(f), the Central Government is empowered to notify payments made to a specified class institution(s) for exemption from this requirement. A notification dated October 20, 1970 under section 194A(3)(iii)(f) was issued by the Central Government exempting payments made to "any corporation established by a Central, State or Provincial Act" from the requirement of tax deduction at source.

Issue: The issue under consideration is whether NOIDA is a Corporation established by or under the Uttar Pradesh Industrial Area Development Act, 1976, consequent to which it is eligible for exemption from requirement of tax deduction at source in respect of payment of interest made to it by Canara Bank.

Appellate authorities' view: The Tribunal was of the view that the payment of interest by the bank to NOIDA did not require deduction at source. The further appeal of the revenue authorities to the High Court was dismissed. The High Court held that the assessee is a corporation established by the Uttar Pradesh Industrial Area Development Act, 1976 and is, thus, covered under the exemption provided under section 194A(3)(iii)(f).

Supreme Court's Observations: The Supreme Court explained a 'corporation' as an artificial being created by law having a legal entity entirely separate and distinct from the individuals who compose it with the capacity of continuous existence and succession, notwithstanding changes in its membership. There was no dispute about NOIDA being a corporation and a statutory corporation. The only question was whether it was established by a State legislation and thus covered under the notification dated October 20, 1970.

The revenue authorities argued that NOIDA would not be covered by the notification as it was established under the 1976 Act. The respondents argued that NOIDA was established by the 1976 Act and thus, covered under the notification. Relying on the ratio of Dalco Engineering Pvt. Ltd. v. Shree Satish Prabhakar Padhye [2011] 164 Comp Cas 275 (SC), the Court held that that the phrase "established by or under" is used to denote a statutory corporation established or brought into existence by or under a statute. The establishment of Corporation is by a notification issued by State Government. In the present case, notification has been issued by the State Government in exercise of power of section 3 and the Authority has been constituted.

Supreme Court's Decision: The Supreme Court observed that the Preamble to the 1976 Act itself provides for constitution of an authority. NOIDA has, thus, been established by the 1976 Act and is clearly covered under the Notification dated October 22, 1970. Hence, it is eligible for exemption from tax deduction at source provided under section 194A(3)(iii)(f).

4. Where the assessee fails to deduct tax at source under section 194B in respect of the winnings, which are wholly in kind, can he be deemed as an assessee-in-default under section 201?

CIT v. Hindustan Lever Ltd. (2014) 361 ITR 0001 (Kar.)

Facts of the case: In the present case, the assessee is a company engaged in the business of manufacture and sale of various consumer goods/products. During the previous years relevant to A.Y.2001-02 and A.Y.2002-03, it had conducted certain sales promotion schemes. The assessee advertised the schemes wherein coupons were inserted in packs/containers of their products. Some of those coupons indicated that on purchase of the packs/ containers, they would get prizes, as indicated in coupons. The prizes that were offered were Santro car, Maruti car, gold chains, gold coins, gold tablas, silver coins, emblems, etc. The total amount of prizes distributed valued ₹ 6,51,238 for the A.Y.2001-02 and ₹ 54,73,643 for the A.Y.2002-03.

The Assessing Officer, having received the information about the schemes, sought clarification and also conducted survey of the assessee's business premises under section 133A. The Assessing Officer, thereafter, passed an order dated 3.1.2002, under sections 201(1) and 201(1A) for the A.Y.2001-02 and treated the assessee as an assessee-in-default of its obligation in terms of section 194B. Similar order was passed for the A.Y.2002-03. According to the Assessing Officer, the assessee was obliged to ensure that the tax in respect of the winnings, wholly in kind, was remitted before the winnings were released. Having failed to do so, the proceedings under section 201(1) were initiated. The Assessing Officer held that although the customers did not pay anything extra to receive the prize, nevertheless, they had participated in the scheme by purchasing the products advertised to take a chance at winning the prize. It was further held that what has been paid as prize-in-kind in various schemes conducted by the assessee is a lottery on which the tax was deductible under section 194B. As the assessee neither deducted the tax nor ensured payment thereof before the winnings were released, he treated the assessee as an assessee-in-default. He passed similar order dated 28.3.2002 for the A.Y.2002-03.

Appellate Tribunal's view: The Tribunal held that the schemes conducted by the assessee were not a lottery, as the said expression was understood up to the A.Y.2001-02. The Tribunal observed that the customers did not pay any excess amount for getting coupons indicating winnings in the packs/containers of products they purchased, and, therefore, nothing was paid by them for participating in the scheme. Accordingly, the Tribunal concluded that although there was an element of chance but as no consideration or payment was made by the customers for the purpose of participation in the lottery with the object of winning the prizes, the schemes conducted by the assessee would not fall within the ambit of section 194B.

The Tribunal further held that having regard to the insertion of Explanation below section 2(24)(ix), the scheme conducted by the assessee would be a lottery for the A.Y.2002-03 but nevertheless they accepted the alternate contention that having regard to Circular No. 390, dated August 8, 1984 [See (1984) 149 ITR (St.) 5], there was no obligation on the respondent to deduct tax at source in respect of prizes paid in kind and in the absence of any such obligation, no proceedings under section 201 could be taken against the respondent.

High Court's view: From a bare perusal of section 194B, it is clear that the person responsible for paying to any person any income by way of winnings from any lottery in an amount exceeding ten thousand rupees shall, at the time of payment thereof, deduct income-tax thereon at the rates in force. A combined reading of sections 194B and 201 shows that if any such person fails to "deduct" the whole or any part of the tax or after deducting, fails to pay the tax as required by or under the Act, then such person shall, without prejudice to any other consequences which he may incur, be deemed to be an assessee in default in respect of such tax. The provisions contained in these sections do not cast any duty to deduct tax at source where the winnings are wholly in kind. If the winnings are wholly in kind, as a matter of fact, there cannot be any deduction of tax at source. The word "deduction" employed in this provision postulates a reduction or subtraction of an amount from a gross sum to be paid and payment of the net amount thereafter. Where the winnings are wholly in kind the question of deduction of any sum therefrom does not arise and in that eventuality, the only responsibility, as cast under section 194B, is to ensure that tax is paid by the winner of the prize before the prize or winnings is or are released in his favour.

High Court's Decision: The High Court observed that if the assessee fails to ensure that tax is paid before the winnings are released in favour of the winner, then, section 271C empowers the Joint Commissioner to levy penalty equivalent to the amount of tax not paid, and under section 276B, such non-payment of tax is an offence attracting rigorous imprisonment for a term which shall not be less than three months but which may extend to seven years and with fine. However, the High Court held that proceedings under section 201 cannot be initiated against the assessee.

5. Can the transmission, wheeling and SLDC charges paid by a company engaged in distribution and supply of electricity, under a service contract, to the transmission company be treated as fees for technical services so as to attract TDS provisions under section 194J or in the alternative, under 194C?

Ajmer Vidyut Vitran Nigam Ltd., In re (2013) 353 ITR 640 (AAR)

Facts of the case: In the present case, the applicant is a government company engaged in the business of distribution and supply of electricity to customers in various districts of Rajasthan. The activity of distribution is preceded by the production of electricity and its transmission from the point of production to the point of distribution. The production is by the generating company, which is another entity and transmission to the applicant is through the transmission system network of the transmission company. The transmission company carries the electrical energy to the applicant at the distribution system network of the applicant. The applicant then distributes the energy to the end customers.

The transmission of electricity from the point of generation to the point of distribution of the applicant is termed as "wheeling". The applicant pays transmission and wheeling charges for this wheeling, which it contends are statutory charges. The transmission company also functions as a State Load Dispatch Centre (SLDC), which is responsible for the general co-ordination of production and transmission of electricity to ensure uniform distribution in the State. The applicant pays to the transmission company, SLDC charges, which it claims as statutory in nature, since the levy is in terms of the Electricity Act, 2003.

Applicant's contention: The applicant contended that the above charges were not in the nature of fees for technical services to attract TDS provisions under section 194J, on the following grounds –

(i) The transmission does not involve rendering of any technical services nor were technically qualified staff of the transmission company involved in the transmission of electrical energy;

(ii) The SLDC charges were also mere statutory charges and does not involve rendering of technical services;

(iii) The payment of transmission, wheeling and SLDC charges were in the nature of reimbursement of actual cost and hence, do not generate any income in the hands of the transmission company.

Revenue's contention: The Revenue, on the other hand, was of the view that the transmission of electrical energy from the point of generation to the point of distribution of the applicant involves rendering of technical services and consequently, the applicant was bound to withhold tax. The Revenue supported its view on the basis of the following contentions –

(i) Transmission of electrical energy is a technical service and requires constant involvement of a technical system consisting of sophisticated instruments, constant monitoring and supervision by persons with a technical ability and knowledge to operate and manage the system so as to ensure regular and consistent supply of electricity at the grid voltage at the distribution point of the applicant.

(ii) As regards SLDC charges, the services rendered require the technical support and services of technically qualified staff and therefore they were technical services within the meaning of section 194J.

(iii) The fact that the contract between both the parties is backed by a statutory obligation cannot alter the nature of services rendered.

AAR's Observations: The AAR did not agree with the applicant's contention regarding transmission and wheeling charges not constituting fees for technical services on the ground that no rendering of technical services was involved for maintaining proper and regular transmission of electrical energy. It was also not in agreement with the applicant's argument that the services of technical personnel were not needed for ensuring due and proper transmission of electrical energy from the generation point to the distribution point. The AAR concurred with the Revenue's view that the personnel of the transmission company had to ensure regular and consistent transmission of electrical energy at the grid voltage at the distribution point of the applicant.

AAR's Decision: The AAR, considering the definition of fees for technical services under section 9(1)(vii) and the process involved in proper transmission of electrical energy, held that transmission and wheeling charges paid by the applicant to the transmission company are in the nature of fees for technical services, in respect of which the applicant has to withhold tax thereon under section 194J.

As regards SLDC charges, the AAR opined that the main duty of the SLDC is to ensure integrated operation of the power system in the State for optimum scheduling and dispatch of electricity within the State. The SLDC charges paid appeared to be more of a supervisory charge with a duty to ensure just and proper generation and distribution in the State as a whole. Therefore, such services were not in the nature of technical service to the applicant; Resultantly, it does not attract TDS provisions under section 194J or under section 194C.

6. Can discount given to stamp vendors on purchase of stamp papers be treated as 'commission or brokerage' to attract the provisions for tax deduction under section 194H?

CIT v. Ahmedabad Stamp Vendors Association (2012) 348 ITR 378 (SC)

Issue: The principal issue in this case is whether stamp vendors are agents of the State Government who are being paid commission or brokerage or whether the sale of stamp papers by the Government to the licensed vendors is on "principal-to-principal" basis involving a "contract of sale".

High Court's Observations: On this issue, the Gujarat High Court had in, Ahmedabad Stamp Vendors Association v. Union of India (2012) 348 ITR 378, observed that the crucial question is whether the ownership in the stamp papers passes to the stamp vendor when the treasury officer delivers stamp papers on payment of price less discount. The Gujarat Stamp Supply and Sales Rules, 1987 contemplates that the licensed vendor, while taking delivery of the stamp papers from the Government offices, is purchasing the stamp papers. The Rules also indicate that the discount which the licensed vendor has obtained from the Government is on purchase of the stamp papers.

If the licensed stamp vendors were mere agents of the State Government, no sales tax would have been leviable when the stamp vendors sell the stamp papers to the customers, because it would have been sale by the Government "through" stamp vendors. However, entry 84 in Schedule I to the Gujarat Sales Tax Act, 1969 specifically exempts sale of stamp papers by the licensed vendors from sales-tax. The very basis of the State Legislature enacting such exemption provision in respect of sale of stamp papers by the licensed vendors makes it clear that the sale of stamp papers by the licensed vendors to the customers would have, but for such exemption, been subject to sales tax levy. The question of levy of sales tax arises only because the licensed vendors themselves sell the stamp papers on their own and not as agents of the State Government. Had they been treated as agents of the State Government, there would be no question of levy of sales tax on sale of stamp papers by them, and consequently, there would have been no necessity for any exemption provision in this regard.

Therefore, although the Government has imposed a number of restrictions on the licensed stamp vendors regarding the manner of carrying on the business, the stamp vendors are required to purchase the stamp papers on payment of price less discount on "principal to principal" basis and there is no "contract of agency" at any point of time. The definition of "commission or brokerage" under clause (i) of the Explanation to section 194H indicates that the payment should be received, directly or indirectly, by a person acting on behalf of another person*, inter alia,* for services in the course of buying or selling goods. Therefore, the element of agency is required in case of all services and transactions contemplated by the definition of "commission or brokerage" under Explanation (i) to section 194H. When the licensed stamp vendors take delivery of stamp papers on payment of full price less discount and they sell such stamp papers to the retail customers, neither of the two activities (namely, buying from the Government and selling to the customers) can be termed as service in the course of buying and selling of goods. The High Court, therefore, held that discount on purchase of stamp papers does not fall within the expression "commission or brokerage" to attract the provisions of tax deduction at source under section 194H.

Supreme Court's Decision: The Supreme Court affirmed the above decision of the High Court holding that the given transaction is a sale and the discount given to stamp vendors for purchasing stamps in bulk quantity is in the nature of cash discount and consequently, section 194H has no application in this case.

7. Can incentives given to stockists and distributors by a manufacturing company be treated as "commission" to attract –

   (i) the provisions for tax deduction at source under section 194H; and

   (ii) consequent disallowance under section 40(a)(ia) for failure to deduct tax at source?

CIT v. Intervet India P Ltd (2014) 364 ITR 238 (Bom)

Facts of the case: The assessee-company engaged in manufacture of biological vaccines and animal health care pharmaceutical products, sold the same either through consignment or commission agents or directly through distributors or stockists. During the relevant financial year, it introduced a sales promotion scheme to boost sales by way of product discounts and product campaign. It passed on the incentives to distributors through consignment agents by way of sales credit notes. The Assessing Officer held that as the assessee was paying the stockists/distributors for the services rendered by them for buying and selling goods, on the basis of quantum of sales effected, such payment has to be considered as commission, on which tax was deductible at source under section 194H. Consequently, disallowance under section 40(a)(ia) was attracted for failure to deduct tax at source.

High Court's Observations: The High Court observed that the assessee had undertaken sales promotion by way of product discount scheme under which it offered incentive to the stockists / distributors and dealers. The relationship between the assessee and the distributors / stockists was that of principal to principal. The products were firstly sold to distributors / stockists who in turn resold the goods in the market. No service was offered by the assessee to them except a discount under the product discount scheme/product campaign scheme to buy the assessee's product.

High Court's Decision: The High Court, accordingly, held that the stockists and distributors were not acting on behalf of the assessee and most of the credit was by way of goods on meeting the sales target which could not be said to be a commission within the meaning of the Explanation (i) to section 194H. Accordingly, the High Court affirmed the order of the Tribunal which held that such payment does not attract deduction of tax at source. Consequently, disallowance under section 40(a)(ia) would not be attracted.

8. Can discount given on supply of SIM cards and pre-paid cards by a telecom company to its franchisee be treated as commission to attract the TDS provisions under section 194H?

Bharti Cellular Ltd. v. ACIT (2013) 354 ITR 507 (Cal.)

High Court's Observations: On this issue, the Calcutta High Court observed the Supreme Court ruling in Bhopal Sugar Mills' case (1977) 40 STC 42, wherein it was held that the true relationship between the parties has to be gathered from the nature of the contract, its terms and conditions. The terminology used by the parties is not decisive of the said relationship.

The High Court, on perusal of the agreement between the assessee-telecom company and the franchisees, observed that –

(1) the property in the start-up pack and pre-paid coupons, even after transfer and delivery to the franchisee, remained with the assessee-telecom company;

(2) the franchisee really acted as a facilitator and/or instrument of providing services by the assessee-telecom company to the ultimate subscriber;

(3) the franchisee had no free choice to sell the pre-paid coupons and sim cards and everything including the selling price was regulated by the assessee-telecom company;

(4) the rate at which the franchisee sells to the retailers is also regulated and fixed by the assessee-telecom company.

In the real sense, the franchisee acted on behalf of the assessee-telecom company for selling start-up pack, prepaid recharge coupons to the customer. Therefore, the relationship between the assessee and the franchisee is essentially that of principal and agent, though the nomenclature used is "franchisee". The franchisees were, thus, agents of the assessee, getting a fixed percentage of commission, in the form of discount.

High Court's Decision: Considering the above, the High Court held that there is an indirect payment of commission, in the form of discount, by the assessee-telecom company to the franchisee. Therefore, the assessee is liable to deduct tax at source on such commission as per the provisions of section 194H.

Note - Similar ruling was pronounced by the Kerala High Court in Vodafone Essar Cellular Ltd. v. ACIT (TDS) (2011) 332 ITR 255, wherein it was held that there was no sale of goods involved as claimed by the assessee-telecom company and the entire charges collected by the assessee from the distributors at the time of delivery of SIM cards or recharge coupons were only for rendering services to ultimate subscribers. The assessee was accountable to the subscribers for failure to render prompt services pursuant to connections given by the distributor. Therefore, the distributor only acted as a middleman on behalf of the assessee for procuring and retaining customers and consequently, the discount given to him was within the meaning of commission on which tax was deductible under section 194H.*

9. Can the difference between the published price and the minimum fixed commercial price be treated as additional special commission in the hands of the agents of an airline company to attract TDS provisions under section 194H, where the airline company has no information about the exact rate at which tickets are ultimately sold by the agents?

CIT v. Qatar Airways (2011) 332 ITR 253 (Bom.)

Facts of the case: In this case, the airline company sold tickets to the agents at a minimum fixed commercial price. The agents were permitted to sell the tickets at a higher price, however, up to the maximum of published price. Commission at the rate of 9% of published price was payable to the agents of the airline company, on which tax was deducted under section 194H. The issue under consideration is whether the difference between the published price and the minimum fixed commercial price amounts to additional special commission in the hands of the agents to attract the provisions of section 194H.

High Court's Observations: On this issue, the Bombay High Court observed that the difference between the published price and minimum fixed commercial price cannot be taken as additional special commission in the hands of the agents, since the published price was the maximum price and airline company had granted permission to the agents to sell the tickets at a price lower than the published price. In order to deduct tax at source, the exact income in the hands of the agents must necessarily be ascertainable by the airline company. However, the airline company would have no information about the exact rate at which the tickets were ultimately sold by its agents, since the agents had been given discretion to sell the tickets at any rate between the minimum fixed commercial price and the published price. It would be impracticable and unreasonable to expect the airline company to get a feedback from its numerous agents in respect of each ticket sold.

High Court's Decision: Thus, tax at source was not deductible on the difference between the actual sale price and the minimum fixed commercial price, even though the amount earned by the agent over and above minimum fixed commercial price would be taxable as income in his hands.

Note - It may be noted that in the case of CIT v. Singapore Airlines Ltd. (2009) 319 ITR 29, the billing analysis statement clearly indicated the extra commission in the form of special or supplementary commission that was paid to the travel agent with reference to the deal code. Therefore, in that case, the Delhi High Court, held that the supplementary commission in the hands of the agent was ascertainable by the airline company and hence the airline company was liable to deduct tax at source on the same under section 194H.

10. Are the provisions of tax deduction at source under section 194H attracted in respect of amount retained by accredited advertising agencies out of remittance of sale proceeds of "airtime" purchased from Doordarshan and sold to customers?

Director, Prasar Bharati v. CIT [2018] 403 ITR 161 (SC)

Facts of the Case: The assessee, Prasar Bharati Doordarshan Kendra, functions under the Ministry of Information and Broadcasting, Government of India and runs the television channel called Doordarshan. For the purpose of telecasting advertisements of consumer companies on its channel, the assessee entered into agreements with advertising agencies, on the basis of the application made by such agencies to the assessee for gaining "accredited status". The agencies were to give minimum annual business of Rs.6 lakhs to the assessee in a financial year and furnish bank guarantee for a sum of Rs.3 lakhs. The agreement provided that the accredited agencies would retain 15% by way of commission out of the amount collected from customers and paid to the assessee. The agencies were to retain the commission earned and not to part with the same either directly or indirectly to any other person.

In the relevant assessment years, the agencies retained Rs.4.87 crores towards commission as per the terms of the agreement. The Assessing Officer was of the view that such retention by the agencies were in the nature of "commission" under section 194H, and the assessee was in default under section 201(1) as it had failed to deduct tax at source on such commission retained.

The assessee, however, contended that its relationship with accredited agencies were on "principal-to-principal" basis since the accredited agencies purchased airtime from the assessee and then sold it in the market for advertisement to their customer after retaining 15% of the said sum. Therefore, the assessee contended the sum retained is not 'commission' to attract the provisions of section 194H.

Issue: The issue under consideration is whether the amount retained by the accredited agencies is in the nature of commission to attract the provisions of section 194H.

High Court's Observations: The Kerala High Court took the view that such retentions were in the nature of commission under section 194H. The assessee was, thus, under a statutory obligation to deduct the tax at source.

Supreme Court's Observations: The Supreme Court observed that the definition of "commission or brokerage" under section 194H is inclusive and covers any payment received or receivable directly or indirectly by a person acting on behalf of another person for the services rendered. The agreement itself uses the expression "commission" in all relevant clauses. The payment clause is free of ambiguity and the terms of the agreement indicate that both parties intended that the amount to be paid/retained is in the nature of commission. It is for this reason that the parties used the expression "commission" in the agreement. The relationship in question was a pure agency arrangement because the agency acted on behalf of the assessee and the actions of the agency were binding on the assessee. Moreover, the agreement itself contained a clause for deduction of tax at source on trade discount.

Supreme Court's Decision: The Supreme Court, thus, held that the amount retained by the accredited advertising agencies is commission and consequently, the provisions of tax deduction at source under Section 194H are attracted. Consequently, for failure to deduct tax at source under section 194H, the assessee would be treated as an assessee-in-default.

Note - It may be noted that the CBDT has, vide Circular No.5/2016 dated 29.2.2016, clarified that TDS under section 194H is not attracted on retentions by an advertising agency (for booking or procuring of or canvassing for advertisements) from payments remitted to television channels/newspaper companies. The CBDT has issued this clarification on the basis of the Allahabad High Court ruling in Jagran Prakashan Ltd.'s case and Delhi High Court ruling in Living Media Ltd.'s case that the relationship between the media company and advertising agency is that of a "principal to principal". However, the Supreme Court, in this case, has distinguished from the Allahabad High Court ruling, on the basis of the fact that an agreement has been entered into by Doordarshan with the accredited agencies specifically appointing them as agents; and the agreement also contains a specific clause for deduction of tax at source on trade discount, which is in the nature of commission. Accordingly, the Supreme Court held that the relationship between Doordarshan and its accredited agencies is that of a principal and agent, consequent to which TDS provisions under section 194H would get attracted in respect of retentions by accredited advertising agencies from payments remitted to Doordarshan. Therefore, the applicability or otherwise of the CBDT Circular will depend on the facts of the specific case.

11. Are landing and parking charges paid by an airline company to Airports Authority of India in the nature of rent to attract tax deduction at source under section 194-I?

Japan Airlines Co. Ltd. v. CIT / CIT v. Singapore Airlines Ltd. (2015) 377 ITR 372 (SC)

Facts of the case: The assessees in both the cases are foreign airlines. Being international airlines, they fly their aircrafts to several destinations across the world, including New Delhi. For landing the aircrafts and parking thereof at the Indira Gandhi International Airport (IGIA), New Delhi, the Airports Authority of India (AAI) levies charges on these airlines. The airlines are deducting tax @2% under section 194C for payment of landing and parking charges in respect of its aircrafts to AAI and remitting the same. However, the income-tax authorities are of the view that tax is to be deducted at the higher rate applicable under section 194-I (currently, 10%).

Issue under consideration: The issue under consideration is whether landing and parking charges paid by the airline companies to AAI is in the nature of rent to attract tax deduction at source under section 194-I.

Delhi High Court's view vis-a-vis Madras High Court's view: On this issue, contrary views were expressed by the Delhi High Court in Japan Airlines Co. Ltd.'s case and the Madras High Court in Singapore Airlines Ltd.'s case.

The Delhi High Court observed that “rent” as defined in section 194-I has a wider meaning than rent in common parlance and includes any agreement or arrangement for use of land. The Delhi High Court further observed that when the wheels of the aircraft coming into an airport touch the surface of the airfield, use of the land of the airport immediately begins. Similarly, for parking the aircraft in that airport, again, there is use of the land. Therefore, the Delhi High Court, following its own judgment in the case of United Airlines v. CIT (2006) 287 ITR 281 held that landing and parking fee were “rent” within the meaning of the provisions of section 194-I, as they were payments for the use of the land of the airport.

The Madras High Court, however, expressed a contrary view on the above issue in CIT v. Singapore Airlines Ltd. (2012) 209 Taxman 581 (Mad.). The Court has observed that only if the agreement or arrangement has the characteristics of lease or sub-lease or tenancy for systematic use of the land, the charges levied would fall for consideration under the definition of 'rent' for the purpose of section 194-I.

The Madras High Court further observed that the principles guiding the levy of charges on landing and take-off show that the charges are with reference to the number of facilities provided by the Airport Authority of India in compliance with the international protocols and the charges are not made for any specified land usage or area allotted. The charges are for various facilities offered to meet the requirement of passenger safety and for safe landing and parking of the aircraft. Thus, the charges levied are, at the best, in the nature of fee for the services offered rather than in the nature of rent for the use of the land.

Therefore, the levy of charges, which is not only for the use of land, but for maintenance of various services, including technical services involving navigation, would not automatically bring the transaction and the charges within the meaning of either lease or sub-lease or tenancy or any other agreement or arrangement in the nature of lease or tenancy so that the charges would fall within the meaning of ‘rent’ as appearing in Explanation to section 194-I.

Thus, the Madras High Court held that going by the nature of services offered by the AAI in respect of landing and parking charges, collected from the assessee, there is no ground to accept that the payment would fit in with the definition of “rent” as given under section 194-I.

Supreme Court’s Observations: The Apex Court considered the moot question as to whether landing and take-off facilities on the one hand and parking facility on the other hand would tantamount to use of land. After due consideration of the views of the Delhi High Court and the Madras High Court on this issue, the Supreme Court concluded that the Madras High Court’s view is justified on the basis of sound rationale and reasoning.

The Supreme Court observed that the charges which are fixed by the AAI for landing and take-off services as well as for parking of aircrafts are not for the "use of the land". These charges are for services and facilities offered in connection with the aircraft operation at the airport which include providing of air traffic services, ground safety services, aeronautical communication facilities, installation and maintenance of navigational aids and meteorological services at the airport.

There are various international protocols which mandate all authorities manning and managing these airports to construct the airport of desired standards which are stipulated in the protocols. The services which are required to be provided by these authorities, like AAI, are aimed at passengers' safety as well as for safe landing and parking of the aircrafts. Therefore, it is not mere "use of the land". On the contrary, it encompasses all the facilities that are to be compulsorily offered by the AAI in tune with the requirements of the protocol.

For example, runways are not constructed like any ordinary roads. Special technology is required for the construction of these runways for smooth landing and take-off of the aircrafts. Specialised kind of orientation and dimensions are needed for these runways which are prescribed with precision and those standards are to be adhered to. Further, there has to be proper runway lighting, runway safety area, runway markings, etc. Technical specifications for such lighting, safety area and markings are stipulated which have to be provided. The technical specifications keep in mind the basic fact, namely, on landing, the aircraft is light on fuel and usually less than 5% of the weight of the aircraft touches the runway in one go. On take-off, the aircraft is heavy but as the aircraft accelerates, the weight gradually moves from the wheels to the wings. The technological aspects of these runways have been emphasized in some detail to highlight the precision in designing and engineering which goes into making these runways fool proof for safety purposes. The purpose is to show that the AAI is providing all these facilities for landing and take-off of an aircraft and in this whole process, "use of the land" pales into insignificance.

The Supreme Court observed that the charges levied on air-traffic includes landing charges, lighting charges, approach and aerodrome control charges, aircraft parking charges, aerobridge charges, hangar charges, passenger service charges, cargo charges, etc. Thus, when the airlines pay for these charges, treating such charges as charges for "use of the land" would tantamount to adopting a totally simplistic approach which is far away from the reality.

Supreme Court's Decision: The Supreme Court opined that the substance behind such charges has to be considered and when the issue is viewed from this angle, keeping the full and larger picture in mind, it becomes very clear that the charges are not for use of the land per se and, therefore, it cannot be treated as "rent" within the meaning of section 194-I. The Supreme Court, thus, concurred with the view taken by the Madras High Court in Singapore Airlines case and overruled the view taken by the Delhi High Court in United Airlines/Japan Airlines case.

The Supreme Court was, however, not in agreement with the Madras High Court's view that the words "any other agreement or arrangement for the use of any land or any building" have to be read ejusdem generis and it should take its colour from the earlier portion of the definition, namely, "lease, sub-lease and tenancy", thereby, limiting the ambit of the words "any other agreement or arrangement". The Supreme Court observed that this reasoning was not correct. A bare reading of the definition of "rent" contained in Explanation to section 194-I would make it clear that in the first place, the payment, by whatever name called, under any lease, sub-lease, tenancy is to be treated as "rent". This is rent as understood in the traditional sense. However, the second part is independent of the first part which gives a much wider scope to the term "rent". Accordingly, whenever payment is made for use of any land or any building by any other agreement or arrangement, that is also to be treated as "rent". Once such a payment is made for use of land or building under any other agreement or arrangement, such agreement or arrangement gives the definition of “rent” a very wide connotation. The Supreme Court observed that the interpretation of the Delhi High Court appears to be correct to that extent i.e., to the extent that the scope of the definition of rent under section 194-I is very wide and not limited to what is understood as rent in common parlance; though the Delhi High Court did not apply this definition correctly to the present case as it failed to notice that in substance the charges paid by these airlines are not for "use of land" but for other facilities and services wherein the use of the land was only a minor and insignificant aspect. Thus, the Supreme Court was of the considered view that the Delhi High Court did not correctly appreciate the nature of charges that are paid by the airlines as landing and parking charges, in the sense, it did not appreciate that such charges were not, in substance, for use of land but for various other facilities extended by the Airports Authority of India to the airlines.

12. Is payment made for use of passive infrastructure facility such as mobile towers subject to tax deduction under section 194C or section 194-I?

Indus Towers Ltd v. CIT (2014) 364 ITR 114 (Del)

Facts of the case: The assessee owned a network of telecom towers and infrastructure services which were let out to major telecom operators in the country. Under section 197, the assessee sought for lower tax deduction under section 194C for the financial year 2013-14 at 0.5% and whereas the Assessing Officer issued a certificate under section 197 for lower tax deduction at 2.5% under section 194-I. The assessee filed a writ before the Delhi High Court. The Court directed the assessee to prefer a revision petition before the Commissioner of Income-tax.

The Commissioner of Income-tax rejected the contention of the assessee for applying section 194C and upheld the order of the Assessing Officer applying section 194-I, on the ground that the mobile operators had the right to install the equipment on the tower owned by the assessee, which tantamounts to use of the land or telecommunication site and the tower owned by the assessee. The assessee once again preferred a writ before the High Court.

Assessee’s Contentions: The assessee explained that its responsibility is to provide the entire passive infrastructure service with the aid of equipment belonging to it which is fully operated, controlled and managed by it. The customers do not have access, control or possession over the towers, sites or designated areas which are limited to rectification or maintenance of any defects in the equipments installed by them. The assessee, further, contended that its customers do not pay for any leasing rights but only for the services. Therefore, the provisions of section 194-I would not be attracted in this case.

High Court's Observations: The High Court observed that it was the intention of the parties to use the technical and specialized equipment maintained by the assessee. The infrastructure was given for the use of mobile operators. The towers were the neutral platform without which the mobile operators could not operate. Each mobile operator has to carry out this activity, by necessarily renting premises and installing the same equipment. The dominant intention was the use of equipment or plant or machinery and the use of premises was only incidental.

High Court's Decision: The High Court held that the submission of the assessee that the transaction is not "renting" is incorrect. Also, the Revenue's contention that the transaction is primarily "renting of land" is also incorrect. The underlying object of the arrangement was the use of machinery, plant or equipment i.e., the passive infrastructure and it is incidental that it was necessary to house the equipment in some premises. It directed that tax deduction be made at 2% as per section 194-I(a), the rate applicable for payment made for use of plant and machinery.

13. Is the assessee-company engaged in refining, distribution and sale of petroleum products, liable to deduct tax under section 194C or under section 194-I, in respect of payment made to the carrier engaged for road transport of bulk petroleum products?

CIT v. Indian Oil Corporation [2019] 410 ITR 106 (Uttarakhand)

Facts of the Case: The assessee-company was engaged in refining crude oil and storing, distributing and selling the petroleum products. The assessee-company required tank trucks for road transportation of bulk petroleum products from its various storage points to customers or other storage points. It entered into an agreement with another company for the said purpose.

Upon scrutinizing the contract, the Assessing Officer came to the conclusion that the assessee was liable to deduct tax under section 194-I as the carrier is being hired and being paid for full time unlike in the case of a works contract. However, the Commissioner (Appeals) and the Appellate Tribunal held that tax was deductible under section 194C not under section 194-I.

Relevant provision of the Income-tax Act, 1961: Section 194-I provides for deduction of tax at source on payment of rent. As per clause (i) of the Explanation to section 194-I, "rent" means payment, by whatever name called, for, inter alia, use of any plant. Section 194C deals with deduction of tax at source in respect of payment made to a contractor for carrying out any work. Clause (iv) of Explanation to section 194C defines "work" to include carriage of goods or passengers by any mode of transport other than by railways.

Issue: The issue under consideration is whether the assessee-company is liable to deduct tax under section 194C or under section 194-I on payment made to the carrier engaged for road transport of bulk petroleum products.

High Court's Observations: Upon perusing the terms of the contract, the High Court observed that the parties understood the agreement as one where the carrier would be paid transport charges, and that too, for the shortest route travelled by it in the course of transporting the goods of the assessee. The contract did not require payment of idle charges and it was clear that there was no entitlement to any payment other than the actual transportation of the goods. Hence, the carrier was not being hired for full time.

The carrier under the contract was undoubtedly obliged to maintain the requisite number of trucks of a particular type subject to various restrictions and conditions. However, the carrier was under the obligation to operate the trucks for the specific purpose of transporting the goods belonging to the assessee.

High Court's Decision: The High Court held that, even after amendment to the Explanation under section 194-I to include within its scope, payment for use of plant, the case could not fall within its ambit. The contract is one for transpotation of goods and, therefore, is a contract of work within the meaning of section 194C and not section 194-I.

14. In respect of a co-owned property, would the threshold limit mentioned in section 194-I for non-deduction of tax at source apply for each co-owner separately or is it to be considered for the complete amount of rent paid to attract liability to deduct tax at source?

CIT v. Senior Manager, SBI (2012) 206 Taxman 607 (All.)

Facts of the case: In the present case, the assessee was paying rent for the leased premises occupied. The said premise was co-owned and the share of each co-owner was definite and ascertainable. Also, the assessee made payment to each co-owner separately by way of cheque. The assessee did not deduct tax at source under section 194-I stipulating that the payment made to each co-owner was less than the minimum threshold mentioned in the said section (now, ₹ 1,80,000) and therefore, no liability to deduct tax at source on the rent so paid is attracted, though the whole rent taken together exceeds the said threshold limit.

Revenue's contentions: The Revenue contended that since the premises let out to the assessee had not been divided/partitioned by metes and bounds, it cannot be said that any specified portion let out to the assessee was owned by a particular person. Therefore, the assessee had to deduct tax at source on the rent so paid assessing the co-owners as association of persons and the threshold limit mentioned in section 194-I was to be seen in respect of the entire rent amount. Hence, the Revenue was of the view that assessee was liable to deduct tax on the payment of rent and interest would be leviable on failure to deduct such tax under section 201.

High Court's Decision: Considering the above mentioned facts, the Allahabad High Court held that, since the share of each co-owner is definite and ascertainable, they cannot be assessed as an association of persons as per section 26. The income from such property is to be assessed in the individual hands of the co-owners. Therefore, it is not necessary that there should be a physical division of the property by metes and bounds to attract the provisions of section 26.

Therefore, in the present case, since the payment of rent is made to each co-owner by way of separate cheque and their share is definite, the threshold limit mentioned in section 194-I has to be seen separately for each co-owner. Hence, the assessee would not be liable to deduct tax on the same and no interest under section 201 is leviable.

15. Can the payment made by an assessee engaged in transportation of building material and transportation of goods to contractors for hiring dumpers, be treated as rent for machinery or equipment to attract provisions of tax deduction at source under section 194-I?

Facts of the case: In this case, the assessee was engaged in the business of transportation of building material, salt, black trap, iron, etc. During the relevant previous year, the assessee made payment for hiring of dumpers and deducted tax at source at the rate under section 194C applicable for sub-contracts which, according to the Assessing Officer, was not correct as the assessee had taken dumpers on hire and such payments were governed under section 194-I. The Assessing Officer, accordingly, held that the assessee had short deducted tax at source and passed an order under section 201(1) holding the assessee to be an assessee-in-default.

High Court's Observations: The High Court observed that the assessee had given contracts to the parties for the transportation of goods and had not taken machinery and equipment on rent. The Court observed that the transactions being in the nature of contracts for shifting of goods from one place to another would be covered as works contracts, thereby attracting the provisions of section 194C.

High Court's Decision: Since the assessee had given sub-contracts for transportation of goods and not for the renting out of machinery or equipment, such payments could not be termed as rent paid for the use of machinery and the provisions of section 194-I would, therefore, not be applicable.

Note - Similar ruling was pronounced by the Gujarat High Court on an identical issue in CIT (TDS) v. Swayam Shipping Services (P) Ltd. (2011) 339 ITR 647.

16. Would transaction charges paid by the members of the stock exchange for availing fully automated online trading facility, being a facility provided by the stock exchange to all its members, constitute fees for technical services to attract the provisions of tax deduction at source under section 194J?

CIT v. Kotak Securities Ltd (2016) 383 ITR 1 (SC)

Facts of the case: The assessee company was engaged in the business of share broking, depositories, mobilisation of deposits and marketing public issues. Being a member of the Bombay Stock Exchange (BSE), it made payment to the Stock Exchange by way of transaction charges in respect of fully automated online trading facility and other facilities. These services are available to all the members of the stock exchange in respect of every transaction that is entered into. Revenue contended that tax is deductible at source under section 194J considering such transaction charges as "fees for technical services".

High Court's Decision: The Bombay High Court held that the transaction charges paid by a member of the BSE to the stock exchange to transact business of sale and purchase of shares amounts to payment of a "fee for technical services" and hence, tax is deductible at source under section 194J.

Supreme Court's Observations: The Apex Court made the following observations:

- The services provided by the stock exchange are available to all members in respect of every transaction that is entered into. There is nothing special, exclusive or customized in the service that is rendered by the stock exchange.
- A member who wants to conduct his daily business in the stock exchange has no option but to avail such services. Each and every transaction by a member involves the use of such services provided by the stock exchange for which the member is required to pay transaction charge based on the transaction value besides charges for the membership of the stock exchange.
- Technical services like managerial and consultancy service are in the nature of specialised services made available by the service provider to cater to the special needs of the customer-user as may be felt necessary. It is the above feature that would distinguish or identify a service provider from a facility offered.
- However, there is no exclusivity in the services rendered by the stock exchange and each and every member has to avail such service in the normal course of trading in securities in the stock exchange.

Supreme Court's Decision: The Apex Court, accordingly, held that the service provided by the BSE for which transaction charges are paid failed to satisfy the test of specialized, exclusive and individual requirement of the user or the consumer who may approach the service provider for such assistance or service.

Therefore, the transaction charges paid to BSE by its members are not for technical services but are in the nature of payments made for facilities provided by the stock exchange. Such payments would, therefore, not attract the provisions of tax deduction at source under section 194J.

17. Is tax is required to be deducted under section 195 on the demurrage charges paid to a foreign shipping company which is governed by section 172 for the purpose of levy and recovery of tax?

CIT v. V.S. Dempo & Co P Ltd (2016) 381 ITR 303 (Bom) (FB)

Facts of the case: In the present case, the assessee, being a company engaged in the business of mining and export of processed iron ore as also in construction business, claimed demurrage charges paid to a foreign shipping company on which no tax was deducted at source under section 195 as deductible expenditure. Since tax was not deducted at source under section 195, the Assessing Officer, in view of provisions of section 40(a)(i), disallowed the claim of expenditure in respect of such demurrage charges paid.

High Court's Observations: The High Court took note of the Tribunal's observation that section 40(a)(i) would apply only when there is an obligation to deduct tax at source. The Tribunal placed reliance upon the CBDT Circular No. 723 dated September 19, 1995 to support its conclusion that there was no obligation to deduct tax at source in respect of payment made towards demurrage charges to non-resident shipping company falling within the scope of section 172. The Revenue did not dispute that section 172 applied in the present case. Section 172 is a charging as well as machinery provision in respect of non-resident shipping companies. It provides for determination and collection of tax. Thus, no obligation to deduct at source under section 195 would arise in respect of payment of demurrage charges to such companies.

The High Court also noted that section 172 is a complete code that applies to non-resident Indians and section 195 is part of recovery provision under the Income-tax Act, 1961.

The provisions of section 172 would apply notwithstanding anything contained in the other provision of this Act, for the purpose of the levy and recovery of tax in the case of any ship, belonging to or chartered by a non-resident which carries passengers, etc. shipped at a port in India. Since section 172(1) begins with a non-obstante clause, it would prevail over other provisions of the Act including section 195. Thus, the provisions contained thereunder would take care of the manner of determination of income from shipping business of non-residents as well as the levy and recovery of tax thereon.

High Court's Decision: The High Court, accordingly, held that since section 172 dealing with shipping business of non-residents contains a non-obstante clause and applies both for the purpose of the levy and recovery of tax in the case of any ship carrying passengers etc., belonging to or chartered by a non-resident and shipping at a port in India, there would be no obligation on the payer-assessee to deduct the tax at source under section 195 on payment of demurrage charges to the non-resident shipping company.

18. Is payment made to an overseas agent, who did not perform any service in India, liable for tax deduction at source?

DIT (International Taxation) v. Wizcraft International Entertainment (P) Ltd (2014) 364 ITR 227 (Bom)

Facts of the case: The assessee, an event management company, engaged the services of an agent to bring artistes to India. The assessee-company (i) paid commission to overseas agent; (ii) reimbursed the expenses in connection with the visit of the artistes in India; and (iii) paid fees to the artistes in India. The assessee-company deducted tax at source on the fees paid to the international artistes in India but did not deduct tax at source on the commission paid to the agent and on the reimbursement of expenses incurred in India by the artistes.

Assessing Officer's view vis-à-vis Commissioner (Appeals) view: The Assessing Officer contended that the payments made by the assessee including the payment made by way of commission to the agent and payment for reimbursement of expenses in connection with the visit of the artistes to India are liable for tax deduction at source. The Commissioner (Appeals) was of the view that expenses incurred and reimbursed do not constitute income derived by the artistes from their personal activities, so as to be taxable under Article 18 of the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement between India and UK; and hence, the same is not liable for deduction of tax at source.

Issue: The issue under consideration before the High Court was with regard to deduction of tax on commission paid to overseas agent who never took part in the events organized in India and amount paid as reimbursement of expenses incurred on travelling of artistes.

High Court's Observations: The High Court observed that the assessee has deducted tax on the payments made to artistes for the services rendered in India. In so far as reimbursement of expenses is concerned, it has been verified with supporting documents that it was towards their air travel on which no tax was required to be deducted. With regard to the payment of commission, the agent did not act as a performing artist or entertainer. He was concerned only with the services rendered outside India. Thus, the Tribunal had recorded the finding of fact that the income of the agent did not arise from the personal activities in the contracting status of an entertainer or artist. He only contacted the artistes and negotiated with them for performance in India in terms of the authority given by the assessee. Hence, the commission paid to the overseas agent was not liable to tax in India. Consequently, there was no obligation for deducting tax at source at the time of making payment to the overseas agent.

High Court's Decision: The High Court, therefore, affirmed the decision of the Tribunal and Commissioner (Appeals) holding that the service rendered by the agent was outside India and hence, was not chargeable to tax in India. Thus, the requirement for deducting tax at source under section 195 on such payment does not arise.

19. Is interest under section 201(1A) attracted even in a case where non-deduction of tax at source was under a bona fide belief that tax was not deductible and the default was not willful?

Sun Outsourcing Solutions Private Limited v. CIT (Appeals) [2018] 407 ITR 480 (T&AP)

Facts of the Case: The assessee is a private limited company engaged in the business of software development with its office in Hyderabad and branch office in London. In the course of executing software projects in the U.K., the assessee had deputed some employees from Hyderabad to London and it had also employed local personnel (NRIs) in the U. K. The assessee did not deduct tax at source on the allowances paid to the staff deputed to the U. K. and the salary payments made to the local personnel engaged in the U. K.

The Assessing Officer charged interest on payments made to staff deputed to the U. K. and on salaries paid to the personnel engaged in the U.K. under section 201(1A). The first appellate authority set aside the demand raised under section 201(1A) with respect to non-deduction of tax at source from payments made to the non-resident consultants working abroad. However, it upheld the order of the Assessing Officer with respect to non-deduction of tax at source on allowances paid to Indian residents deputed to work in the U. K.

The assessee contended that since it was under a bona fide impression that the amounts paid to its employees were not taxable, it did not deduct tax on such payment. There was no malice or mens rea on its part, and hence, the assessee was of the view that interest under section 201(1A) should not be attracted.

Relevant provision of the Income-tax Act, 1961: Under section 201(1), if any person, including an employer, who is required to deduct tax, does not deduct or does not pay or after so deducting fails to pay, the whole or any part of the tax, as required by or under the Act, such person shall, without prejudice to any other consequences which he may incur, be deemed to be an assessee in default in respect of such tax. Under section 201(1A), such person is liable to pay simple interest at the rate specified therein for failure to deduct tax or remit tax within the prescribed time after deduction.

Under section 221(1), penalty is attracted where an assessee is in default or is deemed to be in default for making payment of tax. However, the second proviso to section 221(1) provides that where the assessee proves to the satisfaction of the Assessing Officer that the default was for good and sufficient reasons, no penalty would be leviable.

Issue: The issue under consideration is whether interest under section 201(1A) is attracted even in a case where non-deduction of tax at source was under a bona fide belief that tax was not deductible and the default was not willful

High Court's Observations: The High Court observed that section 201(1A) was automatically attracted for failure to deduct tax at source on the payments made. Only in case of penalty under section 221, there is a provision for non-levy where the assessee proves that the default was for good and sufficient reasons. Unlike section 221, section 201(1A) does not require proof of willful default. Even if the assessee was bona fide in not making such deduction, interest was nevertheless payable. Therefore, for levying interest under section 201(1A), mens rea or willful conduct is wholly irrelevant.

High Court's Decision: The High Court, accordingly, held that since the company had failed to deduct tax on the payments made to its employees, being Indian residents deputed to work in the U.K., section 201(1A) is automatically attracted; even if such non-deduction was due to the bona fide belief that tax is not deductible in such case, the company is, nevertheless, liable to pay interest under section 201(1A).

20. Can items of finished products from ship breaking activity which are usable as such be treated as "Scrap" to attract provisions for tax collection at source under section 206C?

Facts of the case: The assessee-company, engaged in ship breaking activity, sold old and used plates, wood etc. It did not produce any document or papers to show collection of tax at source on sale of such items and payment thereof to the credit of the Central Government nor was certificate in Form No.27C produced. The Assessing Officer observed that such items were in the nature of scrap and therefore, the assessee was under an obligation to collect tax at source from the buyers of scrap. Accordingly, he raised a demand under section 201(1) and interest under section 201(1A). The assessee claimed that such items are usable as such, and are hence not 'scrap' to attract the provisions for collection of tax at source.

Appellate Authorities' views: The Commissioner (Appeals) observed that the assessee was engaged in ship breaking activity and the products obtained from the activity were finished products which constituted sizable chunk of production done by the ship breakers. The Commissioner (Appeals) agreed with the assessee that such products though commercially known as 'scrap' were definitely not "waste and scrap". He further agreed with the contention of the assessee that the items in question were usable as such and, therefore, do not fall within the definition of "scrap" as given in clause (b) of Explanation to section 206C(1).

The Tribunal firstly recorded a list of items sold by the assessee from the ship breaking activity. It found that the assessee collected and paid tax, for seven items, but did not collect tax at source on certain items viz. old and used plates; non-excisable (exempted) goods like wood etc. It observed that the 'waste and scrap' must be from manufacture or mechanical working of material which is definitely not usable as such because of breakage, cutting up, wear and other reasons. Since the assessee is engaged in ship breaking activity, these items/products are finished products obtained from such activity which are usable as such and hence, are not 'waste and scrap' though commercially known as scrap. Accordingly, the Tribunal also decided the issue in favour of the assessee.

High Court's Decision: The High Court concurred with the views of the Tribunal and held that any material which is usable as such would not fall within the ambit of the expression 'scrap' as defined in clause (b) of the Explanation to section 206C.

21. Is levy of interest under section 234B attracted in a case where the assessment order does not contain any specific direction for payment of interest, but is accompanied by form ITNS 150 containing a calculation of interest payable on tax assessed?

CIT v. Bhagat Construction Co (P) Ltd (2016) 383 ITR 9 (SC)

Facts of the case: The assessment order passed did not contain any direction for the payment of interest under section 234B. The appellate order also simply stated that interest is payable under section 234B, without any further substantiation. The amount of interest payable under section 234B was contained in the Income-tax Computation Form or 'Form for Assessment of Tax/Refund (I.T.N.S 150)'.

Apex Court's Observations: The Apex Court observed that the facts of the present case are squarely covered by the three judges' bench decision of this court in the case of Kalyankumar Ray v. CIT (1991) 191 ITR 634, wherein it was held that the Form I.T.N.S 150 is also a form for determination of tax payable and when it is signed or initialled by the Assessing Officer, it is certainly an order in writing by the Assessing Officer determining the tax payable within the meaning of section 143(3). The said form also contains the calculation of interest payable on the tax assessed. This form must, therefore, be treated as part of the assessment order.

The Supreme Court further observed that the provisions of section 234B are attracted the moment an assessee liable to pay advance tax has failed to pay such tax or the advance tax paid by him is less than 90% of the assessed tax. The assessee, thus, becomes liable to pay simple interest at 1% for every month or part of the month.

Supreme Court's Decision: The Apex Court, accordingly, held that the levy of interest under section 234B is automatic when the conditions specified therein are satisfied and the assessment order is accompanied by the prescribed form containing the calculation of interest payable.

It consists of a number of members appointed by the Central Government for the performance of such duties, as may be entrusted to the Board from time to time. It is functioning under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Finance. The CBDT, besides being the highest executive authority, exercises control and supervision over all officers of the Income-tax Department and is authorised to exercise certain powers conferred upon it by the Income-tax Act, 1961. In particular, it has the powers, subject to the control and approval of the Central Government to make any rules, from time to time for the proper administration of the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

All the rules under the Act are framed by the CBDT under section 295 and placed before the Parliament. In addition to the general power of making rules and of superintendence, the Board has been given specific powers on several matters.

(4) Appointment and Control of Income-tax Authorities [Sections 117 & 118]

(i) Section 117 empowers the Central Government to appoint such persons as it thinks fit to be income-tax authorities.

(ii) It may also authorise the Board or a Principal Director General or Director General, a Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or a Principal Director or Director or a Principal Commissioner or Commissioner to appoint income-tax authorities below the rank of an Assistant Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner.

(5) Instruction to Subordinate Authorities [Section 119]

(i) The CBDT has been empowered under section 119 to issue instructions and circulars to its subordinates for the proper administration of the Act.

(ii) It is obligatory for the various authorities and all other persons employed in the execution of the Act to observe and follow such orders, instructions and directions of the CBDT.

(iii) The CBDT, however, is not empowered to issue orders, instructions or directions in such a way as to –

(1) require any income-tax authority to make the assessment of a particular case in a particular manner; or

(2) interfere with the discretion of the Commissioner (Appeals) in the exercise of his appellate functions.

(iv) The CBDT may, if it considers necessary or expedient to do so, for the purpose of proper and effective management of the work of assessment and collection of revenue, issue general or special orders from time to time in respect of any class of incomes or class of cases setting forth directions and instructions not being prejudicial to the assessee.

(v) In appropriate cases, the CBDT may relax the provisions of sections 115P,115S, 139,143,144, 147, 148, 154, 155, 234A, 234B, 234E, 270A, 271C, 271CA and 273. The CBDT can exercise its powers to remove difficulties in the matter of sections 201(1A), 210, 211 and 234C.

The following table gives a brief glimpse of what these sections relate to –

Section	Particulars of section

The claim for carry forward of loss in case of late filing of a return is relatable to a claim arising under the category of "any other relief available under the Act".

16.2 JURISDICTION

(1) Jurisdiction of income-tax authorities [Section 120]

(i) Income-tax authorities to exercise powers in accordance with CBDT directions [Section 120(1)]: The income-tax authorities shall exercise all or any of the powers and perform all or any of the functions conferred on, or assigned to, such authorities in accordance with the directions issued by the CBDT for the exercise of such powers and performance of the functions by all or any of those authorities.

(ii) Deemed directions under section 120(1) by CBDT [Section 120(2)]: Any income-tax authority, being an authority higher in rank, may exercise the powers and perform the functions of the income-tax authority lower in rank, if so directed by the CBDT. Such direction issued by the CBDT shall be deemed to be a direction issued under the said section 120(1).

(iii) Criteria for issue of directions [Section 120(3)]: In issuing such directions, the Board may have regard to the following criteria:

(a) Territorial area.

(b) Persons or classes of persons.

Such authorisation may be through a general or special order.

The CBDT can empower the Principal Director General or Director General or Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Principal Commissioner or Commissioner to issue orders in writing to the effect that the powers and functions conferred on or assigned to the Assessing Officer under this Act in respect of any specified area or person or class of person or persons or incomes or classes of income or cases or classes of cases shall be exercised or performed by an Additional Commissioner or Additional Director or a Joint Commissioner or Joint Director.

The CBDT or any other authority authorised in this behalf can confer jurisdiction with more than one income-tax authority in relation to any case.

(2) Jurisdiction of Assessing Officers [Section 124]

(i) Persons in respect of whom Assessing Officer has jurisdiction: Where the Assessing Officer has been vested with jurisdiction over any area within the limits of such area, he shall have jurisdiction:

(a) in respect of any person carrying on business or profession within that area or in respect of a person whose business or profession is carried on in more than one place, if his principal place of business is in that area and

(b) in respect of any other person residing within the area.

(ii) Income-tax Authorities higher in rank to determine question of Assessing Officer's jurisdiction: Where a question arises under this section as to whether an Assessing Officer has jurisdiction to assess any person the question shall be determined by the Principal Director General or Director General or the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioners or Principal Commissioner or Commissioner.

In case the question relates to an area within the jurisdiction of different Principal Director General or Director General or Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioners or Principal Commissioner or Commissioner then the question shall be determined by the Principal Director General or Director General or Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Principal Commissioner or Commissioner concerned or if they are not in agreement, then the same shall be determined by the Board or by such Principal Director General or Director General or Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Principal Commissioner or Commissioner as the Board may specify by way of notification in the Official Gazette.

(iii) Time limit for calling in question jurisdiction of the Assessing Officer:

S. No.	Case	Time Limit
(a)	Where a return of Income has been filed under section 139(1)	One month from the date of service of notice under section 142(1) or 143(2) or completion of assessment, whichever is earlier.
(b)	Where no return of income has been filed	Time allowed by notice under section 142(1) or 148 for filing return of income or by notice under section 144 to show cause why the best judgement assessment should not be made, whichever is earlier.
(c)	Where search is initiated under section 132 or books of accounts or other documents or any assets are requisitioned under section 132A	One month from the date on which notice was served under section 153A(1) or 153(2) or completion of assessment, whichever is earlier.

(iv) Assessing Officer may refer matter for determination: Where the assessee questions the jurisdiction of an Assessing Officer, then, the Assessing Officer shall, if not satisfied with the correctness of the claim refer the matter for determination under (ii) above before the assessment is made.

(v) Jurisdictional Powers of Assessing Officer: Every Assessing Officer shall have all the powers conferred by or under this Act on an Assessing Officer in respect of the income accruing or arising or received within the area, if any, over which he has been vested with jurisdiction by virtue of the direction or order issued under section 120(1) and 120(2).

(3) Power to transfer cases [Section 127]

(i) Authorities empowered to transfer cases from one Assessing Officer to another: The power to transfer a case from one Assessing Officer to another subordinate Assessing Officer or Officers is vested with the Principal Director General or Director General or Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Commissioner or Principal Commissioner of Income-tax. However, this power can be exercised only after giving the assessee a reasonable opportunity of being heard and after recording reasons for doing so, wherever possible.

(ii) Mutual agreement between higher authorities to transfer cases: There may be situations where the Assessing Officer from whom the case is transferred and the Assessing Officer to whom the case is transferred do not fall under the control of the same Principal Director General or Director General or Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Commissioner or Principal Commissioner of Income-tax. In such cases, the Principal Director General or Director General of Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Commissioner or Principal Commissioner of Income-tax from whose jurisdiction the case is transferred shall pass an order, if such concerned higher authorities mutually agree for such transfer.

If the higher authorities are not in agreement about the transfer, then, the CBDT or any such authority authorized by the Board may pass the order.

(iii) No requirement of giving opportunity to be heard in certain cases: If the case is transferred between Assessing Officers within the same city or locality or place, then, it is not necessary to give the assessee an opportunity of being heard.

(iv) Re-issue of notice not required: The transfer of a case may be made at any stage of the proceedings and it is not necessary to re-issue any notice already issued.

(v) Meaning of 'Case': For the purpose of section 120 and section 127, "case" in relation to any person whose name is specified in any order or direction issued thereunder, means all proceedings under this act in respect of any year which may be pending on the date of such order or direction or which may have been completed on or before such date, and includes also all proceedings under this act which may be commenced after the date of such order or direction in respect of any year.

(4) Change of Income-tax Authority [Section 129]

(i) Stage from which the succeeding Income-tax authority would continue: In cases where an income-tax authority succeeds another income-tax authority, who ceases to exercise jurisdiction, then, the succeeding income-tax authority may continue the proceedings from the stage at which the proceedings was left by his predecessor.

(ii) Opportunity to be reheard: The assessee concerned may demand that before continuance of proceedings as in (i) above, the previous proceedings or any part thereof be reopened or be reheard before passing of any assessment order against him.

16.3 POWERS OF INCOME TAX AUTHORITIES [SECTIONS 131 TO 136]

(1) Discovery, production of evidence etc. [Section 131]

(i) Income-tax Authorities to have powers vested in a Civil Court in certain matters [Section 131(1)]: The Assessing Officer, Deputy Commissioner (Appeals), Joint Commissioner, Commissioner (Appeals), the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner and the Dispute Resolution Panel referred to in section 144C have the powers vested in a Civil Court under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 while dealing with the following matters:

(a) discovery and inspection;

(b) enforcing the attendance of any person, including any officer of a banking company and examining him on oath;

(c) compelling the production of books of account and documents; and

(d) issuing commissions

The powers aforementioned are normally those exercisable by a Court when it is trying a suit. While exercising these powers, the authorities act in a quasi-judicial capacity and ought to conform to the principles of judicial procedure.

(ii) Powers under section 131(1) to be exercised in certain cases, even if no proceeding is pending [Section 131(1A)/(2)]:

(a) If the Principal Director General or Director General or Principal Director or Director or Joint Director or Assistant Director or Deputy Director or the authorized officer referred to in section 132(1), before he takes action under the said sub-section, has reason to suspect that any income has been concealed, or is likely to be concealed, by any person or class of persons, within his jurisdiction, then for the purposes of making an enquiry or investigation relating thereto, it shall be competent for him to exercise the powers conferred in section 131(1) on the income-tax authorities referred to therein, even if no proceedings with respect to such person or class of persons are pending before him or any other income-tax authority.

(b) For facilitating quick collection of information on request from tax authorities outside India, notified income-tax authorities (not below the rank of Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax), as may be notified by the Board, to have powers under section 131(1) for making an inquiry or investigation in respect of any person or class of persons relating to an agreement for exchange of information under section 90 or 90A, even if no proceeding is pending before it or any other income-tax authority with respect to the concerned person or class of persons.

(iii) Power to impound or retain books of accounts [Section 131(3)]: The income-tax authority is vested with the power to impound or retain in its custody for such period as it may think fit, any books of account or other documents produced before it in any proceeding under this Act.

The powers are unrestricted in the case of all the authorities except the Assessing Officer or an Assistant Director or Deputy Director whose powers are subjected to two restrictions;

(a) he must record his reasons for impounding books of account or other documents; and

(b) if he desires to retain in his custody any such books or documents for a period exceeding 15 days (excluding holidays), he must obtain the prior approval of the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Principal Director General or Director General or Commissioner or Principal Commissioner or Principal Director or Director, as the case may be, for the purpose.

(2) Search and Seizure [Section 132]: Under this section, wide powers of search and seizure are conferred on the income-tax authorities.

The provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code relating to searches and seizure would, as far as possible, apply to the searches and seizures under this Act. Contravention of the orders issued under this section would be punishable with imprisonment and fine under section 275A.

(i) Authorities empowered to issue authorisation [Section 132(1)]: Search and seizure can be authorised by Principal Director General or Director General or Principal Director or Director or the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Commissioner or Principal Commissioner or Additional Director or Additional Commissioner or any such Joint Director or Joint Commissioner as may be empowered by the Board.

A Principal Director General or Director General or Principal Director or Director or the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Principal Commissioner or Commissioner may authorise any Joint Director, Joint Commissioner, Additional Director or Additional Commissioner, Assistant Director, or Deputy Director, Assistant Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner or Income-tax Officer.

An Additional Director or Additional Commissioner, Joint Director or Joint Commissioner can authorise Assistant Director or Deputy Director or Assistant Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner or Income-tax Officer.

Thus, under section 132(1), the income-tax authorities listed above are empowered to authorise other income-tax authorities to conduct search and seizure operations.

The authorities empowered to issue authorization are:

(1) Principal Director General or Director General or Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner;

(2) Principal Director or Director or Principal Commissioner or Commissioner; and

(3) Such Additional Director or Additional Commissioner, Joint Director or Joint Commissioner as are empowered by the CBDT to do so.

(ii) 'Reasons to believe' pre-requisite for authorisation [Section 132(1)]: Such authorisation could take place if the authority believes, on the basis of information in his possession:

(a) that the person to whom a summons under section 131(1) or notice under section 142(1) was issued to produce or cause to produce books of account or other documents has omitted or failed to do so; or

(b) that a person to whom a summons or a notice has been or might be issued, does not or would not produce any books of account or other documents called for or which will be useful or relevant to any proceeding under the Income-tax Act, 1961; or

(c) that a person who is in possession of any valuable articles or things, including money, bullion or jewellery etc. (which has not been disclosed or would not be disclosed by the person concerned for income-tax purposes).

(3) Power to requisition books of account etc. [Section 132A]

However, the reason to believe, as recorded by the income-tax authority, shall not be disclosed to any person or any authority or the Appellate Tribunal.

Clarificatory provision for non-disclosure of reason to believe or reason to suspect recorded by the Income-tax Authorities

✓ The need for this clarification arose because the Commissioner of Income-tax & Benches of the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal, in the context of appeals before them, started demanding copies of reasons to believe in search, seizure and requisition cases, which the Income Tax Department has not been giving to them on ground of secrecy.

✓ Though there are some decisions wherein it has already been held that search cannot be held invalid on the ground that reasons to believe not disclosed to assessee, the said amendment provides statutory recognition to such decisions so as to avoid any further litigation on the issue. These decisions are:

(i) In M.S. Associates v. Union of India (2005) 275 ITR 502 (Gau), it was observed that revenue authorities are not required to disclose to the person > challenging the warrant of authorisation as to what materials were available against him, which had led to the issuance of the warrant. It is required to be disclosed only when the authorities concerned resolve to impose tax or penalties.

> (ii) In Genom Biotech (P) Ltd. & Ors. v. Director of IT (Investigation) & Ors. (2009) 180 Taxman 395 (Bom), it was observed that it is not the mandate of section 132 or any other provision in the Act that the reasonable belief recorded by the designated authority before issuing the warrant of authorisation must be disclosed to the assessee.

(ii) Delivery of books of accounts to the Requisition Officer [Section 132A(2)]: On a requisition being made under (i), the officer or authority under any other law referred above, as the case may be, shall deliver the books of account, other documents or assets to the requisitioning officer either forthwith or when such officer or authority is of the opinion that it is no longer necessary to retain the same in his or its custody.

(iii) Certain search provisions to apply in case of requisition also [Section 132A(3)]: Where any books of account, other documents or assets have been delivered to the requisitioning officer, the provisions of sections 132(4A) to 132(14) and section 132B shall, so far as may be, apply as if such books of account, other documents or assets had been seized under section 132(1) by the requisitioning officer from the custody of the concerned person and for the words "the Authorised Officer" occurring in any of the above mentioned sections, the words "the requisitioning officer" were substituted.]

(4) Application of retained assets [Section 132B]

Any “existing liability” under the Income-tax Act, 1961 etc.
The amount of liability determined on completion of assessments pursuant to search, incl. penalty or interest payable in connection therewith
The amount of liability arising on an application made before the Settlement Commission u/s 245C(1).

The assessee shall be discharged to the extent of the money so applied.

The assets other than money may also be applied for the discharge of such liabilities which still remains undischarged. For this purpose, such assets shall be deemed to be under distraint, as if such distraint was effected by the Assessing Officer or, as the case may be, the Tax Recovery Officer under authorization from the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Commissioner or Principal Commissioner under section 226(5). The Assessing Officer or the Tax Recovery Officer, as the case may be, may recover the amount of such liabilities by the sale of such assets in the manner laid down in the Third Schedule.

(iii) Release of seized asset [Section 132B(4)]: Where the person concerned makes an application to the Assessing Officer within 30 days from the end of the month in which the asset was seized, for release of the asset and explains the nature and source of acquisition of seized assets is explained satisfactorily, then, such assets are required to be released within a period of 120 days from the date on which last of the authorisations for search under section 132 is executed after meeting any existing liabilities. His decision in this regard cannot be called in question in any court of law. Nevertheless, section 138(2) empowers the Central Government to direct, having regard to practice and usage customary or otherwise, and any other relevant factors, that no information or documents shall be furnished or produced by a public servant in respect of such matters relating to a particular class of assessees or except to certain authorities which may be specified.

(ii) For instance, in exercise of the powers conferred by section 138(2), the Central Government having regard to all the relevant factors, has directed, vide Notification No.56/2016 dated 6.7.2016, that no public servant shall produce before any person or authority any such document or record or any information or computerised data or part thereof as comes into his possession during the discharge of official duties in respect of a valid declaration made under 'the Income Declaration Scheme, 2016', contained in Chapter IX of the Finance Act, 2016.

(iii) It may be observed that, under section 138, the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner can make a disclosure on the basis of an application made to him; he cannot volunteer to give the information.

Question 1

Rajesh regularly files his return of income electronically. While he was trying to upload his return of income for assessment year 2019-20 on 31st August, 2019 (extended due date), last date for filing the same, he found it extremely difficult to do the same due to network problems and ultimately he became successful in making e-filing of his return only at 1 a.m. on 1st September, 2019. The return contained a claim for carry forward of business loss of ₹ 51 lakh. This circumstance was recorded in a letter delivered to the office of the Deputy Commissioner of Income Tax on 1st September, 2019 during normal office hours. Rajesh made a request to the CBDT for condonation of delay in filing the return of income.

Discuss whether the CBDT has the power to condone the delay in filing the return of income and permit carry forward of loss in the given circumstance.

Would your answer change, if the return contained a claim for carry forward of business loss of ₹ 48 lakh.

Answer

Section 119(2)(b) empowers the CBDT to authorise any income tax authority to admit an application or claim for any exemption, deduction, refund or any other relief under the Act after the expiry of the period specified under the Act, to avoid genuine hardship in any case or class of cases. The claim for carry forward of loss in case of late filing of a return is relatable to a claim arising under the category of "any other relief available under the Act". Therefore, the CBDT has the power to condone delay in filing of such loss return due to genuine reasons.

The facts of the case are similar to the case of Lodhi Property Company Ltd. v. Under Secretary, (ITA-II), Department of Revenue (2010) 323 ITR 0441, where the Delhi High Court held that the Board has the power to condone the delay in case of a return which was filed late and where a claim for carry forward of losses was made. The delay was only one day and the assessee had shown justifiable reason for the delay of one day in filing the return of income. If the delay is not condoned, it would cause genuine hardship to the assessee. Therefore, the Court held that the delay of one day in filing of the return had to be condoned.

Further, the CBDT Circular No. 9/2015 dated 09.06.2015 has expressly clarified that CBDT can consider application for such claim where the amount exceeds ₹ 50 lakhs.

Applying the rationale of the above court ruling and the clarification given in CBDT Circular to the case on hand, the CBDT has the power to condone the delay in filing the return of income of Mr. Rajesh and permit carry forward of business loss of ₹ 51 lakhs, since the delay of one hour was due to a genuine and justifiable reason i.e., network problem while e-filing the return.

However, if the claim for carry forward of business loss is 48 lakhs, then, the Principal Chief Commissioner of Income-tax/Chief Commissioner of Income-tax has the power to condone the delay (since the amount is between 10 lakhs to 50 lakhs). It may be noted that if the claim is less than ₹10 lakhs, the Principal Commissioner of Income-tax/Commissioner of Income-tax is empowered to condone the delay. This clarification is given in CBDT Circular No. 9/2015 dated 09.06.2015.

Question 2

Examine the correctness of the statement "the jurisdiction of an Assessing Officer cannot be objected by the assessee".

Answer

According to section 124(3), the assessee can raise a question as to the jurisdiction of an Assessing Officer within the prescribed time limit as under:

(i) where a return has been filed under section 139(1) then, within one month from the date of service of notice under section 142(1) or section 143(2) or before the completion of assessment, whichever is earlier.

(ii) where no return has been filed, then, within the expiry of time allowed by the notice under section 142(1) or section 148 for filing the return or within the time allowed in show cause notice issued seeking as to why a best judgment assessment under section 144 should not be made, whichever is earlier.

(iii) where search is initiated under section 132 or books of accounts, other documents or any assets are requisitioned under section 132A, within one month from the date on which he was served with a notice under section 153A(1) or 153C(2) or before the completion of assessment, whichever is earlier.

Where the assessee calls in question the jurisdiction of an Assessing Officer and the Assessing Officer is not satisfied with such claim, he shall refer the matter for determination by the Principal Director General or Director General or Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Principal Commissioner or Commissioner before the assessment is made.

Therefore, in view of the above provisions, the statement that "the jurisdiction of an Assessing Officer cannot be objected by the assessee" is not correct.

Question 3

The Director General of Income Tax after getting the information that Mr. Mogambo is in possession of unaccounted cash of ₹ 50 lacs, issued orders by invoking powers vested in him as per section 131(1A), for its seizure. Is the order for seizure of cash issued by the Director General of Income Tax correct? If not, does the Director General of Income Tax have any other power to seize such cash?

Answer

The powers under section 131(1A) deal with power of discovery and production of evidence. They do not confer the power of seizure of cash or any asset. The Director General, for the purposes of making an enquiry or investigation relating to any income concealed or likely to be concealed by any person or class of persons within his jurisdiction, shall be competent to exercise powers conferred under section 131(1), which confine to discovery and inspection, enforcing attendance, compelling the production of books of account and other documents and issuing commissions. Thus, the power of seizure of unaccounted cash is not one of the powers conferred on the Director General under section 131(1A).

However, under section 132(1), the Director General has the power to authorize any Additional Director or Additional Commissioner or Joint Director or Joint Commissioner etc. to seize money found as a result of search [Clause (iii) of section 132(1)], if he has reason to believe that any person is in possession of any money which represents wholly or partly income which has not been disclosed [Clause (c) of section 132(1)]. Therefore, the proper course open to the Director General is to exercise his power under section 132(1) and authorize the Officers concerned to enter the premises where the cash is kept by Mr. Mogambo and seize such unaccounted cash.

Question 4

The premises of Ganesh were subjected to a search under section 132 of the Act. The search was authorized and the warrant was signed by the Joint Commissioner of Income-tax having jurisdiction over the assessee, consequent to information in his possession. The assessee challenged the validity of search on the ground that section 132(1) does not empower Joint Commissioner to authorise a search under the Act. Decide the correctness of the contention raised by the assessee.

Answer

Under section 132(1), the income-tax authorities listed therein are empowered to authorise other income-tax authorities to conduct search and seizure operations. The authorities empowered to issue authorization include such Additional Director, Additional Commissioner, Joint Director and Joint Commissioner as are empowered by the CBDT to do so.

However, a Joint Commissioner can issue warrant of authorization only if he has been specifically empowered to do so by the CBDT. Therefore, only if the Joint Commissioner has not been specifically empowered by the CBDT to do so, the contention of the assessee would hold good.

Question 5

Examine whether the information regarding possession of unexplained assets and income received from the Central Bureau of Investigation, a Government agency, can constitute "information" for action under section 132. Discuss.

Answer

As per section 132(1)(c), authorization for search and seizure can take place if the authority, in consequence of information in his possession, has reason to believe that any person is in possession of money, bullion, jewellery or other valuable article or thing and these assets represent, either wholly or partly, income or property which has not been, or would not be disclosed by such person for the purposes of this Act. In the absence of such information, a search cannot be validly authorized.

The Apex Court in UOI v Ajit Jain [2003] 260 ITR 80 has held that mere intimation by the CBI that money was found in the possession of the assessee, which according to the CBI was undisclosed, without something more, does not constitute "information" within the meaning of section 132, on the basis of which a search warrant could be issued. Consequently, the Supreme Court held that the search conducted on this basis and the assessment made pursuant to such search was not valid.

Question 6

In the course of search operations under section 132 in the month of July, 2019, a tax payer makes a declaration under section 132(4) on the earning of income not disclosed in respect of P.Y.2018-19. Can that statement save the tax payer from a levy of penalty, if he is yet to file his return of income for A.Y.2019-20?

Answer

Since the search is conducted on or after 15.12.2016, and return is yet to be filed for the P.Y. 2018-19, the penalty would be as follows

(1) penalty@30%, if undisclosed income is admitted during the course of search in the statement furnished under section 132(4), and the assessee explains the manner in which such income was derived, pays the tax, together with interest if any, in respect of the undisclosed income, and furnishes the return of income for the specified previous year declaring such undisclosed income on or before the specified date (i.e., the due date of filing return of income or the date on which the period specified in the notice issued under section 153A expires, as the case may be).

(2) penalty@60% in any other case.

Therefore, even if the tax payer furnishes the statement under section 132(4), penalty@30% of undisclosed income of the specified previous year would be attracted under section 271AAB.

Question 7

Cash of ₹ 25 lacs was seized on 12.9.2019 in a search conducted as per section 132 of the Act. The assessee moved an application on 27.10.2019 to release such cash after explaining the sources thereof, which was turned down by the department. The assessee seeks your opinion on, the following issues:

(i) Can the department withhold the explained money?

(ii) If yes, then to what extent and upto what period?

Answer

The proviso to section 132B(1)(i) provides that where the person concerned makes an application to the Assessing Officer, within 30 days from the end of the month in which the asset was seized, for release of the asset and the nature and source of acquisition of the asset is explained to the satisfaction of the Assessing Officer, then, the Assessing Officer may, with the prior approval of the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, release the asset after recovering the existing liability under the Income-tax Act, 1961, etc. out of such asset. 'Existing liability', however, does not include advance tax payable. Such asset or portion thereof has to be released within 120 days from the date on which the last of the authorizations for search under section 132 was executed.

In this case, since the application was made to the Assessing Officer within the 30 day period the amount of existing liability may be recovered out of the asset and the balance may be released within 120 days from the date on which the last of the authorizations for search under section 132 was executed.

Note: It may be noted that one of the conditions mentioned above for release of an asset is that the nature and source of acquisition of the asset should be explained to the satisfaction of the Assessing Officer. However, in this case, it has been given that the assessee's application for release of the asset, explaining the sources thereof, was turned down by the Department. If the application was turned down by the Department due to the reason that it was not satisfied with the explanation given by the assessee as to the nature and source of acquisition of the asset, then, the asset (in this case, cash) cannot be released, since the condition mentioned above is not satisfied.

Question 8

The business premises of Ram Bharose Ltd. and the residence of two of its directors at Delhi were searched under section 132 by the DDI, Delhi. The search was concluded on 9.8.2019 and following were also seized besides other papers and records:

(i) Papers found in the drawer of an accountant relating to Shri Krishna Ltd., Mumbai indicating details of various business transactions. However, Ram Bharose Ltd. is not having any direct or indirect connection of any nature with these transactions and Shri Krishna Ltd., Mumbai and its directors.

(ii) Jewellery worth ₹ 5 lacs from the bed room of one of the director, which was claimed by him to be of his married daughter.

(iii) Papers recording certain transactions of income and expenses having direct nexus with the business of the company for the period from 16.4.2015 to date of search. It was admitted by the director that the transactions recorded in such papers have not been incorporated in the books.

You are required to answer on the basis of aforesaid and the provisions of Act, following questions:

(a) What action the DDI shall be taking in respect of the seized papers relating to Shri Krishna Ltd., Mumbai?

(b) Whether the contention raised by the director as to jewellery found from his bed-room will be acceptable?

(c) What presumption shall be drawn in respect of the papers which indicate transactions not recorded in the books?

(d) Can the company move an application for settlement of case as per Chapter XIX-A of the Act?

Answer

(a) The authorised officer being DDI, Delhi is not having any jurisdiction over Shri Krishna Ltd., Mumbai, and therefore as per section 132(9A), the papers seized relating to this company shall be handed over by him to the Assessing Officer having jurisdiction over Shri Krishna Ltd., Mumbai within a period of 60 days from the date on which the last of the authorisations for search was executed for taking further necessary action thereon.

(b) The contention raised by the Director will not be acceptable because as per the provisions of sub-section (4A)(i) of section 132, where any books of account, other documents, money, bullion, jewellery or other valuables are found in the possession or control of any person in the course of search, then, in respect thereof, it may be presumed that the same belongs to that person.

(c) As per section 132(4A), the presumptions in respect of the papers, indicating transactions not recorded in the books but having direct nexus with the business of the company, are that the same belong to the company, contents of such papers are true and the handwriting in which the same are written is/are of the persons(s) whose premises have been searched.

(d) As per clause (iiia) in the Explanation to section 245A, the assessee can approach the Settlement Commission at any time after the date of issue of notice under section 153A or section 153C initiating the assessment proceedings. Therefore, an application can be made to the Settlement Commission where search has been initiated under section 132 followed by assessment under section 153A or section 153C.

The proviso to section 245C(1) specifies the monetary limit for making application for settlement of cases, in respect of search cases. Accordingly, the additional amount of income-tax payable on the income disclosed in the application must exceed ₹ 50 lacs so that application for settlement of the case is eligible for admission.

Question 9

In the course of search on 25.03.2020, assets were seized. Examine the procedure laid down to deal with such seized assets under the Act.

Answer

Section 132B of the Income-tax Act, 1961 deals with the application of assets seized under section 132. Such assets will be first applied towards the existing liability under the Income-tax Act, 1961, etc. ‘Existing liability’, however, does not include advance tax payable. Further, the amount of liability determined on completion of search assessment (including any penalty levied or interest payable in connection with such assessment) and in respect of which the assessee is in default or deemed to be in default, may be recovered out of such assets.

Where the nature and source of acquisition of such seized assets is explained to the satisfaction of the Assessing Officer, the amount of any existing liability mentioned in para 1 above may be recovered out of such asset and the remaining portion, if any, of the asset may be released, with the prior approval of the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, as the case may be. The release must be made within 120 days from the date on which the last of the authorisations for search under section 132 or for requisition under section 132A was executed. The assets would be released to the person from whose custody they were seized.

When the assets consist of solely of money, or partly of money and partly of other assets, the Assessing Officer may apply such money in the discharge of the liabilities referred to in para 1 above and the assessee shall be discharged of such liability to the extent of the money so applied. However, the assets other than money may also be applied for the discharge of such liabilities if the complete recovery could not be made from the money seized or the money seized was not sufficient.

SIGNIFICANT SELECT CASES

1. Does the Central Board of Direct Taxes (CBDT) have the power to amend legislative provisions through a Circular?

Commissioner of Income-tax and Anr v. SV Gopala and Others [2017] 396 ITR 694 (SC)

Facts of the Case: The CBDT had issued a Circular invoking the powers under Section 119 of the Income-tax Act, 1961. The Circular amended the provisions contained in Rule 68B of the Second Schedule to the Income-tax Act, 1961 relating to time limit for sale of attached immovable property.

The issue under consideration is whether the CBDT has the power to amend legislative provisions through a Circular.

Supreme Court's Decision: The Supreme Court observed that the CBDT does not have the power to amend legislative provisions in exercise of its powers under section 119 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 by issuing a Circular. The High Court had held so on similar grounds. The Supreme Court, accordingly, upheld the decision of the High Court quashing the circular for being ultra vires.

2. Can the assessee's application, for adjustment of tax liability on income surrendered during search by sale of seized gold bars, be entertained where assessment has not been completed?

Hemant Kumar Sindhi & Another v. CIT (2014) 364 ITR 555 (All)

Facts of the case: Consequent to a search in the premises of the assessee, some gold bars were seized from the locker. The assessee voluntarily disclosed some income during the course of search. The assessee filed an application for sale of the gold bars and adjustment of tax liability on undisclosed income out of the sale proceeds. This would obviate his liability to pay interest under sections 234B and 234C. The Assessing Officer dismissed the application on the reasoning that only when the assessment is completed and tax demand is crystallized, can recovery be initiated by the sale of gold bars. The assessee filed a writ contesting the dismissal of application by the Assessing Officer.

High Court's Observations: The High Court observed that section 132B(1)(i) uses the expression "the amount of any existing liability" and "the amount of the liability determined". The words "existing liability" postulates a liability that is crystallized by adjudication; Likewise, "a liability is determined" only on completion of the assessment. Until the assessment is complete, it cannot be postulated that a liability has been crystallized.

As per the first proviso to section 132B(1)(i), the assessee may make an application to the Assessing Officer for release of the assets seized. However, he has to explain the nature and source of acquisition of the asset to the satisfaction of the Assessing Officer. It is not the ipse dixit of the assessee but the satisfaction of the Assessing Officer on the basis of the explanation tendered by the assessee which is material.

High Court's Decision: The High Court, accordingly, held that the Assessing Officer was justified in his conclusion that it is only when the liability is determined on the completion of assessment that it would stand crystallized and in pursuance of which a demand can be raised and recovery can be initiated. Therefore, in the present case, the first proviso to section 132B(1)(i) would not be attracted. The High Court, thus, dismissed the writ petition.

3. Is the cancellation of registration of a trust under section 12AA, on the basis of search conducted in the premises of its Secretary General and the statement recorded by him under section 132(4), valid?

U.P. Distillers Association (UPDA) v. CIT [2017] 399 ITR 143 (Del)

Facts of the case: A search and seizure operation took place in the premises of the Secretary General of the assessee, that is, Uttar Pradesh Distillers Association, in February 2006. During the search, the Secretary General's statement was recorded under section 132(4) of the Act. The statement was retracted after two years. In the meanwhile, the Commissioner of Income-tax (CIT) cancelled the assessee's registration under section 12AA(3) on the basis of the search operation and the statement made. The order was upheld by the Appellate Tribunal. The assessee contended that Secretary General's statement was made in the course of search in respect of his premises and not those of the assessee. Hence, the Secretary General's statement was not attributable to the assessee nor could the materials indicated by him be the basis for cancellation of registration of the trust under section 12AA

Issue: The issue under consideration is whether the cancellation of registration under section 12AA as a charitable trust on the basis of search conducted in the premises of the Secretary General of the assessee-trust and the statement recorded by him under section 132(4) is valid.

High Court's Observations: The Court dismissed the appeal to hold that although the premises, in which the search under section 132 took place, belonged to the Secretary General, he virtually ran the assessee-trust's activities from the same premises. The information which he provided in the course of the search pointed out to the activities of the assessee-trust and not to his own activities. Further, the Tribunal had expressly recorded that the search proceedings took place in the context of section 153A, in the very premises of the Secretary General, with respect to the assessee-trust.

High Court's Decision: The Delhi High Court, accordingly, held that cancellation of the trust's registration under section 12AA on the basis of search conducted in the premises of the Secretary General and the statement recorded under section 132(4) from him, is valid.

Note – The appeal filed by the assessee against the judgement of the Delhi High Court was dismissed.

4. Where no proceeding is pending against a person, can the Assessing Officer call for information under section 133(6), which is useful or relevant to any enquiry, with the permission of Director or Commissioner?

Kathiroor Service Co-operative Bank Ltd. v. CIT (CIB) (2014) 360 ITR 0243 (SC)

Facts of the case: The Assessing Officer, with the prior approval of the Commissioner, issued notice under section 133(6) to the assessee, a co-operative society engaged in banking business, calling for general information regarding details of all persons (whether resident or non-resident) who had made (a) cash transactions of ₹ 1 lakh and above in any account, and/or (b) time deposits of ₹ 1 lakh or above, for the period of three years between April 1, 2005, and March 31, 2008, expressly stating therein that failure to furnish the information would attract penal consequences.

The assessee objected to the said notice, inter alia, on the ground that such notice seeking for information which is unrelated to any existing or pending proceeding against the assessee could not be issued under the provisions of the Act.

Supreme Court's Observations: The Supreme Court observed that the Assessing Officer has been empowered to requisition information which will be useful for or relevant to any enquiry or proceeding under the Income-tax Act, 1961 in the case of any person. However, an income-tax authority below the rank of the Director or Commissioner can exercise this power in respect of an enquiry in a case where no proceeding is pending, only with the prior approval of the Director or the Commissioner.

Supreme Court's Decision: The Supreme Court held that information of general nature could be called for from banks. In this case, since notices have been issued after obtaining approval of the Commissioner, the assessing authority had not erred in issuing the notices to assessees requiring them to furnish information regarding account holders with cash transactions or deposits of more than ₹ 1 lakh. The Supreme Court, therefore, held that for such enquiry under section 133(6), the notices could be validly issued by the assessing authority.

Note – The Finance Act, 2017 has amended the second proviso to section 133 to provide that the power in respect of an inquiry, in a case where no proceeding is pending, can be exercised by the Joint Director, Deputy Director and Assistant Director, without the prior approval of the Principal Director/Director/Principal Commissioner/Commissioner.*

5. Is the requirement to grant a reasonable opportunity of being heard, stipulated under section 127(1), mandatory in nature?

Sahara Hospitality Ltd. v. CIT (2013) 352 ITR 38 (Bom.)

High Court's Observations: On this issue, the Bombay High Court observed that the provisions of section 127(1) stipulate, inter alia, that the income tax authority mentioned therein may give an opportunity of being heard to the assessee, wherever it is possible to do so, and after recording his reasons for doing so, transfer any case from one or more Assessing Officers subordinate to him to any other Assessing Officer or officers subordinate to him.

High Court's Decision: The Bombay High Court held that the word "may" used in this section should be read as "shall" and such income-tax authority has to mandatorily give a reasonable opportunity of being heard to the assessee, wherever possible to do so, and thereafter, record the reasons for taking any action under the said section. "Reasonable opportunity" can only be dispensed with in a case where it is not possible to provide such opportunity. In such a case also, the authority should record its reasons for making the transfer, even though no opportunity was given to the assessee. The discretion of the authority is only to consider as to what is a reasonable opportunity in a given case and whether it is possible to give such an opportunity to the assessee or not. The authority cannot deny a reasonable opportunity of being heard to the assessee, wherever it is possible to do so.

6. Does the Central Board of Direct Taxes (CBDT) have the power under section 119(2)(b) to condone the delay in filing return of income?

Lodhi Property Company Ltd. v. Under Secretary, (ITA-II), Department of Revenue (2010) 323 ITR 441 (Del.)

Facts of the case: The assessee filed his return of income, which contains a claim for carry forward of losses, a day after the due date. The delay of one day in filing the return of income was due to the fact that the assessee had not reached the Central Revenue Building on time because he was sent from one room to the other and by the time he reached the room where his return was to be accepted, it was already 6.00 p.m. and he was told that the return would not be accepted because the counter had been closed. These circumstances were recorded in the letter along with the return of income delivered to the office of the Deputy Commissioner of Income-tax on the very next day. Later on, the CBDT, by a non-speaking order, rejected the request of the assessee for condonation of delay in filing the return of income under section 119.

Issue: The issue under consideration is whether the CBDT has the power under section 119(2)(b) to condone the delay in filing return of income.

High Court's Decision: The High Court held that the Board has the power to condone the delay in case of a return which was filed late and where a claim for carry forward of losses was made. The delay was only one day and the assessee had shown sufficient reason for the delay of one day in filing the return of income. If the delay is not condoned, it would cause genuine hardship to the petitioner. Therefore, the Court held that the delay of one day in filing of the return has to be condoned.

Note – Section 119(2)(b) empowers the CBDT to authorize any income tax authority to admit an application or claim for any exemption, deduction, refund or any other relief under the Act after the expiry of the period specified under the Act, to avoid genuine hardship in any case or class of cases. The claim for carry forward of loss in case of a loss return is relatable to a claim arising under the category of any other relief available under the Act. Therefore, the CBDT has the power to condone delay in filing of such loss return due to genuine reasons.*

Accordingly, the CBDT has vide Circular No. 9/2015 dated 09.06.2015, clarified that the Principal Commissioner of Income-tax/Commissioner of Income-tax is vested with the power to consider cases for condonation of delay in filing return of income where refund claim or claim of carry forward of losses does not exceed ₹ 10 lakhs for any one assessment year. If the amount of such claim exceeds ₹ 10 lakhs but does not exceed ₹ 50 lakhs, the Principal Chief Commissioner of Income-tax/Chief Commissioner of Income-tax is empowered to condone such delay and where the amount of such claims exceed ₹ 50 lakhs, the Board may consider for condonation of delay in filing return of income.

7. Can the CBDT refuse to condone delay in filing the tax return, where such delay was caused by circumstances beyond the control of the assessee?

Regen Powertech Private Limited v. CBDT and Another [2019] 410 ITR 483 (Mad)

Facts of the Case: The assessee company was engaged in the manufacture of wind energy generators. For the A.Y.2014-15, the assessee filed its return of income on January 7, 2015 with a delay of 37 days. The assessee contended that the delay was on account of obtaining the audit report required under section 44AB. The appointed firm of chartered accountants (SRB) had some reservations regarding the valuation of the assessee company's business transfer which was communicated to the assessee only on the last day of filing the audit report. In such circumstances, the assessee had to look for an alternative auditor which could also be done subject to a "No Objection Certificate" from SRB. The "No Objection Certificate" was only issued on December 15, 2014, after which the return of income along with audit report was filed on January 7, 2015.

The assessee contends that the delay in filing the return was beyond its control. The assessee wished to modify the return of income but under section 139(5), revision of return of income was possible only when the original return was made within the due date[1]. The assessee's application for condonation of 37 days delay before the CBDT under section 119(2)(b) had been pending for a long time, and hence, the assessee approached the High Court under a writ petition.

Issue: The issue under consideration is whether the CBDT can refuse to condone delay in filing the return of income, where such delay was caused by circumstances beyond the control of the assessee.

High Court's Observations: The High Court opined that the assessee could not be blamed for the delay in carrying out its audit, as it was beyond its control. Since there was some misunderstanding between the erstwhile auditor and the assessee, the return of income could not be presented before the due date. The assessee had also not been able to obtain the "No Objection Certificate" from the erstwhile auditor immediately.

The High Court observed the view of the Bombay High Court in Bombay Mercantile Co-op. Bank Ltd. v. CBDT [2010] 195 Taxman 106 that in condonation matters "a highly pedantic approach should be eschewed and a justice oriented approach should be adopted".

High Court's Decision: The High Court held that application for condonation of delay could not have been rejected by the CBDT as the circumstances causing delay were beyond the control of the assessee. The High Court opined that the CBDT should have exercised its discretion in a proper manner and condoned the delay.

Note - Even though as per the current provisions of income-tax law, a belated return filed u/s 139(4) can also be revised u/s 139(5), this case law is still relevant since filing of return on or before the due date is required for carry forward of certain losses and claim of profit-linked deductions under Chapter VI-A. If delay in filing of return is condoned, such carry forward of losses and claim of profit-linked deductions would be permissible under law.

The format for filing of returns by different assessees is notified by the CBDT. The particulars of income earned under different heads, gross total income, deductions from gross total income, total income and tax payable by the assessee are generally required to be furnished in a return of income. (2) In case of a person other than a company or a firm, filing of return of income on or before the due date is mandatory, if his total income or the total income of any other person in respect of which he is assessable under this Act during the previous year exceeds the basic exemption limit.

(3) A return of income or loss for the previous year in the prescribed form and verified in the prescribed manner on or before the due date, has to be filed by every person, being a resident other than not ordinarily resident in India within the meaning of section 6(6), who is not required to furnish a return under section 139(1) if such person, at any time during the previous year –

(a) holds, as a beneficial owner or otherwise, any asset (including any financial interest in any entity) located outside India or has a signing authority in any account located outside India; or

(1) Under section 139(1), every person has to furnish a return of his income on or before the due date, if his total income exceeds the basic exemption limit.

(2) For reducing the compliance burden of small taxpayers, the Central Government has been empowered to notify the class or classes of persons who will be exempted from the requirement of filing of return of income, subject to satisfying the prescribed conditions.

Accordingly, the Central Government has, vide Notification No. S.O.2672(E) dated 26.7.2019, exempted non-corporate non-residents and foreign companies, having any income chargeable under the Income-tax Act, 1961 during a previous year from any investment fund set up in an International Financial Services Centre (IFSC) located in India, from the requirement of furnishing a return of income under section 139(1) from A.Y.2019-20 onwards.

The exemption from filing return of income would be available to such class of persons only if any income-tax due on income of the said class of persons has been deducted at source and remitted to the Central Government by the investment fund at the tax-rate in force as per provisions of section 194LBB; and there is no other income during the previous year for which the said class of persons, is otherwise liable to file the tax-return.

(5) A return of loss has to be filed by the assessee in his own interest and the non-receipt of a notice from the Assessing Officer requiring him to file the return cannot be a valid excuse under any circumstances for the non-filing of such return.

17.7 BELATED RETURN [SECTION 139(4)]

(1) Any person who has not furnished a return within the time allowed to him under section 139(1) may furnish the return for any previous year at any time -

(2) Where the Assessing Officer considers that the return of income furnished by the assessee is defective, he may intimate the defect to the assessee and give him an opportunity to rectify the defect within a period of 15 days from the date of such intimation. The Assessing Officer has the discretion to extend the time period beyond 15 days, on an application made by the assessee.

(3) If the defect is not rectified within the period of 15 days or such further extended period, then the return would be treated as an invalid return. The consequential effect would be the same as if the assessee had failed to furnish the return.

(4) Where, however, the assessee rectifies the defect after the expiry of the period of 15 days or the further extended period, but before assessment is made, the Assessing Officer can condone the delay and treat the return as a valid return.

(5) A return of income shall be regarded as defective unless all the following conditions are fulfilled, namely:

(i) The annexures, statements and columns in the return of income relating to computation of income chargeable under each head of income, computations of gross total income and total income have been duly filled in.

(However, the return will not be regarded as defective if (a) a certificate for tax deducted or collected was not furnished under section 203 or section 206C to the person furnishing his return of income, (b) such certificate is produced within a period of 2 years).

(d) the proof of the amount of compulsory deposit, if any, claimed to have been paid under the Compulsory Deposit Scheme (Income-tax Payers) Act, 1974;

(iii) Where regular books of account are maintained by an assessee, the return of income is accompanied by the following -

(v) Where the cost accounts of an assessee have been audited under section 233B[1] of Companies Act, 1956, the return should be accompanied by such report.

(a) a statement indicating the amount of turnover or gross receipts, gross profit, expenses and net profit of the business or profession;

(b) the basis on which such amounts mentioned in (1) above have been computed,

(c) the amounts of total sundry debtors, sundry creditors, stock-in-trade and cash balance as at the end of the previous year.

It may be noted that a return which is otherwise valid would not be treated as defective merely because self-assessment tax and interest payable in accordance with the provisions of section 140A has not been paid on or before the date of furnishing the return.

Notes:

(i) Many of these particulars are now required to be incorporated as part of the relevant return form, for example, details of tax deducted at source, advance tax paid, self-assessment tax paid, amount of turnover/gross receipts etc.

(ii) Section 292B provides that no return of income, order of assessment, notice, summons or other proceedings furnished or made or taken or purported to have been furnished or made in pursuance of any of the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 shall be invalid or shall be deemed to be invalid merely by reason of any mistake, defect or omission in such return of income, assessment, notice, summons or other proceeding, if they are in substance and effect in conformity with or according to the intent and purposes of the Income-tax Act, 1961. The provision, thus, enables tax authorities to accept returns and other documents and tax payers to accept orders, notice, etc., received from tax authorities even in cases where there are a few typographical, arithmetical or other mistakes which do not materially affect the objects with which the document was submitted by the assessee or order was issued by the department.

17.19 QUOTING OF AADHAAR NUMBER [SECTION 139AA]

(1) Mandatory quoting of Aadhar Number

Every person who is eligible to obtain Aadhar Number is required to mandatorily quote Aadhaar Number, on or after 1st July, 2017:

(a) in the application form for allotment of Permanent Account Number (PAN)

(b) in the return of income

(2) Mandatory quoting of Enrolment Id, where person does not have Aadhaar Number

If a person does not have Aadhar Number, he is required to quote Enrolment ID of Aadhaar application form issued to him at the time of enrolment in the application form for allotment of Permanent Account Number (PAN) or in the return of income furnished by him.

Enrolment ID means a 28 digit Enrolment Identification Number issued to a resident at the time of enrolment

(3) Intimation of Aadhaar Number to prescribed Authority

Notwithstanding the last date of intimating/linking of Aadhaar Number with PAN being 31.12.2019, it is clarified that w.e.f. 01.04.2019, it is mandatory to quote and link Aadhaar number while filing the return of income, either manually or electronically, unless specifically exempted in cases referred to in para (5) below.

If a person fails to intimate the Aadhar Number, the Permanent Account Number (PAN) allotted to such person shall be made inoperative after the date so notified in the prescribed manner.

> Note - To give effect to the Supreme Court ruling on Aadhar Card linkage, the CBDT vide Press Release dated 10th June 2017, clarified that in consequence of failure to intimate Aadhar Number, the permanent account number (PAN) of those who do not have Aadhaar and who do not wish to obtain Aadhaar for the time being, will not be cancelled so that other consequences under the Income-tax Act for failing to quote PAN may not arise. This clarification was consequent to the position of law prior to 1.9.2019 deeming the PAN to be invalid if a person failed to intimate the Aadhaar Number and providing that other provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 would apply as if the person had not applied for PAN.

(5) Provision not to apply to certain person or class of persons

The provisions of section 139AA relating to quoting of Aadhar Number would, however, not apply to such person or class or classes of persons or any State or part of any State as may be notified by the Central Government.

Accordingly, the Central Government has, vide Notification No. 37/2017 dated 11.05.2017 effective from 01.07.2017, notified that the provisions of section 139AA relating to quoting of Aadhar Number would not apply to an individual who does not possess the Aadhar number or Enrolment ID and is:

17.20 SCHEME FOR SUBMISSION OF RETURNS THROUGH TAX RETURN PREPARERS [SECTION 139B]

(1) This section provides that, for the purpose of enabling any specified class or classes of persons to prepare and furnish their returns of income, the CBDT may notify a Scheme to provide that such persons may furnish their returns of income through a Tax Return Preparer authorised to act as such under the Scheme.

(2) The Tax Return Preparer shall assist the persons furnishing the return in a manner that will be specified in the Scheme, and shall also affix his signature on such return.

(5) The Scheme notified under the said section may provide for the following -

(i) the manner in which and the period for which the Tax Return Preparers shall be authorised,

(ii) the educational and other qualifications to be possessed, and the training and other conditions required to be fulfilled, by a person to act as a Tax Return Preparer,

(iv) the duties and obligations of the Tax Return Preparers,

(v) the circumstances under which the authorisation given to a Tax Return Preparer may be withdrawn, and

(vi) any other relevant matter as may be specified by the Scheme.

Note - It may be noted that as per section 139B(3), an employee of the "specified class or classes of persons" is not authorized to act as a Tax Return Preparer. Therefore, it follows that employees of companies and persons whose accounts are required to be audited under section 44AB or any other law for the time being in force (since they are not falling in the category of specified class or classes of persons), are eligible to act as Tax Return Preparers.

17.21 POWER OF CBDT TO DISPENSE WITH FURNISHING DOCUMENTS ETC. WITH THE RETURN AND FILING OF RETURN IN ELECTRONIC FORM [SECTIONS 139C &139D]

(3) Interest under section 234A

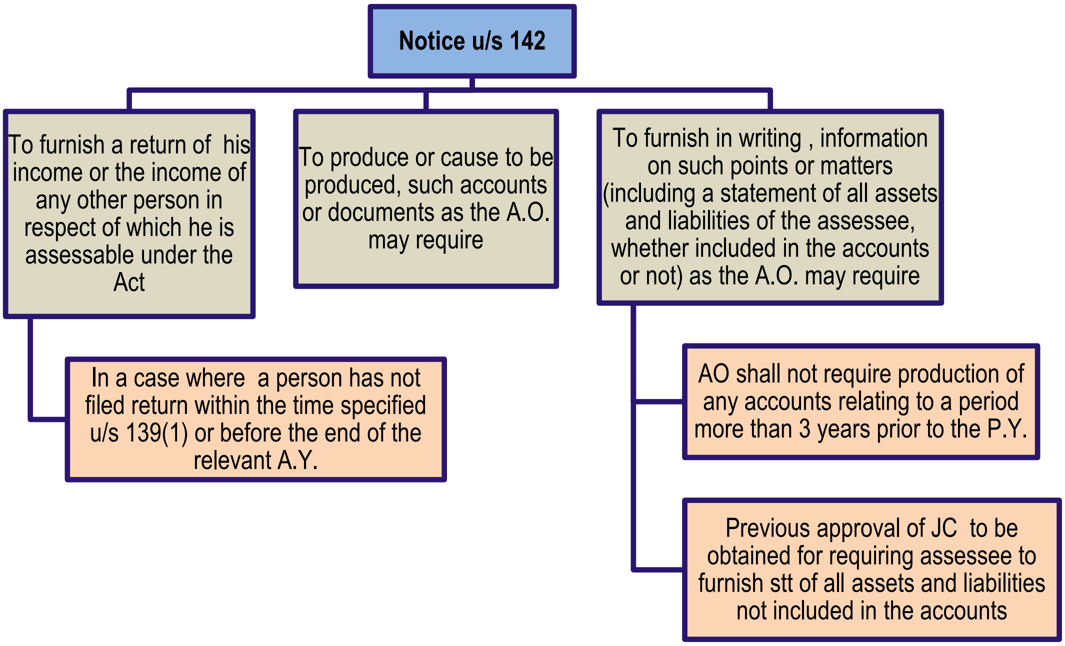
For the purpose of making an assessment, the Assessing Officer may serve on any person who has made a return under section 139 or in whose case the time allowed under section 139(1) for furnishing the return has expired, a notice ùnder section 142. The purposes for which such notice can be served are depicted in the diagram in the next page:



Notice u/s 142

In a case where a person has not filed return within the time specified u/s 139(1) or before the end of the relevant A.Y.

To furnish in writing , information on such points or matters (including a statement of all assets and liabilities of the assessee, whether included in the accounts or not) as the A.O. may require

AO shall not require production of any accounts relating to a period more than 3 years prior to the P.Y.

Previous approval of JC to be obtained for requiring assessee to furnish stt of all assets and liabilities not included in the accounts

Note - It may be noted that the time-limit for completion of assessment under section 153(1) is 21 months/18 months/12 months, as the case may be, from the end of the assessment year in which the income was first assessable. Therefore, since assessment has to be completed within the said period, it appears that notice under section 142(1) should also be issued within that period.

17.25 AUDIT UNDER SECTION 142

Sub-sections (2A), (2B), (2C), and (2D), of section 142 contain the statutory provisions relating to the conduct of audit. Students may note that the audit envisaged under this provision is different from the compulsory tax audit under section 44AB.

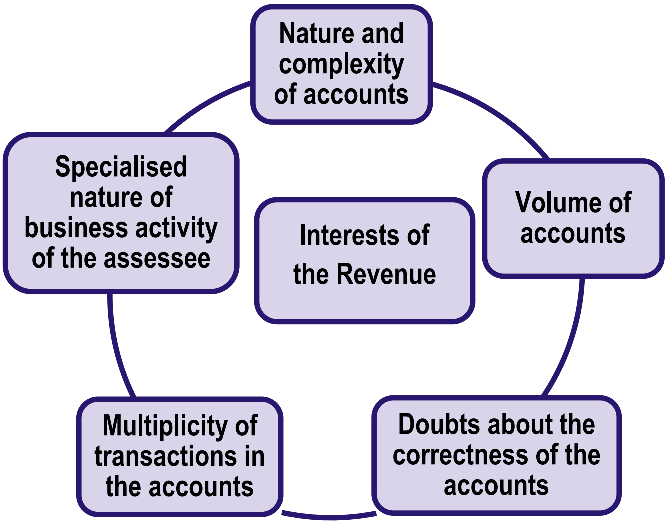
(1) Basis for direction to get accounts audited: If at any stage of the proceedings before him, the Assessing Officer, having regard to the nature and complexity of the accounts, volume of the accounts, doubts about the correctness of the accounts, multiplicity of transactions in the accounts or specialized nature of business activity of the assessee, and the interests of the revenue, is of the opinion that it is necessary so to do, he may, with the previous approval of the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, direct the assessee to get his accounts audited by an accountant and to furnish a report of such audit.

The expression 'accountant' for this purpose means a 'chartered accountant' within the meaning of the Chartered Accountants Act, 1949.



Nature and complexity of accounts
Specialised nature of business activity of the assessee
Interests of the Revenue
Volume of accounts
Multiplicity of transactions in the accounts
Doubts about the correctness of the accounts

(2) Special Audit to be conducted by the accountant nominated by the Principal Chief Commissioner/Chief Commissioner/Principal Commissioner/Commissioner - The accountant by whom the audit should be carried out would be nominated by the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax specifically for the purpose and the auditor is required to furnish the report of his audit in the prescribed form duly signed and verified by him and setting forth such other particulars as may be prescribed and also giving details in regard to such additional particulars as the Assessing Officer may require in respect of each individual case. The report of the auditor should be furnished in Form No.6B prescribed under Rule 14A of the Income-tax Rules, 1962. The accountant appointed for carrying out the audit becomes liable to carry out the requirements of audit as directed by Assessing Officer and it is the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner and not the assessee who would be his client for this purpose.

(3) Opportunity of being heard to be given before issuing directions for special audit -The Supreme Court in Rajesh Kumar & Ors. v. DCIT (2006) 287 ITR 91 observed that the order under section 142(2A) is a quasi judicial order. Therefore, the principles of natural justice have to be applied and the assessee has to be given an opportunity of being heard before directing the special audit. The principles of natural justice are based on two principles, namely, (i) nobody shall be condemned unheard; (ii) nobody shall be a judge of his own cause. Once it is held that the assessee suffers civil consequences and any order passed would be prejudicial to him, the principles of natural justice must be held to be implicit. If the principles of natural justice were to be excluded, the Parliament could have said so expressly.

Accordingly, to give effect to the observation of the Supreme Court, it has been provided that the Assessing Officer is required to give the assessee an opportunity of being heard before issuing directions for special audit under section 142(2A).

(4) Special audit may be directed even if accounts are audited under any other law - The Assessing Officer is empowered to direct the audit to be carried out in the case of any particular assessee even if the accounts of the assessee have already been audited under any other law for the time being in force or otherwise.

(5) Time limit - The report of the auditor after conducting the audit must be furnished to Assessing Officer by the assessee within the period specified by the Assessing Officer in his order. The Assessing Officer is, however, entitled, suo motu on receipt of an application made in this behalf by the assessee for any good any sufficient reason to extend the time-limit by such further period or periods as he deems fit. Further, the aggregate of the period originally fixed and the period or periods so extended should not exceed 180 days in any case. This time of 180 days must be reckoned from the date on which the Assessing Officer's direction to get the accounts audited is received by the assessee.

(6) Expenses of special audit to be paid by the Central Government - Where the direction for special audit is issued by the Assessing Officer, the expenses of, and incidental to, such special audit, including remuneration of the Accountant, shall be determined by the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Principal Commissioner or Commissioner in accordance with the prescribed guidelines. The expenses so determined shall be paid by the Central Government.

Rule 14B lays down the guidelines for the purposes of determining expenses for audit under section 142(2A). The said Rule is applicable when the audit under section 142(2A) is directed by an Assessing Officer on or after 1st June, 2007. The expenses of, and incidental to, audit (including the remuneration of the accountant, qualified assistants, semi-qualified and other assistants who may be engaged by such Accountant) should not be less than ₹ 3,750 and not more than ₹ 7,500 for every hour of the period as specified by the Assessing Officer under section 142(2C). Such period shall be specified in terms of the number of hours required for completing the report.

(7) Assessee to be given an opportunity of being heard - The assessee should, however, be given an opportunity of being heard in respect of any material gathered on the basis of –

(i) any inquiry under section 142(2); or

(ii) any audit under section 142(2A)

which is proposed to be utilized for the purposes of the assessment. If, however, the assessment is in nature of a best judgment assessment under section 144, it is not obligatory for the Assessing Officer to give the assessee an opportunity to be heard, before passing the assessment order on the basis of the report of the auditor.

(8) Consequence of failure to get special audit done - In any case, where the assessee is directed to get audit done and the assessee fails to do so, the Assessing Officer is entitled to make a best judgment assessment under section 144 in addition to imposing penalty or taking such steps as may be necessary under the law.

In a case where a Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Principal Commissioner or Commissioner issued instructions under section 142(2A) nominating a Chartered Accountant for auditing the assessee's accounts and though the concerned assessee was willing to produce the records, the concerned Chartered Accountant refused to audit the accounts, a question arose as to whether there was a failure on the assessee's part to comply with the directions under section 142(2A) and consequently the best judgement assessment could be made under section 144(b).

The Supreme Court held that if for a frivolous reason the Chartered Accountant declined to undertake the audit of the assessee's accounts, the assessee could not be held responsible. In such a case, there was no default or failure to comply with the direction issued under section 142(2A) on the asssessee's part so as to attract the provisions of section 144(b). The best judgement made by the Assessing Officer was set aside with the directions to appoint another Chartered Accountant within one month to get the accounts audited [Swadeshi Polytex Ltd. v. ITO [1983] 144 ITR 171 (SC)].

17.26 POWER OF ASSESSING OFFICER TO MAKE A REFERENCE TO THE VALUATION OFFICER [SECTION 142A]

(1) Position prior to 1st October, 2014 - Under the erstwhile section 142A (prior to 1st October, 2014), the Assessing Officer was empowered to make a reference to the Valuation Officer to estimate the value of any investment referred to in section 69 or section 69B, any bullion, jewellery or other valuable article referred to in section 69A or section 69B or the fair market value of any property referred to in section 56(2) for the purpose of making an assessment or reassessment. The Assessing Officer may, on receipt of the report of the Valuation Officer, take into account such report for the purposes of assessment or reassessment after giving the assessee an opportunity of being heard.

The scope of section 142A prior to 1st October, 2014, was, thus, restricted in the sense that the Assessing Officer could make a reference to the Valuation Officer to estimate the value of investment/article only under the specific sections mentioned thereunder, namely, sections 69, 69A, 69B, and 56(2). Further, section 142A did not also provide for any time limit for furnishing of the report by the Valuation Officer.

(2) Scope of section 142A widened with effect from 1st October, 2014 - In order to expand the scope of making reference to Valuation Officer and to provide for a time limit for furnishing of the report by the Valuation Officer, section 142A has been substituted with effect from 1st October, 2014. Section 142A also expressly clarifies that there is no pre-condition that books of account have to be rejected for the purpose of making a reference to the Valuation Officer for estimation of the value of any investment or property.

As per section 142A, the Assessing Officer may, for the purposes of assessment or reassessment, make a reference to a Valuation Officer to estimate the value, including fair market value, of any asset, property or investment and submit the report to him. Thus, the scope of section 142A has been widened by removing references to the specific sections for which reference can be made by the Assessing Officer to the Valuation Officer.

Section 142A further clarifies that the Assessing Officer may make a reference to the Valuation Officer whether or not he is satisfied about the correctness or completeness of the accounts of the assessee.

(3) Powers of the Valuation Officer - The Valuation Officer, shall, for the purpose of estimating the value of the asset, property or investment, have all the powers of section 38A of the Wealth-tax Act, 1957.

(4) Estimation of value of asset, property or investment - The Valuation Officer is required to estimate the value of the asset, property or investment after taking into account the evidence produced by the assessee and any other evidence in his possession gathered, after giving an opportunity of being heard to the assessee.

If the assessee does not co-operate or comply with the directions of the Valuation Officer he may, estimate the value of the asset, property or investment to the best of his judgment.

(5) Time limit for submission of valuation report - The Valuation Officer shall send a copy of his estimate to the Assessing Officer and the assessee within a period of six months from the end of the month in which the reference is made. Thus, a specific time limit has now been provided, within which the Valuation Officer has to send his report to the Assessing Officer.

(6) Completion of assessment by taking into account valuation report - On receipt of the report from the Valuation Officer, the Assessing Officer may, after giving the assessee an opportunity of being heard, take into account such report in making the assessment or reassessment.

17.27 ASSESSMENT [SECTION 143]

Where a return has been made under section 139 or in response to a notice under section 142(1), if any tax or interest is found due an intimation should be sent to the assessee which will deemed to be a demand notice. If any refund is due to the assessee it shall be granted.

(1) Summary assessment [Section 143(1)/(1A)/(1B)/(1C)]

(i) Section 143(1) provides for computation of the total income of an assessee after making the following adjustments to the returned income:-

(a) any arithmetical error in the return; or

(b) an incorrect claim, if such incorrect claim is apparent from any information in the return.

(c) Disallowance of loss claimed, if return is filed beyond due date u/s 139(1)

(d) Disallowance of expenditure indicated in the audit report but not taken into account in computing the total income in the return

(e) Disallowance of deduction u/s 10AA, 80-IA, 80-IAB, 80-IB, 80-IC, 80-ID or 80-IE, if return is filed beyond due date u/s 139(1)

However, before making any such adjustments, in the interest of natural justice, intimation has to be given to the assessee requiring him to respond to such adjustments. Such intimation may be in writing or through electronic mode. The response received, if any, has to be duly considered before effecting any adjustment. However, if no response is received within 30 days of issue of such intimation, the processing shall be carried out incorporating the adjustments.

(ii) The term "an incorrect claim apparent from any information in the return" shall mean such claim on the basis of an entry, in the return, –

(a) of an item, which is inconsistent with another entry of the same or some other item in such return;

(b) in respect of which, information required to be furnished to substantiate such entry, has not been furnished under this Act; or

(c) in respect of a deduction, where such deduction exceeds specified statutory limit which may have been expressed as monetary amount or percentage or ratio or fraction.

(iii) Tax, interest and fee should be computed on the basis of the total income computed after making the adjustments in (i) above.

(iv) The sum payable by, or the amount of refund due to, the assessee shall be determined after adjustment of such tax, interest and fee, if any, so computed by any tax deducted at source, any tax collected at source, any advance tax paid, any relief allowable under section 89, any relief allowable under an agreement under section 90 or section 90A, or any relief allowable under section 91 any tax paid on self-assessment and any amount paid otherwise by way of tax, interest or fee.

(v) Based on the above adjustments, an intimation shall be prepared or generated and sent to the assessee within a period of one year from the end of the financial year in which the return was made. The intimation shall specify the sum determined to be payable by, or the amount of refund due to, the assessee.

(vi) If any amount of refund is due to the assessee, the same shall be granted to the assessee.

(vii) An intimation shall also be sent to the assessee in a case where the loss declared in the return by the assessee is adjusted but no tax, interest or fee is payable by, or no refund is due to, him.

(viii) On the other hand, where there is neither any adjustment nor any tax due from or refund payable to the assessee, the acknowledgement of the return shall be deemed to be the intimation under section 143(1).

(ix) The scheme contemplates avoiding human interface and therefore, provides for computerised processing of returns for making the above adjustments i.e., the software will be designed to detect arithmetical inaccuracies and internal inconsistencies and make appropriate adjustments in the computation of the total income/fringe benefits.

(2) Mandatory processing of return of income before issuance of assessment order [Section 143(1D)]

(i) Section 143(1) requires processing of return of income filed under section 139(1) or in response to a notice issued under section 142(1).

(ii) An intimation has to be prepared or generated and sent to the assessee specifying the sum payable or the refund due, to the assessee.

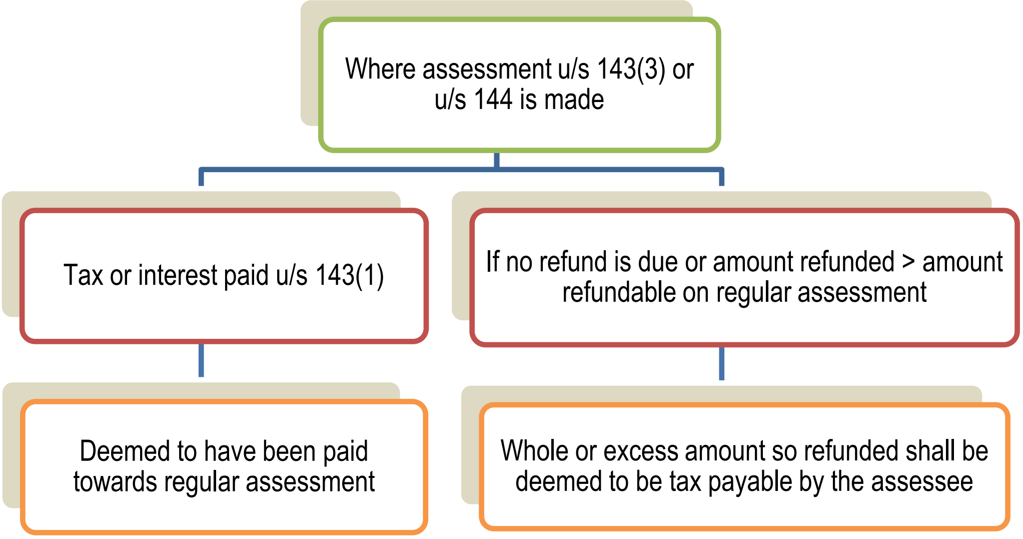
(iii) No intimation can be sent after the expiry of one year from the end of the financial year in which the return is made. This is provided in the second proviso to section 143(1).

(iv) In respect of returns furnished for A.Y.2017-18 or thereafter, processing of a return under section 143(1) is necessary even where a notice has been issued to the assessee under section 143(2).

(v) However, to address the concern of recovery of revenue in doubtful cases, section 241A provides that, for the returns furnished for A.Y.2017-18 or thereafter, where refund of any amount becomes due to the assessee under section 143(1) and the Assessing Officer is of the opinion that grant of refund may adversely affect the recovery of revenue, he may, for the reasons recorded in writing and with the previous approval of the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, withhold the refund upto the date on which the assessment is made.

(3) Regular assessment/Scrutiny assessment [Section 143(2)/(3)] - If the Assessing Officer or the prescribed income-tax authority [i.e., an income-tax authority not below the rank of an Income-tax Officer who has been authorised by the CBDT to act as income-tax authority for the purpose of section 143(2)] considers it necessary or expedient to ensure that the assessee has not understated his income or has not computed excessive loss or has not underpaid his tax in any manner he can issue a notice for making the assessment in the normal manner as at present. This will be a scrutiny assessment. It may be noted that notice for detailed scrutiny under section 143(2) cannot be issued after the expiry of 6 months from the end of the financial year in which the return of income is furnished.

On the day specified in the notice issued under section 143(2), or as soon afterwards as may be, after hearing such evidence as the assessee may produce and such other evidence as the Assessing Officer or the prescribed income-tax authority may require on specified points, and after taking into account all relevant material which he has gathered, the Assessing Officer shall, by an order in writing, make an assessment of total income or loss of the assessee, and determine the sum payable by him or refund of any amount due to him on the basis of such assessment.



Where assessment u/s 143(3) or u/s 144 is made

Tax or interest paid u/s 143(1)

Deemed to have been paid towards regular assessment

If no refund is due or amount refunded > amount refundable on regular assessment

Whole or excess amount so refunded shall be deemed to be tax payable by the assessee

It is also obligatory for research associations and other institutions exempt under clauses (21),(22B),(23A),(23B), sub-clauses (iv),(v),(vi) and (via) of clause (23C) of section 10 to file their returns of income. In these cases, the Assessing Officer cannot make an assessment denying exemption under section 10 without intimating the Central Government or the prescribed authority of the contravention of the provisions of the relevant sections and till the approval granted to these funds, trusts, institutions, universities, educational institutions or hospitals or medical institutions has been withdrawn or notification rescinded.

The time period for completing the assessment in such cases will exclude the period between the date on which the Assessing Officer gives the intimation of the default and date on which copy of the order withdrawing the approval is received by the Assessing Officer.

Section 2(15) provides that in case of a trust or institution, whose main object is the "advancement of object of general public utility", the purpose does not remain charitable in a previous year, if its commercial receipts exceed 20% of total receipts. However, this temporary excess in one year may not be treated as altering the very nature of the trust or institution so as to lead to cancellation of registration or withdrawal of approval or rescinding of notification issued in respect of trust or institution. Accordingly, such trust and institution does not get benefit of tax exemption under section 10(23C) or 11 or 12 in the year in which its receipts from commercial activities exceed 20% of total receipts, whether or not the registration or approval granted or notification issued is cancelled, withdrawn or rescinded in respect of such trust or institution. Consequently, in such a circumstance, no effect shall be given by the Assessing Officer to the exemption provisions under section 10(23C) while making an assessment of the total income or loss of the trust or institution for the previous year under section 143(3).

Assessing Officer empowered to send a proposal to the Central Government recommending withdrawal of approval of research association, university, college or other institution approved under section 35(1)(ii) and (iii)

(i) The guidelines, the manner and the conditions in accordance with which an application made by a research association, university, college or other institution shall be approved under section 35(1)(ii)/(iii) have been provided by the Taxation Laws (Amendment) Act, 2006. Also, the amendment provides for grant of one time approval, which means the approval is to remain in force unless it is withdrawn.

(ii) Therefore, the Assessing Officer is now required to satisfy himself as to the activities of the university, college or other institution referred to in clause (ii) or clause (iii) of section 35(1).

(iii) If the activities are not being carried out in accordance with all or any of the conditions subject to which any of the said entities had been approved, the Assessing Officer may, after giving a reasonable opportunity of showing cause to the concerned entity, send a proposal to the Central Government recommending withdrawal of approval.

(iv) The Central Government may, by order, withdraw the approval and forward a copy of the order to the concerned university, college or other institution and to the Assessing Officer.

(4) Scheme to be notified by the Central Government for greater efficiency, transparency and accountability [Section 143(3A)/(3B)/(3C)]

(i) The Central Government is empowered to notify a Scheme for assessing total income or loss of the assessee under section 143(3). Accordingly, the Central Government has, vide Notification No.61/2019 dated 12.9.2019, notified the E-assessment Scheme, wherein the assessment would be made in respect of such territorial area, or persons or class of persons, or incomes or class of incomes, or cases or class of cases, as may be specified by the CBDT [Refer to Annexure at the end of this Chapter wherein the E-assessment Scheme as contained in the said notification has been detailed]

(ii) The Scheme would ensure greater efficiency, transparency & accountability by –

(a) eliminating the interface between the Assessing Officer and the assessee in the course of proceedings to the extent technologically feasible;

(b) optimising utilisation of the resources through economies of scale and functional specialisation;

(c) introducing a team-based assessment with dynamic jurisdiction.

The Scheme so notified has to be laid before each House of Parliament.

(iii) In order to give effect to this scheme, the Central Government, may direct on or before 31.03.2020 by way of notification, that the other provisions of this Act relating to assessment of total income or loss would not apply or would apply with certain exceptions, modifications and adaptations specified in the notification. Accordingly, the Central Government has, vide Notification No. 62 dated 12.9.2019, for the purposes of giving effect to the E-assessment Scheme, 2019 made under section 143(3A), directed that the provisions of section 2(7A), section 92CA, section 120, section 124, section 127, section 129, section 131, section 133, section 133A, section 133C, section 134, section 142, section 142A, section 143,section 144A, section 144BA section 144C and Chapter XXI of the Income-tax Act, 1961 would apply to the assessment made in accordance with the said Scheme subject to certain exceptions, modifications and adaptations listed in said notification given as Annexure at the end of this Chapter.

Having filed a return, fails to comply with all the terms of a notice issued u/s 143(2)
A.O. shall make a best judgement assessment
After taking into account all relevant material which he has gathered
After giving the assessee an opportunity of being heard

(i) Best judgement assessment mandatory in all the three cases stated above - It is mandatory for the Assessing Officer to make a best judgment assessment and he has no discretion to make or not to make such assessment. These three cases are alternative and not cumulative for the purpose of making an ex parte assessment.

(ii) Opportunity of being heard - Before making best judgement assessment, the Assessing Officer has to take into account all relevant material which he has gathered. The assessee must be given an opportunity of being heard. Such opportunity shall be given by an Assessing Officer by serving a notice calling upon the assessee to show cause on a date and time to be specified in the notice, why the assessment should not be completed to the best of his judgment. Thereafter, the Assessing Officer shall make the assessment of total income or loss to the best of his judgment and determine the sum payable on the basis of such assessment. It may noted that no refund can be granted under section 144.

However, where a notice under section 142(1) has been issued prior to the making of an assessment under this section, it is not necessary to give such opportunity.

17.28 POWER OF JOINT COMMISSIONER TO ISSUE DIRECTIONS IN CERTAIN CASES [SECTION 144A]

(1) A Joint Commissioner may, on his own motion or on a reference being made to him by the Assessing Officer or on the application of an assessee, call for and examine the record of any proceeding in which an assessment is pending and, if he considers that, having regard to the nature of the case or the amount involved or for any other reason it is necessary so to do, he may issue such direction as he thinks fit for the guidance of the Assessing Officer to enable him to complete the assessment. Such directions shall be binding on the Assessing Officer.

(2) No directions which are prejudicial to the assessee shall be issued before an opportunity is given to the assessee to be heard.

17.30 PROVISION FOR CONSTITUTION OF ALTERNATE DISPUTE RESOLUTION MECHANISM [SECTION 144C]

An alternate dispute resolution mechanism which will aid speedy resolution of disputes on a fast track basis has now been provided for under the Income-tax Act, 1961. The significant features of the alternate dispute resolution mechanism are briefed hereunder –

(1) The Assessing Officer shall, forward a draft order of assessment to the eligible assessee if he proposes to make, on or after 1st October, 2009, any variation in the income or loss returned which is prejudicial to the interest of such assessee.

“Eligible assessee” means,-

(i) any person in whose case such variation arises as a consequence of the order of the Transfer Pricing Officer passed under sub-section (3) of section 92CA; and

(ii) any foreign company.

(2) The eligible assessee shall, within thirty days of the receipt by him of the draft order,-

(a) file his acceptance of the variations to the Assessing Officer; or

(b) file his objections, if any, to such variation with,—

(i) The Dispute Resolution Panel; and

(ii) The Assessing Officer.

“Dispute Resolution Panel” means a collegium comprising of three commissioners of Income-tax constituted by the CBDT for this purpose.

(3) The Assessing Officer has to complete the assessment on the basis of the draft order, if—

(a) the assessee intimates the acceptance of the variation to the Assessing Officer; or

(b) no objections are received within the period of 30 days specified in (2) above.

(4) The Assessing Officer shall, notwithstanding anything contained in section 153 or section 153B, pass the assessment order within one month from the end of the month in which,—

(a) the acceptance is received; or

(b) the period of filing of objections expires.

(5) The Dispute Resolution Panel shall, in a case where any objections are received, issue such directions, as it thinks fit, for the guidance of the Assessing Officer to enable him to complete the assessment.

(6) The Dispute Resolution Panel shall issue such directions, after considering the following, namely:—

(a) Draft order;

(b) Objections filed by the assessee;

(c) Evidence furnished by the assessee;

(d) Report, if any, of the Assessing Officer, Valuation Officer or Transfer Pricing Officer or any other authority;

(e) Records relating to the draft order;

(f) Evidence collected by, or caused to be collected by, it; and

(g) Result of any enquiry made by, or caused to be made by it.

(7) The Dispute Resolution Panel may, before issuing any such directions -

(a) make such further enquiry, as it thinks fit; or

(b) cause any further enquiry to be made by any income tax authority and report the result of the same to it.

(8) The Dispute Resolution Panel may confirm, reduce or enhance the variations proposed in the draft order. However, it cannot set aside any proposed variation or issue any direction as mentioned in (5) above, for further enquiry and passing of the assessment order.

The power of the DRP to enhance the variation as mentioned in section 144C(8) shall include and shall be deemed to have always included the power to consider any matter arising out of the assessment proceedings relating to the draft order. This power to consider any issue shall be irrespective of whether the matter was raised by the eligible assessee or not.

While exercising the aforesaid power for considering any matter arising out of the assessment proceedings relating to the draft order, the DRP can only enhance the variation. The power of reducing the variation is not accorded to DRP in respect of such matters.

(9) If the members of the Dispute Resolution Panel differ in opinion on any point, the point shall be decided according to the opinion of the majority of the members.

(10) Every direction issued by the Dispute Resolution Panel shall be binding on the Assessing Officer.

(11) If any direction is prejudicial to the interest of the assessee or the interest of the revenue, then, the same can be issued only after an opportunity of being heard is given to the assessee or the Assessing Officer, as the case may be.

(12) Such direction has to be issued within nine months from the end of the month in which the draft order is forwarded to the eligible assessee.

(13) Upon receipt of such direction, the Assessing Officer has to complete the assessment in accordance with the same, within one month from the end of the month in which the direction is received. This is notwithstanding anything contained in section 153 or section 153B. There is no requirement of providing any further opportunity of being heard to the assessee.

(14) The CBDT is empowered to make rules for the efficient functioning of the Dispute Resolution Panel and speedy resolution of the objections filed by the eligible assessee.

17.31 INCOME ESCAPING ASSESSMENT [SECTIONS 147 TO 149]

(1) Applicability - If the Assessing Officer has reason to believe that any income chargeable to tax has escaped assessment for any assessment year, he may, subject to the provisions of sections 148 to 153, assess or reassess such income and also any other income chargeable to tax which has escaped assessment and which comes to his notice subsequently in the course of the proceedings under this section, or re-compute the loss or the depreciation allowance or any other allowance, as the case may be, for the relevant assessment year.

The Assessing Officer may assess or reassess the income in respect of any issue (which has escaped assessment) which comes to his notice subsequently in the course of proceedings under this section, even though the reason for such issue does not form part of the reasons recorded under section 148(2).

(2) Time limit - Where an assessment under section 143(3) or 147 has already been made by the Assessing Officer for the relevant assessment year, then, no action shall be taken under this section after the expiry of four years from the end of the relevant assessment year.

The exception would be in cases where any income chargeable to tax has escaped assessment for such assessment year by reason of the failure on the part of the assessee to make a return under section 139, or in response to a notice issued under section 142(1) or section 148 or to disclose, fully and truly, all material facts necessary for his assessment for that assessment year.

It has been clarified that production before the Assessing Officer of account books or other evidence from which material evidence could with due diligence have been discovered by the Assessing Officer will not necessarily amount to disclosure.

The above time limit shall also not apply in a case where income chargeable to tax, in relation to an asset (including financial interest in an entity) located outside India, has escaped assessment for any assessment year. In effect, in such cases, the Assessing Officer can initiate assessment proceedings under section 147 even after the expiry of 4 years inspite of the assessee having –

(i) duly furnished his return of income and

(ii) fully and truly disclosing all material facts necessary for his assessment for that assessment year.

(3) Reason to believe - The Assessing Officer must have 'reason to believe' that income chargeable to tax had escaped assessment. The belief which prompts an Income-tax Officer to apply section 147 to any particular case must be that of an honest and reasonable person based upon reasonable grounds, and that the Assessing Officer may act under this section on direct or circumstantial evidence but not on a mere suspicion, gossip or rumor. The powers of the Assessing Officer are wide, but not plenary in nature. Care must be taken to note that the words used in the section are "reason to believe" and not 'reason to suspect'. The expression 'reason to believe' does not, however, mean a purely subjective satisfaction on the part of the Assessing Officer. The belief must be held in good faith. It cannot be a mere pretence. It is open to the Court to examine whether the reasons for the belief have a rational connection or a relevant bearing to the formation of the belief and are not extraneous or irrelevant to the purpose of the section. There is no requirement in any of the provisions of the Act or under any section laying down as a condition for the initiation of the proceeding that the reasons which induced the Assessing Officer, to issue the notice must also be communicated to the assessee. Therefore, the Assessing Officer need not communicate to the assessee the reasons, which led him to initiate the proceedings under section 147.

(4) Reassessment of matters other than subject matter of appeal or revision - The Assessing Officer may assess or reassess an income which is chargeable to tax and has escaped assessment other than the income involving matters which are the subject matter of any appeal, reference or revision.

(5) Circumstances when income is deemed to have escaped assessment - For the purpose of this section, the following shall also be deemed to be cases where income chargeable to tax has escaped assessment:

	Case	When income is deemed to have escaped assessment
(i)	Where the assessee's total income or the total income of any other person in respect of which he is assessable under this Act during the previous year exceeded the maximum amount which is not chargeable to income-tax.	No return of income has been furnished by the assessee
(ii)	Where a return of income has been furnished by the assessee but no assessment has been made	It is noticed by the Assessing Officer that the assessee has understated the income or has claimed excessive loss, deduction, allowance or relief in the return.
(iii)	Where the assessee is required to furnish a report in respect of any international transaction under section 92E.	The assessee has failed to furnish such report
(iv)	Where an assessment has been made	(a) income chargeable to tax has been under-assessed (b) such income has been assessed at too low a rate (c) such income has been made the subject of excessive relief under this Act (d) excessive loss or depreciation or any other allowance under this Act has been computed.
(v)	where a return of income has not been furnished by the assesse	On the basis of information or document received from the prescribed income-tax authority, under section 133C(2), it is noticed by the Assessing Officer that the income of the assessee exceeds the basic exemption limit
(vi)	where a return of income has been furnished by the assessee	On the basis of information or document received from the prescribed income-tax authority, under section 133C(2), it is noticed by the Assessing Officer that the assessee has understated the income or has claimed excessive loss, deduction, allowance or relief in the return

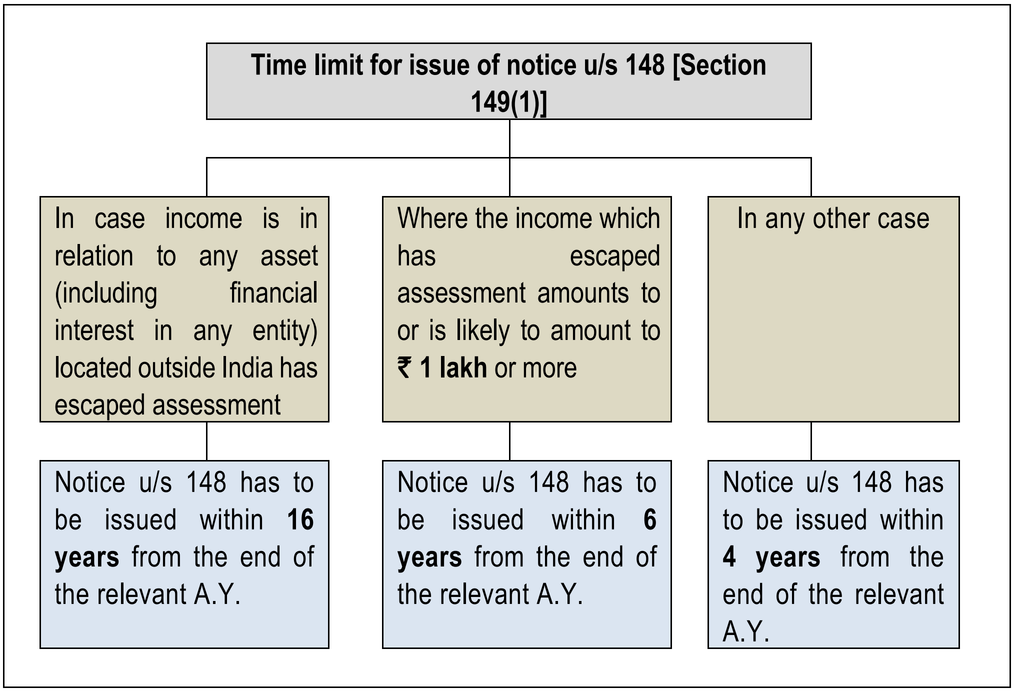
In addition, income chargeable to tax has escaped assessment, where a person is found to have any asset (including financial transaction in any entity) located outside India.

Note - The CBDT has, vide Circular No.40/2016 dated 9.12.2016, clarified that reopening of cases under section 147 is feasible only when the Assessing Officer "has reason to believe that any income chargeable to tax has escaped assessment for any assessment year" and not merely on the basis of any reason to suspect. Mere increase in turnover, because of use of digital means of payment or otherwise, in a particular year cannot be a sole reason to believe that income has escaped assessment in earlier years. Hence, past assessments cannot be reopened merely on the ground that the current year's turnover has increased.*

(6) Issue of notice where income has escaped assessment [Section 148] Before making the assessment, reassessment or recomputation under section 147, the Assessing Officer shall serve on the assessee, a notice requiring him to furnish a return within such period as may be specified in the notice, a return of his income or the income of any other person for whom he is assessable under the Act, during the previous year corresponding to the relevant assessment year in the prescribed form and verified in the prescribed manner and setting forth such other particulars may be prescribed. The provisions of this Act shall apply accordingly as if such return were a return required to be furnished under section 139.

The Assessing Officer shall, before issuing any notice under this section, record his reasons for doing so.

(7) Time limit for notice [Section 149]: Notice under section 148 must be issued within the following time limit:



Time limit for issue of notice u/s 148 [Section 149(1)]

In case income is in relation to any asset (including financial interest in any entity) located outside India has escaped assessment

Notice u/s 148 has to be issued within 16 years from the end of the relevant A.Y.

Where the income which has escaped assessment amounts to or is likely to amount to ₹ 1 lakh or more

Notice u/s 148 has to be issued within 6 years from the end of the relevant A.Y.

In any other case

Notice u/s 148 has to be issued within 4 years from the end of the relevant A.Y.

As per section 149(3), if the person on whom a notice under section 148 is to be served is a person treated as an agent of a non-resident under section 163 and the assessment, reassessment or re-computation in pursuance of the notice is to be made on him as the agent of such non-resident, there is a time limit of 6 years from the end of the relevant assessment year, beyond which such notice cannot be issued.

(8) Provision for cases where assessment is in pursuance of an order on appeal, etc. [Section 150]

(i) Section 149(1) provides the time limit for issue of notice u/s 148 for assessment, reassessment or recomputation where income has escaped assessment.

(ii) The restriction of time limit under section 149(1) is not applicable where notice u/s 148 is issued for making an assessment, reassessment or re-computation to give effect to any finding or direction contained in an order passed by any authority in any proceeding by way of appeal, reference or revision or by a Court in any proceeding under any other law. This relaxation is contained in section 150(1).

(iii) However, such relaxation will not apply where any such assessment or reassessment relates to an assessment year in respect of which an assessment or reassessment could not have been made at the time the order which was the subject matter of appeal, reference or revision, as the case may be, was made on account of the expiry of the time limit at that point of time itself. This restriction is contained in section 150(2)

(iv) Section 150(1) operates to relax the time restriction stipulated under section 149. Such relaxation can be made use of by the Assessing Officer only if the restriction placed under section 150(2) does not affect the operation of section 150(1). It may be noted that the restriction placed under section 150(2) is applicable only in respect of appeal, reference or revision referred to in section 150(1) but it does not apply with reference to an order passed by a Court in any proceeding under any law.

ILLUSTRATION

The assessment of Mr. Hari for A.Y.2012-13 was made on 28.3.2014 making an addition of ₹ 3,25,000 for a certain income received during the P.Y.2011-12. The assessee contested the addition before Commissioner (Appeals) but lost the case. The Appellate Tribunal passed an order on 26.2.2019 holding that the said income was not taxable in the P.Y.2011-12 but the same was taxable in the year of accrual, being P.Y.2006-07 relevant to A.Y.2007-08. The Assessing Officer issued notice under section 148 for A.Y.2007-08 in March 2019 bringing to tax the sum of ₹ 3,25,000. Is the notice valid?

Would your answer change if in the said case, the assessment order for A.Y.2012-13 was made on 4.4.2014 instead of 28.3.2014?

SOLUTION

Section 149 requires issue of notice under section 148 within a period of 6 years from the end of the relevant assessment year, where income escaping assessment exceeds ₹ 1 lakh. Accordingly, in respect of A.Y.2012-13, notice can be issued upto 31.3.2019. Section 150(1) enables issue of notice at any time to give effect to a finding contained in an appellate order. However, this is subject to the provisions of section 150(2), which places a restriction that, if on the date of passing of the order which was the subject-matter of appeal, no notice could have been issued, then, such notice cannot be issued by virtue of the enabling provision contained in section 150(1).

In this case, the income was taxable in the A.Y.2007-08 as per the order of the Appellate Tribunal. The six year time limit, in this case, expires on 31.3.2014. Since the original assessment in respect of such income was made on 28.3.2014, the notice issued under section 148 consequent to the Appellate Tribunal order is valid.

Had the assessment order for A.Y.2012-13 been made on 4.4.2014 (instead of 28.3.2014), then, the same would have been outside the six year time limit from A.Y.2007-08. Hence, since notice could not have been issued at that point of time, it cannot be now issued invoking the provisions of section 150(1).

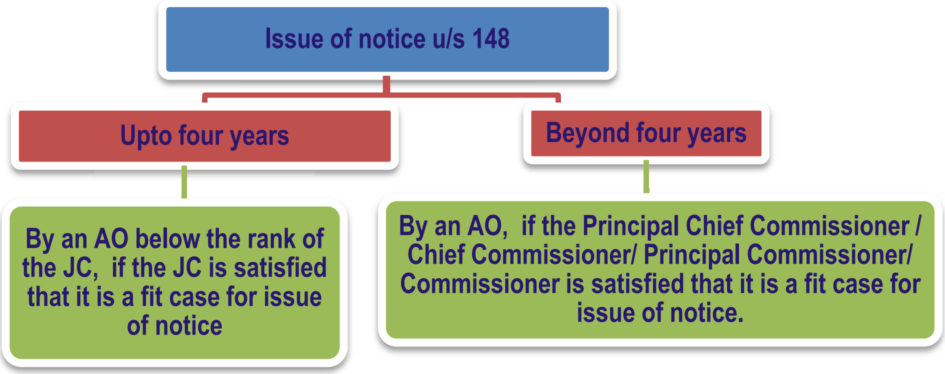
(i) Section 151 requires the Assessing Officer to obtain sanction from certain authorities before issue of notice for reassessment of income under section 148, under certain specified circumstances.

(ii) The simplified approval regime with effect from 1.6.2015 for issue of notice for reassessment is given hereunder -

	Time limit (from the end of the relevant A.Y.)	Issue of Notice under section 148 by	Competent authority who has to be satisfied on the reasons recorded by the A.O., that it is a fit case for the issue of such notice
(1)	Upto 4 years	Assessing Officer below the rank of Joint Commissioner	Joint Commissioner
(2)	After 4 years	Assessing Officer	Principal Chief Commissioner/ Chief Commissioner/Principal Commissioner/ Commissioner



Issue of notice u/s 148

Upto four years

Beyond four years

By an AO below the rank of the JC, if the JC is satisfied that it is a fit case for issue of notice

By an AO, if the Principal Chief Commissioner / Chief Commissioner/ Principal Commissioner/ Commissioner is satisfied that it is a fit case for issue of notice.

It is further clarified that in the above cases, the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner or the Joint Commissioner, as the case may be, has to be satisfied on the reasons recorded by the Assessing Officer about fitness of a case for the issue of notice under section 148. However, these authorities are not required to issue the notice themselves.

17.33 OTHER PROVISIONS [SECTION 152]

(1) Income escaping assessment to be charged to tax at rates applicable for respective years [Section 152(1)]

In the case of any assessment or reassessment or recomputation made under section 147, the income escaping assessment would be chargeable to tax at the rate applicable to the respective years in which such income is liable to be taxed.

(2) Assessee entitled to claim dropping of proceedings under section 147 in certain cases [Section 152(2)]

Where an assessment is reopened under section 147, the assessee may claim that the proceedings under section 147 shall be dropped on his showing that he had been assessed on an amount not lower than what he would be rightly liable for even if the income alleged to have escaped assessment had been taken into account. Alternatively, he can make such a claim on showing that the assessment or computation had been properly made. An assessee can avail this benefit only if he had not challenged any part of the original assessment order either by filing an appeal or filing a revision petition. The assessee, while making such claim, shall not be entitled to reopen matters concluded by an order under sections 154,155, 260, 262 or 263.

17.34 TIME LIMIT FOR COMPLETION OF ASSESSMENTS AND REASSESSMENTS [SECTION 153]

(1) Time limits in different cases/circumstances - The time limit for completion of assessment proceedings is 21 months from the end of the assessment year in which the income was first assessable. Further, no order of assessment, reassessment or re-computation could be made under section 147 after the expiry of 9 months from the end of the financial year in which notice under section 148 was served.

Since digitisation of processes within the Department has enhanced its efficiency in handling workload, the time limit has been accordingly reduced, so that the assessment proceedings are finalised more expeditiously.

17.35 ASSESSMENT PROCEDURE IN CASE OF SEARCH OR REQUISITION [SECTION 153A/153B/153C]

The block assessment procedure introduced in 1995 and in operation since then for 8 years with various amendments from time to time has been abolished in respect of search carried out after 31st May, 2003. In the place of the block assessment, a scheme of reassessment was introduced by inserting three sections 153A, 153B and 153C with effect from 1st June, 2003 for assessment in case of search or making requisition.

(1) Procedure for assessment where search is initiated under section 132 or books of account etc. are requisitioned under section 132A [Section 153A]

(i) Overriding provisions of section 153A: The provisions of section 153A prescribing a procedure for assessment in the case of search or requisition will apply notwithstanding anything contained in sections 139/147/148/149/151 and 153.

This section provides for the procedure for completion of assessment where a search is initiated under section 132 or books of account, other documents or any assets are requisitioned under section 132A after 31st May, 2003.

(ii) Issue of Notice: In such cases, the Assessing Officer shall issue notice to such person. Such a person has to furnish a return of income within such period as may be specified in the notice setting forth such other particulars as may be prescribed.

(iii) Filing of return in response to notice: Such a return should be filed in respect of six assessment years and for the relevant assessment year or years immediately preceding the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which the search was conducted under section 132 or requisition was made under section 132A.

The expression "relevant assessment year" shall mean an assessment year preceding the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted or requisition is made which falls beyond six assessment years but not later than ten assessment years from the end of the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted or requisition is made.

(iv) Year upto which income can be assessed: The Assessing Officer shall assess or reassess the total income of each of these six assessment years and for the relevant assessment year or years.

(v) Pending assessments to abate: The assessment or reassessment, if any, relating to any assessment year falling within the above period of six assessment years and for the relevant assessment year or years, pending on the date of the initiation of the search under section 132 or requisition under section 132A, as the case may be, shall abate. In other words, they will cease to be applicable.

(vi) Notice to be issued only for the assessment year relevant to the previous year of search in case of notified class of cases: The Central Government is empowered to notify class or classes of cases [except the cases where any assessment or reassessment has abated] in which the Assessing Officer shall not be required to issue notice for initiation of assessment or reassessment of total income for six assessment years immediately preceding the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which the search was conducted or requisition was made and for the relevant assessment year or years. The assessment proceedings in the class or classes of cases so notified shall be carried out only for the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search was conducted or requisition was made, except in cases where any assessment or reassessment in respect of any of the earlier six years and for the relevant assessment year or years has abated.

Accordingly, in exercise of this power, the Central Government has, through Notification No.42/2012 dated 4.10.2012, inserted Rule 112F which came into force from 1st July, 2012.

The said Rule provides that the Assessing Officer is not required to issue notice for assessing or reassessing the total income for six assessment years immediately preceding the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted or requisition is made, in the following cases:

(a) where as a result of a search under section 132(1) or a requisition made under section 132A, a person is found to be in possession of any money, bullion, jewellery or other valuable articles or things, whether or not he is the actual owner of the same, and

(b) where such search is conducted or such requisition is made in the territorial area of an assembly or parliamentary constituency in respect of which a notification has been issued under section 30 read with section 56 of the Representation of the People Act, 1951, or where the assets so seized or requisitioned are connected in any manner to the ongoing election in an assembly or parliamentary constituency.

However, this Rule is not applicable to cases where such search under section 132 or such requisition under section 132A has taken place after the hours of poll so notified.

Circular No.10/2012 dated 31.12.2012 clarifies that the aforesaid provision would reduce infructuous and unnecessary proceedings under the Income-tax Act, 1961 in cases where a search is conducted under section 132 or requisition is made under section 132A and cash or other assets are seized during the election period, generally on a single warrant, and no evidence is available, or investigation required, for any assessment year other than the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted or requisition is made.

In such cases, the officer investigating the case, with the approval of the Director General of Income-tax, is required to certify that -

(a) the search is conducted under section 132 or the requisition is made under section 132A in the territorial area of an assembly or parliamentary constituency in respect of which a notification has been issued under section 30, read with section 56 of the Representation of the People Act, 1951; or

(b) the assets seized or requisitioned are connected in any manner to the ongoing election process in an assembly or parliamentary constituency; and

(c) no evidence is available or investigation is required for any assessment year other than the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted or requisition is made.

The certificate of the investigating officer shall be communicated to the Commissioner of Income-tax and the Assessing Officer having jurisdiction over the case of such person.

(vii) Conditions to be satisfied for issue of notice beyond six years prior to the year of search: No notice for assessment or reassessment shall be issued by the Assessing Officer for the relevant assessment year or years unless:

(a) the Assessing Officer has in his possession books of account or other documents or evidence which reveal that the income, represented in the form of assets, which has escaped assessment amounts to or is likely to amount to ₹ 50 lakhs or more in the relevant assessment year or in aggregate in the relevant assessment years.

If the order of annulment is set aside, such revival shall cease to have effect.

(3) Assessment or reassessment of income of any other person [Section 153C]

(i) Handing over of books of accounts, documents, assets seized or requisitioned to jurisdictional Assessing Officer, where they belong to another person: Section 153C provides for assessment or reassessment of income of any other person.

Notwithstanding anything contained in section 139, section 147, section 148, section 149, section 151 and section 153, where the Assessing Officer is satisfied that -

(a) any money, bullion, jewellery or other valuable article or thing seized or requisitioned belongs to ; or

(b) any books of account or documents seized or requisitioned pertain to; or

(c) any information contained therein, relates to, any person, other than the person referred to in section 153A, then, the books of account or documents or assets, seized or requisitioned shall be handed over to the Assessing Officer having jurisdiction over such other person.

(ii) Jurisdictional Assessing Officer to proceed against other person [Section 153C(1)]: The Assessing Officer having jurisdiction over the other person shall proceed against such other person and issue such other person notice and assess or reassess income of such other person in accordance with the provisions of section 153A only if he is satisfied that the books of account or documents or assets seized or requisitioned have a bearing on the determination of the total income of such other person for six assessment years immediately preceding the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted or requisition is made and for the relevant assessment year or years referred to in section 153A(1).

(iii) Pending assessments to abate: The assessment or reassessment, if any, relating to any assessment year falling within the period of six assessment years referred to in the said section and for the relevant assessment year or years referred to in section 153A(1) pending on the date of initiation of the search under section 132 or on the date of making of requisition under section 132A, as the case may be, shall abate.

(iv) Date of initiation of search [Section 153C(1)]: In case of such other person, the reference to the date of initiation of the search under section 132 or making of requisition under section 132A in the second proviso to section 153A shall be construed as reference to the date of receiving the books of account or documents or assets seized or requisitioned by the Assessing Officer having the jurisdiction over such other person.

(v) Notice for the assessment year relevant to the previous year of search in case of notified class of cases: The Central Government is empowered to notify class or classes of cases [except the cases where any assessment or reassessment has abated] in which the Assessing Officer shall not be required to issue notice for initiation of assessment or reassessment of total income for six assessment years immediately preceding the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which the search was conducted or requisition was made and for the relevant assessment year or years as referred to in sub-section (1) of section 153A.

The assessment proceedings in the class or classes of cases so notified shall be carried out only for the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search was conducted or requisition was made, except in cases where any assessment or reassessment in respect of any of the earlier six years has abated.

Accordingly, in exercise of this power, the Central Government has, through Notification No.42/2012 dated 4.10.2012, inserted Rule 112F which came into force from 1st July, 2012.

The said Rule provides that the Assessing Officer is not required to issue notice for assessing or reassessing the total income for six assessment years immediately preceding the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted or requisition is made, in the following cases:

(a) where as a result of a search under section 132(1) or a requisition made under section 132A, a person is found to be in possession of any money, bullion, jewellery or other valuable articles or things, whether or not he is the actual owner of the same, and

(b) where, such search is conducted or such requisition is made in the territorial area of an assembly or parliamentary constituency in respect of which a notification has been issued under section 30 read with section 56 of the Representation of the People Act, 1951, or where the assets so seized or requisitioned are connected in any manner to the ongoing election in an assembly or parliamentary constituency.

However, this Rule is not applicable to cases where such search under section 132 or such requisition under section 132A has taken place after the hours of poll so notified.

Circular No.10/2012 dated 31.12.2012 clarifies that the aforesaid amendment was introduced with a view to reduce infructuous and unnecessary proceedings under the Income-tax Act, 1961 in cases where a search is conducted under section 132 or requisition is made under section 132A and cash or other assets are seized during the election period, generally on a single warrant, and no evidence is available, or investigation required, for any assessment year other than the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted or requisition is made.

In such cases, the officer investigating the case, with the approval of the Director General of Income-tax, is required to certify that -

(a) the search is conducted under section 132 or the requisition is made under section 132A in the territorial area of an assembly or parliamentary constituency in respect of which a notification has been issued under section 30, read with section 56 of the Representation of the People Act, 1951; or

(b) the assets seized or requisitioned are connected in any manner to the ongoing election process in an assembly or parliamentary constituency; and

(c) no evidence is available or investigation is required for any assessment year other than the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted or requisition is made.

The certificate of the investigating officer shall be communicated to the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax and the Assessing Officer having jurisdiction over the case of such person.

(vi) Manner of assessment where jurisdictional Assessing Officer receives books of account etc. after due date of filing of return [Section 153C(2)]: In respect of the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted under section 132 or requisition is made under section 132A, in case of such other person, where -

(a) no return of income has been furnished by such person and no notice under section 142(1) has been issued to him, or

(b) a return of income has been furnished by such person but no notice under sub-section (2) of section 143 has been served and limitation of serving the notice under sub-section (2) of section 143 has expired, or

(c) assessment or reassessment, if any, has been made, before the date of receiving of books of account or documents or assets seized or requisitioned by the Assessing Officer having jurisdiction over such other person, such Assessing Officer shall issue the notice and assess or reassess total income of such other person for such assessment year in the manner provided in section 153A. [Section 153C(2)].

The provisions of sub-section (2) would apply where books of account or documents or assets seized or requisitioned referred to in sub-section (1) has been received by the Assessing Officer having jurisdiction over such other person after the due date for furnishing the return of income for the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted under section 132 or requisition is made under section 132A.

(vii) Applicability of Supreme Court Guidelines on recording of satisfaction note under section 158BD to apply to proceedings under section 153C for the purposes of assessment of income of a person other than the person in respect of whom search is initiated under section 132 or books of account are requisitioned under section 132A [Circular No.24/2015, dated 31-12-2015]

The issue of recording of satisfaction for the purposes of section 158BD/153C has been subject matter of litigation.

The Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of M/s Calcutta Knitwears in its detailed judgment in Civil Appeal No. 3958 of 2014 dated 12-3-2014 (available in NJRS at 2014-LL-0312-51) has laid down that for the purpose of section 158BD of the Act, recording of a satisfaction note is a pre-requisite and the satisfaction note must be prepared by the Assessing Officer before he transmits the record to the other Assessing Officer who has jurisdiction over such other person under section 158BD[3].

[3] Section 158BC lays down the procedure for block assessment dealt with in Chapter XIV-B of the Income-tax Act, 1961, which applies where search is initiated under section 132 or books of account are requisitioned under section 132A on or before 31.5.2003. Section 158BD provides that where the Assessing Officer is satisfied that any undisclosed income belongs to any person, other than the person with respect to whom search is made under section 132 or books of account are requisitioned under section 132A, then, the books of account, other documents seized or requisitioned shall be handed over to the Assessing Officer having jurisdiction over such other person

The Supreme Court held that "the satisfaction note could be prepared at any of the following stages:

(a) at the time of or along with the initiation of proceedings against the searched person under section 158BC; or

(b) in the course of the assessment proceedings under section 158BC; or

(c) immediately after the assessment proceedings are completed under section 158BC of the searched person.

Several High Courts have held that the provisions of section 153C are substantially similar/ pari-materia to the provisions of section 158BD and therefore, the above guidelines of the Supreme Court, apply to proceedings under section 153C, for the purposes of assessment of income of other than the searched person. This view has been accepted by CBDT.

It is further clarified that even if the Assessing Officer of the searched person and the "other person" is one and the same, then also he is required to record his satisfaction as has been held by the Courts.

(4) Prior approval of Joint Commissioner required for assessment or reassessment in respect of search cases [Section 153D]

Section 153D provides that assessment or reassessment of search cases in respect of each assessment year referred to in section 153A(1)(b) or the assessment year referred to in 153B(1)(b) shall not be made by an Assessing Officer below the rank of Joint Commissioner without the previous approval of the Joint Commissioner.

However, the prior approval of Joint Commissioner is not required where the assessment or reassessment order is required to be passed by the Assessing Officer with the prior approval of Principal Commissioner or Commissioner under section 144BA(12).

(5) Presumption as to assets, books of account, etc. [Section 292C]

This section provides that where any books of account, other documents, money, bullion, jewellery or other valuable article or thing are or is found in the possession or control of any person in the course of a search under section 132 or survey under section 133A, it may, in any proceeding under this Act, be presumed that -

(i) such books of account, other documents, money, bullion, jewellery or other valuable article or thing belong or belongs to such person;

(ii) the contents of such books of account and other documents are true; and

and that Assessing Officer shall proceed under section 158BC against such other person and the provisions of Chapter XIV-B shall apply accordingly.

(iii) the signature and every other part of such books of account and other documents which purport to be in the handwriting of any particular person or which may reasonably be assumed to have been signed by, or to be in the handwriting of, any particular person, are in that person's handwriting;

(iv) In the case of a document stamped, executed or attested, that it was duly stamped and executed or attested by the person by whom it purports to have been so executed or attested.

Further, this presumption has also been extended to books of account, other documents or assets which have been delivered to the requisitioning officer in accordance with the provisions of section 132A. For this purpose, sub-section (2) provides that where any books of accounts, other documents or assets have been delivered to the requisitioning officer in accordance with the provision of section 132A, then, the presumption would apply as if such books of accounts, other documents or assets which had been taken into custody from the person referred to in clause (a) or clause (b) or clause (c), as the case may be, of sub-section (1) of section 132A, had been found in the possession or control of that person in the course of a search under section 132.

(6) Assessment to be made individually in search cases even where the authorization or requisition mentions the name of more than one person [Section 292CC]

(i) Under section 132 and section 132A, an authorization can be issued or a requisition can be made, as the case may be, where the Director General or the Director, in consequence of information in his possession, has reason to believe that any person is in possession of any money, bullion, jewellery or other valuable article or thing. In such a case, he may authorize the income-tax authorities mentioned therein to enter and search any building, place, vehicle, etc. and seize any such books of accounts, other documents, undisclosed property, etc.

(ii) In a case where search is initiated under section 132 or requisition is made under section 132A, assessment is to be completed under the provisions of section 153A or section 153C or section 143(3).

(iii) Section 292CC provides that:

(a) it shall not be necessary to issue an authorization under section 132 or make a requisition under section 132A separately in the name of each person;

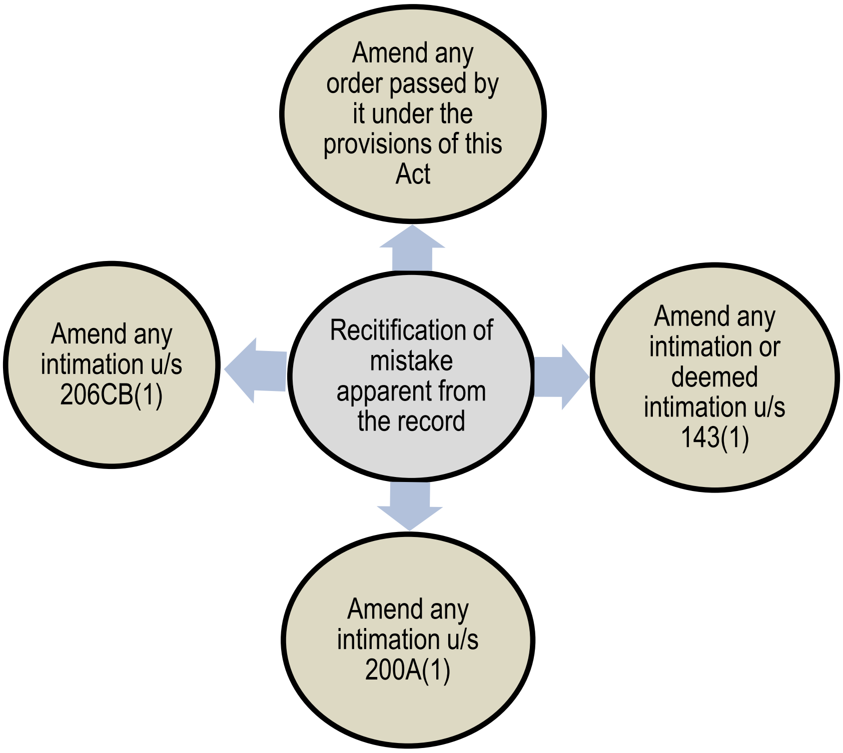
(b) where an authorization under section 132 has been issued or a requisition under section 132A has been made mentioning therein the name of more than one person, the mention of such names of more than one person on such authorization or requisition shall not be deemed to construe that it was issued in the name of an association of persons or body of individuals consisting of such persons;

These provisions would apply irrespective of anything contrary contained in any other provision of the Act.

(c) Further, even if an authorization under section 132 has been issued or requisition under section 132A has been made mentioning therein the name of more than one person, the assessment or reassessment shall be made separately in the name of each of the persons mentioned in such authorization or requisition.

17.36 RECTIFICATION OF MISTAKES [SECTION 154]

(1) Manner of rectification of a mistake apparent from the record - With a view to rectifying any mistake apparent from the record, an income tax authority referred to in section 116 may:



Amend any order passed by it under the provisions of this Act
Amend any intimation u/s 206CB(1)
Recitification of mistake apparent from the record
Amend any intimation or deemed intimation u/s 143(1)
Amend any intimation u/s 200A(1)

(2) Mistake apparent from the record - The jurisdiction of any authority under the Act to make an order under section 154 depends upon the existence of a mistake apparent on the face of the record.

(i) Mistake apparent from the record may be a mistake of fact as well as mistake of law - For instance, the treatment of non-agricultural income as agricultural income and granting exemption in respect of such income is an obvious mistake of law which could be rectified under section 154.

(ii) Mere change of opinion cannot be basis for rectification - A mere change of opinion, however, cannot be the basis on which the same or the successor Assessing Officer can treat a case as one of rectification of mistake. A mistake is one apparent from the record in case, where it is a glaring, obvious, patent or self-evident. Mistake, which has to be discovered by a long drawn process of reasoning or examination or arguments on points, where there may be two opinions, cannot be said to be mistake or error apparent from the record.

(iii) Subsequent decision of Supreme Court - A mistake arising as a result of subsequent interpretation of law by the Supreme Court would also constitute error apparent from the record.

(iv) Retrospective amendment of law - could also lead to rectification if an order is plainly and obviously inconsistent with the specific and clear provision, as amended retrospectively.

(3) Doctrine of Partial Merger - Where any matter has been considered and decided in any proceeding by way of appeal or revision relating to a rectifiable order, the authority passing such order may, amend the order in relation to any matter other than the matter which has been so considered and decided.

(4) Amendment may be suo motu or the same may be brought to notice by the assessee or deductor - The concerned authority may make an amendment on its own motion. However, he should mandatorily make the amendment for rectifying any such mistake which has been brought to its notice by the assessee or the deductor. Where the authority concerned is the Deputy Commissioner (Appeals) or the Commissioner (appeals), the mistake can be pointed out by the Assessing Officer also.

(5) Opportunity of being heard to be given to the assessee or deductor before enhancing an assessment or reducing a refund - An amendment which has the effect of enhancing an assessment or reducing a refund or otherwise increasing the liability of the assessee or the deductor, shall not be made unless the authority concerned has given notice to the assessee or the deductor of its intention so to do and has allowed the assessee or the deductor a reasonable opportunity of being heard.

(6) Action to be taken by the Assessing Officer depending upon the effect of the amendment made

	Case	Action to be taken by A.O.
(i)	Where an amendment is made under this section	An order shall be passed in writing by the authority concerned
(ii)	Where any such amendment has the effect of reducing the assessment, or otherwise reducing the liability of the	The Assessing Officer shall make any refund due to such assessee or the deductor

(iii)	Where any such amendment has the effect of enhancing the assessment or reducing the refund already made or otherwise increasing the liability of the assessee or the deductor	The Assessing Officer shall serve on the assessee or the deductor, as the case may be a notice of demand in the prescribed form specifying the sum payable

(7) Time limit for rectification - Except in cases which are specifically covered by section 155 or section 186(4) dealing with cancellation or registration, no amendment under this section shall be made after the expiry of four years from end of the financial year in which the order sought to be amended was passed.

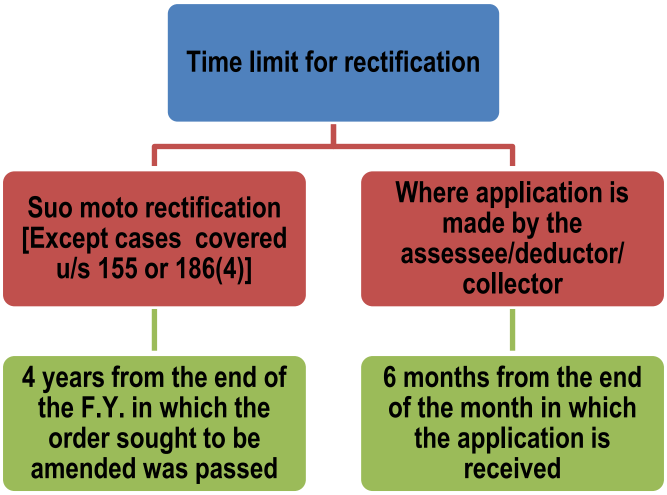
Where an application for amendment is made by the assessee or by the deductor or by the collector, the income-tax authority shall pass an order within a period of six months from the end of the month in which the application is received by it, either making the amendment or refusing the claim.



Time limit for rectification

17.37 OTHER AMENDMENTS [SECTION 155]

Where any assessment made in respect of any assessment year is required to be amended on account of any specific provisions in the Act mentioned hereunder, such an amending order can be passed at any time within 4 years from the end of the year in which such provision is attracted.

(1) Rectification of partner's assessment consequent to disallowance of remuneration in the hands of the firm [Sub-section (1A)] - Where a partner is assessed in respect of any remuneration from a firm under section 28(v) and later in the assessment or reassessment of the firm or reduction or enhancement made in the income of the firm under sections 154/155/250/254/263/264 or any order passed under section 245D on the application made by the firm, such remuneration is found not deductible under section 40(b), the assessment order of the partner shall be amended to exclude such remuneration which is not deductible in the firm's case. This is in view of the proviso to section 28(v) which states that the remuneration disallowed in the firm's case cannot be charged to tax in the partner's case.

The four year period for making the amendment would be reckoned from the end of the financial year in which the final order was passed in the case of the firm.

(2) Rectification of member's assessment consequent to enhancement or reduction of income of the AOP/BOI [Sub-section (2)] - The amendment of the assessment of a member of an AOP/BOI consequent upon the assessment or reassessment or any enhancement or reduction in the income of the AOP/BOI as a result of an order in appeal, reference, revision or rectification or as a result of an order made by the Settlement Commission

The four year period for making the amendment would be reckoned from the end of the financial year in which the final order was passed in the case of the AOP/BOI.

(3) Rectification of assessment consequent to disallowance of excess loss or depreciation allowed [Sub-section (4)] – The amendment resulting from any proceedings initiated under section 147 on account of re-computation of total income, where excessive loss or depreciation allowance had been allowed or losses had been set off and carried forward under the different heads.

The four year period for making the amendment would be reckoned from the end of the financial year in which the order was passed under section 147.

(4) Rectification necessitated on account of capital gains, which were not charged to tax by virtue of section 47(iv) or 47(v), becoming chargeable under section 47A [Sub-section (7B)] - Under the provisions of section 47A, capital gains which were not charged to tax by virtue of section 47(iv) or (v) may be deemed to be chargeable in certain circumstances. The Assessing Officer, may, accordingly, make an order of amendment at any time before the expiry of four years from the end of the previous year in which the relevant capital asset was converted into or treated as stock-in-trade or, as the case may be, the parent company ceasing to hold the entire share capital of the subsidiary company before the expiry of 8 years from the date of transfer.

(5) Rectification to give effect to TDS/TCS not deducted while computing tax liability [Sub-section (14)] - Where TDS/TCS certificates are not furnished along with the return of income and such certificates are produced before the Assessing Officer within two years from the end of the assessment year in which the income covered by the TDS/TCS certificate is assessable, the Assessing Officer can amend the order of assessment or intimation or deemed intimation under section 143(1).

However, such rectification under section 155(14) is possible only if the income from which tax has been deducted or the income on which tax has been collected has been disclosed in the return of income filed by the assessee for the relevant assessment year.

(6) Rectification to give effect to credit for income-tax paid outside India [Sub-section (14A)] - Where in the assessment for any previous year or in any intimation or deemed intimation under section 143(1) for any previous year,

- credit for income-tax paid in any country outside India or a specified territory outside India referred to in section 90, section 90A or section 91 has not been given on the ground that the payment of such tax was under dispute, and if subsequently such dispute is settled; and
- the assessee, within six months from the end of the month in which the dispute is settled, furnishes to the Assessing Officer evidence of settlement of dispute and evidence of payment of such tax along with an undertaking that no credit in respect of such amount has directly or indirectly been claimed or shall be claimed for any other assessment year, the Assessing Officer shall amend the order of assessment or any intimation or deemed intimation under section 143(1), as the case may be, and the provisions of section 154 shall, so far as may be, apply thereto.

However, the credit of tax which was under dispute shall be allowed for the year in which such income is offered to tax or assessed to tax in India.

(7) Rectification consequent to revision of full value of consideration in appeal or revision [Sub-section (15)] - Where the Assessing Officer adopts stamp duty as full value of consideration under section 50C and later, such value is revised in any appeal or revision, the Assessing Officer shall amend the assessment order to compute the capital gain by taking the full value of consideration to be the value so revised in such appeal or revision. The period of four years shall be reckoned from the end of the previous year in which the order revising the value was passed in that appeal or revision.

(8) Recomputation of capital gains on account of reduction of any compensation in a compulsory acquisition by any Court, Tribunal or any other authority [Sub-section (16)] - Where capital gains is recomputed on account of any reduction of any compensation in a compulsory acquisition by any Court, Tribunal, or any other authority, the Assessing Officer shall amend the assessment order so as to compute the capital gain by taking the compensation or consideration as reduced by any court, Tribunal or other authority. The four year time period shall be reckoned from the end of the previous year in which the order reducing the compensation was passed by the court, Tribunal or other authority.

(9) Rectification consequent to revoking of patent or exclusion of name of the assessee from patents register as patentee [Sub-section (17)] - Where deduction under section 80RRB is allowed and subsequent to the allowance of such deduction in respect of any patent, the Controller or the High Court passes an order under the Patents Act, 1970 revoking the patent or excluding the name of the assessee from the Patents Register as patentee in respect of that patent.

For the purpose of amending the order, the period of 4 years is to be reckoned from the end of the previous year in which such order of the Controller or High Court, as the case may be, is passed.

17.38 NOTICE OF DEMAND [SECTION 156]

When any tax, interest, penalty or fine or any other sum is payable consequent to any order passed under this Act, the Assessing Officer shall serve upon the assessee a notice of demand in the prescribed form, specifying the sum so payable.

The Apex Court has, in Sri Mohan Wahi v. CIT (2001) 248 ITR 799, held that failure to serve notice of demand renders the recovery proceedings invalid.

An intimation under section 143(1) or section 200A(1) or section 206CB(1) would be deemed to be a notice of demand for the purpose of section 156, where any sum is determined to be payable by the assessee under section 143(1) or by the deductor under section 200A(1) or by the collector under section 206CB(1).

Note - As per section 292BB, where an assessee had appeared in any proceedings or co-operated in any enquiry relating to an assessment or reassessment, it shall be deemed that any notice required to be served upon him, has been duly served upon him in time in accordance with the provisions of the Act and such assessee shall be precluded from raising any objection in any proceeding or enquiry that the notice was (a) not served upon him or (b) not served upon him in time or (c) served upon him in an improper manner. However, the above provision shall not be applicable where the assessee has raised such objection before the completion of such assessment or reassessment.

17.39 INTIMATION OF LOSS [SECTION 157]

When, in the course of the assessment of total income of any assessee, it is established that a loss has taken place which the assessee is entitled to have carried forward and set-off under the provisions of section 72(1)/73(2)/74(1)/74(3)/74A(3), the Assessing Officer shall notify the assessee by an order in writing the amount of the loss as computed by him for this purpose.

Question 1

Teachwell Education is a trust approved under section 10(23C)(vi) which runs various educational institutions. During the course of assessment under section 143(3), the Assessing Officer finds that the trust has carried out its activities in contravention of the section under which it was approved for exemption. Hence, the Assessing Officer wants to pass an order without giving exemption under section 10, which the assessee objects. You are required to examine the following with respect to the provisions of Income-tax Act, 1961.

(a) Whether the Assessing Officer can pass an order without giving exemption under section 10?

(b) Can the Assessing Officer get any additional time limit in completing this assessment?

Answer

(a) As per the first proviso to section 143(3), in the case of an institution approved under, inter alia, section 10(23C)(vi), which is required to furnish the return of income under section 139(4C), the Assessing Officer shall not pass an order of assessment under section 143(3) without giving effect to the provisions of section 10, unless he is of the view that the activities of the institution are being carried on in contravention to the provisions of that section and:

(1) he has intimated the Central Government or the prescribed authority, which had earlier approved the concerned institution, about the contravention of the relevant provisions by the institution; and

(2) the approval granted to such institution has been withdrawn or notification in that respect has been rescinded.

Therefore, in the aforesaid case, the Assessing Officer can pass an assessment order without giving exemption under section 10 to Teachwell Education, which is an educational institution approved under section 10(23C)(vi), only if he has intimated the contravention made by Teachwell Education to the Central Government or the prescribed authority, as the case may be, and its approval under section 10(23C)(vi) is withdrawn.

(b) As per Explanation 1 to section 153, in case the Assessing Officer intimates the contravention of provisions of section 10(23C)(vi) to the Central Government or the prescribed authority, the period commencing from the date of intimation of such contravention by the Assessing Officer and ending on the date on which the copy of the order of withdrawing the approval under section 10(23C)(vi) is received by the Assessing Officer, shall be excluded for computing the period of limitation for completing the assessment.

Further, in case the time limit available to the Assessing Officer for passing an assessment order, after such exclusion, is less than 60 days, such remaining period of assessment shall be deemed to have been extended to 60 days.

Therefore, the Assessing Officer will get the above mentioned additional time for completing the assessment of Teachwell Education.

Question 2

State with reasons whether return of income is to be filed in the following cases for the Assessment Year 2020-21:

(i) Mr. X, a resident individual, aged 80 years, has a total income of ₹ 2,85,000. He has claimed deduction of ₹ 1,50,000 under section 80C. Long-term capital gains of ₹ 80,000 is not taxable by virtue of the exemption available upto specified threshold under section 112A.

Would your answer change if Mr. X has incurred ₹ 1,05,000 towards payment of electricity bills for F.Y.2019-20?

(ii) ABC, a partnership firm, has a loss of ₹ 10,000 during the previous year 2019-20.

(iii) A registered association, eligible for exemption under section 10(23B), has income from house property of ₹ 2,60,000.

(iv) Mr. Y, aged 45 years, an employee of ABC (P) Ltd, draws a salary of ₹ 4,90,000 and has income from fixed deposits with bank of ₹ 10,000.

Answer

S. No.	Is filing of return required?	Reason
(i)	No	As per the provisions of section 139(1), every person, whose total income without giving effect to the provisions of Chapter VI-A exceeds the maximum amount not chargeable to tax, is required to furnish the return of income for the relevant assessment year on or before the due date. The gross total income of Mr. X before giving effect to deduction of ₹ 1,50,000 under section 80C is ₹ 4,35,000, which is less than the basic exemption limit of ₹ 5,00,000 applicable to an individual aged 80 years or more. Therefore, Mr. X need not furnish his return of income for the A.Y. 2020-21. Note – Yes, the answer would change, since Mr. X has incurred expenditure of an amount exceeding ₹ 1 lakh towards consumption of electricity. Hence, he would have to file his return for A.Y.2020-21 on or before the due date u/s 139(1).*
(ii)	Yes	As per section 139(1), it is mandatory for a firm to furnish its return of income or loss on or before the specified due date. Therefore, M/s ABC has to furnish its return of loss for the A.Y. 2020-21 on or before the due date under section 139(1), even if it has incurred a loss.
(iii)	Yes	As per section 139(4C), every institution referred to, inter alia, in section 10(23B), whose total income without giving effect to the provisions of section 10 exceeds the maximum amount not chargeable to tax, is required to furnish the return of income for the relevant assessment year on or before the due date under section 139(2). In the above case, the registered association has income from house property of ₹ 2,60,000 before exemption under section 10, which exceeds the basic exemption limit of ₹ 2,50,000. Therefore, it is under an obligation to furnish its return of income for the A.Y. 2020-21.

(iv)	Yes	As per the provisions of section 139(1), every person, whose gross total income exceeds the maximum amount not chargeable to tax, is required to furnish the return of income for the relevant assessment year on or before the due date. Mr. Y's salary income is ₹ 4,40,000 (i.e., ₹ 4,90,000 less standard deduction of ₹ 50,000). The gross total income of Mr. Y is ₹ 4,50,000 (₹ 4,40,000 + ₹ 10,000) which exceeds the basic exemption limit of ₹ 2,50,000 applicable to an individual. Therefore, Mr. Y has to furnish his return of income for the A.Y. 2020-21.

The Assessing Officer issued a notice under section 142(1) on the assessee on 24th December, 2019 calling upon him to file return of income for Assessment Year 2019-20. In response to the said notice, the assessee furnished a return of loss and claimed carry forward of business loss and unabsorbed depreciation. State whether the assessee would be entitled to carry forward as claimed in the return.

Answer

As per the provisions of section 139(3), any person who has sustained loss under the head 'Profit and gains of business or profession' is allowed to carry forward such a loss under section 72(1) or section 73(2), only if he has filed the return of loss within the time allowed under section 139(1). Also, the provisions of section 80 specify that a loss which has not been determined as per the return filed under section 139(3) shall not be allowed to be carried forward and set-off under, inter alia, section 72(1) (relating to business loss) or section 73(2) (losses in speculation business) or section 74(1) (loss under the head "Capital gains") or section 74A(3) (loss from the activity or owning and maintaining race horses) or section 73A (loss relating to a "specified business"). However, there is no such condition for carry forward of unabsorbed depreciation under section 32.

In the given case, the assessee has filed its return of loss in response to notice under section 142(1). As per the provisions stated above, the return filed by the assessee in response to notice under section 142(1) is a belated return and therefore, the benefit of carry forward of business loss under section 72(1) or section 73(2) or section 73A shall not be available. The assessee shall, however be entitled to carry forward the unabsorbed depreciation as per provisions of section 32(2).

The regular assessment of MNO Ltd. for the Assessment Year 2018-19 was completed under section 143(3) on 13th March, 2020. There was an audit objection by the Revenue Audit team that interest on loan should be disallowed partly as there was diversion of borrowed fund to sister concern without charge of interest.

Based on the above facts:

(i) State, with reasons, whether the Assessing Officer can issue notice under section 148 on the basis of audit objection of the Revenue Audit team.

(ii) If the action stated in (i) above is not permitted, what is the option open to the Revenue Department to deal with the said audit objection?

Answer

(i) Section 147 states that if the Assessing Officer has reason to believe that any income chargeable to tax has escaped assessment for any assessment year, he may assess or reassess such income and also any other income chargeable to tax which has escaped assessment and which comes to his notice subsequently in the course of the proceedings under this section.

The Assessing Officer should, therefore, have reason to believe that income chargeable to tax has escaped assessment. The belief should be that of the Assessing Officer and not of the revenue audit team.

Further, the Income-tax Act, 1961 does not confer jurisdiction on the Assessing Officer to change its opinion on the interpretation of a particular provision earlier adopted by it. If the issue had already been considered earlier during the course of scrutiny assessment and the Assessing Officer had come to a conclusion that no disallowance of interest paid by the assessee is required, even though loans had been given to sister concern without any interest, the same issue cannot be the basis of reassessment, merely because the revenue audit team takes a different view.

The Supreme Court, in ACIT v. ICICI Securities Primary Dealership Ltd. (2012) 348 ITR 299, held that re-opening of the assessment by the Assessing Officer on the ground of change of opinion is not valid.

Therefore, the Assessing Officer cannot issue notice under section 148 solely on the basis of audit objection of the Revenue Audit team.

If the Assessing Officer has acted only under compulsion of the audit party and not independently, the action of reopening would be invalid.

(ii) The option open to the Revenue is initiation of proceedings under 263, by the jurisdictional Commissioner. He has the power to call for and examine the records, if he is of the opinion that the order passed by the Assessing Officer under section 143(3) is erroneous in so far as it is prejudicial to the interests of the Revenue.

However, where the Assessing Officer has considered the issue in the original assessment and come to a conclusion that no disallowance of interest is called for, the Commissioner cannot initiate revisionary proceedings, merely because he holds a different view. Only where the view taken by the Assessing Officer is unsustainable in law, the Commissioner will be justified in initiating the revisionary proceedings under section 263. It was so held in CIT vs. Sohana Woollen Mills (2008) 296 ITR 238 (P & H).

Mere audit objection and possibility of a different view are not sufficient to conclude that the order of the Assessing Officer is erroneous or prejudicial to the interest of revenue.

Question 5

State whether the following assessees have to file return of income and if so, the due date for the assessment year 2020-21:

(i) A registered trade union having income from let out property of ₹ 1,00,000.

(ii) A public trust hospital having an aggregate annual receipt of ₹ 205 lacs and availing exemption of ₹ 2,20,000 under section 10(23C)(via) with total income of ₹ 1,10,000.

Answer

(i) A registered trade union is having income from house property, which is exempt under section 10(24).

Section 139(4C) mandates filing of return only when the total income exceeds the maximum amount which is not chargeable to tax without giving effect to the provisions of section 10. In this case, even without giving effect to section 10(24), the total income of the registered trade union is below basic exemption limit and therefore, there is no mandatory requirement to file the return of income.

(ii) Since the total income without giving effect to the exemption under section 10(23C)(via) is ₹ 3,30,000, which exceeds ₹ 2,50,000, the trust has to file its return of income by 30th September, 2020.

Question 6

Dishant received a notice under section 148 from the Assessing Officer for A.Y. 2016-17 on the ground that depreciation on certain assets was allowed in excess. The Assessing Officer recorded the reason for reopening. The original assessment was completed under section 143(3). In course of reassessment proceeding, the Assessing Officer also disallowed certain sum under section 14A in respect of expenses purported to be in relation to dividend from companies and tax-free interest. However, the Assessing Officer did not record the reason for applying the provisions of section 147 in respect of the issue of disallowance under section 14A and passed the order disallowing the excess depreciation and also certain sum under section 14A. Dishant contended that the Assessing Officer can make disallowance under section 14A, since the same was not the reason for reopening the assessment. Discuss the correctness of Dishant's contention.

Answer

Explanation 3 to section 147 permits the Assessing Officer to assess or reassess the income in respect of any issue (which has escaped assessment) which comes to his notice subsequently in the course of proceedings under section 147, even though the reason for such issue does not form part of the reasons recorded under section 148(2).

Therefore, in the instant case, the Assessing Officer has the power to disallow expenses under section 14A in addition to disallowing excess depreciation for which notice under section 148 was issued even though the reason for issue relating to disallowance under section 14A was not recorded under section 148(2).

Hence, the contention of Dishant is not correct.

Question 7

In the proceedings initiated under section 153A, the assessment order passed in respect of Mr. Simbu pertaining to a particular assessment year was annulled by the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal in its order passed on 28.1.2020. The same was received on 28.2.2020 by the jurisdictional Commissioner of Income-tax. Does the Department have any power to complete the assessment subsequent to such annulment? If yes, within what time limit?

Answer

As per section 153A(2), if any proceedings initiated under section 153A or any order of assessment or reassessment made under section 153A(1) has been annulled in any appeal or other legal proceeding, the abated assessment or reassessment relating to any assessment year shall stand revived with effect from the date of receipt of the order of such annulment by the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner. If the order of annulment is set aside, such revival shall cease to have effect.

The time limit for completion of such assessment or reassessment shall be one year from the end of the month in which the abated assessment revives or within the period specified in section 153B(1) [i.e., 21 months[4] from the end of the financial year in which the last of authorisations for search or requisition was executed], whichever is later.

Question 8

What will be the consequences when Mr. Raghav made payment of ₹ 75,000 in cash to a travel agent for his travel to Saudi Arabia to be undertaken for business purposes by quoting intentionally the wrong PAN? Would your answer be different if such cash payment was made for his travel to Nepal, instead of Saudi Arabia?

[4] Assuming that the last of authorisations for search/requisition was executed prior to previous year 2018-19.

Answer

If a person who is required to quote his permanent account number in any document referred to in section 139A(5)(c), quotes a number which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, the Assessing Officer may direct that such a person shall pay by way of penalty a sum of ₹ 10,000 under section 272B(2).

In the given case, if Mr. Raghav travels to Saudi Arabia and pays his travel agent cash in excess of ₹ 50,000, such a transaction is covered by section 139A(5)(c) read with Rule 114B and therefore, Mr. Raghav has to quote his PAN. Since Mr. Raghav has misquoted his PAN, penalty under section 272B(2) is leviable. Mr. Raghav has to be given an opportunity of being heard in the matter. If Mr. Raghav is not able to prove that there was a reasonable cause for the said failure, penalty under section 272B(2) would be imposable.

The answer would remain the same even if such cash payment was made for his travel to Nepal.

Question 9

For facilitating expeditious resolution of disputes relating to international transactions involving transfer pricing and foreign companies, the Income-tax Act, 1961, has provided for "alternate dispute resolution mechanism". In this context, you are required to answer the following:

(i) What meanings have been assigned to "dispute resolution panel" and the "eligible assessee" under this mechanism?

(ii) When can a grievance for resolution be filed by an assessee?

(iii) What evidences are being considered by the panel to redress the grievance of the assessee?

Answer

(i) The term "Dispute Resolution Panel" has been defined to mean a collegium comprising of three Principal Commissioners or Commissioners of Income-tax constituted by the Board for this purpose.

The term "Eligible Assessee" means any person in whose case the variation referred to in section 144C(1) in the income or loss returned arises as a consequence of the order of the Transfer Pricing Officer passed under section 92CA(3) and any foreign company.

(ii) The Assessing Officer shall forward a draft of the proposed order of assessment to the eligible assessee and on receipt of such order, the eligible assessee shall, within thirty days of the receipt of the draft order, file his acceptance of the variations to the Assessing Officer or file his objections, if any, to such variation, with the Dispute Resolution Panel and the Assessing Officer.

(iii) The Dispute Resolution Panel shall, in a case where any objections are received, take into consideration:-

(a) the draft order

(b) the objections filed by the assessee

(c) the evidence furnished by the assessee

(d) the report, if any, of the Assessing Officer, Valuation Officer or Transfer Pricing Officer or any other authority

(e) the records relating to the draft order

(f) the evidence collected by, or caused to be collected by it

(g) the result of any enquiry made by or caused to the made by it, and issue such directions, as it thinks fit, for the guidance of the Assessing Officer to enable him to complete the assessment.

Question 10

The Assessing Officer has the power to make an assessment to the best of his judgment, in certain situations. What are they?

Answer

Under section 144, the Assessing Officer, after taking into account all relevant material which he has gathered, is under an obligation to make an assessment of the total income or loss to the best of his judgment and determine the sum payable by the assessee in the following cases –

(1) Where any person fails to make the return under section 139(1) and has not filed a belated return under section 139(4) or a revised return under section 139(5).

(2) Where any person fails to comply with all the terms of a notice issued under section 142(1) or fails to comply with a direction issued under section 142(2A) for getting the accounts audited.

(3) Where any person, having made a return, fails to comply with all the terms of a notice issued under section 143(2).

Further, section 145(3) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 permits the Assessing Officer to make an assessment in the manner provided in section 144:

(i) where the Assessing Officer is not satisfied about the correctness or completeness of the accounts of the assessee; or

(ii) where the method of accounting under section 145(1) has not been regularly followed by the assessee;

(iii) where the income has not been computed in accordance with "Income Computation and Disclosure Standards" notified by the Central Government under section 145(2).

Question 11

The assessment of CNK Associates, a partnership firm, for the assessment year 2017-18 was made under section 143(3) on 31st July, 2019. The Assessing Officer made two additions to the income of the assessee viz. (a) addition of ₹ 2 lacs under section 40(a)(ia) due to non-furnishing of evidence of payment of TDS and (ii) addition of ₹ 5 lacs on account of unexplained cash credit. The assessee contested addition on account of unexplained cash credit in appeal to the Commissioner (Appeals). The appeal was decided in January, 2020 against the assessee. The assessee approaches you for your suggestion as to whether it should apply for revision to the Commissioner under section 264 or rectification to the Assessing Officer under section 154 as regards disallowance under section 40(a)(ia). What should be your suggestion?

Answer

The Commissioner cannot exercise his power of revision under section 264 where the order sought to be revised has been made the subject of an appeal to the Commissioner (Appeals) or to the Appellate Tribunal [Section 264(4)], even if the relief claimed in the revision is different from the relief claimed in the appeal. This was the view of the Supreme Court in the case of Hindustan Aeronautics Limited vs. CIT (2000) 243 ITR 808. It is not open to the assessee to seek recourse to revision under section 264 after the appeal is decided. Therefore, although the matter of addition of ₹ 2 lacs under section 40(a)(ia) was not taken before the Commissioner (Appeals), the assessee, CNK Associates cannot apply for revision under section 264 in respect of the same.

Under section 154(1A), where any matter had been considered and decided in any proceeding by way of appeal or revision, rectification of such matter cannot be done by the Assessing Officer. However, in respect of the matter which has not been considered and decided in the appeal or revision, the order of the Assessing Officer can be rectified under section 154. Thus, the assessee can apply to the Assessing Officer for rectification of the order in respect of addition under section 40(a)(ia), as this matter has not been considered and decided in any proceeding by way of appeal or revision.

Question 12

Examine critically in the context of provisions of the Act "Can the Assessing Officer issue notice under section 148 to reopen the same assessment order on the same grounds for which the CIT had issued notice under section 263 of the Act"?

Answer

The Assessing Officer cannot issue notice under section 148 to reopen the same assessment order on the same grounds for which the Commissioner had issued notice under section 263 of the Income-tax Act, 1961, since the third proviso to section 147 specifically provides that the Assessing Officer may assess or reassess an income which is chargeable to tax and has escaped assessment, other than the income involving matters which are the subject matter of any appeal, reference or revision. Therefore, if the income relates to a matter which is the subject matter of revision under section 263, then the Assessing Officer cannot issue notice under section 148 to reopen the assessment order.

Question 13

Is the Assessing Officer empowered to assess or reassess an income which is chargeable to tax and has escaped assessment, in a case which is pending before the Appellate Tribunal? Discuss.

Answer

As per third proviso to section 147, the Assessing Officer may assess or reassess an income which is chargeable to tax and which has escaped assessment, other than the income involving matters which are the subject matter of any appeal, reference or revision. Therefore, in respect of the matters which are the subject matter of an appeal before the Appellate Tribunal, it is not possible for the Assessing Officer to initiate proceeding under section 147. However, in respect of other matters, which are not the subject matter of the appeal, the Assessing Officer can initiate proceeding under section 147.

Question 14

A search was conducted under section 132 in the business premises of Harish on 15th December, 2019. At that time, assessments under section 143(3) for A.Y. 2017-18 and A.Y. 2018-19 and reassessment proceeding under section 147 for A.Y. 2016-17 were pending before the Assessing Officer.

(i) What are the assessment years for which notice can be issued for making post-search assessment?

(ii) What would be the fate of pending assessments and reassessment?

(iii) What would be the effect, if the post-search assessment orders are annulled by the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal?

Answer

(i) The notice under section 153A can be issued for six assessment years preceding the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which the search is conducted. In this case, the search is conducted in the previous year 2019-20, the relevant assessment year for which is A.Y.2020-21. Therefore, notice can be issued for the six preceding assessment years i.e. for assessment years 2014-15 to 2019-20.

Further, notice for assessment or reassessment can be issued by Assessing Officer for the relevant assessment year or years (i.e. for A.Y.2010-11 to A.Y.2013-14) if the following conditions are satisfied:

(a) The Assessing Officer has in his possession, books of account or other documents or evidence which reveal that the income, represented in the form of asset, which has escaped assessment amounts to or is likely to amount ₹ 50 lakhs or more in the relevant assessment year or in aggregate in the relevant assessment years.

(b) The income so referred above has escaped assessment for such year or years; and

(c) The search under section 132 is initiated or requisition under section 132A is made on or after 01.04.2017 (This condition is satisfied since the search has taken place in December, 2019).

Note - The expression "relevant assessment year" shall mean an assessment year preceding the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted or requisition is made which falls beyond six assessment years but not later than ten assessment years from the end of the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted or requisition is made.

"Asset" shall include immovable property being land or building or both, shares and securities, loans and advances, deposits in bank account.

(ii) As per section 153A, the assessment or reassessment relating to any assessment year, falling within the above period of six assessment years and for the relevant assessment year or years, pending on the date of initiation of the search under section 132, shall abate. In other words, they will cease to be applicable. Therefore, the assessments under section 143(3) for assessment years 2017-18 and 2018-19 and the reassessment proceeding under section 147 for assessment year 2016-17 shall abate.

(iii) Section 153A provides that where the post-search assessment order is annulled in any appeal or any other legal proceeding, the abated assessment and reassessment proceedings shall stand revived. Therefore, the assessments under section 143(3) relating to assessment years 2017-18 and 2018-19 and the reassessment proceeding relating to assessment year 2016-17, which abated on initiation of search, shall stand revived with effect from the date of receipt of the order of such annulment by the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner.

Question 15

A search was conducted under section 132 in the business premises of Sanskar on 5th March, 2019. The search was concluded by executing last of authorisation for search on 21st March, 2019. Since the search is concluded in the financial year 2018-19, and other conditions are also fulfilled, the Assessing Officer issued notice under section 153A on Sanskar for preceding ten Assessment Years prior to the Assessment Year relevant to the previous year 2018-19. Thus, he issued the notice from A.Y. 2009-10 to A.Y.2018-19. Discuss the correctness of the action taken by Assessing Officer.

Answer

As per section 153A, the Assessing Officer can issue the notice to file a return in respect of six assessment years and for the relevant assessment year or years immediately preceding the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which the search was conducted under section 132 or requisition was made under section 132A.

However, no notice for assessment or reassessment shall be issued by Assessing Officer for the relevant assessment year or years unless:

(a) He has, in his possession, books of account or other documents or evidence which reveal that the income, represented in the form of assets, which has escaped assessment amounts to or is likely to amount ₹ 50 lakhs or more in the relevant assessment year or in aggregate in the relevant assessment years.

(b) The income so referred above has escaped assessment for such year or years.

(c) The search under section 132 is initiated or requisition under section 132A is made on or after 01.04.2017

The expression "relevant assessment year" shall mean an assessment year preceding the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted or requisition is made which falls beyond six assessment years but not later than ten assessment years from the end of the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted or requisition is made.

Thus, it is clear that the Assessing Officer can issue the notice in respect of four assessment years which falls beyond six assessment years, subject to fulfillment of aforesaid conditions. As per condition (c) above, search must be initiated on or after 01.04.2017.

In the given case, Assessing Officer has initiated the search on 5.03.2019 and concluded on 21.03.2019. Therefore, the condition given in (c) is satisfied. Assuming that conditions given in (a) and (b) are also satisfied, the Assessing Officer could issue the notice for ten assessment years from the end of the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted. i.e. from A.Y.2013-14 to A.Y. 2018-19 as well as the relevant assessment years, namely, A.Y. 2009-10 to A.Y. 2012-13

Hence, the action of Assessing Officer in issuing the notice under section 153A for A.Y.2009-10 to A.Y.2018-19, is correct.

Question 16

Examine whether the Assessing Officer has the power to make any adjustment to income disclosed by the assessee in the return of income in course of processing the return under section 143(1)?

Answer

The procedure to be followed for summary assessment is contained in section 143(1). As per section 143(1), the total income or loss of an assessee shall be computed after making the following adjustments to the returned income:

(i) any arithmetical error in the return; or

(ii) an incorrect claim, if such incorrect claim is apparent from any information in the return.

(iii) disallowance of loss claimed, if return is filed beyond due date u/s 139(1)

(iv) disallowance of expenditure indicated in the audit report but not taken into account in computing the total income in the return

(v) disallowance of deduction claimed under section u/s 10AA, 80-IA, 80-IAB, 80-IB, 80-IC, 80-ID or 80-IE, if return is filed beyond due date u/s 139(1)

No such adjustment shall be made unless as intimation is given to the assessee of such adjustment either in writing or electronic mode. Further, Assessing Officer shall make any adjustment after considering the response received from the assessee, if any. Where no response is received with 30 days of the issue of such notice, the above adjustment can be made.

For the purpose of section 143(1), "an incorrect claim apparent from any information in the return" means such claim on the basis of an entry, in the return of income:

(i) of an item, which is inconsistent with another entry of the same or some other item in such return;

(ii) in respect of which, the information required to be furnished under the Income-tax Act, 1961 to substantiate such entry, has not been so furnished;

(iii) in respect of a deduction, where such deduction exceeds specified statutory limit which may be expressed as monetary amount or percentage or ratio or fraction.

Question 17

Can the Assessing Officer complete the assessment of income from international transactions in disregard of the order passed by the Transfer Pricing Officer by accepting the contention of the assessee?

Answer

Section 92CA(4) provides that the order of the Transfer Pricing Officer determining the arm's length price of an international transaction is binding on the Assessing Officer and the Assessing Officer shall proceed to compute the total income in conformity with the arm's length price determined by the Transfer Pricing Officer.

Therefore, the Assessing Officer cannot complete the assessment of income from international transactions in disregard of the order of Transfer Pricing Officer and on the basis of contention raised by the assessee.

Question 18

Tai Ltd. filed its return of income for assessment year 2019-20 on 26th September, 2019. The return is selected for regular assessment under section 143(3) for which notice under section 143(2) is served on the company on 3rd October, 2020. The company responded to the notice under section 143(2). Examine whether the service of the notice is within time and if not, whether the assessment order can be challenged by the assessee.

Answer

The time limit for service of notice under section 143(2) is six months from the end of the financial year in which the return of income was furnished by the assessee. The return of income for assessment year 2019-20 was filed by the assessee on 26th September, 2019. Therefore, the notice under section 143(2) has to be served by 30th September, 2020. However, the notice was served on the assessee only on 3rd October, 2020. Hence, the notice issued under section 143(2) is time-barred.

However, as per section 292BB, where an assessee had appeared in any proceedings or co-operated in any enquiry relating to an assessment or reassessment, it shall be deemed that any notice required to be served upon him, has been duly served upon him in time in accordance with the provisions of the Act and such assessee shall be precluded from raising any objection in any proceeding or enquiry that the notice was (a) not served upon him or (b) not served upon him in time or (c) served upon him in an improper manner.

The above provision shall not be applicable where the assessee has raised such objection before the completion of such assessment or reassessment. Therefore, in the instant case, if the assessee, Tai Limited, had raised an objection to the proceeding, on the ground of non-service of the notice under section 143(2) upon it on time, then, the validity of the assessment order can be challenged. In absence of such objection, the assessment order cannot be challenged.

Question 19

In the case of Mr. Rajesh, a summary assessment was made under section 143(1) for assessment year 2016-17 without calling him. Thereafter, Mr. Rajesh has received a notice under section 148 on 6th April, 2019 for reopening of assessment. Can Mr. Rajesh challenge the legality of the notice on the ground of change of opinion?

Answer

Under the scheme of section 143(1), only the adjustments relating to any arithmetical error in the return, incorrect claim which is apparent from any information in the return, disallowance of loss claimed where return of income for set-off of loss is claimed was filed beyond the due date under section 139(1), disallowance of expenditure indicated in the audit report but not taken into account in computing total income in the return and disallowance of deduction claimed under section 10AA, sections 80-IA to 80-IE, where return is furnished beyond due date. In short, what is permissible is only correction of errors apparent on the basis of the of the return and tax audit report filed. Therefore, the intimation given under section 143(1) is only a preliminary assessment, commonly referred to as a summary assessment without calling the assessee. The same cannot be treated as an order of assessment under section 143(3). Since there has been no assessment under section 143(3) in this case, the question of change of opinion does not arise.

Therefore, the assessee cannot challenge the legality of the notice issued under section 148 reopening the assessment on the ground of change of opinion in a case where no assessment is made under section 143(3). This inference is supported by the Supreme Court ruling in ACIT vs. Rajesh Jhaveri Stock Brokers P. Ltd. (2007) 291 ITR 500.

Question 20

Discuss the correctness or otherwise of the following proposition in the context of the Income-tax Act, 1961:

A fresh claim before the Assessing Officer can be made only by filing a revised return and not otherwise.

Answer

This proposition is correct. A return of income filed within the due date under section 139(1) or a belated return filed under section 139(4) may be revised by filing a revised return under section 139(5) where the assessee finds any omission or wrong statement in the original return subject to satisfying other conditions. There is no provision in the Income-tax Act, 1961, to make changes or modification in the return of income by filing a letter before the Assessing Officer. The revised return can be filed at any time before the end of the relevant assessment year or before completion of assessment, whichever is earlier. In a case where a return of income has been filed within the due date under section 139(1) or a belated return is filed under section 139(4), the only option available to the assessee to make an amendment to such return is by way of filing a revised return under section 139(5). Therefore, a fresh claim can be made before the Assessing Officer only by filing a revised return and not otherwise. The Supreme Court, in Goetze (India) Ltd. vs. CIT (2006) 284 ITR 323, has held that there is no provision in the Income-tax Act, 1961 to allow an amendment in the return of income filed except by way of filing a revised return.

Question 21

The Assessing Officer within the powers vested in him under section 142(2A), while examining the accounts of PNF Ltd., had ordered to get the same audited. The company challenges this order on the ground "that the opportunity was not provided to them by the Assessing Officer prior to passing of such an order". Decide the correctness of the action of the Assessing Officer.

Answer

As per the proviso to section 142(2A), the Assessing Officer shall not direct the assessee to get the accounts so audited unless the assessee has been given a reasonable opportunity of being heard.

Therefore, in this case, the order of the Assessing Officer is not valid, since the assessee was not given an opportunity of being heard prior to passing of such order.

Question 22

Smt. Kanti engaged in the business of growing, curing, roasting and grounding of coffee after mixing chicory had a total income of ₹ 6,00,000 from this business which was her only source of income during the year ended on 31.3.2020. She consults you to have an opinion whether she is required to file return of income for the A.Y. 2020-21 as per provisions of section 139(1).

Would your answer change if she had travelled to USA during the P.Y.2019-20 and incurred ₹ 2.20 lakhs for the same?

Answer

The clarification regarding filing of return of income by the coffee growers being individuals covered by Rule 7B of the Income-tax Rules, 1962 is given in Circular No.10/2006 dated 16.10.2006. According to the Circular, an individual deriving income from growing, curing, roasting and grounding of coffee with or without mixing chicory, would not be required to file the return of income if the aggregate of 40% of his or her income from growing, curing, roasting and grounding of coffee with or without mixing chicory and income from all other sources liable to tax in accordance with the provisions of this Act, is equal to or less than the basic exemption limit prescribed in the First Schedule of the Finance Act of the relevant year.

In this case, Smt. Kanti has a total income of ₹ 6,00,000 from this business, which was her only source of income for P.Y.2018-19. 40% of her total income works out to ₹ 2,40,000, which is less than the basic exemption limit of ₹ 2,50,000 in respect of an individual assessee. Therefore, Smt. Kanti is not required to file a return of income for the A.Y.2020-21 as per the provisions of section 139(1).

If Smt. Kanti had travelled to USA during the P.Y.2019-20 and incurred ₹ 2.20 lakhs on such travel, she would be required to mandatorily file a return of income for A.Y.2020-21 on or before the due date u/s 139(1), even though her total income does not exceed the basic exemption limit.

Question 23

Ram, an individual, filed his return of income for the assessment year 2020-21 on 15.6.2020. He later discovered that he had not claimed deduction under section 80C in the said return. He claimed the said deduction through a letter addressed to the Assessing Officer. The Assessing Officer completed the assessment without allowing the deduction claimed by Ram. Is the Assessing Officer justified in doing so?

Answer

The Supreme Court has, in Goetze (India) Ltd. v. CIT (2006) 284 ITR 323, ruled that the assessing authority has no power to entertain a claim for deduction made after filing of the return of income otherwise than by way of a revised return. In the instant case, Ram has claimed the deduction under section 80C, which he omitted to claim in the original return of income, through a letter addressed to the Assessing Officer and not by filing a revised return under section 139(5). In view of the decision of the Supreme Court cited above, the Assessing Officer was justified in completing the assessment without allowing the deduction under section 80C.

Question 24

Examine the correctness or otherwise of the following statements in the context of provisions contained in the Income-tax Act, 1961 and the decided case laws:

"The Assessing Officer is bound to allow the set-off of brought forward losses under section 72 even if the assessee has not claimed the same in the return filed".

Answer

The statement is correct.

The Supreme Court has, in CIT v. Mahalakshmi Sugar Mills Co. Ltd. (1986) 160 ITR 920, held that it is the duty of the Assessing Officer to apply the relevant provisions of the Act for the purpose of determining the true figure of the assessee's total income and consequential tax liability. Merely because the assessee has not claimed the set-off in the return filed, it cannot relieve the Assessing Officer of his duty to apply section 72 in the appropriate case.

As per CBDT Circular No.14 (XL-35) of 1955 dated 11.04.1955, it is the duty of the Assessing Officer to assist a taxpayer in every reasonable way, particularly in the matter of claiming and securing reliefs and in this regard, they should take the initiative in guiding a taxpayer where proceedings or other particulars before them indicate that some refund or relief is due to him.

Therefore, on the basis of the above Supreme Court ruling and the CBDT Circular, the Assessing Officer is bound to allow the set-off of brought forward losses under section 72, even if the assessee has not claimed the same in the return filed, provided the loss was determined in pursuance of a return filed under section 139(3) in any earlier previous year.

Moreover, the wording used in section 72 is “shall”, indicating that the provisions relating to set off of brought forward business loss are mandatory.

Therefore, the Assessing Officer is bound to allow the claim for set off of brought forward business losses even if the assessee has not claimed the same in the return filed.

Question 25

X, an individual, has got his books of account for the year ending 31.3.2020 audited under section 44AB. His total income for the assessment year 2020-21 is ₹ 5,20,000. He desires to know if he can furnish his return of income for the assessment year 2020-21 through a Tax Return Preparer.

Answer

Section 139B provides for submission of return of income through Tax Return Preparers. It empowers the Central Board of Direct Taxes (CBDT) to frame a scheme for the purpose of enabling any specified class or classes of persons to prepare and furnish their returns of income through Tax Return Preparers. Specified class or classes of persons have been defined to mean any person, other than a company or a person whose accounts are required to be audited under section 44AB or under any other existing law, who is required to furnish a return of income under the Act. Thus, companies and persons whose accounts are liable for tax audit under section 44AB do not fall within the definition of ‘specified class or classes of persons’ and consequently, cannot furnish their returns of income through Tax Return Preparers. In the instant case, the books of account of X for the year ending 31.3.2020 have been audited under section 44AB. As such, he cannot furnish his return of income for the assessment year 2020-21 through a Tax Return Preparer.

Question 26

In April, 2019, the business premises of Priyanka Ravi were searched under section 132 by the DDI, Delhi. The search was concluded on 30.04.2019 and following assets/documents were found which were not recorded in her books of accounts:

- Jewellery of ₹ 25 Lacs pertaining to P.Y. 2014-15
- Agreement for purchase of land which contains the payment of advance of ₹ 35 Lacs in cash in the P.Y.2013-14
- Shares purchased in the P.Y.2011-12 and in the P.Y.2012-13 totaling to ₹ 40 Lacs.
- Paper containing the payment of ₹ 15 Lacs in the P.Y.2009-10 and ₹ 10 Lacs in P.Y.2008-09 to a contractor for construction of residential house.

Accordingly, Assessing Officer has issued the notice for all the previous years from P.Y.2008-09 to P.Y.2018-19 under section 153A.

However, Miss Priyanka Ravi contented that the Assessing Officer cannot issue the notice under section 153A beyond six assessment years immediately preceding the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which the search was conducted under section 132 i.e. notice can be issued upto A.Y.2014-15 (P.Y. 2013-14).

Discuss about the correctness of action of Assessing Officer and the contention of Miss Priyanka Ravi.

Answer

As per section 153A(1), issuance of notice and assessment or reassessment under the said section can also be made for an assessment year preceding the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted or requisition is made which falls beyond six assessment years but not beyond ten assessment years from the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted or requisition is made, provided that -

(i) the Assessing Officer has in his possession books of account or other documents or evidence which reveal that the income which has escaped assessment amounts to or is likely to amount to fifty lakh rupees or more in one year or in aggregate in the relevant assessment years;

(ii) such income escaping assessment is represented in the form of asset which shall include immovable property being land or building or both, shares and securities, deposits in bank account, loans and advances;

(iii) the income escaping assessment or part thereof relates to such year or years; and

(iv) search under section 132 is initiated or requisition under section 132A is made on or after 1-4-2017.

In the light of the above amended provision, the Assessing Officer can issue the notice u/s 153A beyond six assessment years but not beyond ten assessment years from the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted or requisition is made. Thus, in the given case, the Assessing Officer can issue notice under section 153A upto A.Y.2010-11 as she,

a. has in his possession, documents or evidence which reveals the escaped assessment amounts to ₹ 55 lacs in aggregate during the relevant four assessment years i.e. from A.Y. 2010-11 to A.Y. 2013-14

b. such income escaping assessment represents in the form of assets which includes ₹ 40 lacs being Shares purchased in P.Y. 2011-12 and P.Y. 2012-13 plus ₹ 15 lacs being payment to contractor for construction of residential house in P.Y. 2009-10 (payment of ₹ 10 lacs relevant to P.Y. 2008-09 cannot be included as it is beyond ten assessment years)

c. search was conducted after 01.04.2017.

Hence, the contention of Miss. Priyanka Ravi that the Assessing Officer cannot issue the notice under section 153A beyond six assessment years immediately preceding the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which the search was conducted under section 132 is incorrect.

The action of Assessing Officer is partly correct as it is possible to him to issue notice beyond six assessment years but not beyond ten assessment years from the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which search is conducted or requisition is made. Thus, he cannot issue the notice under section 153A for the A.Y.2009-10.

SIGNIFICANT SELECT CASES

1. Whether the nature of an expenditure can be considered debatable for not invoking prima facie adjustment under section 143(1)(a), where the jurisdictional High Court has taken a view that the expenditure is capital in nature even though some other High Courts have held that the same is revenue in nature?

Deputy Commissioner of Income Tax v Raghuvir Synthetics Ltd. [2017] 394 ITR 1 (SC)

Facts of the case: The assessee is a public limited company. For the relevant assessment year, it had filed its return claiming revenue expenditure of ₹ 65,47,448 on advertisement and public issue. The company claimed that if the sum cannot be considered as revenue expenditure, then, alternatively, the said expenditure may be allowed under section 35D by way treating such expenditure as preliminary expenses. The Assessing Officer issued an intimation under section 143(1)(a) disallowing a sum of ₹ 58,92,700 incurred on public issue.

Appellate Authorities' Views: The first appellate authority allowed the assessee's appeal by holding that the concept of "prima facie adjustment" under section 143(1)(a) cannot be invoked as there could be more than one opinion on whether public issue expenses were covered by section 35D or 37. The Tribunal as well as the Division Bench of the High Court dismissed the appeal of the Revenue on the ground that the issue was debatable and hence, the expenditure cannot be disallowed while processing return of income under section 143(1)(a).

Supreme Court's Observations: The Supreme Court noted that there was divergence of opinion amongst the various High Courts on the nature of the expenses incurred on raising share capital. While the High Courts of Madras, Andhra Pradesh and Karnataka had held the preliminary expenses to be revenue in nature, High Courts of Allahabad, Himachal Pradesh, Delhi, Calcutta, Bombay, Punjab and Haryana, Gujarat and Rajasthan had held the expenses to be capital in nature.

Supreme Court's Decision: The Supreme Court held that, in the case of the assessee, the issue was not debatable. Since the registered office of the assessee is in Gujarat, the law laid down by the Gujarat High Court is binding on the assessee.

2. Whether the Assessing Officer is bound to consider the report of Departmental Valuation Officer (DVO) when it is available on record?

Principal CIT v. Ravjibhai Nagjibhai Thesia (2016) 388 ITR 358 (Guj)

Facts of the case: The assessee sold his property for ₹ 16 lakhs. The State stamp valuation authority valued the property at ₹ 233.71 lakhs. During the course of assessment proceedings, at the request of the assessee, the Assessing Officer referred the matter of valuation to the DVO who valued the property at ₹ 24.15 lakhs. The Assessing Officer passed the order before the receipt of the report of the DVO by treating ₹ 217.71 lakhs (difference between ₹ 233.71 lakhs and ₹ 16 lakhs) as undisclosed income. The report of the DVO was received by the Assessing Officer after the date of assessment order but before the order was received by the assessee.

Appellate Authorities' Views: The Commissioner (Appeals) directed the Assessing Officer to compute the capital gain by taking the value given by the DVO. The Revenue carried the matter before Tribunal. The Tribunal agreed with the view of the CIT (Appeals) and dismissed the appeal. The Tribunal relied on CIT v. Dr. Indra Swaroop Bhatnagar (2012) 349 ITR 210 (All) which held that the DVO's valuation under section 50C(2) is binding on the Assessing Officer.

Issue: Whether the Assessing Officer having made reference to the DVO must consider the report of the DVO for the purpose of assessment?

High Court's Observations: The High Court observed that when the Assessing Officer has referred the matter to DVO, the assessment has to be completed in conformity with the estimate given by the DVO. As the DVO has estimated the value of the capital asset at an amount lower than the value assessed by the stamp valuation authority, as per 50C(2), it is such valuation which is required to be taken into consideration for the purposes of assessment.

High Court's Decision: The High Court held that capital gains has to be computed in conformity with the value so determined by the DVO.

3. Can unabsorbed depreciation be allowed to be carried forward in case the return of income is not filed within the due date?

CIT v. Govind Nagar Sugar Ltd. (2011) 334 ITR 13 (Delhi)

High Court's Observations: On this issue, the Delhi High Court observed that, the provisions of section 80 and section 139(3), requiring the return of income claiming loss to be filed within the due date, applies to, inter alia, carry forward of business loss and not for the carrying forward of unabsorbed depreciation. As per the provisions of section 32(2), the unabsorbed depreciation becomes part of next year's depreciation allowance and is allowed to be set-off as per the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961, irrespective of whether the return of earlier year was filed within due date or not.

High Court's Decision: Therefore, in the present case, the High Court held that the unabsorbed depreciation will be allowed to be carried forward to subsequent year even though the return of income of the current assessment year was not filed within the due date.

4. Can an assessee revise the particulars filed in the original return of income by filing a revised statement of income?

Orissa Rural Housing Development Corpn. Ltd. v. ACIT (2012) 343 ITR 316 (Orissa)

High Court's Decision: On this issue, the Orissa High Court held that the assessee can make a fresh claim before the Assessing Officer or make a change in the originally filed return of income only by filing revised return of income under section 139(5). There is no provision under the Income-tax Act, 1961 to enable an assessee to revise his income by filling a revised statement of income. Therefore, filling of revised statement of income is of no value and will not be considered by the Assessing Officer for assessment purposes.

The High Court, relying on the judgement of the Supreme Court in Goetze (India) Ltd. v. CIT (2006) ITR 323, held that the Assessing Officer has no power to entertain a fresh claim made by the assessee after filing of the original return except by way of filing a revised return.

5. Is a person having income below taxable limit, required to furnish his PAN to the deductor as per the provisions of section 206AA, even though he is not required to hold a PAN as per the provisions of section 139A?

Smt. A. Kowsalya Bai v. UOI (2012) 346 ITR 156 (Kar.)

As per the provisions of section 139A, inter alia, a person whose total income does not exceed the maximum amount not chargeable to income-tax is not required to apply to the Assessing Officer for the allotment of a permanent account number (PAN).

However, as per the provisions of section 206AA, notwithstanding anything contained in any other provision of this Act, any person who is entitled to receive any sum or income or amount on which tax is deductible under Chapter XVII-B, i.e., the deductee, shall furnish his PAN to the deductor, otherwise tax shall be deducted as per the provisions section 206AA, which is normally higher. It is mandatory for an assessee to furnish his PAN, despite filing Form 15G as required under section 197A, to seek exemption from deduction of tax.

The provisions of section 139A are contradictory to section 197A, due to the fact that assessees whose income was less than the maximum amount not chargeable to income-tax, were not required to hold PAN, whereas their declaration furnished under section 197A was not accepted by the bank or financial institution unless PAN was communicated as per the provisions of section 206AA. The provisions of section 206AA creates inconvenience to small investors, who invest their savings from earnings as security for their future, since, in the absence of PAN, tax was deducted at source at a higher rate.

High Court's Decision: In order to avoid undue hardship caused to such persons, the Karnataka High Court, in the present case, held that it may not be necessary for such persons whose income is below the maximum amount not chargeable to income-tax to obtain PAN and in view of the specific provision of section 139A, section 206AA is not applicable to such persons. Therefore, the banking and financial institutions shall not insist upon such persons to furnish PAN while filing declaration under section 197A. However, section 206AA would continue to be applicable to persons whose income is above the maximum amount not chargeable to income-tax.

6. Can the Assessing Officer reopen an assessment on the basis of merely a change of opinion?

Aventis Pharma Ltd. v. ACIT (2010) 323 ITR 570 (Bom.)

The power to reopen an assessment is conditional on the formation of a reason to believe that income chargeable to tax has escaped assessment. The existence of tangible material is essential to safeguard against an arbitrary exercise of this power.

High Court's Observations and Decision: In this case, the High Court observed that there was no tangible material before the Assessing Officer to hold that income had escaped assessment within the meaning of section 147 and the reasons recorded for reopening the assessment constituted a mere change of opinion. Therefore, the reassessment was not valid.

7. Is it permissible under section 147 to reopen the assessment of the assessee on the ground that income has escaped assessment, after a change of opinion as to a loss being a speculative loss and not a normal business loss, consequent to a mere re-look of accounts which were earlier furnished by the assessee during assessment under section 143(3)?

ACIT v. ICICI Securities Primary Dealership Ltd. (2012) 348 ITR 299 (SC)

Facts of the case: In the above case, the Assessing Officer had completed the assessment of assessee under section 143(3) after taking into consideration the accounts furnished by assessee. After the lapse of four years from relevant assessment year, the Assessing Officer had reopened the assessment of assessee under section 147 on the ground that after re-look of the accounts of the relevant previous year, it was noticed that the assessee company had incurred a loss in trading in share, which was a speculative one. Therefore, such loss can only be set off against speculative income. Consequently, the loss represents income which has escaped assessment. Accordingly, the Assessing Officer came to a conclusion that income had escaped assessment and passed an order under section 147.

Supreme Court's Decision: The Supreme Court observed that the assessee had disclosed full details in the return of income in the matter of its dealing in stocks and shares. There was no failure on the part of assessee to disclose material facts as mentioned in proviso to section 147. Further, there is nothing new which has come to the notice of the Assessing Officer. The accounts had been furnished by the assessee when called upon. Therefore, re-opening of the assessment by the Assessing Officer is clearly a change of opinion and therefore, the order of re-opening the assessment is not valid.

8. Can a notice under section 148 for a particular assessment year be issued solely on the ground that survey under section 133A was carried on at the business premises of the assessee, where nothing had been found therein which would indicate escapement of income chargeable to tax for the said assessment year?

Hemant Traders v. ITO (2015) 375 ITR 167 (Bom)

Facts of the case: In the present case, the assessee is a partnership firm and registered as a Commission agent of the onion potato market under the Agricultural Produce Market, Committee, Navi Mumbai. The firm is regularly assessed to income-tax. The firm filed a return of income for A.Y.2010-11 on October 14, 2010 along with audit report, audited Balance Sheet and Profit & Loss Account for the year ended 31.3.2010. The return was processed and intimation under section 143(1) was issued on 20.02.2012, seeking clarification. No assessment order was passed. The assessee claimed that the profit as per the return of income was accepted. Meanwhile, a survey under section 133A was carried out at the business premises of the assessee on 7th January 2011 pertaining to A.Y.2011-12. However, the survey party did not find any discrepancy in the books of account. Further, the survey report did not contain any reference to any transactions for A.Y.2010-11. In March 2014, the assessee was issued a notice under section 148 for the A.Y.2010-11 based on the said survey.

The assessee preferred a writ challenging the issue of notice on the reasoning that no satisfaction was recorded of the escapement of income in the survey report or in any other relevant material. Ex-facie, the reassessment was bad in law.

High Court's Observations: The High Court perused the survey report which recorded that there was a group of assessees who were engaged in wholesale trading of potato on commission basis. The survey was conducted based on the allegations that these parties were resorting to hoarding of potatoes and making huge profits by fluctuating the day-to-day price of potatoes in the market. During survey, the assessee's books of account, cash balance and stocks were physically verified and inventory prepared. The report revealed cash difference of ₹ 5,020 and the explanation given was that the same pertained to the day-to-day and miscellaneous expenditure incurred on the day of survey. The report also revealed physical stock difference of 672 bags of potatoes. The explanation for such difference was recorded.

Neither the survey report nor any other material indicated escapement of income chargeable to tax for A.Y.2010-11. The Assessing Officer had nothing before him to record his belief or satisfaction that escapement of income had taken place.

Merely because survey had taken place cannot be a ground for reopening the assessment without valid material or evidence at the time of issue of notice. Whenever there was shortage of potatoes in the market, such powers of survey were invoked. Where nothing has been found during the survey operations to indicate that income chargeable to tax has escaped assessment, then the survey report ought not to be the basis for reopening of assessment. Something more was required in law for the Assessing Officer to exercise his powers.

High Court Decision: The High Court, accordingly, held that since there is absolutely no material to indicate escapement of income for the relevant assessment year, the issue of notice to initiate reassessment proceedings under section 148 on the basis of survey which had taken place is not valid. Therefore, the proceedings initiated under section 148 are quashed at the threshold itself.

9. Will the subsequent amendment of law with retrospective effect validate a reassessment notice issued on a different ground before the retrospective amendment was made?

Godrej Industries Ltd v. B.S. Singh Dy.CIT (2015) 377 ITR 1 (Bom)

Facts of the case: The assessee-company filed its return of income for the assessment year 2000-01 declaring total income as 'Nil' and a book profit of ₹ 52.70 crores. This resulted in 'book profit' being assessed to income-tax. Later, the Assessing Officer issued notice under section 148 for the reason that income chargeable to tax had escaped assessment on the ground that the provision for doubtful debts and provision for depletion of long-term investment debited to the profit and loss account were unascertained liabilities and, hence, in terms of clause (c) of the Explanation to section 115JA, i.e., they were to be added back to the net profit for arriving at the book profits.

The assessee preferred a writ challenging the maintainability of the notice issued under section 148.

Revenue's Contention: The Revenue contended that at the time of issuing the impugned notice on March 29, 2007, the position was not clear. The position became clear only when Parliament introduced/added clause (g) to the Explanation to section 115JA of the Act with retrospective effect from April 1, 1998, and which reads as under:

"(g) the amount or amounts set aside as provision for diminution in the value of any asset."

Thus, the Revenue submitted that the impugned notice is sustainable on the basis of above clause (g) of the Explanation to section 115JA, inserted by the Finance (No.2) Act, 2009 retrospectively with effect from 1st April, 1998.

High Court's Observations: The High Court observed that an identical issue had come up in Rallis India Ltd. v. Asst. CIT [2010] 323 ITR 54 (Bom) wherein a reopening notice was, inter alia, issued on the ground that the book profits have to be increased by the provision made for doubtful debts and for diminution in the value of investment in view of clause (c) of the Explanation to section 115JB. In the said case, the High Court recorded the fact that the Apex Court had, in CIT v. HCL Comnet Systems and Services Ltd. [2008] 305 ITR 409, held that the provision for doubtful debts is a provision made for diminution in the value of assets and is not a liability. Thus, it would not fall under clause (c) of the Explanation to section 115JA of the Act. Consequent to the aforesaid decision of the Apex Court, the Parliament has amended the Explanation both under section 115JA as well as section 115JB of the Act in 2009 by adding clause (g) and clause (i) with retrospective effect from April 1, 1998, and April 1, 2001, respectively. The Court held that though the amendment was made with the retrospective effect, the critical date is the date on which the Assessing Officer exercises jurisdiction under section 148 of the Act and the subsequent amendment could not have been and is in fact not a ground on which the Assessing Officer sought to reopen the assessment. It was held that the validity of a reopening notice of Assessing Officer is to be determined with reference to the reasons which are recorded in support of thereof and nothing else.

In this case also, it is clear that the reasons stated for reopening the assessment are that provision for doubtful debts and depletion in value of investments are both amounts set aside for meeting liabilities other than ascertained liabilities and hence, constitute income escaping assessment. The reasons recorded are not valid as the said items were not related to liabilities as perceived by the Assessing Officer. These provisions are made to take care of the likely fall in the value of assets.

The High Court observed that it is the Assessing Officer's belief at the time of issuing the reassessment notice that determines the validity of the notice. In this case, he wanted to apply clause (c) of the Explanation to section 115JA and whereas the issues got covered by subsequent amendment by means of insertion of clause (g) to the Explanation to section115JA by the Finance (No.2) Act, 2009 with retrospective effect from 1.4.1998. The subsequent event could not put life into the Assessing Officer's reason that income chargeable to tax had escaped assessment when the reasons as originally recorded are still born.

High Court's Decision: The position of law on the date of issue of notice under section 148 must be looked into and the retrospective amendment subsequent to issue of notice could not validate a notice issued earlier. It could only amount to change of opinion and the notice for reopening of assessment would become unsustainable.

The High Court, accordingly, allowed the writ and held that the reason for reopening the assessment cannot get validated by the retrospective amendment of law.

Note – It may be noted that section 115JA levying MAT was applicable from A.Y.1997-98 to A.Y.2000-01. From A.Y.2001-02, MAT is attracted under section 115JB. Clause (c) of Explanation 1 to section 115JB requires addition of amount set aside to provisions made for meeting liabilities, other than ascertained liabilities, to the net profit for arriving at the book profit for levy of MAT. Clause (i) was inserted by the Finance (No.2) Act, 2009 retrospectively with effect from 1st April, 2001 providing for addition of amount set aside as provision for diminution in the value of any asset, to the net profit for arriving at the book profit for levy of MAT. The rationale of the above ruling would, therefore, also apply in the context of examining the validity of notice issued for reopening an assessment on the basis of clause* (c) of Explanation 1 to section 115JB, consequent to subsequent retrospective insertion of clause (i) in Explanation 1 to section 115JB.

10. Can the Assessing Officer reassess issues other than the issues in respect of which proceedings were initiated under section 147 when the original "reason to believe" on the basis of which the notice was issued ceased to exist?

I Delhi High Court ruling in Ranbaxy Laboratories Ltd. v. CIT (2011) 336 ITR 136:

Facts of the case: In the present case, the assessee company was engaged in the business of manufacture and trading of pharmaceutical products. The Assessing Officer accepted the returned income filed by the assessee but initiated reassessment proceedings under section 147 in respect of the addition to be made on account of club fees, gifts and presents and provision for leave encashment. It was observed that the Assessing Officer had reason to believe that income has escaped assessment due to claim and allowance of such expenses and accordingly, he issued notice under section 148. However, after sufficient enquiries were made during reassessment proceedings, the Assessing Officer came to the conclusion that no additions are required to be made on account of these expenses. Therefore, while completing the reassessment he did not make additions on account of these items but instead made additions on the basis of other issues which were not the original "reason to believe" for the issue of notice under section 148. The Assessing Officer made such additions on the basis of Explanation 3 to section 147 as per which the Assessing Officer may assess the income which has escaped assessment and which comes to his notice subsequently in the course of proceedings under section 147 even though the said issue did not find mention in the reasons recorded in the notice issued under section 148.

Issue: The issue under consideration is whether the Assessing Officer can make an assessment on the basis of an issue which came to his notice during the course of assessment, where the issues, which originally formed the basis of issue of notice under section 148, were dropped in its entirety.

High Court's Observations: As per section 147, the Assessing Officer may assess or reassess such income and also any other income chargeable to tax which has escaped assessment and which comes to his notice in the course of proceedings under this section. The Delhi High Court observed that the words "and also" used in section 147 are of wide amplitude.

The correct interpretation of the Parliament would be to regard the words 'and also' as being "conjunctive and cumulative with" and not "in alternative to" the first part of the sentence, namely, "the Assessing Officer may assess and reassess such income". It is significant to note that Parliament has not used the word 'or' but has used the word 'and' together and in conjuction with the word 'also'. The words 'such income' in the first part of the sentence refer to the income chargeable to tax which has escaped assessment and in respect of which the Assessing Officer has formed a reason to believe for issue of the notice under section 148.

Hence, the language used by the Parliament is indicative of the position that the assessment or reassessment must be in respect of the income, in respect of which the Assessing Officer has formed a reason to believe that the same has escaped assessment and also in respect of any other income which comes to his notice subsequently during the course of the proceedings as having escaped assessment.

High Court's Decision: If the income, the escapement of which was the basis of the formation of the "reason to believe" is not assessed or reassessed, it would not be open to the Assessing Officer to independently assess only that income which comes to his notice subsequently in the course of the proceedings under the section as having escaped assessment. If he intends to do so, a fresh notice under section 148 would be necessary.

II Punjab & Haryana High Court ruling in CIT v. Mehak Finvest P Ltd (2014) 367 ITR 769:

Facts of the case: In the present case, reassessment proceedings were initiated against the assessee on the reason that various finance companies managed and controlled by certain persons were engaged in accommodation entries and the assessee-company was one among them. However, during the reassessment proceedings, the Assessing Officer noticed that fresh share application money amounting to ₹ 47 lakhs could not be explained by the assessee and hence invoked section 68 to bring to tax such sum. There was no addition on the basis of the original reason for which reassessment proceedings were initiated.

Issue: The issue under consideration is whether an addition can be made in reassessment when the original reasons on the basis of which notice for reassessment was issued did not survive.

Assessee's Contention vis-a-vis Revenue's Contention: The assessee contended that when the original reason prompting the initiation of reassessment proceedings did not survive, the question of making addition on some other fresh grounds was not possible. The basis of the assessee's contention was the Bombay High Court ruling in case of CIT v. Jet Airways (I) Ltd (2011) 331 ITR 236 and Delhi High Court ruling in Ranbaxy Laboratories Ltd v. CIT (2011) 336 ITR 136.

On the other hand, the Revenue placed reliance on the jurisdictional High Court decision in the case of Majinder Singh Kang v. CIT (2012) 344 ITR 358 holding that reassessment can be made on the basis of additional grounds, even though the original reason forming the basis of issue of notice did not survive.

High Court's Observations: The High Court noted that Explanation 3 to section 147 nowhere postulates or contemplates that the Assessing Officer cannot make any additions on any other ground unless some addition is made on the basis of the original ground for which reassessment proceeding was initiated. It cited the dismissal of special leave petition (SLP) against the High Court ruling in Majinder Singh Kang's case by the Supreme Court on 19.08.2011 as the binding precedent.

High Court's Decision: The High Court, accordingly, held that even though no addition is made on the original grounds which formed the basis of initiation of reassessment proceedings, the Assessing Officer is empowered to make additions on another ground for which reassessment notice might not have been issued but which came to his notice subsequently during the course of proceedings for reassessment.

III Karnataka High Court ruling in N. Govindaraju v. ITO (2015) 377 ITR 243

Facts of the case: The assessee, an individual, deriving income from house property, transport business, capital gains and other sources filed his return of income declaring total income of ₹ 4.82 lakhs and agricultural income of ₹ 1.62 lakhs. The return was processed under section 143(1). Subsequently, a notice under section 148 was issued stating that the assessee had converted agricultural land into non-agricultural purposes, formed sites and sold the same but while arriving at the indexation benefit it was taken up to the date of sale instead of the date of conversion as per section 45(2). Thus, the reason for reassessment was the excessive indexation benefit availed by the assessee. However, in reassessment, the Assessing Officer adopted fair market value which was less than what was adopted by the assessee and also sought to disallow 50% of the expenses incurred on transfer. The original reason which prompted the reassessment was dropped and based on fresh grounds, reassessment was completed.

Issue under consideration: One of the issues under consideration before the High Court was whether the reassessment based on fresh grounds would be valid when the original reason which prompted the reassessment, does not survive.

Assessee's contention vis-s-vis Revenue's contention: The assessee contended that the reason for which notice was issued has to survive and it is only thereafter that "any other income" which is found to have escaped assessment can also be assessed or reassessed in such proceeding. On the other hand, the Revenue claimed that section 147 is in two parts which have to be read independently; the phrase "such income" in the first part is with regard to reasons which have been recorded and the phrase "any other income" is with regard to cases where no reasons are recorded in the notice but they come to the notice of the Assessing Officer during the course of reassessment proceeding. Both being independent, once the satisfaction in the notice is found sufficient, addition can be made on all grounds i.e., for reasons which have been recorded and also for items for which no reasons were recorded. All that is necessary is that, during the course of the proceedings under section 147, income chargeable to tax must have escaped assessment.

High Court's Observations: The High Court observed that the controversy revolved around Explanation 3 to section 147 inserted by the Finance (No.2) Act 2009 retrospectively with effect from 1.4.1989. The Court took note of Circular No.5/2010 issued by CBDT after the amendment in Paragraph 47 with caption 'Clarificatory amendment in respect of reassessment proceeding under section 147". Para 47.3 reads as under:

"Therefore, to articulate the legislative intention clearly Explanation 3 has been inserted in section 147 to provide that the Assessing Officer may examine, assess or reassess any issue relevant to income which comes to his notice subsequently in the course of proceedings under this section, notwithstanding that the reason for such issue has not been included in the reasons recorded under section 148(2)".

The High Court observed that it is true that if the foundation goes, then, the structure cannot remain. Meaning thereby, if notice has no sufficient reason or is invalid, no proceedings can be initiated. However, this can be verified at the initial stage by challenging the notice. If the notice is challenged and found to be valid, or where the notice is not at all challenged, then, in either case, it cannot be said that notice is invalid. As such, if the notice is valid, then the foundation remains and the proceedings on the basis of such notice can continue. The High Court reiterated that once the proceedings have been initiated on a valid notice, it becomes the duty of the Assessing Officer to levy tax on the entire income (including "any other income") which may have escaped assessment and comes to his notice during the course of the proceedings initiated under section 147.

High Court's Decision: The High Court held that, in effect, once satisfaction of reasons for the notice is found sufficient i.e. if the notice under section 148(2) is found to be valid, then, the Assessing Officer may do reassessment in respect of any other item of income which may have escaped assessment, even though the original reason for issue of notice under section 148 does not survive.

This decision has dissented from the decisions in the case of CIT v. Jet Airways (I) Ltd (2011) 331 ITR 236 (Bom); Ranbaxy Laboratories Ltd v. CIT (2011) 336 ITR 136 (Del).

Note – In this case, the reassessment on the basis of reasons, which did not form the original reasons to believe, but were subsequently discovered by the Assessing Officer, was held to be valid, even though the original reasons did not survive.

However, the High Court further delved into the additional grounds, and held that the Tribunal was not justified in arriving at the fair market value of the property in question on 1.4.1981 without considering the material on record, including the valuation report, filed by the assessee. The matter was thus to be remanded to the Assessing Officer for determination of the fair market value of the property in question in accordance with law.

Further, without assigning any reason, the Assessing Officer had disallowed 50% of the total expenditure claimed by the assessee towards transfer and brokerage charges, even when the same had been paid by cheque and the receipt for which was obtained from the broker. When the specific case of the assessee was that heavy brokerage had to be paid because the property was under litigation and that it was occupied by unauthorised persons for which payment had to be made to get it vacated, disallowance could not be made on the ground that brokerage was generally being paid at the rate of 1-2%. The High Court opined that when the said brokerage was paid by cheque and there was sufficient reason for paying higher brokerage, the entire amount ought to have been allowed and disallowance of 50% was not justified in law.

Thus, in this case, though the High Court upheld that reassessment could be made on fresh grounds even when the original reasons recorded for reopening the assessment did not survive, additions made on the basis of such fresh grounds were turned down by the High Court, since the reasons were not justified to merit such additions.

11. Would the reassessment proceedings initiated under section 147 against the legal heirs of the deceased assessee be valid if notice of reassessment was sent to the legal heirs after the limitation period, though a notice addressed to the deceased assessee was sent prior to the limitation period?

Vipin Walia v. ITO (2016) 382 ITR 19 (Del)

Facts of the case: A notice under section 148 dated 27th March, 2015 was addressed to the assessee for the assessment year 2008-09. The notice got returned unserved with the postal authorities endorsing on it the remarks "addressee expired". Later, the Assessing Officer issued a letter dated 15.06.2015 to the petitioner seeking details of legal heirs/successors of the deceased (assessee) to complete the proceedings for the assessment year 2008-09.

The assessee, being one of the legal representatives of the deceased, wrote to the Assessing Officer pointing out that the proceedings initiated under section 148 were barred by limitation. The Assessing Officer proceeded to make the assessment under section 147 which the assessee challenged by means of a writ.

High Court's Observations: The High Court took note of section 159 which sets out the procedure to be adopted when the assessment is made on the legal representatives. Section 159(2)(a) states that any proceeding already taken against an assessee 'before his death' shall be deemed to have been taken against the legal representative. As per section 159(2)(b), any proceeding which could have been taken against the deceased if he had survived, may be taken against the legal representative of the deceased assessee, even if it had not been taken while the assessee was alive.

The Assessing Officer initiated proceedings under section 147 against the deceased for the assessment year 2008-09. The time limit for issue of notice was 31.03.2015, since the income escaping assessment exceeded ₹ 1 lakh. On March 27, 2015 when the notice was issued, the assessee was already dead. If the Department intended to proceed under section 147, it could have done so prior to 31.03.2015 by issuing a notice to the legal representatives of the deceased. Beyond that date, it could not have proceeded in the matter even by issuing notice to the legal representatives of the assessee.

High Court's Decision: The High Court, accordingly, held that issue of notice on the legal representatives beyond the limitation time would render the reassessment proceedings invalid.

12. Does the finding or direction in an appellate order that income relates to a different assessment year empower reopening of assessment for that assessment year, irrespective of the expiry of the six year time limit?

CIT v. PP Engineering Work (2014) 369 ITR 433 (Del)

Facts of the case: The Tribunal, in its order, directed that the cash credit of ₹ 32 lakhs found credited in the books of the assessee in the financial year 1999-2000 is chargeable to tax in the assessment year 2000-01 as against the assessment made by taxing the said amount in the assessment year 2001-02. In short, the Tribunal gave a finding that the cash credit under section 68 was assessable in a different assessment year than the assessment year in respect of which it heard the appeal. This prompted the Assessing Officer to issue a notice under section 148 in February, 2009 for reopening the proceedings for the A.Y. 2000-01. The issue is validity of notice issued after a lapse of 6 years from the end of the relevant assessment year.

The Commissioner (Appeals) held that the reassessment is barred by time limitation and the Tribunal also upheld the order of the Commissioner (Appeals) without making reference to section 150 read with Explanation 2 to section 153.

High Court's Opinion: The High Court made reference to section 150 which overrides the time limitation specified in section 149. Also, Explanation 2 to section 153 makes it clear that when an order in appeal, revision or reference is made whereby any income is excluded from the total income of an assessee for an assessment year, an assessment of such income for another assessment year shall be deemed to be one made in consequence of or to give effect to any finding or direction contained in the said order for the purposes of section 150 and section 153.

The High Court made reference to the Delhi High Court ruling in the case of Rural Electrification Corporation Ltd v. CIT (2013) 355 ITR 345 and opined that the findings of Commissioner (Appeals) and Tribunal on the question of limitation as legally untenable and incorrect.

High Court's Decision: The High Court observed that in view of the order of the Tribunal that the credit entries related to the earlier assessment year i.e., A.Y.2000-01, the Assessing Officer initiated reassessment proceedings under section 147 by issue of notice under section 148 for the year and passed an order dated 29/12/2009 making an addition of ₹ 32 lakhs. The High Court held that by virtue of section 150 read with Explanation 2 to section 153, the said order was not barred by limitation.

> Note – Under section 149(1)(b), the time limit for issue for notice under section 148 is six years from the end of the relevant assessment year, where the income chargeable to tax which has escaped assessment amounts to or is likely to amount to ₹ 1 lakh or more for that year.
> Section 150(1) states that notwithstanding anything contained in section 149, notice under section 148 may be issued at any time for the purpose of making an assessment or reassessment or recomputation in consequence of or to give effect to any finding or direction contained in an appellate or revisionary order.
> Explanation 2 to section 153 provides that where by an order referred to in section 250, 254, 260, 262, 263 or 264, any income is excluded from the total income of the assessee for an assessment year, then, an assessment of such income for another assessment year shall, for the purposes of section 150 and section 153, be deemed to be one made in consequence of or to give effect to any finding or direction contained in the said order.

13. Is initiation of reassessment beyond a period of 4 years on the basis of subsequent Tribunal and High Court ruling valid, if there is no failure on the part of the assessee to disclose fully and truly all materials facts?

Allanasons Ltd v. Dy. CIT (2014) 369 ITR 648 (Bom)

Facts of the case: The assessee-company filed its return of income in which a claim for deduction under Chapter VI-A was made. The case was subjected to scrutiny assessment and order under section 143(3) was passed reducing the claim for deduction under Chapter VI-A. After 4 years from the end of the assessment year, a notice under section 148 was issued ascribing reasons such as subsequent tribunal and other court decisions which show that the deduction was excessively allowed in this case. The assessee challenged the reassessment proceedings by means of a writ before the court, contending that it is a settled position in law that the decision rendered by court subsequent to the assessment order does not by itself amount to failure on the part of the assessee to fully and truly disclose all material facts necessary for assessment.

High Court's Opinion: The High Court observed that it is well settled in terms of the proviso to section 147, that where any assessment is sought to be opened beyond a period of four years from the end of the relevant assessment year, two conditions have to be fulfilled cumulatively. The first condition is that there must be reason to believe that income chargeable to tax has escaped assessment. The second condition is that such escapement of income should have arisen due to failure on the assessee's part to fully and truly disclose all material facts required for the assessment.

Thus, escapement of income prompting reopening of assessment beyond the period of 4 years from the end of the assessment year is not possible unless it is due to the failure of the assessee to disclose fully and truly all material facts necessary for assessment.

Even a subsequent change of law cannot be taken as income escaping assessment for triggering reassessment provisions beyond 4 years from the end of the assessment year unless there was a failure on the part of the assessee to disclose fully and truly all material facts necessary for assessment. The High Court observed that in this case, the reasons recorded, when read as a whole did not indicate even remotely any failure on the part of the assessee to disclose fully and truly any material fact necessary for assessment.

High Court's Decision: The High Court, accordingly, held that a subsequent decision of Tribunal or High Court by itself is not adequate for reopening the assessment completed earlier under section 143(3) unless there is a failure on the part of the assessee to disclose complete facts.

14. Is the notice for reassessment issued under section 148 on the basis of tax evasion report received from the Investigation Unit of the Income-tax department valid, if such notice has been issued erroneously in the name of the erstwhile company which has now been converted into an LLP?

Sky Light Hospitality LLP v. Assistant CIT [2018] 405 ITR 296 (Del)

Facts of the Case: Sky Light Hospitality (SH) LLP, a Limited Liability Partnership, had acquired the rights and liabilities of Sky Light Hospitality Private Limited (SHPL) upon conversion under the Limited Liability Partnership Act, 2008. The return for the relevant assessment year filed by SHPL was processed under section 143(1) and was not subjected to scrutiny assessment. However, upon further receipt of a tax evasion report, a reassessment notice had been issued under section 148. The petitioner-LLP has filed a writ petition to quash the notice and the reassessment proceedings.

Issue: The issue under consideration is whether a notice for reassessment issued under section 148 on the basis of tax evasion report received from the Investigation Unit of the Income-tax department can be treated as valid, if such notice has been issued erroneously in the name of the erstwhile company which has now been converted into an LLP.

Delhi High Court's Observations: The petitioner contended that the notice under section 148 was invalid because –

(i) the notice is not protected under section 292B as issuance of notice incorrectly in the name of SHPL had been done intentionally; and

(ii) the notice has been issued without a live nexus/reason to believe that the income had escaped assessment.

The High Court dismissed the contentions of the petitioner. Firstly, as long as there is "reason to believe" and not mere "reason to suspect", Courts should not interject to stop the adjudication process. In the notice for reassessment, reference was made to the tax evasion report received from the Investigation unit of the Income-tax department. The tax evasion report placed on record is detailed and elaborate. Peculiar and specific details relating to transactions between the assessee and a third party were mentioned in it. As per the tax evasion report, the assessee had not been able to satisfactorily explain source of ₹ 35 crores. Hence, there was evidence and material on record to justify issue of notice under section 148 of the Act.

Secondly, there is clear evidence that the notice was erroneously addressed to SHPL instead of SH LLP. The error or mistake was that the notice did not record the conversion of SHPL into SH LLP. However, it is clearly evident that the notice was meant for the assessee-LLP and no one else. When the assessee-LLP received the notice, it filed a letter, without prejudice, objecting to the notice being issued in the name of SHPL. However, the letter indicated that the assessee-LLP understood that the notice was for it. Section 292B was enacted to ensure that technical pleas (such as mistake, defect or omission) or procedural irregularities do not invalidate assessment proceedings. Courts have not proceeded on technical trivialities. The error here was only a technical issue on the part of the respondent. No prejudice was caused. The Court acknowledges the lapses in the litigation but observes that mere human errors cannot be used to nullify proceedings.

Delhi High Court's decision: The Delhi High Court held that the notice issued under section 148 on the basis of tax evasion report received from the Investigation unit of the Income-tax department is valid, since there was reason to believe on the basis of the said report that income had escaped assessment, even though the notice was erroneously issued in the name of the erstwhile company which has now been converted into LLP. The Court clarifies that it has passed no opinion on the merits of the case which will be duly dealt with, by the Assessing Officer. The petitioner-LLP is required to appear before the Assessing Officer to deal with the merits of the issues pertaining to the notice.

Note - The special leave petition filed against the aforementioned decision of the Delhi High Court was dismissed by the Supreme Court.*

15. Is recording of satisfaction and quantification of escaped income a pre-condition for issuing notice under section 148 after 4 years from the end of the relevant assessment year?

Amarnath Agrawal v. CIT (2015) 371 ITR 183 (All)

Facts of the case: The assessee along with four others had obtained a lease of land and was in possession of the same from 1953. Subsequently, the State Government introduced a policy for conversion of lease-hold to free-hold. The assessee applied for conversion before the District Magistrate in 1997 and a sale deed was executed. The assessee deposited the necessary charges as demanded by the State Government and a freehold sale deed dated 25th March, 1998 was executed. The assessee sold a portion of the land during the F.Y. 1999-2000 and admitted the same as long-term capital gain taking into account the lease hold period also. In the assessment, the admission of income as long-term capital gain was accepted. However, after the expiry of four years from the end of the relevant assessment year, proceeding for reassessment of such income as short-term capital gains was resorted to by the Revenue on the ground that the lease hold period should not be considered for determining the period of holding of freehold land transferred. The assessee filed a writ challenging the validity of notice issued under section 148 stating that the requirements of section 149 read with section 151 were not considered by the Revenue.

High Court's Opinion and Decision: The High Court observed that two distinct conditions must be satisfied for assuming jurisdiction to issue a notice under section 148 after a period of 4 years viz. (i) escapement of income; and (ii) omission or failure on the part of the assessee to disclose fully and truly all material facts necessary for his assessment.

Under section 149(1)(b), it is imperative for the Assessing Officer, in his reasons, to state that the escaped income is likely to be ₹ 1 lakh or more. This is an essential ingredient for seeking approval and the basis on which satisfaction is to be recorded by the competent authority under section 151. If the condition precedent to substantiate the satisfaction of escapement of income is not made, the issuance of notice would be invalid.

In this case, since no reasons were recorded that the escaped income is likely to be ₹ 1 lakh or more so that the Chief Commissioner or Commissioner may record his satisfaction under section 151, the initiation of reassessment proceedings after four years was barred by time. The reasons recorded by the Assessing Officer were that the assessee had computed long-term capital gains tax liability, whereas he was liable to pay short-term capital gains tax, since he had sold a portion of the property within 3 years from the date of conversion of leasehold land into a freehold land.

The High Court observed that the property was held for more than 3 years and the conversion from leasehold to freehold being an improvement of the title did not have any effect on the taxability of profits. The reasons recorded by the Assessing Officer did not indicate any failure on the part of the assessee to disclose fully and truly all material facts at the time of assessment; it also did not indicate that the quantum of escapement of income exceeds ₹ 1 lakh. Accordingly, the High Court held that, in this case, the issue of notice under section 148 after the four year time period was not valid.

16. In case of change of incumbent of an office, can the successor Assessing Officer initiate reassessment proceedings on the ground of change of opinion in relation to an issue, which the predecessor Assessing Officer who framed the original assessment had already applied his mind and come to a conclusion?

H. K. Buildcon Ltd. v. Income-tax Officer (2011) 339 ITR 535 (Guj.)

High Court's Observations: On this issue, the Gujarat High Court referred to the ruling of the Apex Court in CIT v. Kelvinator of India Ltd. (2010) 320 ITR 561, wherein it was held that the Assessing Officer has the power only to reassess and not to review. Reassessment has to be based on fulfillment of certain precondition and if the concept of change of opinion is removed, then, in the garb of reopening the assessment, review would take place. The Apex Court further laid down that one must treat the concept of change of opinion as an in-built test to check abuse of power by the Assessing Officer. The Apex Court referred to Circular No.549 dated 31.10.1989 explaining the amendment made by the Direct Tax Laws (Amendment) Act, 1989 with effect from 1.4.1989 to reintroduce the expression "reason to believe", and concluded that if the phrase "reason to believe" is omitted, the same would give arbitrary powers to the Assessing Officer to reopen the past assessment on mere change of opinion and this is not permissible even as per legislative intent.

High Court's Decision: The Gujarat High Court, applying the rationale of the Apex Court ruling, observed that in the entire reasons recorded in this case, there was nothing on record to show that income had escaped assessment in respect of which the successor Assessing Officer received information subsequently, from an external source. The reasons recorded themselves indicated that the successor Assessing Officer had merely recorded a different opinion in relation to an issue to which the Assessing Officer, who had framed the original assessment, had already applied his mind and come to a conclusion. The notice of reassessment was, therefore, not valid.

17. Would the doctrine of merger apply for calculating the period of limitation under section 154(7)?

CIT v. Tony Electronics Limited (2010) 320 ITR 378 (Del.)

Issue: The issue under consideration is whether the time limit of 4 years as per section 154(7) would apply from the date of original assessment order or the order of the Appellate Authority.

High Court's Decision: The High Court held that once an appeal against the order passed by an authority is preferred and is decided by the appellate authority, the order of the Assessing Officer merges with the order of the appellate authority. After merger, the order of the original authority ceases to exist and the order of the appellate authority prevails.

Thus, the period of limitation of 4 years for the purpose of section 154(7) has to be counted from the date of the order of the Appellate Authority.

Note - In this case, the Delhi High Court has followed the decision of the Supreme Court in case of Hind Wire Industries v. CIT (1995) 212 ITR 639.*

The assessee is given a right of appeal by the Act where he feels aggrieved by the order of the assessing authority. However, the assessee has no inherent right of appeal unless the statute specifically provides that a particular order is appealable. 18.1 APPEALS BEFORE COMMISSIONER (APPEALS)

(1) Appealable Orders before Commissioner (Appeals) [Section 246A]: An assessee or any deductor or any collector aggrieved by any of the following orders may appeal to the Commissioner (Appeals) against such orders under section 246A -

(a) (i) an order passed by a Joint Commissioner under section 115VP(3)(ii) refusing to approve the option for tonnage tax scheme; or

(ii) an order against the assessee where the assessee denies his liability to be assessed under this Act; or

(iii) an intimation under section 143(1)/(1B) or section 200A(1) or section 206CB(1), where the assessee or the deductor or the collector objects to the making of adjustments; or

(iv) any order of assessment under section 143(3) except an order passed in pursuance of the directions of Dispute Resolution Panel or an order of assessment or reassessment passed by the Assessing Officer with the prior approval of Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, where tax consequences have been determined in the order under the provisions of Chapter X-A relating to General Anti Avoidance Rules] or a best judgement order under section 144, in relation to the income assessed, or to the amount of tax determined, or to the amount of loss computed, or to the status under which he is assessed;

(b) an order of assessment, reassessment or recomputation under section 147 [except an order passed in pursuance of the directions of Dispute Resolution Panel or an order of assessment or reassessment passed by the Assessing Officer with the prior approval of Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, where tax consequences have been determined in the order under the provisions of Chapter X-A relating to General Anti Avoidance Rules or section 150;

(c) an order of assessment or reassessment under section 153A, except an order passed in pursuance of the directions of the Dispute Resolution Panel or an order of assessment or reassessment passed by the Assessing Officer with the prior approval of Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, where tax consequences have been determined in the order under the provisions of Chapter X-A relating to General Anti Avoidance Rules;

(d) an order of assessment or reassessment passed by the Assessing Officer under section 92CD(3) in accordance with the Advance Pricing Agreement pursuant to a modified return filed in accordance with section 92CD(1);

However, with effect from 1.9.2019, an order made under section 92CD(3) would be appealable. This is consequent to the amendment in section 92CD(3) with effect from 1.9.2019 requiring the Assessing Officer to pass an order modifying the total income of the relevant assessment year in accordance with the arm's length price (ALP) determined as per the Advance Pricing Agreement (APA) entered into.

Prior to 1.9.2019, the Assessing Officer was required to assess or reassess or recompute the total income of the relevant assessment year, due to which the Assessing Officer may start fresh assessment or reassessment of completed assessments of the assessees who have modified the returns of income in accordance with the APA entered into by them, while the legislative intent was to require the Assessing Officer to merely modify the total income consequent to modification of return of income in pursuant to APA.

(e) an order made under section 154 or section 155 having the effect of enhancing the assessment or reducing a refund or an order refusing to allow the claim made by the assessee under either of the said sections except an order of assessment or reassessment passed by the Assessing Officer with the prior approval of Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, where tax consequences have been determined in the order under the provisions of Chapter X-A relating to General Anti Avoidance Rules;

(f) an order made under section 163 treating the assessee as the agent of a non-resident;

(g) an order made under section 170(2)/(3) assessing income of business prior to succession in the hands of the successor;

(h) an order made under section 171 relating to assessment after partition of HUF;

(i) an order made under section 201 deeming a person to be an assessee-in-default for failure to deduct the whole or any part of the tax deductible at source;

(j) an order made under section 206C(6A) deeming a person to be an assessee-in-default for failure to collect or pay tax;

(k) a refund order made under section 237;

(l) an order imposing a penalty under

(i) Section 221; or

(ii) Section 271A, section 271AAB, section 272AA or section 272BB;

(n) an order imposing penalty under section 271B;

(o) an order imposing a penalty under section 271C, section 271CA, section 271D, or section 271E;

(p) an order imposing a penalty under section 272A;

(q) an order imposing a penalty under section 272AA;

(r) an order imposing or enhancing penalty under section 275(1A);

(s) an order imposing a penalty under Chapter XXI;

(t) an order made by an Assessing Officer other than a Deputy Commissioner under the provisions of this Act in the case of such person or class of persons, as the Board may, having regard to the nature of the cases, the complexities involved and other relevant considerations direct.

It is also provided that the aforesaid provision will apply to all orders whether made before or after the appointed date which has been defined in the section as "the day appointed by the Central Government by notification in the Official Gazette."

It is further provided that every appeal which is pending before the appointed day before the Deputy Commissioner (Appeals) and any matter arising out of or connected with such appeal and which is so pending shall stand transferred on that day to the Commissioner (Appeals) and the Commissioner (Appeals) may proceed with such appeal or matter from the stage in which it was on that day.

It is also provided that an appellant may demand that before proceeding further with the appeal and the matter, the previous proceedings or any part thereof be re-opened or the appellant be re-heard.

(2) Appeal by person denying liability to deduct tax under section 195 [Section 248]: This section provides that where under an agreement or other arrangement, the tax deductible on any income, other than interest, under section 195 is to be borne by the person by whom the income is payable, and such person having paid such tax to the credit of the Central Government, claims that no tax was required to be deducted on such income, he may appeal to the Commissioner (Appeals) for a declaration that no tax was deductible on such income.

This section restricts the eligibility of filing an appeal only to cases where the tax is borne by the assessee. Therefore, the cases where the tax is to be borne by the non-resident is outside the scope of section 248 and no appeal can be filed in such cases.

(3) Form of appeal and prescribed fees [Section 249(1)]: Every appeal shall be in the prescribed form and shall be verified in the prescribed manner.

Prescribed fees - In case of an appeal made to the Commissioner (Appeals), irrespective of the date of initiation of the assessment proceedings, the appeal shall be accompanied by a fee of:

	Case	Prescribed fees
(i)	where the total income of the assessee as computed by the Assessing Officer is ₹ 1,00,000 or less	₹ 250

(iv)	in any case other than (i), (ii) and (iii) above	₹ 250

(4) Time limit [Section 249(2) & (3)]: An appeal to the Commissioner (Appeals) against any order which is appealable is to be presented within 30 days from the dates specified below in the particular cases. However, the Commissioner (Appeals) may admit an appeal even after the expiry of the said period of thirty days, if he is satisfied that the appellant had sufficient cause for not presenting the appeal within the specified time. The dates from which the limitation period of 30 days has to be reckoned are as follows:

	Appeal relating to	30 days to be reckoned from
1.	Section 248	Date of payment of tax
2.	Assessment/penalty	Date of service of notice of demand
3.	Any other case	Date on which intimation of the order sought to be appealed against is served.

Period to be excluded while computing 30 days in case of appeal relating to assessment/penalty

	Application	Period to be excluded
		From	To
1.	Under section 146 for reopening an assessment	The date on which application is made	The date on which the order passed on the application is served on the assessee
2.	Under section 270AA(1)	The date on which the application is made	The date on which the order rejecting the application is served on the assessee

(5) Exemption in respect of tax to be paid at the time of filing the appeal [Section 249(4)]: No appeal to the Commissioner (Appeals) shall be admitted for consideration unless, at the time of filing the appeal, the assessee has paid the tax on the amount of income returned by him in cases where a return has been filed by the assessee. If, however, no return has been filed by the assessee and an assessment has been made on him by the Assessing Officer, then, the assessee must pay an amount equal to the amount of advance tax which was payable by him before filing the appeal. The Commissioner (Appeals) is, however, empowered for good and sufficient reasons to be recorded in writing, to exempt an appellant from the operation of the requirement in regard to payment of advance tax, on receipt of an application from the appellant made specifically for this purpose, giving the reasons for the non-payment of the tax. The concerned authority is also required to pass an order in writing while granting the exemption indicating also the reasons on account of which the exemption is granted to the assessee.

(6) Procedure in appeal [Section 250]: On account of an appeal, the Commissioner (Appeals) shall fix a day and place for the hearing of the appeal and shall give notice of the same to the assessee and to the Assessing Officer, against whose order the appeal is made. Both the assessee and the Assessing Officer have the right to be heard at the hearing of the appeal either in person or by an authorised representative. The Commissioner (Appeals) has the power to adjourn the hearing of the appeal from time to time.

The Commissioner (Appeals), before passing an order on an appeal, may make such further enquiries as he thinks fit or direct the Assessing Officer to make further enquiries and report the result of the same to him. He may also allow the appellant to go into any grounds of appeal not specified previously by the appellant if he is satisfied that the omission of that ground was not wilful or unreasonable.

The order of the Commissioner (Appeals) disposing of the appeal shall be in writing and shall state the points for determination, the decision thereon and the reasons for the decision. On disposal of the appeal the Commissioner (Appeals) must communicate the order passed by him to the assessee as well as to the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Principal Commissioner or Commissioner.

In every appeal the Commissioner (Appeals), where it is possible, may hear and decide such appeal within a period of one year from the end of the financial year in which such appeal is filed under section 246A(1).

(7) Powers of the Commissioner (Appeals) [Section 251]: While disposing of an appeal the Commissioner (Appeals) is vested with the following powers viz.,

(i) In an appeal against an order of assessment, he may confirm, reduce, enhance or annul the assessment.

(ii) In an appeal against the assessment order in respect of which the proceeding before the Settlement Commission abates under section 245HA, to confirm, reduce, enhance or annul the assessment after taking into consideration the following -

(1) all the material and other information produced by the assessee before the Settlement Commission;

(2) the results of the inquiry held by the Settlement Commission;

(3) the evidence recorded by the Settlement Commission in the course of the proceeding before it; and

(4) such other material as may be brought on his record.

(iii) In an appeal against an order imposing a penalty he may confirm or cancel such order or vary it in such a way as to enhance or reduce the penalty.

(iv) In any other case, the Commissioner (Appeals) may pass such orders in the appeal as he deems fit.

The Commissioner (Appeals), however, is not empowered to enhance an assessment or a penalty or to reduce a refund due to the assessee without giving the assessee a reasonable opportunity of showing cause against such an enhancement or reduction. In disposing of an appeal, the Commissioner (Appeals) may consider and decide any matter arising out of the proceedings in which the order appealed against was passed even if such matters were not raised before the Commissioner (Appeals) by the appellant.

(vii)	Application for stay of demand	₹ 500

The Appellate Tribunal may, after giving both the parties to the appeal a reasonable opportunity of being heard, pass such orders on any appeal as it thinks fit. Such orders passed by the Appellate Tribunal shall be final unless appeal is made to the High Court under section 260A.

(6) Rectification: The Appellate Tribunal may, at any time within 6 months from the end of the month in which order is passed, with a view to rectifying any mistake apparent from records, amend any order passed by it. However, if the mistake is brought to its notice by the assessee or the Assessing Officer, the Tribunal is bound to rectify the same. In cases where the amendment has the effect of enhancing the assessment or reducing a refund or otherwise increasing the liability of the assessee, the Tribunal shall not pass any order of amendment unless it has given notice to the assessee of its intention to do so and has allowed him a reasonable opportunity of being heard. The Tribunal must send a copy of any orders passed by it to the assessee and to the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner.

(7) Fees for rectification: Any application for rectification filed by the assessee shall be accompanied by a fee of ₹ 50.

(8) Time limit: In every appeal, the Appellate Tribunal, where it is possible, may hear and decide such appeal within a period of four years from the end of the financial year in which such appeal is filed under sub-section (1)/(2) of section 253.

Under section 254(2A), the Appellate Tribunal can grant stay of demand of tax which can extend only up to 180 days from the date of granting such stay. If the appeal is not disposed of within 180 days, the stay order shall stand vacated after the expiry of the said period.

Where an order of stay has been passed and the appeal has not been disposed of within the specified period of 180 days from the date of such order, the Appellate Tribunal may extend the period of stay or pass an order of stay for a further period or periods, as it thinks fit, on an application made in this behalf by the assessee and on being satisfied that the delay in disposing of the appeal is not attributable to the assessee.

However, the aggregate of the period originally allowed and the period or periods so extended or allowed shall not, in any case, exceed 365 days, even if the delay in disposing of the appeal is not attributable to the assessee. If the appeal is not disposed of within such period or periods, the order of stay shall stand vacated after the expiry of such period or periods.

(9) Cost of appeal: The cost of any appeal to the Appellate Tribunal shall be at the discretion of that Tribunal.

(10) Final authority on facts: On all questions of fact the orders passed by the Appellate Tribunal on appeal shall be final and binding on the assessee as well as the Department [Section 255].

(11) Benches:

However, if the members are equally divided, they should state the points on which they differ and the case shall be referred by the President of the Tribunal for hearing on such point by one or more of the other members of the Tribunal: then, such points shall be decided according to the opinion of the majority of the members of the Tribunal who have heard the case, including those who first heard it.

Regulating power - The Appellate Tribunal is empowered to regulate its own procedure and the procedure of its Benches in all matters arising out of the exercise of its power of the discharge of its functions, including the places at which the Benches shall hold their sittings. The Tribunal is vested with all the powers which are exercisable by Income-tax authorities under section 131 for the purpose of discharging its functions. Any proceeding before the Appellate Tribunal shall be deemed to be a judicial proceeding for the purpose of the Income-tax Act, 1961 and the Indian Penal Code and that Appellate Tribunal shall be deemed to be a Civil Court for all the purposes of the Income-tax Act, 1961 and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

Section 260A provides for direct appeal to the High Court against the orders of the Appellate Tribunal.

(1) Appeal - Section 260A(1) provides that an appeal shall lie to the High Court from every order passed in appeal by the Appellate Tribunal, if the High Court is satisfied that the case involves a substantial question of law. If the High Court is so satisfied, it shall formulate that question.

The High Court has and always had the power to condone the delay and admit an appeal after the expiry of the period of 120 days, if it is satisfied that there was sufficient cause for not filing the appeal within that period.

(4) Matters on which appeal can be heard - The appeal shall be heard only on the question formulated. However, the respondent shall at the hearing of appeal, be allowed to argue that the case does not involve such question. Further, the Court shall also have power to hear the appeal on any other substantial question of law not formulated by it, if it is satisfied that the case involves such question. However, such power shall be exercised by the Court only after recording the reasons for hearing such other question.

Further, the High Court may determine any issue which -

(a) has not been determined by the Appellate Tribunal; or

(b) has been wrongly determined by the Appellate Tribunal, by reason of a decision on such question of law as is referred to in section 260A(1).

(5) Delivery of judgment - After the appeal is heard, the High Court shall decide the question of law so formulated and deliver such judgment thereon, but such judgment should contain the grounds on which such decision is founded.

(6) Award of costs - The High Court is empowered to award such costs as it deems fit.

(7) Code of Civil Procedure - Unless otherwise provided in this Act, the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, relating to appeals to the High Court, shall apply to appeals under this section.

18.4 APPEAL TO THE SUPREME COURT [SECTION 261]

According to section 261, an appeal shall lie to the Supreme Court from any judgment of the High Court, in a case which the High Court certifies to be a fit one for appeal to the Supreme Court. The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 in regard to appeal shall apply in the case of all appeals to the Supreme Court in the same manner as in the case of all appeals from decrees of a High Court. The cost of appeal shall be decided at the discretion of the Supreme Court. Where the judgment of a High Court is varied in the appeal, effect should be given to the order of the Supreme Court in the same manner as provided in the case of a judgment of the High Court.

18.5 PROVISION FOR AVOIDING REPETITIVE APPEALS [SECTION 158A]

(1) Identical question of law pending before High Court/Supreme Court: Section 158A makes provision for avoiding repetitive appeals when identical question of law is pending before High Court or Supreme Court. This is applicable to a situation where an assessee claims that any question of law arising in his case for an assessment year which is pending before the Assessing Officer or any appellate authority is identical with a question of law arising in his case for another assessment year which is pending in appeal under section 260A before the High Court or in appeal under section 261 before the Supreme Court.

(2) Assessee to furnish declaration: In such a situation, notwithstanding anything contained in the Act, the assessee may furnish a declaration in the prescribed form that if the Assessing Officer or the appellate authority, as the case may be, agrees to apply in the present case, the final decision passed on the other case, the assessee shall not raise again the same question of law in appeal before any appellate authority or in appeal before the High Court under section 260A or in appeal before the Supreme Court under section 261.

(3) Assessing Officer's report on correctness of claim: Where such a declaration is furnished by the assessee to an appellate authority, the appellate authority shall call for a report from the Assessing Officer on the correctness of the claim. Where the Assessing Officer makes a request to the appellate authority to give him an opportunity of being heard, it shall allow him such opportunity.

(4) Admission or rejection of claim by order in writing: The Assessing Officer or the appellate authority, as the case may be, may, by order in writing –

(i) admit the claim if satisfied that the question of law is identical in the present as well as the other case; or

(ii) reject the claim, if not so satisfied.

(5) Consequences where claim is admitted: Where a claim is admitted, -

(i) the Assessing Officer or appellate authority, as the case may be, may make an order disposing of the present case without waiting for the final decision on the other case.

(ii) the assessee would then not be entitled to raise in relation to the relevant case, such question of law in appeal before any appellate authority or in appeal before the High Court under section 260A or the Supreme Court under section 261.

(6) Final decision of Supreme Court/High Court to be applied to the case: When the final decision on the question of law is passed in the other case, the Assessing Officer or the appellate authority, as the case may be would apply it to the present case and amend the order passed, if necessary, in order to conform to such decision.

(7) Finality of the order: An order admitting or rejecting the claim of the assessee, as the case may be, would be final. Such order cannot be called in question in any proceeding by way of appeal, reference, revision under the Act.

(8) Meaning of certain terms:

Term	Meaning
Appellate authority	The Deputy Commissioner (Appeals), the Commissioner (Appeals) or the Appellate Tribunal.
Case	Any proceeding under the Act for assessment of the total income of the assessee or for the imposition of any penalty or fine on him.

18.6 PROCEDURE FOR APPEAL BY REVENUE WHEN AN IDENTICAL QUESTION OF LAW IS PENDING BEFORE SUPREME COURT [SECTION 158AA]

(1) Assessing Officer to make an application within prescribed period: Section 158AA provides that irrespective of anything contained in the Act, where any question of law arising in the case of an assessee for any assessment year is identical with a question of law arising in his case for another assessment year which is pending before the Supreme Court, in an appeal or in a special leave petition under Article 136 of the Constitution filed by the revenue, against the order of the High Court in favour of the assessee, the Commissioner or Principal Commissioner may, instead of directing the Assessing Officer to appeal to the Appellate Tribunal under section 253(2) or section 253(2A), direct the Assessing Officer to make an application to the Appellate Tribunal in the prescribed form within sixty days from the date of receipt of order of the Commissioner (Appeals) stating that an appeal on the question of law arising in the relevant case may be filed when the decision on the question of law becomes final in the earlier case.

(2) Application to be made only if assessee accepts that the question of law is identical: The Commissioner or Principal Commissioner shall direct the Assessing Officer to make an application under section 158AA(1), only if an acceptance is received from the assessee to the effect that the question of law in the other case is identical to that arising in the relevant case. However, in case no such acceptance is received, the Commissioner or Principal Commissioner shall proceed in accordance with the provisions contained in section 253(2) or section 253(2A). Accordingly, the Commissioner or Principal Commissioner may, if he objects to the order passed by the Commissioner (Appeals), direct the Assessing Officer to appeal to the Appellate Tribunal.

(3) Consequences where CIT(Appeals) order is not in conformity with Supreme Court's decision: Where the order of the Commissioner (Appeals) is not in conformity with the final decision on the question of law in the other case (if the Supreme Court decides the earlier case in favour of the Department), the Commissioner or Principal Commissioner may direct the Assessing Officer to appeal to the Appellate Tribunal against such order within 60 days from the date on which the order of the Supreme Court is communicated to the Commissioner or Principal Commissioner.

Unless otherwise provided in section 158AA, all other provisions of Part B of Chapter XX "Appeals to Appellate Tribunal" shall apply accordingly.

18.7 REVISION BY THE PRINCIPAL COMMISSIONER OR COMMISSIONER [SECTIONS 263 AND 264]

(1) Revision of Orders prejudicial to the Revenue [Section 263]

(i) Under section 263(1), if the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner considers that any order passed by the Assessing Officer is erroneous in so far as it is prejudicial to the interests of the Revenue, he may, after giving the assessee an opportunity of being heard and after making an enquiry, pass an order enhancing or modifying the assessment made by the Assessing Officer or cancelling the assessment and directing fresh assessment.

(ii) An order passed by the Assessing Officer shall be deemed to be erroneous in so far as it is prejudicial to the interests of the Revenue, if, in the opinion of the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner,—

(a) the order is passed without making inquiries or verification which should have been made;

(b) the order is passed allowing any relief without inquiring into the claim;

(c) the order has not been made in accordance with any order, direction or instruction issued by the CBDT under section 119;

(d) the order has not been passed in accordance with any decision which is prejudicial to the assessee, rendered by the jurisdictional High Court or Supreme Court in the case of the assessee or any other person.

(iii) The term 'record' shall include and shall be deemed always to have included all records relating to any proceedings under the Act available at the time of examination by the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner.

(iv) Where any order referred to in section 263(1) passed by the Assessing Officer had been the subject-matter of any appeal, the powers of the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner under section 263(1) shall extend and shall be deemed always to have extended to such matters as had not been considered and decided in such appeal.

(v) No order shall be made after the expiry of 2 years from the end of the financial year in which the order sought to be revised was passed.

(vi) In computing the period of 2 years, the time taken in giving an opportunity to the assessee to be reheard under section 129 and any period during which the revision proceeding is stayed by an order or injunction of any court shall be excluded.

(vii) The time limit, however, does not apply in case where the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner has to give effect to a finding or direction contained in the order of the Appellate Tribunal, High Court or the Supreme Court.

(2) Revision of other orders [Section 264]

(i) In the case of any other order (not being an order prejudicial to the Revenue) passed by any subordinate authority including the Deputy Commissioner (Appeals), the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner may either on his own motion or on receipt of an application from the assessee, call for the record of any proceedings under the Act in the course of which the order was passed. After making such enquiries as may be necessary the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner may pass such order as he thinks fit.

(ii) The Principal Commissioner or Commissioner is not empowered to revise any order on his own motion if a period of more than one year has expired from the date of the order sought to be revised.

(iii) If the application for revision is made by the assessee, it must be made within one year from the date on which the order in question was communicated to him or the date on which he otherwise comes to know of it, whichever is later.

(iv) However, the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner may admit an application even after the expiry of one year, if he is satisfied that the assessee was prevented by sufficient cause from making the application within that period.

(v) The application to the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner for revision must be accompanied by a fee of ₹ 500.

(vi) If an order is passed by the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner declining to interfere in any proceeding, it shall not be deemed to be an order prejudicial to the assessee.

(vii) However, the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner is not empowered to revise any order in the following cases, viz.,

(a) where an appeal against the order lies to the Commissioner (Appeals) or the Tribunal but has not been made and the time within which the appeal may be made has not expired or in the case of an appeal to the Tribunal the assessee has not waived his right of appeal;

(b) where the order is pending on an appeal before the Commissioner (Appeals);

(c) where the order has been made subject to an appeal to the Commissioner (Appeals) or the Appellate Tribunal.

(3) Limitation of time for revision of orders by Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax under section 264

Under section 264, the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax is empowered to revise an order passed by the subordinate authority where no appeal has been filed. There is a limitation of one year for filing the application.

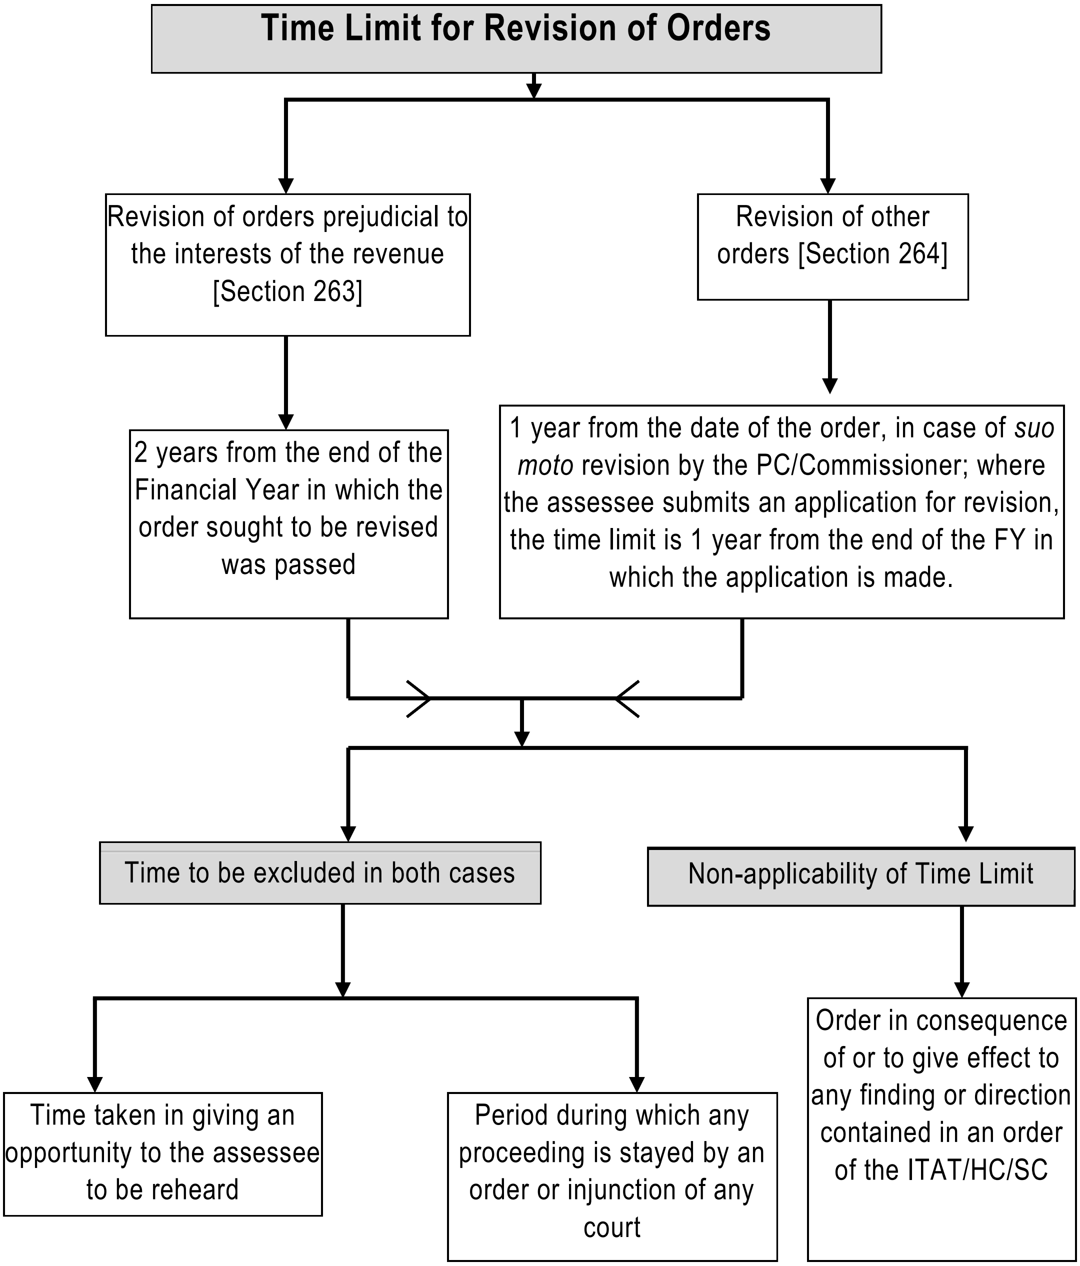
(a) It shall be obligatory on the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner to pass an order within a period of one year from the end of financial year in which such application is made by the assessee for revision.

(b) In computing the above referred period of limitation, the time taken in giving an opportunity to the assessee to be re-heard under the proviso to section 129 and any period during which any proceeding under this section is stayed by an order or injunction of any Court shall be excluded [Explanation to section 264(6)].

(c) The aforesaid time limit shall not apply to any order which has been passed in consequence of or to give effect to any finding or direction contained in an order of the Appellate Tribunal, High Court or the Supreme Court.

The assessee is bound to pay the tax due from him in accordance with the assessment made on him irrespective of the fact that a reference to the High Court or an appeal to the Supreme Court has been made to him [Section 265]. The High Court may, on a petition made to it for the execution of the order to the Supreme Court in respect of any costs awarded, thereby transmit the order for execution to any Court subordinate to it [Section 266]. Where as a result of an appeal under section 246 or section 246A or section 253, any change is made in the assessment of a body of individuals or an association of persons or a new assessment of a body of individuals or an association of persons is ordered to be made, the Commissioner (Appeals) or the Appellate Tribunal, as the case may be, shall pass an order authorizing the Assessing Officer either to amend the assessment made on any member of the body or association or make a fresh assessment on any member of the body or association [Section 267].

Section 268 - In computing the period of limitation prescribed for an appeal under this Act, the day on which the order complained of was served and, if the assessee was not furnished with a copy of the order when the notice of the order was served upon him, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of such order, should be excluded.



Time Limit for Revision of Orders

Revision of orders prejudicial to the interests of the revenue [Section 263]

Revision of other orders [Section 264]

2 years from the end of the Financial Year in which the order sought to be revised was passed

1 year from the date of the order, in case of suo moto revision by the PC/Commissioner; where the assessee submits an application for revision, the time limit is 1 year from the end of the FY in which the application is made.

Time to be excluded in both cases

Non-applicability of Time Limit

Time taken in giving an opportunity to the assessee to be reheard

Period during which any proceeding is stayed by an order or injunction of any court

Order in consequence of or to give effect to any finding or direction contained in an order of the ITAT/HC/SC

(4) Consequence of non-filing of appeal in respect of cases where the tax effect is less than the prescribed monetary limit [Section 268A]

(i) As per section 268A(1), the CBDT is empowered to issue orders, instructions or directions to other income tax authorities, fixing such monetary limits as it may deem fit. Such fixing of monetary limit is for the purpose of regulating filing of appeal or application for reference by any income tax authority.

(ii) Where an income-tax authority has not filed any appeal or application for reference on any issue in the case of an assessee for any assessment year, due to abovementioned order/instruction/direction of the CBDT, such authority shall not be precluded from filing an appeal or application for reference on the same issue in the case of –

(1) the same assessee for any other assessment year; or

(2) any other assessee for the same or any other assessment year.

(iii) Further, in such a case, it shall not be lawful for an assessee to contend that the income-tax authority has acquiesced in the decision on the disputed issue by not filing an appeal or application for reference in any case.

(iv) The Appellate Tribunal or Court should take into consideration the above mentioned orders/instructions/directions of the CBDT and the circumstances under which such appeal or application for reference was filed or not filed in respect of any case.

(v) Every order/instruction/direction which has been issued by the CBDT fixing monetary limits for filing an appeal or application for reference shall be deemed to have been issued under sub-section (1) and all the provisions of this section shall apply accordingly.

18.8 MONETARY LIMITS FOR FILING OF APPEALS BY THE DEPARTMENT BEFORE INCOME TAX APPELLATE TRIBUNAL, HIGH COURTS AND SLPS/APPEALS BEFORE SUPREME COURT

The CBDT has specified the monetary limits and other conditions for filing departmental appeals before Income Tax Appellate Tribunal, High Courts and SLPs/ appeals before Supreme Court vide Circular No. 3/2018, Dated 11-7-2018, F. No. 279/Misc. 142/2007-ITJ (Pt), Dated 20-8-2018, Circular No. 17/2019, Dated 8-8-2019 and F. No. 279/Misc./M-93/2018-ITJ (Pt), Dated 16-9-2019.

It has been decided by the CBDT that departmental appeals may be filed on merits before Income Tax Appellate Tribunal and High Courts and SLPs/ appeals before Supreme Court keeping in view the monetary limits and conditions specified below.

Monetary Limits specified:

Appeals/ SLPs shall not be filed in cases where the tax effect does not exceed the monetary limits given hereunder:

S. No.	Appeals/ SLPs in Income-tax matters	Monetary Limit (₹)
1.	Before Appellate Tribunal	50,00,000
2.	Before High Court	1,00,00,000
3.	Before Supreme Court	2,00,00,000

It is clarified that an appeal should not be filed merely because the tax effect in a case exceeds the monetary limits prescribed above. Filing of appeal in such cases is to be decided on merits of the case.

Meaning of Tax Effect:

	Case	Tax Effect
i.	In case not covered in ii, iii and iv below	The tax on the total income assessed (-) The tax that would have been chargeable had such total income been reduced by the amount of income in respect of the issues against which appeal is intended to be filed ("disputed issues"). Note – However, the tax will not include any interest thereon, except where chargeability of interest itself is in dispute.*
ii.	In case the chargeability of interest is the issue under dispute	The amount of interest
iii.	In case where returned loss is reduced or assessed as income	The tax effect would include notional tax on disputed additions
iv.	In case of penalty orders	Quantum of penalty deleted or reduced in the order to be appealed against
Note – Tax effect shall be tax including applicable surcharge and cess.

Computation of tax on the total income assessed where income is computed under the provisions of section 115JB or section 115JC:

In such case, tax on the total income assessed would be computed as given below -

(A - B) + (C - D)

Where,

A = the total income assessed as per the provisions other than the provisions contained in section 115JB or section 115JC (i.e., the general provisions)

B = the total income that would have been chargeable had the total income assessed as per the general provisions been reduced by the amount of the disputed issues under general provisions

C = the total income assessed as per the provisions contained in section 115JB or section 115JC

D = the total income that would have been chargeable had the total income assessed as per the provisions contained in section 115JB or section 115JC was reduced by the amount of the disputed issues under said provisions

However, where the amount of disputed issues is considered both under the provisions contained in section 115JB or section 115JC and under general provisions, such amount shall not be reduced from total income assessed while determining the amount under item D.

Manner of calculation of tax effect of different assessment years:

The Assessing Officer has to calculate the tax effect separately for every assessment year in respect of the disputed issues in the case of every assessee. If, in the case of an assessee, the disputed issues arise in more than one assessment year, appeal can be filed in respect of such assessment year or years in which the tax effect in respect of the disputed issues exceeds the specified monetary limit. No appeal shall be filed in respect of an assessment year or years in which the tax effect is less than the monetary limit specified. Further, even in case of a composite order of any High Court or appellate authority, which involves more than one assessment year and common issues in more than one assessment year, no appeal shall be filed in respect of an assessment year or years in which the 'tax effect' is less than the prescribed monetary limit. In case where a composite order/judgement involves more than one assessee, each assessee shall be dealt with separately.

Department not precluded from filing an appeal against disputed issues for subsequent assessment years if the tax effect exceeds the specified monetary limits in those years

In a case where appeal before a Tribunal or a Court is not filed only on account of the tax effect being less than the monetary limit specified above, the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax shall specifically record that "even though the decision is not acceptable, appeal is not being filed only on the consideration that the tax effect is less than the monetary limit specified in the Circular". Further, in such cases, there will be no presumption that the Income-tax Department has acquiesced in the decision on the disputed issues. The Income-tax Department shall not be precluded from filing an appeal against the disputed issues in the case of the same assessee for any other assessment year, or in the case of any other assessee for the same or any other assessment year, if the tax effect exceeds the specified monetary limits.

Cases in respect of which appeal is not filed due to tax effect being less than specified monetary limit not to have any precedent value

In the past, a number of instances have come to the notice of the Board, whereby an assessee has claimed relief from the Tribunal or the Court only on the ground that the Department has implicitly accepted the decision of the Tribunal or Court in the case of the assessee for any other assessment year or in the case of any other assessee for the same or any other assessment year, by not filing an appeal on the same disputed issues. The Departmental representatives/counsels must make every effort to bring to the notice of the Tribunal or the Court that the appeal in such cases was not filed or not admitted only for the reason of the tax effect being less than the specified monetary limit and, therefore, no inference should be drawn that the decisions rendered therein were acceptable to the Department. Accordingly, they should impress upon the Tribunal or the Court that such cases do not have any precedent value and also bring to the notice of the Tribunal/ Court the provisions of section 268A(4) of the Act. As the evidence of not filing appeal due to this Circular may have to be produced in courts, the judicial folders in the office of Pr CsIT/ CsIT must be maintained in a systemic manner for easy retrieval.

Cases where adverse judgments should be contested on merits even if tax effect is less than the specified monetary limits

Adverse judgments relating to the issues enumerated hereunder should be contested on merits notwithstanding that the tax effect entailed is less than the specified monetary limits or there is no tax effect:

(a) Where the Constitutional validity of the provisions of an Act or Rule is under challenge, or

(b) Where Board's order, Notification, Instruction or Circular has been held to be illegal or ultra vires, or

(c) Where Revenue Audit objection in the case has been accepted by the Department, or

(d) Where addition relates to undisclosed foreign income/undisclosed foreign assets (including financial assets)/undisclosed foreign bank account.

(e) Where addition is based on information received from external sources in the nature of law enforcement agencies such as CBI/ED/DRI/SFIO/Directorate General of GST Intelligence (DGGI).

(f) Cases where prosecution has been filed by the Department and is pending in the Court.

Specified monetary limit not to apply to writ matters and direct tax matters other than income-tax

Filing of appeals in other direct tax matters shall continue to be governed by the relevant provisions of statute and rules. Further, filing of appeal in cases of income-tax, where the tax effect is not quantifiable or not involved, such as the case of registration of trusts or institutions under section 12A/ 12AA, filing of appeal shall not be governed by the specified monetary limits and decision to file appeal in such cases may be taken on merits of a particular case.

Retrospective applicability of specified monetary limits

This Circular would apply to SLPs/appeals/cross objections/reference to be filed henceforth in SC/HCs/Tribunal and it shall also apply retrospectively to pending SLPs/appeals/cross objections/reference. Pending appeals below the specified tax limits may be withdrawn/ not pressed.

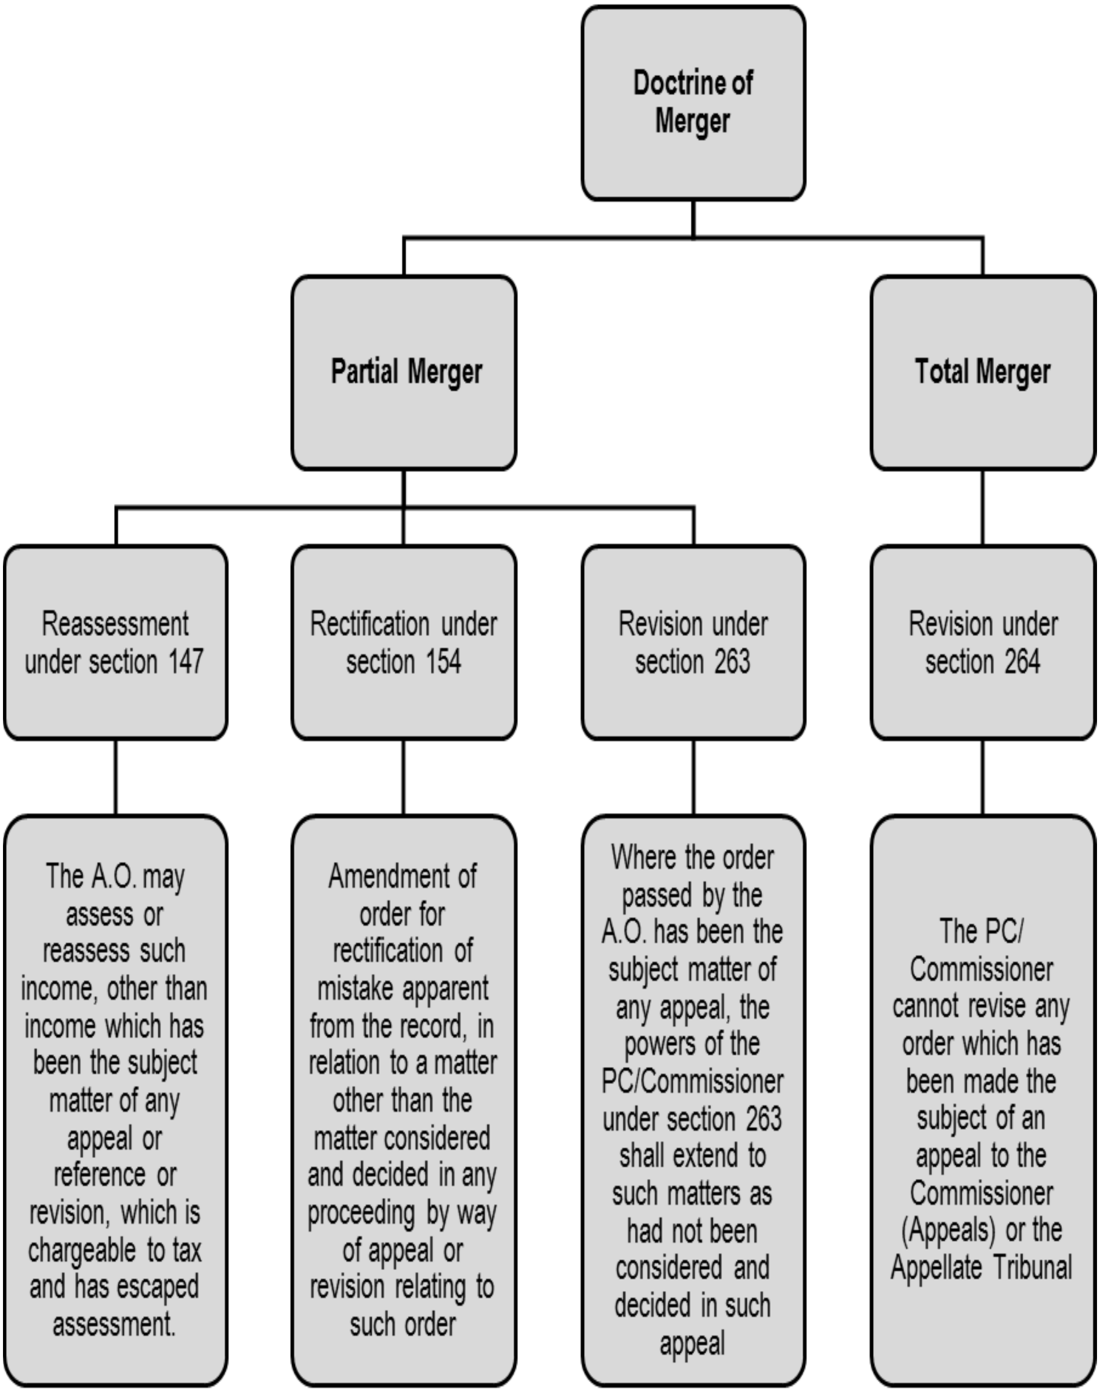
Non-applicability of specified monetary limits in case involving bogus LTCG/ STCG through penny stocks

However, in exercise of power conferred by section 268A, CBDT has clarified that the above monetary limits shall not apply in case of assessee claiming bogus LTCG/ STCG through penny stocks and appeals/ SLPs in such cases shall be filed on merits.

18.9 DOCTRINE OF PARTIAL MERGER AND DOCTRINE OF TOTAL MERGER

The third proviso in section 147, provides that the doctrine of partial merger shall apply to reopening in a case where an assessee has filed an appeal etc. for an assessment year. It has been provided that the Assessing Officer may assess or reassess such income, other than income which has been the subject matter of any appeal or reference or revision, which is chargeable to tax and has escaped assessment. The doctrine of partial merger also holds good for section 154 and section 263.

However, the concept of total merger would apply in the case of section 264. The Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax has no power to revise any order under section 264, if the order has been made subject to an appeal to the Appellate Tribunal, even if the relief claimed in the revision is different from the relief claimed in the appeal and irrespective of the fact whether the appeal is by the assessee or by the Department as the concept of total/complete merger is applicable for section 264.



Doctrine of Merger

Partial Merger

Total Merger

Reassessment under section 147

Rectification under section 154

Revision under section 263

Revision under section 264

The A.O. may assess or reassess such income, other than income which has been the subject matter of any appeal or reference or revision, which is chargeable to tax and has escaped assessment.

Amendment of order for rectification of mistake apparent from the record, in relation to a matter other than the matter considered and decided in any proceeding by way of appeal or revision relating to such order

Where the order passed by the A.O. has been the subject matter of any appeal, the powers of the PC/Commissioner under section 263 shall extend to such matters as had not been considered and decided in such appeal

Question 1

"SVS Propcon" did not make a claim of ₹ 20 lacs in the return of income filed for A.Y. 2020-21 which was disallowed in the previous assessment year under section 43B. However, the said claim was also not considered by the Assessing Officer during assessment proceedings on the ground that no revised return was filed. Can the assessee now make such claim before the appellate authority?

Answer

Yes, the assessee is entitled to raise additional claims before the appellate authorities.

The restriction that an additional claim has to be made by filing a revised return applies only in respect of a claim made before the Assessing Officer. An assessee cannot make a claim before the Assessing Officer otherwise than by filing a revised return. It was so held by the Supreme Court in Goetze (India) Ltd v. CIT (2006) 284 ITR 323.

However, this restriction does not apply to an additional claim made before an appellate authority. The appellate authorities have jurisdiction to permit additional claims before them, though, the exercise of such jurisdiction is entirely the authorities' discretion. It was so held by the Bombay High Court in CIT v. Pruthvi Brokers & Shareholders (2012) 349 ITR 336.

Thus, an additional claim can be raised before the Appellate Authority even if no revised return is filed.

Question 2

Examine the correctness or otherwise of the following statements with reference to the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961:

(i) An appeal before Income-tax Appellate Tribunal cannot be decided in the event of difference of opinion between the Judicial Member and the Accountant Member on a particular ground.

(ii) A High Court does not have an inherent power to review an earlier order passed by it on merits.

Answer

(i) The statement given is not correct. As per the provisions of section 255, in the event of difference in opinion between the members of the Bench of the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal, the matter shall be decided on the basis of the opinion of the majority of the members. In case the members are equally divided, they shall state the point or points of difference and the case shall be referred by the President of the Tribunal for hearing on such points by one or more of the other members of the Tribunal. Such point or points shall be decided according to the opinion of majority of the members of the Tribunal who heard the case, including those who had first heard it.

(ii) The statement given is not correct. The Supreme Court, in CIT v. Meghalaya Steels Ltd. (2015) 377 ITR 112, observed that the power of review would inhere on High Courts, being courts of record under article 215 of the Constitution of India. There is nothing in article 226 of the Constitution to preclude a High Court from exercising the power of review which inheres in every court of plenary jurisdiction to prevent miscarriage of justice or to correct grave and palpable errors committed by it. The Supreme Court further observed that section 260A(7) does not purport in any manner to curtail or restrict the application of the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. Section 260A(7) only states that all the provisions that would apply qua appeals in the Code of Civil Procedure would apply to appeals under section 260A. The Supreme Court opined that this does not in any manner suggest either that the other provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure are necessarily excluded or that the High Court's inherent jurisdiction is in any manner affected.

Question 3

Does the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal have the following powers?

(i) Power to allow the assessee to urge any ground of appeal which was not raised by him before the Commissioner (Appeals);

(ii) Power to recall its own order.

Answer

(i) The Income-tax Appellate Tribunal has the power to entertain question raised for the first time. The Tribunal is not confined only to the issues arising out of the appeal before the Commissioner (Appeals). It has the power to allow the assessee to urge any ground not raised before the Commissioner (Appeals). However, the relevant facts in respect of such ground should be on record. The decision of the Supreme Court in the case of National Thermal Power Company Limited vs. CIT (1998) 229 ITR 383 (SC) supports this view.

(ii) The Delhi High Court, in Lachman Dass Bhatia Hingwala (P) Ltd. v. ACIT (2011) 330 ITR 243 (Delhi)(FB) observed that the justification of an order passed by the Tribunal recalling its own order is required to be tested on the basis of the law laid down by the Apex Court in Honda Siel Power Products Ltd. v. CIT (2007) 295 ITR 466, dealing with the Tribunal's power under section 254(2) to recall its order where prejudice has resulted to a party due to an apparent omission, mistake or error committed by the Tribunal while passing the order. Such recalling of order for correcting an apparent mistake committed by the Tribunal has nothing to do with the doctrine or concept of inherent power of review. It is a well settled provision of law that the Tribunal has no inherent power to review its own judgment or order on merits or reappreciate the correctness of its earlier decision on merits. However, the power to recall has to be distinguished from the power to review. While the Tribunal does not have the inherent power to review its order on merits, it can recall its order for the purpose of correcting a mistake apparent from the record.

> When prejudice results from an order attributable to the Tribunal's mistake, error or omission, then it is the duty of the Tribunal to set it right. The Delhi High Court observed that the Tribunal, while exercising the power of rectification under section 254(2), can recall its order in entirety if it is satisfied that prejudice has resulted to the party which is attributable to the Tribunal's mistake, error or omission and the error committed is apparent.

Question 4

Can a rectification order under section 254 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 be passed by the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal beyond 6 months from the end of the month in which the order sought to be rectified was passed?

Answer

The issue as to whether a rectification order can be passed by the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal under section 254 beyond six months from the end of the month in which order sought to be rectified was passed, has been addressed in Sree Ayyanar Spinning and Weaving Mills Ltd. v. CIT (2008) 301 ITR 434 (SC). Section 254(2), dealing with the power of the Appellate Tribunal to pass an order of rectification of mistakes, is in two parts. The first part refers to the suo motu exercise of the power of rectification by the Appellate Tribunal, whereas the second part refers to rectification on an application filed by the assessee or Assessing Officer bringing any mistake apparent from the record to the attention of the Appellate Tribunal.

If Income-tax Appellate Tribunal, suo moto, makes the rectification of its order, then the order has to be passed within 6 months from the end of the month in which the order sought to be rectified was passed. Where the application for rectification is made by the Assessing Officer or the assesse within 6 months from the end of the month in which the order sought to be rectified was passed, the Appellate Tribunal is bound to decide the application on merits and not on the ground of limitation i.e. order can be passed after expiry of 6 months from the end of the month in which the order sought to be rectified was passed. However, the application for rectification cannot be filed belatedly after 6 months from the end of the month in which the order sought to be rectified was passed. [Ajith Kumar Pitaliya vs ITO (2009) 318 ITR 182 (M.P.)]

Question 5

What do you mean by substantial question of law? Examine.

Answer

The expression "substantial question of law" has not been defined anywhere in the Act. However, it has acquired a definite meaning through various judicial pronouncements. The tests are:

(1) whether directly or indirectly it affects substantial rights of the parties; or

(2) the question is of general public importance; or

(3) whether it is an open question in the sense that issue is not settled by the pronouncement of the Supreme Court or Privy Council or by the Federal Court; or

(4) the issue is not free from difficulty; or

(5) it calls for a discussion for alternative view.

Question 6

Examine the correctness of the following statement:

"The Appellate Tribunal is empowered to grant indefinite stay for the demand disputed in appeals before it."

Answer

Section 254(2A) provides that the Appellate Tribunal, where it is possible, may hear and decide an appeal within a period of four years from the end of the financial year in which such appeal is filed.

The Appellate Tribunal may, on merit, pass an order of stay in any proceedings relating to an appeal. However, such period of stay cannot exceed 180 days from the date of such order. The Appellate Tribunal has to dispose off the appeal within this period of stay.

Where the appeal has not been disposed off within this period and the delay in disposing the appeal is not attributable to the assessee, the Appellate Tribunal can further extend the period of stay originally allowed. However, the aggregate of period originally allowed and the period so extended should not exceed 365 days even if the delay in disposing of the appeal is not attributable to the assessee. The Appellate Tribunal is required to dispose off the appeal within this extended period. If the appeal is not disposed of within such period or periods, the order of stay shall stand vacated after the expiry of such period or periods.

Therefore, the statement given in the question is not correct.

Question 7

Is Commissioner (Appeals) empowered to consider an appeal filed by an assessee challenging the order of assessment in respect of which the proceedings before the Settlement Commission abates? Examine.

Answer

Section 251(1) lists the powers of the Commissioner (Appeals) in disposing of an appeal. Clause (aa) of section 251(1) empowers the Commissioner (Appeals), in an appeal against the assessment order in respect of which the proceeding before the Settlement Commission abates under section 245HA, to confirm, reduce, enhance or annul the assessment after taking into consideration the following -

(1) all the material and other information produced by the assessee before the Settlement Commission;

(2) the results of the inquiry held by the Settlement Commission;

(3) the evidence recorded by the Settlement Commission in the course of the proceeding before it; and

(4) such other material as may be brought on his record.

Question 8

An Income-tax authority did not file an appeal to the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal against an order of the Commissioner (Appeals) decided against the Income-tax department on a particular issue in case of one assessee, Alpi for assessment year 2019-20 on the ground that the tax effect of such dispute was less than the monetary limit prescribed by CBDT. In assessment year 2020-21, similar issue arose in the assessments of Alpi and her sister Palki, which was decided by the Commissioner (Appeals) against the Department. Can the Income-tax department move an appeal to the Tribunal in respect of A.Y. 2020-21 against the orders of the Commissioner (Appeals) for Alpi and her sister Palki?

Answer

Under section 268A(1), the CBDT is empowered to issue orders, instructions or directions to the other income-tax authorities, fixing such monetary limits, as it may deem fit, to regulate filing of appeal or application for reference by any income-tax authority.

Under section 268A(2), where an income-tax authority has not filed any appeal or application for reference on any issue in the case of an assessee for any assessment year, due to above-mentioned order/instruction/direction of the CBDT, such authority shall not be precluded from filing an appeal or application for reference on the same issue in the case of the same assessee for any other assessment year or any other assessee for the same or any other assessment year. Further, in such a case, it shall not be lawful for an assessee to contend that the income-tax authority has acquiesced in the decision on the disputed issue by not filing an appeal or application for reference in any case.

In view of above provision, it would be in order for the Income-tax Department to move an appeal to the Tribunal against the orders of the CIT(A) in respect of A.Y. 2020-21 both for Alpi and Palki.

Question 9

A petition for stay of demand was filed before ITAT by XYZ Ltd. in respect of a disputed demand for which appeal was pending before it, on which stay was granted by the ITAT vide order dated 1.1.2019. The bench could not function thereafter till 1.2.2020 and therefore, the disputed matter could not be disposed off. The Assessing Officer attached the bank account on 16.2.2020 and recovered the amount of ₹ 15 lacs against the arrear demand of ₹ 25 lacs. The assessee requested the Assessing Officer to refund back the amount as it holds stay over it. The Assessing Officer rejected the contention of the assessee. Now the assessee seeks your opinion.

Answer

The Appellate Tribunal may, on merit, pass an order of stay in any proceedings relating to an appeal. However, such period of stay cannot exceed 180 days from the date of such order. The Appellate Tribunal has to dispose off the appeal within this period of stay. Where the appeal has not been disposed off within this period and the delay in disposing the appeal is not attributable to the assessee, the Appellate Tribunal can further extend the period of stay originally allowed. Section 254(2A) provides that the aggregate of the period originally allowed and the period or periods so extended or allowed shall not, in any case, exceed 365 days, even if the delay in disposing of the appeal is not attributable to the assessee. If the appeal is not disposed of within such period or periods, the order of stay shall stand vacated after the expiry of such period or periods.

Accordingly, even if an appeal is not heard by the bench, say, due to the bench not functioning or due to the department seeking adjournment, the stay granted by the Appellate Tribunal shall stand vacated after the period of 365 days, inspite of the assessee having taken all steps to ensure speedy disposal of the appeal and having a good prima facie case.

In the present case, the period of 365 days has expired on 31.12.2019, after which date the order of stay stands vacated. Accordingly, the recovery of ₹ 15 lacs against the arrear demand of ₹ 25 lacs made by the Assessing Officer on 16.2.2020 is in order.

Question 10

An assessee who had been served with an order of assessment passed under section 143(3) on 1.1.2020 had filed an application against this order before the CIT as per section 264 on 11.1.2020. However, the CIT refused to entertain the application on the pretext of premature application. Assessee seeks your opinion.

Answer

An assessee, who is aggrieved by the order of the Assessing Officer under section 143(3) passed on 1.1.2020, had moved an application for revision of order under section 264 on 11.1.2020. The order passed by the Assessing Officer under section 143(3) is an order appealable before the Commissioner (Appeals). The time limit for filing an appeal is 30 days from the date of order i.e., upto 31.1.2020. This time limit had not expired on 11.1.2020 and the assessee had also not waived his right of appeal while filing the application for revision on 11.1.2020 before the Commissioner of Income-tax. The application filed before the Commissioner of Income-tax for revision under section 264 by the assessee will only be considered when the conditions specified under section 264(4) have been complied with. One of the conditions is that the Commissioner shall not revise any order where an appeal against the order lies to the Commissioner (Appeals) or Appellate Tribunal and the time within which such appeal may be made has not expired, unless the assessee has waived his right of appeal. In the present case, the time limit had not expired on 11.1.2020 and the assessee had also not waived the right of appeal while filing the application for revision before the Commissioner of Income-tax on 11.1.2020 under section 264. Therefore, the Commissioner's refusal to entertain such application is correct.

Note : In practical situations, the Commissioner could have kept the proceedings in abeyance till the expiry of the time prescribed for filing appeal by the assessee and thereafter, could have assumed jurisdiction for making revision besides taking an undertaking from the assessee for waiving his right of appeal. In reality, taxpayers usually will not prefer revision in such short time period nor would the Commissioner reject the application, the moment it is received by him.

Question 11

(a) The Commissioner of Income-tax issued notice to revise the order passed by an Assessing Officer under section 143. During the pendency of proceedings before the Commissioner, on the basis of material gathered during survey under section 133A after issue of the first notice, the Commissioner of Income-tax issued a second notice, the contents of which were different from the contents of the first notice. Examine whether the action of the Commissioner is justified as to the second notice.

(b) Examine the circumstances where the appellant shall be entitled to produce additional evidence, oral or documentary, before the Commissioner of Income-tax (Appeals) other than the evidence produced during the proceedings before the Assessing Officer.

Answer

(a) The action of the Commissioner in issuing the second notice is not justified. The term "record" has been defined in clause (b) of Explanation to section 263(1). According to this definition "record" shall include and shall be deemed always to have included all records relating to any proceeding under the Act available at the time of examination by the Commissioner. In other words, the information, material, report etc. which were not in existence at the time the assessment was made and came into existence afterwards can be taken into consideration by the Commissioner for the purpose of invoking his jurisdiction under section 263(1). However, at the same time, in view of the express provisions contained in clause (b) of the Explanation to section 263(1), such information, material, report etc. can be relied upon by the Commissioner only if the same forms part of record when the action under section 263 is taken by the Commissioner, Issuance of a notice under section 263 succeeds the examination of record by Commissioner. In the present case, the Commissioner initially issued a notice under section 263, after the examination of the record available before him. The subsequent second notice was on the basis of material collected under section 133A, which was totally unrelated and irrelevant to the issues sought to be revised in the first notice. Accordingly, the material on the basis of which the second notice was issued could not be said to be "record" available at the time of examination as emphasized in Explanation (b) to section 263(1).

(b) As per Rule 46A(1) of the Income-tax Rules 1962, an appellant shall be entitled to produce before the Commissioner (Appeals), evidence, either oral or documentary, other than the evidence produced by him during the course of proceedings before the Assessing Officer, only in the following circumstances -

(a) where the Assessing Officer has refused to admit evidence which ought to have been admitted; or

(b) where the appellant was prevented by sufficient cause from producing the evidence which he was called upon to produce by the Assessing Officer; or

(c) where the appellant was prevented by sufficient cause from producing before the Assessing Officer any evidence which is relevant to any ground of appeal; or

(d) where the Assessing Officer has made the order appealed against without giving sufficient opportunity to the appellant to adduce evidence relevant to any ground of appeal.

Further, no evidence shall be admitted unless the Commissioner (Appeals) records in writing the reasons for its admission.

Question 12

Examine the correctness or otherwise of the following propositions in the context of the Income-tax Act, 1961:

(a) The powers of the Commissioner of Income-tax (Appeals) to enhance the assessment are plenary and quite wide.

(b) At the time of hearing of rectification application, the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal can re-appreciate the evidence produced during the proceedings of the appeal hearing.

(c) The High Court cannot interfere with the factual finding recorded by the lower authorities and the Tribunal, without any valid reasons.

Answer

(a) The proposition is correct in law. The Supreme Court has, in CIT vs. McMilan & Co. (1958) 33 ITR 182 and CIT vs. Kanpur Coal Syndicate (1964) 53 ITR 225, held that in disposing of an appeal before him, the appellate authority can travel over a whole range of the assessment order. The scope of his powers is co-terminus with that of the Assessing Officer. He can do what the Assessing Officer can do and can also direct him to do, what he has failed to do. He can assess income from sources which have been considered by the Assessing Officer but not brought to tax. He can consider every aspect of the assessment order and give appropriate relief.

The Allahabad High Court has, in CIT v. Kashi Nath Chandiwala (2006) 280 ITR 318, held that the appellate authority is empowered to consider and decide any matter arising out of the proceedings in which the order appealed against was passed notwithstanding the fact that such matter was not raised before him by the assessee. The Commissioner (Appeals) is entitled to direct additions in respect of items of income not considered by the Assessing Officer.

Further, the Apex Court has, in the case of Jute Corporation of India Ltd. vs. CIT (1991) 187 ITR 688, held that the appellate authority is vested with all the plenary powers which the subordinate authority may have in the matter.

Thus, the powers of the Commissioner of Income-tax (Appeals) in enhancing the assessment are very wide and plenary.

(b) The proposition is not correct as per law. This is because section 254(2) specifically empowers the Appellate Tribunal to amend any order passed by it, either suo-moto or on an application made by the assessee or Assessing Officer, with a view to rectify any mistake apparent from record, at any time within 6 months from the end of the month of the order sought to be amended.

The powers of the Tribunal under section 254(2) relating to rectification of its order are very limited. Such powers are confined to rectifying any mistake apparent from the record. The mistake has to be such that for which no elaborate reasons or inquiry is necessary. Accordingly, the re-appreciation of evidence placed before the Tribunal during the course of the appeal hearing is not permitted. It cannot re-adjudicate the issue afresh under the garb of rectification [CIT vs. Vardhman Spinning (1997) 226 ITR 296 (P & H), CIT v. Ballabh Prasad Agarwalla (1998) 233 ITR 354 (Cal.) & Niranjan & Co. Ltd. v. ITAT (1980) 122 ITR 519 (Cal.)]

(c) The proposition is correct in law. A finding of fact cannot be disturbed by the High Court in exercise of its powers under section 260A. The Income-tax Appellate Tribunal is the final fact finding authority and the findings of fact recorded by the Tribunal can be interfered with by the High Court under section 260A only on the ground that the same were without evidence or material, or if the finding is contrary to the evidence, or is perverse or there is no direct nexus between conclusion of fact and the primary fact upon which that conclusion is based.

In CIT vs. P. Mohanakala (2007) 291 ITR 278 and M. Janardhana Rao v. Joint CIT (2005) 273 ITR 50, the Apex Court observed that the High Court had set aside the factual findings of the lower authorities and the Tribunal without any valid reason. The Apex Court held that the findings of fact could not be interfered with by the High Court without carefully considering the facts on record, the surrounding circumstances and the material evidence. There is no scope for interference with the factual findings, unless the findings are per se without reason or basis, perverse and/or contrary to the material on record.

Hence, only if the issue gives rise to a substantial question of law, an appeal shall lie before the High Court.

Answer the following in the context of provisions contained in the Income-tax Act, 1961:

The assessment for A.Y. 2016-17 was completed as per section 143(3) considering the various claims so made by the assessee on 23.12.2017. Subsequently, this was reopened under section 147 on certain issues, but excluding the claim of the assessee as to "Lease Equalisation Fund". The order of reassessment was passed on 18.11.2018. The Commissioner within the powers vested under section 263 passed an order on 11.4.2020 rejecting the claim of assessee as to "Lease Equalisation Fund". The assessee challenges that the action of the CIT is not sustainable because the same was barred by limitation.

Answer

This issue was settled by the Supreme Court in CIT v. Alagendran Finance Ltd. (2007) 293 ITR 1.

The Supreme Court observed that though there was no doubt that once an order of assessment is reopened, the previous assessment will be held to be set aside and the whole proceedings would start afresh, however, it would not mean that even when the subject-matter of reassessment is distinct and different, the entire proceeding would be deemed to have been reopened. The doctrine of merger would apply only in a case where the subject-matter of reassessment and the subject-matter of assessment are the same. However, in this case, the revision proceedings related to Lease Equalisation Fund, which was not the subject matter of reassessment. Therefore, the doctrine of merger does not apply in this case.

Section 263(2) provides no order shall be made under section 263(1) after the expiry of two years from the end of the financial year in which the order sought to be revised was passed. The period of limitation as referred to in section 263(2) relates to the assessment in which the claim of the assessee as to Lease Equalisation Fund was considered by the Assessing Officer. This issue was not the subject matter of reassessment proceedings.

Accordingly, the period of limitation shall be reckoned with reference to the original assessment order and not from the date of the order of reassessment. Therefore, in this case, the revision proceedings are barred by limitation since the original assessment order was made on 23.12.2017 and the revision should have been made by 31.3.2020.

Question 14

An assessee, who is aggrieved by all or any of the following orders, is desirous to know the available remedial recourse and the time limit against each order under the Income-tax Act, 1961:

(i) passed under section 143(3) by the Assessing Officer.

(ii) passed under section 263 by the Commissioner of Income-tax.

(iii) passed under section 272A by the Director General.

(iv) passed under section 254 by the ITAT.

Answer

(i) An assessee, aggrieved by the order passed under section 143(3) by the Assessing Officer, can file an appeal before the Commissioner of Income-tax (Appeals) under section 246A(1) within 30 days of the date of service of the notice of demand relating to the assessment. However, where the assessee does not want to prefer an appeal, then he can move a revision petition before the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax under section 264 within a period of one year from the date of on which the order was communicated to him or the date on which he otherwise came to know of it, whichever is earlier.

(ii) An assessee, aggrieved by the order passed under section 263 by the Commissioner of Income-tax, can file an appeal to Income-tax Appellate Tribunal under section 253(1)(c) within 60 days of the date on which the order sought to be appealed against is communicated to the assessee.

(iii) An assessee, aggrieved by the order passed under section 272A by the Director General, can file an appeal before the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal under section 253(1)(c) within 60 days of the date on which the order sought to be appealed against is communicated to the assessee.

(iv) An assessee, aggrieved by the order passed under section 254 by the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal, can file an appeal before the High Court under section 260A within 120 days from the date of receipt of order of Income-tax Appellate Tribunal, only where the order gives rise to a substantial question of law.

Question 15

Who can file memorandum of cross-objections before the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal? What is the time limit? What is the fee for filing memorandum of cross objections?

Answer

Section 253(4) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 gives the respondent (assessee or the Assessing Officer), in every appeal filed before the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal, a right to file a memorandum of cross-objections against any order of the Commissioner (Appeals). This right of filing a memorandum of cross-objections is an independent right given to the respondent in an appeal and is in addition to the right of appeal which may or may not be exercised by the assessee or the Assessing Officer under section 253(1) or section 253(2). The memorandum of cross-objections has to be in the prescribed form and verified in the prescribed manner and has to be filed within 30 days of the receipt of notice of the appeal. The Tribunal is empowered to permit filing of memorandum of cross-objections after the expiry of the prescribed period if sufficient cause is shown. Such memorandum of cross-objections will be disposed of by the Appellate Tribunal as if it were an appeal presented within the time specified in section 253(3). There is no fee for filing a memorandum of cross-objections.

SIGNIFICANT SELECT CASES

1. Does the CIT (Appeals) have the power to change the status of assessee?

Mega Trends Inc. v. CIT (2016) 388 ITR 16 (Mad)*.

Facts of the case: The assessee filed its return of income as a partnership firm for the relevant assessment year admitting a total income of ₹ 174.36 lakhs. The firm consisted of thirteen individuals and two firms. The return of income was selected for scrutiny which led to disallowance of certain deductions to the tune of ₹ 262.50 lakhs. The assessee preferred an appeal. The CIT (Appeals) invoked section 251 and issued a show cause notice proposing to change the assessee's status to AOP on the reasoning that a partnership firm cannot be a partner in another firm. The assessee filed writ of certiorari to quash the show cause notice.

Note: 'Certiorari' is "a writ issued by a superior court calling up the record of a proceeding in a lower court for review".

High Court's Observations: The Revenue contended that the CIT(Appeals) has power to modify assessee's status, since a partnership firm is a relationship between persons who have agreed to share the profits of the business carried on by all or any of them acting for all, and the term persons only connotes natural persons. Since some of the partners are other firms, the assessment cannot be carried out as a firm. They relied on the Supreme Court's ruling in Dhulichand Laxminarayan v. CIT (1956) 29 ITR 535 (SC) to argue this point.

The High Court observed that, under section 251(1), the powers of the first appellate authority are coterminous with those of the Assessing Officer and the appellate authority can do what the Assessing Officer ought to have done and also direct him to do what he had failed to do. If the Assessing Officer had erred in concluding the status of the assessee as a firm, it could not be said that the Commissioner (Appeals) had no jurisdiction to go into the issue. The appeal was in continuation of the original proceedings and unless fetters were placed upon the powers of the appellate authority by express words, the appellate authority could exercise all the powers of the original authority.

High Court's Decision: The High Court held that the power to change the status of the assessee is available to the assessing authority and when it is not used by him, the appellate authority is empowered to use such power and change the status. The Court relied on a full bench decision of the Madras High Court in State of Tamil Nadu v. Arulmurugan and Co. reported in [1982] 51 STC 381 to come to such conclusion.

2. Can an assessee make an additional/new claim before an appellate authority, which was not claimed by the assessee in the return of income (though he was legally entitled to), otherwise than by way of filing a revised return of income?

CIT v. Pruthvi Brokers & Shareholders (2012) 349 ITR 336 (Bom.)

High Court's Observations: While considering the above mentioned issue, the Bombay High Court observed the decision of the Supreme Court, in the case of Jute Corporation of India Ltd. v. CIT (1991) 187 ITR 688 and National Thermal Power Corporation. Ltd v. CIT (1998) 229 ITR 383, that an assessee is entitled to raise additional claims before the appellate authorities. The appellate authorities have jurisdiction to permit additional claims before them, however, the exercise of such jurisdiction is entirely the authorities' discretion.

Also, the High Court considered the decision of the Apex Court in the case of Addl. CIT v. Gurjargravures (P.) Ltd. (1978) 111 ITR 1, wherein it was held that in case an additional ground was raised before the appellate authority which could not have been raised at the stage when the return was filed or when the assessment order was made, or the ground became available on account of change of circumstances or law, the appellate authority can allow the same.

The Supreme Court, in the case of Goetze (India) Ltd v. CIT (2006) 157 Taxmann 1, held that the assessee cannot make a claim before the Assessing Officer otherwise than by filing an application for the same. The additional claim before the Assessing Officer can be made only by way of filing revised return of income.

The decision in the above mentioned case, however, does not apply in this case, since the Assessing Officer is not an Appellate Authority.

High Court's Decision: Therefore, in the present case, the Bombay High Court, considering the above mentioned decisions, held that additional grounds can be raised before the Appellate Authority even otherwise than by way of filing return of income. However, in case the claim has to be made before the Assessing Officer, the same can only be made by way of filing a revised return of income.

3. Does the Appellate Tribunal have the power to review or re-appreciate the correctness of its earlier decision under section 254(2)?

CIT v. Earnest Exports Ltd. (2010) 323 ITR 577 (Bom.)

High Court's Observations: In this case, the High Court observed that the power under section 254(2) is limited to rectification of a mistake apparent on record and therefore, the Tribunal must restrict itself within those parameters. Section 254(2) is not a carte blanche for the Tribunal to change its own view by substituting a view which it believes should have been taken in the first instance. Section 254(2) is not a mandate to unsettle decisions taken after due reflection.

High Court's Decision: In this case, the Tribunal, while dealing with the application under section 245(2), virtually reconsidered the entire matter and came to a different conclusion. This amounted to a reappreciation of the correctness of the earlier decision on merits, which is beyond the scope of the power conferred under section 254(2).

4. Can the Tribunal exercise its power of rectification under section 254(2) to recall its order in entirety, where there is a mistake apparent from record?

Lachman Dass Bhatia Hingwala (P) Ltd. v. ACIT (2011) 330 ITR 243 (Delhi)(FB)

High Court's Observations: On this issue, the Delhi High Court observed that the justification of an order passed by the Tribunal recalling its own order is required to be tested on the basis of the law laid down by the Apex Court in Honda Siel Power Products Ltd. v. CIT (2007) 295 ITR 466, dealing with the Tribunal's power under section 254(2) to recall its order where prejudice has resulted to a party due to an apparent omission, mistake or error committed by the Tribunal while passing the order. Such recalling of order for correcting an apparent mistake committed by the Tribunal has nothing to do with the doctrine or concept of inherent power of review. It is a well settled provision of law that the Tribunal has no inherent power to review its own judgment or order on merits or reappreciate the correctness of its earlier decision on merits. However, the power to recall has to be distinguished from the power to review. While the Tribunal does not have the inherent power to review its order on merits, it can recall its order for the purpose of correcting a mistake apparent from the record.

The Apex Court, while dealing with the power of the Tribunal under section 254(2) in Honda Siel Power Products Ltd., observed that one of the important reasons for giving the power of rectification to the Tribunal is to see that no prejudice is caused to either of the parties appearing before it by its decision based on a mistake apparent from the record. When prejudice results from an order attributable to the Tribunal's mistake, error or omission, then it is the duty of the Tribunal to set it right. In that case, the Tribunal had not considered the material which was already on record while passing the judgment. The Apex Court took note of the fact that the Tribunal committed a mistake in not considering material which was already on record and the Tribunal acknowledged its mistake and accordingly, rectified its order.

The above decision of the Apex Court is an authority for the proposition that the Tribunal, in certain circumstances can recall its own order and section 254(2) does not totally prohibit so. In view of the law laid down by the Apex Court in that case, the decisions rendered by the High Courts in certain cases to the effect that the Tribunal under no circumstances can recall its order in entirety do not lay down the correct statement of law.

High Court's Decision: Applying the above-mentioned decision of the Apex Court to this case, the Delhi High Court observed that the Tribunal, while exercising the power of rectification under section 254(2), can recall its order in entirety if it is satisfied that prejudice has resulted to the party which is attributable to the Tribunal's mistake, error or omission and the error committed is apparent.

Note - In deciding whether the power under section 254(2) can be exercised to recall an order in entirety, it is necessary to understand the true principle laid down in the Apex Court decision. A decision should not be mechanically applied treating the same as a precedent without appreciating the underlying principle contained therein. In this case, the Apex Court decision was applied since prejudice had resulted to the party on account of the mistake of the Tribunal apparent from record.

5. Does the High Court have an inherent power under the Income-tax Act, 1961 to review an earlier order passed on merits?

CIT v. Meghalaya Steels Ltd. (2015) 377 ITR 112 (SC)

Facts of the case: In this case, the High Court had considered whether deduction is allowable under section 80-IB on transport subsidy and interest subsidy and on the central excise duty refund received by it. Finally, after stating that two substantial questions of law arose under section 260A, the High Court proceeded to answer the two questions. Against this judgement, the assessee filed a review petition whereupon the Division Bench of the High Court recalled its entire order for adjudication on the ground that it had not formulated the substantial questions of law before hearing of the appeal and had not invited the parties to have their say in the matter which amounted to denial of opportunity of effective hearing to the parties concerned, particularly, the review petitioners. Further, it had on an earlier occasion prior to passing the order, reserved the judgement on whether substantial questions of law in fact existed at all.

Revenue's contention vis-à-vis Assessee's contention: The Revenue contended that, by virtue of section 260A(7), only those provisions of the Civil Procedure Code could be looked into for the purposes of section 260A as were relevant to the disposal of appeals, and since the review provision contained in the Code of Civil Procedure is not so referred to, the High Court would have no jurisdiction under section 260A to review such judgment. The assessee-petitioner, however, contended that High Courts being courts of record under article 215 of the Constitution of India, the power of review would in fact inhere in them.

Supreme Court's Observations: The Supreme Court concurred with the assessee's submission that High Courts being courts of record under article 215 of the Constitution of India, the power of review would inhere in them. Further, it noted that in another case[1], in a slightly different context while dealing with power of review of writ petitions filed under article 226, the Supreme Court had observed that there is nothing in article 226 of the Constitution to preclude a High Court from exercising the power of review which inheres in every court of plenary jurisdiction to prevent miscarriage of justice or to correct grave and palpable errors committed by it. In that case, the High Court had entertained the second petition since the interested parties were not given an effective opportunity of being heard, before passing the judgement; therefore, keeping in mind the requirement of the principles of natural justice, the High Court had exercised its inherent power of review.

Supreme Court's Decision: The Supreme Court went ahead to further observe that it is clear on a cursory reading of section 260A(7), that it does not purport in any manner to curtail or restrict the application of the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. Section 260A(7) only states that all the provisions that would apply qua appeals in the Code of Civil Procedure would apply to appeals under section 260A. That does not in any manner suggest either that the other provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure are necessarily excluded or that the High Court's inherent jurisdiction is in any manner affected.

6. Whether delay in filing appeal under section 260A can be condoned where the stated reason for delay is the pursuance of an alternate remedy by way of filing an application before the ITAT under section 254(2) for rectification of mistake apparent on record?

Spinacom India (P.) Ltd. v. CIT [2018] 258 Taxman 128 (SC)

Facts of the Case: The appellants have approached the Supreme Court under a special leave petition. There has been a delay of 439 days in filing the appeal under section 260A for which reason the appellants requested for a condonation of delay under section 14 of Limitation Act, 1963. The appellants submitted that the delay was on account of pursuing an alternate remedy of filing a miscellaneous application before the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal (ITAT) under section 254(2).

Issue: The issue under consideration is whether delay in filing appeal under section 260A can be condoned where the stated reason for delay is the pursuance of an alternate remedy by way of filing an application before the ITAT under section 254(2) for rectification of mistake apparent on record.

Supreme Court's Observations: The Court rejected the question of invoking section 14 of the Limitation Act 1963 which allows condonation of delay on demonstration of sufficient cause. The Court refused to accept the submission that the application before the ITAT under section 254(2) was an alternate remedy to filing of the application under section 260A. The former is an application for rectifying a 'mistake apparent from the record' which is much narrower in scope than the latter. Under section 260A, an order of the ITAT can be challenged on substantial questions of law. The Court stated that the appellant had the option of filing an appeal under section 260A while also mentioning in the Memorandum of Appeal that its application under section 254(2) was pending before the ITAT. The time period for filing an appeal under section 260A does not get suspended on account of the pendency of an application before the ITAT under section 254(2) of the Act.

Supreme Court's Decision: Since no satisfactory reason has been provided by the Appellant for the extraordinary delay of 439 days in filing the appeal, the Supreme Court dismissed the application for condonation of delay.

7. Can High Court exercise its inherent power to recall its order by exercising jurisdiction under section 260A(7) read with the relevant Rule of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 even if that order is not an ex-parte order?

CIT v. Subrata Roy (2016) 385 ITR 570 (SC)

Facts of the case: In the present case, the High Court of Allahabad has recalled its final order dated August 27, 2013 by exercising jurisdiction under section 260A(7) read with the relevant rule of the Code of Civil Procedure,1908. The High Court, while recalling its order, took note that section 260A(7) inserted by the Finance Act, 1999 provides that the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 relating to appeals to the High Court shall apply in the case of appeal under section 260A of the Income-tax Act, 1961. The relevant rule of the Code of Civil Procedure,1908 provides that where an appeal is heard ex-parte and the judgment is pronounced against the respondent, he may apply to the court to re-hear the appeal. Also, where the notice is not served or the defendant was prevented by the sufficient cause from appearing, the court shall re-hear the appeal on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit to impose upon him.

The High Court contended that it is empowered to exercise this inherent power. Therefore, vide order dated 21.2.2014, the High Court had recalled its order dated August 27, 2013, on the ground that it had passed its order rejecting the request of the assessee for a day's adjournment since the senior advocate on behalf of the assessee, was to come from Mumbai next day and thus, the applicant could not advance any argument.

Supreme Court's Observations and Decision: The Apex Court noted that the assessee had participated in the hearing of the appeals before High Court which is apparent from the various parts of the order dated 27.08.2013.

The Apex Court held that the order passed by the High Court is not an ex-parte order for invoking the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, since the order of the High Court contains the submissions of the counsel of the assessee (though not that of the senior counsel for whose presence a short adjournment was prayed). Therefore, the High Court did not have the jurisdiction to recall the order passed by it previously. The inherent power under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 is hedged by certain pre-conditions and unless the pre-conditions are satisfied the power thereunder cannot be exercised. Accordingly, the Supreme Court set aside the order dated 21.2.2014 of the High Court.

8. Can revision under section 263 be made on the ground that the order is passed without making inquiries or verification which should have been made?

CIT v. Amitabh Bachchan (2016) 384 ITR 200 (SC)

Facts of the case: The assessee filed his return of income and subsequently, filed a revised return in which he claimed 30% of gross professional receipts amounting to ₹ 3.17 crore as expenditure towards his personal security. When the Assessing Officer asked for the details of expenditure, the assessee replied that the expenses were for security for the personal safety of the assessee and the payments were made out of cash balances. Thereafter, by way of a letter, the assessee informed the Assessing Officer that the claim was made on a belief that it was allowable but as it is not feasible to substantiate the claim, the revised return may be taken to be withdrawn. The Assessing Officer had proposed to treat the expenditure claim as unexplained expenditure under section 69C but after considering the assessee's reply, did not pursue the matter.

After the assessment was finalized, the Commissioner issued show cause notice under section 263 containing the grounds on which the assessment order was proposed to be revised. On getting the replies to the show cause notice, the Commissioner set aside the order of assessment and directed a fresh assessment on the principal ground that requisite and due enquiries were not made by the Assessing Officer prior to finalization of the assessment. On this basis, the Commissioner came to the conclusion that the assessment order in question was erroneous and prejudicial to the interests of the Revenue warranting exercise of power under section 263. In his order, the Commissioner of Income-tax did not record any finding on the several issues mentioned in the show cause notice whereas he recorded conclusions adverse to the assessee in respect of issues which were not specifically mentioned in the show cause notice. However, few of the issues, including the claim of additional expenses in the revised return were common to the show cause notice as well as the revisionary order.

Appellate Authorities' view: The Tribunal opined that in respect of the issues not mentioned in the show-cause notice, the findings as recorded in the revisional order under section 263 would be considered as breach of principles of natural justice, since the Commissioner of Income-tax cannot go beyond the issues mentioned in the show-cause notice. Accordingly, the Tribunal reversed the order of the suo motu revision of order under section 263.

The High Court also dismissed the appeal of the Revenue holding that as the Commissioner had gone beyond the scope of the show cause notice and had dealt with issues not covered or mentioned in the notice the revisional order which was in violation of the principles of natural justice. The Court also observed that the question whether the Assessing Officer had made sufficient enquiries about the assessee's claim made in the revised return was a pure question of fact and cannot be examined under section 260A.

Supreme Court's Observations: The Apex Court noted that to exercise jurisdiction under section 263 the requirement is that the order passed by the assessing authority is erroneous and prejudicial to the interests of the revenue. Section 263 does not require any specific show cause notice to be served on the assessee. What is required is granting of opportunity to the assessee of being heard before making the revision order. Failure to give such an opportunity would render the revisionary order legally fragile not on the ground of lack of jurisdiction but on the ground of violation of principles of natural justice.

The Supreme Court observed that the Tribunal had not recorded any finding that in course of the suo moto revisionary proceedings, the opportunity of hearing was not afforded to the assessee and that the assessee was denied an opportunity to contest the facts on the basis of which the Commissioner had come to the conclusions as recorded in the order under section 263.

In the course of revision, the documents and books of accounts overlooked in the assessment proceedings were considered and at every stage of revisionary proceeding, the authorized representative of the assessee had appeared and had full opportunity to contest the basis on which the revisionary authority was proceeding in the matter.

Where the Commissioner had come its conclusions on the basis of the record of the assessment proceedings which was open for scrutiny by the assessee and available to his authorized representative at all times, there is no breach of the requirement to give a reasonable opportunity of being heard as required under section 263.

Further, it also observed that when the Assessing Officer has dropped the investigation of the claim of expenses, it does not preclude the Commissioner of Income-tax from looking in to the same. Making a claim which would prima facie disclose that the expenses in respect of which deduction had been claimed had been incurred and thereafter, withdrawing the claim gave rise to the necessity of further enquiry in the interests of the Revenue. The notice issued under section 69C of the Act could not have been simply dropped on the ground that the claim had been withdrawn.

Supreme Court's Decision: The Apex Court, accordingly, held that the order of the Tribunal setting aside the revisional order on the ground that it went beyond the show cause notice was not sustainable. It further held that the High Court having failed to fully deal with the matter, its order was not tenable.

Note – As per Explanation 2 to section 263(1), inserted by the Finance Act, 2015, with effect from 01.06.2015, an order passed by the Assessing Officer shall be deemed to be erroneous in so far as it is prejudicial to the interest of the revenue, if in the opinion of the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, the order is passed without making inquiries or verification which should have been made. The rationale of the above court ruling is, thus, also in line with Explanation 2 to Section 263(1).

9. Can mere non-mention or non-discussion of enquiry made by the Assessing Officer in the assessment order justify invoking revisionary jurisdiction under section 263?

CIT v. Krishna Capbox (P) Ltd (2015) 372 ITR 310 (All)

Facts of the case: The assessee filed its return of income declaring total income of ₹ 8.15 lakhs. The return was processed under section 143(1) and later, the case was selected for scrutiny and statutory notice under section 143(2) was issued. During the course of scrutiny, the Assessing Officer raised certain queries which were answered by the assessee. The Assessing Officer, after being satisfied with the replies given, completed the assessment by accepting the declared income. Subsequently, the Commissioner invoked revisionary jurisdiction under section 263 by holding that the Assessing Officer had not made enquiry on certain aspects, such as -

(i) Non-verification of source of investment in respect of addition in fixed assets;

(ii) Non-confirmation of sundry creditors by the assessee;

(iii) Non-enquiry of unsecured loan by the Assessing Officer;

(iv) Not obtaining the copy of bank statements;

(v) Non-verification of genuineness of shareholders;

(vi) Deduction of freight paid without deduction of tax at source.

Assessee's contention vis-a-vis Revenue's Contention: The assessee contended that all the aspects contested by the Commissioner were enquired by the Assessing Officer. The Revenue took the defence that no enquiry was made by the Assessing Officer in respect of the issues set out in the notice issued under section 263 and hence, revisionary jurisdiction was correctly assumed.

Tribunal's view: The Tribunal noted that all necessary enquiries were made and all the requisite documents were placed in the paper book. Once enquiry was made, mere non-discussion or non-mention in the assessment order cannot lead to the assumption that the Assessing Officer did not apply his mind or that he had not made any enquiry on the subject for invoking section 263.

High Court's Observations: The High Court noted the Bombay's High Court's view in Cellular Ltd. v. DCIT (2008) 301 ITR 407 that if a query is raised during the assessment proceedings and responded to by the assessee, the mere fact that it is not dealt with in the assessment order would not lead to a conclusion that no mind had been applied to it.

High Court's Decision: The High Court concurred with the decision of the Tribunal and held that since the relevant enquiries and replies are available on 'record' (i.e., the paper book), the Commissioner cannot invoke revisionary jurisdiction merely because there was no mention of such enquiry and verification in the assessment order.

Note - The Finance Act, 2015 inserted Explanation 2 to section 263(1) to clarify, inter alia, that an order passed by the Assessing Officer shall be deemed to be erroneous in so far as it is prejudicial to the interests of the revenue, if in the opinion of the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, the order is passed without making inquiries or verification which should have been made.

The rationale of this ruling would hold good even after insertion of Explanation 2 to section 263(1), since in this case, the Tribunal has recorded a finding of fact that necessary enquiries have been made by the Assessing Officer even though the same was not specifically mentioned in the assessment order. Mere non-discussion or non-mention about the enquiry made by the Assessing Officer in the assessment order cannot be a ground for invoking revisionary jurisdiction under section 263.

10. Can the Commissioner invoke revisionary jurisdiction under section 263, when the subject matter of revision (i.e., whether the manner of allocation of revenue amongst the members of AOP would affect the allowability and/or quantum of deduction under section 80-IB) has been decided by the Commissioner (Appeals) and the same is pending before the Tribunal?

CIT v. Fortaleza Developers (2015) 374 ITR 510 (Bom)

Facts of the case: The assessee, an Association of Person (AOP) consisting of promoters and builders, was constituted by means of an agreement dated April 29, 2003 between M/s Raviraj Kothari and Co. (RRK) and M/s Sanand Properties Pvt. Ltd. (SPPL). The AOP filed its return of income for the assessment year 2007-08 declaring total income of ₹ 4.14 lakhs after claiming deduction under section 80-IB(10) of ₹ 1454.47 lakhs. The assessment was completed under section 143(3) disallowing fully the claim of deduction under section 80-IB(10). The assessee preferred an appeal before Commissioner (Appeals) who held that the assessee had fulfilled all the conditions laid down in section 80-IB(10) and hence, directed the Assessing Officer to allow the deduction.

The order of Commissioner (Appeals) was challenged before the Tribunal by the Revenue. During the pendency of the appeal before the Tribunal, the Commissioner issued a notice under section 263 asking the assessee to show cause as to why the assessment order should not be set aside. The notice under section 263 specified that the method of allocation of revenue gave the assessee undue benefit by way of a higher claim of deduction under section 80-IB(10) contrary to clause (7) of the AOP agreement.

Clause (7) of the agreement laid down that SPPL shall be entitled to 35% of the amount received from the purchasers of the housing units. Out of the balance 65% of the said receipts, all required and relevant expenditure for the purpose of the business of the AOP shall be met with and whatever net balance remains thereafter, shall be determined as the share of income of RRK.

On perusal of clause (7) of the agreement, the Commissioner contended that share of revenue pertaining to SPPL was not eligible for deduction under section 80-IB(10). Accordingly, the Commissioner set aside the assessment order of the assessee and directed to recompute the income on the basis of the clause (7) of the AOP agreement. The assessee challenged the revision order passed by the Commissioner under section 263 before the Tribunal.

Appellate Authorities' Views: The Tribunal observed that the quantum of deduction under section 80-IB(10) will depend upon the income earned from the project in question. The quantum of deduction will not depend on the mode of distribution of shares amongst members of the association of persons as income of association of persons is taxable at the maximum marginal rate. It is also observed by the Tribunal that the allowability or otherwise of deduction under section 80-IB(10) is not dependent upon the manner in which the profit has been distributed amongst the members of the AOP but is dependent upon the income earned from an eligible project and the fulfilment of the conditions laid down in the section. Also, the deduction is available to an undertaking and not to the individual constituent of an undertaking. The Tribunal further held that the Commissioner cannot exercise jurisdiction under section 263 in respect of deduction under section 80-IB, which was the subject matter of appeal.

High Court's Views: The High Court took note of all the facts and sequence of events with regard to the matter in appeal. The Court was of the view that the contract between the two parties was self-explanatory and the interpretation placed by the assessee on clause (7) and claiming deduction under section 80-IB(10) is in order.

High Court's Decision : When the order of the first appellate authority is complete and the appeal is pending before the Tribunal, the Commissioner is precluded from invoking section 263 for revision of the very same matter decided by the first appellate authority since clause (c) of the Explanation 1 to section 263 debars the same.

Accordingly, the High Court held that the order passed by the Assessing Officer got merged with the order of the first appellate authority. The very same issue cannot be revised by invoking revisionary jurisdiction under section 263.

11. Can an assessee, objecting to the reassessment notice issued under section 148, directly approach the High Court in the normal course contending that such reassessment proceedings are apparently unjustified and illegal?

Samsung India Electronics P. Ltd. v. DCIT (2014) 362 ITR 460 (Del.)

Facts of the case: In the present case, Samsung Electronics Co. Ltd., the Korean Company was subjected to regular assessment for the assessment year 2006-07. The assessment order was passed, pursuant to the directions under section 144C(5) made by the Disputes Resolution Panel. For the same assessment year, i.e., A.Y.2006-07, assessee was issued a reassessment notice dated March 30, 2013 under section 148. Against this reassessment notice, assessee filed a writ petition before the High Court.

High Court's Observations: The High Court observed the Apex court ruling in the case of GKN Driveshafts (India) Ltd. v. ITO [2003] 259 ITR 19 (SC), wherein, it was laid down that when a notice under section 148 is issued, the proper course of action for the noticee is to file a return and if he so desires, to seek reasons for issuing notices. The Assessing Officer is bound to furnish reasons within a reasonable time. On receipt of the reasons, the noticee is entitled to file objections to issuance of notice and the Assessing Officer is bound to dispose of the objections by passing a speaking order.

The High Court noted that the assessee has not filed objections before the Assessing Officer and has directly approached the court by way of the writ petition. On this issue, the assessee contended that they were justified in approaching the High Court directly as the reassessment proceedings ex facie were unjustified and illegal. The assessee relied upon the decision of the Delhi High Court in Techspan India P. Ltd. v. ITO [2006] 283 ITR 212 (Delhi) in which reference was made to the decision of the Gujarat High Court in Garden Finance Ltd. v. Asst. CIT [2004] 268 ITR 48 (Guj), wherein it was observed that the exercise of the powers under section 148 may be so arbitrary or mala fide that the court may entertain the petition without requiring the assessee to approach the Assessing Officer, but such a case was an exception and not a rule. In Techspan India P. Ltd.'s case, the High Court had given concurrent reasons and made observations when a writ court should interfere. However, there is no need to go into the said question and controversy in the present case, since it does not occasion or require a different treatment from the procedure followed in other cases in which re-assessment proceedings were/are initiated.

High Court's Decision: The High Court, thus, held that it will not be appropriate and proper in the facts of the present case to permit and allow the petitioner to bypass and forgo the procedure laid down by the Supreme Court in GKN Driveshafts (India) Ltd. (supra), since the said procedure has been almost universally followed and has helped cut down litigation and crystallise the issues, if and when the question comes up before the Court.

12. Should time limit under section 263 to be reckoned with reference to the date of assessment order or the date of reassessment order, where the revision is in relation to an item which was not the subject matter of reassessment?

I Bombay High Court ruling in CIT v. Lark Chemicals Ltd (2014) 368 ITR 655

Facts of the case: The assessee-company, for the assessment year 2002-03, filed its return of income declaring a total income of ₹ 30.98 lakhs. This was accepted and the return was processed under section 143(1). Subsequently, it was reopened by issue of notice under section 148 and the order of reassessment was passed in June, 2006. The Commissioner assumed jurisdiction for revision of order by invoking section 263 in March, 2009. The subject matter of revision, however, was not related to any of the issues dealt with in the reassessment.

Issue under consideration: The issue before the High Court was whether the revision under section 263 is barred by limitation in view of the fact that the issues dealt with therein were not the subject matter of reassessment.

Tribunal's view: The Tribunal opined that jurisdiction under section 263 cannot be exercised in respect of those issues which were not the subject matter of consideration while passing the order of reassessment but were a part of the original assessment, the time limit for which had since expired. It relied on the Apex Court decision in the case of CIT v. Alagendran Finance Ltd. (2007) 293 ITR 1, wherein it was held that in such cases, the doctrine of merger would not apply and the period of limitation would commence from the date of original assessment and not from the date of reassessment.

High Court's Opinion: The High Court observed that if the revision happened to be in relation to issues dealt with in the reassessment proceedings, then, it would not be barred by limitation as the time limit would expire only on 31st March, 2009 i.e., two years from the end of the financial year in which the order sought to be revised under section 263, was passed. However, in this case, the revision proposed under section 263 was in respect of issues, other than the issues dealt with in the order of reassessment. The issues on which the Commissioner sought to exercise jurisdiction under section 263 were concluded by virtue of intimation issued under section 143(1). The time period for revision under section 263 is two years from the end of the financial year in which order sought to be revised was passed [i.e., two years from the end of the financial year in which the intimation was issued under section 143(1)] and that time period has expired long ago.

High Court's Decision: The High Court, thus, held that the jurisdiction under section 263 could not be assumed on issues which were not the subject matter of issues dealt with in the order of reassessment but were part of the original assessment, for which the period of limitation expired long ago.

II Bombay High Court ruling in CIT v. ICICI Bank Ltd. (2012) 343 ITR 74

Facts of the case: In the present case, an order of assessment was passed under section 143(3) allowing the deduction under section 36(1)(vii), 36(1)(viia) and foreign exchange rate difference. Further, two notices of reassessment were issued under section 148 and an order of reassessment was passed under section 147 which did not deal with the above deductions.

Later, the Commissioner passed an order under section 263 for disallowing the deduction under section 36(1)(vii), 36(1)(viia) and in respect of foreign exchange rate difference which have not been taken up in the reassessment proceedings under section 147 but which was decided in the original order of assessment passed under section 143(3).

Assessee's contention vis-à-vis Revenue's contention: The assessee claimed that the order passed by the Commissioner under section 263 is barred by limitation since the period of 2 years from the end of the financial year in which the order sought to be revised was passed, had lapsed. However, the Revenue gave a plea that period of limitation shall be reckoned from the date of order under section 147 and not from the date of the original assessment order under section 143(3), applying the doctrine of merger.

The Revenue pointed out that as per the provisions of Explanation 3 to section 147, the Assessing Officer is entitled to assess or reassess the income in respect of any issue which has escaped assessment though the reasons in respect of such issue have not been included in the reasons recorded under section 148(2).

High Court's Decision: Considering the above mentioned facts, the Bombay High Court held that the order of assessment under section 143(3) allowed deduction under section 36(1)(vii), 36(1)(viia) and in respect of foreign exchange rate difference. The order of reassessment, however, had not dealt with these issues. Therefore, the doctrine of merger cannot be applied in this case. The order under section 143(3) cannot stand merged with the order of reassessment in respect of those issues which did not form the subject matter of the reassessment.

Therefore, the period of limitation in respect of the order of the Commissioner under section 263 with regard to a matter which does not form the subject matter of reassessment shall be reckoned from the date of the original order under section 143(3) and not from the date of the reassessment order under section 147.

13. Can the original assessment order under section 143(3), which was subsequently modified to give effect to the revision order under section 264, be later on subjected to revision under section 263?

CIT v. New Mangalore Port Trust (2016) 382 ITR 434 (Karn)

Facts of the case: The assessee-trust, a government undertaking carrying on commercial activities in one of the major ports was enjoying exemption under section 10(20) since its inception. On March 27, 2006, the assessee applied for registration under section 12A. However, the said application for registration was rejected by the Commissioner. On appeal before the Appellate Tribunal, the Commissioner was directed to grant registration under section 12AA to the assessee w.e.f. 1 April, 2003. To give effect to the order of the Tribunal, the Commissioner granted registration on July 27, 2009. Subsequent to the registration, an assessment order was passed by the Assessing Officer under section 143(3) on December 27, 2009. The assessee filed a revision petition under section 264 which was allowed and the matter was remanded to the Assessing Officer to compute the income of the assessee in terms of the order of revision under section 264. The Assessing Officer gave effect to the revision order vide order dated May 27, 2011. Thereafter, the original order passed under section 143(3), dated December 27, 2009 was revised by the Commissioner under section 263 on March 22, 2012.

The revision order under section 263 passed by Commissioner was challenged by the assessee before the Appellate Tribunal. The Tribunal set aside the revision order of the Commissioner passed under section 263.

Assessee's Contentions: The assessee contended before the High Court that the order passed by the Assessing Officer under section 143(3) on December 27, 2009 does not exist subsequent to the order of Commissioner passed under section 264, being given effect to by the Assessing Officer vide order dated May 27, 2011. The said order dated December 27, 2009 which no longer subsists, was revised by the Commissioner under section 263. In this case, invoking of suo motu revision powers by the Commissioner under section 263 is not justifiable.

High Court's Observations: The High Court took note of the sequence of events and undisputed facts that the assessment order dated 27 December 2009 passed by the Assessing Officer was no longer in existence. The High Court concluded that the Tribunal arrived at the conclusion only after considering the factual position that Commissioner had no jurisdiction to revise the order which was not in existence.

High Court's Decision: The High Court, accordingly, held that the order passed by the Commissioner under section 263, revising the non-existing order is void ab initio and is a nullity in the eyes of law

14. Can an assessee file a revision petition under section 264, if the revised return to correct an inadvertent error apparent from record in the original return, is filed after the time limit specified under section 139(5) on account of the error coming to the notice of the assessee after the specified time limit?

Sanchit Software and Solutions Pvt. Ltd. v. CIT (2012) 349 ITR 404 (Bom.)

Facts of the case: The assessee-company had electronically filed its return of income. It committed a mistake by including dividend income [exempt under section 10(34)] in its return of income, though the same was correctly disclosed in the Schedule containing details of exempt income. The return was processed under section 143(1) denying the exemption under section 10 and therefore, intimation under section 143(1) was served on the assessee raising a demand of tax. The assessee, on receiving the intimation, noticed the error committed and filed a revised return rectifying the error. However, the revised return was not sustainable as the same was filed beyond the period of limitation as provided under section 139(5). Later, the assessee filed an application for rectification under section 154 and also a revision petition under section 264.

Commissioner's contention: The Commissioner of income-tax, while considering the revision petition, contended that the intimation under section 143(1) was based on the return of the assessee, in which the claims under section 10(34) were not made by the assessee. Hence, it cannot be said that the intimation under section 143(1) was erroneous, since the same was squarely based on the return filed by the assessee. Secondly, the power of Commissioner under section 264 is only restricted to the record available before the Assessing Officer which can be examined by the Commissioner. In the circumstances, the other evidence sought to be brought on record to establish the mistake committed by the assessee cannot be considered by the Commissioner under section 264. The revision petition under section 264 was rejected by the Commissioner on the above grounds.

High Court's Observations: The High Court observed that the entire object of administration of tax is to secure the revenue for the development of the country and not to charge the assessee more tax than which is due and payable by the assessee. In this context, the High Court referred to the CBDT Circular issued as far back as 11th April, 1955 directing the Assessing Officer not to take advantage of the assessee's mistake. The High Court opined that the said Circular should always be borne in mind by the officers of the Revenue while administering the Act.

The High Court observed that, in this case, the Commissioner of income-tax had committed a fundamental error in proceeding on the basis that no deduction on account of dividend income and long-term capital gains under section 10 was claimed from the total income, without considering that the assessee had specifically sought to exclude the same as is evident from the entries in the relevant Schedule. Therefore, this was an error on the face of the order and hence, the same was not sustainable.

High Court's Decision: The High Court, accordingly, set aside the order of Commissioner and remanded the matter for fresh consideration.

The High Court further directed the Assessing Officer to consider the rectification application filed by the assessee under section 154 as a fresh application received on the date of service of this order and dispose of the rectification application on its own merits, without awaiting the result of the revision proceedings before the Commissioner of Income-tax on remand, at the earliest.

19.1 INTRODUCTION

The Wanchoo Committee felt that in the administration of fiscal laws, where the primary objective is to raise revenue, there has to be room for compromise and settlement. A rigid attitude would not only inhibit a one-time tax evader or an unintending defaulter from making a clean breast of his affairs but would also unnecessarily strain the investigational resources of the Department in cases of doubtful benefit to revenue, while needlessly proliferating litigation and holding up collections. Even in the United Kingdom, the 'confession' method has been in vogue since 1923. In the U.S. Law also, there is a provision for compromise with the tax payer as to his tax liabilities. A provision of this type facilitating settlement in individual cases will have this advantage over general disclosure schemes. Hence, the Committee recommended the setting up of a high level settlement machinery. Accordingly, Chapter XIX-A incorporating the recommendations of the Wanchoo Committee was enacted by Taxation Laws (Amendment) Act, 1975 with effect from April 1, 1976. The provisions relating to Settlement Commission are discussed below.

(1) The Central Government has constituted a Settlement Commission. It shall consist of a Chairman and as many Vice-Chairmen and other members as the Central Government thinks fit. Where a member of the Central Board of Direct Taxes is appointed as the chairman or a member of the commission, he ceases to be a member of the Board.

(2) The Chairman, Vice-Chairman and other members of the Settlement Commission are to be appointed by the Central Government from amongst persons of integrity and outstanding ability, having special knowledge of, and experience in, problems relating to direct taxes and business accounts.

(3) The Commission functions within the Department of Revenue and Banking of the Central Government.

19.2 DEFINITION OF 'CASE' [SECTION 245A(B)]

However, a return of income for such other assessment years should have been furnished under section 139 or in response to notice under section 142.

19.3 APPLICATION FOR SETTLEMENT OF CASES [SECTION 245C]

(1) Application by assessee [Section 245C(1)]: An assessee may, at any stage of a case relating to him, make an application in the prescribed form and manner, containing a full and true disclosure of his income which has not been disclosed before the Assessing Officer.

(2) Information to be disclosed [Section 245C(1)]: He should also disclose the following to the Settlement Commission for settlement of his case–

(i) the manner in which such income has been derived,

(ii) the additional amount of income-tax payable on such income and

(iii) other particulars as may be prescribed.

(3) Pre-conditions for filing of application: As per section 245C, an application can be filed before the Settlement Commission, only if the additional amount of income-tax payable on the income disclosed in the application exceeds the specified limit.

In cases where the settlement becomes void, the proceeding, in respect of which the settlement order was passed, must be deemed to have been revived from the stage at which the application was allowed to be proceeded with by the Settlement Commission and the Income-tax authority concerned may complete the proceedings for assessment or re-assessment of income or the levy of penalty, fine, etc., at any time before the completion of two years from the end of the financial year in which the settlement becomes void.

(9) Interest leviable if tax not paid within prescribed time [Section 245D(6A)]: Where the tax payable in pursuance of an order passed by the Settlement Commission is not paid by the assessee within 35 days of receipt of a copy of final order, the assessee shall be liable to pay simple interest @ 1¼% for every month or part of a month on the outstanding amount from the date of expiry of 35 days. The chairman for the disposal of a particular case, constitute a Special Bench consisting of more than three members.

(3) Benches to sit at notified places: The places at which the Principal Bench and the Additional Benches shall ordinarily sit shall be notified by the Central Government. (6) Exclusive Jurisdiction of Settlement Commission: The Settlement Commission has been vested with all the powers which are vested in an Income-tax authority under the Income-tax Act, 1961.

Accordingly, in cases where an application made by the assessee under section 245C has been allowed by the Settlement Commission to be proceeded with under section 245D, the Settlement Commission is empowered to exercise exclusively the jurisdiction and powers and perform the functions allotted to an Income-tax authority under the Income-tax Act until an order for settlement of the case is passed.

Such exclusive jurisdiction would begin with the date of filing of application with the Settlement Commission.

The exclusive jurisdiction of the Settlement Commission would end on –

(a) the date of passing an order under section 245D(4); or

(b) the date of passing the order rejecting the application under section 245D(1); or

(c) the date on which the application is not allowed to be proceeded with under section 245D(2A); or

(d) the date on which the application is declared invalid under section 245D(2C); or

(7) Certain provisions of Income-tax Act, 1961 to apply in the absence of contrary directions by the Settlement Commission: However, in the absence of any express direction to the contrary by the Settlement Commission, the operation of any other provision of the Income-tax Act, 1961 requiring the applicant to pay the tax on the basis of self-assessment shall continue to be applicable in relation to matters which are before the Settlement Commission for consideration. Further, in the absence of any express directions by the Settlement Commission to the contrary, the provisions of sections 245A to 245L would not affect the operation of any other provision of the Income-tax Act, 1961 insofar as those provisions relate to any matters other than those covered by the case before the Settlement Commission.

(8) Settlement Commission to regulate its own procedure: The Commission shall subject to the provisions of this Chapter have power to regulate its own procedure and the procedure of benches thereof in all matters arising out of the exercise of its powers or of the discharge of its functions including the places at which the Board shall hold their sittings.

(9) Inspection of reports: According to section 245G, no person is entitled to inspect or obtain copies of any reports made by any Income-tax authority to the Settlement Commission in relation to the case, but, the Settlement Commission may, in its discretion, furnish copies thereof to any person or receipt of an application made to it in this behalf and on payment of the prescribed fee. However, in order to enable any person whose case is under consideration to rebut any evidence which has been brought on record against him in any such report, the Settlement Commission shall, on receipt of an application in this behalf and on payment of the prescribed fee, furnish to the applicant, a certified copy of any such report or particular thereof which may be relevant for the purpose.

19.8 POWER TO GRANT IMMUNITY FROM PROSECUTION AND PENALTY [SECTION 245H]

(1) Recording of reasons in order granting immunity: The Settlement Commission may, if it is satisfied that any person who made the application for settlement under section 245C has co-operated with the Settlement Commission in the conduct of the proceedings before it and has made a true disclosure of his income, and the manner in which such income has been derived, grant to such person immunity from prosecution for any offence under the Income-tax Act, 1961 or under the Wealth-tax Act, 1957. However, the Settlement Commission, while granting immunity to any person from prosecution shall record the reasons in writing in the order passed by it.

Such an immunity may also be granted in the matter of imposition of any penalty under the Income-tax Act, 1961 in respect of the case which is covered by the settlement.

(2) Grant of partial immunity: The Commission can grant partial immunity from imposition of penalty to the applicant.

(3) Immunity to be subject to conditions: The power of the Settlement Commission to grant immunity from prosecution and the imposition is, however, subject to such conditions as the Commission may think fit to impose in the circumstances of the case.

(4) No immunity if prosecution proceedings have been initiated before receipt of application: No such immunity shall be granted by the Commission in cases where the proceedings for the prosecution for any such offence have been instituted before the date of receipt of the application for settlement.

(5) Restriction on power to grant immunity: Under section 245H, the Settlement Commission may grant immunity from prosecution for any offence under the Indian Penal Code, Income-tax Act, 1961 and any other Central Act. This power has now been restricted in respect of application made under section 245C on or after 1.6.2007. In respect of such cases, the Settlement Commission shall not grant immunity from prosecution for any offence under the Indian Penal Code or under any Central Act other than the Income-tax Act, 1961 and Wealth-tax Act, 1957. However, in respect of applications pending as on 1.6.2007, the Settlement Commission has the power to grant immunity from prosecution for any offence under the Indian Penal Code and other Central Acts also.

(6) Withdrawal of immunity:

(a) An immunity granted under this section shall stand withdrawn if such person fails to pay any sum specified in the order of settlement within the time specified in the order or within such further time as may be allowed by the Commission or fails to comply with any other condition subject to which the immunity was granted and thereupon the provisions of this Act shall apply as if such immunity had not been granted.

(b) An immunity granted by the Settlement Commission to any person may, at any time, be withdrawn by it in cases where it is satisfied that the person concerned had, in the course of the settlement proceedings concerned may be tried for the offence with respect to which the immunity was granted or for any other offence in respect of which he has been found guilty in connection with the settlement.

(c) After the withdrawal of the immunity from prosecution, the person concerned may also become liable to the imposition of the penalty under the Income-tax Act, 1961 to which he would otherwise have been liable in the absence of the immunity given to him under section 245H.

19.9 ABATEMENT OF PROCEEDING BEFORE THE SETTLEMENT COMMISSION [SECTIONS 245HA & 245HAA]

(1) Specified date of abatement in different cases: In the following cases, the proceedings before the Settlement Commission shall abate on the specified date as given below –

	Case	Specified date
(i)	where an application made to the Settlement Commission on or after 1.6.2007 has been rejected under section 245D(1).	The date on which the application was rejected.
(ii)	where an application has been declared invalid under section 245D(2C).	The last day of the month in which the application was declared invalid.
(iii)	Where an order under section 245D(4) has	The day on which the order under been passed not providing for the terms of settlement.	section 245D(4) was passed not providing for the terms of settlement.

(iv)	Where an order under section 245D(4) has not been passed within the time allowed under section 245D(4A).	The date on which the time or period specified in section 245D(4A) expires.

(2) Cases to revert to jurisdictional Assessing Officer: On abatement of proceedings, the case would revert back to the Assessing Officer having jurisdiction or any other income-tax authority before whom the proceedings were pending at the time of making the application. Such income-tax authority shall dispose of the case in accordance with the provisions of the Act.

(3) Assessing Officer entitled to use the material, information and results of enquiry: For completing the proceedings, the Assessing Officer or other Income-tax authority shall be entitled to use the material and information produced by the assessee before the Settlement Commission as if such material and information had been produced before the Assessing Officer or other income-tax authority. Similarly, the Assessing Officer or other Income-tax authority shall be entitled to use the results of the inquiry held or evidence recorded by the Settlement Commission in the course of the proceedings before it, as if such inquiry or evidence had been held or recorded by him in the course of the proceedings before him.

(4) Exclusion of time period: The period from the date on which the application was made before the Commission up to the date on which proceedings get abated shall be excluded from the time limit for completion of proceedings by the Assessing Officer and for payment of interest under section 243, 244 or 244A.

(5) Credit for tax and interest paid [Section 245HAA]: In case of abatement of settlement proceedings, the Assessing Officer is required to give credit for the tax and interest paid on or before the date of making the application or during the pendency of the case before the Settlement Commission.

19.10 ORDER OF SETTLEMENT COMMISSION TO BE CONCLUSIVE [SECTION 245-I]

Section 245-I provides that every order of the Settlement Commission passed under section 245D(4) shall be conclusive in respect of the matters contained therein. Consequently, no matter covered by the Settlement Order shall be liable to be reopened in any proceeding under the Income-tax Act or under any other law for the time being in force. The only exception is the reopening of the case by the Settlement Commission itself under section 245D(7) where the settlement becomes void.

However, the Supreme Court has held in CIT vs. B.N. Bhattacharjee (1979) 118 ITR 461 that Article 136 of the Constitution was wide enough to bring within the Supreme Court's jurisdiction orders passed by the Settlement Commission.

19.11 RECOVERY OF SETTLED AMOUNT [SECTION 245J]

According to section 245J, any amount specified in an order of settlement passed by the Settlement Commission under section 245D(4), may be recovered and any penalty for default in making the payment may be imposed and recovered from the person concerned in accordance with the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961. The power for making the recovery if any, as may be specified by the Settlement Commission in the order passed by it. The right of recovery may be exercised by the Assessing Officer having jurisdiction over the person who has made the application for settlement under section 245C.

19.12 BAR ON SUBSEQUENT APPLICATION FOR SETTLEMENT [SECTION 245K]

(1) In the event of occurrence of any of the following, the person concerned or any person related to such person shall not be entitled to apply for settlement in relation to any other matter –

(i) the order of settlement passed under section 245D(4) provides for imposition of penalty for concealment of income; or

(ii) after the passing of order under section 245D(4) in relation to a case, the person is convicted of an offence under Chapter XXII in relation to that case; or

(2) The case of such person was sent back to the Assessing Officer by the Settlement Commission on or before 1.6.2002.

(3) Further, with effect from 1.6.2007, the option of going to the Settlement Commission would be available only once in the lifetime of a person. Therefore, where an application for settlement is made on or after 1.6.2007 and such application has been allowed to be proceeded with, then such person will not be subsequently entitled to make any application under section 245C.

Note – Any person related to the person who has already approached the Settlement Commission once, also cannot approach the Settlement Commission subsequently. The related person with respect to a person means -

Person	Related person
Individual	• any company in which such person holds more than 50% of the shares or voting rights at any time; or • any firm or AOP or BOI in which such person is entitled to more than 50% of the profits at any time; or • any HUF in which such person is a karta

Company	• any individual who held more than 50% of the shares or voting rights in such company at any time before the date of application before the Settlement Commission by such person
Firm or AOP or BOI	• any individual who was entitled to more than 50% of the profits in such firm, AOP or BOI, at any time before the date of application before the Settlement Commission by such person
HUF	• The karta of that HUF

The restriction of not approaching the Settlement Commission again was so far applicable only to the concerned person. Therefore, an individual who has approached the Settlement Commission once can subsequently approach again through an entity controlled by him. This defeats the purpose of restricting the opportunity of approaching the Settlement Commission only once for any person. Therefore, section 245K has been amended with effect from 1st June, 2015 to apply the restriction to the related persons as well.

19.13 PROCEEDINGS TO BE JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS [SECTION 245L]

All the proceedings under the Income-tax Act, 1961 before the Settlement Commission shall be deemed to be judicial proceedings within the meaning of sections 193, 196 and 228 of the Indian Penal Code.

EXERCISE

Question 1

X & Co Ltd. had made an application to the Settlement Commission. The issue in the said application related to cash credits in the books of account. The Commission passed an order making addition to the income on the basis of difference in gross profit rate adopted, which was neither an issue in the application nor in the report of the Commissioner of Income-tax. Discuss the validity of the order of the Settlement Commission.

Answer

The issue under consideration is whether the Settlement Commission can pass an order making addition to the income on the basis of difference in gross profit rate adopted, which was neither an issue in the application nor in the report of the Commissioner of Income-tax.

Section 245D(4) provides that the Settlement Commission, after examination of records and the report of the Commissioner and after examining such further evidence as may be placed before it or obtained by it, may, in accordance with the provisions of the Act, pass such order as it thinks fit.

Further, section 245D(5) provides that the materials brought on record before the Settlement Commission shall be considered by the Members of the concerned Bench before passing any order under section 245D(4).

"Consideration" means independent examination of the evidence and material brought on record before the Settlement Commission by the members and application of mind thereto with a view to independently assess the materials and evidence, whether adduced by the applicant or by the Commissioner, and come to a conclusion by themselves.

This view has been upheld in case of Supreme Agro Foods P Ltd. v. Income-tax Settlement Commission (2013) 353 ITR 385 (P&H)

The Settlement Commission, therefore, has to consider the material brought on record before it and "consideration" means independent examination of the evidence and material on record.

In this case, since the material was available before the Settlement Commission and such material has been taken into consideration for returning a finding which is relevant for determining the undisclosed income of the applicant, the addition made on the basis of difference in gross profit rate adopted is justified.

Therefore, the order of the Settlement Commission is valid.

Question 2

On an application made by Mr. Pandey, an order was passed by the Settlement Commission on 03-01-2020 under Section 245D(6B). The said order had a mistake apparent on record. The Settlement Commission suo moto passed an amended order dated 30-07-2020 which resulted in modifying the liability of Mr. Pandey.

Mr. Pandey is of the view that order of the Settlement Commission is final and conclusive and it has no power to rectify the said mistake.

You are required to examine the following:

(i) Correctness of claim made by Mr. Pandey

(ii) Validity of the order amended by the Settlement Commission

Answer

(i) Under section 245F(1), the Settlement Commission has been conferred all the powers which are vested in an income-tax authority under the Act. Under section 154, an income-tax authority has the power to amend any order passed by it in order to rectify any mistake apparent from the record. Therefore, the Settlement Commission's power to amend an order to rectify any mistake apparent from the record is embedded in section 245F(1).

Further, in order to reflect the correct intention of the legislature, section 245D(6B) specifically provides that the Settlement Commission may, at any time within a period of six months from the end of the month in which the order was passed, amend any order passed by it under section 245D(4) to rectify any mistake apparent from the record. In this case, the rectification order was passed by the Settlement Commission within six months from the end of the month in which the order was passed (i.e. by 31.7.2020)

Therefore, Mr. Pandey's view is not correct.

(ii) In this case, the rectification has the effect of modifying the liability of Mr. Pandey. Therefore, as per the second proviso to section 245D(6B), the Settlement Commission, before passing the amended order, should have –

(1) given a notice to the applicant and the Principal Commissioner/Commissioner of its intention to make such an amendment; and

(2) allowed the applicant and the Principal Commissioner/Commissioner an opportunity of being heard.

If these conditions are fulfilled, the order amended by the Settlement Commission would be a valid order, since the amended order is passed by the Settlement Commission within the permitted time limit i.e., within six months from the end of the month in which the original order was passed.

However, if the Settlement Commission has not given notice of its intention to make such an amendment or has not allowed the applicant and the Principal Commissioner/ Commissioner an opportunity of being heard, then, the amended order passed by it will not be valid.

Question 3

Seizures were made from Mr. Sunder pursuant to a search conducted in his premises. He filed an application for settlement by claiming to have received the amount by way of loans from several persons. The Settlement Commission accepted his statement and made an order. The CBI, however, conducted enquiry at the instance of the Revenue regarding the claimed amount of loans and opined that the alleged lenders had no means or financial capacity to advance such huge loans to Mr. Sunder and were mere name lenders only. The Commissioner filed an application under section 245D(6) praying for the order to be declared void and for withdrawal of benefit granted. Mr. Sunder, however, contended that the order of the Settlement Commission was final and any fresh analysis would amount to sitting in judgement over an earlier decision, for which the Settlement Commission was not empowered. Discuss the correctness of Mr. Sunder's contention.

Answer

The Apex Court, in CIT vs. Om Prakash Mittal (2005) 273 ITR 326, observed that a plain reading of section 245D(6) shows that every order passed under sub-section (4) has to provide for:-

(i) the terms of settlement; and

(ii) that the settlement would become void, if it is subsequently found by the Settlement Commission that it has been obtained by fraud or misrepresentation of facts.

The decision that the order has been obtained by fraud or misrepresentation is that of the Settlement Commission. However, there is no requirement that the action be initiated by the Settlement Commission, suo moto. The Revenue can move the Settlement Commission for decision on an issue if it has material to show that the order was obtained by fraud or misrepresentation of facts.

The Supreme Court observed that the foundation for settlement is an application which an assessee can file at any stage of a case relating to him in such form and manner as may be prescribed. The fundamental requirement of the application under section 245C is that there must be full and true disclosure of the income along with the manner in which it has been derived. If an order is obtained by fraud or misrepresentation of facts, it cannot be said that there is a full and true disclosure and therefore, the Legislature has prescribed the condition relating to declaration of the order void when it is obtained by fraud or misrepresentation of facts.

The Supreme Court held that merely because section 245-I provides that the order of settlement is conclusive, it does not take away the power of the Settlement Commission to decide whether the settlement order has been obtained by fraud or misrepresentation of facts. If the Commissioner is able to establish that the earlier decision was void because of misrepresentation of facts, then it is open for the Settlement Commission to decide the issue. It cannot be called by any stretch of imagination to be a review of the earlier judgment or the subsequent Bench sitting in appeal over the earlier Bench's decision.

Mr. Sunder's contention is, therefore, not correct.

Question 4

Does the Settlement Commission have the power to reduce or waive interest levied under sections 234A, 234B and 234C of the Income-tax Act? Discuss.

Answer

The matter concerning the power of the Settlement Commission to reduce or waive interest chargeable under section 234A, 234B or 234C has been settled by the Supreme Court in CIT v. Anjum M.H.Ghaswala (2001) 252 ITR 1.

According to the judgment, the provisions of section 245D(6) are only procedural in nature providing for fixing the term by which the amounts settled under sub-section (4) will have to be paid. It does not empower the Commission either to reduce or waive the interest. Any settlement made by the Commission must be in accordance with the provisions of the Act.

The Settlement Commission does not have the power to reduce or waive the interest levied under sections 234A, 234B and 234C. It does not authorize the waiver or deduction of tax. The levy of interest under sections 234A, 234B or 234C is mandatory in nature and therefore any settlement made must include the interest under these sections. However, as per provisions of section 245F, the Settlement Commission shall have all the powers which are vested in an income-tax authority. Therefore, Settlement Commission can grant relief from the aforesaid interest to the extent of the powers given vide the circulars issued by CBDT under section 119.

Question 5

(a) Does the Settlement Commission have jurisdiction to entertain an application made under section 245C(1) in respect of a case covered by Chapter XIV-B (Search and seizure case).

(b) Discuss the power of the Settlement commission to grant immunity from prosecution and penalty.

Answer

(a) Section 245A(b) defines the term `case' to mean any proceeding for assessment under the Act of any person in respect of any assessment year or years which is pending before the Assessing Officer on the date on which an application is made to the Settlement Commission.

Search cases are eligible for settlement through the Settlement Commission. Explanation to section 245A(b), provides that in case of a person referred to in section 153A or section 153C, a proceeding for assessment or reassessment shall be deemed to have been commenced on the date of issue of notice initiating such proceeding for assessment under section 153A or section 153C and concluded on the date on which the assessment is made. During this period, application for settlement of the case could be filed by the assessees.

Further, section 245C provides that an application before the settlement commission in cases falling under section 153A and 153C can be made, where the additional amount of income-tax payable on income disclosed in the application exceeds ₹ 50 lakh, in respect of the tax payer who is the subject matter of search and ₹ 10 lakh, in respect of entities related to such a tax payer, who are also the subject matter of search.

Moreover, such tax and interest thereon, which would have been payable had such income been disclosed in the return of income before the Assessing Officer on the date of application, should be paid on or before the date of making the application. Further, proof of such payment should be attached with the application.

(b) The power of Settlement Commission to grant immunity from prosecution and penalty is provided for in section 245H.

In respect of an application made on or after 1st June, 2007, the Settlement Commission's power to grant immunity from prosecution is restricted to offences under the Income-tax Act, 1961. The Settlement Commission can also grant immunity from penalty imposed under the Income-tax Act, 1961. Such immunity from prosecution and penalty may be granted subject to conditions as it may think fit to impose.

However, the Settlement Commission may grant immunity only if the person who has made the application has co-operated with the Settlement Commission and made a full and true disclosure of his income and the manner in which it was derived. Further, the Settlement Commission while granting immunity to any person from prosecution shall record the reasons in writing in the order passed by it.

Also, the Settlement Commission cannot grant immunity if the prosecution proceeding for any such offence has been instituted before the date of receipt of application for settlement under section 245C.

Question 6

The business premises of Mr. Amit was subjected to a survey under section 133A of the Act. There were some incriminating materials found at the time of survey. The assessee apprehends reopening of assessments of the earlier years. He wants to know whether he can approach the Settlement Commission.

Explain briefly the basic conditions to be satisfied and the benefits that may accrue to Mr. Amit by approaching the Settlement Commission.

Answer

An assessee may, at any stage of a case relating to him, make an application in the prescribed form and manner to the Settlement Commission under section 245C. "Case" means any proceeding for assessment which may be pending before an Assessing Officer on the date on which such application is made. Thus, the basic condition for making an application before the Settlement Commission under section 245C is that there must be a proceeding for assessment pending before an Assessing Officer on the date on which the application is made.

A proceeding for assessment or reassessment or recomputation under section 147 shall be deemed to have commenced from the date on which a notice under section 148 is issued.

In this case, Mr. Amit cannot approach the Settlement Commission merely due to his apprehension that assessment of earlier years may be reopened, since there is no case pending before an Assessing Officer.

Therefore, he has to wait for the Assessing Officer to issue notice under section 148. Thereafter, he can make an application to the Settlement Commission under section 245C, since there would be a "case pending" before the Assessing Officer on that date.

Another basic condition to be satisfied for making an application is that the additional amount of income-tax payable on the income disclosed in the application should exceed ₹ 10 lakh, and such tax and interest thereon which would have been paid had the income disclosed in the application been declared in the return of income should be paid on or before the date of making the application and proof of such payment should be attached with the application.

If the Settlement Commission is satisfied that Mr. Amit has co-operated in the proceedings and made true and full disclosure of his income and the manner in which it has been derived, it may, subject to such conditions as it may think fit to impose, grant to Mr. Amit -

(i) immunity from prosecution for any offence under the Income-tax Act, 1961, where the proceedings for such prosecution have been instituted on or after the date of receipt of application under section 245C; and

(ii) immunity from imposition of penalty under the Income-tax Act, 1961, either wholly or in part, with respect to the case covered by the settlement.

This is the benefit that may accrue to Mr. Amit, if he approaches the Settlement Commission.

Note: Where a notice under section 148 is issued for any assessment year, a proceeding under section 147 shall be deemed to have commenced on the date of issue of such notice and the assessee can approach the Settlement Commission for other assessment years as well, even if notice under section 148 for such other assessment years has not been issued but could have been issued on date. However, a return of income for such other assessment years should have been furnished under section 139 or the response to notice under section 142.

Question 7

Explain the powers of Settlement Commission to amend its order.

Answer

As per the section 245D(6B), the Settlement Commission may amend any order passed by it under section 245D(4) to rectify a mistake apparent from the record, within six months from the end of the month in which order was passed.

In case where an application for rectification is made by the Principal Commissioner or the Commissioner or the applicant within 6 months from the end of the month in which order under section 245D(4) was passed, the Settlement Commission may amend the order within six months from the end of the month in which an application for rectification has been made by the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner or the applicant.

However, an amendment which has the effect of modifying the liability of the applicant shall not be made unless the Settlement Commission –

(1) has given notice to the applicant and the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of its intention to do so; and

(2) has allowed the applicant and the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner an opportunity of being heard.

Question 8

M/s. A Ltd. has received a notice under section 148 for the Assessment Year 2017-18 on 02-02-2019. They also anticipate similar notices for the Assessment Years 2015-16 and 2016-17 for which they have already furnished return of income. On examination of the books of account produced, you have noticed huge amounts of concealed income. As a consultant, what is your advice to A Ltd.?

Answer

As per section 245C, an assessee may, at any stage of a case relating to him, make an application in the prescribed form and manner to the Settlement Commission.

"Case" means any proceeding for assessment which may be pending before an Assessing Officer on the date on which such application is made.

A proceeding for assessment or reassessment or recomputation under section 147 is deemed to have commenced from the date of issue of notice under section 148. Where a notice under section 148 is issued for any assessment year, a proceeding under section 147 shall be deemed to have commenced on the date of issue of such notice and the assessee can approach the Settlement Commission for other assessment years as well, even if notice under section 148 for such other assessment years have not been issued but could have been issued on that date. However, a return of income for such other assessment years should have been furnished under section 139 or in response to notice under section 142.

In the case on hand, M/s A Ltd. has received a notice under section 148 for the A.Y.2017-18 and also anticipates similar notices for the A.Y.2015-16 and A.Y.2016-17, for which return of income has been furnished. Thus, a proceeding for assessment is pending before an Assessing Officer i.e., the basic condition for approaching Settlement Commission is satisfied.

Moreover, since after examination of the books of account, huge amount of concealed income is also noticed, it is presumed that the second condition that the additional amount of income-tax payable on the income disclosed in the application should exceed ₹ 10 lakhs has also been satisfied.

Based on these facts, assuming that the necessary conditions are fulfilled, our advice as consultant to M/s A Ltd. would be to approach the Settlement Commission to have his case settled and apply for grant of immunity from penalty and prosecution.

SIGNIFICANT SELECT CASES

Is an assessee receiving refund consequent to waiver of interest under sections 234A to 234C of the Income-tax Act, 1961 by the Settlement Commission, also entitled to interest on such refund under section 244A?

K. Lakshmansa and Co. v. Commissioner of Income-tax and Anr [2017] 399 ITR 657(SC)

Facts of the case: The assessee had approached the Settlement Commission for waiver of interest under sections 234A to 234C of the Income-tax Act, 1961. The Settlement Commission partially waived the interest but refused to grant interest on refund on the grounds that section 244A does not provide for payment of interest in such cases. Further, the Settlement Commission's power to waive interest does not enable the Commission to provide for payment of interest under section 244A.

The High Court held that since waiver of interest was at the discretion of the Settlement Commission, no right flowed to the assessee to claim refund as a matter of right under law.

Issue: When refund is awarded by the Settlement Commission at its discretion under section 244A, is there a right to receive interest on the same?

Supreme Court's observations: The Supreme Court observed that the right to claim refund is automatic once the statutory provisions have been complied with. The statutory obligation to refund, being non-discretionary, carries with it the right to interest. Section 244A is clear and plain – it grants a substantive right of interest and is not procedural.

Under section 244A, it is enough if the refund becomes due under the Income-tax Act, 1961 in which case the assessee shall, subject to the provisions of that section, be entitled to receive simple interest. The expression "due" only means that a refund becomes due pursuant to an order under the Act which either reduces or waives tax or interest. It does not matter that the interest being waived is discretionary in nature; the moment that discretion is exercised and refund becomes due consequently, a concomitant right to claim interest springs into being in favour of the assessee.

The Supreme Court, thus, did not agree with the High Court opinion that when discretionary power has been exercised, no concomitant right to claim interest on refund arises in favour of the assessee.

Supreme Court's Decision: Overruling the High Court Decision, the Supreme Court held that the assessee has a right to interest on refund under section 244A.

20.1 INTRODUCTION

The Income-tax Act, 1961 provides for the imposition of a penalty on an assessee who commits any offence under the provisions of the Act. Penalty is levied over and above the amount of any tax or interest payable by the assessee and thus, penalty is distinct and different from the tax payable. Penalty proceedings, however, are a part of the assessment proceedings. The authority concerned is entitled to levy penalty only if he is satisfied in the course of any proceedings under the Act that a person has been found guilty of any default in complying with the provisions of the Act. If the order of the penalty is set aside in appeal on the ground the assessee was not given a reasonable opportunity of being heard, the Assessing Officer would be entitled to levy a penalty again after rectifying the mistakes in proceedings. The penalty to be levied on an assessee is to be based upon the law as it stood at the time the default was committed and not the law as it stands in the financial year for which the assessment is made.

20.2 PENALTIES

Mr. Ram, a resident individual of the age of 55 years, has not furnished his return of income for A.Y.2020-21. However, the total income assessed in respect of such year under section 144 is ₹ 12 lakh. Is penalty u/s 270A attracted in this case, and if so, what is the quantum of penalty leviable?

SOLUTION

Mr. Ram is deemed to have under-reported his income since he has not filed his return of income and his assessed income exceeds the basic exemption limit of ₹ 2,50,000. Hence, penalty under section 270A is leviable in his case.

Therefore, penalty is leviable under section 270A for under-reporting of income.

An assessee may make an application to the Assessing Officer for grant of immunity from imposition of penalty under section 270A and initiation of proceedings under section 276C or section 276CC, if he -

(ii) does not prefer an appeal against such assessment/ reassessment order.

(2) Time limit for making application [Section 270AA(2)]

The assessee can make such application in the prescribed form and verified in the prescribed manner within one month from the end of the month in which the order of assessment or reassessment is received

(3) Circumstances in which the Assessing Officer cannot grant immunity from penalty and prosecution [Section 270AA(3)]

The Assessing Officer shall grant immunity from initiation of penalty under section 270A and prosecution under section 276C or section 276CC, on fulfilment of the conditions specified in (1) above, and after the expiry of period of filing appeal as specified in section 249(2)(b).

However, immunity shall be granted by the Assessing Officer only if the penalty proceedings under section 270A have not been initiated on account of the following, namely:—

(a) misrepresentation or suppression of facts;

(b) failure to record investments in the books of account;

(c) claim of expenditure not substantiated by any evidence;

(d) recording of any false entry in the books of account;

(e) failure to record any receipt in books of account having a bearing on total income; or

(f) failure to report any international transaction or any transaction deemed to be an international transaction or any specified domestic transaction to which the provisions of Chapter X apply.

(4) Time limit for passing order accepting or rejecting application for immunity from penalty and prosecution [Section 270AA(4)]

The Assessing Officer shall pass an order accepting or rejecting the application for immunity from penalty under section 270A or prosecution under section 276C or section 276CC within a period of one month from the end of the month in which such application is received. However, in the interest of natural justice, no order rejecting the application shall be passed by the Assessing Officer unless the assessee has been given an opportunity of being heard.

(5) Finality of order passed by the Assessing Officer under section 270AA(4) [Section 270AA(5)]

As per section 249(2)(b), an appeal before the Commissioner (Appeals) is to be made within 30 days of the receipt of the notice of demand relating to an assessment or penalty, where the appeal relates to such assessment or penalty.

In a case where the assessee makes an application under section 270AA seeking immunity from penalty, then, the following period has to be excluded for calculation of the aforesaid thirty day period –

Exclusion of period
beginning from	ending with
the date on which application under section 270AA for immunity from penalty under section 270A is made	the date on which the order rejecting the application is served on the assessee.

20.5 PENAL PROVISIONS ON UNDISCLOSED INCOME FOUND DURING THE COURSE OF SEARCH [SECTION 271AAB]

(1) Penalty where search is initiated on or after 15.12.2016: Section 271AAB(1A) provides for penalty in cases where search has been initiated on or after 15th December, 2016, being the date on which the Taxation Laws (Second Amendment) Act, 2016 received the assent of the President.

Accordingly, under section 271AAB, the following would be the rate of penalty on undisclosed income in each of the following circumstances:

	Circumstance	Rate of penalty
(1)	(2)	(3)
(1)	If undisclosed income is admitted during the course of search in the statement furnished under section 132(4), and the assessee explains the manner in which such income was derived, pays the tax, together with interest if any, in respect of the undisclosed income, and furnishes the return of income for the specified previous year declaring such undisclosed income on or before the specified date (i.e., the due date of filing return of income or the date on which the period specified in the notice issued under section 153A expires, as the case may be).	30%
(2)	In all other cases	60%

(2) Meaning of Undisclosed income: Undisclosed income, for the purpose of this section, means:

(i) any income of the specified previous year represented, either wholly or partly, by any money, bullion, jewellery or other valuable article or thing or any entry in the books of account or other documents or transactions found in the course of a search under section 132, which has-

(a) not been recorded on or before the date of search in the books of account or other documents maintained in the normal course relating to such previous year; or

(b) otherwise not been disclosed to the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Principal Commissioner or Commissioner before the date of search; or

(ii) any income of the specified previous year represented, either wholly or partly, by any entry in respect of an expense recorded in the books of account or other documents maintained in the normal course relating to the specified previous year which is found to be false and would not have been found to be so had the search not been conducted.

(3) Other points:

(a) No penalty under section 270A is leviable in respect of such undisclosed income.

(b) An order imposing penalty under section 271AAB would be appealable under section 246A before the Commissioner (Appeals).

(c) Section 274 providing for the procedure for imposing penalties and section 275 providing for a bar of limitation for imposing penalties, shall, to the extent relevant apply to penalty under section 271AAB.

20.6 COMMENCEMENT OF LIMITATION FOR PENALTY PROCEEDINGS UNDER SECTIONS 271D AND 271E [CIRCULAR NO.9/2016 DATED 26.4.2016]

There are conflicting interpretations of various High Courts on the issue whether the limitation for imposition of penalty under sections 271D and 271E commences at the level of the Assessing Officer (below the rank of Joint Commissioner of Income-tax) or at level of the Range authority i.e., the Joint Commissioner of Income-tax/Additional Commissioner of Income-tax.

The Kerala High Court, in Grihalaxmi Vision v. Addl. CIT, observed that the question to be considered is whether proceedings for levy of penalty are initiated with the passing of the order of assessment by the Assessing Officer or whether such proceedings have commenced with the issuance of the notice by the Joint Commissioner. From the statutory provisions, it is clear that the competent authority to levy penalty is the Joint Commissioner. Therefore, only the Joint Commissioner can initiate proceedings for levy of penalty. Such initiation of proceedings could not have been done by the Assessing Officer. The statement in the assessment order that the proceedings under section 271D and 271E are initiated is inconsequential. On the other hand, if the assessment order is taken as the initiation of penalty proceedings, such initiation is by an authority who is incompetent and the proceedings thereafter would be proceedings without jurisdiction. If that be so, the initiation of the penalty proceedings is only with the issuance of the notice by the Joint Commissioner to the assessee to which he has filed his reply.

The CBDT Circular clarifies that the above judgement reflects the "Departmental View". Accordingly, the Assessing Officers (below the rank of Joint Commissioner of income-tax) have to make a reference to the Range Head, regarding any violation of the provisions of section 269SS and section 269T, as the case may be, in the course of the assessment proceedings (or any other proceedings under the Act). The Assessing Officer (below the rank of Joint Commissioner of Income-tax) shall not issue the notice in this regard. The Range Head will issue the penalty notice and shall dispose/complete the proceedings within the limitation prescribed under section 275(1)(c).

The Circular further clarifies that where any High Court decides this issue contrary to the "Departmental View", the "Departmental View" thereon shall not be operative in the area falling in the jurisdiction of the relevant High Court. However, the CCIT concerned should immediately bring the judgment to the notice of the Central Technical Committee (CTC). The CTC shall examine the said judgment on priority to decide as to whether filing of SLP to the Supreme Court will be adequate response for the time being or some legislative amendment is called for.

20.7 LIMITATION FOR PENALTY PROCEEDINGS UNDER SECTION 271D AND 271E – WHETHER TO BE DETERMINED U/S 275(1)(A) OR U/S 275(1)(C) [CIRCULAR NO.10/2016 DATED 26.4.2016]

The issue whether the limitation for imposition of penalty under sections 271D and 271E, is determined under section 275(1)(a) or section 275(1)(c), has given rise to considerable litigation.

The Delhi High Court, in CIT v. Worldwide Township Projects Ltd., has considered this issue and observed that is well settled that a penalty under this provision is independent of the assessment. The action inviting imposition of penalty is granting of loans above the prescribed limit otherwise than through banking channels and as such infringement of section 269SS is not related to the income that may be assessed or finally adjudicated. In this view, section 275(1)(a) would not be applicable and the provisions of section 275(1)(c) would be attracted. The judgment has been accepted by the CBDT.

In view of the above, it is a settled position that the period of limitation of penalty proceedings under section 271D and section 271E is governed by the provisions of section 275(1)(c). Therefore, the limitation period for the imposition of penalty under these provisions would be the expiry of the financial year in which the proceedings, in the course of which action for the imposition of penalty has been initiated, are completed, or six months from the end of the month in which action for imposition of penalty is initiated, whichever period expires later. The limitation period is not dependent on the pendency of appeal against the assessment or other order referred to in section 275(1)(a).

20.8 PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO FURNISH STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL TRANSACTION OR REPORTABLE ACCOUNT [SECTION 271FA]

Section 271FA provides that if a person who is required to furnish a statement of financial transaction or reportable account, as required under section 285BA(1), fails to furnish such statement within the time prescribed under section 285BA(2), the prescribed income-tax authority [i.e., Director of Income-tax (Central Information Branch)] may direct that such person shall pay, by way of penalty, a sum of ₹ 500 for every day during which the failure continues.

Further, where such person fails to furnish the statement of financial transaction or reportable account within the period specified in the notice under section 285BA(5), he shall pay, by way of penalty, a sum of ₹ 1,000 for every day during which the failure continues, beginning from the day immediately following the day on which the time specified in such notice for furnishing the statement expires.

The penal provisions under section 271FA are summarized below -

285BA(5)	₹ 1,000 per day of continuing default	The day immediately following the day on which the time specified in notice under section 285BA(5) for furnishing the statement expires till the date of furnishing of statement.

The bank, however, furnished the statement only on 15th November, 2020. What would be the penalty leviable under section 271FA?

20.9 PENALTY FOR FURNISHING INACCURATE STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL TRANSACTION OR REPORTABLE ACCOUNT [SECTION 271FAA]

Section 271FAA provides for levy of penalty in case of a person referred to in section 285BA(1)[2] who is required to furnish a statement of financial transaction or reportable account, where such person provides inaccurate information in the statement.

In such a case, the prescribed income-tax authority may direct levy of penalty of ₹ 50,000, subject to further satisfaction of any one of the following conditions –

(1) The inaccuracy is due to a failure to comply with the due diligence requirement prescribed under section 285BA(7) or is deliberate on the part of that person; or

(2) The person is aware of the inaccuracy at the time of furnishing the statement of financial transaction or reportable account, but does not inform the prescribed income-tax authority or such other authority or agency; or

(3) The person discovers the inaccuracy after furnishing the statement of financial transaction or reportable account but fails to inform and furnish correct information within ten days, being the time specified under section 285BA(6).

20.10 PENALTY NOT LEVIABLE IN CERTAIN CASES [SECTION 273B]

No penalty is leviable under sections 271A, 271AA, 271B, 271BA, 271C, 271CA, 271D, 271E, 271FA, 271FAB, 271G, 271GA, 271GB, 271H, 271-I, 271J, 272A(1)(c) or 272(A)(1)(d), 272A(2), 272AA(1), 272B, 272BB(1)/(1A), if the assessee proves that there was reasonable cause for the said failure.

20.11 PROCEDURE FOR ASSESSMENT OF PENALTIES [SECTION 274]

Section 274 provides that no order imposing a penalty shall be made

- by Income-tax Officer, where the penalty exceeds ₹ 10,000
- by Assistant Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner, where the penalty exceeds ₹ 25,000 except with the prior approval of the Joint Commissioner.

[2] w.e.f. 1.9.2019, penalty u/s 271FAA is attracted in case of default by any person referred to in section 285BA(1) who is required to file a statement of financial transaction or reportable account. Prior to 1.9.2019, penalty u/s 271FAA was attracted only in case of default by a person, being a prescribed reporting financial institution referred to in clause (k) of section 285BA(1).

In all cases before a penalty is imposed, the assessee should be given a reasonable opportunity of being heard.

Further, where the authority imposing penalty is not the Assessing Officer, a copy of the penalty order should be sent to the Assessing Officer.

20.12 REDUCTION OR WAIVER OF PENALTY [SECTION 273A]

(1) Power to reduce/ waive penalty under section 270A

(a) Exercise of power to reduce/waive penalty under section 270A - Section 273A(1) authorises the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax to reduce or waive the amount of penalty imposed or imposable on a person under section 270A. The exercise of this power by the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner is purely at his discretion and may be done either on his own motion or otherwise, that is on receipt of an application from the assessee.

(b) Conditions to be satisfied - The Principal Commissioner or Commissioner can reduce or waive the penalty payable by any person only if the following conditions are satisfied:

(i) Full and true disclosure - The reduction or waiver by the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner would be permissible only, if, prior to the detection of the concealment of income by the Assessing Officer, the assessee has made a full and true disclosure of all the particulars in respect of his income and, that, too voluntarily and in good faith.

For this purpose, a person would be deemed to have made a full and true disclosure of his income or of all the particulars relating thereto, in any case where the excess of income assessed over the income returned is of such a nature as not to attract the imposition of any penalty under section 270A.

(ii) Co-operation in enquiry - It is essential that the assessee must have co-operated with the department in any enquiry relating to the assessment of his income

(iii) Payment of tax or interest - He must also have either paid or made satisfactory arrangements for the payment of any tax or interest, which may become payable in consequence of any order passed under the Income-tax Act, 1961 in respect of the assessment year.

(c) Prior approval of higher authorities required in certain cases - If, in a case falling under section 270A, the amount of income in respect of which the penalty is imposed or imposable for the relevant assessment year or where such disclosure relates to more than one assessment year, the aggregate amount of such income for those years exceeds ₹ 5,00,000, the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax can exercise his power to reduce or waive penalty, only after getting the previous approval of the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Principal Director General or Director General.

(d) Relief available only once in life time - Where an order has been made under section 273A(1) in favour of any person, whether such order relates to one or more assessment years, he shall not be entitled to any relief under this section in relation to any other assessment year at any time after the making of such order.

(2) Power to reduce/ waive any penalty

(a) Exercise of power to reduce/ waive any penalty - Section 273A(4) authorises the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax, without prejudice to the powers conferred on him by any other provision of the Act, to reduce or waive the amount of any penalty payable by the assessee. The Principal Commissioner or Commissioner may exercise this power on an application made by the assessee, after recording his reason in writing for so doing. He is also empowered to stay or compound any proceedings for the recovery of any penalty in cases where he is satisfied that:

(i) to do otherwise would cause genuine hardship to the assessee having due regard to all the facts and circumstances of the case; and

(ii) the assessee has co-operated in any enquiry relating to the assessment or any proceeding for the recovery of any amount due from him.

(b) Prior approval of higher authorities required in certain cases - In case the quantum of bpenalty exceeds ₹ 1 lakh or the application relates to more than one penalty and the aggregate amount of such penalties exceeds ₹ 1 lakh, the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner can grant relief only with the previous approval of the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or the Principal Director General or Director General, as the case may be.

(3) Finality of order

The Principal Commissioner or Commissioner's order under section 273A for reduction or waiver of penalty is final and cannot be challenged in any court or before any authority.

20.13 POWER OF PRINCIPAL COMMISSIONER OR COMMISSIONER TO GRANT IMMUNITY FROM PENALTY [SECTION 273AA]

Section 273AA empowers the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner to grant immunity from penalty.

(1) Eligible applicant - The application for the immunity has to be made by the assessee (person whose case has been abated under section 245HA) to the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax.

(2) Time within which application for immunity can be made - Where penalty was levied before or during the pendency of settlement proceedings, then the assessee can approach the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner for immunity at any time.

However, if no penalty was levied till the time of abatement of proceedings before Settlement Commission, then the assessee must make an application for immunity before the imposition of penalty by the Income-tax authority.

(3) Grant of immunity subject to satisfaction of conditions - The Principal Commissioner or Commissioner can grant immunity, subject to such conditions as he may think fit to impose, on being satisfied that the assessee has –

(i) co-operated in the proceedings after abatement; and

(ii) made a full and true disclosure of his income and the manner in which such income has been derived.

(4) Withdrawal of immunity: Circumstances -

(a) The immunity granted shall stand withdrawn, if such assessee fails to comply with any condition subject to which the immunity was granted.

(b) The immunity granted to a person may, at any time, be withdrawn by the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, if he is satisfied that such person had, in the course of any proceedings, after abatement,

(i) concealed any particulars material to the assessment from the income-tax authority; or

(ii) given false evidence.

Consequently, such person would become liable to the imposition of any penalty under this Act to which such person would have been liable, had not such immunity been granted.

20.14 TIME LIMIT FOR PASSING AN ORDER FOR WAIVER OF INTEREST AND PENALTY [SECTIONS 220(2A), 273A, 273AA]

	Court under section 261; or (5) revision under section 263 or section 264 and an order imposing or enhancing or reducing penalty or dropping the proceedings for the imposition of penalty is passed before the order of the Commissioner (Appeals) or the Appellate Tribunal or the High Court or the Supreme Court is received by the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, or the order of revision under section 263 or 264 is passed.	reducing or canceling penalty or dropping the proceedings shall be passed without hearing the assessee or giving him a reasonable opportunity of being heard. (2) The provisions of section 274(2) shall apply in respect of such order imposing or enhancing or reducing penalty. Note - Section 274(2) provides that for passing an order imposing penalty exceeding ₹ 10,000, the Income-tax authority has to take the prior approval of the Joint Commissioner. Also, for passing an order imposing penalty exceeding ₹ 20,000, the Assistant Commissioner or the Deputy Commissioner should take the prior approval of the Joint Commissioner.

Note - In computing the period of limitation, the time taken to give the assessee a reasonable opportunity of being heard or reheard under section 129 and any period during which he proceedings for the levy of the penalty are stayed by an order or injunction of the Court or any period during which the immunity granted under section 245H received in force will be excluded.

EXERCISE

Question 1

A search under section 132 was initiated in the premises of Mr. X on 30.4.2019 and undisclosed money and jewellery belonging to Mr. X was found in his premises. Examine the penal provisions under the Income-tax Act which are attracted in this case, assuming that the undisclosed assets were acquired out of his undisclosed income of previous year 2019-20.

Answer

In order to deter the practice of non-disclosure of income, section 271AAB(1A) provides for levy of penalty on undisclosed income found during the course of a search, which relates to specified previous year, i.e.-

- the previous year which has ended before the date of search, but the due date of filing return of income for the same has not expired before the date of search and the return has not yet been furnished (P.Y. 2018-19);
- the previous year in which search is conducted (P.Y. 2019-20).

Accordingly, under section 271AAB(1A), in respect of searches initiated on or after 15.12.2016,

- penalty@30% would be attracted, if undisclosed income is admitted during the course of search in the statement furnished under section 132(4), and the assessee explains the manner in which such income was derived, pays the tax, together with interest if any, in respect of the undisclosed income, and furnishes the return of income for the specified previous year declaring such undisclosed income on or before the specified date (i.e., the due date of filing return of income or the date on which the period specified in the notice issued under section 153A expires, as the case may be).
- In all other cases, penalty @60% of undisclosed income would be attracted.

Question 2

What is the quantum of penalty that could be levied in each of the following cases -

(i) Failure to get books of accounts audited as required under section 44AB within the time prescribed under the Act.

(ii) Failure to comply with a direction issued under section 142(2A).

(iii) Failure to furnish report from an accountant as required under section 92E.

Answer

The penalty that could be levied in each case is:

(i) Failure to get books of accounts audited as required under section 44AB of the Income-tax Act, 1961 - a sum equal to ½% of the total sales, turnover or gross receipts, as the case may be, in business, or of the gross receipts in profession, in such previous year or years, or a sum of ₹ 1,50,000, whichever is less [Section 271B].

(ii) Failure to comply with a direction issued under section 142(2A) – a sum of ₹ 10,000 [Section 272A(1)(d)].

(iii) Failure to furnish report from an accountant as required by section 92E - a sum of ₹ 1,00,000 [Section 271BA].

Question 3

X, an individual whose total sales in the business of food grains for the year ending 31.3.2020 was ₹ 205 lakhs, did not maintain books of account for P.Y.2019-20, even though his turnover was ₹ 28 lakhs in the P.Y.2018-19. The Assessing Officer levied penalty of ₹ 25,000 under section 271A for non-maintenance of books of account and penalty of ₹ 1,02,500 under section 271B for not getting the books audited as required by section 44AB. Is the Assessing Officer justified in levying penalty under section 271B?

Answer

X is required to maintain books of account as per section 44AA for the P.Y.2019-20 since his turnover exceeded ₹ 25 lakhs in the P.Y.2018-19. He also has to get them audited under section 44AB, since his gross sales in the P.Y.2019-20 exceeds ₹ 1 crore. He is liable to pay penalty under section 271A for not maintaining his books of account as per section 44AA. Accordingly, the action of the Assessing Officer in levying penalty of ₹ 25,000 under section 271A is correct. However, where books of account have not been maintained, there cannot be a question of getting them audited. Audit of books of account presupposes maintenance of books of account. When admittedly X has not maintained books, he cannot obviously get the audit done.

In Surajmal Parsuram Todi v. CIT (1996) 222 ITR 691, the Gauhati High Court has held that when a person commits an offence by not maintaining books of accounts as contemplated by section 44AA, the offence is complete and after that there can be no possibility of any offence as contemplated by section 44AB and, therefore, the imposition of penalty under section 271B is erroneous.

Therefore, in this case, the Assessing Officer is not justified in levying penalty under section 271B.

Question 4

State the conditions, if any, to be satisfied by an assessee in order to get relief under section 273A(4) regarding the waiver of penalty. Can the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner refuse to grant relief, when the conditions laid down in the section was complied with, by the assessee?

Answer

There are two conditions to be satisfied by an assessee in order to get relief in the form of a waiver or reduction of penalty by the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax under section 273A(4) of the Act. These conditions are:

(i) The payment of penalty would cause "genuine hardship" to the assessee and the Commissioner is satisfied about the existence of genuine hardship having regard to the circumstances of the case. The existence of genuine hardship would entitle the assessee to relief. The CBDT in its Circular No 784 dated 22-11-1999 has clarified that “genuine hardship” referred to in the provisions of section 273A(4) should exist both at the time at which the application under section 273A(4) is made by the assessee before the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner and at the time of passing of order under section 273A(4) by the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner.

(ii) The assessee has co-operated in any enquiry relating to the assessment or any proceeding for the recovery of any amount due from him.

As per the decision of Andhra Pradesh High Court in K.S.N. Murthy v. Chairman, CBDT (2001) 252 ITR 269, if the above conditions laid down for exercise of the discretion are satisfied, the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner cannot refuse to exercise the discretion. Though the power given to the Commissioner under section 273A is discretionary, the exercise of discretion cannot be either arbitrary or capricious and has to be judicious and objective, once the conditions required for exercise of discretion in any judicial or quasi-judicial proceedings are satisfied. Such discretion must be exercised taking into consideration all relevant facts. The satisfaction for exercise of discretionary power under the section must be based on objective consideration and not on subjective satisfaction.

Also, as per the proviso to section 273A(4), in case the quantum of penalty exceeds ₹ 1 lakh, the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner can grant relief only with the previous approval of the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or the Principal Director General or Director General, as the case may be.

Note - The Principal Commissioner or Commissioner has to pass an order under section 273A(4), either accepting or rejecting the application in full or in part, within a period of 12 months from the end of the month in which the application is received. Further, no order rejecting the application, either in full or in part, shall be passed unless the assessee has been given an opportunity of being heard.

Question 5

An assessee had credited a sum of ₹ 50,000 in cash in the account of Madan, said to represent a loan obtained from him. The Assessing Officer, having gone into the genuineness of the transaction, disbelieved the story of loan and treated the sum of ₹ 50,000 as the income of the assessee from undisclosed sources. He also started proceedings under section 271D and levied a penalty of ₹ 60,000 on the assessee for having accepted the loan in contravention of section 269SS. Examine the correctness of the levy.

Answer

There are several flaws in the penalty levied by the Assessing Officer. Firstly, the penalty leviable under section 271D cannot exceed the sum equal to the loan taken. Hence, the maximum penalty leviable would be ₹ 50,000. Secondly, any penalty imposable under section 271D shall be imposed by the Joint Commissioner. Hence, unless the Assessing Officer happens to be a Joint Commissioner the levy of penalty will be invalid. Thirdly, the Assessing Officer cannot, on the one hand, treat the loan as undisclosed income of the assessee and on the other, treat it as a loan for the purpose of section 269SS read with section 271D. Such a treatment will be self-contradictory. The moment the amount of ₹ 50,000 is treated as undisclosed income, it ceases to bear the character of loan and therefore, the foundation for the levy of penalty under section 271D disappears. [Diwan Enterprises v. CIT and Others (2000) 246 ITR 571].

Question 6

Examine the following cases and state whether the same are liable for penalty as per the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

(i) Raman & Associates had made payment in excess of the limits prescribed to the contractors for carrying out labour job work at various sites, but had not deducted tax at source as per section 194C.

(ii) Hotels and Hotels were asked by Income-tax Officer (CIB) to furnish details of all such tourists who stayed in their hotels and had paid bill amount in excess of ₹ 10,000. They have not furnished the requisite information in spite of various reminders.

Answer

(i) Penalty under section 271C is attracted for failure to deduct tax at source. The penalty would be a sum equal to the amount of tax which such person has failed to deduct. Such penalty can be imposed only by the Joint Commissioner. Therefore, Raman & Associates shall be liable for penalty under section 271C equal to the amount of tax which they have failed to deduct under section 194C from the payments made to the contractors. The penalty would be in addition to the disallowance of 30% of expenditure/payment under section 40(a)(ia).

(ii) Section 133(6) empowers the Income-tax authority to require any person to furnish information in relation to such points or matters which will be useful for or relevant to any enquiry or proceeding under the Act. Failure on the part of an assessee to furnish the information in relation to such points or matters as required makes him liable for penalty under section 272A(2) of ₹ 100 for every day during which the failure continues.

Note – In a case where no proceeding is pending, the Income-tax authority can exercise this power only after obtaining the approval of the Principal Director/Director or Principal Commissioner/Commissioner as the case may be. In this case, it is presumed that the Income-tax authority has obtained the approval of the Principal Director/Director or Principal Commissioner/ Commissioner before exercising this power.

Question 7

Fox Limited failed to furnish information and documents sought by the Transfer Pricing Officer (TPO). Can TPO levy penalty for such failure? How much would be the quantum of penalty imposable for the said failure?

Answer

Under section 271G, if any person who has entered into an international transaction or specified domestic transaction fails to furnish any such information or document as required by section 92D(3) sought for by the Transfer Pricing Officer, then, such person shall be liable to a penalty which may be levied by the Assessing Officer or the Transfer Pricing Officer or the Commissioner (Appeals). Thus, the Transfer Pricing Officer is a competent authority to levy penalty.

Penalty would be a sum equal to 2% of the value of international transaction or specified domestic transaction for each such failure.

Question 8

What would be the penalty leviable under section 270A in case of the following assessees, if none of the additions or disallowances made in the assessment or reassessment qualify under section 270A(6) and the under-reported income is not on account of misreporting?

Note – Beta Ltd. is a trading company. The total turnover of Beta Ltd. for the P.Y.2017-18 was ₹ 401 crore and the company has not exercised option under section 115BAA.

Answer

Penalty leviable under section 270A in case of M/s. Alpha, a resident firm

M/s. Alpha is deemed to have under-reported its income since:

(1) its income assessed under 143(3) exceeds its income determined in a return processed under section 143(1)(a); and

(2) the income reassessed under section 147 exceeds the income assessed under section 143(3).

Therefore, penalty is leviable under section 270A for under-reporting of income.

SIGNIFICANT SELECT CASES

1. Is penalty under section 271D imposable for cash loans/deposits received from partners?

CIT v. Muthoot Financiers (2015) 371 ITR 408 (Del)

Facts of the case: The assessee-firm, engaged in business of banking and money lending, had received huge amounts from the partners in the assessment years 1996-97 and 1998-99 by way of cash. The Assessing Officer levied penalty under section 271D. The Commissioner (Appeals) upheld the levy of penalty. The Tribunal observed that the advance made to the firm by the partners cannot be regarded as loan accepted by the firm. It held that the amount advanced and accepted is capital of the firm and not loans which cannot be subjected to penalty under section 271D. The Revenue filed an appeal before High Court.

The assessee contended before the High Court that the amount advanced by the partners cannot be regarded as loan but is a capital of the firm. As the partnership firm has no separate legal entity, nor is there a separate identification between the firm and the partners, there is no violation of section 269SS in this case.

High Court's Opinion & Decision: The High Court referred to the case CIT v. R.M. Chidambaram Pillai (1977) 106 ITR 292, where the Apex Court was of the view that the firm is not a legal person even though it has some of the attributes of a personality. It held that the 'firm' is a collective noun, a compendious expression to designate an entity not a person. It also referred to CIT v. Sivakumar. V (2013) 354 ITR 9 (Mad), where the High Court upheld the conclusion of the Tribunal to hold that there is no separate legal entity for the partnership firm and the partner is entitled to use the funds of the firm. In CIT v. Lokhpat Film Exchange (Cinema) (2008) 304 ITR 172 (Raj), it was held that a partnership firm not being a juristic person, the inter se transaction between the firm and partners are not governed by the provisions of sections 269SS and 269T.

The High Court also noted the different view expressed by the Supreme Court in CIT v. A.W. Figgies & Co. (1953) 24 ITR 405, where it was held that the partners of the firm are distinct as civil entities while the firm as such is a separate and distinct unit for the purpose of assessment.

The High Court observed that the position that emerges is that there are three different Courts, which have held that section 269SS would not be violative when money is exchanged inter se between the partners and the firm.

The High Court further observed that, in this case, there was no dispute as regards the money brought in by the partners of the assessee-firm. The source of money was also not doubted. The transaction was bona fide and not aimed to avoid any tax liability. The credit worthiness of the partners and genuineness of the transactions coupled with relationship between the 'two persons' and two different legal interpretations put forward, could constitute a reasonable cause in a given case for not invoking sections 271D /271E read with section 273B.

The High Court held that the issue being a debatable one, there was reasonable cause for not levying penalty.

2. Can loan, exceeding the specified limit, advanced by a partnership firm to the sole-proprietorship concern of its partner be viewed as a violation of section 269SS to attract levy of penalty?

CIT v. V. Sivakumar (2013) 354 ITR 9 (Mad.)

Facts of the case: In the present case, the assessee was a partner in four firms and also had a sole-proprietary business. In the relevant previous year, the partnership firms had advanced loan to the assessee in cash exceeding the specified amount mentioned in section 269SS. The Assessing Officer initiated penalty proceedings under section 271D in view of violation of section 269SS. The Assessing Officer recorded a factual finding that the said money had been advanced by the partnership firm as a loan and were debited to the accounts of the proprietary concern; therefore, it was evident that the assessee had taken loan from the firms in cash in the capacity of the proprietor and not as a partner. Consequently, the provisions of section 269SS had been violated.

Assessee's contention: The assessee contended that the amount is taken in the capacity of the partner and it cannot be taken as an independent transaction and therefore, there is no violation of section 269SS. Also, the assessee contended that the partnership firm has no separate legal entity and there is no separate identification between the firm and the partner.

Tribunal's view: The Tribunal, relying upon the various court decisions, confirmed the finding of the Commissioner (Appeals) that partnership firm is not a juristic person and there is no separate identity for the firm and the partners; Being a partner, the assessee had withdrawn amounts from the firms and there were no reasons to doubt the genuineness of the transactions. Consequently, the transactions between the firm and the partner cannot be brought within the meaning of section 269SS.

High Court's Decision: The High Court, relying upon the various court decisions, upheld the decision of the Tribunal holding that there is no separate identity for the partnership firm and that the partner is entitled to use the funds of the firm. In the present case, the assessee has acted bona fide and that there was a reasonable cause within the meaning of section 273B. Therefore, the transaction cannot be said to be in violation of section 269SS and no penalty is attracted in this case.

3. Where an assessee repays a loan merely by passing adjustment entries in its books of account, can such repayment of loan by the assessee be taken as a contravention of the provisions of section 269T to attract penalty under section 271E?

CIT v. Triumph International Finance (I.) Ltd. (2012) 345 ITR 270 (Bom.)

Facts of the case: In the present case, the assessee is a public limited company, registered as category-I merchant banker with SEBI, engaged in the business of stock broking, investment and trading in shares and securities. The assessee had taken a loan from the Investment Trust of India. During the previous year in question, the assessee had transferred shares of a company held by it to the Investment Trust of India. Therefore, in the current assessment year, the assessee was liable to pay the loan amount to the Investment Trust of India and had a right to receive the sale price of the shares transferred to Investment Trust of India. In order to avoid the unnecessary circular transfer of shares, both the parties agreed to set-off the amount payable and receivable by way of passing journal entries and the balance loan amount was paid by the assessee by way of an account payee cheque. The amount of loan settled by way of passing journal entries exceeds ₹ 20,000.

Assessing Officer's contentions: The Assessing Officer passed the assessment order levying penalty under section 271E for the contravention of the provisions of section 269T on the argument that since section 269T put an obligation on the assessee to pay loan only by way of an account payee cheque or an account payee draft, the settlement of a portion of the loan by passing journal entry would be a mode otherwise than by way of an account payee cheque or an account payee draft and therefore, the penal provisions under section 271E shall be attracted.

Assessee's contentions: The assessee argued that the transaction of repayment of loan or deposit by way of adjustment through book entries was carried out in the ordinary course of business and the genuineness of the assessee's transaction with the Investment Trust of India was also accepted by the Tribunal. It is a bonafide transaction. The assessee further contended that section 269T mentions that in a case where the loan or deposit is repaid by an outflow of funds, the same has to be by an account payee cheque or an account payee demand draft. However, in case the discharge of loan or deposit is in a manner otherwise than by an outflow of funds, as is the situation in the present case, the provisions of section 269T would not apply.

High Court's Observations: Considering the above mentioned facts and arguments, the Bombay High Court observed that, the obligation to repay the loan or deposit by account payee cheque/bank draft as specified in section 269T is mandatory in nature. The contravention of the said section will attract penalty under section 271E.

The argument of the assessee cannot be accepted since section 269T does not make a distinction between a bonafide or a non-bonafide transaction neither does it require the fulfillment of the condition mentioned therein only in case where there is outflow of funds. It merely puts a condition that in case a loan or deposit is repaid, it should be by way of an account payee cheque/draft. Therefore, in the present case the assessee has repaid a portion of loan in contravention of provisions of section 269T.

However, the cause shown by the assessee for repayment of the loan otherwise than by account payee cheque/bank draft was on account of the fact that the assessee was liable to receive amount towards the sale price of the shares sold by the assessee to the person from whom loan was received by the assessee. It would have been mere formality to repay the loan amount by account payee cheque/draft and receive back almost the same amount towards the sale price of the shares. Also, neither the genuineness of the receipt of loan nor the transaction of repayment of loan by way of adjustment through book entries carried out in the ordinary course of business has been doubted in the regular assessment. Therefore, there is nothing on record to suggest that the amounts advanced by Investment Trust of India to the assessee represented the unaccounted money of the Investment Trust of India or the assessee and also it cannot be said that the whole transaction was entered into to avoid tax. This is accepted as a reasonable cause under section 273B.

High Court's Decision: In effect, the assessee has violated the provisions of section 269T by repaying the loan amount by way of passing book entries and therefore, penalty under section 271E is applicable. However, since the transaction is bona fide in nature being a normal business transaction and has not been made with a view to avoid tax, it was held that the assessee has shown reasonable cause for the failure under section 269T, and therefore, as per the provisions of section 273B, no penalty under section 271E could be imposed on the assessee for contravening the provisions of section 269T.

Note: In order to mitigate the hardship caused by certain penalty provisions in case of genuine business transactions, section 273B provides that no penalty under, inter alia, section 271E shall be imposed on a person for any failure referred to in the said section, if such person proves that there was reasonable cause for such failure.

21.1 SUMMARY OF OFFENCES AND PROSECUTION

The punishable offences as well as the prosecution for such offences under the Income-tax Act, 1961 are discussed under Chapter XXII. Prosecution provisions under the Income-tax Act, 1961 are used as a tool for effective enforcement of tax laws and deterring tax avoidance and tax evasion.

While penalties may be imposed by the income-tax authorities, the imposition of a fine or the launching of prosecution for any offence under the Act can be made only by the Magistrate of a Court under sections 275A to 280. In respect of the same default of an assessee, penalty may be imposed and a prosecution also may be launched against him.

Section 278B(3) provides that if an offence under the Act has been committed by a person being a company, it shall be punished with fine. Every other person who was in charge of and was responsible for the conduct of business of the company, or any director, manager, secretary or other officer of the company (with whose consent or connivance or due to whose neglect the offence was committed) would be liable for punishment of imprisonment and fine wherever so provided.

21.2 POWER OF PRINCIPAL COMMISSIONER OR COMMISSIONER TO GRANT IMMUNITY FROM PROSECUTION [SECTION 278AB]

Section 278AB empowers the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner to grant immunity from prosecution -

(1) Eligible applicant - The application for the immunity must be made by the assessee (person whose case has been abated under section 245HA) to the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax before institution of the prosecution proceedings after abatement.

(2) Time limit for filing application - The assessee can approach the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner for immunity any time if prosecution proceedings were instituted before or during the pendency of settlement proceedings. However, if the assessee has received any notice etc. from the Income-tax authority for institution of prosecution, then he must apply to the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner for immunity, before actual institution of prosecution.

(3) Granting of immunity subject to conditions - The Principal Commissioner or Commissioner can grant immunity, subject to such conditions as he may think fit to impose, on being satisfied that the assessee has –

(i) co-operated in the proceedings after abatement; and

(ii) made a full and true disclosure of his income and the manner in which such income has been derived.

(4) Withdrawal of immunity: Circumstances –

(a) If the assessee fails to comply with any condition subject to which the immunity was granted, the same would be withdrawn.

(b) The immunity granted to a person may, at any time, be withdrawn by the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, if he is satisfied that such person had, in the course of any proceedings, after abatement, -

(i) concealed any particulars material to the assessment from the income-tax authority; or

(ii) given false evidence.

Consequently, the person may be tried for the offence with respect to which the immunity was granted or for any other offence of which he appears to have been guilty in connection with the proceedings.

21.3 PRESUMPTION WITH REGARD TO ASSETS, BOOKS OF ACCOUNT [SECTION 278D]

(1) Presumption with regard to books of account and other documents in search cases - Section 278D provides that in case where, during the course of any search made under section 132, any money, bullion, jewellery or other valuable articles or things or any books of account or other documents had been found in the possession or control of any person and such assets or books of account or other documents are tendered by the prosecution in evidence against such person and/or against any person who is convicted of an offence under section 278, the provisions of section 132(4A) would apply, in relation to all such books of account and other documents. Accordingly, it would be presumed that such books of account or other documents and assets belong to the person in whose control or possession they were found, at the time of search and also that the contents of such books of account and other documents are true.

(2) Presumption with regard to books of account and documents in case of requisition - Similarly, in cases where any books of accounts or other documents and assets are taken into custody from the possession or control of any person by the officer or authority specified in section 132A(1)(a) or (c) and these are delivered to the requisitioning officer under section 132A(2), it would be presumed that the presumption similar to the one mentioned earlier would operate in these cases as well.

(3) Presumption rebuttable - It would be for assessee to rebut the presumption wherever necessary by producing cogent and reliable evidence.

21.4 PRESUMPTION AS TO CULPABLE MENTAL STATE [SECTION 278E]

(1) Onus of proof on accused - In any prosecution for any offence under this Act which requires a culpable mental state on the part of the accused, the court shall presume the existence of such mental state but it shall be a defence for the accused to prove the fact that he had no such mental state with respect to the act charged as an offence in that prosecution.

It may be noted that penalty proceedings being quasi-criminal in nature, it has been judicially held in the context of various penalty and prosecution proceedings, that the burden is on the department to establish that the assessee concealed the particulars of his income or deliberately furnished inaccurate particulars thereof and it is not enough for the revenue merely to show that a certain amount was received by the assessee. Section 278E has clearly overruled this view and has specifically placed the burden of proof on the assessee.

It specifically provided that where any prosecution requires a culpable mental state (mens rea) the court shall presume the existence of such mental state but the assessee is entitled to prove that he had no such mental state with respect to the act charged with. Thus, the burden to prove the non-existence of mens rea has been effectively placed on the assessee in prosecution cases.

(2) Meaning of 'Culpable mental state' - Culpable mental state includes intention, motive or knowledge of a fact or belief in, or reason to believe, a fact.

(3) Proof of fact - For the purposes of this section a fact is said to be proved only when the court believes it to exist beyond reasonable doubt and not merely when its existence is established by a preponderance of probability.

21.5 PROSECUTION TO BE MADE AT THE INSTANCE OF THE PRINCIPAL CHIEF COMMISSIONER OR CHIEF COMMISSIONER OR PRINCIPAL COMMISSIONER OR COMMISSIONER [SECTIONS 279 AND 279A]

(1) Prior sanction of higher authorities - Section 279(1) provides that the proceedings to punish a person for an offence under sections 275A, 275B, 276, 276A, 276B, 276BB, 276C, 276CC, 276D, 277, 277A and 278 can be initiated only after previous sanction of the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner or the Commissioner (Appeals) or the appropriate authority. However, the Principal Chief Commissioner or the Chief Commissioner or the Principal Director General or Director General may issue such instructions or directions to the said authorities for institution of proceedings under section 279(1).

(2) Cases were prosecution cannot be initiated - Section 279(1A) provides that the proceedings to punish a person for an offence under section 276C or 277 cannot be initiated in relation to the assessment of an assessment year in respect of which the penalty imposed or imposable on him under section 270A has been waived or reduced under section 273A.

(3) Compounding of offences - An offence may either before or after the institution of prosecution proceedings be compounded by the concerned authorities under section 279(2).

(4) Admissibility of statement made or books of account produced as evidence - If a person is proceeded against under section 279(1), then a statement made or account or documents produced before any authority under Act shall not be inadmissible as evidence for purpose of the prosecution proceedings merely on the ground that such account or document was produced or statement was made in the belief that the penalty imposed or imposable under section 270A would be reduced or waived under section 273A or that the offence would be compounded.

(5) Non-cognizable offences - Section 279A provides that offences punishable under sections 276B, 276C, 276CC, 277 and 278 shall be deemed to be non-cognizable offences.

21.6 PROOF OF ENTRIES IN RECORDS OR DOCUMENTS [SECTION 279B]

(1) Admissibility of entries in records as evidence in prosecution proceedings - Entries in the records or other documents in the custody of an income-tax authority shall be admitted in evidence in any proceedings for the prosecution of any person for an offence under this Chapter

(2) Proof of entries - All such entries may be proved either:-

(i) by the production of the records or other documents in the custody of the income-tax authority containing such entries; or

(ii) by the production of a copy of the entries certified by the income-tax authority having custody of the records; or

(iii) other documents under its signature and stating that it is a true copy of the original entries and that such original entries are contained in the records of other documents in its custody.

21.7 DISCLOSURE OF PARTICULARS BY PUBLIC SERVANTS [SECTION 280]

(1) Imprisonment and fine for contravention of section 138(2) - If a public servant furnishes any information or produces any document in contravention of section 138(2), he shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to 6 months and shall also be liable to pay fine.

Under section 138(2), the Central Government is empowered to issue notification directing that no information or document shall be furnished or produced by a public servant in respect of specified matters in relation to certain class of assessees. While issuing such notification, the Central Government takes into account the practices and usage customary or other relevant factors.

(2) Prior sanction of the Central Government required - No prosecution shall, however, be instituted under this section except with the previous sanction of the Central Government.

21.8 CONSTITUTION OF SPECIAL COURTS & OFFENCES TRIABLE BY SPECIAL COURT [SECTIONS 280A & 280B]

(1) Under section 280A, for the purpose of trial of offences under Chapter XXII i.e. Offences & Prosecution, one or more courts of Magistrate of the first class may be designated by the Central Government, in consultation with the Chief Justice of the High Court, by way of a notification as Special Court for such area or areas or for such cases or class or group of cases as may be specified in the notification.

(2) A Special Court, while trying an offence punishable under the Act, shall also try any other offence with which the accused may be charged, under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973.

(3) Under section 280B, the offences punishable under Chapter XXII, shall be triable only by the Special Court, if so designated, for the area or areas or for cases or class or group of cases, as the case may be, in which the offence has been committed. This is notwithstanding anything containing in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973

(4) However, a court competent to try offences under section 292 which has been designated as a Special Court under this section, shall continue to try the offences before it or offences arising under the Act after such designation. Further, a court competent to try offences under section 292, which has not been designated as a Special Court under this section, may continue to try such offence pending before it till its disposal.

(5) Further, notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, a Special Court may take cognizance of the offence for which the accused is committed for trial, upon a complaint made by an authority authorized in this behalf under the Act.

21.9 TRIAL OF OFFENCES AS SUMMONS CASE [SECTION 280C]

(1) The Special Court shall, notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, try an offence under Chapter XXII punishable with imprisonment not exceeding two years or with fine or with both, as a summons case.

(2) When an offence is so tried as a summons case, the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, as applicable in the case of trial of summons case, would be applicable.

21.10 APPLICATION OF CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE, 1973 TO PROCEEDINGS BEFORE SPECIAL COURT [SECTION 280D]

(1) The provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, including the provisions regarding bails and bonds, would apply to proceedings before a Special Court, unless otherwise provided under the Income-tax Act, 1961.

(2) The person conducting the prosecution before the Special Court shall be deemed to be a Public Prosecutor.

(3) The Central Government may also appoint a Special Public Prosecutor for any case or class or group of cases.

(4) A person shall be qualified for appointment as a Public Prosecutor or a Special Public Prosecutor only if he has been in practice as an advocate for at least seven years, requiring special knowledge of law.

(5) Every person appointed as Public Prosecutor or Special Public Prosecutor under this section shall be deemed to be a Public Prosecutor within the meaning of section 2(u) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973. The provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, would have effect accordingly.

EXERCISE

Question 1

Can prosecution be launched for each of the following actions or defaults committed? If yes, then explain the relevant provisions of the Act and the quantum of prescribed punishment.

(i) The assessee had restrained and not allowed the officer authorized as per section 132(1)(iib) of the Act to inspect the documents maintained in the form of electronic record and the books of accounts.

(ii) The assessee deliberately has failed to comply with the requirement of section 142(1) and/or 142(2A).

(iii) The assessee deliberately has failed to make the payment of the tax collected under section 206C.

Answer

(i) Failure to afford facility to the officer authorized as per section 132(1)(iib) is a case for which prosecution can be launched under section 275B and such person shall be punishable with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years and shall also be liable to fine.

(ii) Willful failure to produce books of account and documents as required under section 142(1) or willful failure to comply with a direction to get the accounts audited under section 142(2A) is a case for which prosecution can be launched under section 276D and such person shall be punishable with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year and with fine.

(iii) Deliberate failure to deposit the tax collected under section 206C to the credit of the Central Government is a case for which prosecution can be launched under section 276BB and such person shall be punishable with rigorous imprisonment for a term which shall not be less than three months but which may extend to seven years and with fine.

Question 2

The Assessing Officer lodged a complaint against M/s. KLM, a firm, under section 276CC of the Income-tax Act, 1961 for failure to furnish its return of income for the A.Y.2018-19 within the due date under section 139(1). The tax payable on the assessed income, as reduced by the advance tax paid and tax deducted at source, was ₹ 60,000. The appeal filed by the firm against the order of assessment was allowed by the Commissioner (Appeals). The Assessing Officer passed an order giving effect to the order of the Commissioner (Appeals). The tax payable by the firm as per the said order of the Assessing Officer was ₹ 2,900. The Assessing Officer has accepted the order of the Commissioner (Appeals) and has not preferred an appeal against it to the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal. The firm desires to know of the maintainability of the prosecution proceedings in the facts and circumstances of the case.

Would your answer change if the person against whom complaint was lodged was KLM Ltd., a company, instead of a firm?

Answer

(i) Section 276CC provides for prosecution for wilful failure to furnish a return of income within the prescribed time, in a case where tax would have been evaded had the failure not been discovered. Since the amount of tax which would have been evaded does not exceed ₹ 25 lakh, the imprisonment would be for a term of 3 months to 2 years. In addition, fine would also be attracted.

However, in a case where the return of income is not filed within the due date, prosecution proceedings will not be attracted if the tax payable by a person, other than a company, on the total income determined on regular assessment, as reduced by the advance tax, if any, paid and any tax deducted at source, does not exceed ₹ 3,000.

In this case, even though the tax liability of the firm as per the original order of assessment exceeded ₹ 3,000, however, as a result of the order of the Commissioner (Appeals), it got reduced to ₹ 2,900, which is less than ₹ 3,000. Therefore, since the tax liability of the firm on final assessment was determined at ₹ 2,900, the prosecution proceedings are not maintainable.

In Guru Nanak Enterprises v. ITO (2005) 279 ITR 30, where the facts were similar, the Supreme Court held that prosecution was unwarranted.

(ii) Yes, in case of a company, the answer would be different and prosecution proceedings would be maintainable.

Question 3

Explain section 278C applicable in respect of offences committed by Hindu undivided families.

Answer

As per section 278C(1) of the Income-tax Act, 1961, where an offence under the Income-tax Act, 1961 has been committed by a Hindu undivided family (HUF), the karta shall be deemed to be guilty of the offence and shall be liable to be proceeded against and punished accordingly. However, the karta shall not be liable to any punishment if he proves that the offence was committed without his knowledge or that he had exercised all due diligence to prevent the commission of such offence.

As per section 278C(2), where an offence under the Income-tax Act, 1961 has been committed by a HUF and it is proved that the offence has been committed with the consent or connivance of, or is attributable to any neglect on the part of any member of the HUF, such member shall also be deemed to be guilty of that offence and shall be liable to be proceeded against and punished accordingly.

Question 4

Can the Department launch prosecution in a case where they have accepted the revised return filed by the assessee, rectifying a mistake in the original return of income?

Answer

This question came up before the Karnataka High Court in *K.E. Sunil Babu, Asst. CIT v. Steel Processors (2006) 286 ITR 315. The High Court observed that since the Department had accepted the revised returns filed under section 139(5), it was clear that there was a bona fide mistake in the original return and there was no element of mens rea. Therefore, the High Court held that the Department cannot launch prosecution under sections 276C, 277 and 278.

SIGNIFICANT SELECT CASES

1. Whether payment of sums due, after the deadline stipulated by the Settlement Commission, would save the petitioner from withdrawal of immunity from prosecution?

Sandeep Singh v Union of India [2017] 393 ITR 77 (SC)

Facts of the case: The petitioner is a dealer in real estate at Amritsar. A search was conducted on August 21, 2009 at his business and residential premises under section 132(1) subsequent to which the assessee filed an application before the Settlement Commission under section 245C(1). The case was settled before the Settlement Commission on December 12, 2014. Pursuant to the assessment after settlement, the petitioner was unable to pay the amount due by the stipulated date. He sought an extension for 14 months but was only given time until July 31, 2015.

The assessee filed a writ petition before the High Court seeking quashing/ modification of the Settlement Commission's order granting partial extension of time. By the time the matter was heard by the Supreme Court, he had paid off all pending amounts.

Supreme Court's Observations: The Supreme Court explained that in case payments are not made within the time granted by the Settlement Commission or in case the person fails to comply with any other condition, subject to which the immunity was granted, the immunity shall stand withdrawn.

It is not in dispute that all payments were made by the assessee on January 20, 2016 before approaching the Supreme Court. Though the time originally granted was only up to July 31, 2015, all sums having been paid now, there is no need to relegate the assessee to the Settlement Commission. Settlement Commission has the power to extend the timelines. Hence, in the instant case, it shall be taken that the assessee has made the payments within the time granted under section 245H(1A).

Supreme Court's Decision: The Supreme Court held that the assessee having cleared all taxes due vide order of Settlement Commission, albeit after stipulated deadline, is immune from prosecution.

2. Would prosecution proceedings under section 276CC be attracted where the failure to furnish return in time was not willful?

Union of India v. Bhavecha Machinery and Others (2010) 320 ITR 263 (MP)

High Court's Observation and Decision: In this case, the High Court observed that for the provisions of section 276CC to get attracted, there should be a willful delay in filing return and not merely a failure to file return in time. There should be clear, cogent and reliable evidence that the failure to file return in time was 'willful' and there should be no possible doubt of its being 'wilful'. The failure must be intentional, deliberate, calculated and conscious with complete knowledge of legal consequences flowing from them.

In this case, it was observed that there were sufficient grounds for delay in filing the return of income and such delay was not willful. Therefore, prosecution proceedings under section 276CC are not attracted in such a case.

22.1 LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES [SECTION 159]

(1) Meaning [Section 2(29): "Legal representative'' in the Income-tax Act, 1961 has the meaning assigned to it in section 2(11) of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 i.e., a person who in law represents the estate of a deceased person and includes any person who intermeddles with the estate of the deceased and where a party sues or is sued in a representative character, the person on whom the estate devolves on the death of the party so suing or sued.

It is not necessary that the legal representative should be the beneficial owner of the estate. Nor need he be in possession of any property of the deceased. It is sufficient that the estate devolves on him. So far as HUF is concerned it continues to exist as an assessable unit despite change in its composition including the change of its Karta by death or otherwise and consequently there is no scope or necessity for involving this section when a Karta dies. Where a person leaves a will appointing executors, the executors are the legal representative. The Act expressly declares that the legal representative is deemed to be an assessee for the purpose of this Act.

(2) Assessment on legal representative: This section applies irrespective of whether the assessment proceedings has not been started, or were pending, or were completed and the assessment made, before the death of the deceased.

For the purpose of making an assessment and for the purpose of levying any sum in the hands of the legal representative –

- any proceeding taken against the deceased before his death shall be deemed to have been taken against the legal representative and may be continued against the legal representative from that stage.
- any proceedings which could have been taken against the deceased for a default committed by him, can be started against the legal representative.
- all the provisions of the Act shall apply accordingly.

If at the date of death of the deceased, a return of income had not been made under section 139(1) and a notice under section 142(1)(i) or section 148, as the case may be, had not been served on him, the Assessing Officer should first issue the notice under appropriate section to the legal representative of the deceased and then proceed to assess the income of the deceased in the hands of the representative as if the representative were the assessee.

It is obligatory upon the representative to comply with the notices appropriately served. Assessment may be made on the representative under section 147 in respect of income of the deceased which had escaped assessment in the relevant years.

(3) Penalty on legal representative: Similarly, penalty proceedings which could have been taken against the deceased for a default committed by him, can be started against the legal representative. He, being an assessee, is also liable to a penalty for his own default.

(4) Income upto the date of death and the end of the accounting year: Students should carefully note that section 159 applies in respect of the income of the deceased only upto the date of death and not upto the end of the accounting year in which the death occurs. The income of the estate for the period from the date of death upto the end of the accounting year in which the death occurs should be assessed under section 168 in the hands of the executor. Thus in respect of the year of death two separate and distinct assessments would have to be made, the prior one on the legal representative under section 159 and the latter one on the 'executors' under section 168. This may even lower the incidence of tax for the year. The position will be the same even if the representative and the 'executor' are one and the same.

(5) Apportionment: As a consequence of two separate assessments as mentioned above apportionment of income between the two periods becomes necessary. Here it is to be noted that certain incomes like dividends or interest if they become payable after the death cannot be apportioned to the period upto the date of death because they do not accrue from day to day.

(6) Liability of legal representative: The Act imposes a liability on the legal representative not only in respect of tax but also any other sum (penalty, fine or interest) which the deceased would have been liable to pay if he had not died. This liability is limited to the extent to which the estate is capable of meeting the liability. But if the legal representative, while his tax liability remains undischarged, creates a charge on or disposes off or parts with any of the assets of the estate of the deceased which are, or may, come into his possession, this personal liability shall, however, be limited to the value of the assets so charged, disposed of or parted with. This personal liability is imposed by sub-section (4) only in respect of tax and not in respect of penalty, fine or interest.

The provisions of section 161(2), 162 and 167 (discussed later in this chapter) shall apply to legal representative to the extent they are not inconsistent with the provisions of this section.

22.2 REPRESENTATIVE ASSESSEE

(1) Meaning [Section 160]: Besides the legal representatives mentioned above, in certain cases, the income received by one person can be assessed in the hands of another. Persons who are liable to be assessed on behalf of other because of their association with the real recipient of the income are known as representative assessees. The expression 'representative assessee' means:

	In respect of	Representative assessee
1.	Income of a non-resident which is deemed to accrue or arise to him in India	Agent of a non-resident including a person who is treated as an agent under section 163
2.	Income of a minor, a lunatic or an idiot	Guardian or a manager of such person who is entitled to receive or is in receipt of income on such person.
3.	Income for which the Court of Wards, Administrator-General, Official Trustee, Receiver or Manager appointed by or under any order of a court, to receive such income on behalf of or for the benefit of any person	Such Court of Wards, Administrator-General, Official Trustee, Receiver or Manager so appointed
4.	Income for which a trustee is appointed under a trust deed by a duly executed instrument in writing, whether, testamentary or otherwise, to receive such income on behalf of or for the benefit of any person	Such trustee or trustees so appointed
5.	Income for which a trustee is appointed under an oral trust to receive such income on behalf of or for the benefit of any person	Such trustee or trustees so appointed

Every representative assessee is deemed to be an assessee under the Income-tax Act.

A trust which is not declared by a duly executed instrument in writing (including a Wakf deed which is valid under the Mussalman Wakf Validating Act, 1913) shall be deemed to be a trust declared by a duly executed instrument in writing if a statement in writing signed by the trustee or trustees and setting out the purpose or purposes of the trust, particulars of the trustee or trustees, the beneficiary or beneficiaries and the trust property, is prepared and forwarded to the Assessing Officer within the specified time limit. The specified time-limit will be three months from date of the declaration of the trust. [Explanation 1]

For this purpose, the item 'oral trust' means a trust which is not declared by a duly executed instrument in writing including any Wakf deed and which is also not deemed under Explanation 1 to be a trust declared by a duly executed instrument in writing. [Explanation 2]

Clarification regarding liability and status of Official Assignees under the Income-tax Act, 1961 [Circular No. 4/2019, dated 28-01-2019]

Under provisions of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, 1909 and the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, where an order of Insolvency is passed against a debtor by the concerned Court, property of the debtor gets vested with the Court appointed Official Assignee. The Official Assignee then realizes property of the insolvent and allocates it amongst the creditors of the insolvent. Consequentially, Official Assignee has the responsibility to handle income-tax matters of the estate assigned to him.

In this regard, a clarification has been sought regarding applicability of section 160(1)(iii) which applies on a 'Representative Assessee' in the case of an Official Assignee. Further, clarity regarding status of the Official Assignee's i.e. their fallibility in the appropriate category of 'persons', as defined in section 2(31), has also been sought.

As per provisions of section 160(1)(iii), a 'Representative Assessee' amongst other situations specified therein, becomes liable in respect of any income which the Assignee receives or is entitled to receive while managing the property for benefit of any person. As per the two insolvency Acts, Official Assignee manages the property of the debtor for the benefit of the creditors. Further, the Insolvency Act, 1909, in unambiguous terms, provides that an insolvent ceases to have an ownership interest in the estate once an order of adjudication is made under section 17 of the Insolvency Act.

Thus, it is clarified by the CBDT that since Official Assignee does not receive the income or manage the property on behalf of the debtor, they cannot be considered as a 'Representative Assessee' of the debtor under the Act while computing the tax-liability arising from the estate of the debtor.

As property of the insolvent is vested with the Official Assignee as per specific provisions of the Act/Law regulating functioning of the Official Assignee's, they have to be treated as a 'juristic entity' for purposes of the Income-tax Act. Hence, it is clarified by the CBDT that for purpose of discharge of tax-liability under the Act, the status of Official Assignees is that of an 'artificial juridical person' as prescribed in section 2(31)(vii), not being one of the 'persons' falling in section 2(31)(i) to (vi).

Therefore, Official Assignee is required to file income-tax return electronically in the ITR Form applicable to 'artificial juridical person' separately for each of the estate of the insolvent and the income shall be taxed as per the rates applicable in a particular year to an 'artificial juridical person'.

In view of the above position, Official Assignees would have to obtain a separate PAN for each of the estate of the insolvent.

(2) Liability of representative assessee [Section 161]: Every representative assessee has the same responsibilities, duties and liabilities as if the income were being received by or accruing to or in favour of him beneficially. He is liable to be assessed in his own name in respect of such income but the assessment is deemed to have been made upon him in his representative capacity. The tax is levied on and is recovered from such an assessee, in like manner and to the same extent as it would have been levied upon and recovered from the person represented by him.

Where any income in respect of which the trustee, appointed under a trust declared by a duly executed instrument in writing whether testamentary or otherwise, including any valid wakf deed, is liable as a representative assessee, consists or includes profits and gains of business, tax shall be charged on the whole of the income in respect of such a person at the "maximum marginal rate".

However, this provision will not apply in cases where such profits and gains are receivable under a trust declared by any person by will exclusively for the benefit of any relative dependent on him for support and maintenance and such trust is the only trust so declared by him.

If certain income is assessed in the hands of any person in the capacity of representative assessee, the same income shall not be assessed in his hands under any other provision of the Act [Section 161(2)].

(3) Right of a representative assessee to recover tax paid [Section 162]: Every representative assessee who pays any amount under the Act, is entitled to recover the sum so paid from the person on whose behalf he had paid it or to adjust it against any moneys in his possession, but belonging to the other persons. The representative assessee has the right to retain out of the moneys in his representative capacity, an amount equal to any sum paid or payable by him under the Act in addition to the right to recover the same from the beneficial owner of the income.

Any representative assessee or any person who apprehends that he may be assessed in respect of any other person (principal) as a representative assessee, has the right to retain out of the money payable by him to such other person, amount to the extent of his estimated liability.

In case of disagreement between the principal and representative assessee, such representative assessee, may secure from the Assessing Officer a certificate stating the amount to be so retained pending final settlement of the liability. The certificate so obtained shall be treated as warrant authorising retention of the amount.

The amount recoverable from such representative assessee at the time of final settlement shall not exceed the amount specified in such certificate. However, where representative assessee holds, in his hands, any additional assets of the principal at the time of final settlement, then the Assessing Officer may initiate the recovery of the balance tax liability of the principal from such representative to the extent of assets hold by him.

(4) Statutory agent of non-residents [Section 163]: An agent is considered a representative assessee but only if he is the agent of non-resident person. According to section 163, an agent, in relation to a non-resident person, includes any person in India:

(i) who is employed by or on behalf of the non-resident;

(ii) who is having any business connection with the non-resident;

(iii) from or through whom the non-resident is in receipt of any income, whether directly or indirectly;

(iv) who is trustee of the non-resident; and any other person who (whether resident or non-resident) has acquired a capital asset in India by means of a transfer from the non-resident.

In the first four cases stated above, the person sought to be assessed as the agent of a non-resident must necessarily be in India whereas it need not be so in the fifth case. Thus, a non-resident may be treated as the agent of another non-resident. The appointment of the agent may be made any time before or after the expiry of the relevant previous year. An agent of a non- resident may be appointed under this section even if at the date of such appointment, the non-resident is not alive.

According to the proviso to this section, where transactions are carried on in the ordinary course of business through a broker in India and the broker does not deal directly with or on behalf of a non-resident principal but deals with or through a non-resident broker, the broker in India cannot be treated as statutory agent in respect of the income arising to the non-resident from such transactions. Thus, where bona fide hedging transactions take place through a broker in India and a foreign broker acting for an undisclosed principal, the Indian broker cannot be deemed to be agent of the foreign principal. But generally a broker is not deemed to be the agent of a non-resident person so long as he functions exclusively in his capacity as a broker.

For the purposes of section 163(1), the expression "business connection" shall have the meaning assigned to it in Explanation 2 to clause (i) of section 9(1) of the Income-tax Act, 1961. [Explanation to section 163(1)]

Before a person can be treated as an agent of a non-resident he must be given a reasonable opportunity of being heard by the Assessing Officer as to his liability to be so treated.

22.3 TAXATION OF DISCRETIONARY TRUSTS [SECTION 164(1)]

Section 164 deals with taxation of trustees of discretionary trusts. This section applies in the case of a representative assessee referred to in clause (iii) or clause (iv) of sub-section (1) of section 160 in a case where any income or part thereof is not specifically receivable on behalf of or for the benefit of any one person or where the individual shares of the persons on whose behalf or for whose benefit such income or such part thereof is receivable are indeterminate or unknown.

The representative assessees referred to in clauses (iii) and (iv) of section 160(1) are the Court of Wards, the Administrator General, the Official Trustee or any receiver or manager including any person whatever his designation who in fact manages the property on behalf of another, appointed by or under any order of a Court and a trustee appointed under a trust declared by a duly executed instrument in writing whether testamentary or otherwise (including any Wakf Validating Act, 1913).

Such a discretionary trust will be liable to tax at the maximum marginal rate of income-tax on their entire income.

With a view to obviating hardship in genuine cases where the circumstances are such that tax evasion could not be considered to be main purpose of creating a trust, certain exceptions have been specified where the trust would not be taxed at the maximum marginal rate. The exceptions are as under:

(1) Where none of the beneficiaries has any other income chargeable to tax exceeding the maximum amount not chargeable to income-tax in the case of an AOP and none of the beneficiaries is a beneficiary under any other trust; or

(2) Where the discretionary trust is created under a will and such trust is the only trust so created under the will.

(3) In case of a discretionary trust created prior to 1.3.1970 by a non-testamentary instrument if the Assessing Officer is satisfied that the trust was so created bona fide exclusively for benefit of the dependent relatives of settlor or where the settlor is a H.U.F. for the benefit of the members of such families in circumstances where such relatives or members are mainly dependent on the settlor for their support and maintenance.

(4) In cases where the income is receivable by the trustee on behalf of provident fund, superannuation fund, gratuity fund, pension fund or any other fund created bona fide by a person carrying on a business or profession exclusively for the benefit of persons employed in such business or professions.

In the above four cases the income of the trustees will not be taxed at the marginal rate but at the rate applicable to the income of an association of persons.

Where any income in respect of which a trustee appointed under a trust declared by a duly executed instrument in writing whether testamentary or otherwise, is liable as a representative assessee consists of or includes profits and gains of business, the above concessional treatment i.e. assessing the income at the rate applicable to an AOP will apply only if such profits and gains are receivable under a trust declared by any person by will exclusively for the benefit of any relative dependent on him for support and maintenance and such trust is the only trust so declared by him.

For the purposes of these provisions, a trust under which a discretionary power is given to the trustees, to decide the allocation of the income every year or a right is given to the beneficiary to exercise the option to receive the income or not each year will all be regarded as discretionary trusts and assessed accordingly. This is made clear in Explanation 1 to section 164 which provides as under.

(a) Any income in respect of which the Court of Wards, the Administrator General, the Official Trustee, receiver, manager, trustee or mutawalli appointed under a Wakf deed is liable as a representative assessee or any part thereof shall be regarded as not being specifically receivable on behalf or for the benefit of any person unless the person on whose behalf or for whose benefit such income or such part thereof is receivable during the previous year is expressly stated in the order of the Court or the instruments of trust or wakf deed, as the case may be, and is identifiable as such on the date of such order, instrument or deed. For this purpose, it is not necessary that the beneficiary in the relevant previous year should be actually named in the order of the Court or the instrument of trust or wakf deed, all that is necessary is that the beneficiary should be identifiable with reference to the order of the Court or the instrument of trust or wakf deed on the date of such order instrument or deed.

(b) The individual shares of the person on whose behalf or for whose benefit such income or part thereof is receivable will be regarded as indeterminate or unknown unless the individual shares of such persons are expressly stated in the order of the court or the instrument of trust or wakf deed, as the case may be, and are ascertainable as such on the date of such order, instrument or deed.

This explanation seeks to prevent trustees and beneficiaries from manipulating the arrangements in such a manager that a discretionary trust is converted into a specific trust whenever it suits them tax-wise.

(1) Income from property held under trust wholly for charitable or religious purposes [Section 164(2)]: In case the income, in respect of which the shares of the beneficiaries are indeterminate or unknown, is derived from property held under trust wholly for charitable or religious purpose or which is of the nature referred to in section 2(24)(iia) [voluntary contributions received by a trust] or which is of the nature referred to in sub-section (4A) of section 11 [business income received by a trust], the tax shall be charged on so much of the income as is not exempt under section 11 or section 12 as if the income not so exempt were the income of an association of persons.

However, where the whole or any part of the relevant income is not exempt under section 11 or section 12 because any income thereof is for the benefit of prohibited persons or the rules with regard to investments in specified channels have not been followed, tax shall be charged on the relevant income or part of relevant income at the maximum marginal rate.

(2) Income from property held under trust partly for charitable or religious purposes and partly for other purposes [Section 164(3)]: In case the income is derived from property held under trust partly for charitable or religious purposes and partly for other purposes or which is of the nature referred to in section 2(24)(iia) (voluntary contributions received by a trust) or which is of the nature referred to in sub-section (4A) of section 11 (business income received by a trust) and the individual share of the beneficiaries in the income applicable to purposes other than charitable or religious purposes is not known, tax liability will be the aggregate of the following:

(a) the tax which would be chargeable on that part of the relevant income which is applicable to charitable or religious purposes (as reduced by the income, if any, which is exempt under section 11 as if such part (or such part so reduced) were the total income of the association of persons; and

(b) the tax on that part of income which is applicable to purposes other than charitable or religious and in respect of which shares of beneficiaries are indeterminate or unknown, at the maximum marginal rate.

However, in the following cases, income will be charged to tax as if it were income of an association of persons:

(a) where none of the beneficiaries has any other income chargeable to tax exceeding the maximum amount not chargeable to income-tax in the case of an AOP and none of the beneficiaries is a beneficiary under any other trust; or

(b) where the trust is created by will and such trust is the only trust so declared by him; and

(c) where the trust is a non-testamentary one created before March 1, 1970 for the exclusive benefit (to the extent it is not utilised for charitable or religious purposes) or relatives of the settler mainly dependent on the settler for their support or maintenance or where settler is a Hindu undivided family, for the exclusive benefit of its members so dependent upon it.

Where the relevant income consists of or includes profits and gains of business, the preceding concessional method of taxation shall apply only if the income is receivable under a trust declared by any person by will exclusively for the benefit of any relative dependent on him for support and maintenance and such trust is the only trust so declared by him.

Where the whole or any part of the relevant income is not exempt under section 11 or section 12 because any income thereof enures to the benefit of prohibited persons or the rules with regard to investment in specified channels have not been followed, tax shall be charged on the relevant income or part of relevant income at the maximum marginal rate.

(3) Taxation of Oral Trusts [Section 164A]: Oral Trust is a trust which is not declared by a duly executed instrument in writing. As per section 164A, any income which a trustee receives or is entitled to receive on behalf of or for the benefit of any person under an oral trust will be chargeable to income tax at the maximum marginal rate.

However, such trust shall be deemed to be a trust declared by a duly executed instrument in writing if a statement in writing, signed by the trustee or trustees, setting out the purpose or purposes of the trust, particulars as to the trustee or trustees, the beneficiary or beneficiaries and the trust property, is forwarded to the Assessing Officer within three months from the date of declaration of the trust. In such a case, the income would be assessable at the rates applicable to the total income of beneficiaries.

(4) Case where part of trust income is chargeable [Section 165]: In cases where only same portion of the trust income to which the beneficiary or beneficiaries is/are entitled is taxable and the other portion is not taxable, the taxable portion of the income received by him from the trust as a beneficiary shall be only such portion thereof as bears to the whole income of the trust. In other words, where a part only of the trust income is chargeable to tax under this Act, the beneficiaries' share of the income should be taken to be that derived proportionately from the chargeable and non-chargeable portions of the trust income and should be assessed accordingly in the hands of trustee/s.

22.4 DIRECT ASSESSMENT OR RECOVERY NOT BARRED [SECTION 166]

In case of a beneficiary or the person on whose behalf or for whose income is receivable is received by any other person, then such beneficiary or the person on whose behalf or for whose benefit, it is so received shall be liable to be assessed directly and tax can also be recovered from him.

22.5 REMEDIES AGAINST PROPERTY IN CASES OF REPRESENTATIVE ASSESSEES [SECTION 167]

The Assessing Officer shall have the same remedies against all property of any kind vested in or under the control or management of any representative assessee as he would have against the property of any person liable to pay any tax irrespective of the fact whether the demand is raised against the representative assessee or against the beneficiary direct.

22.6 EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS [SECTIONS 168 AND 169]

(1) Who is an executor or administrator?: Executor is a person appointed to carry out to carry out the instructions and wishes of the deceased and to administrate the estate of a deceased person. The executor is appointed by the testator of the will (the individual who makes the will). An administrator is a person appointed by competent authority to administer the estate of a deceased person when there is no executor

Executor includes an administrator or other person administering the estate of a deceased person. [Explanation to section 168]

(2) Chargeability of income in the hands of executor: Where executors and administrators or other persons have been appointed to administer the estate of a deceased, the income arising from such an estate shall be chargeable to tax in the hands of the executor or executors, as the case may be.

In case there is one executor - If there is one executor the assessment shall be made on him in the status of an individual.

In case of more than one executor - If on the other hand, there are more executors than one, then the assessment will be made on them in the status of an association of persons.

The residential status of the executor shall be determined on the basis of the residential status of the deceased person during the previous year in which his death took place.

(3) Separate assessments on executor: The assessment of an executor shall be made separately from any assessment that may be made on him in respect of his own income.

Separate assessment shall be made on the executor or executors on the total income of each completed previous year or part thereof as is included in the period from the date of death of the deceased to the complete distribution to the beneficiaries of the estate according to their several interests.

The income chargeable in the hands of the executor or administrator is the income of the period commencing from the date of the death of the deceased. Any income in respect of any period prior to the date of death i.e., from the first day of the accounting year and ending with the date of death should be assessed in the hands of the legal representative under section 159.

(4) Income applied for the benefit of specific legatee to be excluded from total income of executor: In computing total income of any previous year, any income of the estate of that previous year which is distributed or applied to the benefit of any specific (but not residuary) legatee of the estate during that previous year shall be excluded from the computation of the total income of that previous year assessed in the hands of the executors. The income so excluded shall, however, be included in the total income of the previous year of the 'specific legatee' himself.

However, where the executors apply a portion of the income received by them from the estate in a particular way pursuant to the directions of the testator or other legal obligations, it is merely an application of income and would not entitle the executors to claim any deduction in respect of the income so applied. Thus, payment of the cost of the probate, death duties and other debts due to the State or periodic payments to the beneficiaries (other than the specific legatees) property of the testator or to a Court cannot be excluded in computing the executor's chargeable income from the estate

Under the general law when an executor gives his assent to a specific legatee, the title of the legatee relates back to the date of death and consequently the income arising after the death and before the asset belong to the legatee is taxable in his hands but not as the income of the executor. However, it is only the income distributed to or applied for the benefit of any specific legatee during the previous year which should be excluded from the executors' total income. In other words, if the income is not so distributed or applied in the previous year, it would be taxable as part of the income of the executor. If the executor is also the sole beneficiary it does not necessarily follow that he receives the income in the latter capacity.

If the legatee is a residuary legatee, the income from the residue is the income of the executor taxable in his hands so long as the estate has not been completely administered; it is only after the estate is fully administered and the net residue is ascertained that the residuary legatee gets a title and the income, therefore, can be said to accrue to him and can be taxed in his hands. This principle would apply irrespective of the fact whether the residue is settled in trust for a life tenant or is bequeathed absolutely and it would apply even if a part of the income of the estate had been actually paid on account to the residuary legatee pending the administration of the estate. However, the administration may be regarded as completed, the executor's assent to the residuary legacy as valid and the legatee's title as established, although some liabilities due by the estate may remain undischarged.

(5) Right of executor to recover tax paid: According to section 169, the rights of the executors for retention and reimbursement or for the recovery of the tax paid by them are the same as those of representative assessees under section 162 i.e., the executor will be able to recover such tax from the estate or from the persons on whose behalf it is paid.

22.7 LIABILITY OF SUCCESSOR TO BUSINESS IN RESPECT OF TAX CHARGEABLE FROM THE PREDECESSOR [SECTION 170]

(1) Assessment of successor and predecessor: Where a person carrying on any business, profession, or vocation is succeeded by another person who continues to carry on that business or profession, both the successor and the person who is succeeded to (hereinafter called the predecessor) shall be assessed in respect of the actual share to which he is separately entitled in his income, profits and gains of the previous year. Thus, the predecessor in business would be assessable in respect of the income of the year of succession upto the date of succession while the successor would be assessable in respect of the income of that year after the date of succession. Accordingly, the income of the year in which the succession takes place is to be apportioned between the predecessor and the successor with the share of each. The income must be computed separately and each must be granted the deductions and allowance applicable to him. The assessment on each of these persons must be separate and distinct.

(2) Assessment when predecessor cannot be found: Where the predecessor cannot be found, the assessment of

- the income of the year in which the succession took place up to the date of succession and
- of the one year preceding the year of succession

should be made on the successor in like manner and to the same extent as it would have been made on the predecessor, and all the provisions of the Act shall apply accordingly.

(3) Recovery of sum payable by predecessor from the successor: If the assessment has already been made on the predecessor for either or both of the years aforesaid, but the sum payable in pursuance of each assessment cannot be recovered from the predecessor or any person, the sum payable by the predecessor shall be payable and recoverable by the successor. Successor shall be entitled to recover the full amount of sum paid by him from the predecessor.

Under this section, the Assessing Officer is required to record a finding that the sum in respect of the income of the year of succession or the preceding year cannot be recovered from the predecessor, before seeking to recover such sum from the successor.

(4) Predecessor income includes capital gain by virtue of succession: The successor's liability to tax arises also in respect of any gain (e.g., capital gains) accruing to the predecessor from the transfer of the business or profession as a result of the succession. [Explanation to section 170]

22.8 INCOME EARNED IN A FINANCIAL YEAR ASSESSED IN THE SAME FINANCIAL YEAR - EXCEPTIONS TO THE GENERAL RULE [SECTIONS 174 TO 176]

Generally, the assessment year is always ahead of the previous year. In other words, income which is earned during one financial year is not charged to tax in that very same year but in the next following financial year. To this general rule, there are certain exceptions which are as under:

(1) Persons leaving India [Section 174]

Where it appears to the Assessing Officer that any individual may leave India during the current financial year or shortly after its expiry and that there is no present intention of his returning to India, the Assessing Officer may proceed to assess his total income for the period comprised in the current financial year i.e. the total income of the period from the expiry of the last previous year and if a previous year has already been determined in his case upto the probable date of his departure.

The total income of each completed previous year or part thereof including such period shall be chargeable to tax at the rates in force in that assessment year and separate assessment must be made in respect of each such completed previous year or part thereof. The Assessing Officer is entitled to estimate the income of the individual leaving India for such period or part thereof in cases where his income cannot be readily determined in the manner provided in the Act for the computation of income under each head.

For the purposes of making this assessment, the Assessing Officer may serve a notice upon the assessee requiring him to furnish within such time (not being less than seven days), as may be specified in the notice, a return under section 142(1)(i) setting forth his total income for each completed previous year comprised in the period of assessment, and his estimated total income for any part of the period. If an assessee does not furnish the return as required by the notice of the Assessing Officer, a best judgment assessment must be made on him under section 144; non-compliance with the requirements of the notice may also attract liability to penalty under section 271.

The tax chargeable on any, individual under the section shall be over and above the tax, if any, chargeable under any other provision of the Act.

Assessment under this section may be made even on the income of the period beyond the expiry of the assessment year if the probable date of the assessee's departure is after the expiry of the assessment year. In addition to the issue of notice for making an assessment under this section, the Assessing Officer may as well issue notice under sections 142(1)(i) and 148(1) requiring him to furnish a return and other relevant information within such period being not less than seven days, as he may think fit. Thus, the Assessing Officer is empowered to make more assessment than one on a person leaving India before his departure from India.

(2) AOP or BOI or Artificial Juridical Person formed for a particular event or purpose [Section 174A]

Section 174A provides for accelerated assessments in cases of certain AOP, BOI etc. If such AOP, BOI etc. is formed or established for a particular event or purpose and the Assessing Officer apprehends that the AOP/BOI is likely to be dissolved in the same year or in the next year, the Assessing Officer can make assessment of the income upto the date of dissolution as income of the relevant assessment year. The proceedings in this case shall be on the same basis as contained in section 174 which deals with accelerated assessment of persons leaving India.

(3) Persons trying to alienate their assets [Section 175]

If it appears to the Assessing Officer during any current assessment year that any person is likely to charge, sell, transfer, dispose of or otherwise part with any of his assets with a view to avoiding payment of the whole or any part of his liability under the Income-tax Act, the total income of such person, for the period from the expiry of the previous year for that assessment year to the date when the Assessing Officer commences proceedings under this section shall be chargeable to tax in that assessment year itself. The proceedings in this case also shall be on the same basis as contained in section 174 which deals with accelerated assessment of persons leaving India.

(4) Discontinuance of business or profession [Section 176]

Where any business or profession is discontinued in any assessment year, an assessment may be made in that very year of the income from business for the period between the expiry of the previous year relevant to that assessment year and the date of discontinuance, in addition to the assessment, if any, made on the income, profits or gains of the earlier previous year or years. Thus, the Assessing Officer has an option to make a premature assessment of the profits earned up to the date of discontinuance in the year of discontinuance instead of the usual financial year.

Discontinuance and dissolution of business or profession by an association or a firm do not fall within the provisions of section 176 as they are dealt with under sections 177 and 189 respectively.

(i) Meaning of discontinuance of business: The term 'discontinuance' used in this context, refers to complete cessation of the business instead of a mere change of ownership or change in the constitution of firm. A change of ownership may involve succession and, for purpose of this section, a business must be regarded as being continued despite successive changes in its ownership. Since succession and discontinuance are two mutually exclusive concepts there cannot be a discontinuance in cases where there is succession. If a part of the business of an assessee is dropped owing to its non-profitable nature, either permanently or temporarily, it would not imply that the business has been discontinued. In other words, inactivity in trade does not lead to the conclusion that the trade has been discontinued. There may be cases where the trade may be carried on even after the dissolution of the firm or the liquidation of the company. The amalgamation of two separate and independent business belonging to two distinct owners may result in the discontinuance of those business and the change of ownership. Where the business of a joint family or a firm is split up on partition of the family or the dissolution of the firm and the business is divided into branches or portions amongst the members, it would be a case of discontinuance of the old business even if some or all the members carry on their business in the same premises and take advantages of the old business connections. This is because of the fact that in such a case of the assessee i.e., the family or the firm, has ceased to carry on the business and their is no succession insofar as the integrity of the business is not preserved as was held in Sait Nagjee Purshotam and Co. Vs. C.I.T. (1964) 51 I.T.R. 489 (S.C.).

(ii) Meaning of discontinuance of profession: In the case of a profession a firm may discontinue its profession though its patterns may remain in the profession and vice versa. Where a professional man joins a firm, he does not cease to carry on his profession and only when he retires from the firm and ceases to practice once and for all he would be said to have discontinued his profession even though the firm in which he was a partner might continue to function after his retirement with or without new partners. In order to constitute proper discontinuance of the profession for purposes of this section it is not essential that there should be a complete cessation of the professional practice for the rest of man's life. For instance, an advocate would be said to have discontinued his professional practice when he takes up a full-time assignment as a judge or a legal adviser; but after retirement or resignation from the service he is entitled to return to his professional practice again.

(iii) Separate assessment of each year: The total income of each completed previous year or part thereof included in the period for which assessment is to be made shall be computed separately and shall be chargeable to tax at the rate or rates in force in respect of each of the relevant assessment years.

(iv) Notice to Assessing Officer: Any person discontinuing his business or profession must necessarily give notice to the Assessing Officer of the fact of discontinuance within fifteen days from the date thereof. Failure to give this notice would entail the levy of penalty under section 272.

(v) Income received after discontinuance: In the case of discontinuing any business or profession on account of the cessation of the profession by, or on the retirement or death of the person carrying on profession, any sum received in any year after the date of discontinuance is deemed to be the income of the recipient and charged to tax accordingly in the year of receipt in his hands as if the amount would have been included in his total income if it had been received before the discontinuance.

The other procedural provisions in regard to service of notice, mode of assessment, collection of tax etc. are the same as those applicable to a person leaving India, as discussed earlier.

22.9 LIABILITIES ARISING WHEN AN ASSOCIATION CARRYING ON BUSINESS IS DISSOLVED OR BUSINESS IS DISCONTINUED [SECTION 177]

(1) Where any business or profession carried on by an association of persons had been discontinued or where an association of persons is dissolved, the Assessing Officer is bound to make an assessment of the total income of the association of persons as if no such discontinuance has taken place. Consequently, all the provisions of the Act, including those relating to the levy of penalty or any other sum chargeable under the Act, apply to such an assessment.

(2) If the Assessing Officer or the Commissioner (Appeals) in the course of any proceeding under the Act, in respect of any association of persons is satisfied that the association of persons is guilty of any of the acts attracting the provisions of sections 270 to 275, he may impose or direct the imposition of a penalty in accordance with those sections.

(3) Every person who was at the time of discontinuance or dissolution a member of the association of persons, and the legal representative of any such member who is deceased, shall be jointly and severally liable for the amount of tax penalty or other sum payable and all the provisions of the Act, so far as may be, shall apply to any such assessment, imposition of penalty etc.

(4) Where the dissolution or discontinuance had taken place after the commencement of any proceeding under the Act, the proceeding may be continued against the member of the association immediately prior to the discontinuance or dissolution and the legal representative of any deceased member from the stage at which they stood at the time of discontinuance or dissolution. The liability of the legal representative of any deceased member shall, however, be limited to the extent to which the estate is capable of meeting the liability. But if the legal representative, while his tax liability remains undischarged, creates a charge on or disposes off or parts with any of the assets of the estate of the deceased which are, or may, come into his possession, this personal liability shall, however, be limited to the value of the assets so charged, disposed of or parted with.

22.10 COMPANIES UNDER LIQUIDATION [SECTIONS 178 AND 179]

(1) In the case of all companies [Section 178]

(i) Notice to Assessing Officer: Every person

(a) who is the liquidator of any company which is being wound up, whether under the orders of a Court or otherwise, or

(b) who has been appointed as the receiver of any assets of a company is bound under a statutory obligation to give notice of his appointment as liquidator or receiver, as the case may be. This notice may be given within thirty days of his appointment to the Assessing Officer having jurisdiction to assess the income of the company.

(ii) Information of tax due by the Assessing Officer: The Assessing Officer, in his turn is bound after making such enquiries or calling for such information as he may deem fit, to notify to the liquidator, within three months from the date of receipt of the notice of appointment, of the amount which in his opinion would be sufficient to provide for any tax which is then or likely thereafter to become payable by the company.

(iii) Restriction on liquidator to part with assets: The liquidator is debarred from parting with the assets of company and its properties in his hands until he is notified by the Assessing Officer of the amount which will be sufficient to provide for any tax which is then, or is likely thereafter, to become payable by the company except with the prior approval of

- the Principal Chief Commissioner or
- Chief Commissioner or
- Principal Commissioner or
- Commissioner

and on being so notified, shall asides an amount equal to the amount notified.

However, the above restriction of debarring the liquidator from parting with assest or properties shall not be applicable on

- payment of the tax payable by the company,
- payment to secured creditors whose debts are entitled under law to priority of payments over the debts due to the Government on the date of liquidation and
- meeting such costs and expenses of the winding up of the company as are, in the opinion of the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner or Principal Commissioner or the Commissioner, reasonable.

(iv) Consequences of failure to give notice or set aside the tax due by the liquidator: If the liquidator fails to notify the Assessing Officer of his appointment within the time specified or fails to set aside the amount intimated by the Assessing Officer as being sufficient to provide for the tax liability of the company or parts with any of the assets or property of the company in his hands in contravention of the above provisions, he shall be personally liable for payment of the tax which the company would be liable to pay.

However, if the amount of any tax payable by the company is notified by the Assessing Officer, the personal liability of the liquidator under this sub-section shall be to the extent of such amount.

Failure to comply with the above requirement would be an offence punishable under section 276A.

Where there are more liquidators than one, their obligations and liabilities under this section are joint and several.

(v) Overrides other laws except IBC, 2016: The provisions of this section have the effect of over-riding anything to the contrary contained under the Companies Act or any other law for the time being in force and apply to all companies, public or private except the provisions of Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code, 2016.

(2) In the case of private companies [Section 179]

(i) Liability of directors: Where any tax due from a private company in respect of any income of any previous year or from any other company in respect of any income of any previous year during which such other company was a private company cannot be recovered, then, every person who was director of a private company at any time during the relevant previous year shall be jointly and severally liable for the payment of the tax unless he proves that the non-recovery cannot be attributed to any gross neglect, misfeasance or breach of duty on his part in relation to the affairs of the company.

The personal liability imposed by this section on the directors of a private company shall have the effect of over-riding any provision under the Companies Act, 2013 by which the liability of the directors is reduced or curtailed. Thus, personal liability can be imposed by the Assessing Officer on a direction even without any adjudication by a Court.

(ii) Meaning of Tax Due: For the purposes of this section, “tax due” includes penalty, interest or any other sum payable under the Income-tax Act, 1961.

EXERCISE

Question 1

"NEPTUNE" is a shipliner, used in carrying passengers and cargo, owned by M/s Thomas & Thomas of U.K. The ship carried the passengers and cargo in June, 2019 from Singapore to Chennai and vice versa and collected charges thereof amounting to ₹ 200 lacs. It left Chennai port on 15.6.2019 for its journey to Korea. No other journey to India was undertaken by any of the vessels of the company during the year ended on 31.3.2020. The non-resident company had authorized its Indian agent to comply with the income tax provisions.

You are consulted by the company to explain about the procedure as to return of income to be filed and the period within which the assessment thereof will be completed by the Assessing Officer.

Answer

M/s. Thomas & Thomas of U.K shall be required to file the return of income in India for the journey of its ship before it leaves for onward journey to Korea.

However, as per the proviso to section 172(3), where the Assessing Officer is satisfied that it is not possible for the master of the ship to furnish the return before the departure of the ship from the port, and if satisfactory arrangements have been made for filing of return and payment of tax by the authorised agent in India, he may permit filing of return within 30 days of departure of the ship.

Section 172(4A) provides a time limit of 9 months for completion of assessment in such cases. The period of 9 months is reckoned from the end of the financial year in which the return under section 172(3) is furnished.

Question 2

The directors of a private company are personally liable to pay the income tax due from the company but their liability does not extend towards interest and penalty payable by the company. Discuss.

Answer

Section 179 contains the provisions relating to the liability of directors of a private company in liquidation in respect of tax due from the company. Where any tax due from a private company in respect of income of any previous year or from any other company in respect of any income of any previous year during which such other company was a private company cannot be recovered, then, every person who was a director of such company at any time during the relevant previous year shall be jointly and severally liable for the payment of such tax. However, the director shall not be so liable if he proves that the non-recovery cannot be attributed to any gross neglect, misfeasance or breach of duty on his part in relation to the affairs of the company.

Explanation to section 179 clarifies that the expression "tax due" includes penalty, interest or any other sum payable under the Act. Therefore, the directors liability is not confined to tax alone but extends to penalty, interest or any other sum payable by the company.

Question 3

In respect of the taxes due from a private limited company, which could not be recovered from it, the Tax Recovery Officer attached the properties of an erstwhile director for recovery thereof. It was contended by the director that a notice under section 156 had not been served on him and therefore, the proceedings for recovery were not valid. What is the correct legal position?

Answer

The liability of a director of a private limited company for arrears due from the company is provided in section 179. There is no necessity to issue a notice to a director, because the position of a person on whom liability is fastened is equated to that of an 'assessee' in default. For the purpose of section 220(4), the person held liable under section 179 would be deemed to be an assessee-in-default. This may be contrasted with the arrears of a partnership firm which may be recovered from the erstwhile partners only after issue of a notice under section 156 and a default is committed by them.

Under section 179, every person who was a director of a private limited company at any time during the relevant previous year shall be jointly and severally liable for the payment of taxes which cannot be recovered from the company, unless he proves that the non-recovery cannot be attributed to any gross negligence, misfeasance or breach of duty on his part in relation to the affairs of the company.

Note - The CBDT has, vide Circular No. 22/2017 dated 3.7.2017, clarified that in respect of receipt in the nature of repayment of loan by Non-banking Finance Companies(NBFCs) or Housing Finance Companies (HFCs), the receipt of one instalment of loan repayment in respect of a loan shall constitute a 'single transaction' as specified in clause (b) of section 269ST and all the instalments paid for a loan shall not be aggregated for the purposes of determining applicability of the provisions section 269ST.

Applicability of income-tax provisions under section 40A(3), section 269ST and Rule 114B to cash sale of agricultural produce by cultivators/agriculturists to traders [Circular No. 27/2017, dated 3-11-2017]

The provisions of section 40A(3) provide for the disallowance of expenditure exceeding ₹ 10,000 made otherwise than by an account payee cheque/draft or use of electronic clearing system through a bank account. However, Rule 6DD carves out certain exceptions from application of the provisions of section 40A(3) in some specific cases and circumstances, which inter alia, include payments made for purchase of agricultural produce to the cultivators of such produce. Therefore, no disallowance under section 40A(3) can be made if the trader makes cash purchases of agricultural produce from the cultivator.

Further, section 269ST, subject to certain exceptions, prohibits receipt of ₹ 2 lakh or more, otherwise than by an account payee cheque/draft or by use of electronic clearing system through a bank account from a person in a day or in respect of a single transaction or in respect of transactions relating to an event or occasion from a person. Therefore, any cash sale of an amount of ₹ 2 lakh or more by a cultivator of agricultural produce is prohibited under section 269ST.

Furthermore, the provisions relating to quoting of PAN or furnishing of Form No. 60 under Rule 114B do not apply to the sale transaction of ₹ 2 lakh or less.

In view of the above, it is clarified by the CBDT that cash sale of the agricultural produce by its cultivator to the trader for an amount less than ₹ 2 lakh will not -

(a) result in any disallowance of expenditure under section 40A(3) in the case of trader.

(b) attract prohibition under section 269ST in the case of the cultivator; and

(c) require the cultivator to quote his PAN/ or furnish Form No. 60.

Clarifications in respect of section 269ST [Circular No. 22/2017, Dated 03.07.2017]

With a view to promote digital economy and create a disincentive against cash economy, new section 269ST has been inserted in the Income-tax Act, 1961 vide Finance Act, 2017. The said section inter-alia prohibits receipt of an amount of two lakh rupees or more by a person, in the circumstances specified therein, through modes other than by way of an account payee cheque or an account payee bank draft or use of electronic clearing system through a bank account. Penal provisions have also been introduced by way of a new section 271DA, which provides that if a person receives any amount in contravention to the provisions of section 269ST, it shall be liable to pay penalty of a sum equal to the amount of such receipt.

Subsequently, representations were received from non-banking financial companies (NBFCs) and housing finance companies (HFCs) as to whether the provisions of section 269ST shall apply to one instalment of loan repayment or the whole amount of such repayment.

Accordingly, the CBDT has, vide this circular, clarified that in respect of receipt, in the nature of repayment of loan, by NBFCs or HFCs, the receipt of one instalment of loan repayment in respect of a loan shall constitute a 'single transaction' as specified in section 269ST(b) and all the instalments paid for a loan shall not be aggregated for the purposes of determining applicability of the provisions section 269ST.

However, the penalty shall not be imposed if the person proves that there were good and sufficient reasons for such failure. Further, any such penalty shall be imposed by the Joint Commissioner.*

(iv) Consequential amendment in the Payment and Settlement Systems Act, 2007 – This has been effected to ensure that no bank or system provider imposes any charge upon anyone, either directly or indirectly, for using the modes of electronic payment prescribed under section 269SU of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

23.4 MODE OF REPAYMENT OF CERTAIN LOANS OR DEPOSITS [SECTION 269T]

(3) the aggregate amount of the specified advances received by such person either in his own name or jointly with any other person on the date of such repayment together with interest, if any, payable on such specified advances is ₹ 20,000 or more.

Non-applicability of the above requirement in certain cases

(1) Where the repayment is made by a branch of bank or a cooperative bank, such repayment could be made by crediting the amount of such loan or deposit to the saving bank account or the current account, if any, with such branch of the person to whom such loan or deposit has to be repaid.

(2) Further, the provisions of this section shall not apply in case of repayment of any loan or deposit or specified advance taken or accepted from -

(i) Government;

(ii) any banking company, post office savings bank or co-operative bank;

(1) As a safeguard against non-realisation of revenue due to fraudulent transferring of assets by a defaulting assessee it is provided under this section that, certain transfers specified therein are deemed to be void for purpose of income-tax.

(2) Accordingly, in cases where, during the pendency of any proceeding under the Income-tax Act, 1961 or after the completion thereof, but before the service of notice by the Tax Recovery Officer any assessee creates a charge on, or parts with, the property by way of sale, mortgage, gift, exchange, or any other mode of transfer whatsoever of any of his assets in favour of any other person such a charge or transfer must be deemed to be void as against any claim in respect of any tax, penalty, interest or fine payable by the assessee as a result of the completion of the proceedings or otherwise.

(3) The charge or transfer made by the assessee, however, would not be void in case where it is made:

(6) Reference to Valuation Officer [Section 281B(4)]: For enabling determination of the fair market value of the property provisionally attached, the Assessing Officer may, make a reference to the Valuation Officer, who is required to estimate of the fair market value of the property and submit the report of such estimation to the Assessing Officer within a period of 30 days from the date of receipt of such reference.

(7) Time limit for passing order revoking the attachment of property [Section 281B(5)]: For ensuring revocation of attachment of property in lieu of bank guarantee in a time bound manner, an order revoking the attachment has to be made by the Assessing Officer within the following time period:

The provision, thus, enables tax authorities to accept returns and other documents and tax payers to accept orders, notice, etc., received from tax authorities even in cases where there are a few typographical, arithmetical or other mistakes which do not materially affect the objects with which the document was submitted by the assessee or order was issued by the department [Refer also to section 139(9)].

However, such deeming provision would not apply where the assessee has raised an objection (regarding non-service of notice or non-service of notice in time or improper service of notice) before the completion of such assessment or reassessment.

23.21 PRESUMPTION AS TO ASSETS, BOOKS OF ACCOUNT, ETC. [SECTION 292C]

(1) Under section 132(4A), it is provided that the books of account, money, bullion, jewellery or other valuable article or thing found in the possession or control of any person in the course of a search under section 132 will be presumed to belong to the said person.

(2) It is further provided that it will be presumed that -

(i) the contents of such books of account and other documents are true; and

(ii) the signature and every other part of such books of account and other documents which purport to be in handwriting of any particular person or which may reasonably be assumed to have been signed by, or to be in the handwriting of, any particular person, are in that person's handwriting, and

(iii) in the case of a document stamped, executed or attested, that it was duly stamped and executed or attested by the person by whom it purports to have been so executed or attested.

(3) The Supreme Court, in P.R. Metrani v. CIT (2006) 287 ITR 209, held that the aforesaid presumption is not available for framing regular assessment and such presumption is available only in regard to the proceedings for search and seizure under section 132. However, this decision did not reflect the correct intent of law.

(4) Therefore, section 292C was inserted to clarify that presumptions provided in section 132(4A) can be made in any proceeding under this Act.

(5) This section provides that where any books of account, other documents, money, bullion, jewellery or other valuable article or thing are or is found in the possession or control of any person in the course of a search under section 132 or survey under section 133A, it may, in any proceeding under this Act, be presumed that -

(i) such books of account, other documents, money, bullion, jewellery or other valuable article or thing belong or belongs to such person;

(ii) the contents of such books of account and other documents are true; and

(iii) the signature and every other part of such books of account and other documents which purport to be in the handwriting of any particular person or which may reasonably be assumed to have been signed by, or to be in the handwriting of, any particular person, are in that person's handwriting;

(iv) In the case of a document stamped, executed or attested, that it was duly stamped and executed or attested by the person by whom it purports to have been so executed or attested.

(6) Further, this presumption has also been extended to books of account, other documents or assets which have been delivered to the requisitioning officer in accordance with the provisions of section 132A. For this purpose, sub-section (2) provides that where any books of accounts, other documents or assets have been delivered to the requisitioning officer in accordance with the provision of section 132A then, the presumption would apply as if such books of accounts, other documents or assets which had been taken into custody from the person referred to in clause (a) or clause (b) or clause(c), as the case may be, of sub-section (1) of section 132A, had been found in the possession or control of that person in the course of a search under section 132.

23.22 AUTHORITY EMPOWERED TO GRANT AN APPROVAL UNDER THE INCOME TAX ACT, 1961 DEEMED TO HAVE POWER TO WITHDRAW THE APPROVAL GRANTED [SECTION 293C]

(1) The Central Government, CBDT and income-tax Authorities are empowered under the various provisions of the Income-tax Act to grant approval to the assessees for availing the benefit of incentives available under the Act.

(2) However, only some provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 specifically contain provisions for withdrawal of approval. In all other cases, there is no specific power to withdraw the approval granted.

(3) Therefore, section 293C provides explicitly, such power to withdraw an approval granted. This section provides that an approval granting authority (i.e. the Central Government, CBDT or income-tax authority, as the case may be) shall also have the powers to withdraw the approval at any time.

(4) However, such withdrawal can be made only after giving a reasonable opportunity to the concerned assessee of showing cause against the proposed withdrawal. Further, the reasons for withdrawal of the approval should be recorded by the concerned authority.

23.23 ACT TO HAVE EFFECT PENDING LEGISLATIVE PROVISION FOR CHARGE OF TAX [SECTION 294]

If on the 1st April in any assessment year, provision has not yet been made by a Central Act for the charging of income-tax for that assessment year, this Act shall nevertheless have effect until such provision is so made as if the provision in force in the preceding assessment year or the provision proposed in the Bill then before Parliament, whichever is more favourable to the assessee, were actually in force.

23.24 RULES [SECTIONS 295 AND 296]

Section 295 authorises the CBDT to make rules for the whole or any part of India for carrying out the purposes and to implement the provisions of the Act. The powers of the Board in this regard are subject to the supervision and control of the Central Government. The Rules framed by the Board and approved by the Central Government are required to be placed before each House of the Parliament before enforcing the same. In exercise of the powers conferred on it by this section, the Board, with the approval and sanction of the Central Government and the Parliament, has framed the Income-tax Rules, 1962 which have been amended from time to time. This section also enumerates the important matters on which rules may be framed by the Board: the rules framed under this Act have the same force of the section of the Act. The rules must be interpreted in the light of the sections under which they have been made. But the rules should be so framed as not to adversely affect or derogate from the full operative effect of the provisions of the sections. The rules must be within the term of the mandate given to the Board and must be framed in such a way as to be consistent with and supplementary to the provisions of the Act.

How does the income of a person who is trying to alienate his assets with a view to avoid tax be dealt with under the Act?

Answer

The income of a person who is trying to alienate his assets with a view to avoid tax will be dealt with as per the provisions of section 175.

Accordingly, if it appears to the Assessing Officer during any current assessment year that any person is likely to charge, sell, transfer, dispose of or otherwise part with any of his assets with a view to avoiding payment of any liability under the Income-tax Act, 1961, the total income of such person for the period from the expiry of the previous year to the date when the Assessing Officer commences proceedings under this section is chargeable to tax in that assessment year.

The total income of each completed year or part of any previous year included in such period shall be chargeable to tax at the rates in force in that assessment year and separate assessments will be made for each completed previous year or part of any previous year.

The Assessing Officer may estimate the income of such individual for such period or any part thereof, where it cannot be readily determined in the manner provided in the Act.

The tax chargeable under this section shall be in addition to tax, if any, chargeable under any other provision of the Act.

Question 2

Fearless General Finance & Investment Limited, a residuary non-banking company, accepts public deposits, issues deposit certificate and repays the same after some period of time along with interest, under different schemes run by it. Following transactions were noted from their books of account:

(i) Mr. A, an individual, has deposited ₹ 15,000 on 1st May, 2016 for 48 months by bearer cheque and another ₹ 15,000 on 30th June, 2019 in cash to purchase a new certificate of 48 months tenure.

(ii) Mr. A has applied for premature withdrawal against both the certificates and the company has paid him ₹ 16,500, by a bearer cheque, against principal and interest on 23rd March, 2020, due against his first certificate (purchased in 2016) and ₹ 15,500 in cash on 25th March, 2020, against the second certificate.

Discuss the violation of income tax provision, if any, and consequential penalty for each transaction. Will it make any difference if the certificates were held by Mr. A with his wife Mrs. A, jointly, while repaying back in cash or bearer cheque?

Answer

(i) There is no violation of section 269SS at the time of acceptance of the first deposit of ₹ 15,000 by bearer cheque on 1.5.2016, since it is not in excess of the threshold limit of ₹ 20,000. However, violation under section 269SS is attracted at the time of acceptance of the second deposit in cash on 30th June, 2019, since as on that date, there is already an outstanding deposit of ₹ 15,000 and another cash deposit of ₹ 15,000 would take the aggregate to ₹ 30,000, which exceeds the threshold limit of ₹ 20,000. Therefore, penalty under section 271D of a sum equal to the amount of deposit taken from Mr. A is attracted for failure to comply with the provisions of section 269SS.

(ii) In this case, there is a violation of the provisions of section 269T at the time of first repayment by bearer cheque on 23rd March, 2020, since on that date, the aggregate amount of deposits held by Mr. A with the non-banking company (together with interest payable on such deposits) is more than ₹ 20,000. Therefore, penalty under section 271E equal to the amount of deposit so repaid will be attracted for failure to comply with the provisions of section 269T.

However, the second repayment of ₹ 15,500 on 25th March, 2020 in cash cannot be considered as a violation of section 269T, since neither the amount of deposit with interest thereon nor the aggregate amount of deposits held by Mr. A on that date together with interest exceeds the threshold limit of ₹ 20,000.

The provisions of section 269T will be attracted at the time of first repayment of bearer cheque even if the certificate is being held by Mr. A in joint name with his wife.

Question 3

The proceedings before the Income-tax Authorities either can be attended by the assessee in person or through an authorized representative. Who can be treated as an authorized representative of the assessee?

Answer

As per section 288, the proceedings before the income-tax authorities can be attended by an assessee in person or through an authorised representative, i.e., a person authorized by the assessee in writing to appear on his behalf, being -

(i) a person who is a relative or a regular employee of the assessee; or

(ii) any officer of a Scheduled Bank in which the assessee maintains a current account or has other regular dealings; or

(iii) a legal practitioner who is entitled to practise in any civil court in India; or

(iv) a chartered accountant within the meaning of the Chartered Accountants Act, 1949 who hold a valid certificate of practice

(v) any person who has passed any accountancy examination recognized in this behalf by the CBDT for this purpose; or

(vi) any person who has acquired such educational qualifications as prescribed by the CBDT; or

(vii) any person who, before the coming into force of this Act in the Union territory of Dadra and Nagar Haveli, Goa, Daman and Diu, or Pondicherry, attended any proceedings before an income-tax authority in the said territory on behalf of any assessee otherwise than in the capacity of an employee or relative of that assessee

(viii) any person who was actually practising as an income-tax practitioner, immediately before commencement of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

Question 4

An order for A.Y. 2018-19 was passed by the Assessing Officer as per section 143(3), but the typist wrongly typed in the order, the assessment year as A.Y.2017-18 and the relevant previous year as ending on 31.3.2017. The assessee claimed in appeal that the same is an invalid order which was not accepted by the CIT (Appeals) on the ground of the error being of clerical nature. Discuss the correctness of the order of the CIT(Appeals).

Answer

Section 292B provides that no return of income, assessment, notice or summons furnished or made or issued or taken in pursuance of any of the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 shall be invalid or deemed to be invalid merely by reason of any mistake, defect or omission in such return of income, assessment or notice etc., if such return of income, assessment, notice, summons etc. is in substance and effect in conformity with or according to the intent and purpose of the Act. Therefore, a clerical mistake cannot invalidate an otherwise valid assessment. Thus, the typographical error in the assessment order as to assessment year and previous year does not make the same invalid unless established otherwise. Accordingly, the action of the CIT(Appeals) in not accepting the claim of the assessee is valid.

Question 5

"Proceedings cannot be initiated under the Act, unless a proper notice to this effect has been served upon." In this context answer:

(i) What are the prescribed modes of service of such notice?

(ii) On whom should the notice be addressed and served upon in the cases where the assessee is a dissolved firm, a deceased person and a partitioned HUF.

Answer

(i) As per section 282(1), the service of notice or summon or requisition or order or any other communication under this Act may be made by delivering or transmitting a copy thereof to the person named therein -

(1) by post or such courier services as approved by the CBDT; or

(2) in such manner as provided in the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 for the purposes of service of summons; or

(3) in the form of any electronic record as provided in Chapter IV of the Information Technology Act, 2000; or

(4) by any other means of transmission of documents as may be provided by rules made by the CBDT in this behalf.

The CBDT is empowered to make rules providing for the addresses (including the address for electronic mail or electronic mail message) to which such communication may be delivered or transmitted to the person named therein.

(ii) The service of notice in the given cases should be on the persons mentioned hereunder:-

Person	Notice to be addressed and served on
A dissolved firm	Any person who was a partner (not being a minor) immediately before dissolution.
A deceased person	The legal heirs of the deceased.
A partitioned HUF	Last Manager of the HUF, or, if he is dead, then, all adult members of the erstwhile HUF.

Question 6

"Tax Recovery Officer, can recover the arrear demands from the assessee in default out of sale proceeds of the property attached after making a proclamation". How can such proclamation be made under the Act? Is there any time limit for sale of attached immovable property? Discuss.

Answer

Manner of making a proclamation

Movable Property [Rules 38 & 39 of Schedule II to the Income-tax Act, 1961]

Where the Tax Recovery Officer orders sale of movable property, he should issue a proclamation in the language of the district, of the intended sale, specifying the time and place of sale and whether the sale is subject to confirmation or not.

The proclamation should be made by beat of drum or other customary mode, -

(a) in the case of property attached by actual seizure –

(i) in the village in which the property was seized, or, if the property was seized in a town or city, then, in the locality in which it was seized; and

(ii) at such other places as the Tax Recovery Officer may direct;

(b) in the case of property attached otherwise than by actual seizure, in such places, if any, as the Tax Recovery Officer may direct.

A copy of the proclamation should also be affixed in a conspicuous part of the office of the Tax Recovery Officer.

Immovable Property [Rule 54 of Schedule II to the Income-tax Act, 1961]

The Tax Recovery Officer shall make a proclamation for sale of immovable property at some place on or near such property by beat of drum or other customary mode. A copy of the proclamation shall be affixed on a conspicuous part of the property and also upon a conspicuous part of the office of the Tax Recovery Officer.

Where the Tax Recovery Officer directs, such proclamation shall also be published in the Official Gazette or in a local newspaper or in both, and the cost of such publication shall be deemed to be cost of the sale.

Where the property to be sold is divided into lots for the purpose of being sold separately, then it is not necessary to make a separate proclamation for each lot of property, unless in the opinion of the Tax Recovery Officer, proper notice of sale cannot otherwise be given.

Time limit for sale of attached immovable property [Rule 68B of Schedule II to the Income-tax Act, 1961]

The sale of immovable property attached has to be made on or before the expiry of 7 years from the end of the financial year in which the order giving rise to a demand of any tax, interest, fine, penalty or any other sum, for the recovery of which the immovable property has been attached,

- has become conclusive under the provisions of section 245-I (where order of settlement under section 245D(4) is deemed to be conclusive as to the matters stated therein) or
- has become final in terms of the provisions of Chapter XX (Appeals and Revision).

However, the CBDT may, for reasons to be recorded in writing, extend the aforesaid period for a further period not exceeding 3 years.

Question 7

Explain the circumstances under which the Assessing Officer can resort to provisional attachment of the property of the assessee. Also, state the period of time for which such attachment can take place.

When can the Assessing Officer revoke provisional assessment of property? Discuss.

Answer

As per the provisions of section 281B, there can be provisional attachment to protect the interest of Revenue in certain cases i.e.-

(i) The proceeding for the assessment of any income or for the assessment or reassessment of any income which has escaped assessment should be pending.

(ii) Such attachment should be necessary for the purpose of protecting the interest of Revenue in the opinion of the Assessing Officer.

(iii) The previous approval of the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner, Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, Principal Director General or Director General or Principal Director or Director has been obtained by the Assessing Officer.

(iv) The Assessing Officer, may, by an order in writing attach provisionally any property belonging to the assessee in the manner provided in the Second Schedule.

(v) Such provisional attachment shall cease to have effect after the expiry of a period of six months from the date of order made under section 281B(1). However, the period can be extended by the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner, Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, Principal Director General or Director General or Principal Director or Director, as the case may be, for the reasons to be recorded in writing for a further period or periods as he thinks fit. The total period of extension in any case cannot exceed 2 years or 60 days after the date of order of assessment or reassessment, whichever is later.

The Assessing Officer shall, by order in writing, revoke provisional attachment of a property made under section 281B(1) in a case where the assesse furnishes a guarantee from a scheduled bank, for an amount not less than the fair market value of such provisionally attached property or for an amount which is sufficient to protect the interests of the revenue.

Question 8

Mr. Biswas, a stock broker, has defaulted with regard to his income-tax payments and the Assessing Officer has attached his membership card of Stock Exchange under section 281B of the Income-tax Act, 1961. Mr. Biswas contends that the membership card is not transferable and is not his personal asset. Discuss the validity of attachment of the card by the Assessing Officer in the context of Section 281B.

Answer

The right of membership is not a private asset and it is merely a personal privilege granted to the member. It is non-transferable and incapable of alienation by the member or his legal representative except to the limited extent provided in the rules and regulations of the stock exchange and subject to the fulfillment of conditions prescribed by the stock exchange. The nomination, even if permitted, is subject to the rules and is not automatic. The right of nomination is vested in the stock exchange absolutely in the case of death of or default of a member. Thus, the membership card is not the property of the assessee and therefore cannot be attached under section 281B. It has been so held by the Apex Court in the case of Stock Exchange Ahmedabad vs. ACIT (2001) 248 ITR 209.

SIGNIFICANT SELECT CASES

1. Whether omission to issue notice under section 143(2) is a defect not curable in spite of section 292BB?

Travancore Diagnostics (P) Ltd v. Asstt. CIT (2017) 390 ITR 167 (Ker)

Facts of the case: The assessee had a diagnostic laboratory in Kollam and a branch at Kottarakara. A survey under Section 133A was conducted, consequent to which the assessee filed its return of income. On the basis of certain incriminating documents and materials unearthed during the survey, a notice under section 148 was issued. Subsequently, the incomes were assessed for assessment years 2009-10 and 2010-11 under section 143(3) read with section 147.

The assessee raised additional jurisdictional grounds before the Appellate Tribunal. The assessee contended that for the assessment year 2009-10, the assessment was completed under section 143(3) read with section 147. However, a notice under section 143(2) was not issued. The Tribunal held that in view of section 292BB, the assessee's participation in the reassessment proceedings would condone the omission to issue a notice.

Issue: Whether failure to issue notice under section 143(2) would vitiate the assessment notwithstanding the assessee's participation in the proceedings? Would section 292BB come to the rescue of the Revenue authority if they omit to issue notice under section 143(2)?

High Court's Decision: The Apex Court had, in Asstt. CIT v. Hotel Blue Moon (2010) 321 ITR 362, held that without the statutory notice under section 143(2), the Assessing Officer could not assume jurisdiction. Here, Assessing Officer recorded his inability to generate a notice as the return was not filed electronically. Such defect cannot be cured subsequently, since it is not procedural but one that goes to the root of the jurisdiction. Even though the assessee had participated in the proceedings, in the absence of mandatory notice, section 292BB cannot help the Revenue officers who have no jurisdiction, to begin with. Section 292BB helps Revenue in countering claims of assessees who have participated in proceedings once a due notice has been issued.

2. Can the Assessing Officer suo moto assume jurisdiction to declare sale of property as void under section 281?

Dr. ManojKabra v. ITO (2014) 364 ITR 541 (All)

Facts of the case: The assessee acquired a property for ₹ 7 lakhs though the stamp duty was paid in accordance with the circle rate which was ₹ 12 lakhs. Pursuant to the sale deed, the assessee took possession of the property. Prior to the sale, the income tax assessment of vendor had been completed and a certain demand was raised against him in respect of the assessment year when the sale of the property was effected. The Assessing Officer issued a notice under section 281 to show cause as to why the sale deed executed in his favour (assessee-buyer) should not be treated as a void document. The assessee-buyer contended that he was a bona fide purchaser for adequate consideration and no notice of pendency of proceedings was to known him nor was it brought to his knowledge by the seller.

The assessee placed reliance on the decision of Supreme Court in the case of TRO v. Gangadhar Vishwanath Ranade (Decd.) (1998) 234 ITR 188, where it was held that section 281 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 is only a declaratory provision and not an adjudicatory provision entitling the income-tax authority to declare a document as a void document.

High Court's Observation: The High Court observed that the issue in this case was squarely covered by above Apex Court decision which held that the legislature had no intention to confer any exclusive power or jurisdiction upon the income-tax authority to decide any question arising under section 281. The Income-tax Act, 1961, does not prescribe any adjudicatory machinery for deciding any question which may arise under section 281. In order to declare a transfer as fraudulent under section 281, an appropriate proceeding in accordance with law was required to be taken under section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. The Assessing Officer is required to file a suit for declaration to the effect that the transaction of transfer was void under section 281 of the Income-tax Act; but he himself cannot assume jurisdiction to declare the sale deed as void.

High Court's Decision: Applying the rationale of the Apex Court ruling, the High Court held that the Assessing Officer has no jurisdiction under section 281 to suo moto declare the sale as void.

1.1 INTRODUCTION

In the present age of commercial globalisation, it is a universal phenomena that Multinational Companies (MNCs) have branches/ subsidiaries/ divisions operating in more than one country. In such a situation, it is a common event for MNCs to transfer goods produced by a branch in one tax jurisdiction to an associate branch operating in another tax jurisdiction. While doing so, the MNC concerned has in mind the goal of minimizing tax burden and maximizing profits but the two tax jurisdictions/countries have also the consideration of maximizing their revenue while making laws that govern such transactions. It is an internationally accepted practice that such 'transfer pricing' should be governed by the Arm's Length Principle (ALP) and the transfer price should be the price applicable in case of a transaction of arm's length. In other words, the transaction between associates should be priced in the same way as a transaction between independent enterprises.

The principles governing the taxation of MNCs are embodied in the OECD Model Tax Convention on Income and Capital (OECD Model Convention), which serves as the basis for the bilateral income-tax treaties between OECD member countries and between OECD member and non-OECD member countries. According to these guidelines, "Transfer prices" are the prices at which an enterprise transfers physical goods and intangible property or provides services to associated enterprises. Two enterprises are "associated enterprises" if one of the enterprises participates directly or indirectly in the management, control or capital of the other or if both enterprises are under common control. Since international transfer pricing involves more than one tax jurisdiction, any adjustment to the transfer price in one jurisdiction requires a corresponding adjustment in the other jurisdiction. If a corresponding adjustment is not made, double taxation will result.

1.2 MEANING OF THE TERM "ARM'S LENGTH PRINCIPLE"

The Arm's Length Price (ALP) of a transaction between two associated enterprises is the price that would be paid if the transaction had taken place between two comparable independent and unrelated parties, where the consideration is only commercial.

The Arm's Length Principle, in the context of taxation, is explained in the OECD Model Tax Convention as under:

"Where conditions are made or imposed between two associated enterprises in their commercial or financial relations which differ from those which would be made between independent enterprises, then any profits which would, but for those conditions, have accrued to one of the enterprises, but, by reason of those conditions, have not so accrued, may be included in the profits of that enterprise and taxed accordingly."

The OECD transfer pricing guidelines provides guidance on the application of the arm's length principle in order to arrive at the proper transfer pricing range between associated enterprises. Market forces determine business relations between independent parties. The arm's length principle seeks to adjust the profits between two associated enterprises by comparing the same as if the transaction is carried out between two independent enterprises. It treats each enterprise as a separate independent entity rather than as inseparable parts of a single unified business.

1.3 SIGNIFICANCE OF ARM'S LENGTH PRINCIPLE

There are several reasons as to why the OECD member countries and other countries have adopted the arm's length principle.

Parity between MNCs and independent enterprises – A major reason is that the ALP provides broad parity of tax treatment for MNCs and independent enterprises. Since the ALP puts associated and independent enterprises on a more equal footing for tax purposes, it avoids the creation of tax advantages and disadvantages that would otherwise distort the relative competitive positions of these entities. The ALP, thus promotes the growth of international trade and investment by removing these tax considerations from economic decisions.

Determines real taxable profits - The transfer price adopted by a multinational has a direct bearing on the proportional profit it derives in each country in which it operates. If inadequate or excessive consideration is paid for the transfer of goods, services or intangible property between the members of an MNC group, the income calculated for each of those members will be inconsistent with their relative economic contributions. An 'arm's length' price – a price two independent firms operating at arm's length would agree on – is needed to determine taxable profits earned in each country. The arm's length doctrine permits the taxing authorities to rectify the accounts of the enterprise so as to reflect correctly the income that the establishment would have earned if it were an independent enterprise.

Reduction of artificial price distortion - If the ALP is not followed, an MNC will sell goods/ provide services to a controlled entity in a high tax regime at a high price (which exceeds the market price) and to an entity in a low-tax regime or a tax haven at a low price (which is lower than the market price). This would result in extreme price distortion of goods and services in the international market.

Minimization of double taxation – The ALP is an international concept and it represents the international norm. The potential for double taxation is minimized, since in international transfer pricing, adjustment to the transfer price in one tax jurisdiction requires a corresponding adjustment in the other tax jurisdiction.

Accurate measurement of economic contribution – The ALP provides accurate measurement of the fair market value of the economic contribution units of an MNC. The focus of the ALP is to ensure that the proper amount of income is attributed to where it is earned. This result in each unit of the MNC earning a return commensurate with its economic contribution and risk assumed.

1.4 PRACTICAL DIFFICULTIES IN APPLICATION OF ALP

There are, however, certain practical difficulties in applying the ALP, which are described hereunder:

True comparison difficult in certain cases – The commercial and financial conditions governing a transaction between independent enterprises are, by and large, never similar to those existing between associated enterprises. As a result, there cannot be a true comparison. The economies of scale and integration of various business activities of the associated enterprise may not be truly appreciated by arm's length principle. Further, associated enterprises may enter into transactions which independent enterprises may not enter into, like say, licensing of valuable intangible or sharing the benefits of research. The owner of an intangible may be hesitant to enter into licensing arrangements with independent enterprises for fear of the value of the intangible being degraded. In contrast, he may be prepared to offer terms that are less restrictive to associated enterprises because the use of the intangible can be closely monitored. Further, there is no risk to the overall group's profit from a transaction of this kind between members of an MNC group. In such situations, where independent enterprises seldom undertake transactions of the type entered into by associated enterprises, the ALP is difficult to apply because there is little or no direct evidence of what conditions would have been established by independent enterprises.

Availability of data and reliability of available data – There may be difficulty in getting adequate and reliable information and data in order to apply arm's length principle. The comparison of controlled and uncontrolled transactions between associated and independent enterprises usually requires a large quantum of data. Easily accessible information may be incomplete and difficult to interpret while the relevant and required information may be difficult to obtain due to geographical constraints or secrecy and confidentiality aspects. In other cases, information about an independent enterprise which could be relevant may not exist at all. Due to these difficulties, the tax administration and tax payers may have to exercise reason and judgment when applying the ALP.

Absence of market price - There must be a reasonably reliable and comparable uncontrolled market price. The ALP does not meet this condition because of the nature of the market place. A market price is an outcome of unique negotiations. It may be possible to know the price range, but it is very difficult to know the actual market price unless a market transaction actually takes place.

Absence of comparable market price for "intangible" transactions - The ALP reaches a comparable uncontrolled market price that is reasonably reliable for standard transactions where the price range is narrow and market price is certain. However, the ALP generally fails to achieve a comparable market price for transactions involving intangibles because they are unique. The unique nature of these transactions creates a very wide price range.

Administrative burden - In certain cases, the arm's length principle may result in an administrative burden for both the taxpayer and the tax administrations of evaluating significant numbers and types of cross-border transactions.

Time lag - Although an associated enterprise normally establishes the conditions for a transaction at the time it is undertaken, at some point the enterprise may be required to demonstrate that these are consistent with the arm's length principle. The tax administration may also have to engage in the verification process perhaps some years after the transactions have taken place. It may result in substantial cost being incurred by the tax payer and the tax administration. It is also difficult to appreciate the business realities which prevailed at the time when the transactions were entered into. This may lead to bias against the tax payer.

In spite of the practical difficulties listed above, OECD member countries are of the view that the ALP does provide a sound basis to appreciate the transfer pricing between associated enterprises. It has so far provided acceptable solutions to both taxpayers and the tax administrations. The experience gained so far should be effectively used to remove the practical difficulties and improve the administration.

1.5 THE INDIAN SCENARIO

(1) Transfer pricing in relation to International Transactions

In order to provide a statutory framework empowering the tax authorities to determine reasonable, fair and equitable profits and tax in respect of cross-border transactions, sections 92 to 92F had been included in Chapter X of the Income-tax Act, 1961, through the Finance Act, 2001, providing for a transfer pricing mechanism based on computation of income from cross-border transactions. The following conditions must be satisfied in order to attract the special provisions of Chapter X relating to avoidance of tax:

(i) There must be an international transaction;

(ii) Such international transaction should be between two or more associated enterprises either or both of whom are non-residents;

(iii) Such international transaction should be in the nature of:

  (a) purchase, sale or lease of tangible or intangible property; or

  (b) provision of service; or

  (c) lending or borrowing money; or

  (d) any other transaction having a bearing on the profits, income, losses or assets of such enterprise.

(iv) Further, such transaction may also involve allocation or apportionment of, or any contribution to any cost or expenses incurred or to be incurred in connection with a benefit, service or facility provided or to be provided to any one or more of the associated enterprises on the basis of mutual agreement or arrangement between such associated enterprises.

(v) Such international transaction must be done at arm's length price and if such international transaction has been done at less than the arm's length price, it shall require determination of income or apportionment of cost or expense on the basis of arm's length price.

(vi) The above adjustment should either result in an increase of income or decrease of loss returned by the assessee. In other words, the adjustment should not have the effect of reducing the income chargeable to tax or increasing the loss.

The Finance Act, 2001, has introduced provisions relating to pricing of international transaction between the assessee and associated enterprises. These provisions are contained in sections 92 to 92F of the Income-tax Act, 1961. These provisions apply to international transactions entered into with effect from 1st April, 2001. Rules 10A to 10E have been inserted in the Income-tax Rules, 1962 by a notification dated 21st August, 2001. These sections and rules of the Income-tax Act, 1961 and the Income-tax Rules, 1962, respectively, will affect all non-corporate and corporate assessees who have dealings with non-residents for import or export of goods, properties or services. In other words, price paid for import of goods, properties or services and price received for export of goods, properties or services will be subject to scrutiny by the Assessing Officer. Therefore, it is necessary to make a detailed study of these provisions. All assessees who have such dealings with non-residents will have to keep detailed records as prescribed under the Rules and will have to furnish audit report every year with the return of income about their international transactions.

The presence of multinational enterprises in India and their ability to allocate profits in different jurisdictions by controlling prices in intra-group transactions prompted the Government to set up an Expert Group to examine the issues relating to transfer pricing. There is a possibility that two or more entities belonging to the same multinational group can fix up their prices for goods and services and allocate profits among the enterprises within the group in such a way that there may be either no profit or negligible profit in the jurisdiction which taxes such profits and substantial profit in the jurisdiction which is tax haven or where the tax liability is minimum. This may adversely affect a country's share of due revenue. The increasing participation of multinational groups in economic activities in India has given rise to new and complex issues emerging from transactions entered into between two or more enterprises belonging to the same multinational group. The profits derived by such enterprises carrying on business in India can be controlled by the multinational group, by manipulating the prices charged and paid in such intra-group transactions, which may lead to erosion of tax revenue. Therefore, transfer pricing provisions have been brought in by the Finance Act, 2001 with a view to provide a statutory framework which can lead to computation of reasonable, fair and equitable profits and tax in India, in the case of such multinational enterprises.

I. Computation of income from transaction with non-resident [Section 92]: Section 92 provides that any income arising from an "international transaction" shall be computed having regard to "the arm's length price". For this purpose, the allowance for any expense or interest shall be determined on the basis of arm's length price. The section further provides that in an international transaction between two or more 'associated enterprises" when there is a mutual agreement or arrangement for the allocation or apportionment of, or any contribution to, any cost or expenses in connection with a benefit, service or facility provided to any one or more of such enterprises, the allocation of cost, expenses etc. shall be determined having regard to arm's length price of such benefit, service or facility. Similarly, the price received for exports and amounts received for services rendered to associated enterprise will be determined on the basis of arm's length price. It will be noticed that in the international transaction, the income or expense will have to be at arm's length price, if the transaction is between associated enterprises.

The objective of transfer pricing provisions is to protect the tax base of India and to ensure that due to inter-company transactions, there is no reduction in the taxable profits or the taxes paid by the Indian taxpayer. The reverse, however, does not hold true.

While determining arm's length price under the provisions of transfer pricing regulations, if the income works out to a figure lower than the income shown in the books of accounts, the provision of transfer pricing regulations will not apply.

The Assessing Officer will have wide powers to determine what is an arm's length price for such transactions and make adjustments for computation of income. The keywords in section 92 are (i) associated enterprises, (ii) international transactions and (iii) arm's length price. These terms are defined in sections 92A, 92B and 92C.

II. Associated Enterprises [Section 92A]: The term "associated enterprise" in relation to another enterprise is defined in section 92A(1).

Associated Enterprises [Section 92A(1)]
	Condition	Example
(1)	An enterprise which participates, directly or indirectly, or through one or more intermediaries, in: • Management of the other enterprise, or • control of other enterprise, or • capital of other enterprise	Where A Ltd. directly participate in management of B Ltd. and B Ltd. directly participate in management of C Ltd. In such situation, A Ltd. has direct participation in management of B Ltd. but has an indirect participation in management of C Ltd.  In such scenario, both B Ltd. and C Ltd. would be Associated Enterprises of A Ltd.
(2)	If one or more persons participates, directly or indirectly, or through one or more intermediaries in: • management of the two different enterprises • control of two different enterprises	Mr. A directly has control in A Ltd. and B Ltd. In such a scenario, both A Ltd. & B Ltd. are Associated Enterprises since they have a common person i.e. Mr. A, who controls both entities A Ltd. & B Ltd.

	• capital of two different enterprises Then, those two enterprises are AEs.

Section 92A(2) provides that two enterprises shall be deemed to be associated enterprises for the purposes of sub-section (1) if, at any time during the previous year –

Deemed Associated Enterprises [Section 92A(2)]
Condition	Situation	Example
Substantial Voting Power	One enterprise holds 26% or more of the Voting Power, directly or indirectly, in the other enterprise.	A Ltd. holds 33% of Voting Power in B Ltd. and B Ltd. holds 40% Voting Power in C Ltd.  In above situation, A Ltd. holds 33% of Voting Power in B Ltd. directly and 40% of Voting Power in C Ltd. indirectly (i.e. through B Ltd.). Therefore, both B Ltd. & C Ltd. are deemed Associated Enterprises of A Ltd.
Substantial Voting Power in two entities by common person	Any person or enterprise holds 26% or more of the Voting Power power, directly or indirectly, in each of two different enterprises.	Mr. A holds 40% of shareholding in both X Ltd. and Y Ltd. where neither X Ltd. has any holding in Y Ltd. nor Y Ltd. has any holding in X Ltd.  In this situation, since Mr. A directly holds 40% of shareholding in both X Ltd. and Y Ltd., X Ltd. & Y Ltd. will be deemed Associated Enterprises.
Advancing of substantial sum of money	One enterprise advances loan to the other enterprise of an amount of 51% or more of the book value of the total assets of other enterprise	Book Value of total assets of Y Ltd. is ₹ 100 crores. X Ltd. advances loan of ₹ 60 crores to Y Ltd. Since, in this case, X Ltd. advances loan which is 60% of the Book Value of total assets of Y Ltd., X Ltd. & Y Ltd. are deemed Associated Enterprises.
Guaranteeing borrowings	One enterprise guarantees 10% or more of the total	P Inc. has total loan of 1 million dollars from XYZ Bank of America. Out of that, A Ltd., an Appointment of majority directors of other enterprise	One enterprise appoints more than half of the board of directors or members of the governing board, or one or more executive directors or executive members of the governing board of other enterprise.	X Ltd. has 15 directors on its Board. Out of that, Y Ltd. has appointed 8 directors. In such case, X Ltd. and Y Ltd. would be deemed Associated Enterprises.

Appointment of majority directors of two different enterprises by same person(s)	More than half of the directors or members of the governing board, or one or more of the executive directors or members of the governing board of each of the two enterprises are appointed by the same person(s).	Mr. A appointed 9 directors out of 15 directors of X Ltd. and appointed 2 executive directors on the board of Y Ltd. In such case, since a common person i.e. Mr. A appointed more than half of the directors in X Ltd. and appointed 2 executive directors in Y Ltd., both X Ltd. and Y Ltd. are deemed Associated Enterprises.
Dependence on intangibles w.r.t which other enterprise has exclusive rights	The manufacture or processing of goods or articles or business carried out by one enterprise is wholly dependent (i.e. 100%) on the know-how, patents, copyrights etc., or any data, documentation, drawing or specification relating to any patent, invention, model etc. of which the other enterprise is the owner or in respect of which the other enterprise has exclusive rights.
Dependence on raw material supplied by other enterprise	90% or more of raw materials and consumables required for the manufacture or processing of goods or articles or business carried out by one enterprise, are supplied by the other enterprise, or by persons specified by the other enterprise, where the prices and other conditions relating to the supply are influenced by such other enterprise.
Dependence on sale	The goods or articles manufactured or processed by one enterprise, are sold to the other enterprise or to persons specified by the other enterprise, and the prices and other conditions relating thereto are influenced by such other enterprise.

Mr. A has control over X Ltd. and Mr. B has control over Y Ltd. In such a case, both X Ltd. and Y Ltd. would be deemed Associated Enterprises.*
Control by HUF or member thereof	Where one enterprise is controlled by an HUF and the other enterprise is controlled by a member of such HUF or by relative of a member of such HUF or jointly by such member and his relative.	 HUF Member of HUF/ Relative of member of such HUF Control Control A Ltd. B Ltd. A Ltd & B Ltd are deemed Associated Enterprises
Interest in a firm, AOPs or BOIs	Where one enterprise is a firm, AOPs or BOIs, the other enterprise holds 10% or more interest in firm/HUF/BOI.
Mutual interest relationship	There exists b/w the two enterprises, any relationship of mutual interest, as may be prescribed.

Section 92A(1) lays down the circumstances when two enterprises can be considered as associated enterprises. The mere fact of participation by one enterprise in the management, control or capital of the other enterprise, or participation by one or more persons in the management, control or capital of both the enterprises is not sufficient unless the tests laid down in section 92A(2) are fulfilled. In other words, the deeming tests contained in section 92A(2) are exhaustive and should be applied to determine the association between two or more enterprises.

Meaning of Enterprise: The term "enterprise" is defined in section 92F to mean a person (including its certain specified Permanent Establishment) who is, or has been, or is proposed to be, engaged in any activity,

- relating to the production, storage, supply, distribution, acquisition or control of articles or goods, or know-how, patents, copy rights, trade-marks, licences, franchises or any other business or commercial rights of similar nature or any data, documentation, drawing or specification relating to any patent, invention, model, design, secret formula or process, of which the other enterprise is the owner or in respect of which the other enterprise has exclusive rights, or

- the provision of services of any kind, or in carrying out any work in pursuance of a contract, or in investment, or providing loan or in the business of acquiring, holding, underwriting or dealing with shares, debentures or other securities of any other body corporate, whether such activity or business is carried on, directly or through one or more of its units or divisions or subsidiaries, or whether such unit or division or subsidiary is located at the same place where the enterprise is located or at a different place or places.

Meaning of Permanent establishment: "Permanent establishment" includes a fixed place of business through which the business of the enterprise is wholly or partly carried on.

III. Definition of International Transaction [Section 92B]

❑ International Transaction [Section 92B(1)]: As per section 92B of the Act, an international transaction means:

(i) a transaction between two or more associated enterprises, either or both of whom are non-residents; and

(ii) transaction in the nature of:

(a) sale/ purchase/ lease of tangible property; or

(b) sale/ purchase/ lease of intangible property; or

(c) provision of services; or

(d) lending/ borrowing money; or

(e) any other transaction having a bearing on profits, income, losses or assets of such enterprises; or

(f) mutual agreement or arrangement between two or more associated enterprise for the allocation or apportionment of, or any contribution to, any cost or expense incurred or to be incurred in connection with a benefit, service or facility provided or to be provided to any one or more of such enterprises.

❑ Deemed International Transaction [Section 92B(2)]: Where, in respect of a transaction entered into by an enterprise with a person other than an associated enterprise (hereinafter referred to as "other person"),

♦ there exists a prior agreement in relation to the relevant transaction between the other person and the associated enterprise or,

♦ where the terms of the relevant transaction are determined in substance between such other person and the associated enterprise; and

♦ either the enterprise or the associated enterprise or both of them are non-residents, then such transaction entered into between the enterprise and the other person shall be deemed to be an international transaction entered into between two associated enterprises, whether or not such other person is a non-resident.

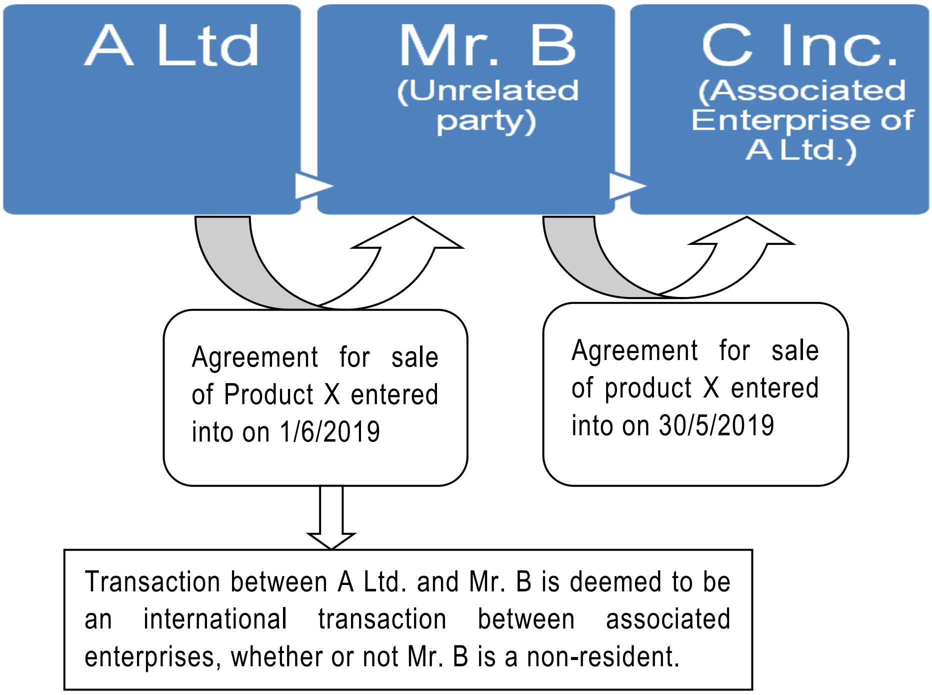
Example:

If A Ltd., an Indian company, has entered into an agreement for sale of product X to Mr. B, an unrelated party, on 1/6/2019 and Mr. B has entered into an agreement for sale of product X with C Inc., a non-resident entity, which is a specified foreign company in relation to A Ltd., on 30/5/2019, then, the transaction between A Ltd. and Mr. B shall be deemed to be an international transaction entered into between two associated enterprises, irrespective of whether or not Mr. B is a non-resident.



Agreement for sale of Product X entered into on 1/6/2019

Agreement for sale of product X entered into on 30/5/2019

Transaction between A Ltd. and Mr. B is deemed to be an international transaction between associated enterprises, whether or not Mr. B is a non-resident.

Note – C Inc. is deemed to be an associated enterprise of A Ltd. since it is a specified foreign company in relation to A Ltd., which means that A Ltd. holds 26% or more in the nominal value of the equity share capital of C Inc.

❑ The scope of "international transaction" shall include:

(5)	Business restructuring or reorganization entered into by an enterprise with an associated enterprise	All such transactions are included in the definition of "international transaction", whether or not it has bearing on the profit, income, losses or assets of such enterprises at the time of the transaction or at any future date.

- ❑ The expression “intangible property” shall include:

	Type of intangible asset in relation to	Examples of each type of intangible asset
(1)	Marketing	• Trademarks • trade names • brand names • logos
(2)	Technology	• Process patents • patent applications • technical documentation such as laboratory notebooks • technical know-how
(3)	Artistic	• literary works and copyrights • musical compositions • copyrights • maps • engravings
(4)	Data processing	• proprietary computer software • software copyrights • automated databases • integrated circuit masks and masters
(5)	Engineering	• industrial design • product patents • trade secrets • engineering drawing and schematics • blueprints • proprietary documentation
(6)	Customer	• customer lists • customer contracts • customer relationship • open purchase orders

(11)	methods, programmes, systems, procedures, campaigns, surveys, studies, forecasts, estimates, or technical data;
(12)	any other similar item that derives its value from its intellectual content rather than its physical attributes.

❑ Transaction: The word "transaction" has been defined in section 92F to include an arrangement, understanding or action in concert

(i) whether or not such arrangement, understanding or action is formal or in writing; or

(ii) whether or not such arrangement, understanding or action is intended to be enforceable by legal proceedings."

Section 92F(v) provides an inclusive definition of the term "transaction". Based on the reading of the section, it is evident that it is not necessary that for a transaction undertaken between two enterprises there needs to be a formal written agreement between them. It is only relevant whether a transaction has been entered into in substance. The section also negates the requirement as to the legal enforceability of agreement or understanding.

It may be noted that one of the parties to the international transaction should be a non-resident. Therefore, transactions between a resident assessee ("A" Ltd.) and its foreign branches or between its two or more foreign branches will not be considered as international transactions. This is for the reason that when "A" Ltd. is a resident in India, all its foreign branches will be deemed to be resident in India and transactions between Head Office and branches or between branches inter se will be considered as transactions between residents. Even otherwise there can be no avoidance of income in the transactions between Indian Head Office and foreign branches.

On the other hand, if an Indian branch of a foreign company ("B" Ltd.) is having a transaction with the head office the same will be covered by the definition of international transaction between associated enterprises. This is because the Indian branch (permanent establishment of "B" Ltd.) will be liable to tax in India in respect of its Indian operations and, therefore, any transaction between the Indian branches of "B" Ltd. with its head office in foreign country or with any of the branches of "B" Ltd. outside India will be considered as an international transaction and it will have to establish that the transaction is at an arm's length price. This will be the position even in respect of transactions between a parent company ("A" Ltd.) and its foreign subsidiary and, therefore, such transactions will have to comply with the provisions of transfer pricing regulations.

IV. Arm's Length Price [Section 92C]: "Arm's length price" is defined in section 92F(ii) to mean price which is applied or proposed to be applied in a transaction between persons other than associated enterprises in uncontrolled conditions. Section 92C deals with the method for determining arm's length price and the factors which are to be considered for applicability or non-applicability of a particular method to a given situation. The factors as well as methods incorporated in this section are not exhaustive and the CBDT may prescribe further factors and methods. It provides that the arm's length price in relation to an international transaction shall be determined by any of the following methods, being the most appropriate method, having regard to the nature of transaction or class of transaction or class of associated persons or functions performed by such persons or such other relevant factors as the Board may prescribe, namely -

(a) comparable uncontrolled price method;

(b) resale price method;

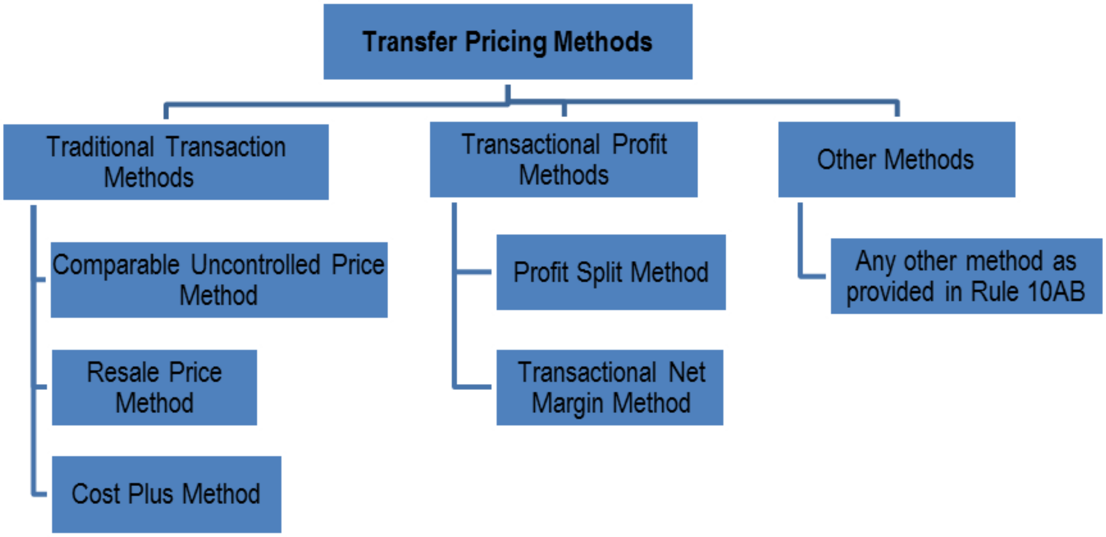
(c) cost plus method;

(d) profit split method;

(e) transactional net margin method;

(f) such other method as may be prescribed by the Board.

Accordingly, the Board has prescribed that the other method for determination of arm's length price in relation to an international transaction shall be any method which takes into account the price which has been charged or paid, or would have been charged or paid, for the same or similar uncontrolled transaction, with or between non-associated enterprises, under similar circumstances, considering all the relevant facts. [Rule 10AB].



Transfer Pricing Methods
Traditional Transaction Methods
Transactional Profit Methods
Other Methods
Comparable Uncontrolled Price Method
Resale Price Method
Cost Plus Method
Profit Split Method
Transactional Net Margin Method
Any other method as provided in Rule 10AB

Section 92C(2) provides that the most appropriate method out of the above methods has to be applied for determination of arm's length price, in the prescribed manner.

Rule 10B(1) prescribed the manner to determine the arm's length price under the five methods as stated in above diagram in respect of any goods, property or services purchased or sold under any international transaction.

(i) Comparable Uncontrolled Price Method

(a) Under this method the price charged or paid for property transferred or services provided under any comparable uncontrolled transaction or transactions should be identifiable.

(b) Adjustment to account for differences between the international transaction and comparable uncontrolled transactions or between the enterprises entering into such transactions which could materially affect the price in the open market can be made.

(c) The adjusted price as worked out under (b) will be considered as an arm's length price in respect of the property transferred or services provided in the international transaction.

(ii) Resale Price Method

(a) Under this method, the price at which property purchased or services obtained by the enterprise from an associated enterprise is resold or are provided to an unrelated enterprise should be identifiable.

(b) The following adjustments can be made to such resale price.

- For normal gross profit margin

- For expenses incurred in connection with the purchase of property or obtaining of services.
- For functional and other differences, including differences in accounting practices which could materially affect the gross profit margin in the open market.

(c) The adjusted price as stated in (b) above will be considered as the arm's length price.

(iii) Cost Plus Method

(a) Under this method, the direct and indirect costs of production incurred by the enterprise in respect of property transferred or services provided to an associated enterprise should be determined.

(b) The amount of a normal gross profit mark-up to such costs arising from the transfer or provision of the same or similar property or services by the enterprise, or by an unrelated enterprise in comparable uncontrolled transaction or transactions should be determined.

(c) The above normal gross profit mark-up can be adjusted to take into account the functional and other differences which could materially affect such profit mark-up in the open market.

(d) Costs referred to in (a) above should be increased by the adjusted profit mark-up as stated in (c) above and the price so arrived at will be considered as the arm's length price.

(iv) Profit Split Method

(a) This is a method which may be applicable mainly in international transactions involving transfer of unique intangibles or in multiple international transactions which are so inter-related that they cannot be evaluated separately for the purpose of determining the arm's length price of any one transaction.

(b) Under this method, combined net profit of the associated enterprises arising from the international transactions in which they are engaged is first determined.

(c) The relative contribution of each associated enterprise to the earning of such combined net profit is then evaluated on the basis of the functions performed, assets employed and risks assumed by each enterprise. This evaluation is to be made on the basis of reliable external market data which can indicate how such contribution would be evaluated by unrelated enterprises performing comparable functions in similar circumstances.

(d) The combined net profit is then split amongst the enterprises in proportion to their relative contributions. The profit thus apportioned to the assessee is taken into consideration to arrive at an arm's length price in relation to the international transaction.

(e) In certain cases the combined net profit referred to in (b) above may, in the first instance, be partially allocated to each enterprise so as to provide it with a basic return appropriate for the type of international transaction in which it is engaged. This has to be determined with reference to market returns achieved for similar types of transactions by independent enterprises. Thereafter, the residual net profit remaining after such allocation may be split amongst the enterprises as stated in (c) and (d) above. In such a case the aggregate of net profit allocated in the first instance together with the residual profit apportioned should be considered for arriving at the arm's length price of the international transaction.

(v) Transactional Net Margin Method

(a) In this method, the net profit margin realised by the enterprise from an international transaction with an associated enterprise is computed having regard to costs incurred or sales effected or assets employed or having regard to any other relevant base.

(b) The net profit margin realised by the enterprise or by an unrelated enterprise from a comparable uncontrolled transaction by applying the same base as in (a) above is computed. This profit margin is adjusted to take into account the differences which could materially affect the net profit margin in the open market having regard to international transaction and comparable uncontrolled transactions or having regard to the enterprise entering into such transactions.

(c) If the net profit margin realised by the enterprise as in (a) above is established to be the same as the net profit margin as in (b) above, then the same is taken into consideration to arrive at an arm's length price in relation to the international transaction.

(v) Other Method as may be prescribed by the CBDT

The Other method allows the use of 'any method' which takes into account

(i) the price which has been charged or paid or

(ii) would have been charged or paid for the same or similar uncontrolled transactions with or between non-associated enterprises, under similar circumstances.

The various data which may possibly be used for comparability purposes under this method could be third party quotations, valuation reports, tender/Bid documents, documents relating to the negotiations, standard rate cards, commercial & economic business models; etc.

For applying the above methods, the comparability of the international transaction with an uncontrolled transaction is to be judged with reference to the following factors:

(i) The specific characteristics of the property transferred or services provided in either transaction;

(ii) The functions performed, taking into account assets employer or to be employer and the risks assumed, by the respective parties to the transactions;

(iii) The contractual terms (whether or not such terms are formal or in writing) of the transactions which lay down explicitly or implicitly how the responsibilities, risks and benefits are to be divided between the respective parties to the transactions;

(iv) Conditions prevailing in the markets in which the respective parties to the transactions operate, including the geographical location and size of the markets, the laws and Government orders in force, costs of labour and capital in the markets, overall economic development and level of competition and whether the markets are wholesale or retail.

Rule 10B(3) provides that an uncontrolled transaction shall be comparable to an international transaction

- if none of the differences between the transactions being comparable or between the enterprises entering into such transactions is likely to materially affect the price or cost charged or paid in, or the profit arising from, such transactions in the open market or
- reasonably accurate adjustments can be made to eliminate the material effects of such differences.

Data to be used for analyzing the comparability of an uncontrolled transaction with an international transaction

The data to be used for analyzing the comparability of an uncontrolled transaction and an international transaction should relate to the financial year (current year) in which the international transaction has been entered into.

In case the most appropriate method for determination of ALP of a transaction entered into on or after 1.4.2014 is the resale price method or cost plus method or the transactional net margin method, then, the data to be used for analyzing the comparability of an uncontrolled transaction with an international transaction shall be –

(a) the data relating to the current year; or

(b) the data relating to the financial year immediately preceding the current year, if the data relating to the current year is not available at the time of furnishing the return of income by the assessee, for the assessment year relevant to the current year.

However, where the data relating to the current year is subsequently available at the time of determination of arm’s length price of an international transaction during the course of any assessment proceeding for the assessment year relevant to the current year, then, such data shall be used for such determination irrespective of the fact that the data was not available at the time of furnishing the return of income of the relevant assessment year.

Methods for computing ALP [Section 92C]

CUP Method	Resale Price Method(RPM)	Cost Plus Method (CPM)	Profit Split Method (PSM)	Transactional Net Margin Method (TNMM)
This method is applied where there are similar transaction(s) b/w unconnected parties	This method is applied where item obtained from AE is resold to unrelated party	This method is generally applied where semi-finished goods are sold to AEs	This method is applied where there is transfer of unique intangibles or in multiple International Transaction	Compute NP margin of the enterprise from International Transaction with AE having regard to cost incurred/sales effected/assets employed
Identify price in a comparable uncontrolled transaction (CUCT)	Identify the RP at which the item is resold to unrelated party	Identify direct & indirect COP incurred for property transferred or services provided to AE	Determine combined NP of the AEs arising out of International Transaction	Compute the NP margin realised by the enterprise or unrelated enterprise in a CUCT by applying the same base
	Reduce the RP by the normal GP margin on CUCT & expenditure incurred (customs duty) w.r.t. purchase	Determine normal GP mark up to such costs by an unrelated enter in CUCT	Evaluate the relative contribution of each enterprise to the earning of combined NP on the basis of FAR	Adjust NP margin realised from CUCT to a/c for differences affecting NP margin in the OM
Adjust the price for material differences in terms of contract, credit, transport etc.	Adjust the price for functional & other differences materially affecting GP margin in open market (OM)	Adjust the normal GP mark-up for functional and other differences materially affecting GP mark-up in OM	Split the combined NP amongst the enterprise in proportion to market returns; & residual profits in proportion to their relative contribution	Compare NP margin relative to costs/sales/assets of the AE with NP margin of uncontrolled party in comparable transactions
Adjusted price is ALP	Adjusted price is ALP	Total Costs ↑d by adjusted mark up = ALP	ALP to be determined on the basis of profit apportioned.	Adjusted NP margin taken into A/c to arrive at ALP

Determination of the most appropriate method: Rule 10C deals with the determination of most appropriate method. Under this Rule, the method which is best suited to the facts and circumstances and which provides the most reliable measure of an arm's length price in relation to the international transaction will be considered to be the most appropriate method.

For the purpose of selecting the most appropriate method, the following factors should be taken into account.

(i) The nature and class of the international transaction;

(ii) The class, or classes of associated enterprises entering into the transaction and the functions performed by them taking into account assets employed or to be employed and risks assumed by such enterprises;

(iii) The availability, coverage and reliability of data necessary for application of the method;

(iv) The degree of comparability existing between the international transaction and the uncontrolled transaction and between the enterprises entering into such transactions;

(v) The extent to which reliable and accurate adjustments can be made to account for difference, if any, between the international transaction and the comparable uncontrolled transaction or between the enterprises entering into such transactions;

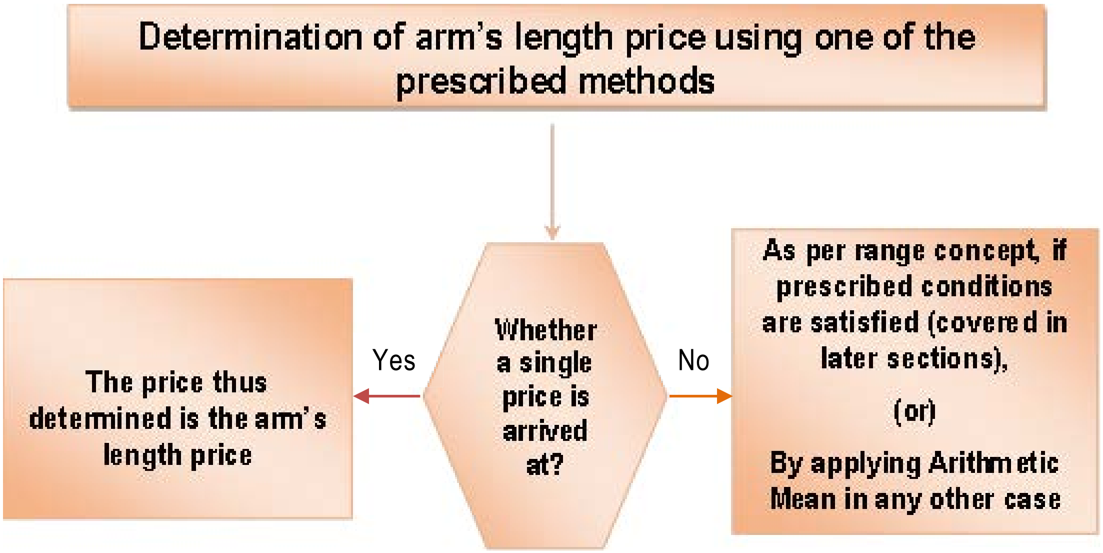
(vi) The nature, extent and reliability of assumptions required to be made in application of a method.

Manner of computation of Arm's length price (Applicable for international transactions and specified domestic transactions undertaken on or after 1.4.2014) [Third proviso to section 92C(2)]

In case of an international transaction or specified domestic transaction[1] undertaken on or after 1.4.2014, where more than one price is determined by the most appropriate method, the ALP shall be computed in the prescribed manner specified in Rule 10CA.

[1] discussed later in this Chapter

Computation of arm's length price in certain cases [Rule 10CA]



Determination of arm's length price using one of the prescribed methods
Whether a single price is arrived at?
Yes
The price thus determined is the arm's length price
No
As per range concept, if prescribed conditions are satisfied (covered in later sections), (or)
By applying Arithmetic Mean in any other case

Rule 10CA(1) provides that where in respect of an international transaction or a specified domestic transaction, the application of the most appropriate method referred to in section 92C(1) results in determination of more than one price, then, the arm's length price in respect of such international transaction or specified domestic transaction has to be computed on the basis of the dataset constructed by placing such prices in an ascending order as provided in Rule 10CA(2).

Application of multiple year data for construction of dataset

Multiple year data allowed only in cases where determination of ALP is done using TNMM, RPM or CPM

Where the most appropriate method is the resale price method or cost plus method or transactional net margin method and the comparable uncontrolled transaction has been identified on the basis of data relating to the current year and the enterprise undertaking the said uncontrolled transaction, [not being the enterprise undertaking the international transaction or the specified domestic transaction referred to in sub-rule (1)], has in either or both of the two financial years immediately preceding the current year undertaken the same or similar comparable uncontrolled transaction then,-

(i) the most appropriate method used to determine the price of the comparable uncontrolled transaction undertaken in the current year shall be applied in similar manner to the comparable uncontrolled transaction or transactions undertaken in the aforesaid period and the price in respect of such uncontrolled transactions shall be determined; and

(ii) the weighted average of the prices, computed in accordance with the manner provided in sub-rule (3), of the comparable uncontrolled transactions undertaken in the current year and in the aforesaid period preceding it shall be included in the dataset instead of the price referred to in sub-rule (1).

Further, where the most appropriate method is the resale price method or cost plus method or transactional net margin method where the comparable uncontrolled transaction has been identified on the basis of the data relating to the financial year immediately preceding the current year and the enterprise undertaking the said uncontrolled transaction, [not being the enterprise undertaking the international transaction or the specified domestic transaction referred to in sub-rule (1)], has in the financial year immediately preceding the said financial year undertaken the same or similar comparable uncontrolled transaction then, -

(i) the price in respect of such uncontrolled transaction shall be determined by applying the most appropriate method in a similar manner as it was applied to determine the price of the comparable uncontrolled transaction undertaken in the financial year immediately preceding the current year; and

(ii) the weighted average of the prices, computed in accordance with the manner provided in sub-rule (3), of the comparable uncontrolled transactions undertaken in the aforesaid period of two years shall be included in the dataset instead of the price referred to in sub-rule (1).

Also, in such cases, where the use of data relating to the current year for determination of ALP subsequently at the time of assessment establishes that,-

(i) the enterprise has not undertaken same or similar uncontrolled transaction during the current year; or

(ii) the uncontrolled transaction undertaken by an enterprise in the current year is not a comparable uncontrolled transaction, then, irrespective of the fact that such an enterprise had undertaken comparable uncontrolled transaction in the financial year immediately preceding the current year or the financial year immediately preceding such financial year, the price of comparable uncontrolled transaction or the weighted average of the prices of the uncontrolled transactions, as the case may be, undertaken by such enterprise shall not be included in the dataset.

Rule 10CA(3) provides that where an enterprise has undertaken comparable uncontrolled transactions in more than one financial year, then for the purposes of sub-rule (2) the weighted average of the prices of such transactions shall be computed in the following manner, namely:-

	Method used to determine the prices	Manner of computation of weighted average of the prices
(i)	The resale price method	By assigning weights to the quantum of sales which has been considered for arriving at the respective prices
(ii)	The cost plus method	By assigning weights to the quantum of costs which has been considered for arriving at the respective prices
(iii)	The transactional net margin method	By assigning weights to the quantum of costs incurred or sales effected or assets employed or to be employed, or as the case may be, any other base which has been considered for arriving at the respective prices.

Range Concept: Rule 10CA(4) provides that where the most appropriate method applied is –

(i) a method other than the profit split method or a method prescribed by the CBDT under section 92C(1)(f); and

(ii) the dataset constructed in accordance with sub-rule (2) consists of six or more entries, an arm's length range beginning from the thirty-fifth percentile of the dataset and ending on the sixty-fifth percentile of the dataset shall be constructed.

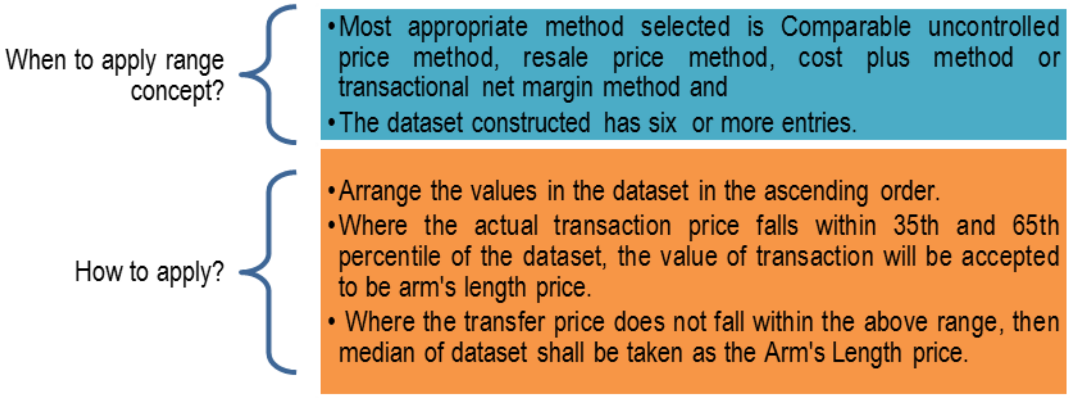
If the price at which the international transaction or the specified domestic transaction has actually been undertaken is within the said range, then, the price at which such international transaction or the specified domestic transaction has actually been undertaken shall be deemed to be the arm's length price [Rule 10CA(5)].

If the price at which the international transaction or the specified domestic transaction has actually been undertaken is outside the said arm's length range, the arm's length price shall be taken to be the median of the dataset [Rule 10CA(6)].



When to apply range concept?

- Most appropriate method selected is Comparable uncontrolled price method, resale price method, cost plus method or transactional net margin method and
- The dataset constructed has six or more entries.

How to apply?

- Arrange the values in the dataset in the ascending order.
- Where the actual transaction price falls within 35th and 65th percentile of the dataset, the value of transaction will be accepted to be arm's length price.
- Where the transfer price does not fall within the above range, then median of dataset shall be taken as the Arm's Length price.

Range concept not applicable:

In a case where the provisions of Rule 10CA(4) are not applicable, the arm's length price shall be the arithmetical mean of all the values included in the dataset. However, if the variation between the arm's length price so determined and price at which the international transaction or specified domestic transaction has actually been undertaken does not exceed such percentage not exceeding 3% of the latter, as may be notified by the Central Government in the Official Gazette in this behalf, the price at which the international transaction or specified domestic transaction has actually been undertaken shall be deemed to be the arm's length price [Rule 10CA(7)].

Meaning of certain terms [Rule 10CA(8)]

	Term	Meaning
(a)	the thirty-fifth percentile of a dataset (having values arranged in an ascending order)	The lowest value in the dataset such that at least 35% of the values included in the dataset are equal to or less than such value. However, if the number of values that are equal to or less than the aforesaid value is a whole number, then, the thirty-fifth percentile shall be the arithmetic mean of such value and the value immediately succeeding it in the dataset.
(b)	the sixth-fifth percentile of a dataset (having values arranged in an ascending order)	The lowest value in the dataset such that at least 65% of the values included in the dataset are equal to or less than such value. However, if the number of values that are equal to or less than the aforesaid value is a whole number, then, the sixty-fifth percentile shall be the arithmetic mean of such value and the value immediately succeeding it in the dataset.
(c)	the median of the dataset (having values arranged in an ascending order)	The lowest value in the dataset such that at least 50% of the values included in the dataset are equal to or less than such value. However, if the number of values that are equal to or less than the aforesaid value is a whole number, then, the median shall be the arithmetic mean of such value and the value immediately succeeding it in the dataset.

V. Reference to Transfer Pricing Officer [Section 92CA]: This section provides for a procedure for reference to a Transfer Pricing Officer (TPO) of any issue relating to computation of arm's length price in an international transaction. The procedure is as under -

(1) The option to make reference to TPO is given to the Assessing Officer. Where the assessee has entered into an international transaction in any previous year and if Assessing Officer considers it necessary or expedient to do so he may refer the computation of the arm's length price in relation to the said international transaction to the TPO. This option is not, however, available to the assessee.

(2) The Assessing Officer has to take the approval of the PCIT/ CIT before making such a reference.

(3) Any Joint /Deputy/Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax, authorised by CBDT, can be appointed as TPO.

(4) When such reference is made, TPO would serve a notice to the assessee requiring him to produce on a date specified in the notice, any evidence on which the assessee relied in support of the computation of arm's length price made by him in relation to the international transaction.

(5) The TPO can also determine the ALP of other international transactions identified subsequently in the course of proceedings before him as if such transaction is referred to the TPO by the Assessing Officer under section 92CA(1) [Sub-section (2A)].

(6) Where in respect of an international transaction, the assessee has not furnished the report under section 92E and such transaction comes to the notice of the TPO during the course of proceeding before him, the transfer pricing provisions shall apply as if such transaction is referred to the TPO by the Assessing Officer under section 92CA(1) [Sub-section (2B)].

(7) The TPO has to pass an order determining the arm's length price after considering the evidence, documents, etc. produced by the assessee and after considering the material gathered by him. He has to send a copy of his order to Assessing Officer as well as the assessee.

(8) The order of the Transfer Pricing Officer determining the arm's length price of an international transaction is binding on the Assessing Officer and the Assessing Officer shall proceed to compute the total income in conformity with the arm's length price determined by the Transfer Pricing Officer [Sub-section (4)].

(9) In order to provide sufficient time to the Assessing Officer to complete the assessment in a case where reference is made to the Transfer Pricing Officer, section 92CA(3A) provides for determination of arm's length price of international transactions by the Transfer Pricing Officer at least 60 days before the expiry of the time limit under section 153 or section 153B for making an order of assessment by the Assessing Officer. This provision would apply in a case where reference is made on or after 1.6.2007 or in a case where reference is made before that date but the order of the Transfer Pricing Officer is pending on that date [Sub-section (3A)].

(10) In many cases, it becomes necessary to seek information from foreign jurisdictions for the purpose of determining the arm's length price by the TPO. At times, proceedings before the TPO may also be stayed by a court order.

Taking into consideration such cases, it has been provided that where assessment proceedings are stayed by any court or where a reference for exchange of information has been made by the competent authority under an agreement referred to in section 90 or 90A, the time available to the Transfer Pricing Officer for making an order after excluding the time for which assessment proceedings were stayed or the time taken for receipt of information, as the case may be, is less than 60 days, then, such remaining period shall be extended to 60 days.

(11) The TPO has power to rectify his order under section 154 if any mistake apparent from the record is noticed. If such rectification is made, the Assessing Officer has to rectify the assessment order to bring it in conformity with the same.

(12) The TPO can exercise all or any of the powers specified in clause (a) to (d) of section 131(1) or section 133(6) or section 133A for determination of arm's length price once the above reference is made to him.

VI. Safe Harbour Rules for determination of arm's length price in case of international transactions [Section 92CB]

(i) Section 92C provides for adjustment in the transfer price of an international transaction with an associated enterprise if the transfer price is not equal to the arm's length price. This has resulted in a large number of such transactions being subjected to adjustment giving rise to considerable dispute.

(ii) Therefore, section 92CB has been introduced to empower the CBDT to formulate safe harbour rules to determine the arm's length price under section 92C and 92CA. Section 92CB(2) empowers the CBDT to prescribe safe harbour rules[2].

'Safe harbour' means circumstances in which the income-tax authorities shall accept the transfer price declared by the assessee.

VII. Introduction of Advance Pricing Agreements [Sections 92CC & 92CD]

(1) An Advance Pricing Agreement (APA) is an agreement between a taxpayer and a taxing authority on an appropriate transfer pricing methodology for a set of transactions over a fixed period of time in future. They offer better assurance on transfer pricing methods and provide certainty and unanimity of approach.

[2] The Safe Harbour Rules relevant for A.Y. 2020-21 are yet to be notified by the CBDT as on the date of release of the Study Material. These rules, when notified, will form part of the webhosted Statutory Update.

(2) Keeping in mind the benefits offered by the APAs, sections 92CC and section 92CD have been introduced in the transfer pricing regime to provide a framework for formulation of APAs between the tax payer and the income-tax authorities.

(3) Section 92CC enables the Board (with the approval of the Central Government), to enter into an APA with any person undertaking an international transaction.

(i) Purpose of APA: The APA shall relate to an international transaction to be entered into by such person. The APA shall be entered into for the purpose of determination of the arm's length price or specifying the manner in which arm's length price shall be determined, in relation to such international transaction.

(ii) Manner of determination of Arm's Length Price in APA: The manner for determination of arm's length price referred above may include methods referred to in section 92C(1) or any other method with necessary adjustments or variations.

(iii) Non-applicability of section 92C or section 92CA: In case an APA has been entered into in respect of any international transaction, the arm's length price in relation to that transaction shall be determined in accordance with that APA notwithstanding any contrary provisions contained in section 92C or section 92CA i.e., the provisions of the APA shall apply overriding the provisions of section 92C or section 92CA, which are normally applicable for determination of arm's length price.

(iv) Validity of APA: The APA shall be valid for such period as specified in the agreement, which shall in no case exceed five consecutive previous years.

(v) Binding nature of APA: The APA so entered into shall be binding on:

(a) the person in whose case, and in respect of the transaction in relation to which, the APA has been entered into; and

(b) the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner and the income-tax authorities subordinate to him, in respect of the said person and the said transaction.

(vi) Not binding of APA: The APA shall not be binding if there is any change in law or facts having bearing on such APA.

(vii) Conditions to declare APA as void ab initio: In case the Board finds that the APA so entered into has been obtained by the person by way of fraud or misrepresentation of facts, the Board is empowered to pass an order declaring any such APA to be void ab initio, with the approval of Central Government.

(viii) Consequences of declaration of an APA as void ab initio: As a result of declaration of an APA as void ab initio:

(a) all the provisions of the Act shall apply to such person as if such APA had never been entered into.

(b) The period beginning with the date of such APA and ending on the date of order declaring the APA as void ab initio, shall be excluded for the purpose of computation of any period of limitation under this Act (for example period of limitation specified in the section 153, 153B etc). This is irrespective of anything contained in any other provision of the Act.

(c) In case the period of limitation after exclusion of the above mentioned period is less than 60 days, such remaining period of limitation shall be extended to 60 days.

(ix) If an application is made by a person for entering into an APA, then, the proceeding, in respect of such person for the purpose of the Act, shall be deemed to be pending.

(x) Prescribed scheme for APA: The Board is empowered to prescribe a scheme specifying the manner, form, procedure and any other matter generally in respect of the APA.

Prescribed Advance Pricing Agreement Scheme for the purpose of section 92CC [Rule 10F to 10T]:]: In exercise of the powers conferred in section 92CC(9) read with section 295 of the Income-tax Act, 1961, the CBDT has prescribed rules specifying an Advance Pricing Agreement (APA) Scheme. (ii) before undertaking the transaction in respect of remaining transactions.

Note - The applicant may withdraw the application for agreement at any time before the finalisation of the terms of the agreement. However, application fees paid shall not be refunded on withdrawal of application by the applicant.

(4) Approval of Central Government: The agreement shall be entered into by the Board with the applicant after its approval by the Central Government.

(b) The agreement shall not be binding on the Board or the assessee if there is a change in any of critical assumptions or failure to meet conditions subject to which the agreement has been entered into.

(c) The binding effect of agreement shall cease only if any party has given due notice of the concerned other party or parties.

(d) In case there is a change in any of the critical assumptions or failure to meet the conditions subject to which the agreement has been entered into, the agreement can be revised or cancelled, as the case may be.

(6) Furnishing of Annual Compliance Report [Rule 10-O]: The assessee shall furnish an annual compliance report in quadruplicate in the prescribed form to Director General of Income-tax (International Taxation) for each year covered in the agreement, within 30 days of the due date of filing income-tax return for that year, or within 90 days of entering into an agreement, whichever is later.

(7) Compliance Audit of the agreement [Rule 10P]:

(a) The Transfer Pricing Officer having the jurisdiction over the assessee shall carry out the compliance audit of the agreement for each of the year covered in the agreement. For this purpose, the Transfer Pricing Officer may require –

(i) the assessee to substantiate compliance with the terms of the agreement, including satisfaction of the critical assumptions, correctness of the supporting data or information and consistency of the application of the transfer pricing method;

(ii) the assessee to submit any information, or document, to establish that the terms of the agreement has been complied with.

(i) there is a change in critical assumptions or failure to meet a condition subject to which the agreement has been entered into;

(ii) there is a change in law that modifies any matter covered by the agreement but is not of the nature which renders the agreement to be non-binding ; or

(iii) there is a request from competent authority in the other country requesting revision of agreement, in case of bilateral or multilateral agreement.

(b) Except when the agreement is proposed to be revised on the request of the assessee, the agreement shall not be revised unless an opportunity of being heard has been provided to the assessee and the assessee is in agreement with the proposed revision.

(c) The revised agreement shall include the date till which the original agreement is to apply and the date from which the revised agreement is to apply.

(9) Cancellation of an agreement [Rule 10R]:

(a) An agreement shall be cancelled by the Board for any of the following reasons:

(i) the compliance audit has resulted in the finding of failure on the part of the assessee to comply with the terms of the agreement;

(ii) the assessee has failed to file the annual compliance report in time;

(iii) the annual compliance report furnished by the assessee contains material errors; or

(iv) the assessee is not in agreement with the revision proposed in the agreement or the agreement is to be cancelled under rule 10RA(7);.

(b) The Board shall give an opportunity of being heard to the assessee, before proceeding to cancel an application.

(d) The order of cancellation shall also specify the effective date of cancellation of the agreement, where applicable.

(e) The order under the Act, declaring the agreement as void ab initio, on account of fraud or misrepresentation of facts, shall be in writing and shall provide reason for such declaration and for non-acceptance of assessee's submission, if any.

(10) Mere filing of an application for an agreement under these rules shall not prevent the operation of Chapter X of the Act for determination of arms' length price under that Chapter till the agreement is entered into. [Rule 10T(1)]

(11) The negotiation between the competent authority in India and the competent authority in the other country or countries, in case of bilateral or multilateral agreement, shall be carried out in accordance with the provisions of the tax treaty between India and the other country or countries. [Rule 10T(2)]

(xi) Provision for Roll back in APA Scheme [Section 92CC]

(a) In order to reduce current pending as well as future litigation in respect of the transfer pricing matters, section 92CC(9A) provides roll back mechanism in the APA scheme.

(b) Accordingly, the APA may, subject to such prescribed conditions, procedure and manner, provide for determining the ALP or for specifying the manner in which ALP is to be determined in relation to an international transaction entered into by a person during any period not exceeding four previous years preceding the first of the previous years for which the APA applies in respect of the international transaction to be undertaken.

The CBDT has, vide Notification No.23/2015 dated 14.3.2015, in exercise of the powers conferred by 92CC(9A) read with section 295, following conditions, procedure and manner for determining the arm's length price or for specifying the manner in which arm's length price is to be determined in relation to an international transaction:

Rule	Particulars	Conditions, Procedure & Manner of determination of ALP
10F(ba)	Definition of Applicant	A person who has made an application.
10F(ha)	Definition of Rollback year	Any previous year, falling within the period not exceeding four previous years, preceding the first of the five consecutive previous years referred to in section 92CC(4).
10MA	Roll back of the agreement	The said rule provides the following: 1. The agreement may provide for determining the arm's length price or specify the manner in which arm's length price shall be determined in relation to the international transaction entered into by the person during the rollback year (hereinafter referred as "rollback provision"). 2. Conditions for applying for rollback provisions: The agreement shall contain rollback provision in respect of an international transaction subject to the following, namely:- (i) the international transaction is same as the international transaction to which the agreement (other than the rollback provision) applies;

		(ii) the return of income for the relevant rollback year has been or is furnished by the applicant before the due date as specified in Explanation 2 of section 139(1). (iii) the report in respect of the international transaction had been furnished in accordance with section 92E; (iv) the applicability of rollback provision, in respect of an international transaction, has been requested by the applicant for all the rollback years in which the said international transaction has been undertaken by the applicant; and (v) the applicant has made an application seeking rollback in Form 3CEDA in accordance with sub-rule (5); 3. Non-applicability of Rollback provision: Rollback provision shall not be provided in respect of an international transaction for a rollback year, if,- (i) the determination of arm's length price of the said international transaction for the said year has been subject matter of an appeal before the Appellate Tribunal and the Appellate Tribunal has passed an order disposing of such appeal at any time before signing of the agreement; or (ii) the application of rollback provision has the effect of reducing the total income or increasing the loss, as the case may be, of the applicant as declared in the return of income of the said year. 4. Manner for determining arm length price to be the same for rollback years and other previous years: Where the rollback provision specifies the manner in which arm's length price shall be determined in relation to an international transaction undertaken in any rollback year then such manner shall be the same as the manner which has been agreed to be provided for determination of arm's length price of the same international transaction to be undertaken in any previous year to which the agreement applies, not being a rollback year. 5. Time limit for filling application for rollback provision: The applicant may furnish along with the application for advance pricing agreement, the request for rollback provision in Form No. 3CEDA with proof of payment of an additional fee of ₹ 5 lakh.

10RA	Procedure for giving effect to rollback provision of an Agreement	Rule 10RA has been inserted to provide the "Procedure for giving effect to rollback provision of an Agreement" as follows: (i) The applicant shall furnish modified return of income referred to in section 92CD in respect of a rollback year to which the agreement applies along with the proof of payment of any additional tax arising as a consequence of and computed in accordance with the rollback provision. (ii) The modified return in respect of rollback year shall be furnished along with the modified return to be furnished in respect of first of the previous years for which the agreement has been requested for in the application. (iii) If any appeal filed by the applicant is pending before the Commissioner (Appeals), Appellate Tribunal or the High Court for a rollback year, on the issue which is the subject matter of the rollback provision for that year, the said appeal to the extent of the subject covered under the agreement shall be withdrawn by the applicant before furnishing the modified return for the said year. (iv) If any appeal filed by the Assessing Officer or the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner is pending before the Appellate Tribunal or the High Court for a rollback year, on the issue which is subject matter of the rollback provision for that year, the said appeal to the extent of the subject covered under the agreement, shall be withdrawn by the Assessing Officer or the Principal Commissioner or the Commissioner, as the case may be, within three months of filing of modified return by the applicant. (v) The applicant, the Assessing Officer or the Principal Commissioner or the Commissioner, shall inform the Dispute Resolution Panel or the Commissioner (Appeals) or the Appellate Tribunal or the High Court, as the case may be, the fact of an agreement containing rollback provision having been entered into along with a copy of the same as soon as it is practicable to do so.

		(vi) In case effect cannot be given to the rollback provision of an agreement in accordance with this rule, for any rollback year to which it applies, on account of failure on the part of applicant, the agreement shall be cancelled.

Subsequent to the notification of the rules, the CBDT has issued Circular No. 10/2015 dated 10.6.2015 adopting a Question and Answer format to clarify certain issues arising out of the said Rules. The questions raised and answers to such questions as per the said Circular are given hereunder:

Question 1

Under rule 10MA(2)(ii) there is a condition that the return of income for the relevant roll back year has been or is furnished by the applicant before the due date specified in Explanation 2 to section 139(1). It is not clear as to whether applicants who have filed returns under section 139(4) or 139(5) of the Act would be eligible for roll back.

Answer

The return of income under section 139(5) can be filed only when a return under section 139(1) has already been filed. Therefore, the return of income filed under section 139(5) of the Act, replaces the original return of income filed under section 139(1). Hence, if there is a return which is filed under section 139(5) to revise the original return filed before the due date specified in Explanation 2 to sub-section (1) of section 139, the applicant would be entitled for rollback on this revised return of income.

However, rollback provisions will not be available in case of a return of income filed under section 139(4) because it is a return which is not filed before the due date.

Note – A belated return filed under section 139(4) can also be revised under section 139(5). In such a case, the revised return would replace the belated return. Therefore, an applicant would not be entitled for roll back provisions on a revised return which replaces a belated return.

Question 2

Rule 10MA(2)(i) mandates that the rollback provision shall apply in respect of an international transaction that is same as the international transaction to which the agreement (other than the rollback provision) applies. It is not clear what is the meaning of the word "same". Further, it is not clear whether this restriction also applies to the Functions, Assets, Risks (FAR) analysis.

Answer

The international transaction for which a rollback provision is to be allowed should be the same as the one proposed to be undertaken in the future years and in respect of which the agreement has been reached. There cannot be a situation where rollback is finalised for a transaction which is not covered in the agreement for future years. The term same international transaction implies that the transaction in the rollback year has to be of same nature and undertaken with the same associated enterprise(s), as proposed to be undertaken in the future years and in respect of which agreement has been reached. In the context of FAR analysis, the restriction would operate to ensure that rollback provisions would apply only if the FAR analysis of the rollback year does not differ materially from the FAR validated for the purpose of reaching an agreement in respect of international transactions to be undertaken in the future years for which the agreement applies.

The word “materially” is generally being defined in the Advance Pricing Agreements being entered into by CBDT. According to this definition, the word “materially” will be interpreted consistently with its ordinary definition and in a manner that a material change of facts and circumstances would be understood as a change which could reasonably have resulted in an agreement with significantly different terms and conditions.

Question 3

Rule 10MA(2)(iv) requires that the application for rollback provision, in respect of an international transaction, has to be made by the applicant for all the rollback years in which the said international transaction has been undertaken by the applicant. Clarification is required as to whether rollback has to be requested for all four years or applicant can choose the years out of the block of four years.

Answer

The applicant does not have the option to choose the years for which it wants to apply for rollback. The applicant has to either apply for all the four years or not apply at all. However, if the covered international transaction(s) did not exist in a rollback year or there is some disqualification in a rollback year, then the applicant can apply for rollback for less than four years. Accordingly, if the covered international transaction(s) were not in existence during any of the rollback years, the applicant can apply for rollback for the remaining years. Similarly, if in any of the rollback years for the covered international transaction(s), the applicant fails the test of the rollback conditions contained in various provisions, then it would be denied the benefit of rollback for that rollback year. However, for other rollback years, it can still apply for rollback.

Question 4

Rule 10MA(3) states that the rollback provision shall not be provided in respect of an international transaction for a rollback year if the determination of arm’s length price of the said international transaction for the said year has been the subject matter of an appeal before the Appellate Tribunal and the Appellate Tribunal has passed an order disposing of such appeal at any time before signing of the agreement. Further, Rule 10 RA(4) provides that if any appeal filed by the applicant is pending before the Commissioner (Appeals), Appellate Tribunal or the High Court for a rollback year, on the issue which is subject matter of the rollback provision for that year, the said appeal to the extent of the subject covered under the agreement shall be withdrawn by the applicant.

There is a need to clarify the phrase "Tribunal has passed an order disposing of such appeal" and on the mismatch, if any, between Rule 10MA(3) and Rule 10RA(4).

Answer

The reason for not allowing rollback for the international transaction for which Appellate Tribunal has passed an order disposing of an appeal is that the ITAT is the final fact finding authority and hence, on factual issues, the matter has already reached finality in that year. However, if the ITAT has not decided the matter and has only set aside the order for fresh consideration of the matter by the lower authorities with full discretion at their disposal, the matter shall not be treated as one having reached finality and hence, benefit of rollback can still be given.

There is no mismatch between Rule 10MA(3) and Rule 10RA(4).

Question 5

Rule 10MA(3)(ii) provides that rollback provision shall not be provided in respect of an international transaction for a rollback year if the application of rollback provision has the effect of reducing the total income or increasing the loss, as the case may be, of the applicant as declared in the return of income of the said year. It may be clarified whether the rollback provisions in such situations can be applied in a manner so as to ensure that the returned income or loss is accepted as the final income or loss after applying the rollback provisions.

Answer

It is clarified that in case the terms of rollback provisions contain specific agreement between the Board and the applicant that the agreed determination of ALP or the agreed manner of determination of ALP is subject to the condition that the ALP would get modified to the extent that it does not result in reducing the total income or increasing the total loss, as the case may be, of the applicant as declared in the return of income of the said year, the rollback provisions could be applied. For example, if the declared income is ₹ 100, the income as adjusted by the TPO is ₹ 120, and the application of the rollback provisions results in reducing the income to ₹ 90, then the rollback for that year would be determined in a manner that the declared income ₹ 100 would be treated as the final income for that year.

Question 6

Rule 10RA(7) states that in case effect cannot be given to the rollback provision of an agreement in accordance with this rule, for any rollback year to which it applies, on account of failure on the part of applicant, the agreement shall be cancelled. It is to be clarified as to whether the entire agreement is to be cancelled or only that year for which roll back fails.

Answer

The procedure for giving effect to a rollback provision is laid down in Rule 10RA. Sub-rules (2), (3), (4) and (6) of the Rule specify the actions to be taken by the applicant in order that effect may be given to the rollback provision. If the applicant does not carry out such actions for any of the rollback years, the entire agreement shall be cancelled.

This is because the rollback provision has been introduced for the benefit of the applicant and is applicable at its option. Accordingly, if the rollback provision cannot be given effect to for any of the rollback years on account of the applicant not taking the actions specified in sub-rules (2), (3), (4) or (6), the entire agreement gets vitiated and will have to be cancelled.

Question 7

If there is a Mutual Agreement Procedure (MAP) application already pending for a rollback year, what would be the stand of the APA authorities? Further, what would be the view of the APA Authorities, if MAP has already been concluded for a rollback year?

Answer

If MAP has been already concluded for any of the international transactions in any of the rollback year under APA, rollback provisions would not be allowed for those international transactions for that year but could be allowed for other years or for other international transactions for that year, subject to fulfilment of specified conditions in Rules 10MA and 10RA. However, if MAP request is pending for any of the rollback year under APA, upon the option exercised by the applicant, either MAP or application for roll back shall be proceeded with for such year.

Question 8

Rule 10MA(1) provides that the agreement may provide for determining ALP or manner of determination of ALP. However, Rule 10MA(4) only specifies that the manner of determination of ALP should be the same as in the APA term. Does that mean the ALP could be different?

Answer

Yes, the ALP could be different for different years. However, the manner of determination of ALP (including choice of Method, comparability analysis and Tested Party) would be same.

Question 9

Will there be compliance audit for roll back? Would critical assumptions have to be validated during compliance audit?

Answer

Since rollback provisions are for past years, ALP for the rollback years would be agreed after full examination of all the facts, including validation of critical assumptions. Hence, compliance audit for the rollback years would primarily be to check if the agreed price or methodology has been applied in the modified return.

Question 10

Whether applicant has an option to withdraw its rollback application? Can the applicant accept the rollback results without accepting the APA for the future years?

Answer

The applicant has an option to withdraw its roll back application even while maintaining the APA application for the future years. However, it is not possible to accept the rollback results without accepting the APA for the future years. It may also be noted that the fee specified in Rule 10MA(5) shall not be refunded even where a rollback application is withdrawn.

Question 11

For already concluded APAs, will new APAs be signed for rollback or earlier APAs could be revised?

Answer

The second proviso to Rule 10MA(5) provides for revision of APAs already concluded to include rollback provisions.

Question 12

For already concluded APAs, where the modified return has already been filed for the first year of the APA term, how will the time-limit for filing modified return for rollback years be determined?

Answer

The time to file modified return for rollback years will start from the date of signing the revised APA incorporating the rollback provisions.

Question 13

In case of merger of companies, where one or more of those companies are APA applicants, how would the rollback provisions be allowed and to which company or companies would it be allowed?

Answer

The agreement is between the Board and a person. The principle to be followed in case of merger is that the person (company) who makes the APA application would only be entitled to enter into the agreement and be entitled for the rollback provisions in respect of international transactions undertaken by it in rollback years. Other persons (companies) who have merged with this person (company) would not be eligible for the rollback provisions.

To illustrate, if A, B and C merge to form C and C is the APA applicant, then the agreement can only be entered into with C and only C would be eligible for the rollback provisions. A and B would not be eligible for the rollback provisions. To illustrate further, if A and B merge to form a new company C and C is the APA applicant, then nobody would be eligible for rollback provisions.

Question 14

In case of a demerger of an APA applicant or signatory into two or more companies (persons), who would be eligible for the rollback provisions?

Answer

The same principle as mentioned in the previous answer, i.e., the person (company) who makes an APA application or enters into an APA would only be entitled for the rollback provisions, would continue to apply. To illustrate, if A has applied for or entered into an APA and, subsequently, demerges into A and B, then only A will be eligible for rollback for international transactions covered under the APA. As B was not in existence in rollback years, availing or grant of rollback to B does not arise.

(4) Section 92CD provides for the following procedure for giving effect to an APA -

(i) In case a person has entered into an APA and prior to the date of entering into such APA, he has furnished the return of income under the provisions of section 139 in respect of any assessment year relevant to a previous year to which the APA applies, then, such person shall, within a period of three months from the end of the month in which the said agreement was entered into, furnish a modified return, notwithstanding any contrary provision contained in section 139.

(ii) Such modified return shall be in accordance with and limited to the provisions of such APA i.e., modifications can only be made on account of such APA in the return to be filed.

(iii) All other provisions of this Act shall apply as if the modified return is a return furnished under section 139, unless anything to the contrary is provided in this section.

(iv) If the assessment or reassessment proceedings for an assessment year relevant to a previous year to which the APA applies have been completed before the expiry of period allowed for furnishing of modified return, the Assessing Officer shall, in a case where modified return is filed in accordance with the provisions of this section, proceed to assess or reassess or re-compute the total income of the relevant assessment year having regard to and in accordance with the APA.

However, with effect from 1.9.2019, Assessing Officer shall pass an order modifying the total income of the relevant assessment year determined in such assessment or reassessment, as the case may be, having regard to and in accordance with the APA, instead of proceeding to assess or reassess the total income.

Such order for assessment or reassessment or re-computation of total income shall be passed within a period of 1 year from the end of the financial year in which the modified return was furnished. This shall apply notwithstanding the period of limitation contained under section 153 or 153B or 144C.

The appeal against such order shall lie to Commissioner (Appeals) [Section 246A]

(v) Where the assessment or reassessment proceedings for an assessment year relevant to the previous year to which the APA applies, are pending on the date of filing of modified return, the Assessing Officer shall proceed to complete the assessment or reassessment proceedings in accordance with the APA taking into consideration the modified return so furnished.

In this case, the time period of completion of pending assessment or reassessment mentioned under section 153 or 153B or 144C shall be extended by 12 months. This shall apply notwithstanding the period of limitation contained under section 153 or 153B or 144C.

(vi) The assessment or reassessment proceedings for an assessment year shall be deemed to have been completed where -

(a) an assessment or reassessment order has been passed; or

(b) no notice has been issued under section 143(2) till the expiry of the limitation period provided under the said section.

VIII. Secondary Adjustment [Section 92CE]

(1) Meaning of Primary Adjustment and Secondary Adjustment

"Primary adjustment" to a transfer price means the determination of transfer price in accordance with the arm's length principle resulting in an increase in the total income or reduction in the loss, as the case may be, of the assessee.

"Secondary adjustment" means an adjustment in the books of accounts of the assessee and its associated enterprise to reflect that the actual allocation of profits between the assessee and its associated enterprise are consistent with the transfer price determined as a result of primary adjustment, thereby removing the imbalance between cash account and actual profit of the assessee.

(2) Forms of Secondary Adjustment - As per the OECD's Transfer Pricing Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises and Tax Administrations (OECD transfer pricing guidelines), secondary adjustment may take the form of constructive dividends, constructive equity contributions, or constructive loans.

(3) Alignment of economic benefit of the transaction with the arm's length position - The provisions of secondary adjustment are internationally recognised and are already part of the transfer pricing rules of many leading economies in the world. Whilst the approaches to secondary adjustments by individual countries vary, they represent an internationally recognised method to align the economic benefit of the transaction with the arm's length position.

(4) Cases where secondary adjustment has to be made - In order to align the transfer pricing provisions in line with OECD transfer pricing guidelines and international best practices, section 92CE provides that the assessee shall be required to carry out secondary adjustment where the primary adjustment to transfer price:

(i) has been made suo motu by the assessee in his return of income; or

(ii) made by the Assessing Officer has been accepted by the assessee; or

(iii) is determined by an advance pricing agreement entered into by the assessee under section 92CC on or after 1.4.2017; or

(iv) is made as per the safe harbour rules framed under section 92CB; or

(v) is arising as a result of resolution of an assessment by way of the mutual agreement procedure under an agreement entered into under section 90 or 90A for avoidance of double taxation.

(5) No requirement of secondary adjustment in certain cases - Such secondary adjustment, however, shall not be carried out if, the amount of primary adjustment made in the case of an assessee in any previous year does not exceed ₹ 1 crore or the primary adjustment is made in respect of A.Y.2016-17 or an earlier assessment year.

(6) Non-repatriation of excess money by the associated enterprise deemed to be an advance - Where, as a result of primary adjustment to the transfer price, there is an increase in the total income or reduction in the loss, as the case may be, of the assessee, the excess money or part thereof, as the case may be, which is available with its associated enterprise, if not repatriated to India within the time as may be prescribed, shall be deemed to be an advance made by the assessee to such associated enterprise and the interest on such advance, shall be computed as the income of the assessee, in the prescribed manner.

Such excess money or part thereof may be repatriated from any of the associated enterprises of the assessee which is not resident in India.

"Excess money" means the difference between the arm's length price determined in primary adjustment and the price at which the international transaction has actually taken place.

Arms' Length Price in primary adjustment
Actual value of international transaction
Excess Money

(7) Time limit for repatriation of excess money or part thereof

Rule 10CB(1) prescribes the time limit for repatriation of excess money i.e., on or before 90 days from the date given in column (3) in the cases mentioned in column (2) of the table below:

	Case	Date
(1)	(2)	(3)
(i)	Where primary adjustments to transfer price has been made suo-moto by the assessee in his return of income	the due date of filing of return u/s 139(1)
(ii)	If primary adjustments to transfer price as determined in the order of the Assessing Officer or the appellate authority has been accepted by the assessee	the date of the said order
(iii)	Where agreement for advance pricing has been entered into by the assessee under section 92CD	the due date of filing of return u/s 139(1)
(iv)	Where option has been exercised by the assessee as per the safe harbour rules under section 92CB	the due date of filing of return u/s 139(1)

(v)	Where agreement under the Mutual agreement procedure under a DTAA has been entered into u/s 90 or 90A	the due date of filing of return u/s 139(1)

(8) Rate of interest for the purpose of computation on interest on excess money or part thereof, if not repatriated within the prescribed time

Rule 10CB(2) prescribes the rate at which the per annum interest income shall be computed in case of failure to repatriate the excess money within the above time limit. The interest would be computed at the rates mentioned in column (3) in respect of the cases mentioned in column (2) of the table below:

	Case	Rate
(1)	(2)	(3)
(i)	Where the international transaction is denominated in Indian rupee	At the one year marginal cost of fund lending rate of SBI as on 1st April of the relevant previous year + 3.25%
(ii)	Where the international transaction is denominated in foreign currency	At six month London Interbank Offered Rate (LIBOR) as on 30th September of the relevant previous year + 3.00%

(9) Option to pay additional income-tax, if the excess money not repatriated: In a case where the excess money or part thereof has not been repatriated within the prescribed time as mentioned above, the assessee has the option to pay additional income-tax @ 20.9664% (i.e., tax@18% plus surcharge@12% plus cess@4%) on such excess money or part thereof, as the case may be.

Where additional income-tax is so paid by the assessee, he will not be required to make secondary adjustment and compute interest from the date of payment of such tax. This implies that he would, in any case, be required to compute interest upto the date of payment of such additional tax.

The additional income-tax so paid by the assessee shall be treated as the final payment of tax in respect of excess money or part thereof not repatriated and no further credit would be allowed to the assessee or to any other person in respect of the amount of additional income-tax so paid.

Further, no deduction in respect of the amount on which such additional income-tax has been paid, would be allowed under any other provision of the Act.

IX. Records to be maintained [Section 92D]: Transfer pricing documentation is the documentation maintained to review Transfer Pricing arrangements for transactions taking place between different entities of the same group (also known as intra-group transactions). The primary objective of the transfer pricing documentation is to review the arm's length (fair price) nature of the transactions taking place between different entities of an Multi National Company

(1) Persons responsible for keeping and maintaining prescribed information and document - Section 92D imposes responsibility on every person

(i) who enters into an international transaction to keep and maintain such information and documents in respect thereof as may be prescribed by CBDT

(ii) being a constituent entity of an international group*, to keep and maintain the prescribed information and document* in respect of an international group*.*

The constituent entity is required to keep and maintain the information and document irrespective of the fact whether or not any international transaction is undertaken by such constituent entity.

The constituent entity has to furnish the information and document to the authority prescribed under section 286(1), i.e., Director General of Income-tax (Risk Assessment) in the prescribed manner, on or before prescribed date

(2) Information and documents to be kept and maintained for prescribed period - The CBDT is empowered to prescribe the period for which the information and documents shall be kept and maintained.

(3) Assessing Officer & Commissioner (Appeals) empowered to require persons entering into international transaction to furnish prescribed information and documents - The Assessing Officer or the Commissioner (Appeals) may, in the course of any proceedings under the Income-tax Act, require any person who has entered into an international transaction to furnish any such prescribed information or documents within a period of 30 days from the date of receipt of a notice issued in this regard. The requisition period may, on request, be extended further for a period not exceeding thirty days by the Assessing Officer or the Commissioner (Appeals).

Information to be kept and maintained under section 92D[Rule 10D(1)]

Rule 10D(1) provides for the information and documents to be kept and maintained by the assessee under section 92D(1)(i). Under this Rule, the following information and documents have to be maintained:

(i) A description of the ownership structure of the assessee enterprise with details of shares or other ownership interest held therein by other enterprises;

(ii) A profile of the multinational group of which the assessee enterprise is a part along with the name, address, legal status and country of tax residence of each of the enterprises comprised in the group with whom international transactions have been entered into by the assessee, and ownership linkages among them;

(iii) A broad description of the business of the assessee and the industry in which the assessee operates, and the business of the associated enterprises with whom the assessee has transacted;

(iv) The nature and terms (including prices) of international transactions entered into with each associated enterprise, details of property transferred or services provided and the quantum and the value of each such transaction or class of such transaction;

(v) A description of the functions performed, risks assumed and assets employed or to be employed by the assessee and by the associated enterprises involved in the international transactions;

(vi) A record of the economic and market analyses, forecasts, budgets or any other financial estimates prepared by the assessee for the business as a whole and for each division or product separately, which may have a bearing on the international transactions entered into by the assessee;

(vii) A record of uncontrolled transactions taken into account for analysing their comparability with the international transactions entered into, including a record of the nature, terms and conditions relating to any uncontrolled transaction with third parties which may be of relevance to the pricing of the international transactions;

(viii) A record of the analysis performed to evaluate comparability of uncontrolled transactions with the relevant international transaction;

(ix) A description of the methods considered for determining the arm's length price in relation to each international transaction or class of transaction, the method selected as the most appropriate method along with explanation as to why such method was so selected, and how such method was applied in each case;

(x) A record of the actual working carried out for determining the arm's length price, including details of the comparable data and financial information used to apply the most appropriate method, and adjustments, if any, which were made to account for differences between the international transaction and the comparable uncontrolled transactions, or between the enterprises entering into such transactions;

(xi) The assumptions, policies and price negotiations, if any, which have critically affected the determination of the arm's length price;

(xii) Details of the adjustments, if any, made to transfer prices to align them with arm's length prices determined under the Income-tax Rules and consequent adjustment made to the total income for tax purposes;

(xiii) Any other information, data or documents, including information or data relating to the associated enterprise, which may be relevant for determination of the arm's length price.

Threshold limit for maintenance of prescribed information and documents [Rule 10D(2)]

Rule 10D(2) provides that in a case where the aggregate value of international transactions does not exceed ₹ 1 crore, it will not be obligatory for the assessee to maintain the above information and documents.

However, it is provided that in the above cases also the assessee will have to substantiate that the income arising from the international transactions with associated enterprises, as disclosed by the accounts, is in accordance with section 92. This will mean that, even if the aggregate value of the international transactions is less than ₹ 1 crore, the assessee will have to maintain adequate records and evidence to show that the international transactions with associated enterprises are on the basis of arm's length principle.

Information to be supported by authentic documents [Rule 10D(3)]

The information to be maintained by the assessee, is to be supported by authentic documents. These documents may include the following:

(i) Official publications, reports, studies and data bases from the Government of the country of residence of the associated enterprise, or of any other country;

(ii) Reports of market research studies carried out and technical publications brought out by institutions of national or international repute;

(iii) Price publications including stock exchange and commodity market quotations;

(iv) Published accounts and financial statements relating to the business affairs of the associated enterprises;

(v) Agreements and contracts entered into with associated enterprises or with unrelated enterprises in respect of transactions similar to the international transactions;

(vi) Letters and other correspondence documenting any terms negotiated between the assessee and the associated enterprise;

(vii) Documents normally issued in connection with various transactions under the accounting practices followed.

It is also provided that the information and documents to be maintained should be contemporaneous and should exist latest by the date specified for getting the audit report. In the case of international transactions which continue to have effect over more than one financial year, fresh documents will not be required to be maintained for each year if there are no significant change which may affect the determination of arm's length price.

The above information and documents are required to be maintained for a period of eight years from the end of the relevant assessment year.

X. Power of Assessing Officer: Section 92C(3) and (4) gives power to the Assessing Officer to determine the arm's length price under the following circumstances and also empowers the Assessing Officer to re-compute total income of the assessee having regard to arm's length price determined by him. It also provides that deduction under section 10AA and Chapter VI-A shall not be allowed from the additional income computed by him.

For example, if the total income declared by the assessee in his return of income is, say ₹ 7 lakhs and the total income computed by the Assessing Officer applying the arm's length principle is, say ₹ 9 lakhs, the difference of ₹ 2 lakhs will not qualify for deduction under section 10AA or Chapter VI-A.

The Assessing Officer may invoke the power to determine arm's length price if during the course of any proceeding, he is of the opinion that, on the basis of material or information or documents in his possession:

(a) The price charged or paid in an international transaction has not been determined in accordance with section 92C(1) and (2); or

(b) Any information and documents relating to an international transaction has not been kept and maintained by the assessee in accordance with the provisions contained in section 92D(1) and the rules made in this behalf (Rule 10D); or

(c) The information or data used in computation of the arm's length price is not reliable or correct; or

(d) The assessee has failed to furnish within the specified time, any information or documents which he was required to furnish by a notice issued under section 92D(3).

Before invoking the power to determine arm's length price, an opportunity of being heard is to be given to the assessee.

Second proviso to section 92C(4) provides that if the total income of an associated enterprise is computed under this section on the determination of arm's length price paid to another associated enterprise, from which tax is deducted or deductible at source, the income of the other associated enterprise shall not be recomputed on this count.

For example, if "A" Ltd. has paid royalty to "B" Ltd. (Non-Resident) @10% of sales and tax is deducted at source, "B" Ltd. cannot claim refund if the Assessing Officer has determined 8% as arm's length price in the case of "A" Ltd. and disallowed 2% of the royalty amount.

XI. Audit Report [Section 92E]: Under section 92E, every person who enters into an international transaction during a previous year is required to obtain a report from a chartered accountant and furnish such report on or before the specified date on the prescribed form.

Rule 10E provides that the auditor's report shall be in Form No.3CEB. It requires the auditor to state that he has examined the accounts and records of the assessee relating to the international transactions entered into by the assessee during the relevant year. He has also to give his opinion whether the prescribed information and documents relating to the above transactions have been kept by the assessee. Further, he has to state that the particulars stated in the Annexure to his report are true and correct. The Annexure is in two parts.

In the first part of the Annexure, general information of the assessee is required to be reported. In the second part of the Annexure, the particulars about the international transactions are required to be stated. Broadly stated these particulars include list of associated enterprises, particulars and description of transactions relating to purchase, sales, provisions of service, loans, advances, etc

"Specified date" shall have the same meaning as assigned to due date in Explanation 2 below sub-section (1) of section 139. The due date for filing of transfer pricing report under section 92E in Form 3CEB is 30th November of the assessment year.

XII. Penalties: Stringent penalties are provided in various sections for non-compliance with the above provisions. These are as under:

Penalty for failure to report any international transaction or any transaction deemed to be an international transaction: Under section 270A, penalty@50% of tax payable on under-reported income is leviable. However, the amount of under-reported income represented by any addition made in conformity with the arm's length price determined by the Transfer Pricing Officer would not be included within the scope of under-reported income under section 270A, where the assessee had maintained information and documents, as prescribed under section 92D, declared the international transactions under Chapter X and disclosed all material facts relating to the transaction.

(2) Furnishing of report in respect of international group in line with BEPS Action Plan – Country by Country Report and Master File

(i) Transfer Pricing provisions under the Income-tax Act, 1961

Chapter X of the Income-tax Act, 1961 comprising sections 92 to 92F contain provisions relating to transfer pricing regime.

Section 92D requires maintenance of prescribed information and document relating to the international transaction and specified domestic transaction.

(ii) Requirements as per OECD report on Action 13 of BEPS Action Plan

The report provides for:

(a) revised standards for transfer pricing documentation; and

(b) a template for country-by-country reporting of income, earnings, taxes paid and certain measure of economic activity.

(iii) Three-tier structure mandated by BEPS

The BEPS report recommends that countries adopt a standardised approach to transfer pricing documentation; it mandates the following three-tier structure:-

	Document	Information
(1)	Master File	Standardised information relevant for all multinational enterprises (MNE) group members
(2)	Local file	Specific reference to material transactions of the local taxpayer
(3)	Country-by-country report	Information relating to the global allocation of the MNE's income and taxes paid; and Indicators of the location of economic activity within the MNE group.

(iv) Advantages of the three tier structure [as per BEPS Report]:

(a) Taxpayers will be required to articulate consistent transfer pricing positions;

(b) Tax administrations would get useful information to assess transfer pricing risks;

(c) Tax administrations would be able to make determinations about where their resources can most effectively be deployed, and, in the event audits are called for, provide information to commence and target audit enquiries.

(v) Country-by-country Report: Reporting Requirements of MNEs

The Country-by-Country (CbC) report has to be submitted by parent entity of an international group to the prescribed authority in its country of residence. This report is to be based on consolidated financial statement of the group.

(a) MNEs have to report annually and for each tax jurisdiction in which they do business:

(1) the amount of revenue;

(2) profit before income tax; and

(3) income tax paid and accrued.

(b) MNEs have to report their total employment, capital, accumulated earnings and tangible assets in each tax jurisdiction.

(c) MNEs have to identify each entity within the group doing business in a particular tax jurisdiction and provide an indication of the business activities each entity engages in.

(vi) Master File: Objective & Features

(a) The master file would provide an overview of the MNE groups business, including:

(1) the nature of its global business operations,

(2) its overall transfer pricing policies, and

(3) its global allocation of income and economic activity in order to assist tax administrations in evaluating the presence of significant transfer pricing risk.

(b) The master file is intended to provide a high-level overview in order to place the MNE group's transfer pricing practices in their global economic, legal, financial and tax context.

(c) The master file shall contain information which may not be restricted to transaction undertaken by a particular entity situated in particular country.

(d) Thus, information in master file would be more comprehensive than the existing regular transfer pricing documentation.

(e) The master file shall be furnished by each entity to the tax authority of the country in which it operates.

(vii) Implementation of international consensus in India

India is one of the active members of BEPS initiative and part of international consensus. For the purpose of implementing the international consensus, a specific reporting regime in respect of CbC reporting and also the master file has been incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961. (3) Transfer pricing for Specified Domestic Transactions

(i) Income from domestic related party transactions to be subject to transfer pricing [Section 92(2A)]: Section 92 provides that any income arising from an international transaction shall be computed having regard to the arm's length price. In order to provide objectivity in determination of income from domestic related party transactions and determination of reasonableness of expenditure between related domestic parties, the provisions of section 92 have been extended to include within its ambit the specified domestic transactions. Section 92(2A) provides that, any allowance for an expenditure or interest or allocation of any cost or expense or any income in relation to the specified domestic transaction shall be computed having regard to the arm's length price. However, as per section 92(3), the provisions of this section would not apply if such allowance for expense or interest under section 92(2A) has the effect of reducing the income chargeable to tax or increasing the loss, as the case may be.

(ii) Meaning of "specified domestic transaction" [Section 92BA]: Section 92BA provides the meaning of "specified domestic transaction". As per section 92BA, for the purpose of sections 92, 92C (Computation of arm's length price), 92D (Maintenance and keeping of information and documents) and 92E (Furnishing of report from an accountant), in case of an assessee the specified domestic transaction shall mean any of the following transactions, not being an international transaction, namely,-

(1) any transaction referred to in section 80A i.e., inter-unit transfer of goods and services by an undertaking or unit or enterprise or eligible business to other business carried on by the assessee or vice versa, for consideration not corresponding to the market value on the date of transfer;

(iv) Arm's length price and income of a specified domestic transaction to be computed in the same manner as applicable to an international transaction [Sections 92 & 92C]: In order to determine the arm's length price in respect of the specified domestic transaction, the provisions of section 92 and 92C shall apply to the specified domestic transaction as they apply to the international transaction. Accordingly, the methods of computation of arm's length price for an international transaction would be applicable to a specified domestic transaction also.

(v) Persons entering into a specified domestic transaction to maintain information and documents and furnish report of an accountant [Section 92D & 92E]: With a view to create a legally enforceable obligation on assessees entering into a specified domestic transaction to maintain proper documentation and obtain and furnish report of a Chartered Accountant on or before the specified date, the provisions of section 92D and 92E have been made applicable to a specified domestic transaction as they apply to an international transaction.

(vi) Reference to Transfer Pricing Officer for computation of arm's length price of specified domestic transaction [Section 92CA]: According to section 92CA, where any person has entered into an international or a specified domestic transaction in any previous year, the Assessing Officer can with the previous approval of the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, if he considers necessary or expedient to do so, refer the computation of the arm's length price of such transaction to the Transfer Pricing Officer (TPO).

When such reference is made, TPO can call upon the assessee to produce evidence in support of the computation of arm's length price made by him in respect of such transaction.

The TPO has to pass an order determining the arm's length price in respect of the specified domestic transaction after considering the evidence, documents, etc. produced by the assessee and after considering the material gathered by him. He has to send a copy of his order to the Assessing Officer as well as the assessee.

However, the powers available to the TPO to determine the ALP of other international transactions identified subsequently in the course of proceedings before him, is not available in respect of other specified domestic transaction i.e., the TPO can determine the ALP in respect of other international transaction that came to his notice subsequently during the course of proceedings but such power is not available in respect of specified domestic transaction subsequently identified.

(vii) Penalty provisions to apply to specified domestic transactions as they apply to an international transaction [Sections 271AA, 271BA & 271G]: The penalty provisions under sections 271AA, 271BA and 271G shall apply to the specified domestic transaction as they apply to an international transaction defined under section 92B.

Failure to furnish the report under section 92E from an accountant would attract penalty of ₹ 1,00,000 under section 271BA.

In addition,

(i) in case of failure to keep and maintain information, document as required under section 92D(1) or 92D(2); or

(ii) failure to report such specified domestic transaction which is required to be reported; or

Clause (iii) of Explanation to section 80A(6) clarifies that "market value" in relation to any goods or services sold, supplied or acquired, means the arm's length price as defined under section 92F of such goods or services, if it is a specified domestic transaction referred to in section 92BA i.e., the aggregate value of all such transaction specified in section 92BA exceeds ₹ 20 crore.

Therefore, in case the transfer of goods and services between undertaking or unit or enterprise or eligible business and any other business of the assessee takes place at the arm's length price, such arm's length price shall be the market value for the purpose of section 80A(6), and no further adjustment would be required in respect of the same, if the transaction is a specified domestic transaction.

(ix) Similarly, for the purpose of section 80-IA(8), the market value, in relation to any goods or services transferred between the eligible business and any other business carried on by the assessee, shall mean -

(1) the price that such goods or services would ordinarily fetch in the open market; or

(2) the arm's length price as defined under section 92F, where the transfer of such goods or services is a specified domestic transaction referred to in section 92BA.

(x) Profit from transactions between an assessee carrying on "eligible business" and other assessees to be determined as per arm's length price [Section 80-IA(10)]: Under section 80-IA(10), the Assessing Officer is empowered to make an adjustment while computing the profit and gains of the eligible business on the basis of the reasonable profit that can be derived from the transaction, in case the transaction between the assessee carrying on the eligible business under section 80-IA and any other person is so arranged that the transaction produces excessive profits to the eligible business.

It has been provided that if the aforesaid arrangement between the assessee carrying on the eligible business and any other person is a specified domestic transaction referred to in section 92BA, then, the amount of profit of such transaction shall be determined having regard to arm's length price as defined under section 92F and not as per the reasonable profit from such transaction.

(xi) Transfer Pricing Rules made applicable to Specified Domestic Transactions as well [Notification No. 41/2013 dated 10.06.2013]

Section 92CB(1) provides that the determination of arm's length price under section 92C or section 92CA shall be subject to safe harbour rules. Section 92CB(2) empowers the CBDT to prescribe safe harbour rules.

Safe harbour means circumstances in which the income tax authorities shall accept the transfer price declared by the assessee.

Accordingly, the CBDT has, in exercise of the powers conferred by section 92CB and 92D, read with section 295, inserted Rules 10TH, 10THA, 10THB, 10THC & 10THD providing the safe harbour rules for specified domestic transactions.

1.6 TRANSFER OF INCOME TO NON RESIDENTS [SECTION 93]

Section 93 hits at transactions which are effected with a view to avoiding liability to taxation. For the purpose, the word “non-resident” also includes a person who is not-ordinarily resident. In order to attract the provisions of this section, all the following conditions must be satisfied:

(a) There is a transfer of assets - whether movable or immovable and whether tangible or intangible.

(b) The transfer is made by any person in India or outside irrespective of his residential status or citizenship.

(c) The transfer is made either alone or in connection with associated operations.

(d) The assets transferred directly yield income chargeable to tax under this Act.

(e) The transfer of assets is effected in such a manner that the income becomes payable to a person outside India who is either a non-resident or a not ordinarily resident in India.

(f) The transferor acquires any right by virtue of which he gets the power to enjoy the income whether immediately or in future.

(g) The Assessing Officer is satisfied that avoidance of liability to tax in India is the purpose of the transfers.

In particular, this section deems any income of a non-resident person which, if it were the income of a resident person, would be chargeable to tax in India (in the absence of this Section), as the income of the resident person in India for all purposes of the Act provided that all the conditions stated above are satisfied. This section also covers a variety of transactions constituting a transfer including cases where assets are transferred to a non-resident person and the transferor indirectly derives income under the guise of obtaining loans or repayment of loans. If the aforesaid conditions are fulfilled, the income from the assets transferred should be treated as the income of the transferor and would accordingly be taxable in his hands. Therefore, where assets are transferred to a body corporate outside India, in consideration of shares allotted by it to the transferor, he (the transferor), will become assessable under this section in respect of the income of the company derived by it from those assets. This section will not, however, apply to cases where it is shown to the satisfaction of the Assessing Officer that (i) neither the transfer nor any associated operation had for its purpose or for one of its purposes the avoidance of liability to taxation or (ii) it is provided to the satisfaction of the Assessing Officer that the transfer was effected for bonafide commercial purpose and with no intent to avoid tax.

The income which is deemed to be that of the transferor under this section may also arise as a result of the transfer in connection with associated operations. However, in this case also, the treatment of the income would be the same.

Meaning of "associated operation": The expression 'associated operation," in relation to a transfer, means an operation of any kind effected by any person in relation to:

(i) any of the assets transferred;

(ii) any assets representing, whether directly or indirectly, any of the assets transferred;

(iii) any income arising from such assets;

(iv) any assets representing, whether directly or indirectly, the accumulation of income arising from such assets.

Meaning of "Assets": It includes property or rights of any kind.

Meaning of "transfer": In relation to rights, transfer includes the creation of those rights.

Meaning of "benefit": It includes a payment of any kind.

In order to determine the liability of the assessee in respect of the deemed income it is immaterial if the income or benefits from the transfer (i) are actually received or not or (ii) are received or are receivable in cash or kind or (iii) are receivable directly or indirectly. For purposes of this section, a person is deemed to have the power to enjoy the income of a non-resident if:

(i) the income, in fact, so dealt with by any person as to be calculated at some point of time to enure for the benefit of the transferor, whether in the same form of the income or otherwise;

(ii) the receipt or accrual of the income operates to increase value of any assets held by the transferor or for his direct or indirect benefit;

(iii) the transferor receives or is entitled to receive at any time any benefit out of the income or out of any money available for the purpose by reason of the effect or successive effects of the associated operations on that income and the assets which represent that income;

(iv) the transferor is in a position to obtain for himself the beneficial enjoyment of the income by exercising any power of appointment or power of revocation or otherwise, whether with or without the consent of any other person, or

(v) the transferor is able to control directly or indirectly the application of the income in any manner whatsoever.

However, in determining whether a person has the power to enjoy the income due regard shall be had to the substantial result and effect of the transfer and any associated operations must be taken into consideration irrespective of the nature or form of the benefits.

It may be noted that where an assessee has been charged to tax in respect of a sum deemed to be his income under this section, the subsequent receipt of that sum by the assessee, whether as income or in any other form, shall not be liable to tax in his hands at the time of receipt.

1.7 TRANSACTIONS IN SECURITIES [SECTION 94]

Section 94 aims at preventing avoidance of tax by an assessee by sale or purchase of securities in devices and under different circumstances. In all cases where there is a transfer of shares or securities before the due date of payment of interest whereby the transferor avoids tax or shifts the burden of tax to some other person, the income from the securities transferred shall be deemed to be that of the transferor and shall be assessable in his hands accordingly.

Bond washing transactions: Bond washing transactions, i.e. cases of sale of securities and shares cum-interest or cum-dividend would fall within the provisions of the section. Income by way of interest on securities or dividends does not accrue day by day but on a certain fixed date or on the date of declaration, as the case may be. Accordingly, the seller of securities cum-interest or shares cum-dividends, on accrual of the interest, is not assessable on the interest or dividend income on the securities or shares sold by him since that part of the consideration received would be part of the capital price realised on sale. As a result, if a person, on the eve of payment of interest, sells or otherwise transfers his securities to another and buys back or re-acquires the same after the interest income had been received by the transfer would escape tax thereon. This would amount to either total avoidance of tax or shifting the burden of tax by the transferor indirectly and transactions of this type are commonly known as bond washing transaction. In order to prevent this type of avoidance of tax by the assessee, it has been specifically provided that where the owner of any shares or securities sells or otherwise transfers them and then buys them back or otherwise re-acquires them, the interest received by the transferee shall be the income of the transferor.

Similarly, in cases where shares or securities are sold by the owner of such shares or securities or by a person having beneficial interest therein and, as a result of the sale, the transferor receives either no income or less income from the securities or shares than that which would have been received by him, had the sale not been made, then the income from such securities or shares of such year shall be deemed to be the income of the transferor. Thus, this provision applies only to cases where

(i) the income accrues or falls due periodically and

(ii) the income in question is of a recurring nature, though the interval of time between the two dates of accrual may not equal (e.g., dividends).

However, the notional dividends specified in section 2(22) would not be covered by this section and the assessment of such fictional dividends should be made only in the hands of the person who is entitled to the same and not in the hands of the transferor.

There is however, one exception to both the above provisions given in sub-section (3). According to the exception, the above provisions would not apply (i) if there has been no avoidance of tax, (ii) if the avoidance was exceptional and not systematic and there was no avoidance of income-tax by the assessee during the three years immediately preceding the previous year. It is for the assessee to prove to the satisfaction of the Assessing Officer that there had been no avoidance of tax or that the avoidance of tax is exceptional and not systematic.

Where any person carrying on business, wholly or in part, as a dealer in shares and securities, buys or acquires any security and sells back or re-transfers the same, then, the interest, received or receivable by him in respect of such securities, which is deemed to be the income of the transferor, shall not be taken into account for computing his business income.

The Assessing Officer is empowered to issue a notice in writing requiring any person to furnish to him within a specified time (not being less than 28 days) in respect of all securities of which such person was the owner or in which he had a beneficial interest at any time during the period specified by him in the notice, such particulars at he may consider necessary for purposes of this Section and for the purpose of ascertaining whether tax has been borne in respect of interest or dividends on all those securities or shares.

(a) If any person buys or acquires any securities or unit within a period of three months prior to the record date and

(b) such person sells or transfers –

  (i) such securities within a period of three months after such date, or

  (ii) such unit within a period of nine months after such date and

(c) the dividend or income on such securities or unit received or receivable by such person is exempted, then, the loss, if any, arising therefrom shall be ignored for the purposes of computing his income chargeable to tax. Such loss should not exceed the amount of dividend or income received or receivable on such securities or unit [Sub-section (7)].

Where

(a) any person buys or acquires any units within a period of three months prior to the record date;

(b) such person is allotted additional units without any payment on the basis of holding such units on such date;

(c) such person sells or transfers all or any of the units referred to in (a) above within a period of nine months after such date, while continuing to hold all or any of the additional units referred to in (b), then –

   (i) the loss on sale of original units sold within a period of 9 months after the record date will be ignored and

   (ii) the amount of such loss will be considered as the cost of purchase or acquisition of the bonus units held by him on the date of such sale or transfer.

For the purposes of this section,-

	Term	Meaning
(i)	Interest	Interest includes dividend
(ii)	Record date	Such date as may be fixed by - (i) A company for the purposes of entitlement of the holder of the securities to receive dividend; or (ii) A mutual fund or the Administrator of the specified undertaking or the specified company as referred to in the Explanation to section 10(35), for the purposes of entitlement of the holder of the units to receive income, or additional unit without any consideration, as the case may be.
(iii)	Securities	The term includes stocks and shares.
(iv)	Unit	Unit of a mutual fund specified in section 10(23D) or unit of the Unit Trust of India.

1.8 INTRODUCTION OF SPECIFIC ANTI AVOIDANCE MEASURES IN RESPECT OF TRANSACTIONS WITH PERSONS LOCATED IN NOTIFIED JURISDICTIONAL AREA [SECTION 94A]

The objective of anti-avoidance measures is to discourage assessees from entering into transactions with persons located in countries or territories which do not have effective information exchange mechanism with India. The following are the anti-avoidance measures introduced -

(i) The Central Government empowered to notify any such country or territory outside India as a NJA (Notified Jurisdictional Area), having regard to the lack of effective exchange of information with such country or territory.

> Clarification on removal of Cyprus from the list of notified jurisdictional area under section 94A of the Income-tax Act, 1961 – [Circular No. 15/2017, dated 21-04-2017]
> Cyprus was specified as a "notified jurisdictional area" (NJA) under section 94A of the Income-tax Act, 1961 vide Notification No. 86/2013 dated 01.11.2013. The said Notification No. 86/2013 was subsequently rescinded vide Notification No. 114 dated 14.12.2016 and Notification No. 119 dated 16.12.2016 with effect from the date of issue of the notification.
> The CBDT has, vide this Circular, clarified that Notification No. 86/2013 has been rescinded with effect from the date of issue of the said notification, thereby, removing Cyprus as a notified jurisdictional area with retrospective effect from 01.11.2013.

(ii) A transaction where one of the parties thereto is a person located in a NJA would be deemed to be an international transaction then all parties to the transaction to be deemed as associated enterprises, and accordingly, all the provisions of transfer pricing to be attracted in case of such a transaction. However, the benefit of permissible variation between the ALP and the transfer price [provided for in the second proviso to section 92C(2)] based on the rate notified by the Central Government would not be available in respect of such transaction.

(iii) Such transaction may be in the nature of –

(1) purchase, sale or lease of tangible or intangible property or

(2) provision of service or

(3) lending or borrowing money or

(4) any other transaction having a bearing on the profits, income, losses or assets of the assessee. It may include a mutual agreement or arrangement for allocation or apportionment of, or contribution to, any cost or expense incurred or to be incurred in connection with a benefit, service or facility provided or to be provided by or to the assessee.

(iv) Person located in a NJA shall include a person who is a resident of the NJA and a person, not being an individual, which is established in the NJA. It would also include a permanent establishment of any other person in the NJA.

(v) Payments made to any financial institution located in a NJA would not be allowed as deduction unless the assessee authorizes the CBDT or any other income-tax authority acting on its behalf to seek relevant information from the financial institution on behalf of the assessee.

(vi) No deduction in respect of any other expenditure or allowance, including depreciation, arising from the transaction with a person located in a NJA would be allowed unless the assessee maintains the relevant documents and furnishes the prescribed information.

(vii) Any sum credited or received from a person located in a NJA to be deemed to be the income of the recipient-assessee if he does not explain satisfactorily the source of such money in the hands of such person or in the hands of the beneficial owner, if such person is not the beneficial owner.

(viii) The rate of TDS in respect of any payment made to a person located in the NJA, on which tax is deductible at source, will be the higher of the following rates –

(1) rates specified in the relevant provision of the Income-tax Act, 1961; or

(2) rate or rates in force; or

(3) 30%.

ILLUSTRATION 1

A Ltd., an Indian company, provides technical services to a company, XYZ Inc., located in a NJA for a consideration of ₹ 40 lakhs in October, 2019. It charges ₹ 42 lakhs for similar services rendered to PQR Inc., which is not located in a NJA. PQR Inc. is not an associated enterprise of A Ltd.

Discuss the tax implications under section 94A read with section 92C in respect of the above transaction of provision of technical services by A Ltd. to XYZ Inc.

SOLUTION

Since XYZ Inc. is located in a NJA, the transaction of provision of technical services by the Indian company, A Ltd., would be deemed to be an international transaction and XYZ Inc. and A Ltd. would be deemed to be associated enterprises. Therefore, the provisions of transfer pricing would be attracted in this case.

The price of ₹ 42 lakhs charged for similar services from PQR Inc, being an independent entity located in a non-NJA country, can be taken into consideration for determining the arm's length price (ALP) under Comparable Uncontrolled Price (CUP) Method.

Since the ALP is more than the transfer price, the ALP of ₹ 42 lakhs would be considered as the income arising from the international transaction between A Ltd. and XYZ Inc.

It may be noted that the benefit of permissible variation between the ALP and transfer price is not available in respect of a transaction entered into with an entity in NJA.

ILLUSTRATION 2

Mr. X, a non-resident individual, is due to receive interest of ₹ 5 lakhs during March 2020 from a notified infrastructure debt fund eligible for exemption under section 10(47). He incurred expenditure amounting to ₹ 10,000 for earning such income. Assuming that Mr. X is a resident of a NJA, discuss the tax implications under section 94A, read with sections 115A and 194LB.

SOLUTION

The interest income received by Mr. X, a non-resident, from a notified infrastructure debt fund would be subject to a concessional tax rate of 5% under section 115A on the gross amount of such interest income. Therefore, the tax liability of Mr. X in respect of such income would be ₹ 26,000 (being 5% of ₹ 5 lakhs plus health and education cess@4%).

Under section 194LB, tax is deductible @5% (plus health and education cess@4%) on interest paid by such fund to a non-resident. However, since X is a resident of a NJA, tax would be deductible@30% (plus health and education cess@4%) as per section 94A, and not @5% specified under section 194LB. This is on account of the provisions of section 94A(5), which provides that "Notwithstanding anything contained in any other provision of this Act, where a person located in a NJA is entitled to receive any sum or income or amount on which tax is deductible under Chapter XVII-B, the tax shall be deducted at the highest of the following rates, namely–

(a) at the rate or rates in force;

(b) at the rate specified in the relevant provision of the Act;

(c) at the rate of thirty per cent."

Mr. X can, however, claim refund of excess tax deducted along with interest.

1.9 LIMITATION OF INTEREST DEDUCTION IN CERTAIN CASES [SECTION 94B]

(1) Preference of debt over equity as a measure to finance businesses: Debt and equity are the instruments through which a company is generally financed or capitalized. The manner in which a company is capitalized has a major impact on the amount of taxable profit as the tax laws of countries generally provide for a deduction in respect of interest paid or payable while arriving at the taxable profit. However, the dividend paid on equity contribution is not deductible. Therefore, the higher the level of debt in a company, and thus, the amount of interest it pays, the lower will be its taxable income. Due to this reason, debt is considered a more tax efficient method of finance than equity. Multinational groups are often able to structure their financing arrangements to maximize tax benefits.

(2) Tax Rules to prevent shifting of profits through excessive interest payments: In order to address this issue, tax rules are in place in each country to fix a ceiling limit on the amount of interest deductible in computing a company's profit for tax purposes. Such rules are designed to counter cross-border shifting of profit through excessive interest payments, with the objective of protecting a country's tax base.

(3) Relevant Action Plan of BEPS: Under the initiative of the G-20 countries, the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) in its Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS) project had taken up the issue of base erosion and profit shifting by way of excess interest deductions by the MNEs in Action Plan 4 and recommended certain measures in its final report.

(4) Insertion of provision in the Income-tax Act, 1961 in line with BEPS Action Plan 4: Section 94B has, accordingly, been inserted in the Income-tax Act, 1961, in line with the recommendations of OECD BEPS Action Plan 4, to provide that interest expenses claimed by an entity to its associated enterprises shall not be deductible in computation of income under the “Profits and gains of business or profession” to the extent that it arises from excess interest.

Excess interest shall mean an amount of

- total interest paid or payable* in excess of 30% of its earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization (EBITDA) of the borrower in the previous year or
- interest paid or payable to associated enterprise for that previous year whichever is less.

Total interest paid or payable may be interpreted as interest paid or payable to non-resident associated enterprise as per the intent expressed in section 94B(1) and also the Explanatory Memorandum to the Finance Bill, 2017.*

(5) Applicability: The provision shall be applicable to an Indian company, or a permanent establishment of a foreign company in India, being the borrower who incurs expenditure by way of interest or similar nature in respect of any form of debt issued by a non-resident who is an 'associated enterprise' of the borrower.

However, the provision of this section would be applicable only where the expenditure by way of interest or of similar nature exceeds ₹ 1 crore, in respect of any form of debt issued by a non-resident, being an 'associated enterprise' of such borrower.

(6) Meaning of debt: Any loan, financial instrument, finance lease, financial derivative, or any arrangement that gives rise to interest, discounts or other finance charges that are deductible in the computation of income chargeable under the head “Profits and gains of business or profession”.

(7) Provision of guarantee and deposit of matching amount deemed to be debt issued: Where the debt is issued by a lender which is not associated but an associated enterprise either

- provides an implicit or explicit guarantee to such lender or
- deposits a corresponding and matching amount of funds with the lender, such debt shall be deemed to have been issued by an associated enterprise.

(8) Carry forward of excess interest: The disallowed interest expense can be carried forward upto eight assessment years immediately succeeding the assessment year for which the disallowance was first made and claimed as deduction against the income computed under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" to the extent of maximum allowable interest expenditure.

(9) Businesses excluded from applicability of the provisions of section 94B: Taking into consideration the special nature of business of Banks and Insurance business, an Indian company or permanent establishment of a foreign company which is engaged in these business have been excluded from the applicability of the provisions of this section.

EXERCISE

Question 1

Examine the consequences that would follow if the Assessing Officer makes adjustment to arm's length price in international transactions of the assessee resulting in increase in taxable income. What are the remedies available to the assessee to dispute such adjustment?

Answer

In case the Assessing Officer makes adjustment to arm's length price in an international transaction which results in increase in taxable income of the assessee, the following consequences shall follow:-

(1) No deduction under section 10AA or Chapter VI-A shall be allowed from the income so increased.

(2) No corresponding adjustment would be made to the total income of the other associated enterprise (in respect of payment made by the assessee from which tax has been deducted or is deductible at source) on account of increase in the total income of the assessee on the basis of the arm's length price so recomputed.

The remedies available to the assessee to dispute such an adjustment are:-

(1) In case the assessee is an eligible assessee under section 144C, he can file his objections to the variation made in the income within 30 days [of the receipt of draft order by him] to the Dispute Resolution Panel and Assessing Officer. Appeal against the order of the Assessing Officer in pursuance of the directions of the Dispute Resolution Panel can be made to the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal.

(2) In any other case, he can file an appeal under section 246A to the Commissioner (Appeals) against the order of the Assessing Officer within 30 days of the date of service of notice of demand.

(3) The assessee can opt to file an application for revision of order of the Assessing Officer under section 264 within one year from the date on which the order sought to be revised is communicated, provided the time limit for appeal to the Commissioner (Appeals) or the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal has expired or the assessee has waived the right of such an appeal. The eligibility conditions stipulated in section 264 should be fulfilled.

Question 2

I. Limited, an Indian Company supplied billets to its holding company, U. Limited, UK during the previous year 2019-20. I. Limited also supplied the same product to another UK based company, V. Limited, an unrelated entity. The transactions with U. Limited are priced at Euro 500 per MT (FOB), whereas the transactions with V. Limited are priced at Euro 700 per MT (CIF). Insurance and Freight amounts to Euro 200 per MT. Compute the arm's length price for the transaction with U. Limited.

Answer

In this case, I. Limited, the Indian company, supplied billets to its foreign holding company, U. Limited. Since the foreign company, U. Limited, is the holding company of I. Limited, I. Limited and U. Limited are the associated enterprises within the meaning of section 92A.

As I. Limited supplies similar product to an unrelated entity, V. Limited, UK, the transactions between I. Limited and V. Limited can be considered as comparable uncontrolled transactions for the purpose of determining the arm's length price of the transactions between I. Limited and U. Limited Comparable Uncontrolled Price (CUP) method of determination of arm's length price (ALP) would be applicable in this case.

Transactions with U. Limited are on FOB basis, whereas transactions with V. Limited are on CIF basis. This difference has to be adjusted before comparing the prices.

	Amount (in Euro)
Price per MT of billets to V. Limited	700
Less: Cost of insurance and freight per M.T.	200
Adjusted Price per M.T.	500

Since the adjusted price for V. Limited, UK and the price fixed for U. Limited are the same, the arm's length price is Euro 500 per MT. Since the sale price to related party (i.e., U. Limited) and unrelated party (i.e., V. Limited) is the same, the transaction with related party U. Limited has also been carried out at arm's length price.

Question 3

X Ltd., operating in India, is the dealer for the goods manufactured by Yen Ltd. of Japan. Yen Ltd. owns 55% shares of X Ltd. and out of 7 directors of the company, 4 were appointed by them. The Assessing Officer, after verification of international transactions of ₹ 300 lacs of X Ltd. for the relevant year and by noticing that the company had failed to maintain the requisite records and had also not obtained the accountants report, adjusted its income by making an addition of ₹ 30,00,000 to the declared income and also issued a show cause notice to levy various penalties. X Ltd seeks your expert opinion.

Answer

The facts of the case indicate that X Ltd. and Yen Ltd. of Japan are associated enterprises since Yen Ltd. holds 55% shares of X Ltd. and has appointed more than half of the board of directors of X Ltd. Since Yen Ltd. is a non-resident, any transaction between X Ltd. and Yen Ltd. would fall within the meaning of "international transaction" under section 92B. Therefore, the income arising from such transactions have to be computed having regard to the arm's length price.

The action of the Assessing Officer in making addition to the declared income and issuing show cause notice for levy of various penalties is correct since X Ltd. had committed defaults, as listed hereunder, in respect of which penalty, as briefed hereunder, is imposable -

(i) Failure to report any international transaction or any transaction, deemed to be an international transaction or any specified domestic transaction, to which the provisions of Chapter X applies, would attract penalty @ 200% of the amount of tax payable since it is a case of misreporting of income referred under section 270A(9) read with section 270A(8).

(ii) Failure to maintain the requisite records as required under section 92D in relation to international transaction makes it liable for penalty under section 271AA which will be 2% of the value of each international transaction.

(iii) Failure to furnish report from an accountant as required under section 92E makes it liable for penalty under section 271BA i.e., a fixed penalty of ₹ 1 Lac.

The Assessing Officer shall give an opportunity of hearing to the assessee with a notice as to why the arm's length price should not be determined on the basis of material or information or document in the possession of the Assessing Officer.

Note: It is assumed that X Ltd. has not entered into an APA and has also not opted to be subject to Safe Harbour Rules.

Question 4

Anush Motors Ltd., an Indian company declared income of ₹ 300 crores computed in accordance with Chapter IV-D but before making any adjustments in respect of the following transactions for the year ended on 31.3.2020:

(i) 10,000 cars sold to Rida Ltd., US company, which holds 30% shares in Anush Motors Ltd. at a price which is less by $ 200 each car than the price charged from Shingto Ltd.

(ii) Royalty of $ 1,20,00,000 was paid to Kyoto Ltd., a US company, for use of technical know-how in the manufacturing of car. However, Kyoto Ltd. had provided the same know-how to another Indian company for $ 90,00,000.

(iii) Loan of Euro 1000 crores carrying interest @10% p.a. advanced by Dorf Ltd., a German company, was outstanding on 31.3.2020. The total book value of assets of Anush Motors Ltd. on the date was ₹ 90,000 crores. The said German company had also advanced a loan of similar amount to another Indian company @9% p.a. Total interest paid for the year was EURO 100 crores.

Explain in brief the provisions of the Act affecting all these transactions and compute the income of the company chargeable to tax for A.Y.2020-21 keeping in mind that the value of 1$ and of 1 EURO was ₹ 63 and ₹ 84, respectively, throughout the year.

Answer

Any income arising from an international transaction, where two or more "associated enterprises" enter into a mutual agreement or arrangement, shall be computed having regard to arm's length price as per the provisions of Chapter X of the Act.

Section 92A defines an "associated enterprise" and sub-section (2) of this section speaks of the situations when the two enterprises shall be deemed to associated enterprises. Applying the provisions of section 92A(2)(a) to (m) to the given facts, it is clear that "Anush Motors Ltd." is associated with :-

(i) Rida Ltd. as per section 92A(2)(a), because this company holds shares carrying more than 26% of the voting power in Anush Motors Ltd.;

(ii) Kyoto Ltd. as per section 92A(2)(g), since this company is the sole owner of the technology used by Anush Motors Ltd. in its manufacturing process;

(iii) Dorf Ltd. as per section 92A(2)(c), since this company has financed an amount which is more than 51% of the book value of total assets of Anush Motors Ltd.

The transactions entered into by Anush Motors Ltd. with different companies are, therefore, to be adjusted accordingly to work out the income chargeable to tax for the A.Y. 2020-21.

	Particulars	₹ (in crores)
Income of Anush Motors Ltd. as computed under Chapter IV-D, prior to adjustments as per Chapter X		300.00
Add:	Difference on account of adjustment in the value of international transactions:
(i)	Difference in price of car @ $ 200 each for 10,000 cars ($ 200 x 10,000 x ₹ 63)	12.60
(ii)	Difference for excess payment of royalty of $ 30,00,000 ($ 30,00,000 x ₹ 63) [See Note below]	18.90
(iii)	Difference for excess interest paid on loan of EURO 1000 crores (₹ 84*1000*1/100)	840.00
Total Income		1,171.50

The difference for excess payment of royalty has been added back presuming that the manufacture of cars by Anush Motors Ltd is wholly dependent on the use of know-how owned by Kyoto Ltd.

Note: It is presumed that Anush Motors Ltd. has not entered into an Advance Pricing Agreement or opted to be subject to Safe Harbour Rules.*

Question 5

What is the legislative objective of bringing into existence the provisions relating to transfer pricing in relation to international transactions? Examine.

Answer

The presence of multinational enterprises in India and their ability to allocate profits in different jurisdictions by controlling prices in intra-group transactions prompted the Government to set up an Expert Group to examine the issues relating to transfer pricing.

There is a possibility that two or more entities belonging to the same multinational group can fix up their prices for goods and services and allocate profits among the enterprises within the group in such a way that there may be either no profit or negligible profit in the jurisdiction which taxes such profits and substantial profit in the jurisdiction which is tax haven or where the tax liability is minimum. This may adversely affect a country's share of due revenue. The increasing participation of multinational groups in economic activities in India has given rise to new and complex issues emerging from transactions entered into between two or more enterprises belonging to the same multinational group. The profits derived by such enterprises carrying on business in India can be controlled by the multinational group, by manipulating the prices charged and paid in such intra-group transactions, which may lead to erosion of tax revenue. Therefore, transfer pricing provisions have been brought in by the Finance Act, 2001 with a view to provide a statutory framework which can lead to computation of reasonable, fair and equitable profits and tax in India, in the case of such multinational enterprises.

Question 6

R, an individual resident in India, bought 1,000 equity shares of ₹ 10 each of A Ltd. at ₹ 50 per share on 30.5.2019. He sold 700 equity shares at ₹ 35 per share on 30.9.2019 and the remaining 300 shares at ₹ 25 per share on 20.12.2019. A Ltd. declared a dividend of 50%, the record date being 10.8.2019. R sold on 1.2.2020, a house from which he derived a long-term capital gain of ₹ 75,000.

Compute the amount of capital gain arising to R for the assessment year 2020-21.

Answer

The amount of capital gains arising to R has to be computed applying the provisions of section 94(7), which provides that where:

(a) any person buys or acquires any securities or unit within a period of three months prior to the record date; and

(b) such person sells or transfers -

 (i) such securities within a period of three months after such date; or

 (ii) such unit within a period of nine months after such date; and

(c) the dividend or income on such securities or unit received or receivable by such person is exempted,

then the loss, if any, arising to him on account of such purchase and sale of securities or unit, to the extent such loss does not exceed the amount of dividend or income received or receivable on such securities or unit, shall be ignored for the purpose of computing his income chargeable to tax".

For this purpose, "record date" means such date as may be fixed by a company for the purpose of entitlement of the holder of the securities to receive dividend; "securities" includes stocks and shares.

Computation of capital gains of Mr. R for the assessment year 2020-21

Particulars	₹	₹
Long-term capital gain on sale of building		75,000
Less: Short-term capital loss on sale of shares
700 shares	7,000
300 shares	7,500	14,500
Taxable long-term capital gains		60,500

Computation of capital gain on sale of shares of A Ltd. by Mr. R

Date of purchase of shares		30.5.2019
Record date		10.8.2019
Date of sale of shares	30.9.2019	20.12.2019
Number of shares sold	700	300
Sale price per share	₹ 35	₹ 25

Particulars	₹	₹
Sale consideration	24,500	7,500
Less: Cost of acquisition	35,000	15,000
	10,500	7,500
Less: Dividend income as per section 94(7)[700×₹10×50%] [See Note below]	3,500	-
Short-term capital loss on sale of shares	7,000	7,500

Note:

(1) 700 shares are sold within 3 months after the record date. Hence, as per section 94(7), the related dividend income should be deducted from the loss.

(2) 300 shares having been sold after 3 months of record date, section 94(7) is not attracted. Therefore, the dividend income of ₹ 1,500 [300×₹10×50%] should not be deducted. Such dividend is exempt under section 10(34).

(3) Short-term capital loss can be set-off against long-term capital gains as per the provisions of section 74(1)(a). Therefore, short-term capital loss on sale of shares can be set-off against long-term capital gains on sale of building.

Question 7

XE Ltd. is an Indian Company in which Zilla Inc., a US company, has 28% shareholding and voting power. Following transactions were effected between these two companies during the financial year 2019-20.

(i) XE Ltd. sold 1,00,000 pieces of T-shirts at $ 2 per T-Shirt to Zilla Inc. The identical T-Shirts were sold to unrelated party namely Kennedy Inc., at $ 3 per T-Shirt.

(ii) XE Ltd. borrowed $ 2,00,000 from a foreign lender based on the guarantee of Zilla Inc. For this, XE Ltd. paid $ 10,000 as guarantee fee to Zilla Inc. To an unrelated party for the same amount of loan, Zilla Inc. collected $ 7000 as guarantee fee.

(iii) XE Ltd. paid $15,000 to Zilla Inc. for getting various potential customers details to improve its business. Zilla Inc. provided the same service to unrelated parties for $ 10,000.

Assume the rate of exchange as 1 $ = ₹ 64

XE Ltd. is located in a Special Economic (SEZ) and its income before transfer pricing adjustments for the year ended 31st March, 2020 was ₹ 1,200 lakhs.

Compute the adjustments to be made to the total income of XE Ltd. Assuming that such adjustments are made by the Assessing Officer, state whether it can claim deduction under section 10AA for the income enhanced by applying transfer pricing provisions.

Answer

XE Ltd, the Indian company and Zilla Inc., the US company are deemed to be associated enterprises as per section 92A(2)(a), since Zilla Inc. holds shares carrying not less than 26% of the voting power in XE Ltd.

As per Explanation to section 92B, the transactions entered into between these two companies for sale of product, lending or guarantee and provision of services relating to market research are included within the meaning of "international transaction".

Accordingly, transfer pricing provisions would be attracted and the income arising from such international transactions have to be computed having regard to the arm's length price. In this case, from the information given, the arm's length price has to be determined taking the comparable uncontrolled price method to be the most appropriate method.

Particulars		₹ in lakhs
Amount by which total income of XE Ltd. is enhanced on account of adjustment in the value of international transactions:
(i)	Difference in price of T-Shirt @ $ 1 each for 1,00,000 pieces sold to Zilla	64.00

	Inc. ($ 1 x 1,00,000 x ₹ 64)
(ii)	Difference for excess payment of guarantee fee to Zilla Inc. for loan borrowed from foreign lender ($ 3,000 x ₹ 64)	1.92
(iii)	Difference for excess payment for services to Zilla Inc. ($ 5,000 x ₹ 64)	3.20
		69.12
XE Ltd. cannot claim deduction under section 10AA in respect of ₹ 69.12 lakhs, being the amount of income by which the total income is enhanced by virtue of the first proviso to section 92C(4)

Question 8

Examine the correctness or otherwise of the following with reference to the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961

(i) Transfer pricing rules shall have no implication where income is computed on the basis of book profits.

(ii) Assessing Officer can complete the assessment of income from international transaction in disregard of the order passed by the Transfer Pricing Officer by accepting the contention of assessee.

Answer

(i) The statement is correct.

For the purpose of computing book profit for levy of minimum alternate tax, the net profit shown in the statement of profit and loss prepared in accordance with the Companies Act can be increased/ decreased only by the additions and deductions specified in Explanation 1 below section 115JB(2).

No other adjustments can be made to arrive at the book profit for levy of MAT, except where:

(a) it is discovered that the statement of profit and loss is not drawn up in accordance with the relevant Schedule of the Companies Act

(b) incorrect accounting policies and/or accounting standards have been adopted for preparing such accounts; and

(c) the method and rate of depreciation adopted is not correct.

Therefore, transfer pricing adjustments cannot be made while computing book profit for levy of MAT.

(ii) The statement is not correct.

Section 92CA(4) provides that on receipt of the order of the Transfer Pricing Officer determining the arm's length price of an international transaction, the Assessing Officer shall proceed to compute the total income in conformity with the arm's length price determined by the Transfer Pricing Officer.

The order of the Transfer Pricing Officer is binding on the Assessing Officer. Therefore, the Assessing Officer cannot complete the assessment of income from international transactions in disregard of the order of Transfer Pricing Officer by accepting the contention raised by the assessee.

2.1 INTRODUCTION

Taxation of cross-border transactions are generally based on the two concepts:

1. Residence based taxation
2. Source based taxation

Residence based taxation: The concept of residence-based taxation asserts that natural persons or individuals are taxable in the country or tax jurisdiction in which they establish their residence or domicile, regardless of the source of income. In case of companies, the place of incorporation or the place of effective management is generally considered as its place of residence.

Source based taxation: According to this concept, a country considers certain income as taxable income, if such income arises within its jurisdiction. Such income is taxed in the country of source regardless of the residence of the taxpayer.

The overview of residence and source rules in India may largely be gathered from sections 5, 6 & 9 of the Income-tax Act, 1961. While residents are taxable on global income, non-residents are taxed on their India-source income or income that is received in India or has accrued or deemed to accrue in India.

The term "Non-resident" is defined under section 2(30) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 as a person who is not a "resident", and for the purposes of sections 92 ,93 and 168 includes a person who is not ordinarily resident within the meaning of clause (6) of section 6.

2.2 RESIDENTIAL STATUS AND SCOPE OF TOTAL INCOME

Section 6 contains the provisions for determining the residential status of a person, section 5 deals with scope of total income of resident, resident but not ordinarily resident and non-resident. The provisions of these sections except determination of residential status of foreign companies applying the Place of Effective Management (POEM) Guidelines are discussed in detail in Chapter 2: Residential Status and Scope of Total Income in Module 1 of Part I – Direct Tax Laws.

(1) Residential status of a Company

With effect from assessment year 2017-18, a company would be resident in India in any previous year, if-

(i) it is an Indian company; or

(ii) its place of effective management, in that year, is in India.

> "Place of effective management" means a place where key management and commercial decisions that are necessary for the conduct of the business of an entity as a whole are, in substance made [Explanation to section 6(3)].*

Guiding Principles for determination of Place of Effective management ('POEM') of a Company, other than an Indian company – [Circular No. 6/2017, dated 24.01.2017 & Circular No. 8/2017, dated 23-02-2017]:

Place of effective management' (POEM) is an internationally recognised test for determination of residence of a company incorporated in a foreign jurisdiction. Most of the tax treaties entered into by India recognises the concept of 'place of effective management' for determination of residence of a company as a tie-breaker rule for avoidance of double taxation.

The CBDT has laid down the following guiding principles to be followed for determination of POEM.

Concept of Substance over form

Any determination of the POEM will depend upon the facts and circumstances of a given case. The POEM concept is one of substance over form. It may be noted that an entity may have more than one place of management, but it can have only one place of effective management at any point of time. Since "residence" is to be determined for each year, POEM will also be required to be determined on year to year basis.

Whether the company is engaged in active business outside India? - An important criterion for determination of POEM

The process of determination of POEM would be primarily based on the fact as to whether or not the company is engaged in active business outside India.

A company shall be said to be engaged in 'active business outside India'

- if passive income is not more than 50% of its total income, and
- less than 50% of its total asset are situated in India; and
- less than 50% of total number of employees are situated in India or are resident in India; and
- the payroll expenses incurred on such employees is less than 50% of its total payroll expenditure.

Meaning of certain terms:

Term	Meaning
Income	(a) As computed for tax purpose in accordance with the laws of the country of incorporation; or (b) As per books of account, where the laws of the country of incorporation does not require such a computation.

Value of assets	(a) In case of an individually depreciable asset	The average of its value for tax purposes in the country of incorporation of the company at the beginning and at end of the previous year; and
	(b) In case of pool of fixed asset, being treated as a block for depreciation	The average of its value for tax purposes in the country of incorporation of the company at the beginning and at end of the year;
	(c) In case of any other asset	Value as per books of account
Number of employees	The average of the number of employees as at the beginning and at the end of the year and shall include persons, who though not employed directly by the company, perform tasks similar to those performed by the employees.
Pay roll	This term includes the cost of salaries, wages, bonus and all other employee compensation including related pension and social costs borne by the employer.
Passive income	It is the aggregate of, - (i) income from the transactions where both the purchase and sale of goods is from/to its associated enterprises; and (ii) income by way of royalty, dividend, capital gains, interest or rental income; However, any income by way of interest shall not be considered to be passive income in case of a company which is engaged in the business of banking or is a public financial institution, and its activities are regulated as such under the applicable laws of the country of incorporation.

Place of Effective Management:

(i) In case of Companies engaged in Active Business outside India

POEM of a company engaged in active business shall be presumed to be outside India if the majority of the board meeting are held outside India.

However, in case the Board is not exercising its powers of management and such powers are being exercised by either the holding company or any other person, resident in India, then POEM shall be considered to be in India.

For this purpose, merely because the Board of Directors (BOD) follows general and objective principles of global policy of the group laid down by the parent entity which may be in the field of Pay roll functions, Accounting, Human resource (HR) functions, IT infrastructure and network platforms, Supply chain functions, Routine banking operational procedures, and not being specific to any entity or group of entities per se; would not constitute a case of BoD of companies standing aside.

CBDT Circular No. 25/2017, dated 23.10.2017 clarifies that so long as the Regional Headquarter operates for subsidiaries/ group companies in a region within the general and objective principles of global policy of the group laid down by the parent entity in the field of Pay roll functions, Accounting, HR functions, IT infrastructure and network platforms, Supply chain functions, Routine banking operational procedures, and not being specific to any entity or group of entities per se; it would, in itself, not constitute a case of BoD of companies standing aside and such activities of Regional Headquarter in India alone will not be a basis for establishment of PoEM for such subsidiaries/ group companies.

It is further mentioned in the said Circular that the provisions of General Anti-Avoidance Rule contained in Chapter X-A of the Income-tax Act, 1961 may get triggered in such cases where the above clarification is found to be used for abusive/ aggressive tax planning.

For the purpose of determining whether the company is engaged in active business outside India, the average of the data of the previous year and two years prior to that shall be taken into account. In case the company has been in existence for a shorter period, then data of such period shall be considered. Where the accounting year for tax purposes, in accordance with laws of country of incorporation of the company, is different from the previous year, then, data of the accounting year that ends during the relevant previous year and two accounting years preceding it shall be considered.

The final guidelines have clarified that mere following of global policies laid down by the Indian holding company would not constitute that Board is standing aside.

(ii) In case Companies not engaged in active business outside India

The guidelines provide a two stage process for determination of POEM in case of companies not engaged in active business.

(a) First stage: Identifying the person(s) who actually make the key management and commercial decisions for the conduct of the company as a whole.

(b) Second stage: Determine the place where these decisions are, in fact, being made.

> The place where these management decisions are taken would be more important than the place where such decisions are implemented. For the purpose of determination of POEM, it is the substance which would be conclusive rather than the form.

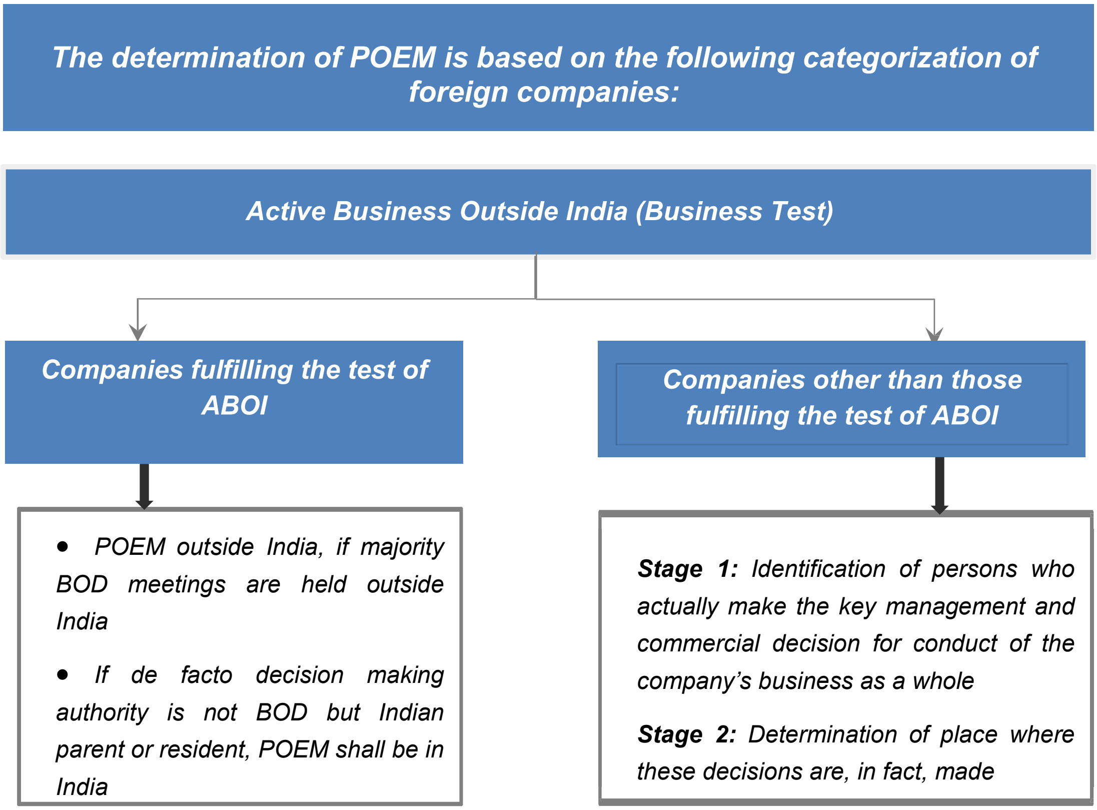
The conditions specified in the circular are depicted in the flow charts below:



The determination of POEM is based on the following categorization of foreign companies:

Active Business Outside India (Business Test)

Companies fulfilling the test of ABOI

- POEM outside India, if majority BOD meetings are held outside India
- If de facto decision making authority is not BOD but Indian parent or resident, POEM shall be in India

Companies other than those fulfilling the test of ABOI

Stage 1: Identification of persons who actually make the key management and commercial decision for conduct of the company's business as a whole

Stage 2: Determination of place where these decisions are, in fact, made

What is ABOI test?

A company is said to be engaged in ABOI, if it fulfills the cumulative conditions of:

- Its passive income* (wherever earned) is 50% or less of its total income
- Less than 50% of its total assets situated in India
- Less than 50% of the total number of employees are situated in India or are residents in India
- Payroll expenses incurred on such employees are less than 50% of its total payroll expenditure

 Passive income of a company shall be aggregate of:*

(i) Income from the transactions where both the purchase and sale of goods is from/ to its associated enterprises; and

(ii) income by way of royalty, dividend, capital gains, interest (except for banking companies and public financial institutions) or rental income whether or not involving associated enterprises

Some of the guiding principles which may be taken into account for determining the POEM are as follows:

(a) Location where the Board of Directors meet and makes decisions: This location may be the place of effective management of a company provided, the Board –

(i) retains and exercises its authority to govern the company; and

(ii) does, in substance, make the key management and commercial decisions necessary for the conduct of the company's business as a whole.

It may be mentioned that mere formal holding of board meetings at a place would by itself not be conclusive for determination of POEM being located at that place. If the key decisions by the directors are in fact being taken in a place other than the place where the formal meetings are held then such other place would be relevant for POEM.

As an example this may be the case where the board meetings are held in a location distinct from the place where head office of the company is located or such location is unconnected with the place where the predominant activity of the company is being carried out.

If a Board has de facto delegated the authority to make the key management and commercial decisions for the company to the senior management or any other person including a shareholder, promoter, strategic or legal or financial advisor etc. and does nothing more than routinely ratifying the decisions that have been made, the company's place of effective management will ordinarily be the place where these senior managers or the other person make those decisions.

"Senior Management" in respect of a company means the person or persons who are generally responsible for developing and formulating key strategies and policies for the company and for ensuring or overseeing the execution and implementation of those strategies on a regular and on-going basis. While designation may vary, these persons may include:

(i) Managing Director or Chief Executive Officer;

(ii) Financial Director or Chief Financial Officer;

(iii) Chief Operating Officer; and

(iv) The heads of various divisions or departments (for example, Chief Information or Technology Officer, Director for Sales or Marketing).

(b) Location of Executive Committee, in case powers are delegated by the Board: A company's board may delegate some or all of its authority to one or more committees such as an executive committee consisting of key members of senior management. In these situations, the location where the members of the executive committee are based and where that committee develops and formulates the key strategies and policies for mere formal approval by the full board will often be considered to be the company's place of effective management.

The delegation of authority may be either de jure (by means of a formal resolution or Shareholder Agreement) or de facto (based upon the actual conduct of the board and the executive committee).

(c) Location of Head Office: The location of a company's head office will be a very important factor in the determination of the company's place of effective management because it often represents the place where key company decisions are made. The following points need to be considered for determining the location of the head office of the company:-

If the company's senior management and their support staff are based in a single location and that location is held out to the public as the company's principal place of business or headquarters then that location is the place where head office is located.

If the company is more decentralized (for example where various members of senior management may operate, from time to time, at offices located in the various countries) then the company's head office would be the location where these senior managers,-

(i) are primarily or predominantly based; or

(ii) normally return to following travel to other locations; or

(iii) meet when formulating or deciding key strategies and policies for the company as a whole.

Members of the senior management may operate from different locations on a more or less permanent basis and the members may participate in various meetings via telephone or video conferencing rather than by being physically present at meetings in a particular location. In such situation the head office would normally be the location, if any, where the highest level of management (for example, the Managing Director and Financial Director) and their direct support staff are located.

In situations where the senior management is so decentralised that it is not possible to determine the company's head office with a reasonable degree of certainty, the location of a company's head office would not be of much relevance in determining that company's place of effective management.

"Head Office" of a company would be the place where the company's senior management and their direct support staff are located or, if they are located at more than one location, the place where they are primarily or predominantly located. A company's head office is not necessarily the same as the place where the majority of its employees work or where its board typically meets.

(d) Use of modern technology: The use of modern technology impacts the place of effective management in many ways. It is no longer necessary for the persons taking decision to be physically present at a particular location. Therefore physical location of board meeting or executive committee meeting or meeting of senior management may not be where the key decisions are in substance being made. In such cases the place where the directors or the persons taking the decisions or majority of them usually reside may also be a relevant factor.

(e) Decision via circular resolution or round robin voting: In case of circular resolution or round robin voting the factors like, the frequency with which it is used, the type of decisions made in that manner and where the parties involved in those decisions are located etc. are to be considered. It cannot be said that proposer of decision alone would be relevant but based on past practices and general conduct; it would be required to determine the person who has the authority and who exercises the authority to take decisions. The place of location of such person would be more important.

(f) Decisions made by Shareholders are not relevant factor in determination of POEM: The decisions made by shareholder on matters which are reserved for shareholder decision under the company laws are not relevant for determination of a company's place of effective management. Such decisions may include sale of all or substantially all of the company's assets, the dissolution, liquidation or deregistration of the company, the modification of the rights attaching to various classes of shares or the issue of a new class of shares etc. These decisions typically affect the existence of the company itself or the rights of the shareholders as such, rather than the conduct of the company's business from a management or commercial perspective and are therefore, generally not relevant for the determination of a company's place of effective management.

However, the shareholder's involvement can, in certain situations, turn into that of effective management. This may happen through a formal arrangement by way of shareholder agreement etc. or may also happen by way of actual conduct. As an example if the shareholders limit the authority of board and senior managers of a company and thereby remove the company's real authority to make decision then the shareholder guidance transforms into usurpation and such undue influence may result in effective management being exercised by the shareholder.

Therefore, whether the shareholder involvement is crossing the line into that of effective management is one of fact and has to be determined on case-to-case basis only.

(g) Day to day routine operational decisions are not relevant for determination of POEM: It may be clarified that day to day routine operational decisions undertaken by junior and middle management shall not be relevant for the purpose of determination of POEM. The operational decisions relate to the oversight of the day-to-day business operations and activities of a company whereas the key management and commercial decision are concerned with broader strategic and policy decision. For example, a decision to open a major new manufacturing facility or to discontinue a major product line would be examples of key commercial decisions affecting the company's business as a whole. By contrast, decisions by the plant manager appointed by senior management to run that facility, concerning repairs and maintenance, the implementation of company-wide quality controls and human resources policies, would be examples of routine operational decisions. In certain situations it may happen that person responsible for operational decision is the same person who is responsible for the key management and commercial decision. In such cases it will be necessary to distinguish the two type of decisions and thereafter assess the location where the key management and commercial decisions are taken.

If the above factors do not lead to clear identification of POEM then the final guidelines provide that following secondary factors may be considered:

- Place where main and substantial activity of the company is carried out; or
- Place where the accounting records of the company are kept.

It needs to be emphasized that the determination of POEM is to be based on all relevant facts related to the management and control of the company, and is not to be determined on the basis of isolated facts that by itself do not establish effective management, as illustrated by the following examples:

(i) The fact that a foreign company is completely owned by an Indian company will not be conclusive evidence that the conditions for establishing POEM in India have been satisfied.

(ii) The fact that there exists a Permanent Establishment of a foreign entity in India would itself not be conclusive evidence that the conditions for establishing POEM in India have been satisfied.

(iii) The fact that one or some of the Directors of a foreign company reside in India will not be conclusive evidence that the conditions for establishing POEM in India have been satisfied.

(iv) The fact of, local management being situated in India in respect of activities carried out by a foreign company in India will not, by itself, be conclusive evidence that the conditions for establishing POEM have been satisfied.

(v) The existence in India of support functions that are preparatory and auxiliary in character will not be conclusive evidence that the conditions for establishing POEM in India have been satisfied.

It is reiterated that the above principles for determining the POEM are for guidance only. No single principle will be decisive in itself. The above principles are not to be seen with reference to any particular moment in time rather activities performed over a period of time, during the previous year, need to be considered.

In other words, a "snapshot" approach is not to be adopted. Further, based on the facts and circumstances if it is determined that during the previous year the POEM is in India and also outside India then POEM shall be presumed to be in India if it has been mainly /predominantly in India

The CBDT also clarified that the Assessing Officer (AO) shall, before initiating any proceedings for holding a company incorporated outside India, on the basis of its POEM, as being resident in India, seek prior approval of the Principal Commissioner or the Commissioner, as the case may be.

Further, in case the AO proposes to hold a company incorporated outside India, on the basis of its POEM, as being resident in India then any such finding shall be given by the AO after seeking prior approval of the collegium of three members consisting of the Principal Commissioners or the Commissioners, as the case may be, to be constituted by the Principal Chief Commissioner of the region concerned, in this regard. The collegium so constituted shall provide an opportunity of being heard to the company before issuing any directions in the matter.

Example 1: Company A Co. is a sourcing entity, for an Indian multinational group, incorporated in country X and is 100% subsidiary of Indian company (B Co.). The warehouses and stock in them are the only assets of the company and are located in country X. All the employees of the company are also in country X. The average income wise breakup of the company's total income for three years is, -

(i) 30% of income is from transaction where purchases are made from parties which are non-associated enterprises and sold to associated enterprises;

(ii) 30% of income is from transaction where purchases are made from associated enterprises and sold to associated enterprises;

(iii) 30% of income is from transaction where purchases are made from associated enterprises and sold to non-associated enterprises; and

(iv) 10% of the income is by way of interest.

Interpretation: In this case, passive income is 40% of the total income of the company. The passive income consists of, -

(i) 30% income from the transaction where both purchase and sale is from/to associated enterprises; and

(ii) 10% income from interest.

The A Co. satisfies the first requirement of the test of active business outside India. Since no assets or employees of A Co. are in India the other requirements of the test is also satisfied. Therefore, company is engaged in active business outside India.

Example 2: The other facts remain same as that in Example 1 with the variation that A Co. has a total of 50 employees. 47 employees, managing the warehouse, storekeeping and accounts of the company, are located in country X. The Managing Director (MD), Chief Executive Officer (CEO) and sales head are resident in India. The total annual payroll expenditure on these 50 employees is of ₹ 5 crore. The annual payroll expenditure in respect of MD, CEO and sales head is of ₹ 3 crore.

Interpretation: Although the first limb of active business test is satisfied by A Co. as only 40% of its total income is passive in nature. Further, more than 50% of the employees are also situated outside India. All the assets are situated outside India. However, the payroll expenditure in respect of the MD, the CEO and the sales head being employees resident in India exceeds 50% of the total payroll expenditure. Therefore, A Co. is not engaged in active business outside India.

Example 3: The basic facts are same as in Example 1. Further facts are that all the directors of the A Co. are Indian residents. During the relevant previous year 5 meetings of the Board of Directors is held of which two were held in India and 3 outside India with two in country X and one in country Y.

Interpretation: The A Co. is engaged in active business outside India as the facts indicated in Example 1 establish. The majority of board meetings have been held outside India. Therefore, the POEM of A Co. shall be presumed to be outside India.

Example 4: The facts are same as in Example 3 but it is established by the Assessing Officer that although A Co.'s senior management team signs all the contracts, for all the contracts above ₹ 10 lakh the A Co. must submit its recommendation to B Co. and B Co. makes the decision whether or not the contract may be accepted. It is also seen that during the previous year more than 99% of the contracts are above ₹ 10 lakh and over past years also the same trend in respect of value contribution of contracts above ₹ 10 lakh is seen.

Interpretation: These facts suggest that the effective management of the A Co. may have been usurped by the parent company B Co. Therefore, POEM of A Co. may in such cases be not presumed to be outside India even though A Co. is engaged in active business outside India and majority of board meeting are held outside India.

Example 5: An Indian multinational group has a local holding company A Co. in country X. The A Co. also has 100% downstream subsidiaries B Co. and C Co. in country X and D Co. in country Y. The A Co. has income only by way of dividend and interest from investments made in its subsidiaries. The Place of Effective Management of A Co. is in India and is exercised by ultimate parent company of the group. The subsidiaries B, C and D are engaged in active business outside

India. The meetings of Board of Director of B Co., C Co. and D Co. are held in country X and Y respectively.

Interpretation: Merely because the POEM of an intermediate holding company is in India, the POEM of its subsidiaries shall not be taken to be in India. Each subsidiary has to be examined separately. As indicated in the facts since B Co., C Co., and D Co. are independently engaged in active business outside India and majority of Board meetings of these companies are also held outside India. The POEM of B Co., C Co., and D Co. shall be presumed to be outside India.

Further, the CBDT vide Circular no. 8/2017 dated 23.02.2017 also clarified that POEM guidelines shall not apply to a company having turnover or gross receipts of ₹ 50 crores or less in a financial year.

ILLUSTRATION 1

ABC Inc., a Swedish company headquartered at Stockholm, not having a permanent establishment in India, has set up a liaison office in Mumbai in April, 2019 in compliance with RBI guidelines to look after its day to day business operations in India, spread awareness about the company's products and explore further opportunities. The liaison office takes decisions relating to day to day routine operations and performs support functions that are preparatory and auxiliary in nature. The significant management and commercial decisions are, however, in substance made by the Board of Directors at Sweden. Determine the residential status of ABC Inc. for A.Y. 2020-21.

SOLUTION

Section 6(3) provide that a company would be resident in India in any previous year, if-

(i) it is an Indian company; or

(ii) its place of effective management, in that year, is in India .

In this case, ABC Inc. is a foreign company. Therefore, it would be resident in India for P.Y.2019-20 only if its place of effective management, in that year, is in India.

Explanation to section 6(3) defines "place of effective management" to mean a place where key management and commercial decisions that are necessary for the conduct of the business of an entity as a whole are, in substance made. In the case of ABC Inc., its place of effective management for P.Y.2019-20 is not in India, since the significant management and commercial decisions are, in substance, made by the Board of Directors outside India in Sweden.

ABC Inc. has only a liaison office in India through which it looks after its routine day to day business operations in India. The place where decisions relating to day to day routine operations are taken and support functions that are preparatory or auxiliary in nature are performed are not relevant in determining the place of effective management.

Hence, ABC Inc., being a foreign company is a non-resident for A.Y.2020-21, since its place of effective management is outside India in the P.Y.2019-20.

Transition Mechanism for a company incorporated outside India and has not been assessed to tax earlier [Chapter XII-BC – Section 115JH]

A transition mechanism for a company which is incorporated outside India, which has not been assessed to tax in India earlier and has become resident in India for the first time due to application of POEM, has been provided in Chapter XII-BC comprising of section 115JH.

(a) Accordingly, the Central Government is empowered to notify exception, modification and adaptation subject to which, the provisions of the Act relating to computation of income, treatment of unabsorbed depreciation, set-off or carry forward and set off of losses, special provision relating to avoidance of tax and the collection and recovery of taxes shall apply in a case where a foreign company is said to be resident in India due to its POEM being in India for the first time and the said company has never been resident in India before.

(b) In a case where the determination regarding foreign company to be resident in India has been made in the assessment proceedings relevant to any previous year, then, these transition provisions would also cover any subsequent previous year, if the foreign company is resident in India in that previous year and the previous year ends on or before the date on which such assessment proceeding is completed. In effect, the transition provisions would also cover any subsequent amendment upto the date of determination of POEM in an assessment proceeding. However, once the transition is complete, then, normal provisions of the Act would apply.

(c) In the notification issued by the Central Government, certain conditions including procedural conditions subject to which these adaptations shall apply can be provided for and in case of failure to comply with the conditions, the benefit of such notification would not be available to the foreign company.

Accordingly, where in a previous year, any benefit, exemption or relief has been claimed and granted to the foreign company in accordance with the notification, and subsequently, there is failure to comply with any of the conditions specified therein, then –

(i) the benefit, exemption or relief shall be deemed to have been wrongly allowed;

(ii) the Assessing Officer may re-compute the total income of the assessee for the said previous year and make the necessary amendment as if the exceptions, modifications and adaptations as per the notification does not apply; and

(iii) the provisions of section 154 shall, so far as may be, apply thereto and the period of four years for rectification of mistake apparent from the record has to be reckoned from the end of the previous year in which the failure to comply with the condition stipulated in the notification takes place.

(d) Every notification issued in exercise of this power by the Central Government shall be laid before each house of the Parliament.

(e) Accordingly, in exercise of the power under section 115JH(1) of the Income-tax Act, 1961,the Central Government has, vide notification No. 29/2018, dated 22nd June, 2018, specified the exceptions, modifications and adaptions subject to which, the provisions of the Act relating to computation of income, treatment of unabsorbed depreciation, set-off or carry forward and set off of losses, special provision relating to avoidance of tax and the collection and recovery of taxes shall apply in a case where a foreign company is said to be resident in India in any previous year on account of its POEM being in India and the such foreign company has not been resident in India before the said previous year.

Particulars	Provisions
Determination of opening WDV	If the foreign company is assessed to tax in the foreign jurisdiction Where depreciation is required to be taken into account for the purpose of computation of its taxable income, the WDV of the depreciable asset as per the tax record in the foreign country on the 1st day of the previous year shall be adopted as the opening WDV for the said previous year. Where WDV is not available as per tax records, the WDV shall be calculated assuming that the asset was installed, utilised and the depreciation was actually allowed as per the provisions of the laws of that foreign jurisdiction. The WDV so arrived at as on the 1st day of the previous year shall be adopted to be the opening WDV for the said previous year. If the foreign company is not assessed to tax in the foreign jurisdiction WDV of the depreciable asset as appearing in the books of account as on the 1st day of the previous year maintained in accordance with the laws of that foreign jurisdiction shall be adopted as the opening WDV for the said previous year.
Brought forward loss and unabsorbed depreciation	If the foreign company is assessed to tax in the foreign jurisdiction Brought forward loss and unabsorbed depreciation as per the tax record shall be determined year wise on the 1st day of the said previous year. If the foreign company is not assessed to tax in the foreign jurisdiction Brought forward loss and unabsorbed depreciation as per the books of account prepared in accordance with the laws of that country shall be determined year wise on the 1st day of the said previous year. Other provisions Such brought forward loss and unabsorbed depreciation shall be deemed as loss and unabsorbed depreciation brought forward as on the 1st day of the said previous year and shall be allowed to be set off and carried forward in accordance with the provisions of the Act for the remaining period calculated from the year in which they occurred for the first time taking that year as the first year. However, the losses and unabsorbed depreciation of the foreign company shall be allowed to be set off only against such income of the foreign company which has become chargeable to tax in India on account of it becoming resident in India due to application of POEM. In cases where the brought forward loss and unabsorbed depreciation originally adopted in India are revised or modified in the foreign jurisdiction due to any action of the tax or legal authority, the amount of the loss and unabsorbed depreciation shall be revised or modified for the purposes of set off and carry forward in India.

Period of profit and loss account and balance sheet in cases where accounting year of foreign company does not end on 31st March	The foreign company is required to prepare profit and loss account and balance sheet for the period starting from the date on which the accounting year immediately following said accounting year begins, upto 31st March of the year immediately preceding the period beginning with 1st April and ending on 31st March during which the foreign company has become resident. The foreign company is also required to prepare profit and loss account and balance sheet for succeeding periods of twelve months, beginning from 1st April and ending on 31st March, till the year the foreign company remains resident in India on account of its POEM. Examples: Example 1: If the accounting year of the foreign company is a calendar year and the company becomes resident in India during P.Y. 2019-20 for the first time due to its POEM being in India, then, the company is required to prepare profit and loss account and balance sheet for the period 1st January, 2019 to 31st March, 2019. It is also required to prepare profit and loss account and balance sheet for the period 1st April, 2019 to 31st March, 2020. For the purpose of carry forward of loss and unabsorbed depreciation in this case, since the period 1st January, 2019 to 31st March, 2019 is less than 6 months, it is to be included in the accounting year immediately preceding the accounting year in which the foreign company is held to be resident in India for the first time. Accordingly, the profit and loss and balance sheet of the 15 month period from 1 January, 2018 to 31st March, 2019 is to be prepared.

	Example 2: If the accounting year of the foreign company is from 1st July to 30th June and the company becomes resident in India during P.Y. 2019-20 for the first time due to its POEM being in India, then, the company is required to prepare profit and loss account and balance sheet for the period 1st July, 2018 to 31st March, 2019. It is also required to prepare profit and loss account and balance sheet for the period 1st April, 2019 to 31st March, 2020. For the purpose of carry forward of loss and unabsorbed depreciation in this case, since the period is more than 6 months, it is to be treated as a separate accounting year. The loss and unabsorbed depreciation as per tax record or books of account, as the case may be, of the foreign company shall, be allocated on proportionate basis.
Applicability of provisions of Chapter XVII-B (TDS provisions)	Where more than one provision of Chapter XVII-B of the Act applies to the foreign company as resident as well as foreign company, the provision applicable to the foreign company alone shall apply. Compliance to those provisions of Chapter XVII-B of the Act as are applicable to the foreign company prior to its becoming Indian resident shall be considered sufficient compliance to the provisions of said Chapter. The provisions of section 195(2) relating to application to Assessing Officer to determine the appropriate proportion of sum chargeable to tax shall apply in such manner so as to include payment to the foreign company.
Availability of deduction under section 90 or 91 (Foreign tax credit)	The foreign company shall be entitled to relief or deduction of taxes paid in accordance with the provisions of section 90 or section 91 of the Act. Where income on which foreign tax has been paid or deducted, is offered to tax in more than one year, credit of foreign tax shall be allowed across those years in the same proportion in which the income is offered to tax or assessed to tax in India in respect of the income to which it relates and shall be in accordance with the provisions of rule 128 of the Income-tax Rules, 1962 [Given as Annexure 1 at the end of this material].
Non applicability of the notification	The above exceptions, modifications and adaptations shall not apply in respect of such income of the foreign company which otherwise would have been chargeable to tax in India, even if the foreign company had not become Indian resident.
Applicability of the notification where foreign company becomes resident in the subsequent	In a case where the foreign company is said to be resident in India during a previous year, immediately succeeding a previous year during which it is said to be resident in India; the exceptions, modifications and adaptations shall apply to the said previous year subject to the condition that the WDV, the brought forward loss and the unabsorbed depreciation to be adopted on the 1st day of the previous year shall be those which previous year also	have been arrived at on the last day of the preceding previous year in accordance with the provisions of this notification.

No effect on other transactions	Any transaction of the foreign company with any other person or entity under the Act shall not be altered only on the ground that the foreign company has become Indian resident.
Applicability of other provisions relating to foreign company	Subject to the above exceptions, modifications and adaptions specifically provided vide this notification, the foreign company shall continue to be treated as a foreign company even if it is said to be resident in India and all the provisions of the Act shall apply accordingly. Consequently, the provisions specifically applicable to,— (i) a foreign company, shall continue to apply to it; (ii) non-resident persons, shall not apply to it; and (iii) the provisions specifically applicable to resident, shall apply to it.
Applicability of tax rate on foreign company	In case of conflict between the provision applicable to the foreign company as resident and the provision applicable to it as foreign company, the later shall generally prevail. Therefore, the rate of tax in case of foreign company i.e., 40% shall remain the same, i.e., rate of income-tax applicable to the foreign company even though residency status of the foreign company changes from non-resident to resident on the basis of POEM.
Applicability of notification	This notification shall be deemed to have come into force from 1st April, 2017.
Meaning of foreign jurisdiction	The place of incorporation of the foreign company.
Applicability of rule 115 of the Income-tax Rules, 1962.	The rate of exchange for conversion into rupees of value expressed in foreign currency, wherever applicable, shall be in accordance with provision of rule 115 of the Income-tax Rules, 1962. [Given as Annexure 2 at the end of this material]

If technical services or royalty services are utilised for the purpose of business or profession carried on in India or making income from any source in India

The categories of income which are deemed to accrue or arise in India are:

(1) Any income accruing or arising to an assessee in any place outside India whether directly or indirectly

(i) through or from any business connection in India,

(ii) through or from any property in India,

(iii) through or from any asset or source of income in India or

(iv) through the transfer of a capital asset situated in India would be deemed to accrue or arise in India. [Section 9(1)(i)]

(i) What is Business Connection?

'Business connection' shall include any business activity carried out through a person acting on behalf of the non-resident [Explanation 2 to section 9(1)(i)]

For a business connection to be established, the person acting on behalf of the non-resident –

(a) must have an authority, which is habitually exercised in India, to conclude contracts on behalf of the non-resident or habitually concludes contracts or plays the principal role leading to conclusion of contracts by that non-resident and such contracts are

- in the name of the non-resident; or
- for the transfer of the ownership of, or for the granting of the right to use, property owned by that non-resident or that non-resident has the right to use; or
- for the provision of services by that non-resident.

Note - This amendment in the definition of "business connection" is for the purpose of alignment with the provisions of the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement (DTAA) as modified by Multilateral Instrument (MLI) so as to make the provisions in the treaty effective.

(b) in a case, where he has no such authority, but habitually maintains in India a stock of goods or merchandise from which he regularly delivers goods or merchandise on behalf of the non-resident, or

(c) habitually secures orders in India, mainly or wholly for the non-resident.

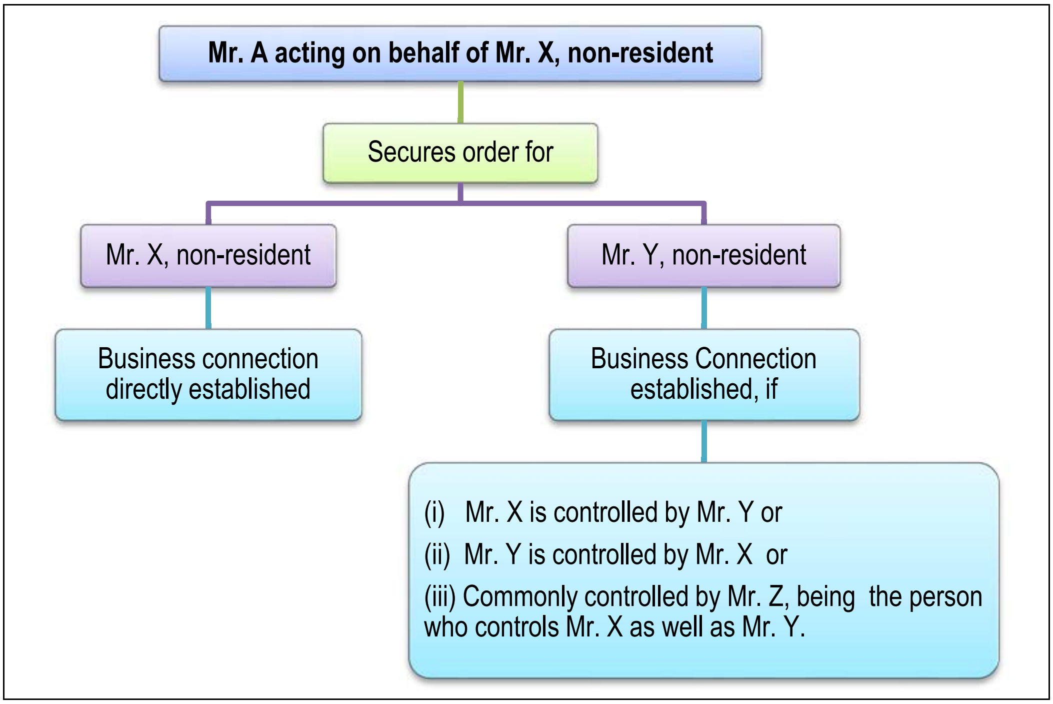
Further, there may be situations when the person acting on behalf of the non-resident secure order for other non-residents. In such situation, business connection for other non-residents is established if,

i. such other non-resident controls the non-resident or

ii. such other non-resident is controlled by the non-resident or

iii. such other non-resident is subject to same control as that of non-resident.

In all the three situations, business connection is established, where a person habitually secures orders in India, mainly or wholly for such non-residents.



Mr. A acting on behalf of Mr. X, non-resident Secures order for
Mr. X, non-resident
Mr. Y, non-resident
Business connection directly established
Business Connection established, if
(i) Mr. X is controlled by Mr. Y or
(ii) Mr. Y is controlled by Mr. X or
(iii) Commonly controlled by Mr. Z, being the person who controls Mr. X as well as Mr. Y.

Agents having independent status are not included in Business Connection: Business connection, however, shall not be established, where the non-resident carries on business through a broker, general commission agent or any other agent having an independent status, if such a person is acting in the ordinary course of his business.

A broker, general commission agent or any other agent shall be deemed to have an independent status where he does not work mainly or wholly for the non-resident.

He will, however, not be considered to have an independent status in the three situations explained above, where he is employed by such a non-resident.

Where a business is carried on in India through a person referred to in (a), (b) or (c) of (i) above, only so much of income as is attributable to the operations carried out in India shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India [Explanation 3 to section 9(1)(i)].

Significant economic presence [Explanation 2A to section 9(1)(i)]

Significant economic presence of a non-resident in India shall also constitute business connection in India.

Significant economic presence means-

	Nature of transaction	Condition
(a)	transaction in respect of any goods, services or property carried out by a non-resident in India including provision of download of data or software in India,	Aggregate of payments arising from such transaction or transactions during the previous year exceeds such amount as may be prescribed
(b)	systematic and continuous soliciting of business activities or engaging in interaction with users in India through digital means	The users should be of such number as may be prescribed

The threshold of "aggregate of payments" in (a) and "users" in India in (b) would be prescribed by Rules. Further, the above transactions or activities shall constitute significant economic presence in India, whether or not,—

(i) the agreement for such transactions or activities is entered in India;

(ii) the non-resident has a residence or place of business in India; or

(ii) & (iii) Income from property, asset or source of income in India

Any income which arises from any property in India (movable, immovable, tangible and intangible property) would be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

Examples:

- Hire charges or rent paid outside India for the use of the machinery or buildings situated in India,
- deposits with an Indian company for which interest is received outside India etc.

(iv) Income through transfer of a capital asset situated in India

Capital gains arising through or from the transfer of a capital asset situated in India would be deemed to accrue or arise in India in all cases irrespective of the fact whether

- The capital asset is movable or immovable, tangible or intangible;
- The place of registration of the document of transfer etc., is in India or outside; and
- The place of payment of the consideration for the transfer is within India or outside.

Accordingly, the expression "through" shall mean and include and shall be deemed to have always meant and included "by means of", "in consequence of" or "by reason of". [Explanation 4* to section 9(1)(i)*]

Further, an asset or a capital asset being any share or interest in a company or entity registered or incorporated outside India shall be deemed to be and shall always be deemed to have been situated in India, if the share or interest derives, directly or indirectly, its value substantially from the assets located in India. [Explanation 5* to section 9(1)(i)*]

However, an asset or capital asset, which is held by a non-resident by way of investment, directly or indirectly, in Category-I or Category-II foreign portfolio investor under the Securities and Exchange Board of India (Foreign Portfolio Investors) Regulations, 2014, made under the Securities and Exchange Board of India Act, 1992, shall not deemed to be or deemed to have been situated in India [Proviso to Explanation 5 to section 9(1)(i)]

However, the above benefit shall be applicable only in those cases where the proceeds of redemption or buyback arising to the non-resident do not exceed the pro-rata share of the non-resident in the total consideration realized by the specified funds from the said transfer of shares or securities in India. It is further clarified that a non-resident investing directly in the specified funds shall continue to be taxed as per the extant provisions of the Act.

Declaration of dividend by a foreign company outside India does not have the effect of transfer of any underlying assets located in India. Circular No. 4/2015, dated 26-03-2015, therefore, clarifies that the dividends declared and paid by a foreign company outside India in respect of shares which derive their value substantially from assets situated in India would NOT be deemed to be income accruing or arising in India by virtue of the provisions of section 9(1)(i).

Explanation 6* to section 9(1)(i) provides that the share or interest in a company or entity registered or incorporated outside India, shall be deemed to derive its value substantially from the assets (whether tangible or intangible) located in India, if on the specified date, the value of Indian assets, -

- exceeds the amount of ₹ 10 crore; and
- represents at least 50% of the value of all the assets owned by the company or entity, as the case may be;

Meaning of certain terms:

In effect, the exemption shall be available to the transferor of a share of, or interest in, a foreign entity if he along with its associated enterprises, -

- nor holds any rights in such company which would entitle it to either exercise control or management of the direct holding company or entity or entitle it to voting power or share capital or total interest exceeding 5% in the direct holding company or entity.

Further, where all the assets owned, directly or indirectly, by a company or, as the case may be, an entity registered or incorporated outside India, are not located in India, the income of the non-resident transferor, from transfer outside India of a share of, or interest in the foreign company or entity, deemed to accrue or arise in India under this clause, shall be only such part of the income as is reasonably attributable to assets located in India and determined in the prescribed manner.

"Associated enterprise", in relation to another enterprise, means an enterprise—

- which participates, directly or indirectly, or through one or more intermediaries, in the management or control or capital of the other enterprise; or
- in respect of which one or more persons who participate, directly or indirectly, or through one or more intermediaries, in its management or control or capital, are the same persons who participate, directly or indirectly, or through one or more intermediaries, in the management or control or capital of the other enterprise.

(2) Income from salaries earned in India [Section 9(1)(ii)]

Further, any income under the head "Salaries" payable for rest period or leave period which is preceded and succeeded by services rendered in India, and forms part of the service contract of employment, shall be regarded as income earned in India.

(3) Income from salaries payable by the Government for services rendered outside India [Section 9(1)(iii)].

Income from 'Salaries' which is payable by the Government to a citizen of India for services rendered outside India would be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

However, allowances and perquisites paid or allowed outside India by the Government to an Indian citizen for services rendered outside India is exempt, by virtue of section 10(7).

ILLUSTRATION 2

J, a citizen of India, employed in the Indian Embassy at Tokyo, Japan. He received salary and allowances at Tokyo from the Government of India for the year ended 31.3.2020 for services rendered by him in Tokyo. Besides, he was allowed perquisites by the Government. He is a non-resident for the assessment year 2020-21. Examine the taxability of salary, allowances and perquisites in the hands of J for the assessment year 2020-21.

SOLUTION

As per section 9(1)(iii), salaries payable by the Government to a citizen of India for services rendered outside India shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India. As such, salary received by J is chargeable to tax, even though he was a non-resident for A.Y. 2020-21.

As per section 10(7), all allowances or perquisites paid or allowed as such outside India by the Government to a citizen of India for rendering services outside India is exempt from tax. Therefore, the allowances and perquisites received by J are exempt as per section 10(7).

(4) Dividend paid by a Indian company outside India [Section 9(1)(iv)]

All dividends paid by an Indian company would be deemed to accrue or arise in India. Under section 10(34), income from dividends referred to in section 115-O i.e., dividend distributed by a domestic company on which DDT is leviable in the hands of the company, is exempt from tax in the hands of the shareholder. However, it will not be exempt if such dividend is chargeable to tax under section 115BBDA. Section 115BBDA, which brings to tax dividend in excess of ₹ 10 lakh in the hands of the shareholder @10%, does not apply to the non-residents.

(5) Interest [Section 9(1)(v)]

Under section 9(1)(v), an interest is deemed to accrue or arise in India if it is payable by -

(i) the Government;

(ii) a person resident in India;

Exception: Where it is payable in respect of any debt incurred or money borrowed and used, for the purposes of a business or profession carried on by him outside India or for the purposes of making or earning any income from any source outside India, it will not be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

(iii) a non-resident, when it is payable in respect of any debt incurred or moneys borrowed and used, for the purpose of a business or profession carried on in India by him.

Exception: Interest on money borrowed by the non-resident for any purpose other than a business or profession, will not be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

> Example: If a non-resident 'A' borrows money from a non-resident 'B' and invests the same in shares of an Indian company, interest payable by 'A' to 'B' will not be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

Meaning of interest: Interest means interest payable in any manner in respect of any moneys borrowed or debt incurred (including a deposit, claim or other similar right or obligation) and includes any service fee or other charge in respect of the moneys borrowed or debt incurred or in respect of any credit facility which has not been utilized.

Taxability of interest payable by the Permanent Establishment of a non-resident engaged in banking business to the head office

In order to provide clarity and certainty, on the issue of taxability of interest payable by the PE of a non-resident engaged in banking business to the head office, an Explanation has been inserted in section 9(1)(v). Accordingly, in the case of a non-resident, being a person engaged in the business of banking, any interest payable by the PE in India of such non-resident to the head office or any PE or any other part of such non-resident outside India, shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

Such interest shall be chargeable to tax in addition to any income attributable to the PE in India.

Further, the PE in India shall be deemed to be a person separate and independent of the non-resident person of which it is a PE and the provisions of the Act relating to computation of total income, determination of tax and collection and recovery would apply accordingly.

Also, the PE in India has to deduct tax at source on any interest payable to either the head office or any other branch or PE, etc. of the non-resident outside India. Non-deduction would result in disallowance of interest claimed as expenditure by the PE and may also attract levy of interest and penalty in accordance with relevant provisions of the Act.

Permanent establishment includes a fixed place of business through which the business of the enterprise is wholly or partly carried on.

(6) Royalty [Section 9(1)(vi)]

Royalty will be deemed to accrue or arise in India when it is payable by -

(i) the Government;

(ii) a person who is a resident in India

Exception: Where it is payable for the transfer of any right or the use of any property or information or for the utilization of services for the purposes of a business or profession carried on by such person outside India or for the purposes of making or earning any income from any source outside India, or

(iii) a non-resident only when the royalty is payable in respect of any right, property or information used or services utilised for purposes of a business or profession carried on by such person in India or for the purposes of making or earning any income from any source in India.

Important points:

1. Lumpsum royalty not deemed to accrue arise in India: Lumpsum royalty payments made by a resident for the transfer of all or any rights (including the granting of a licence) in respect of computer software supplied by a non-resident manufacturer along with computer hardware under any scheme approved by the government under the policy on computer software export, software development and training, 1986 shall not be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

2. Meaning of Computer software: "Computer software" means any computer programme recorded on any disc, tape, perforated media or other information storage device and includes any such programme or any customised electronic data.

3. Meaning of Royalty: The term 'royalty' means consideration (including any lumpsum consideration but excluding any consideration which would be the income of the recipient chargeable under the head 'capital gains') for:

   (i) the transfer of all or any rights (including the granting of licence) in respect of a patent, invention, model, design, secret formula or process or trade mark or similar property;

(ii) the imparting of any information concerning the working of, or the use of, a patent, invention, model, design, secret formula or process or trade mark or similar property;

(iii) the use of any patent, invention, model, design, secret formula or process or trade mark or similar property;

(iv) the imparting of any information concerning technical, industrial, commercial or scientific knowledge, experience or skill;

(v) the use or right to use any industrial, commercial or scientific equipment but not including the amounts referred to in section 44BB;

(vi) the transfer of all or any rights (including the granting of licence) in respect of any copyright, literary, artistic or scientific work including films or video tapes for use in connection with television or tapes for use in connection with radio broadcasting, but not including consideration for the sale, distribution or exhibition of cinematographic films;

(vii) the rendering of any service in connection with the activities listed above.

The definition of 'royalty' for this purpose is wide enough to cover both industrial royalties as well as copyright royalties. The deduction specially excludes income which should be chargeable to tax under the head 'capital gains'.

4. Consideration for use or right to use of computer software is royalty within the meaning of section 9(1)(vi)

The consideration for use or right to use of computer software is royalty by clarifying that, transfer of all or any rights in respect of any right, property or information includes and has always included transfer of all or any right for use or right to use a computer software (including granting of a licence) irrespective of the medium through which such right is transferred [Explanation 4]

Consequently, the provisions of tax deduction at source under section 194J and section 195 would be attracted in respect of consideration for use or right to use computer software since the same falls within the definition of royalty.

Note - The Central Government has, vide Notification No. 21/2012 dated 13.6.2012 to be effective from 1st July, 2012, exempted certain software payments from the applicability of tax deduction under section 194J. Accordingly, where payment is made by the transferee for acquisition of software from a resident-transferor, the provisions of section 194J would not be attracted if –

(1) the software is acquired in a subsequent transfer without any modification by the transferor;

(2) tax has been deducted either under section 194J or under section 195 on payment for any previous transfer of such software; and

(3) the transferee obtains a declaration from the transferor that tax has been so deducted along with the PAN of the transferor.

5. Consideration in respect of any right, property or information – Is it royalty?

Explanation 5 provides that Royalty includes and has always included consideration in respect of any right, property or information, whether or not,

(a) the possession or control of such right, property or information is with the payer;

(b) such right, property or information is used directly by the payer;

(c) the location of such right, property or information is in India [Explanation 5]

6. Meaning of Process

Explanation 6 provides that the term "process" includes and shall be deemed to have always included transmission by satellite (including up-linking, amplification, conversion for down-linking of any signal), cable, optic fibre or by any other similar technology, whether or not such process is secret [Explanation 6]

ILLUSTRATION 3

Mr. Soham, an Indian Citizen, left India on 20-04-2017 for the first time to setup a software firm in Singapore. On 10-04-2019, he entered into an agreement with LK Limited, an Indian Company, for the transfer of technical documents and designs to setup an automobile factory in Faridabad. He reached India along with his team to render the requisite services on 15-05-2019 and was able to complete his assignment on 20-08-2019. He left for Singapore on 21-08-2019. He charged ₹ 50 lakhs for his services from LK Limited.

Determine the residential status of Mr. Soham for the Assessment Year 2020-21 and examine whether the fees charged from LK Limited would be chargeable to tax as per the Income-tax Act, 1961.

SOLUTION

Determination of residential status of Mr. Soham

As per section 6(1), an individual is said to be resident in India in any previous year if he satisfies the conditions:-

(i) He has been in India during the previous year for a total period of 182 days or more, or

(ii) He has been in India during the 4 years immediately preceding the previous year for a total period of 365 days or more and has been in India for at least 60 days in the previous year.

In the case of an Indian citizen leaving India for the purposes of employment outside India during the previous year or an Indian citizen, who being outside India, comes on a visit to India in any previous year, the period of stay during the previous year in condition (ii) above, to qualify as a resident, would be 182 days instead of 60 days.

In this case, Mr. Soham is an Indian citizen who left India to set up a software firm in Singapore on 20.04.2017. Therefore, he is an Indian citizen living in Singapore, who comes on a visit to India during the P.Y.2019-20. His stay in India during the period of his visit is only 99 days (i.e., 17+30+31+21 days). Since his stay in India during the previous year 2019-20 is only 99 days, he does not satisfy the minimum criterion of 182 days stay in India for being a resident. Hence, his residential status for A.Y.2020-21 is Non-Resident.

Taxability of income

As per section 5(2), in case of a non-resident, only income which accrues or arises or which is deemed to accrue or arise to him in India or which is received or deemed to be received in India in the relevant previous year is taxable in India.

In this case, Mr. Soham, a non-resident, charges fees from LK Ltd., an Indian company, for transfer of technical documents and designs to set up an automobile factory in Faridabad. He renders the requisite services in India for which he stays in India for 99 days during the P.Y.2019-20.

Section 9(1)(vi) defines "royalty" to mean consideration for transfer of all or any rights in respect of, inter alia, a design and also for the rendering of services in connection with such activity. Transfer of rights in the above definition includes transfer of right for use or right to use a computer software also. Therefore, the fees received by Mr. Soham for transfer of technical documents and designs and rendering of requisite services in relation thereto would fall within the meaning of "royalty".

As per section 9(1)(vi), income by way of royalty payable by a person who is a resident (in this case, LK Limited, an Indian company) would be deemed to accrue or arise in India in the hands of the non-resident (Mr. Soham, in this case), except where such royalty is payable in respect of any right or property or information used or for services utilized for the purpose of a business carried on by such person outside India or for the purposes of making or earning income from any source outside India.

In this case, since the royalty is payable by LK Limited, an Indian company, to Mr. Soham, a non-resident, in respect of services utilized for a business in India (namely, for setting up an automobile factory in Faridabad), the same is deemed to accrue or arise in India and is hence, taxable in India in the hands of Mr. Soham, a non-resident for the A.Y. 2020-21.

(7) Fees for technical services [Section 9(1)(vii)]

Any fees for technical services will be deemed to accrue or arise in India if they are payable by -

(i) the Government.

(ii) a person who is resident in India

Exception: Where the fees is payable in respect of technical services utilised in a business or profession carried on by such person outside India or for the purpose of making or earning any income from any source outside India.

(iii) a person who is a non-resident, only where the fees are payable in respect of services utilised in a business or profession carried on by the non-resident in India or where such services are utilised for the purpose of making or earning any income from any source in India.

Fees for technical services mean any consideration (including any lumpsum consideration) for the rendering of any managerial, technical or consultancy services (including providing the services of technical or other personnel). However, it does not include consideration for any construction, assembly, mining or like project undertaken by the recipient or consideration which would be income of the recipient chargeable under the head 'Salaries'.

Income deemed to accrue or arise in India to a non-resident by way of interest, royalty and fee for technical services to be taxed irrespective of territorial nexus [Explanation to section 9]

Income by way of interest, royalty or fee for technical services which is deemed to accrue or arise in India by virtue of clauses (v), (vi) and (vii) of section 9(1), shall be included in the total income of the non-resident, whether or not –

(i) the non-resident has a residence or place of business or business connection in India; or

(ii) the non-resident has rendered services in India.

In effect, the income by way of fee for technical services, interest or royalty, from services utilized in India would be deemed to accrue or arise in India in case of a non-resident and be included in his total income, whether or not such services were rendered in India.

ILLUSTRATION 4

Miss Vivitha paid a sum of 5000 USD to Mr. Kulasekhara, a management consultant practising in Colombo, specializing in project financing. The payment was made in Colombo. Mr. Kulasekhara is a non-resident. The consultancy is related to a project in India with possible Ceylonese collaboration. Is this payment chargeable to tax in India in the hands of Mr. Kulasekhara?

SOLUTION

A non-resident is chargeable to tax in respect of income received outside India only if such income accrues or arises or is deemed to accrue or arise to him in India.

The income deemed to accrue or arise in India under section 9 comprises, inter alia, income by way of fees for technical services, which includes any consideration for rendering of any managerial, technical or consultancy services. Therefore, payment to a management consultant relating to project financing is covered within the scope of "fees for technical services".

The Explanation below section 9(2) clarifies that income by way of, inter alia, fees for technical services, from services utilized in India would be deemed to accrue or arise in India in case of a non-resident and be included in his total income, whether or not such services were rendered in India or whether or not the non-resident has a residence or place of business or business connection in India.

In the instant case, since the services were utilized in India, the payment received by Mr. Kulasekhara, a non-resident, in Colombo is chargeable to tax in his hands in India, as it is deemed to accrue or arise in India.

(8) Any sum of money paid by a resident Indian to a non-corporate non-resident or foreign company [Section 9(1)(viii)]

Income arising outside India, being any sum of money paid without consideration, by a Indian resident person to a non-corporate non-resident or foreign company on or after 5.7.2019 would be deemed to accrue or arise in India if the same is chargeable to tax under section 56(2)(x) i.e., if the aggregate of such sum received by a non-corporate non-resident or foreign company exceeds ₹ 50,000.

Section 44B is a non-obstante clause. Accordingly, sections 28 to 43A are not applicable in the case of a non-resident engaged in the business of operation of ships.

Section 44B provides that profits and gains of a non-resident engaged in the business of operation of ships are to be taken @ 7.5% of the aggregate of the following amounts:

(i) paid or payable, whether in or out of India, to the assessee or to any person on his behalf on account of carriage of passengers, livestock, mail or goods shipped at any port in India; and

The amounts referred to in (i) and (ii) shall include demurrage charges or handling charges or any other amount of similar nature.

The amounts paid or payable or the amounts received or deemed to be received will also include the amount paid or payable or received or deemed to be received by way of demurrage charges or handling charges or any other amount of similar nature [CIT v. Japan Lines Ltd. 260 ITR 656 (Mad)]. Thus 7.5% of the gross amounts mentioned above would be liable to tax and no deduction would be allowed for any expenditure, (i.e. the provisions of section 28 to 43A are not to be taken into account) however carried forward losses would be allowed to be set off from such income.

Such return is, ordinarily, to be furnished by the master of the ship before the departure, from that port in India, of the ship.

A return may, however, be filed by the person authorized by the master of the ship within 30 days of the departure of the ship from the port, if:

(a) the Assessing Officer is satisfied that it is not possible for the master of the ship to furnish the return required by section 172(3) before the departure of the ship from the port and

(b) the master of the ship has made satisfactory arrangement for the filing of the return and payment of tax by any other person on this behalf.

(ii) Assessment [Section 172(4)]: This section provides for a summary procedure of assessment. On receipt of the return filed by the master of the ship or by any person on this behalf, the Assessing Officer has to determine the tax payable on the taxable income. By virtue of the provisions of section 172(2), the taxable income is a sum equal to 7.5% of the amount paid or payable on account of carriage of passengers etc. to the owner or charterer or to any person on his behalf, whether that amount is paid or payable in or out of India. The tax payable on such taxable income is to be calculated at the rate or rates in force applicable to the total income of a foreign company. The master of the ship is liable for payment of such tax.

(iii) Time limit for passing the assessment order [Section 172(4A)/(5)]: It is incumbent on the Assessing Officer to pass the order of assessment within 9 months from the end of the financial year in which the return of income under section 172(3) is filed.

For the purpose of determining the tax payable, Assessing Officer is empowered to call for such accounts and documents as he may require.

(iv) Grant of port of clearance to the ship [Section 172(6)]: A port clearance shall not be granted to the ship until the Collector of customs or other authorized officer, is satisfied that the tax assessable under section 172 has been duly paid or that satisfactory arrangements have been made for the payment thereof.

(v) Option to pay tax as per normal provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 on the income chargeable to tax under section 172 [Section 172(7)]: The owner or charterer has the option to claim before the expiry of the assessment year relevant to the previous year in which the date of departure of the ship from the Indian port falls, that an assessment in respect of his total income for the previous year and the tax payable on the basis thereof be determined in accordance with the other provisions of this Act. In such a case, any payment made under section 172 is to be treated as a payment in advance of the tax leviable for that assessment year and the difference between the sum so paid and the amount of tax found payable by him on such assessment is to be paid by him or refunded to him, as the case may be.

The sum chargeable to tax under this section shall include amounts payable by way of demurrage charge or handling charge or any other amount of similar nature [Section 172(8)].

Section 172 vis-à-vis section 44B

In case the assessee is covered under section 172, 7.5 per cent of the amount paid or payable on account of the carriage of the passengers, livestock, mail or goods to the owner or the chartered or to any person on his behalf is deemed as his income and tax is levied on such income at a rate applicable to a foreign company i.e., 40% plus surcharge, if any, and plus health and education cess @4%.

Under the provisions of section 172(7), the non-resident owner or charterer is allowed an option to be assessed on his total income of the previous year in accordance with other provisions of the Act i.e., as per section 44B.

When such option is exercised, a regular assessment is made. In such a case, the tax already paid under the provisions of section 172(4) by the non-resident owner or charterer would be treated as tax paid in advance for that assessment year before determining the amount of tax finally due. The difference between the sum so paid and the amount of tax payable by him on such assessment shall be paid by the assessee or refunded to him (See Note below).

In that case, the non-resident assessee is liable to pay interest under sections 234B and 234C and also entitled to receive interest under section 244A of the Income-tax Act, 1961 as the case may be. [Circular No. 9/2001, dated 9-7-2001]

Note –Refund may arise in case of non-corporate non-residents, since they are liable to pay tax at a rate lower than the rate of 40% (plus surcharge, if any, and cess@4%) applicable to a foreign company.

The Supreme Court, in A.S. Glittre v CIT (1997) 225 ITR 739 (SC), held that the assessment made under section 172(4) shall be an 'adhoc' assessment and it will be superceded if a regular assessment is opted as per the provisions of the Act.

ILLUSTRATION 6

Sea Port Shipping Line, a non-resident foreign company ships is engaged in the business of carriage of goods shipped at Mumbai port. During the previous year ended on 31.3.2020, it had collected freight of 100 lakhs, demurrages of ₹ 20 lakhs and handling charges of ₹ 10 lakhs. The expenses of operating its fleet during the year for the Indian Ports were ₹ 110 lakhs. Compute its income applying the presumptive provisions under section 44B.

SOLUTION

Section 44B provides that in the case of an assessee, being a non-resident, engaged in the business of operation of ships, a sum equal to 7.5% of the aggregate of the following amounts would be deemed to be the profits and gains of such business chargeable to tax under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession".

These provisions for computation of income from the shipping business in case of non-residents would apply notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in the provisions of sections 28 to 43A of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

Therefore, in this case, M/s. Sea Port Shipping Line is required to pay tax in India on the basis of presumptive scheme as per the provisions of section 44B. The assessee shall not be entitled to set off any of the expenses incurred for earning of such income. Therefore, the Shipping Line is required to pay tax on deemed profit of ₹ 9.75 lacs (7.50% on the total receipts of ₹ 130 lacs). The tax payable would be reduced by the amount of tax paid under section 172(4).

The assessment in all such cases shall be done by the Assessing Officer under section 143(3).

(v) Meaning of certain terms: For the purposes of this section,-

(a) "Plant" includes ships, aircraft, vehicles, drilling units, scientific apparatus and equipment, used for the purposes of the said business;

(b) "Mineral oil" includes petroleum and natural gas.

Note - If the income of a non-resident is in the nature of fees for technical services, it shall be taxable under the provisions of either section 44DA or section 115A irrespective of the business to which it relates. Section 44BB would apply only in a case where consideration is for services and other facilities relating to exploration activity which are not in the nature of technical services.

(3) Special provision for computing profits and gains of the business of operation of aircraft in the case of non-residents [Section 44BBA]

Section 44BBA is a non-obstante clause. Accordingly, sections 28 to 43A are not applicable in the case of a non-resident engaged in the business of operation of aircraft.

ILLUSTRATION 7

Mr. Q, a non-resident, operates an aircraft between Singapore and Chennai. He received the following amounts while carrying on the business of operation of aircrafts for the year ended 31.3.2020:

(i) ₹ 2 crores in India on account of carriage of passengers from Chennai.

(ii) ₹ 1 crore in India on account of carriage of goods from Chennai.

(iii) ₹ 3 crores in India on account of carriage of passengers from Singapore.

(iv) ₹ 1 crore in Singapore on account of carriage of passengers from Chennai.

The total expenditure incurred by Mr. Q for the purposes of the business during the year ending 31.3.2020 was ₹ 6.75 crores.

Compute the income of Mr. Q chargeable to tax in India under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" for the assessment year 2020-21.

What would be your answer in case the business was carried on by a foreign company, Q Airlines (P) Ltd?

SOLUTION

Section 44BBA says for computing profits and gains of the business of operation of aircraft in the case of non-residents a sum equal to 5% of the aggregate of the following amounts -

(a) paid or payable, whether in or out of India, to the assessee or to any person on his behalf on account of the carriage of passengers, livestock, mail or goods from any place in India; and

(b) received or deemed to be received in India by or on behalf of the assessee on account of the carriage of passengers, livestock, mail or goods from any place outside India.

Keeping in view the provisions of section 44BBA, the income of Mr. Q chargeable to tax in India under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" is worked out hereunder-

Particulars	₹
Amount received in India on account of carriage of passengers from Chennai	2,00,00,000
Amount received in India on account of carriage of goods from Chennai	1,00,00,000
Amount received in India on account of carriage of passengers from Singapore	3,00,00,000
Amount received in Singapore on account of carriage of passengers from Chennai	1,00,00,000
	7,00,00,000

Income from business under section 44BBA at 5% of ₹ 7,00,00,000 is ₹ 35,00,000, which is the income of Mr. Q chargeable to tax in India under the head “Profits and gains of business or profession” for the A.Y. 2020-21.

In case the assessee is a foreign company, say, Q Airlines (P) Ltd, the answer would be the same since section 44BBA does not distinguish corporate and non-corporate taxpayers who operate aircraft provided their residential status is that of non-resident.

	Assessee	Income

(a)	A sportsman (including an athlete), who is not a citizen of India and is a non-resident	Any income received or receivable by way of— (i) participation in India in any game (other than a game the winnings wherefrom are taxable under section 115BB, being winning from crossword puzzles, races including horse races, card games and other games of any sort of gambling or betting) or sport; or (ii) advertisement; or

Note: The issue as to whether the non-resident match referees and umpires in the games played in India fall within the meaning of "sportsmen" to attract taxability under the provisions of section 115BBA, and consequently attract the TDS provisions under section 194E in the hands of the payer was taken up by the Calcutta High Court in Indcom v. CIT (TDS) (2011) 335 ITR 485.

In order to attract the provisions of the section 194E, the person should be a non-resident sportsperson or non-resident sports association or institution whose income is taxable as per the provisions of section 115BBA.

Umpires and match referees can be described as professionals or technical persons who render professional or technical services, but they cannot be said to be either non-resident sportsmen (including an athlete) or non-resident sports association or institution so as to attract the provisions of section 115BBA and consequently, the provisions of tax deduction at source under section 194E are can not be attracted.

The Calcutta High Court held that although the payments made to non-resident umpires and the match referees are "income" which has accrued and arisen in India, the same are not taxable under the provisions of section 115BBA and thus, the assessee is not liable to deduct tax under section 194E.

It may be noted that since income has accrued and arisen in India to the non-resident umpires and match referees, the TDS provisions under section 195 would be attracted and tax would be deductible at the rates in force.

ILLUSTRATION 12

During the financial year 2019-20, Nadal, a tennis professional and a non-Indian citizen participated in India in a Tennis Tournament and won prize money of ₹ 15 lakhs. He contributed articles on the tournament in a local newspaper for which he was paid ₹ 1 lakh. He was also paid ₹ 5 lakhs by a Soft Drink company for appearance in a T.V. advertisement. Although his expenses in India were met by the sponsors, he had to incur ₹ 3 lakhs towards his travel costs to India. He was a non-resident for tax purposes in India.

What would be his tax liability in India for A.Y. 2020-21? Is he required to file his return of income?

SOLUTION

Under section 115BBA, all the three items of receipts in India viz. prize money of ₹ 15 lakhs, amount received from newspaper of ₹ 1 lakh and amount received towards TV advertisement of ₹ 5 lakhs - are chargeable to tax. No expenditure is allowable as deduction against such receipts. The rate of tax chargeable under section 115BBA is 20%, plus health and education cess @4%. The total tax liability works out to ₹ 4,36,800 being 20.8% of ₹ 21 lakhs. Thus, Nadal will be liable to tax on the income earned in India

He is not required to file his return of income if -

(a) his total income during the previous year consists only of income arising under section 115BBA; and

(b) the tax deductible at source under the provisions of Chapter XVII-B have been deducted from such incomes.

ILLUSTRATION 13

Smith, a foreign national and a cricketer came to India as a member of Australian cricket team in the year ended 31st March, 2020. He received ₹ 5 lakhs for participation in matches in India. He also received ₹ 1 lakh for an advertisement of a product on TV. He contributed articles in a newspaper for which he received ₹ 10,000. When he stayed in India, he also won a prize of ₹ 20,000 from horse racing in Mumbai. He has no other income in India during the year.

(i) Compute tax liability of Smith for Assessment Year 2020-21.

(ii) Are the income specified above subject to deduction of tax at source?

(iii) Is he liable to file his return of income for Assessment Year 2020-21?

(iv) What would have been his tax liability, had he been a match referee instead of a cricketer?

SOLUTION

(i) Computation of tax liability of Smith for the A.Y.2020-21

Particulars	₹	₹
Income taxable under section 115BBA
Income from participation in matches in India	5,00,000
Advertisement of product on TV	1,00,000
Contribution of articles in newspaper	10,000
Income taxable under section 115BB
Income from horse races	20,000
Total income	6,30,000
Tax@ 20% under section 115BBA on ₹ 6,10,000		1,22,000
Tax@ 30% under section 115BB on income of ₹ 20,000 from horse races		6,000
		1,28,000
Add: Health and Education cess@4%		5,120
Total tax liability of Smith for the A.Y.2020-21		1,33,120

(ii) Yes, the above income is subject to tax deduction at source.

Income referred to in section 115BBA (i.e., ₹ 6,10,000, in this case) is subject to tax deduction at source@ 20% under section 194E.

Income referred to in section 115BB (i.e., ₹ 20,000, in this case) is subject to tax deduction at source@30% under section 194BB.

Since Smith is a non-resident, the amount of tax to be deducted calculated at the prescribed rates mentioned above, would be increased by health and education cess@4%.

(iii) Section 115BBA provides that if the total income of the non-resident sportsman comprises of only income referred to in that section and tax deductible at source has been fully deducted, it shall not be necessary for him to file his return of income. However, in this case, Mr. Smith has income from horse races as well. Therefore, he cannot avail the benefit of exemption from filing of return of income as contained in section 115BBA. Hence, he would be liable to file his return of income for A.Y.2020-21.

(iv) The Calcutta High Court in Indcom v. CIT (TDS)(2011) 335 ITR 485 has held that 'match referee' would not fall within the meaning of "sportsmen" to attract the provisions of section 115BBA. Therefore, although the payments made to non-resident 'match referee' are "income" which has accrued and arisen in India, the same are not taxable under the provisions of section 115BBA. They are subject to the normal rates of tax.

2.9 WITHHOLDING TAX PROVISIONS FOR NON-RESIDENTS

(1) Salary payable in foreign currency [Section 192]

By virtue of section 9(1)(ii), salary is deemed to accrue or arise in India, if services are rendered in India. Therefore, if a non-resident renders services in India, the salary income would be chargeable to tax in India and the person responsible for paying the salary income i.e., the employer, has to deduct withholding tax in accordance with the provisions of Section 192.

Such income-tax has to be calculated at the average rate of income-tax computed on the basis of the rates in force for the relevant financial year in which the payment is made, on the estimated total income of the assesse.

Average rate of income-tax means the rate arrived at by dividing the amount of income-tax calculated on the total income, by such total income.

Section 192(6) deals with the provisions of withholding tax in case of salary payable in foreign currency. In case, where salary is payable in foreign currency, the amount of tax deducted is to be calculated after converting the salary payable into Indian currency at the telegraphic transfer buying rate as adopted by State Bank of India on the last day of the month immediately preceding the month in which the salary is due, or is paid in advance or in arrears [Rule 26 read with Rule 115].

Students may note that the Rule 26 and Rule 115 have been given as Annexure – 2 at the end of this material.

However, no deduction shall be made in respect of any dividends referred to in section 115-O.

(4) Income of foreign institutional investors from securities [Section 196D]

(i) The person responsible for making the payment in respect of securities referred to in section 115AD(1)(a) to a Foreign Institutional Investor has to deduct tax @20% plus surcharge, wherever applicable, plus health and education cess@4% at the time of credit of such income to the account of the payee or at the time of payment thereof in cash or by the issue of a cheque or draft or by any other mode, whichever is earlier.

In a case where the person entitled to the income arising from any business connection in India or from any property in India or through or from any asset or source of income in India or through the transfer of a capital asset situated in India is a non-resident, the tax chargeable thereon, whether in his name or in the name of his agent who is liable as a representative assessee, may be recovered by deduction under any of the provisions of Chapter XVII-B. Further, any arrears of tax may be recovered also in accordance with the provisions of this Act from any assets of the non-resident which are, or may at any time come, within India. These provisions are without prejudice to the provisions of section 161(1) or of section 167.

(2) Recovery against the assessee's property in foreign countries [Section 228A]

Where an assessee is in default or is deemed to be in default in making a payment of tax, the Tax Recovery Officer may, if the assessee is a resident of a country (being a country with which the Central Government has entered into an agreement for the recovery of income tax under this Act and the corresponding law in force in that country) or has any property in that country, forward to the CBDT a certificate drawn up by him under section 222. Thereafter, the CBDT may take such action thereon as it may deem appropriate having regard to the terms of the agreement with such country.

Similarly, the Government of the other country or any authority under that Government may send to the CBDT a certificate of recovery of any tax due under such corresponding law from a person having property in India and the CBDT may forward such certificate to Tax Recovery Officer having jurisdiction over the resident or within whose jurisdiction such property is situated, for recovery of such tax. Tax Recovery Officer can proceed to recover the amount specified in the Certificate by –

(a) attachment and sale of assessee's movable or immovable property

(c) appointing a receiver for the management of assessee's movable and immovable property.

He shall thereafter remit the sum so recovered to the CBDT.

(3) Submission of statement by a non-resident having liaison office [Section 285]

(i) A non-resident can operate in India through a branch or a liaison office set up after getting the approval of the Reserve Bank of India. Since the branch constitutes a permanent establishment of the non-resident, it has to file its return of income. However, prior to 1.6.2011, there was no such requirement as regards a liaison office since no business activity is allowed to be carried out in India via a liaison office of a non-resident.

(ii) With effect from 1.6.2011, such a non-resident is required to file a statement in the prescribed form [Form No.49C] to the Assessing Officer having jurisdiction, within 60 days from the end of the financial year, providing the details in respect of activities carried out by the liaison office in India during the financial year.

(iii) This requirement has to be complied with by every person, being a non-resident having a liaison office in India set up in accordance with the guidelines issued by the RBI under the Foreign Exchange Management Act, 1999.

(iv) The statement of a particular financial year should be filed on or before 30th May, of the succeeding financial year in electronic form along with digital signature. For example, the statement for F.Y. 2019-20 should be filed on or before 30th May, 2020. Further, the statement is to be verified by a Chartered Accountant or by the Authorized Signatory i.e., the person authorized by the non-resident in this behalf.

(i) There shall be a reporting obligation on the Indian concern through or in which the Indian assets are held by a foreign company or entity.

(ii) For the purposes of determination of any income accruing or arising in India under section 9(1)(i), an Indian concern has to furnish, within the prescribed period to the prescribed income-tax authority, the information or documents, in prescribed manner, if -

- such company or, entity, holds, directly or indirectly, such assets in India through, or in, the Indian concern.

(iii) The information has to be furnished in Form No.49D electronically within a period of 90 days from the end of the financial year in which the transfer of such share or interest referred to above takes place.

(iv) If any Indian concern fails to furnish the information or documents, the income-tax authority, as may be prescribed under the said section, may direct that such Indian concern shall pay, by way of penalty under section 271GA,—

(a) @2% of the value of the transaction in respect of which such failure has taken place, if such transaction had the effect of directly or indirectly transferring the right of management or control in relation to the Indian concern;

(b) ₹ 5,00,000 in any other case.

Note – Rule 114DB prescribes the time limit and Information or documents to be furnished under section 285A[5].

EXERCISE

Question 1

Peeyush, returned to India on 12th June, 2019 for permanently residing in India after a stay of about 20 years in U.K., provides the sources of his various incomes and seeks your opinion to know about his liability to income tax thereon in India in assessment year 2020-21:

(i) Income of rent of the flat in London which was deposited in a bank there. The flat was given on rent by him after his return to India since July, 2019.

(ii) Dividends on the shares of three German Companies which are being collected in a bank account in London. He proposes to keep the dividend on shares in London with the permission of the Reserve Bank of India.

(iii) He has got two sons, one of whom is of 12 years and other 19 years. Both his sons are staying in London and not returning to India with him. Each of his sons is having income of ₹ 75,000 in U.K. in foreign currency (not received in India) and of ₹ 20,000 in India.

(iv) During the preceding accounting year when he was a non-resident, he had sold 1000 shares which were acquired by him in British Pound Sterling and the sale proceeds were repatriated. The profit in terms of British Pound Sterling on sale of these 1000 shares was 175% of the cost at ₹ 37,500 while in terms of Indian Rupee it was ₹ 50,000.

Answer

Peeyush returned to India on 12th June 2019 for permanently residing in India after staying in UK for 20 years. During the P.Y.2019-20, he stays in India for 294 days. Since he has stayed in India for a period of 182 days or more during the previous year 2019-20, he would be a resident in India for the A.Y.2020-21. However, he would be a resident but not ordinarily resident, assuming that he was a non-resident in nine out of ten previous years preceding P.Y.2019-20 and his stay in India during the seven previous years is less than 730 days. The residential status of Peeyush for A.Y.2020-21 is, therefore, Resident but Not Ordinarily Resident.

As per section 5(1), only income which is received/ deemed to be received/ accrued or arisen/ deemed to accrue or arise in India is taxable in case of a Resident but not Ordinarily Resident. Income which accrues or arises outside India shall not be included in his total income, unless it is derived from a business controlled in, or a profession set up in, India.

(i) Rental income from a flat in London which was deposited in a bank there shall not be taxable in the case of a resident but not ordinarily resident, since both the accrual and receipt of income are outside India.

(ii) Dividends from shares of three German Companies, collected in a bank account in London, would also not be taxable in the case of a resident but not ordinarily resident since both the accrual and receipt of income are outside India.

(iii) As per section 64(1A), all income accruing or arising to a minor child is includible in the hands of the parent, after providing for deduction of ₹ 1,500 per child under section 10(32).

Accordingly, income of ₹ 20,000 accruing to his minor son, aged 12 years, in India is includible in the income of Peeyush, after providing deduction of ₹ 1,500. Therefore, ₹18,500 is includible in the income of Peeyush. Income accruing to the minor child outside India (which is also received outside India) is not includible in the income of Peeyush.

Since the other son is major, his income is not includible in the income of Peeyush.

(iv) Repatriation of sale proceeds of 1000 shares sold in the preceding accounting year, when Peeyush was a non-resident, is not taxable in the A.Y.2020-21 since it is not the income of the P.Y.2019-20.

Consequently, only the income includible under section 64(1A) would form part of the total income of Mr. Peeyush for A.Y.2020-21. Since his total income (i.e., ₹ 18,500) is less than the basic exemption limit, there would be no liability to income-tax for A.Y.2020-21.

Question 2

Mr. David, a citizen of India, serving in the Ministry of External Affairs in India, was transferred to Indian Embassy in Canada on 31.03.2019. He did not visit India any time during the previous year 2019-20. He has received the following income for the Financial Year 2019-20:

S.No.	Particulars	₹
(i)	Salary (Computed)	5,00,000
(ii)	Foreign Allowance	4,00,000
(iii)	Interest on fixed deposit from bank in India	1,00,000
(iv)	Income from agriculture in Pakistan	2,00,000
(v)	Income from house property in Pakistan	2,50,000

Compute his gross total income for Assessment Year 2020-21.

Answer

As per section 6(1), Mr. David is a non-resident for the A.Y. 2020-21, since he was not present in India at any time during the previous year 2019-20.

As per section 5(2), a non-resident is chargeable to tax in India only in respect of following incomes:

(i) Income received or deemed to be received in India; and

(ii) Income accruing or arising or deemed to accrue or arise in India.

In view of the above provisions, income from agriculture in Pakistan and income from house property in Pakistan would not be chargeable to tax in the hands of David, assuming that the same were received in Pakistan.

Income from 'Salaries' payable by the Government to a citizen of India for services rendered outside India is deemed to accrue or arise in India as per section 9(1)(iii). Hence, such income is taxable in the hands of Mr. David, even though he is a non-resident.

However, allowances or perquisites paid or allowed as such outside India by the Government to a citizen of India for rendering service outside India is exempt under section 10(7). Hence, foreign allowance of ₹ 4,00,000 is exempt under section 10(7).

Gross Total Income of Mr. David for A.Y. 2020-21

Particulars	₹
Salaries	5,00,000
Income from other sources (Interest on fixed deposit in India)	1,00,000
Gross Total Income	6,00,000

Question 3

Mr. A, a citizen of India, left for USA for the purposes of employment on 1.5.2019. He has not visited India thereafter. Mr. A borrows money from his friend Mr. B, who also left India for employment purpose one week before Mr. A's departure, to the extent of ₹ 10 lakhs and buys shares in X Ltd., an Indian company. Discuss the taxability of the interest charged @10% in B's hands where the same has been received in New York.

Answer

An individual is said to be resident in India in any previous year, if he -

(i) has been in India during that year for a total period of 182 days or more, or

(ii) has been in India during the four years immediately preceding that year for a total period of 365 days or more and has been in India for at least 60 days in that year.

In the case of an Indian citizen leaving India for the purposes of employment outside India during the previous year, the period of stay during the previous year in condition (ii) above, to qualify as a resident, would be 182 days instead of 60 days.

In this case, Mr. A is an Indian citizen who left India for employment outside India on 01.05.2019. Mr. A has been in India only from 1.4.2019 to 01.05.2019 i.e. for 31 days. Since his stay in India during the previous year 2019-20 is only 31 days, he does not satisfy the minimum criterion of 182 days stay in India for being a resident. Hence, his residential status for A.Y. 2020-21 is Non-Resident. Mr. B, who left India one week before A's departure, is also a non-resident for the same reasons.

Section 9(1)(v) provides that income by way of interest payable by a non-resident in respect of any debt incurred, or moneys borrowed and used, for the purposes of a business or profession carried on by such person in India shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

Therefore, interest payable by a non-resident in respect of any debt incurred, or moneys borrowed and used, for the purpose of making or earning any income from any source other than a business or profession carried on by him in India, shall not be deemed to accrue or arise in India. Therefore, interest payable by Mr. A on money borrowed from Mr. B to invest in shares of an Indian company shall not be deemed to accrue or arise in India and hence, is not taxable in India in the hands of Mr. B.

Question 4

JJ Limited, a company incorporated in Australia has entered into an agreement with KK Limited, an Indian company for rendering technical services to the latter for setting up a fertilizer plant in Orissa. As per the agreement, JJ Limited rendered both off-shore services and on-shore services to KK Limited at fee of ₹ 1 crore and ₹ 1.5 crore, respectively. JJ Limited is of the view that it is not liable to tax in India in respect of fee of ₹ 1 crore as it is for rendering services outside India. Discuss the correctness of the view of JJ Limited.

Answer

The Explanation below section 9(2) clarifies that income by way of, inter alia, fees for technical services from services utilized in India would be deemed to accrue or arise in India under section 9(1)(vii) in case of a non-resident and be included in his total income, whether or not such services were rendered in India.

In this case, the technical services rendered by the foreign company, JJ Ltd., were for setting up a fertilizer plant in Orissa. Therefore, the services were utilized in India. Consequently, as per the Explanation below section 9(2), the fee of ₹ 2.5 crore for technical services rendered by JJ Ltd. (both off-shore and on-shore services) to KK Ltd. is deemed to accrue or arise in India and includible in the total income of JJ Ltd.

Therefore, the view of JJ Ltd. that it is not liable to tax in India in respect of fee of ₹ 1 crore (as it is for rendering services outside India) is not correct.

Question 5

Examine with reasons whether the following transactions attract income-tax in India, in the hands of recipients under section 9 of Income-tax Act, 1961:

(i) A non-resident German company, which did not have a permanent establishment in India, entered into an agreement for execution of electrical work in India. Separate payments were made towards drawings & designs, which were described as "Engineering Fee". The assessee contended that such business profits should be taxable in Germany as there is no business connection within the meaning of section 9(1)(i) of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

(ii) A firm of solicitors in Mumbai engaged a barrister in UK for arguing a case before Supreme Court of India. A payment of 5000 pounds was made as per terms of professional engagement.

(iii) Amount paid by Government of India for use of a patent developed by Mr. A, who is a non-resident.

(iv) Sai Engineering, a non-resident foreign company entered into a collaboration agreement on 25/6/2019, with an Indian Company and was in receipt of interest on 8% debentures for ₹ 20 lakhs, issued by Indian Company, in consideration of providing technical know-how utilised in its business in Mumbai during previous year 2019-20.

Answer

(i) Fees for technical services is taxable under section 9(1)(vii). In this case, the separate payments made towards drawings and designs (described as "engineering fee") are in the nature of fee for technical services and, therefore, it is taxable in India by virtue of section 9(1)(vii), since the services are utilized for execution of electrical work in India [Aeg Aktiengesllschaft v. CIT (2004) 267 ITR 209 (Kar.)].

As per Explanation to section 9, where income is deemed to accrue or arise in India under section 9(1)(vii), such income shall be included in the total income of the non-resident German company, regardless of whether it has a residence or place of business or business connection in India.

(ii) As per section 9(1)(i), all income accruing or arising, whether directly or indirectly, through or from any business connection in India is deemed to accrue or arise in India.

In this case, there was a professional connection between the firm of solicitors in Mumbai and the barrister in UK. The expression "business" includes not only trade and manufacture; it includes, within its scope, "profession" as well. Therefore, the existence of professional connection amounts to existence of "business connection" under section 9(1)(i). It was so held by the Supreme Court in Barendra Prasad Roy v. ITO (1981) 129 ITR 295.

Hence, the amount of 5,000 pounds paid to the barrister in UK as per the terms of the professional engagement constitutes income which is deemed to accrue or arise in India under section 9(1)(i). Hence, it is taxable in India.

(iii) As per section 9(1)(vi), income by way of royalty payable by the Government of India is deemed to accrue or arise in India. "Royalty" means consideration for, inter alia, use of patent. Therefore, the amount paid by Government of India for use of patent developed by Mr. A, a non-resident, is deemed to accrue or arise in India. Hence, it is taxable in India in the hands of Mr. A.

(iv) ₹ 20 lakhs, being the value of debentures issued by an Indian company in consideration of providing technical know-how for use in its business in India, is in the nature of fee for technical services, deemed to accrue or arise in India to Sai Engineering, a non-resident foreign company, under section 9(1)(vii). Hence, it is taxable in India.

Further, as per section 9(1)(v), income by way of interest payable by a person who is a resident of India is deemed to accrue or arise in India. Therefore, interest income from debentures of an Indian company is deemed to accrue or arise in India in the hands of Sai Engineering by virtue of section 9(1)(v). Hence, it is taxable in India.

Note – Since the question specifically requires the candidates to examine the taxability of the above transactions under section 9, the provisions of double taxation avoidance agreement, if any, applicable in the above cases, have not been taken into consideration.

Question 6

Z, an American tourist, comes to India for the first time on June 17, 2019. He leaves India on September 29, 2019. Determine his residential status for the assessment year 2020-21. Does it make any difference if he comes to India on a business trip or if he is an Indian citizen?

Answer

Previous year 2019-20:	105 [14+31+31+29]
Previous year 2018-19:	Nil
Previous year 2017-18:	Nil

and so on ……

He is non-resident for the assessment year 2020-21 as he does not satisfy any of the basic conditions. It does not make any difference if he comes on a business trip to India.

Further, in this case, it does not make any difference if he is an Indian citizen as far as the answer of non-resident is concerned. However, there is a difference in application of basic conditions as an Indian citizen who comes on a visit to India during the previous has the option of only one basic condition of 182 days to become a resident.

Question 7

M/s. Global Airlines incorporated as a company in USA operated its flights to India and vice versa during the year 2019-20 (April, 2019 to March, 2020) and collected charges of ₹ 125 lakhs for carriage of passengers and cargo out of which ₹ 65 lakhs were received in New York in U.S Dollars for the passenger fare booked from New York to Mumbai. The total expenses for the year on operation of such flights were ₹ 195 lakhs. Compute the income chargeable to tax of the foreign airlines.

Answer

As per section 44BBA, in case of a non-resident engaged in the business of operation of aircraft, 5% of the following amounts would be deemed to be the profits and gains from such business:

(a) paid or payable, whether in or out of India, to the assessee or to any person on his behalf on account of the carriage of passengers, livestock, mail or goods from any place in India; and

(b) received or deemed to be received in India by or on behalf of the assessee on account of the carriage of passengers, livestock, mail or goods from any place outside India.

In the present case, the income chargeable to tax of M/s Global Airlines applying the provisions of section 44BBA are as follows:

Particulars	Fare booked from India to outside India whether received in India or not (₹)	Fare booked from New York to Mumbai (₹)
Fare	60,00,000 (1,25,00,000 – 65,00,000)	65,00,000
Deemed income @5% u/s 44BBA	3,00,000 (60,00,000 × 5%)	Nil (since the amount not received in India)

Question 8

Atlant Italy, a company incorporated in France, was engaged in manufacture, trade and supply equipment and services for GSM Cellular Radio Telephones Systems. It supplied hardware and software to various entities in India. Software licensed by assessee embodied the process which is required to control and manage the specific set of activities involved in the business use of its customers, and also made available to its customers, who used it to carry out their business activities. The Assessing Officer contented that the consideration for supply of software embedded in hardware is 'royalty' under section 9(1)(vi)

Examine the correctness of the action of the Assessing Officer assuming that the software that was loaded on the hardware and embedded in the system does not have any independent existence.

Answer

The issue under consideration in this case is whether consideration for supply of software embedded in hardware would tantamount to 'royalty' for attracting deemed accrual of income under section 9(1)(vi).

As per section 9(1)(vi), income by way of royalty payable by a person who is a resident in India would be deemed to accrue or arise in India. However, where it is payable for the transfer of any right or the use of any property or information or for the utilization of services for the purposes of a business or profession carried on by such person outside India or for the purposes of making or earning any income from any source outside India, the amount payable by way royalty would not be deemed to accrue or arise in India, in the hands of non-resident.

For this purpose, 'royalty' includes transfer of all or any right for use or right to use a computer software irrespective of the medium through which such right is transferred.

The facts of the case are similar to the facts in CIT v. Alcatel Lucent Canada (2015) 372 ITR 476, wherein the above issue came up before the Delhi High Court. The Court observed that the software supply is an integral part of GSM mobile telephone system and is used by the cellular operators for providing cellular services to its customers. Where payment is made for hardware in which the software is embedded and the software does not have independent functional existence, no amount could be attributed as 'royalty' for software in terms of section 9(1)(vi).

In this case, since the software that was loaded on the hardware and embedded in the system does not have any independent existence, there could not be any independent use of such software. Therefore, the rationale of the Delhi High Court ruling can be applied to the case on hand. Accordingly, the action of the Assessing Officer in treating the consideration for supply of software embedded in hardware as royalty under section 9(1)(vi) is not correct.

DOUBLE TAXATION RELIEF

LEARNING OUTCOMES

3.1 CONCEPT OF DOUBLE TAXATION RELIEF

In the present era of cross-border transactions across the globe, the effect of taxation is one of the important considerations for any trade and investment decision in other countries. One of the most significant results of globalisation is the visible impact of one country's domestic tax policies on the economy of another country. This has led to the need for continuously assessing the tax regimes of various countries and bringing about necessary reforms.

Where a taxpayer is resident in one country but has a source of income situated in another country it gives rise to possible double taxation. This arises from the two basic rules that enables the country of residence as well as the country where the source of income exists to impose tax namely, (i) the source rule and (ii) the residence rule. The source rule holds that income is to be taxed in the country in which it originates irrespective of whether the income accrues to a resident or a non-resident whereas the residence rule stipulates that the power to tax should rest with the country in which the taxpayer resides. If both rules apply simultaneously to a business entity and it were to suffer tax at both ends, the cost of operating on an international scale would become prohibitive and would deter the process of globalisation. It is from this point of view that Double Taxation Avoidance Agreements (DTAA) become very significant.

DTAAs lay down the rules for taxation of the income by the source country and the residence country. Such rules are laid for various categories of income, for example, interest, dividend, royalties, capital gains, business income etc. Each such category is dealt with by separate article in the DTAA.

Double taxation means taxing the same income twice in the hands of an assessee. In India, a person is taxed on the basis of his residential status. Likewise, it may so happen that he is taxed on this basis or some other basis in another country on the same income. However, it is a universally accepted principle that the same income should not be subjected to tax twice. In order to take care of such situations, the Income-tax Act, 1961 has provided for double taxation relief.

3.2 TYPES OF RELIEF

Relief from double taxation can be provided in mainly two ways:

(1) Bilateral Relief: Under this method, the Governments of two countries can enter into an agreement to provide relief against double taxation by mutually working out the basis on which the relief is to be granted. India has entered into agreements for relief against or avoidance of double taxation with more than 100 countries which include Sri Lanka, Switzerland, Sweden, Denmark, Japan, Federal Republic of Germany, Greece, etc.

Bilateral Relief may be granted in either one of the following methods:

Exemption Method

- A particular income is taxed in only one of the two countries.

Tax Credit Method

- Income is taxable in both countries in accordance with their respective tax laws read with double taxation avoidance agreement.
- The country of resident of the tax payer, however, allows him credit for the tax charged thereon in the country of source.

In India, double taxation relief is provided by a combination of the two methods.

(2) Unilateral Relief: This method provides for relief of some kind by the home country even where no mutual agreement has been entered into by the two countries.

3.3 DOUBLE TAXATION RELIEF PROVISIONS UNDER THE INCOME TAX ACT, 1961

Sections 90 and 91 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 provide for double taxation relief in India.

(1) Agreement with foreign countries or specified territories - Bilateral relief [Section 90]

(i) Section 90(1) provides that the Central Government may enter into an agreement with the Government of any country outside India or specified territory outside India,—

(a) for the granting of relief in respect of—

(i) income on which income-tax has been paid both in India and in that country or specified territory; or

(ii) income-tax chargeable under this Act and under the corresponding law in force in that country or specified territory to promote mutual economic relations, trade and investment; or

(b) for the avoidance of double taxation of income under this Act and under the corresponding law in force in that country or specified territory; or

Accordingly, the Central Government has notified that where such an agreement provides that any income of a resident of India may be taxed in the other country then, such income shall be included in his total income chargeable to tax in India in accordance with the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961, and relief shall be granted in accordance with the method for elimination or avoidance of double taxation provided in such agreement [Notification No. 91/2008, dated 28.8.2008].

(c) for exchange of information for the prevention of evasion or avoidance of income-tax chargeable under this Act or under the corresponding law in force in that country or specified territory or investigation of cases of such evasion or avoidance; or

(d) for recovery of income-tax under this Act and under the corresponding law in force in that country or specified territory.

The Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, make such provisions as may be necessary for implementing the agreement.

(ii) Where the Central Government has entered into such an agreement with the Government of any country outside India or specified territory outside India for granting relief of tax, or for avoidance of double taxation, then, in relation to the assessee to whom such agreement applies, the provisions of this Act shall apply to the extent they are more beneficial to that assessee.

(iii) However, the provisions of Chapter X-A, General Anti-Avoidance Rule, shall apply to the assessee even if such provisions are not beneficial to him.

(iv) Meaning of terms used in any DTAA with a foreign country or specified territory

	Particulars	Meaning of the term
(1)	Term used in any DTAA with a foreign country or specified territory, and not defined in the agreement or the Act but assigned a meaning in the notification issued by the Central Government in the Official Gazette, which is still in force.	The term shall have the meaning assigned in the said notification and the meaning shall be deemed to have effect from the date on which the DTAA came into force.
(2)	Term used in any DTAA with a foreign country or specified territory, which is defined in the DTAA itself.	The term shall have the same meaning assigned to it in the DTAA.
(3)	Term used in any DTAA with a foreign country or specified territory, which is not defined in the said DTAA, but defined in the Income-tax Act, 1961.	The term shall have the meaning assigned to it in the Income-tax Act, 1961 and explanation, if any, given to it by the Central Government.

(v) The DTAAs under section 90 are intended to provide relief to the taxpayer, who is resident of one of the contracting country to the agreement. Such tax payer can claim relief by applying the beneficial provisions of either the treaty or the domestic law. However, in many cases, taxpayers who were not residents of a contracting country also resorted to claiming the benefits under the agreement entered into by the Indian Government with the Government of the other country. In effect, third party residents claimed the unintended treaty benefits.

Therefore, section 90(4) provides that the non-resident to whom the agreement referred to in section 90(1) applies, shall be allowed to claim the relief under such agreement if a Tax Residence Certificate (TRC) obtained by him from the Government of that country or specified territory, is furnished declaring his residence of the country outside India or the specified territory outside India, as the case may be.

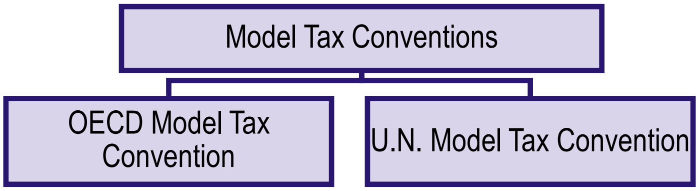
(vi) Therefore, a certificate issued by the Government of a foreign country would constitute proof of tax residency, without any further conditions regarding furnishing of "prescribed particulars" therein. In addition to such certificate issued by the foreign Government, the assessee would be required to provide such other documents and information, as may be prescribed, for claiming the treaty benefits.

(vii) The charge of tax in respect of a foreign company at a rate higher than the rate at which a domestic company is chargeable, shall not be regarded as less favourable charge or levy of tax in respect of such foreign company.

(viii) Circular No. 333 dated 2.4.1982, issued by CBDT provides that a specific provision of the DTAA will prevail over the general provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961. Therefore, where a DTAA provides for a particular mode of computation of income, this mode will take precedence over the Income-tax Act, 1961. However, where there is no specific provision in the treaty, then the Income-tax Act will apply.

(ix) Notification No. 91/2008 dated 28.8.2008 issued by CBDT states that any income of a resident of India which "may be taxed" in the other country (Source Country) as per the DTAA shall be included in his total income chargeable to tax in India in accordance with the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961. Thereafter, relief shall be granted in accordance with the method for elimination or avoidance of double taxation provided in such agreement.

Tax treaties are generally based on certain models. The most common ones are:



Model Tax Conventions

OECD Model Tax Convention

U.N. Model Tax Convention

These model tax conventions will be discussed in detail in Chapter 9 "Overview of Model Tax Conventions".

ILLUSTRATION 1

Examine the correctness or otherwise of the following statement with reference to the provisions of Income-tax Act, 1961.

The double taxation avoidance treaties entered into by the Government of India override the domestic law.

SOLUTION

The statement is correct.

Section 90(2) provides that where a double taxation avoidance treaty is entered into by the Government, the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 would apply to the extent they are more beneficial to the assessee.

In case of any conflict between the provisions of the double taxation avoidance agreement and the Income-tax Act, 1961, the provisions of the DTAA would prevail over the Act in view of the provisions of section 90(2), to the extent they are more beneficial to the assessee [CIT v. P.V.A.L. Kulandagan Chettiar (2004) 267 ITR 654 (SC)].

(2) Double taxation relief to be extended to agreements between specified associations adopted by the Central Government [Section 90A]

(i) Section 90A provides that any specified association in India may enter into an agreement with any specified association in the specified territory outside India and the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, make the necessary provisions for adopting and implementing such agreement for -

(a) grant of double taxation relief,

(b) avoidance of double taxation of income,

(c) exchange of information for the prevention of evasion or avoidance of income- tax, or

(d) recovery of income-tax.

Section 90A(1) provides that an agreement may be entered into by any specified association in India with any specified association in the specified territory outside India which may be adopted by the Central Government by way of notification in the Official Gazette, for granting relief of tax or, as the case may be, for avoidance of double taxation.

The Central Government has, vide Notification No.90/2008 dated 28.8.2008, notified that where such an agreement provides that any income of a resident of India may be taxed in the other country then, such income shall be included in his total income chargeable to tax in India in accordance with the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961, and relief shall be granted in accordance with the method for elimination or avoidance of double taxation provided in such agreement.

(ii) In relation to any assessee to whom the said agreement applies, the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 shall apply to the extent they are more beneficial to that assessee.

(iii) However, the provisions of Chapter X-A, General Anti-avoidance rule, shall apply to the assesse even if such provisions are not beneficial to him.

(iv) Meaning of terms used in any agreement which any specified association in India may enter into with any specified association in the specified territory outside India for double taxation relief

	Particulars	Meaning of the term
(1)	Term used in any such agreement, and not defined in the agreement or the Act but assigned a meaning in the notification issued by the Central Government in the Official Gazette, which is still in force	The term shall have the meaning assigned in the said notification and the meaning shall be deemed to have effect from the date on which the agreement came into force.
(2)	Term used in any such agreement, which is defined in the agreement itself	The term shall have the same meaning assigned to it in the said agreement
(3)	Term used in any such agreement, which is not defined in the said agreement, but defined in the Income-tax Act, 1961	The term shall have the meaning assigned to it in the Income-tax Act, 1961 and explanation, if any, given to it by the Central Government

(v) The DTAAs under section 90A are intended to provide relief to the taxpayer, who is resident of one of the contracting country to the agreement. Such tax payer can claim relief by applying the beneficial provisions of either the treaty or the domestic law. However, in many cases, taxpayers who were not residents of a contracting country also resorted to claiming the benefits under the agreement entered into by the Indian Government with the Government of the other country. In effect, third party residents claimed the unintended treaty benefits.

Therefore, section 90A(4) provides that the non-resident to whom the agreement referred to in section 90A(1) applies, shall be allowed to claim the relief under such agreement if a Tax Residence Certificate (TRC) obtained by him from the Government of that country or specified territory is furnished, declaring his residence of the country outside India or the specified territory outside India, as the case may be.

(vi) Therefore, a certificate issued by the Government of a foreign country would constitute proof of tax residency, without any further conditions regarding furnishing of “prescribed particulars” therein. In addition to such certificate issued by the foreign Government, section 90A(5) requires the assessee to provide such other documents and information, as may be prescribed, for claiming the treaty benefits.

Documents and information, to be furnished by the assessee for claiming treaty benefits, prescribed by CBDT vide Notification No. 57/2013 dated 01.08.2013:

(i) Status (individual, company, firm etc.) of the assessee;

(ii) Nationality (in case of an individual) or country or specified territory of incorporation or registration (in case of others);

(iii) Assessee's tax identification number in the country or specified territory of residence and in case there is no such number, then, a unique number on the basis of which the person is identified by the Government of the country or the specified territory of which the assessee claims to be a resident;

(iv) Period for which the residential status, as mentioned in the certificate referred to in section 90(4) or section 90A(4), is applicable; and

(v) Address of the assessee in the country or specified territory outside India, during the period for which the certificate, as mentioned in (iv) above, is applicable.

However, the assessee may not be required to provide the information or any part thereof, if the information or the part thereof, as the case may be, is already contained in the TRC referred to in section 90(4) or section 90A(4).

The assessee shall keep and maintain such documents as are necessary to substantiate the information provided. An income-tax authority may require the assessee to provide the said documents in relation to a claim by the said assessee of any relief under an agreement referred to in section 90(1) or section 90A(1), as the case may be.

(vii) The charge of tax at a higher rate for a company incorporated in the specified territory outside India as compared to a domestic company would not be considered as less favourable charge or levy of tax in respect of such company.

(viii) For the purpose of this section, the 'specified association' means any institution, association or body, whether incorporated or not, functioning under any law for the time being in force in India or the laws of the specified territory outside India and which may be notified as such by the Central Government and 'specified territory' means any area outside India which may be notified by the Central Government.

(3) Countries with which no agreement exists – Unilateral Agreements [Section 91] In the case of income arising to an assessee in countries with which India does not have any double taxation agreement, relief would be granted under Section 91 provided all the following conditions are fulfilled:

(a) The assessee is a resident in India during the previous year in respect of which the income is taxable.

(b) The income accrues or arises to him outside India.

(c) The income is not deemed to accrue or arise in India during the previous year.

(d) The income in question has been subjected to income-tax in the foreign country in the hands of the assessee.

(e) The assessee has paid tax on the income in the foreign country.

(f) There is no agreement for relief from double taxation between India and the other country where the income has accrued or arisen.

In such a case, the assessee shall be entitled to a deduction from the Indian income-tax payable by him. The deduction would be a sum calculated on such doubly taxed income at the Indian rate of tax or the rate of tax in the said country, whichever is lower, or at the Indian rate of tax if both the rates are equal.

Meaning of important terms:

(i) "Indian rate of tax" means the rate determined by dividing the amount of Indian income-tax after deduction of any relief due under the provisions of the Act but before deduction of any double taxation relief due to the assessee.

(ii) "Rate of tax of the said country" means income-tax and super-tax actually paid in that country in accordance with the corresponding laws in force in the said country after deduction of all relief due, but before deduction on account of double taxation relief due in the said country, divided by the whole amount of income assessed in the said country.

(iii) The expression "income-tax" in relation to any country includes any excess profits tax or business profits tax charged on the profits by the Government of any part of that country or a local authority in that country.

ILLUSTRATION 2

Nandita, an individual resident retired employee of the Prasar Bharati aged 60 years, is a well-known dramatist deriving income of ₹ 1,10,000 from theatrical works played abroad. Tax of ₹ 11,000 was deducted in the country where the plays were performed. India does not have any Double Tax Avoidance Agreement under section 90 of the Income-tax Act, 1961, with that country. Her income in India amounted to ₹ 6,10,000. In view of tax planning, she has deposited ₹ 1,50,000 in Public Provident Fund and paid contribution to approved Pension Fund of LIC ₹ 32,000. She also contributed ₹ 28,000 to Central Government Health Scheme during the previous year and gave payment of medical insurance premium of ₹ 26,000 to insure the health of her father, a non-resident aged 84 years, who is not dependent on her. Compute the tax liability of Nandita for the Assessment year 2020-21.

SOLUTION

Computation of tax liability of Nandita for the A.Y. 2020-21

Medical insurance premium of ₹ 26,000 paid for father aged 84 years. Since the father is a non-resident in India, he will not be entitled for the higher deduction of ₹ 50,000 eligible for a senior citizen, who is resident in India. Tax payable in India (₹ 13,936 – ₹ 2,966)		10,970

Notes:

1. Section 80D allows a higher deduction of up to ₹ 50,000 in respect of the medical premium paid to insure the heath of a senior citizen. Therefore, Nandita will be allowed deduction of ₹ 28,000 under section 80D, since she is a resident Indian of the age of 60 years.

2. The basic exemption limit for senior citizens is ₹ 3,00,000 and the age criterion for qualifying as a "senior citizen" for availing the higher basic exemption limit is 60 years. Accordingly, Nandita is eligible for the higher basic exemption limit of ₹ 3,00,000, since she is 60 years old.

3. An assessee shall be allowed deduction under section 91 provided all the following conditions are fulfilled:-

(a) The assessee is a resident in India during the relevant previous year.

(b) The income accrues or arises to him outside India during that previous year.

(c) Such income is not deemed to accrue or arise in India during the previous year.

(d) The income in question has been subjected to income-tax in the foreign country in the hands of the assessee and the assessee has paid tax on such income in the foreign country.

(e) There is no agreement under section 90 for the relief or avoidance of double taxation between India and the other country where the income has accrued or arisen.

In this case, since all the above conditions are satisfied, Nandita is eligible for deduction u/s 91.

(4) Foreign Tax Credit [Rule 128 of Income-tax Rules, 1962]

(i) Year of availability of credit for foreign tax paid

An assessee, being a resident shall be allowed a credit for the amount of any foreign tax paid by him in a country or specified territory outside India, by way of deduction or otherwise, in the year in which the income corresponding to such tax has been offered to tax or assessed to tax in India, in the manner and to the extent as specified in this rule.

However, in a case where income on which foreign tax has been paid or deducted, is offered to tax in more than one year, credit of foreign tax shall be allowed across those years in the same proportion in which the income is offered to tax or assessed to tax in India.

(ii) Meaning of "Foreign tax":

	Country/Specified Territory	Foreign Tax
(i)	in respect of a country or specified territory outside India with which India has entered into an agreement for the relief or avoidance of double taxation of income in terms of section 90 or section 90A	the tax covered under the said agreement
(ii)	in respect of any other country or specified territory outside India	the tax payable under the law in force in that country or specified territory in the nature of income-tax referred to in section 91. For this purpose, income-tax in relation to any country includes any excess profits tax or business profits tax charged on the profits by the Government of any part of that country or a local authority in that country.

(iii) Components of income-tax in respect of which FTC is available

Foreign Tax Credit (FTC) is available against the amount of tax, surcharge and cess payable under the Income-tax Act, 1961. However, it is not available in respect of any sum payable by way of interest, fee or penalty.

(iv) Manner of computing FTC

The credit of foreign tax would be the aggregate of the amounts of credit computed separately for each source of income arising from a particular country or specified territory outside India and shall be given effect to in the following manner:-

(a) the credit would be the lower of the tax payable under the Income-tax Act, 1961 on such income and the foreign tax paid on such income.

However, where the foreign tax paid exceeds the amount of tax payable in accordance with the provisions of the agreement for relief or avoidance of double taxation, such excess has to be ignored.

(b) the credit would be determined by conversion of the currency of payment of foreign tax at the telegraphic transfer buying rate on the last day of the month immediately preceding the month in which such tax has been paid or deducted.

Note – Students are advised to refer to Rule 128 of Income-tax Rules, 1961 given as Annexure 1 at the end of the Study Material.

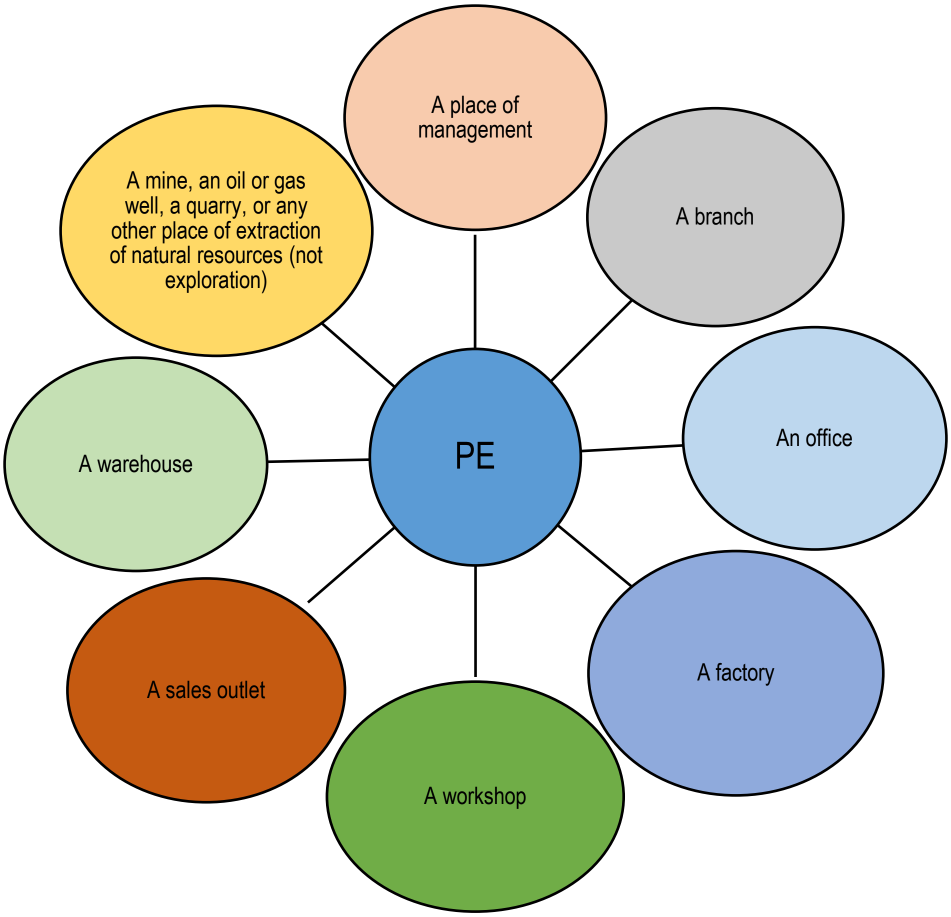
3.4 CONCEPT OF PERMANENT ESTABLISHMENT

In order to determine the taxability of business income of foreign enterprises operating in India, it is important to determine the existence of a Permanent Establishment ('PE'). Article 5(1) of the DTAA provides that for the purpose of this convention the term 'Permanent Establishment' means a fixed place of business through which the business of an enterprise is wholly or partly carried on. The term 'Enterprise' has been defined in section 92F(iii) [See discussion under section 92A in Chapter 1].

According to Article 5(2), the term PE includes



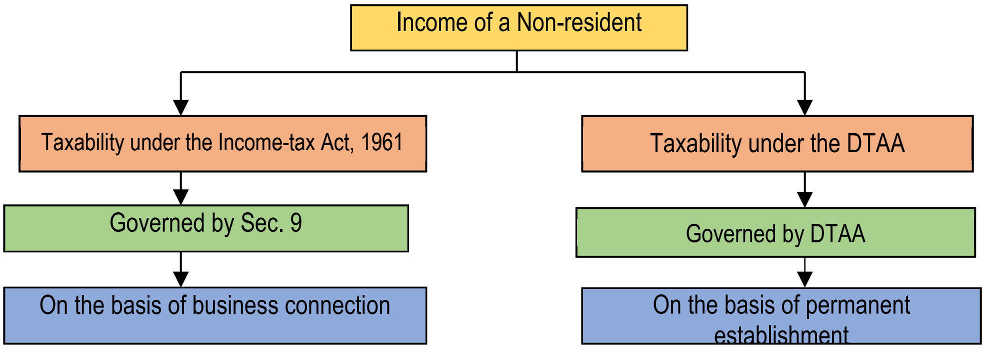
A place of management
A branch
An office
A factory
A workshop
A sales outlet
A warehouse
A mine, an oil or gas well, a quarry, or any other place of extraction of natural resources (not exploration)
PE

(1) Permanent establishment means a fixed place of business through which the business of an enterprises is wholly or partly carried on.

(2) Every DTAA has a specific clause, which will deal with an explanation of permanent establishment for the purpose of such DTAA.

(3) Business Income of a non-resident will not be taxed in India, unless such non-resident has a permanent establishment in India.

(4) Taxability of income under business connection and permanent establishment is explained here below:



Income of a Non-resident
Taxability under the Income-tax Act, 1961
Taxability under the DTAA
Governed by Sec. 9
Governed by DTAA
On the basis of business connection
On the basis of permanent establishment

3.5 TAXATION OF BUSINESS PROCESS OUTSOURCING UNITS IN INDIA

The provisions containing taxation of IT-enabled business process outsourcing units are not contained in the Income-tax Act, 1961 but are given in Circular No.5/2004 dated 28.9.2004 issued by CBDT. The provisions are briefed hereunder -

(a) A non-resident entity may outsource certain services to a resident Indian entity. If there is no business connection between the two, the resident entity may not be a Permanent Establishment of the non-resident entity, and the resident entity would have to be assessed to income-tax as a separate entity. In such a case, the non-resident entity will not be liable under the Income-tax Act, 1961.

(b) However, it is possible that the non-resident entity may have a business connection with the resident Indian entity. In such a case, the resident Indian entity could be treated as the Permanent Establishment of the non-resident entity.

(c) The non-resident entity or the foreign company will be liable to tax in India only if the IT enabled BPO unit in India constitutes its Permanent Establishment.

(d) A non-resident or a foreign company is treated as having a Permanent Establishment in India if the said non-resident or foreign company carries on business in India through a branch, sales office etc. or through an agent (other than an independent agent) who habitually exercises an authority to conclude contracts or regularly delivers goods or merchandise or habitually secures orders on behalf of the non-resident principal. In such a case, the profits of the non-resident or foreign company attributable to the business activities carried out in India by the Permanent Establishment becomes taxable in India.

(e) If a foreign enterprise carries on business in another country through a Permanent Establishment situated therein, the profits of the enterprise may be taxed in the other country but only so much of them as is attributable to the Permanent Establishment.

(f) Profits are to be attributed to the Permanent Establishment as if it were a distinct and separate enterprise engaged in the same or similar activities under the same or similar conditions and dealing wholly independently with the enterprise of which it is a Permanent Establishment.

(g) In determining the profits of a Permanent Establishment there shall be allowed as deduction, expenses which are incurred for the purposes of the Permanent Establishment including executive and general administrative expenses so incurred, whether in the State in which the Permanent Establishment is situated or elsewhere.

(h) The expenses that are deductible would have to be determined in accordance with the accepted principles of accountancy and the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

(i) The profits to be attributed to a Permanent Establishment are those which that Permanent Establishment would have made if, instead of dealing with its Head Office, it had been dealing with an entirely separate enterprise under conditions and at prices prevailing in the ordinary market. This corresponds to the "arm's length principle".

(j) Hence, in determining the profits attributable to an IT-enabled BPO unit constituting a Permanent Establishment, it will be necessary to determine the price of the services rendered by the Permanent Establishment to the Head office or by the Head office to the Permanent Establishment on the basis of "arm's length principle".

EXERCISE

Question 1

Cosmos Limited, a company incorporated in Mauritius, has a branch office in Hyderabad opened in April, 2019. The Indian branch has filed return of income for assessment year 2020-21 disclosing income of ₹ 50 lacs. It paid tax at the rate applicable to domestic company i.e. 30% plus higher education cess@4% on the basis of paragraph 2 of Article 24 (Non-Discrimination) of the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement between India and Mauritius, which reads as follows:

"The taxation on a permanent establishment which an enterprise of a Contracting State has in the other Contracting State shall not be less favourably levied in that other State than the taxation levied on enterprises of that other State carrying on the same activities in the same circumstances."

However, the Assessing Officer computed tax on the Indian branch at the rate applicable to a foreign company i.e. 40% plus higher education cess@4%.

Is the action of the Assessing Officer in accordance with law?

Answer

Under section 90(2), where the Central Government has entered into an agreement for avoidance of double taxation with the Government of any country outside India or specified territory outside India, as the case may be, then, in relation to the assessee to whom such agreement applies, the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 shall apply to the extent they are more beneficial to the assessee. Thus, in view of paragraph 2 of Article 24 (Non-discrimination of the DTAA, it appears that the Indian branch of Cosmos Limited, incorporated in Mauritius, is liable to tax in India at the rate applicable to domestic company (30%), which is lower than the rate of tax applicable to a foreign company (40%).

However, Explanation 1 to section 90 clarifies that the charge of tax in respect of a foreign company at a rate higher than the rate at which a domestic company is chargeable, shall not be regarded as less favourable charge or levy of tax in respect of such foreign company. Therefore, in view of this Explanation, the action of the Assessing Officer in levying tax@40% on the Indian branch of Cosmos Ltd. is in accordance with law.

In this case, Kalpesh Kumar is eligible for deduction under section 91 since all the above conditions are fulfilled.

(d) There is no agreement under section 90 for the relief or avoidance of double taxation between India and country L where the income has accrued or arisen.

Question 4

The concept of Permanent Establishment is one of the most important concepts in determining the tax implications of cross border transactions. Examine the significance thereof, when such transactions are governed by Double Taxation Avoidance Agreements (DTAA).

Answer

Double Taxation Avoidance Agreements (DTAAs) generally contain an Article providing that business income is taxable in the country of residence, unless the enterprise has a permanent establishment in the country of source, and such income can be attributed to the permanent establishment.

As per section 92F(iiia), the term “Permanent Establishment” includes a fixed place of business through which the business of an enterprise is wholly or partly carried on.

As per this definition, to constitute a permanent establishment, there must be a place of business which is fixed and the business of the enterprise must be carried out wholly or partly through this place.

Section 9(1)(i) requires existence of business connection for deeming business income to accrue or arise in India. DTAAs however provide that business income is taxable only if there is a permanent establishment in India.

Therefore, in cases covered by DTAAs, where there is no permanent establishment in India, business income cannot be brought to tax due to existence of business connection as per section 9(1)(i).

However, in cases not covered by DTAAs, business income attributable to business connection is taxable.

Question 5

An individual resident in India, having income earned outside India in a country with which no agreement under section 90 exists, asks you to examine whether the credit for the tax paid on the foreign income will be allowed against his income-tax liability in India.

Answer

The assessee is a resident in India and accordingly, the income accruing or arising to him globally is chargeable to tax in India. However, section 91 specifies that if a person resident in India has paid tax in any country with which no agreement under section 90 exists, then, for the purpose of relief or avoidance of double taxation, a deduction is allowed from the Indian income-tax payable by him, of a sum calculated on such doubly taxed income at Indian rate of tax or the rate of tax of such foreign country, whichever is lower, or at the Indian rate of tax, if both the rates are equal. Accordingly, the assessee shall not be given any credit of the tax paid on the income in other country, but shall be allowed a deduction from the Indian income-tax payable by him as per the scheme of section 91 read with Rule 128 on Foreign Tax Credit.

Question 6

The Income-tax Act, 1961 provides for taxation of a certain income earned in India by Mr. X, a non-resident. The Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement, which applies to Mr. X provides for taxation of such income in the country of residence. Is Mr. X liable to pay tax on such income earned by him in India? Examine.

Answer

Section 90(2) makes it clear that where the Central Government has entered into a Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement with a country outside India, then in respect of an assessee to whom such agreement applies, the provisions of the Act shall apply to the extent they are more beneficial to the assessee. This means that where tax liability is imposed by the Act, the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement may be resorted to for reducing or avoiding the tax liability.

However, as per section 90(4), the assessee, in order to claim relief under the agreement, has to obtain a certificate [Tax Residence Certificate (TRC)] from the Government of that country, declaring the residence of the country outside India. Further, he also has to provide the following information in Form No. 10F:

(i) Status (individual, company, firm etc.) of the assessee;

(ii) PAN of the assessee, if allotted;

(iii) Nationality (in case of an individual) or country or specified territory of incorporation or registration (in case of others);

(iv) Assessee's tax identification number in the country or specified territory of residence and in case there is no such number, then, a unique number on the basis of which the person is identified by the Government of the country or the specified territory of which the assessee claims to be a resident;

(v) Period for which the residential status, as mentioned in the certificate referred to in section 90(4) or section 90A(4), is applicable; and

(vi) Address of the assessee in the country or specified territory outside India, during the period for which the certificate, as mentioned in (v) above, is applicable.

However, the assessee may not be required to provide the information or any part thereof, if the information or the part thereof, as the case may be, is already contained in the TRC referred to in section 90(4) or section 90A(4).

The Supreme Court has held, in CIT v. P.V.A.L. Kulandagan Chettiar (2004) 267 ITR 654, that in case of any conflict between the provisions of the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement and the Income-tax Act, 1961, the provisions of the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement would prevail over those of the Income-tax Act, 1961. Mr. X is, therefore, not liable to pay tax on the income earned by him in India provided he submits the Tax Residence Certificate obtained from the government of the other country, and provides such other documents and information as may be prescribed.

Question 7

Arif is a resident of both India and another foreign country in the previous year 2019-20. He owns immovable properties (including residential house) in both the countries. He earned income of ₹ 50 lacs from rubber estates in the foreign country during the financial year 2019-20. He also sold some house property situated in foreign country resulting in short-term capital gain of ₹ 10 lacs during the year. Arif has no permanent establishment of business in India. However, he has derived rental income of ₹ 6 lacs from property let out in India and he has a house in Lucknow where he stays during his visit to India.

Article 4 of the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement between India and the foreign country where Arif is a resident, provides that "where an individual is a resident of both the Contracting States, then, he shall be deemed to be resident of the Contracting State in which he has permanent home available to him. If he has permanent home in both the Contracting States, he shall be deemed to be a resident of the Contracting State with which his personal and economic relations are closer (centre of vital interests)".

You are required to examine with reasons whether the business income of Arif arising in foreign country and the capital gains in respect of sale of the property situated in foreign country can be taxed in India.

Answer

Section 90(1) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 empowers the Central Government to enter into an agreement with the Government of any country outside India for avoidance of double taxation of income under the Indian law and the corresponding law of that country. Section 90(2) provides that where the Central Government has entered into an agreement with the Government of any other country for granting relief of tax or for avoidance of double taxation, then, in relation to the assessee to whom such agreement applies, the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1961 shall apply to the extent they are more beneficial to that assessee.

Arif has residential houses both in India and foreign country. Thus, he has a permanent home in both the countries. However, he has no permanent establishment of business in India. The Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement (DTAA) with foreign country provides that where an individual is a resident of both the countries, he shall be deemed to be resident of that country in which he has a permanent home and if he has a permanent home in both the countries, he shall be deemed to be resident of that country, which is the centre of his vital interests i.e. the country with which he has closer personal and economic relations.

Arif owns rubber estates in a foreign country from which he derives business income. However, Arif has no permanent establishment of his business in India. Therefore his personal and economic relations with foreign country are closer, since foreign country is the place where –

(a) the property is located and

(b) the permanent establishment (PE) has been set-up

Therefore, he shall be deemed to be resident of the foreign country for A.Y. 2020-21.

The fact of the case and issues arising therefrom are similar to that of CIT vs. P.V.A.L. Kulandagan Chettiar (2004) 267 ITR 654, where the Supreme Court held that if an assessee is deemed to be a resident of a contracting State where his personal and economic relations are closer, then in such a case, the fact that he is a resident in India to be taxed in terms of sections 4 and 5 would become irrelevant, since the DTAA prevails over sections 4 and 5.

However, as per section 90(4), in order to claim relief under the agreement, Arif has to obtain a certificate [Tax Residency Certificate (TRC)] declaring his residence of the country outside India from the Government of that country. Further, he also has to provide such other documents and information, as may be prescribed.

Therefore, in this case, Arif is not liable to income tax in India for assessment year 2020-21 in respect of business income and capital gains arising in the foreign country provided he furnishes the Tax Residency Certificate and provides such other documents and information as may be prescribed.

Question 8

Mr. Kamesh, an individual resident in India aged 52 years, furnishes you the following particulars of income earned in India, Country "X" and Country "Y" for the previous year 2019-20. India has not entered into double taxation avoidance agreement with these two countries.

4.1 INTRODUCTION

Chapter XIX-B, consisting of sections 245N to 245V provides a scheme for giving advance rulings in respect of transactions involving non-residents and specified residents with a view to avoiding needless litigation and promoting better tax-payer relations.

4.2 DEFINITIONS

(1) Advance Ruling [Section 245N(a)]: The meaning of Advance Ruling is detailed hereunder:

Section	Determination by the Authority
245N(a)(i)	in relation to a transaction which has been undertaken or is proposed to be undertaken by a non-resident applicant.
245N(a)(ii)	in relation to the tax liability of a non-resident arising out of a transaction which has been undertaken or is proposed to be undertaken by a resident applicant with such non-resident and such determination shall include the determination of any question of law or of fact specified in the application.
245N(a)(iia)	in relation to the tax liability of a resident applicant, arising out of a transaction which has been undertaken or is proposed to be undertaken by such applicant and such determination shall include the determination of any question of law or of fact specified in the application.

(v) is referred to in section 245N(a)(iv) above; and who makes an application for advance ruling under section 245Q(1).

On account of the merger of Authority for Advance Rulings for income-tax, central excise, customs duty and service tax, the definition of applicant would now also include an applicant defined under the Central Excise Act, 1944, Customs Act, 1962 and the Finance Act, 1994[1].

However, a resident falling within any class or category of persons as notified by the Central Government i.e., a public sector undertaking can seek for advance ruling even if question raised is pending before any income-tax authority or Appellate.

Determination of Fair Market Value	involves the determination of the fair market value of any property;

However, no application shall be rejected unless an opportunity has been given to the applicant of being heard. Further, where an application is rejected, the reason for rejection shall be given in the order. A copy of every order shall be sent to the applicant and to the PCIT/CIT.

Where an application is allowed, the Authority would pronounce its advance ruling on that question specified in the application, after examining such further material as may be placed before it by the applicant or obtained by the Authority.

An applicant on request can appear either in person or can be represented through a duly authorised representative. The authority will pronounce the advance ruling within 6 months from the receipt of application by the authority and the copy of advance ruling pronounced, duly signed by the Members and certified, shall be sent to the applicant and to the PCIT/CIT.

4.8 APPLICABILITY OF ADVANCE RULING [SECTION 245S]

Applicant who had sought it

In respect of the specific transaction in relation to which it was sought on the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner and the income-tax authorities subordinate to the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner in respect of the applicant and the said transaction.

4.9 ADVANCE RULING TO BE VOID IN CERTAIN CIRCUMSTANCES [SECTION 245T]

Where the Authority finds, on a representation made to it by the PCIT/CIT or otherwise, that an advance ruling has been obtained by the applicant by fraud or misrepresentation of facts, the Authority may, by order, declare such ruling to be void ab initio. The provisions of the Act shall apply (excluding the period beginning with the date of such advance ruling and ending with the date of order under this section) to the applicant as if such advance ruling had never been made. A copy of this order shall be sent to the applicant and the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner.

EXERCISE

Question 1

Examine whether a person resident in India can seek advance ruling from the Authority for Advance Ruling.

Answer

A resident can make an application to the Authority for Advance Ruling to seek an advance ruling in the following cases:

(i) Section 245N(b)(A)(III) enables a resident referred in section 245N(a)(iia) falling within any such class or category of persons as may be notified by the Central Government to make an application to Authority for Advance Rulings. Such notified resident applicant can seek ruling in relation to his tax liability arising out of a transaction which has been undertaken or is proposed to be undertaken by such applicant, and such determination shall include the determination of any question of law or of fact specified in the application.

A resident in relation to his tax liability arising out of one or more transactions valuing ₹ 100 crore or more in total which has been undertaken or proposed to be undertaken would be an applicant for this purpose.

(ii) Section 245N(b)(A)(IV) enables a resident falling within any such class or category of persons as may be notified by the Central Government to make an application for Advance Ruling. Such notified resident applicant can seek ruling in respect of issues relating to computation of total income which is pending before any income-tax authority or the Appellate Tribunal. Such a resident applicant can make an application to seek determination or decision by the AAR on a question of law or a question of fact relating to such computation of total income specified in the application.

"Public sector companies" as defined in section 2(36A) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 have been notified as applicant for this purpose.

(iii) A resident can also make an application seeking advance ruling in relation to the tax liability of a non-resident arising out of a transaction undertaken or proposed to be undertaken by him with such non-resident.

(iv) A resident can make an application seeking advance ruling on whether an arrangement proposed to be undertaken by him is an impermissible avoidance arrangement under Chapter X-A.

Question 2

Q, a non-resident, made an application to the Authority for Advance Rulings on 2.7.2019 in relation to a transaction proposed to be undertaken by him. On 31.8.2019, he decides to withdraw the said application. Can he withdraw the application on 31.8.2019?

Answer

Section 245Q(3) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 provides that an applicant, who has sought for an advance ruling, may withdraw the application within 30 days from the date of the application. Since more than 30 days have elapsed since the date of application by Q to the Authority for Advance Rulings, he cannot withdraw the application.

However, the Authority for Advance Rulings (AAR*),* in M.K.Jain AAR No.644 of 2004, has observed that though section 245Q(3) provides that an application may be withdrawn by the applicant within 30 days from the date of the application, this, however, does not preclude the AAR from permitting withdrawal of the application after the said period, if the circumstances of the case so justify.

Question 3

Examine when can an advance ruling pronounced by the Authority for Advance Rulings be declared void. What is the consequence?

Answer

As per section 245T, an advance ruling can be declared to be void ab initio by the Authority for Advance Rulings if, on a representation made to it by the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner or otherwise, it finds that the ruling has been obtained by fraud or misrepresentation of facts. Thereafter, all the provisions of the Act will apply as if no such advance ruling has been made. A copy of such order shall be sent to the applicant and the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner.

Question 4

Mr. Balram is a non-resident. The appeal pertaining to the assessment year 2018-19 is pending before the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal, the issue involved being computation of export profit and tax thereon. The same issue persists for the assessment year 2019-20 as well. Mr. Balram's brother Mr. Krishna has obtained an advance ruling under Chapter XIX - B of Income-tax Act, 1961 from the Authority for Advance Rulings on an identical issue. Mr. Balram proposes to use the said ruling for his assessment pertaining to the assessment year 2019-20. Can he do so?

Answer

As per section 245S(1), the advance ruling pronounced under section 245R by the Authority for Advance Rulings shall be binding only on the applicant who had sought it and in respect of the specific transaction in relation to which advance ruling was sought. It shall also be binding on the Principal Commissioner/Commissioner and the income-tax authorities subordinate to him, in respect of the concerned applicant and the specific transaction.

In view of the above provision, Mr. Balram cannot use the advance ruling, obtained on an identical issue by his brother, for his assessment pertaining to the assessment year 2019-20.

Note – Though the ruling of the Authority for Advance Rulings is not binding on others but there is no bar on the Tribunal taking a view or forming an opinion in consonance with the reasoning of the Authority for Advance Rulings dehors the binding nature [CIT v. P. Sekar Trust (2010) 321 ITR 305 (Mad.)].

Question 5

The Authority for Advance Rulings has the powers of compelling the production of books of account – Examine the correctness or otherwise of this statement.

Answer

The statement is correct.

Under section 245U, the Authority for Advance Rulings shall have all the powers vested in the Civil Court under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 as are referred to in section 131.

Accordingly, the Authority for Advance Rulings shall have the same powers as are vested in a court under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, when trying a suit in respect of the following matters, namely -

(1) discovery and inspection;

(2) enforcing the attendance of any person, including any officer of a banking company and examining him on oath;

(3) compelling the production of books of account and other documents; and

(4) issuing commissions.

Therefore, the Authority for Advance Ruling has the powers of compelling the production of books of account.

Question 6

The term 'Advance Ruling' includes within its scope, a determination by the Authority for Advance Rulings only in relation to a transaction undertaken by a non-resident applicant. Examine the correctness of this statement, with reference to the provisions of the Income-tax Act 1961.

Answer

The statement is not correct.

The term 'Advance Ruling' has been defined in section 245N(a) to mean:-

(a) a determination by the Authority in relation to a transaction which has been undertaken or is proposed to be undertaken by a non-resident applicant; or

(b) a determination by the Authority in relation to the tax liability of a non-resident arising out of a transaction which has been undertaken or is proposed to be undertaken by a resident applicant with such non-resident; and such determination shall include the determination of any question of law or of fact specified in the application or

(c) a determination by the Authority in relation to the tax liability of a resident applicant, arising out of a transaction which has been undertaken or is proposed to be undertaken by such applicant, and such determination shall include the determination of any question of law or of fact specified in the application

A resident in relation to his tax liability arising out of one or more transactions valuing ₹ 100 crore or more in total which has been undertaken or proposed to be undertaken would be an applicant for this purpose.

(d) a determination or decision by the Authority in respect of an issue relating to computation of total income which is pending before any income-tax authority or the Appellate Tribunal and such determination or decision shall include the determination or decision on any question of law or of fact relating to such computation of total income specified in the application.

(e) a determination or decision by the Authority whether an arrangement, which is proposed to be undertaken by any person being a resident or a non-resident, is an impermissible avoidance arrangement as referred to in Chapter X-A or not.

Question 7

An Irish company, Phi plc., entered into a contract with an Indian company, Beta Ltd., for provision of technical know-how and made an application to the Authority for Advance Rulings for advance ruling on the rate of withholding tax on receipts from Beta Ltd. Beta Ltd. had also made an application to the Assessing Officer for determination of the rate at which tax is deductible on the said payment to Phi plc. The Authority for Advance Rulings rejected the application of Phi plc. on the ground that the question raised in the application is already pending before an income tax authority. Is the rejection of the application of Phi plc. justified in law?

Answer

This issue came up before the AAR in, Nuclear Power Corporation of India Ltd. In Re, [2012] 343 ITR 220, wherein it was held that an advance ruling is not only applicant specific, but is also transaction specific. The advance ruling is on a transaction entered into or undertaken by the applicant. That is why section 245S specifies that a ruling is binding on the applicant, the transaction and the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner of Income-tax and those subordinate to him, and not only on the applicant.

What is barred by the first proviso to section 245R(2) of the Act in the context of clause (i) thereof is the allowing of an application under section 245R(2) of the Act where "the question raised in the application is already pending before any Income-tax authority, or Appellate Tribunal or any court". The significance of the dropping of the words, "in the applicant's case" with effect from June 1, 2000, cannot be wholly ignored.

On the basis of this view expressed by the AAR in the above case, explaining the impact of the dropping of the words "in the applicant's case" with effect from 1.6.2000, a view can be taken that the AAR can reject the application made by Phi plc. before the AAR on the ground that similar issue is pending before the Assessing Officer in respect of the same transaction i.e., provision of technical know to Beta Ltd.

Note – The issue relates to the admission or rejection of the application filed before the Advance Rulings Authority on the grounds specified in clause (i) of the first proviso to sub-section (2) of section 245R of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

The first proviso to section 245R(2) has been substituted by the Finance Act, 2000 with effect from 1.6.2000. Clause (i) of the first proviso, prior to and post amendment, reads as follows:

Prior to 1.6.2000	On or After 1.6.2000
Provided that the Authority shall not allow the application except in the case of a resident applicant where the question raised in the application is already pending in the applicant's case before any income-tax authority, the Appellate Tribunal or any court;	Provided that the Authority shall not allow the application where the question raised in the application is already pending before any income-tax authority or Appellate Tribunal or any court.

The words "except in the case of a resident applicant" and "in the applicant's case" has been removed in clause (i) of the first proviso with effect from 1.6.2000. However, the Explanatory Memorandum to the Finance Act, 2000, explaining the impact of the substitution, reads as follows "It is proposed to substitute the proviso to provide that the Authority shall not allow the application when the question raised is already pending in the applicant's case before any income-tax authority, Appellate Tribunal or any court in regard to a non-resident applicant and resident applicant in relation to a transaction with a non-resident". Therefore, according to the intent expressed in the Explanatory Memorandum, the AAR shall not allow the application both in the case of resident and non-resident applicant if the question raised is already pending in the applicant's case before any income-tax authority. Thus, as per the Explanatory Memorandum, it is possible to take a view that even post-amendment, the Authority shall not allow the application only where a question is pending in the applicant's case before any income-tax authority. Thus, an alternative view is possible on the basis of the AAR ruling in Ericsson Telephone Corporation India AB v. CIT (1997) 224 ITR 203, which continues to hold good even after the amendment, if we consider the intent expressed in the Explanatory Memorandum. Accordingly, based on this view, the AAR can allow the application made by Phi plc., even if the question raised in the application is pending before the Assessing Officer in Beta Ltd.'s case*.*

- comprehend and apply the provisions of equalisation levy contained in Chapter VIII of the Finance Act, 2016 and the relevant Rules in problem solving and addressing related issues.

5.1 GROWTH OF E-COMMERCE AND CONCERNS EMERGING THEREFROM

(1) The rapid growth of information and communication technology has resulted in substantial expansion of the supply and procurement of digital goods and services globally, including India. The digital economy is growing at approximately 10% per annum, significantly faster than the global economy as a whole.

(2) At present, in the digital domain, business may be conducted without regard to national boundaries and may dissolve the link between an income-producing activity and a specific location. Hence, business in digital domain doesn't actually occur in any physical location but instead takes place in "cyberspace." Persons carrying business in digital domain could be located anywhere in the world. Entrepreneurs across the world have been quick to evolve their business to take advantage of these changes. It has also made it possible for the businesses to conduct themselves in ways that did not exist earlier, and given rise to new business models that rely more on digital and telecommunication network, do not require physical presence, and derives substantial value from data collected and transmitted from such networks.

5.2 TAXATION ISSUES RELATING TO E-COMMERCE

These new business models have created new tax challenges. The typical taxation issues relating to e-commerce are:

(1) the difficulty in characterizing the nature of payment and establishing a nexus or link between taxable transaction, activity and a taxing jurisdiction,

(2) the difficulty of locating the transaction, activity and identifying the taxpayer for income tax purposes.

The digital business, thus, challenges physical presence-based permanent establishment rules. If permanent establishment principles are to remain effective in the new economy, the fundamental PE components developed for the old economy i.e. place of business, location, and permanency must be reconciled with the new digital reality.

5.3 OECD RECOMMENDATIONS UNDER ACTION PLAN 1 OF THE BEPS PROJECT

The OECD has recommended several options to tackle the direct tax challenges which include:

(1) Modifying the existing definition of permanent establishment to provide for whether an enterprise engaged in fully de-materialized digital activities would constitute a PE, if it maintained a significant digital presence in another country's economy.

(2) Introducing the concept of a virtual fixed place of business in the concept of permanent establishments i.e., creation of a permanent establishments when the enterprise maintains a website on a server of another enterprise located in a jurisdiction and carries on business through that website.

(3) Imposition of a final withholding tax on gross basis in case of certain payments made for digital goods or services provided by a foreign e-commerce provider or imposition of a equalisation levy on consideration for certain digital transactions received by a non-resident from a resident or from a non-resident having permanent establishment in other contracting state.

Taking into consideration the potential of new digital economy and the rapidly evolving nature of business operations, it becomes necessary to address the challenges in terms of taxation of such digital transactions.

5.4 EQUALISATION LEVY - CHAPTER VIII IN THE FINANCE ACT, 2016

In order to address these challenges, Chapter VIII of the Finance Act, 2016, titled "Equalisation Levy", provides for an equalisation levy of 6% of the amount of consideration for specified services received or receivable by a non-resident not having PE in India, from a resident in India who carries out business or profession, or from a non-resident having PE in India.

The CBDT issued a notification dated 27 May, 2016, stating that the provisions of Chapter VIII relating to the equalisation levy would come into effect from 1st June 2016. This Chapter extends to the whole of India except Jammu and Kashmir. It applies in respect of consideration received or receivable for specified services provided on or after 1.6.2016.

The key aspects related to Equalisation Levy have been discussed below.

(1) Meaning of “Equalisation Levy” [Section 164(d) of the Finance Act, 2016]:

Equalisation levy means the tax leviable on consideration received or receivable for any specified service

(2) Meaning of “Specified Service” [Section 164(i) of the Finance Act, 2016]:

(i) Online advertisement;

(ii) Any provision for digital advertising space or any other facility or service for the purpose of online advertisement;

(iii) Any other service as may be notified by the Central Government.

Note – ‘Online’ means a facility or service or right or benefit or access that is obtained through the internet or any other form of digital or telecommunication network.

(3) Charge of Equalisation Levy [Section 165 of Finance Act, 2016]:

(i) Equalisation levy @6% is leviable on the amount of consideration for specified service received or receivable by a person, being a non-resident from -

(a) a person resident in India and carrying on business or profession; or

(b) a non-resident having a PE in India.

(ii) Equalisation levy is not chargeable, where –

(a) the non-resident providing the specified service has a PE in India and the specified service is effectively connected with such PE;

(b) the aggregate amount of consideration for specified service received or receivable in a previous year by the non-resident from a person resident in India and carrying on business or profession, or from a non-resident having a PE in India, does not exceed ₹ 1 lakh; or

(c) where the payment for the specified service by the person resident in India, or the PE in India is not for the purposes of carrying out business or profession.

(4) Relief to small players in the digital domain:

In order to reduce burden of small players in the digital domain, it is also provided that no such levy shall be made if the aggregate amount of consideration for specified services received or receivable by a non-resident from a person resident in India and carrying on business or profession or from a non-resident having a permanent establishment in India does not exceed ₹ 1 lakh in any previous year.

Further, equalisation levy shall not be charged where the payment for the specified service by the person resident in India or the permanent establishment in India, is not for the purposes of carrying out business or profession.

(5) Provisions of Chapter on Equalisation Levy:

Section	Subject	Provisions
166	Collection and recovery of equalisation levy
	Person responsible for deduction of equalisation levy	Every person, being a resident and carrying on business or profession or a non-resident having a permanent establishment in India shall deduct equalisation levy from the amount paid or payable to a non-resident in respect of the specified service.
	Rate of equalisation levy	6% of the amount of consideration for specified service paid or payable to a non-resident in respect of specified service by a person resident in India and carrying on business or profession or a non-resident having a PE in India. The amount of consideration of specified services, equalisation levy, interest and penalty payable and refund shall be rounded off to the nearest multiple of ten rupees. [Rule 3 of Equalisation Levy Rules, 2016]

	Threshold limit	Equalisation levy is deductible if the aggregate amount of consideration for specified service in a previous year exceeds one lakh rupees.
	Time period for remittance of equalisation levy	The equalisation levy so deducted during any calendar month shall be paid by every assessee to the credit of the Central Government by the 7th of the month immediately following the said calendar month. Equalisation levy deducted during any calendar month is to be paid to the credit of the Central Government by remitting it to the Reserve Bank of India or the State Bank of India or any other authorised bank, accompanied by an equalisation levy challan. [Rule 4 of Equalisation Levy Rules, 2016]
	Consequence of failure to deduct equalisation levy	Any assessee who fails to deduct equalisation levy shall, notwithstanding such failure, be liable to pay the levy to the credit of the Central Government by the 7th of the month immediately following the said calendar month. Thus, if the assessee responsible for deducting equalisation levy, fails to so deduct, he has, in any case, to pay such levy to the credit of the Central Government by the 7th of the month immediately following the said calendar month.
167	Furnishing of statement
	Statement in prescribed form within time	Every assessee shall, within the prescribed time after the end of each financial year, prepare and deliver or cause to be delivered to the Assessing Officer or to any other authority or agency authorised by the Board in this behalf, a statement in the prescribed form, verified in the prescribed manner and setting forth the prescribed particulars in respect of all specified services during such financial year. The statement in respect of all specified services chargeable to equalisation levy during any financial year is required to be furnished electronically in Form No. 1 (verified through either a digital signature or an electronic verification code) on or before 30th June immediately following that financial year [Rule 5 of Equalisation Levy Rules, 2016]

	Time limit for filing a revised statement	An assessee who has not furnished the statement on or before 30th June immediately following the financial year or having furnished a statement within that time, notices any omission or wrong particulars therein, may furnish a statement or a revised statement, as the case may be. Such statement or revised statement has to be filed at any time before the expiry of two years from the end of the financial year in which the specified service was provided.
	Time limit for filing a statement in response to notice issued by the Assessing Officer	Where any assessee fails to furnish the statement within the prescribed time, the Assessing Officer may serve a notice upon such assessee requiring him to furnish the statement in the prescribed form, verified in the prescribed manner and setting forth the prescribed particulars, within such time, as may be prescribed. The Assessing Officer has been empowered to issue notice for furnishing such statement, which then has to be furnished, within 30 days from date of serving of such notice [Rule 6 of Equalisation Levy Rules, 2016]
168	Processing of statement.
	Manner of processing of statement	Where a statement has been made under section 167 by the assessee, such statement shall be processed in the following manner, namely:— (a) the equalisation levy shall be computed after making the adjustment for any arithmetical error in the statement; (b) the interest, if any shall be computed on the basis of sum deductible as computed in the statement; (c) the sum payable by, or the amount of refund due to, the assessee shall be determined after adjustment of interest computed against the equalisation levy paid under section 166(2) or interest paid section 170 and any amount paid otherwise by way of tax or interest; (d) an intimation shall be prepared or generated and sent to the assessee specifying the sum determined to be payable by, or the amount of refund due to him; and (e) the amount of refund due to the assessee in pursuance of such determination shall be granted to him. However, no such intimation shall be sent after the expiry of one year from the end of the financial year in which the statement is furnished.

	Prescribed form for service of notice of demand on the taxpayer	Where any levy, interest or penalty is payable under the equalisation levy provisions, a notice of demand in Form No. 2 specifying the sum so payable shall be served upon the taxpayer. Further, intimation issued upon processing of the statement of specified services shall also be deemed to be a notice of demand. [Rule 7 of Equalisation Levy Rules, 2016]
	Scheme for centralised processing of statements	For the purposes of processing of statements, the CBDT may make a scheme for centralised processing of such statements to expeditiously determine the tax payable by, or the refund due to, the assessee as required thereunder.
169	Rectification of mistake
	Time limit for amending an intimation	With a view to rectifying any mistake apparent from the record, the Assessing Officer may amend any intimation issued under section 168. Such intimation can be amended within one year from the end of the financial year in which the intimation sought to be amended was issued.
	Amendment can be made suo motu or brought to notice by the assessee	The Assessing Officer may make an amendment to any intimation, either suo motu or on any mistake brought to his notice by the assessee.
	Opportunity of being heard to be given by the Assessing Officer before amending an intimation	An amendment to any intimation, which has the effect of increasing the liability of the assessee or reducing a refund, shall not be made unless the Assessing Officer has given notice to the assessee of his intention so to do and has given the assessee a reasonable opportunity of being heard.
		Where any such amendment to any intimation has the effect of enhancing the sum payable or reducing the refund already made, the Assessing Officer shall make an order specifying the sum payable by the assessee and the provisions of this Chapter shall apply accordingly.
170	Interest on delayed payment of equalisation	An assessee who fails to credit the equalisation levy or any part thereof within 7th of the month following the calendar month in which it is deducted, to the account of

(ii)	40(a)(ib)	In order to ensure compliance with the provisions this Chapter, section 40(a)(ib) provides that if any consideration is paid or payable to a non-resident for a specified service on which equalisation levy is deductible, and such levy has not been deducted or after deduction, has not been paid on or before the due date under section 139(1), then, such expenses incurred by the assessee towards consideration for specified service shall not be allowed as deduction. However, where in respect of such consideration, if the equalisation levy has been deducted in any subsequent year or has been deducted during the previous year but paid after the due date specified under section 139(1), such sum shall be allowed as deduction in computing the income of the previous year in which such levy has been paid.

EXERCISE

Question 1

Explain the core reasons for difference between the e-commerce transactions and the traditional business transactions causing difficulty to tax the income of e-commerce transactions.

Answer

The core reasons for difference between e-commerce transactions and traditional business transactions causing difficulty to tax the income from e-commerce transactions under the Income-tax Act, 1961 are absence of national boundaries, no requirement of physical presence of goods and no requirement of physical delivery (in certain cases). Since e-commerce transactions are completed in cyberspace, it is often not clear as to the place where the transaction is effected, thereby causing difficulty in implementing source rule taxation.

Question 2

E-commerce transactions have replaced concepts generally associated with international transactions traditionally. Discuss briefly the issues involving such transactions.

Answer

The typical taxation issues relating to e-commerce are:

(1) the difficulty in characterizing the nature of payment and establishing a nexus or link between taxable transaction, activity and a taxing jurisdiction,

(2) the difficulty of locating the transaction, activity and identifying the taxpayer for income tax purposes.

Question 3

ABC ltd., an Indian company, is carrying on the business of manufacture and sale of teakwood furniture under the brand name "PUREWOOD". In order to expand its overseas sales/exports, it launched a massive advertisement campaign of its products. For the purpose of online advertisement, it utilized the services of PQR Inc., a London based company. During the previous year 2019-20, ABC Ltd. Paid ₹ 5 lakhs to PQR Inc. for such services. Discuss the tax implications/TDS implications of such payment and receipt in the hands of ABC Ltd. and PQR Inc., respectively, if –

(i) PQR Inc. has no permanent establishment in India

(ii) PQR Inc. has a permanent establishment in India, and the service is effectively connected to the permanent establishment in India

Answer

Chapter VIII of the Finance Act, 2016, "Equalisation Levy", provides for an equalisation levy of 6% of the amount of consideration for specified services received or receivable by a non-resident not having permanent establishment in India, from a resident in India who carries out business or profession, or from a non-resident having permanent establishment in India.

“Specified Service” means

(1) online advertisement;

(2) any provision for digital advertising space or any other facility or service for the purpose of online advertisement and

(3) any other service as may be notified by the Central Government.

However, equalisation levy shall not be levied-

- where the non-resident providing the specified services has a permanent establishment in India and the specified service is effectively connected with such permanent establishment.
- the aggregate amount of consideration for specified service received or receivable during the previous year does not exceed ₹ 1 lakh.
- where the payment for specified service is not for the purposes of carrying out business or profession

(i) Where PQR Inc. has no permanent establishment in India

In the present case, equalisation levy @6% is chargeable on the amount of ₹ 5,00,000 received by PQR Inc., a non-resident not having a PE in India from ABC Ltd., an Indian company. Accordingly, ABC Ltd. is required to deduct equalisation levy of ₹ 30,000 i.e., @6% of ₹ 5 lakhs, being the amount paid towards online advertisement services provided by PQR Inc., a non-resident having no permanent establishment in India. Non-deduction of equalisation levy would attract disallowance under section 40(a)(ib) of 100% of the amount paid while computing business income.

(ii) Where PQR Inc. has permanent establishment in India and the service is effectively connected to the permanent establishment in India

Equalisation levy would not be attracted where the non-resident service provider (PQR Inc., in this case) has a permanent establishment in India and the service is effectively connected to the permanent establishment in India. Therefore, the ABC Ltd. is not required to deduct equalisation levy on ₹ 5 lakhs, being the amount paid towards online advertisement services to PQR Inc, in this case.

However, tax has to be deducted by ABC Ltd. at the rates in force under section 195 in respect of such payment to PQR Inc. Non-deduction of tax at source under section 195 would attract disallowance under section 40(a)(i) of 100% of the amount paid while computing business income.

6.1 INTRODUCTION

Article 38(1) of the International Court of Justice[1] provides that the court shall apply the following in deciding on a particular matter –

International Convention(s) [general or particular]

- establishing rules expressly recognised by the contesting states

International Customs

- serving as evidence of general practice accepted as law

General principles

- recognised by civilised nations

Judicial decisions and teachings of highly qualified publicists of various nations

- serving as subsidiary means for determination of rules of law

Success of any law depends upon the manner in which it is interpreted and administered. In order to interpret any law or agreement, one needs to understand the philosophy of law which has been kept in mind at the time of passing such law in a country or at the time of forming an agreement between the two countries on a particular aspect. This gives rise to the principles of public international law (example – U.N principles on business and human rights).

Tax has been a consequence of business for several hundreds of years; some of the principles would definitely have their bearing on the manner in which law is passed. International tax law has evolved so that conflict of national interests can be resolved (double taxation being the primary issue).

Source(s) of International Tax Law

S. No.	Source	Particulars relating to the source/origin
(i)	Multilateral international agreements	For example, the Vienna Convention on Law of Treaties (VCLT)
(ii)	Double Taxation Avoidance	DTAAs may be comprehensive or otherwise. It is to be noted that along with the DTAA, it is the protocols, memorandum of

[1] https://www.icj-cij.org/en/statute#CHAPTER_II

	Agreement (DTAA)	understanding, and exchange of information, etc. forming part of the DTAA which enables interpretation of a DTAA.
(iii)	Customary international law and general principles of law	For example, principles of law recognised by civilized nations in their national legal systems, customary law and judicial decisions and the practices of international organizations. Customary international law is the aspect of international law that derives from customs and convention. Along with general principles of law and treaties, custom is also considered by the International Court of Justice, jurists, the United Nations, and its member states to be among the primary sources of international law. The vast majority of the world's governments accept, in principle, the existence of customary international law, although there are many differing opinions as to what rules are contained therein.

6.2 DOUBLE TAXATION AND CONNECTING FACTORS

The taxability of a foreign entity in any country depends upon two distinct factors, namely, whether it is doing business with that country or in that country. Internationally, the term used to determine the jurisdiction for taxation is "connecting factors". There are two types of connecting factors, namely, "Residence" and "Source". It means a company can be subject to tax either on its residence link or its source link with a country. Broadly, if a company is doing business with another country (i.e. host/source country), then it would be subject to tax in its home country alone, based on its residence link. However, if a company is doing business in a host/source country, then, besides being taxed in the home country on the basis of its residence link, it will also be taxed in the host country on the basis of its source link.

- Juridical double taxation

  When source rules overlap, double taxation may arise i.e. tax is imposed by two or more countries as per their domestic laws in respect of the same transaction, income arises or is deemed to arise in their respective jurisdictions. This is known as "juridical double taxation".

In order to avoid such double taxation, a company can invoke provisions of Double Taxation Avoidance Agreements (DTAAs) (also known as Tax Treaty or Double Taxation Convention–DTC) with the host/source country, or in the absence of such an agreement, an Indian company can invoke provisions of section 91, providing unilateral relief in the event of double taxation.

Example

Company ICO is a resident of India. It has set up a branch in UK. Here, India would be the country of residence for ICO, whereas UK would be the country of source. UK would tax the profits earned by the branch of ICO located in UK, whereas ICO would be taxed on worldwide basis in India, including profits of its UK branch. However, ICO can claim relief in respect of taxes paid in UK while filing its tax return in India under the Indo-UK Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement.

If, instead of UK, ICO has a branch in a state with which India does not have tax treaty, then it can claim unilateral relief under section 91 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 in respect of taxes paid by its branch in that state.

- Economic double taxation

  ‘Economic double taxation’ happens when the same transaction, item of income or capital is taxed in two or more states but in hands of different persons (because of lack of subject identity)

Example

When one state attributes an income/capital to its legal owner whereas the tax law of other state attributes it in the hands of the person in possession or having economic control over the income, it leads to economic double taxation.

Yet another classic example is tax on distributed surplus by a company which is taxed in the hands of the company distributing such surplus, while the other jurisdiction taxes the said income from distribution in the hands of the shareholder, thus leading to double taxation of the same income albeit in the hands of different persons.

6.3 TAX TREATIES: AN OVERVIEW

(1) Definition of “Treaty”

Treaty is a generic term embracing all instruments binding under international law, regardless of their formal designation, concluded between two or more international juridical persons.

The application of the term treaty signifies that the parties intend to create rights and obligations enforceable under international law.

Article 2 of Vienna Convention on Law of Treaties, 1969 defines a “treaty” as an international agreement concluded between States in written form and governed by international law, whether embodied in a single instrument or in two or more related instruments and whatever its particular designation.

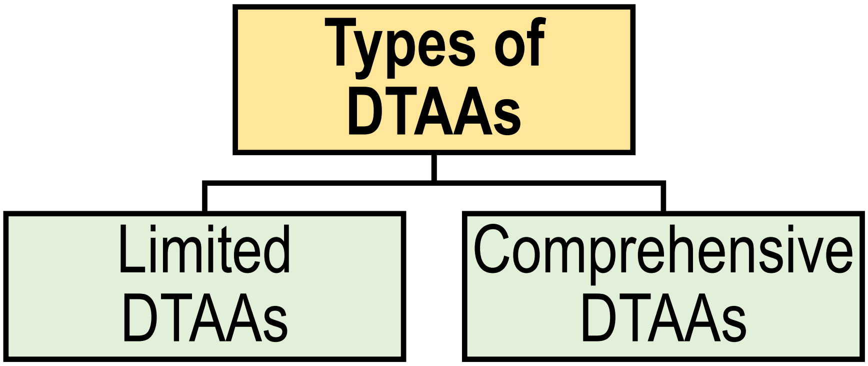
(2) Role of Tax Treaties

“Treaty” represents various compromises agreed upon by the respective Contracting States depending upon the economic expediency of a particular country.

Tax, in the country of source is considered as a cost, whereas the same is an obligation in the country of residence. Therefore, there is need to achieve tax efficiency. Double Tax Avoidance Agreements come into play to mitigate hardship caused by subjecting the same income to double taxation.

Tax Treaties attempt to eliminate double taxation and try to achieve balance and equity. They aim at sharing of tax revenues by the concerned states on a rational basis. Tax treaties do not always succeed in eliminating Double Taxation, but contain the incidence to a tolerable level.

(3) Types of DTAAs



Limited DTAAs are those which are limited to certain types of incomes only. e.g., DTAA between India and Pakistan is limited to income from international air transport only.

Comprehensive DTAAs are those which cover almost all types of incomes covered by any model convention. Many a time, a treaty also covers wealth tax, gift tax, surtax, etc.

(4) Directive Principles set out in the Indian Constitution

In the Indian context, Article 51 of the Indian Constitution has, inter alia, set out some directive principles which must be followed by the State in the context of International agreements and relationships. It has been provided that-

"The State shall endeavor to -

(a) Promote international peace and security;

(b) Maintain just and honourable relations amongst nations;

(c) Foster respect for international law and treaty obligations in the dealings of organised people with one another; and

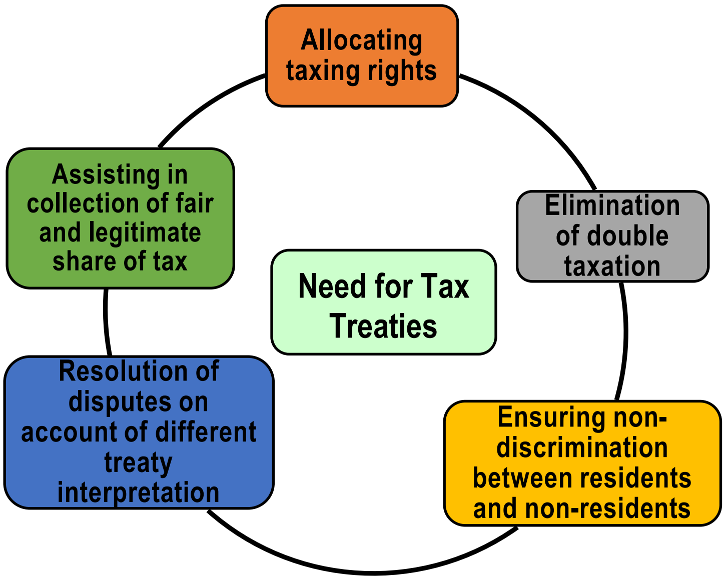
(d) Encourage settlement of international disputes by arbitration.

It is pertinent to note that entries 10 and 14 of List I of the Seventh Schedule to the Constitution of India confer the power on Parliament to legislate treaties with foreign countries. Further, this power of Parliament has been delegated to the Central Government vide sections 90 and 90A of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

(5) Need for tax treaties

The concept of source and residence prevailing in a majority of the countries is the root cause of double taxation. Hence, there is a need to have tax treaties in force. In addition to allocating the taxing rights and eliminating double taxation, there are various other important considerations as mentioned below:

- Ensuring non-discrimination between residents and non-residents
- Resolution of disputes arising on account of different interpretation of tax treaty by the treaty partner.
- Providing assistance in the collection of the fair and legitimate share of tax.



Allocating taxing rights
Elimination of double taxation
Ensuring non-discrimination between residents and non-residents
Resolution of disputes on account of different treaty interpretation
Assisting in collection of fair and legitimate share of tax
Need for Tax Treaties

Further, in addition to above, there are some other principles which must be considered by countries in their tax system –

(i) Equity and fairness: Same income earned by different taxpayers must be taxed at the same rate regardless of the source of income.

(ii) Neutrality and efficiency: Neutrality factor provides that economic processes should not be affected by external factors such as taxation. Neutrality is two-fold.

(a) Capital export neutrality and

(b) Capital import neutrality (CIN).

Capital export neutrality (CEN) provides that business decision must not be affected by tax factors between the country of residence and the target country; whereas CIN provides that the level of tax imposed on non-residents as well as the residents must be similar.

(iii) Promotion of mutual economic relation, trade and investment: In some cases, it is observed that avoidance of double taxation is not the only objective. The other objective may be to give impetus to a country's overall economic growth and development.'

6.4 APPLICATION AND INTERPRETATION OF TAX TREATIES

Application of Tax Treaties

In various countries, unless the context otherwise requires, the provisions of the DTAA shall prevail over the domestic tax provisions. No two treaties between the countries are alike. DTAA signed by India with USA is different in comparison to the DTAA signed with other countries like Netherlands. These differences include taxpayers to resort to tax arbitrage strategies. This frustrates Government's objective and results in unintended tax benefits. Therefore, in specified circumstances, treaty benefits are denied. Some of the circumstances in the Indian context induce (i) General Anti-Avoidance Rules (GAAR)[2] (ii) Targeted anti avoidance rules (transfer pricing), etc. (iii) Beneficial Ownership Conditions (iv) Entitlement to Benefits/Limitation on Benefits Clause/ Articles, etc.

In recent past, India has re-negotiated DTAAs with countries like Mauritius, Singapore, etc. to prevent fiscal evasion with respect to taxes on income and capital gains of the investor[3].

(1) Article 4 of DTAA – Gateway to avail tax benefits

It is a well-accepted proposition in a tax treaty scenario that a person shall be entitled to a tax treaty only if he is a resident of one or both of the Contracting States.

[2] GAAR provisions in India are applicable from Assessment Year 2018-19

[3] Effective from 01 April 2017

This provision aims at curbing the 'treaty shopping' practices. It must be noted that though 'Article 4' of the tax treaty deals with residential status of a person, it does not provide rules for determination of residence. Instead, it refers to the determination in accordance with the provisions of domestic tax law of the respective Contracting State. This is clear from the language which provides that "the term "resident of a Contracting State" means any person who, under the laws of that State, is liable to tax therein by reason of his domicile, residence, place of management or any other criterion of a similar nature.............". Therefore, the primary requirement is for a person to qualify as a resident under the law of the concerned Contracting State.

Determination of residential status of a person is crucial since it is ultimately the country of residence that may have full right to tax the worldwide income of its resident. Further, in addition to taxing the global income, the country of residence would grant relief in respect of tax paid in the country of source.

Place of effective management is an important criterion for availing treaty benefits by a corporate. India-U.A.E DTAA (as revised) further limits the application of treaty by providing that the treaty would be applicable to U.A.E company only if it is incorporated in U.A.E and is controlled wholly in U.A.E. Only such company would be regarded as resident of U.A.E. Further, the India–U.A.E DTAA provides that if a person other than an individual is resident of both the States, then it should be deemed to be resident of the State in which its Place of effective management is situated.

(2) Computation of income liable for the purpose of taxation

The provisions of tax treaty inter alia allocates taxing rights between the treaty partners, provides relief or reduces or eliminates the harmful effects of double taxation. However, it is to be noted that except for the provisions under 'Article 7 i.e. Business Profits taxation', generally the treaty does not provide rules for computation of income. It would depend upon the domestic tax law provisions. Treaties, at best, distribute the taxing rights between two states. It may limit the rate of tax (generally, in the state of source) or provide the upper limit up to which taxes can be levied. Certain treaties do reduce the incidence of tax by providing or restricting the scope of the subject matter of taxation.

(3) Distributive Rule

Tax treaties only distribute or assign taxing jurisdiction. It does not impose tax. Having assigned the jurisdiction of tax between the State of Residence and State of Source, the domestic tax laws of the respective State determine taxing rules. Taxing experts in early 1920 appointed by the League of Nations describe the method of classification as Contracting States dividing tax sources and tax objects amongst themselves by mutually binding themselves not to levy taxes or to tax only to a limited extent.

English lawyers called it "Classification and Assignment Rule", whereas German jurists called it the "Distributive Rule". According to this principle, "to the extent that an exemption is agreed to, its effect is, in principle, independent of whether the Contracting States imposes a tax, in the situation to which the exemption applies, and irrespective of whether the State actually levies the tax". The point here is that having agreed to give the right of tax to the other state, that state may or may not levy tax and if the state in whose favour right to tax is devolved, chooses not to tax such income, then, it may result in double non-taxation. The argument in favour of double non-taxation is that income would be subject to tax in the exempt state as and when the exemption is withdrawn or tax is levied. Thus, this rule ensures that double taxation does not arise in future also, if the source state decides to levy tax.

(A) Treaties are entered into for "Mutual Benefits"

Apart from the allocation of tax between the treaty partners, tax treaties can also help to resolve problems and can obtain benefits which cannot be achieved unilaterally.

Treaties are negotiated and entered into at a political level and have several considerations as their basis. Thus, treaties should be seen in the context of aiding commercial relations between treaty partners.

(B) A tax treaty provision may have an unequal effect4

State A imposes tax but state B does not impose a tax, yet wordings of the treaty are reciprocal – so that if and when State 'B' does introduce such a tax, the treaty rates would be operative in State 'B'. Until such time there would be an unequal effect. Moreover, State 'A' may make a distributive rule operative upon fulfilment of certain condition or comparable feature.

Interpretation of Tax Treaties

Tax treaties are signed between two sovereign nations by competent authorities under delegated powers from the respective Governments. Thus, an international agreement has to be respected and interpreted in accordance with the rules of international law as laid down in the Vienna Convention on Law of Treaties (VCLT). These rules of interpretation are not restricted to tax treaties but also apply to any treaty between two countries. Therefore, any dispute between two nations in respect of Article 25 relating to Mutual Agreement Procedure of the OECD/UN Model Conventions has to be solved in the light of the VCLT.

However, when it comes to application of a tax treaty in the domestic forum, the appellate authorities and the courts are primarily governed by the laws of the respective countries for interpretation.

In India, even before insertion of Section 90(2) by the Finance (No.2) Act, 1991, with retrospective effect from 1-4-1972, CBDT had clarified vide Circular No. 333 dated 2-4-1982 that where a specific provision is made in the DTAA, the provisions of the DTAA will prevail over the general provisions contained in the Act and where there is no specific provision in the DTAA, it is the basic law i.e. the provisions of the Act, that will govern the taxation of such income.

The Income-tax Act, 1961 provides that where the Indian Government has entered into DTAAs which are applicable to the taxpayers, then, the provisions of the Act shall apply to the extent they are more beneficial to the taxpayer.

[4] Tax Treaty Interpretation – The International Tax Treaties Service"

Interpretation of any statute, more so international tax treaties, requires that we follow some rules of interpretation. In subsequent paragraphs, we shall deal with rules of interpretation of tax treaties.

(1) Basic Principles of Interpretation of a Treaty

Principles or rules of interpretation of a tax treaty would be relevant only where terms or words used in treaties are ambiguous, vague or are such that different meanings are possible. If words are clear or unambiguous, then there is no need to resort to different rules for interpretation.

Prior to the Vienna Convention, treaties were interpreted according to the customary international law. Just as each country's legal system has its own canons of statutory construction and interpretation, likewise, several principles exist for the interpretation of treaties in customary international law. We would be discussing some of the rules of interpretation of Vienna Convention on law of Treaties in the later part of this chapter.

Some of the important principles of Customary International law in interpretation of tax treaties are as follows:

(i) Golden Rule – Objective Interpretation: Ideally, any term or word should be interpreted keeping its objective or ordinary or literal meaning in mind. The term has to be interpreted contextually.

Words and phrases are in the first instance to be construed according to their plain and natural meaning. However, if the grammatical interpretation would result in an absurdity, or in marked inconsistency with other portions of the treaty, or would clearly go beyond the intention of the parties, it should not be adopted[5].

(ii) Subjective Interpretation: Under this approach, the terms of a treaty are to be interpreted according to the common intention of the contracting parties at the time the treaty was concluded. The intention must be ascertained from the words used in the treaty and the context thereof.

In Abdul Razak A. Meman's case [2005] 276 ITR 306, the Authority for Advance Rulings [the AAR] relied on the speeches delivered by the Finance Ministers of India as well as UAE to arrive at the intention of parties in signing the India-UAE Tax Treaty.

(iii) Purposive Interpretation: In this approach the treaty is to be interpreted so as to facilitate the attainment of the aims and objectives of the treaty. This approach is also known as the 'objects and purpose' method.

In case of Union of India v. Azadi Bachao Andolan 263 ITR 706, the Supreme Court of India observed that "the principles adopted for interpretation of treaties are not the same as those in interpretation of statutory legislation. The interpretation of provisions of an international treaty, including one for double taxation relief, is that the treaties are entered into at a political level and have several considerations as their bases."

[5] Prof. J. G. Starke in Introduction to International Law 10th Edition

The Apex Court also agreed with the contention of the Appellant that "the preamble to the Indo-Mauritius DTAA recites that it is for 'encouragement of mutual trade and investment' and this aspect of the matter cannot be lost sight of while interpreting the treaty".

(iv) The Principle of Effectiveness: According to this principle, a treaty should be interpreted in a manner to have effect rather than make it void.

This principle, particularly stressed by the Permanent Court of International Justice, requires that the treaty should be given an interpretation which 'on the whole' will render the treaty 'most effective and useful', in other words, enabling the provisions of the treaty to work and to have their appropriate effects[6].

(v) Principle of *Contemporanea Expositio: A treaty's terms are normally to be interpreted on the basis of their meaning at the time the treaty was concluded. However, this is not a universal principle.

In Abdul Razak A. Meman's case [2005] 276 ITR 306, the AAR observed that "there can be little doubt that while interpreting treaties, regard should be had to material contemporanea exposition, which means that a statute is best explained by following the construction put upon it by judges at the time it was made, or soon after. This proposition is embodied in Article 32 of the Vienna Convention, referred to above, and is also referred to in the decision of the Hon'ble Supreme Court in K. P. Varghese v. ITO [1981] 131 ITR 597."

(vi) Liberal Construction: It is a general principle of construction with respect to treaties that they shall be liberally construed so as to carry out the apparent intention of the parties.

In John N. Gladden v. Her Majesty the Queen [7], the principle of liberal interpretation of tax treaties was reiterated by the Federal Court, which observed that "contrary to an ordinary taxing statute a tax treaty or convention must be given a liberal interpretation with a view to implementing the true intentions of the parties. A literal or legalistic interpretation must be avoided when the basic object of the treaty might be defeated or frustrated in so far as the particular item under consideration is concerned."

The Court further recognised that "we cannot expect to find the same nicety or strict definition as in modern documents, such as deeds, or Acts of Parliament, it has never been the habit of those engaged in diplomacy to use legal accuracy but rather to adopt more liberal terms."

(vii) Treaty as a Whole – Integrated Approach: A treaty should be construed as a whole and effect should be given to each word which would be construed in the same manner wherever it occurs. Any provision should not be interpreted in isolation; rather the entire treaty should be read as a whole to arrive at its object and purpose.

[7] 85 D.T.C. 5188 at 5190, Source: UOI v. Azadi Bachao Andolan 263 ITR 706 (SC)

(viii) Reasonableness and consistency[8] : Treaties should be given an interpretation in which the reasonable meaning of words and phrases is preferred, and in which a consistent meaning is given to different portions of the instrument. In accordance with the principles of consistency, treaties should be interpreted in the light of existing international law.

An important aspect to be noted regarding the rules of interpretation is that they are not rules of law and are not to be applied like the rules enacted by the legislature in an Interpretation Act.

(2) Extrinsic Aids to Interpretation of a Tax Treaty

A wide range of extrinsic material is permitted to be used in interpretation of tax treaties. According to Article 32 of the Vienna Convention, the supplementary means of interpretation include the preparatory work of the treaty and the circumstances of its conclusion.

According to Prof. Starke, one may resort to following extrinsic aids to interpret a tax treaty provided that clear words are not thereby contradicted:

(i) Interpretative Protocols, Resolutions and Committee Reports, setting out agreed interpretations;

(ii) A subsequent agreement between the parties regarding the interpretation of the treaty or the application of its provisions [Art. 31(3) of the VCLT];

(iii) Subsequent conduct of the state parties, as evidence of the intention of the parties and their conception of the treaty;

(iv) Other treaties, in pari materia (i.e., relating to the same subject matter), in case of doubt.

(i) Provisions in Parallel Tax Treaties

If the language used in two tax treaties (say treaties: X and Y) are same and one treaty is more elaborative or clear in its meaning (say treaty X) can one rely on the interpretation/explanations provided in a treaty X while applying provisions of a treaty Y?

The views of the Indian Judiciary are, however, not consistent in this respect. There are contradictory judgments by Indian courts/Tribunal in this regard.

(ii) International Articles/Essays/Reports

International Article/Essays/Reports are referred as extrinsic aid for interpretation of tax treaties. Like, in case of CIT v. Vishakhapatnam Port Trust (1983) 144 ITR 146 (AP), the High Court obtained "useful material" through international articles.

(iii) Cahiers published by International Fiscal Association (IFA), Netherlands

"Cahiers de Droit Fiscal International" is the main publication of the IFA, which is published annually and deals with two major topics each year. Cahiers were relied upon in case of Azadi Bachao Andolan's (supra) case by the Supreme Court.

[8] Prof. J. G. Starke in Introduction to International Law 10th Edition

(iv) Protocol

Protocol is like a supplement to the treaty. In many treaties, in order to put certain matters beyond doubt, there is a protocol annexed at the end of the treaty, which clarifies borderline issues.

A protocol is an integral part of a tax treaty and has the same binding force as the main clauses therein.

Protocol to India France treaty contains the Most Favoured Nation Clause. Thus, one must refer to protocol before arriving at any final conclusion in respect of any tax treaty provision.

MFN clause is usually found in Protocols and Exchange of Notes to DTCs. Under this clause a country agrees to extend the benefits to the residents of the other country, which it had (first country) promised to the residents of third country. It tries to avoid discrimination between residents of different countries.

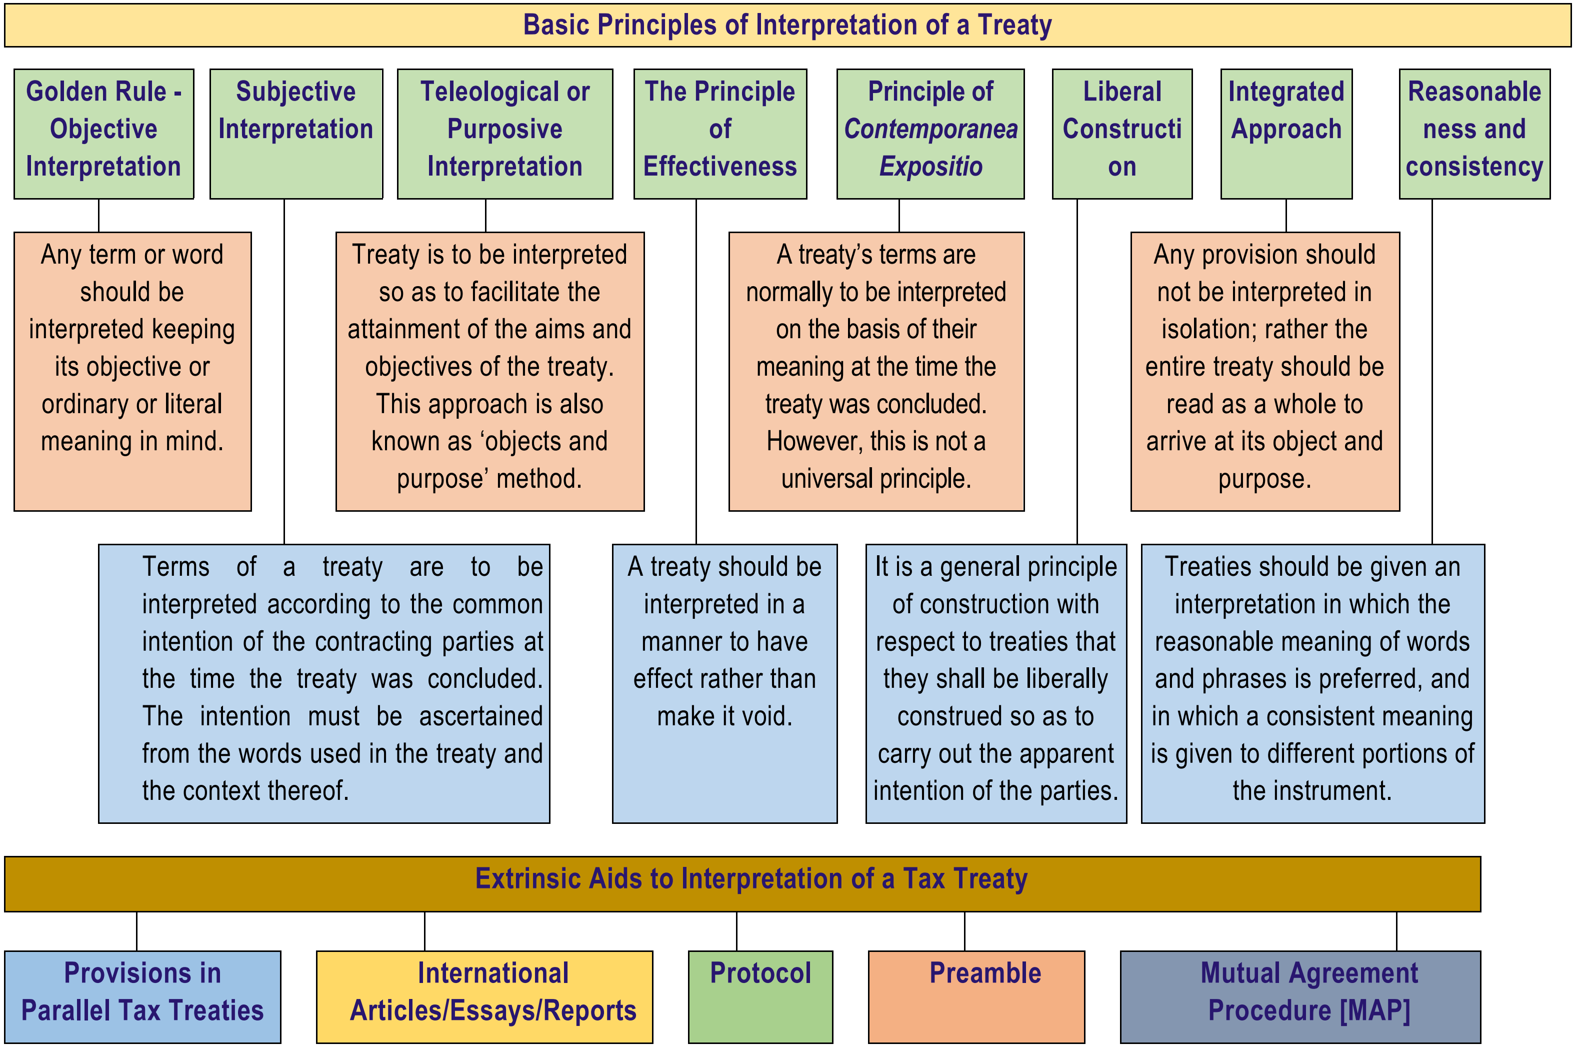
Normally, the benefit under this clause is restricted to a specific group like OECD countries or developing countries. The nature of benefits under MFN clause could either be application of lower rate of tax or narrowing the scope of the income liable to tax or allowing higher deduction in respect of executive and general administrative expenses of head office.

(v) Preamble

Preamble to a tax treaty could guide in interpretation of a tax treaty. In case of Azadi Bachao Andolan, the Apex Court observed that 'the preamble to the Indo-Mauritius Double Tax Avoidance Treaty recites that it is for the 'encouragement of mutual trade and investment' and this aspect of the matter cannot be lost sight of while interpreting the treaty'. These observations are very significant whereby the Apex Court has upheld 'economic considerations' as one of the objectives of a Tax Treaty.

(vi) Mutual Agreement Procedure [MAP]

MAP helps to interpret any ambiguous term/provision through bilateral negotiations. MAP is more authentic than other aids as officials of both countries are in possession of materials/documents exchanged at the time of signing the tax treaty which would clearly indicate the object or purpose of a particular provision. Successful MAPs also serve as precedence in case of subsequent applications.



Basic Principles of Interpretation of a Treaty

Golden Rule - Objective Interpretation

Any term or word should be interpreted keeping its objective or ordinary or literal meaning in mind.

Subjective Interpretation

Terms of a treaty are to be interpreted according to the common intention of the contracting parties at the time the treaty was concluded. The intention must be ascertained from the words used in the treaty and the context thereof.

Teleological or Purposive Interpretation

Treaty is to be interpreted so as to facilitate the attainment of the aims and objectives of the treaty. This approach is also known as 'objects and purpose' method.

The Principle of Effectiveness

A treaty should be interpreted in a manner to have effect rather than make it void.

Principle of Contemporanea Expositio

A treaty's terms are normally to be interpreted on the basis of their meaning at the time the treaty was concluded. However, this is not a universal principle.

Liberal Construction

It is a general principle of construction with respect to treaties that they shall be liberally construed so as to carry out the apparent intention of the parties.

Integrated Approach

Any provision should not be interpreted in isolation; rather the entire treaty should be read as a whole to arrive at its object and purpose.

Reasonableness and consistency

Treaties should be given an interpretation in which the reasonable meaning of words and phrases is preferred, and in which a consistent meaning is given to different portions of the instrument.

(3) Commentaries on OECD/UN Models and their importance

Interpretation of any statute, more so international tax treaties requires that we follow some rules of interpretation. Commentaries are one of the important rules of interpretation of tax treaties.

There are two commentaries available – one by OECD and the other by UN, based on their respective models. OECD Commentary is authentic and revised from time to time. UN Commentary is by and large based on OECD commentary. UN commentary was published in 1980 and has been revised from time to time. One can refer to the commentaries for interpretation and application of various provision contained in a DTAA.

Views expressed in the commentaries carry great authority. Where Contracting States adopt the text of the Article as per OECD Model convention without any change, and if these countries happen to be OECD Countries, the OECD commentary is directly applicable. In case of a DTAA between developed and developing countries, normally UN model is followed. UN Model and UN Commentary both being largely based on OECD Model and Commentary respectively, OECD Commentary is also quite helpful in interpretation of treaties based on UN Model.

OECD Model Commentary has been widely used in interpretation of tax treaties. The Commentary on the OECD Model Convention states that: "the Commentaries have been cited in the published decisions of the courts of the great majority of Member countries. In many decisions, the Commentaries have been extensively quoted and analysed, and have frequently played a key role in the judge's deliberations."

The OECD has framed a model convention to guide countries to draft DTAAs. In the Azadi Bachao Andolan case, the Supreme Court has made reference to the OECD convention while interpreting terms used in DTAA.

Both UN and OECD Model Commentaries are a great help in interpretation of tax treaties. Their importance in interpretation of tax treaties can hardly be over emphasized [Credit Lyonnais v. DCIT (2005) 94 ITD 401 (Mum)]. OECD, however, plays a greater role in providing standardized or systematized approach in interpretation of tax treaties.

Model Commentaries give the authoritative interpretation of the provisions of DTAAs [Sonata Information Technology Ltd. v. ACIT (2006) 103 ITD 324 (Bang)]

(4) Foreign Courts' Decisions

In CIT v. Vishakhapatnam Port Trust's case [1983] 144 ITR 146, the Andhra Pradesh High Court observed that, "in view of the standard OECD Models which are being used in various countries, a new area of genuine 'international tax law' is now in the process of developing. Any person interpreting a tax treaty must now consider decisions and rulings worldwide relating to similar treaties. The maintenance of uniformity in the interpretation of a rule after its international adoption is just as important as the initial removal of divergences. Therefore, the judgments rendered by courts in other countries or rulings given by other tax authorities would be relevant."

In the under-noted cases, foreign court cases have extensively been quoted for interpretation of treaty provisions:

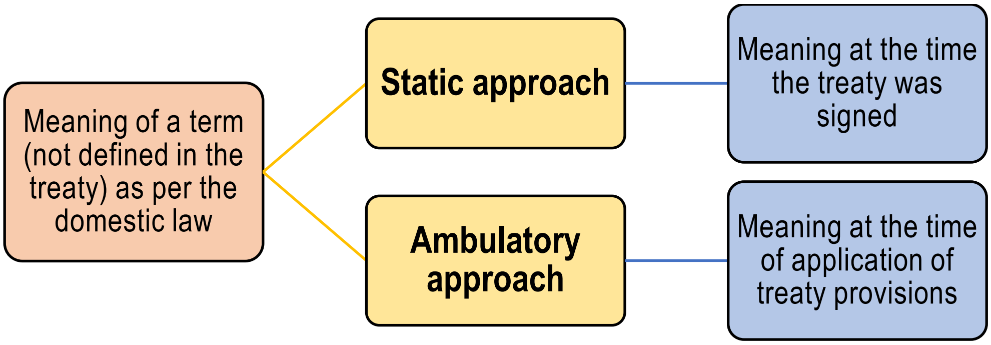
Union of India v. Azadi Bachao Andolan [2003] 263 ITR 706 (SC)

CIT v. Vishakhapatnam Port Trust [1983] 144 ITR 146

Abdul Razak A. Meman's case [2005] 276 ITR 306(AAR)

(5) Ambulatory v. Static Approach

Whenever a reference is made in a treaty to the provisions of domestic tax laws for assigning meaning to a particular term, a question often arises what meaning to be assigned to the said term – the one which prevailed on the date of signing a tax treaty or the one prevailing on the date of application of a tax treaty. There are two views on the subject, namely, Static and Ambulatory.



Meaning of a term (not defined in the treaty) as per the domestic law
Static approach
Meaning at the time the treaty was signed
Ambulatory approach
Meaning at the time of application of treaty provisions

All Model Commentaries including the Technical Explanation on US Model Tax Convention favors ambulatory approach, however with one caution and that is ambulatory approach cannot be applied when there is a radical amendment in the domestic law thereby changing the sum and substance of the term.

India-Australia Treaty, in Article 3(2) adds the expression "from time to time in force" to provide for an "ambulatory" interpretation.

6.5 ROLE OF VIENNA CONVENTION IN APPLICATION AND INTERPRETATION OF TAX TREATIES

The International Law Commission initiated the work on the Vienna Convention on Law of Treaties in the year 1949 which was completed in the year 1969. It came into force in the year 1980. As of January, 2018, it was ratified by 116 Countries.

Since tax treaty is a part of international law, its interpretation should be based on certain set of principles and rules of interpretation. The Vienna Convention on Law of Treaties provides the basic rules of interpretation of any international agreement (including a tax treaty). Therefore, it would be worthy to understand some of the Articles of the Vienna Convention of Law of Treaties which would help appreciate the manner of application and interpretation of tax treaties.

Principles enunciated in the Vienna Convention on Law of Treaties[9]

Article No.	Article Heading	Principle enunciated
26	Pacta Sunt Servanda (in good faith)	Every treaty in force is binding upon the parties and must be followed by them in good faith.
28	Non-retroactivity of treaties	Unless a different intention appears from the treaty or is otherwise established, treaty provisions do not bind a party in relation to any act or fact which took place or any situation which ceased to exist before the date of the entry into force of the treaty with respect to that party. In other words, unless otherwise provided, treaties cannot have retrospective application
29	Territorial Scope of Treaties	Unless a different intention appears from the treaty or is otherwise established, a treaty is binding upon each party in respect of its entire territory.
31	General Rule of Interpretation	• A treaty shall be interpreted in good faith in accordance with the ordinary meaning to be given to the terms thereof in the context and in the light of its object and purpose. • The context for the purpose of interpretation of a treaty shall comprise, in addition to the text, including its preamble and annexure (a) Any agreement relating to the treaty which was made between all the parties in connection with the conclusion of the treaty; (b) Any instrument which was made by one or more parties in connection with the conclusion of the treaty and accepted by the other parties as an instrument related thereto. • The following shall be taken into account, together with the context in that: (a) Any subsequent agreement between the parties regarding the interpretation of the treaty or the application of its provisions; (b) Any subsequent practice in the application of the treaty which establishes the agreement of the parties regarding its interpretation; (c) Any relevant rules of international law applicable to relation between the parties.

Question 1

What do you mean by double taxation? Discuss the connecting factors which lead to double taxation.

Answer

The taxability of a foreign entity in any country depends upon two distinct factors, namely, whether it is doing business with that country or in that country. Internationally, the term used to determine the jurisdiction for taxation is "connecting factors". There are two types of connecting factors, namely, "Residence" and "Source". It means a company can be subject to tax either on its residence link or its source link with a country. Broadly, if a company is doing business with another country (i.e. host/source country), then it would be subject to tax in its home country alone, based on its residence link. However, if a company is doing business in a host/source country, then, besides being taxed in the home country on the basis of its residence link, it will also be taxed in the host country on the basis of its source link.

- Juridical double taxation: When source rules overlap, double taxation may arise i.e. tax is imposed by two or more countries as per their domestic laws in respect of the same transaction, income arises or is deemed to arise in their respective jurisdictions. This is known as "juridical double taxation".

  In order to avoid such double taxation, a company can invoke provisions of Double Taxation Avoidance Agreements (DTAAs) (also known as Tax Treaty or Double Taxation Convention–DTC) with the host/source country, or in the absence of such an agreement, an Indian company can invoke provisions of section 91, providing unilateral relief in the event of double taxation.

- Economic double taxation: 'Economic double taxation' happens when the same transaction, item of income or capital is taxed in two or more states but in hands of different persons (because of lack of subject identity)

Question 2

"In addition to allocating the taxing rights and elimination of double taxation, there are various other important considerations while entering into tax treaty". Elucidate.

Answer

In addition to allocating the taxing rights and elimination of double taxation, there are various other important considerations while entering into a tax treaty, as mentioned below:

- Ensuring non-discrimination between residents and non-residents

- Resolution of disputes arising on account of different interpretation of tax treaty by the treaty partner.

- Providing assistance in the collection of the fair and legitimate share of tax.

Further, in addition to above, there are some other principles which must be considered by countries in their tax system –

(i) Equity and fairness: Same income earned by different taxpayers must be taxed at the same rate regardless of the source of income.

(ii) Neutrality and efficiency: Neutrality factor provides that economic processes should not be affected by external factors such as taxation. Neutrality is two-fold.

(a) Capital export neutrality and

(b) Capital import neutrality (CIN).

Capital export neutrality (CEN) provides that business decision must not be affected by tax factors between the country of residence and the target country; whereas CIN provides that the level of tax imposed on non-residents as well as the residents must be similar.

(iii) Promotion of mutual economic relation, trade and investment: In some cases, it is observed that avoidance of double taxation is not the only objective. The other objective may be to give impetus to a country's overall economic growth and development.

Question 3

What is the General Rule of Interpretation under Vienna Convention of Law of Treaties?

Answer

Article 31 of Vienna Convention of Law of Treaties contains the General Rule of Interpretation. It lays down that following general rule of interpretation:

- A treaty shall be interpreted in good faith in accordance with the ordinary meaning to be given to the terms thereof in the context and in the light of its object and purpose.
- The context for the purpose of interpretation of a treaty shall comprise, in addition to the text, including its preamble and annexure

  (a) Any agreement relating to the treaty which was made between all the parties in connection with the conclusion of the treaty;

  (b) Any instrument which was made by one or more parties in connection with the conclusion of the treaty and accepted by the other parties as an instrument related thereto.
- The following shall be taken into account, together with the context in that:

  (a) Any subsequent agreement between the parties regarding the interpretation of the treaty or the application of its provisions;

(b) Any subsequent practice in the application of the treaty which establishes the agreement of the parties regarding its interpretation;

(c) Any relevant rules of international law applicable to relation between the parties.

- A special meaning shall be given to a term if it is established that the parties so intended.

Question 4

What are the Extrinsic Aids to interpretation of a tax treaty?

Answer

A wide range of extrinsic material is permitted to be used in interpretation of tax treaties. According to Article 32 of the Vienna Convention, the supplementary means of interpretation include the preparatory work of the treaty and the circumstances of its conclusion.

According to Prof. Starke, one may resort to following extrinsic aids to interpret a tax treaty provided that clear words are not thereby contradicted:

(i) Interpretative Protocols, Resolutions and Committee Reports, setting out agreed interpretations;

(ii) A subsequent agreement between the parties regarding the interpretation of the treaty or the application of its provisions [Art. 31(3) of the VCLT];

(iii) Subsequent conduct of the state parties, as evidence of the intention of the parties and their conception of the treaty;

(iv) Other treaties, in pari materia (i.e., relating to the same subject matter), in case of doubt.

Provisions in Parallel Tax Treaties

If the language used in two tax treaties (say treaties: X and Y) are same and one treaty is more elaborative or clear in its meaning (say treaty X) can one rely on the interpretation/explanations provided in a treaty X while applying provisions of a treaty Y?

However, the views of the Indian Judiciary are not consistent in this respect. There are contradictory judgments by Indian courts/tribunal in this regard.

International Articles/Essays/Reports

International Article/Essays/Reports are referred as extrinsic aid for interpretation of tax treaties. Like, in case of CIT v. Vishakhapatnam Port Trust (1983) 144 ITR 146 (AP), the High Court obtained "useful material" through international articles.

Cahiers published by International Fiscal Association (IFA), Netherlands

"Cahiers de Droit Fiscal International" is the main publication of the IFA, which is published annually and deals with two major topics each year. Cahiers were relied upon in case of Azadi Bachao Andolan's (supra) case by the Supreme Court.

Protocol

Protocol is like a supplement to the treaty. In many treaties, in order to put certain matters beyond doubt, there is a protocol annexed at the end of the treaty, which clarifies borderline issues.

A protocol is an integral part of a tax treaty and has the same binding force as the main clauses therein.

Protocol to India France treaty contains the Most Favoured Nation Clause. Thus, one must refer to protocol before arriving at any final conclusion in respect of any tax treaty provision.

Preamble

Preamble to a tax treaty could guide in interpretation of a tax treaty. In case of Azadi Bachao Andolan, the Apex Court observed that 'the preamble to the Indo-Mauritius Double Tax Avoidance Treaty recites that it is for the 'encouragement of mutual trade and investment' and this aspect of the matter cannot be lost sight of while interpreting the treaty'. These observations are very significant whereby the Apex Court has upheld 'economic considerations' as one of the objectives of a Tax Treaty.

Mutual Agreement Procedure [MAP]

MAP helps to interpret any ambiguous term/provision through bilateral negotiations. MAP is more authentic than other aids as officials of both countries are in possession of materials/documents exchanged at the time of signing the tax treaty which would clearly indicate the object or purpose of a particular provision. Successful MAPs also serve as precedence in case of subsequent applications.

FUNDAMENTALS OF BEPS

LEARNING OUTCOMES

After studying this chapter, you would be able to -

- ❑ gain a broad understanding of the concept of Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS);
- ❑ appreciate the significance of action plans of BEPS;
- ❑ comprehend and appreciate the provisions incorporated in the Indian tax laws in line with the different Action Plans of BEPS.

7.1 BACKGROUND

Impact of Globalisation

Globalisation has benefited our domestic economies, boosted trade and increased foreign direct investments in many countries. The unrestricted movement of capital and labour, the shift of manufacturing bases from high-cost to low-cost locations, the gradual removal of trade barriers, technological and telecommunication developments, and the ever-increasing importance of managing risks and of developing, protecting and exploiting intellectual property, have had an important impact on the way cross-border activities take place. In this way, it accelerated growth, created jobs and fostered innovation. Globalisation is not new, but the pace of integration of national economies and markets has increased substantially in recent years. It has a significant impact on a country's corporate income tax regimes.

Growth of E-Commerce and consequent aggressive tax planning

Way back in 1920s, the League of Nations recognised that the interaction of domestic tax systems can lead to double taxation with adverse effects on growth and global prosperity. Globally, countries concur on the need to eliminate double taxation and the need to achieve this on the basis of accepted international laws that are clear and predictable, giving certainty to both governments and businesses. International tax law is, therefore, a pillar in facilitating the development of the global economy. With the economy, the enterprises also became more globally integrated. Multi-national enterprises (MNE) now represent a significant proportion of global GDP. Further, intra-firm trade comprises of a growing proportion of overall trade. Also, the increasing significance of the service component of the economy, and of digital products which are deliverable over the Internet, has made it much easier for businesses to locate many productive activities in geographic locations that are distant from the physical location of their customers. These developments have been accompanied by the increasing sophistication of tax planners in identifying and exploiting the legal arbitrage opportunities and the boundaries of acceptable tax planning, thus, encouraging MNEs to minimise their tax burden by resorting to aggressive tax planning.

Adverse Effects of BEPS

Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS) refers to tax planning strategies that exploit gaps and mismatches in tax rules to make profits 'disappear' for tax purposes or to shift profits to locations where there is little or no real activity but the taxes are low, resulting in little or no overall corporate tax being paid. This has become a critical issue since governments have to cope with less revenue and a higher cost to ensure compliance. Moreover, BEPS undermines the integrity of the tax system, as reporting of low corporate taxes is considered to be unfair. In developing countries, the lack of tax revenue leads to significant under-funding of public investment that could help foster economic growth. Further, when tax laws permit businesses to reduce their tax burden by shifting their income away from jurisdictions where income producing activities are conducted, other taxpayers, especially individual taxpayers in that jurisdiction bear a greater share of the burden. This gives rise to tax fairness issues on account of individuals having to bear a higher tax burden. Also, enterprises that operate only in domestic markets, including family-owned businesses or new innovative businesses, may have difficulty competing with MNEs that have the ability to shift their profits across borders to avoid or reduce tax. Fair competition is harmed by the distortions induced by BEPS.

Need for international collaboration to protect tax sovereignty of its countries

Taxation is at the core of countries' sovereignty, but the interaction of domestic tax laws in certain cases leads to gaps and frictions. While developing their domestic tax laws, sovereign states may not adequately take into consideration the effect of other countries' laws. The interaction of separate sets of laws enforced by sovereign countries causes frictions, including potential double taxation for corporations operating in many countries. It also causes gaps, in cases where corporate income is untaxed, both in the country of source and in the country of residence, or is taxed only at nominal rates. In the domestic context, coherence is generally achieved through a principle of matching – a payment that is deductible by the payer is usually taxable in the hands of the recipient, unless explicitly exempted. There is no similar principle of coherence at the international level, which leaves considerable scope for arbitrage by taxpayers, though sovereign states have united to ensure coherence in a narrow field, namely, to prevent double taxation. BEPS relates primarily to instances where the interaction of different tax rules leads to double non-taxation. It also relates to arrangements that achieve no or low taxation by shifting profits away from the jurisdictions where the activities creating those profits take place. International standards have tried to reduce these frictions in a manner that respects tax sovereignty; however, gaps still remain. Therefore, there is a need for countries to collaborate on tax matters so that they are able to get their due share of taxes.

8.2 OVERVIEW OF BEPS

In the background of the above repercussions, in February 2013, the OECD published a report on "Addressing Base Erosion and Profit Shifting" iterating the need for analyzing the issue of tax base erosion and profit shifting by global corporations. The OECD followed it up with publishing draft Action Plan on Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS Action Plan) in July 2013 which came to final fruition in October 2015. The BEPS action plan identifies fifteen actions to address BEPS in a comprehensive manner and sets a deadline to implement those actions.

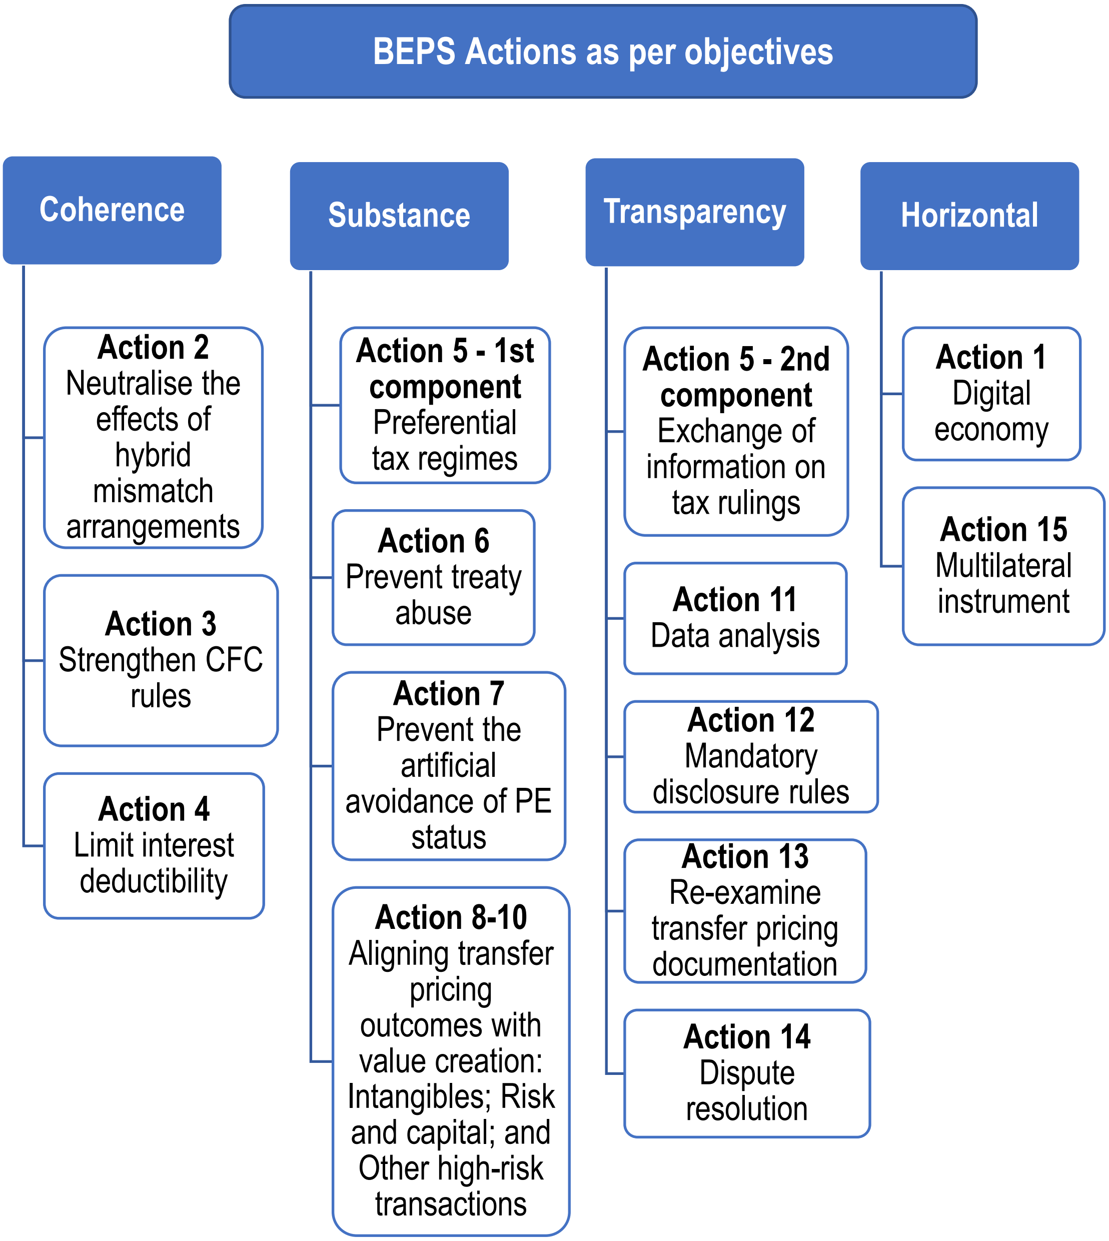
The Action Plans were structured around three fundamental pillars viz.:

(i) Introducing coherence in the domestic rules that affect cross-border activities.

(ii) Reinforcing of 'substance' requirements in existing international standards; Alignment of taxation with location of value creation and economic activity; and

(iii) Improving transparency and tax certainty.

A brief classification of the various action plans based on the fundamental pillars is as under:



BEPS Actions as per objectives

Coherence
- Action 2 Neutralise the effects of hybrid mismatch arrangements
- Action 3 Strengthen CFC rules
- Action 4 Limit interest deductibility

Substance
- Action 5 - 1st component Preferential tax regimes
- Action 6 Prevent treaty abuse
- Action 7 Prevent the artificial avoidance of PE status
- Action 8-10 Aligning transfer pricing outcomes with value creation: Intangibles; Risk and capital; and Other high-risk transactions

Transparency
- Action 5 - 2nd component Exchange of information on tax rulings
- Action 11 Data analysis
- Action 12 Mandatory disclosure rules
- Action 13 Re-examine transfer pricing documentation
- Action 14 Dispute resolution

Horizontal
- Action 1 Digital economy
- Action 15 Multilateral instrument

Coherence

Domestic tax systems are coherent –  tax deductible payments by one person results in income inclusions by the recipient.

International coherence in corporate income taxation - A pre-requisite to complement the standards that prevent double taxation with a new set of standards designed to avoid double non-taxation

Substance

Present tax laws must be modified: To align tax with substance.

Domestic and international tax laws should ideally relate to both income and the economic activity that generates it. - since at times,tax treaty and transfer pricing facilitate the separation of taxable profits from value-creating activities, such as through shell companies that have little or no economic substance.

Concerns in the area of transfer pricing should be addressed within the prevalent system : These areas include returns related to over-capital-isation, risk and intangible assets. Specific rules, either within or beyond the arm's length principle, may be required for this purpose.

Transparency

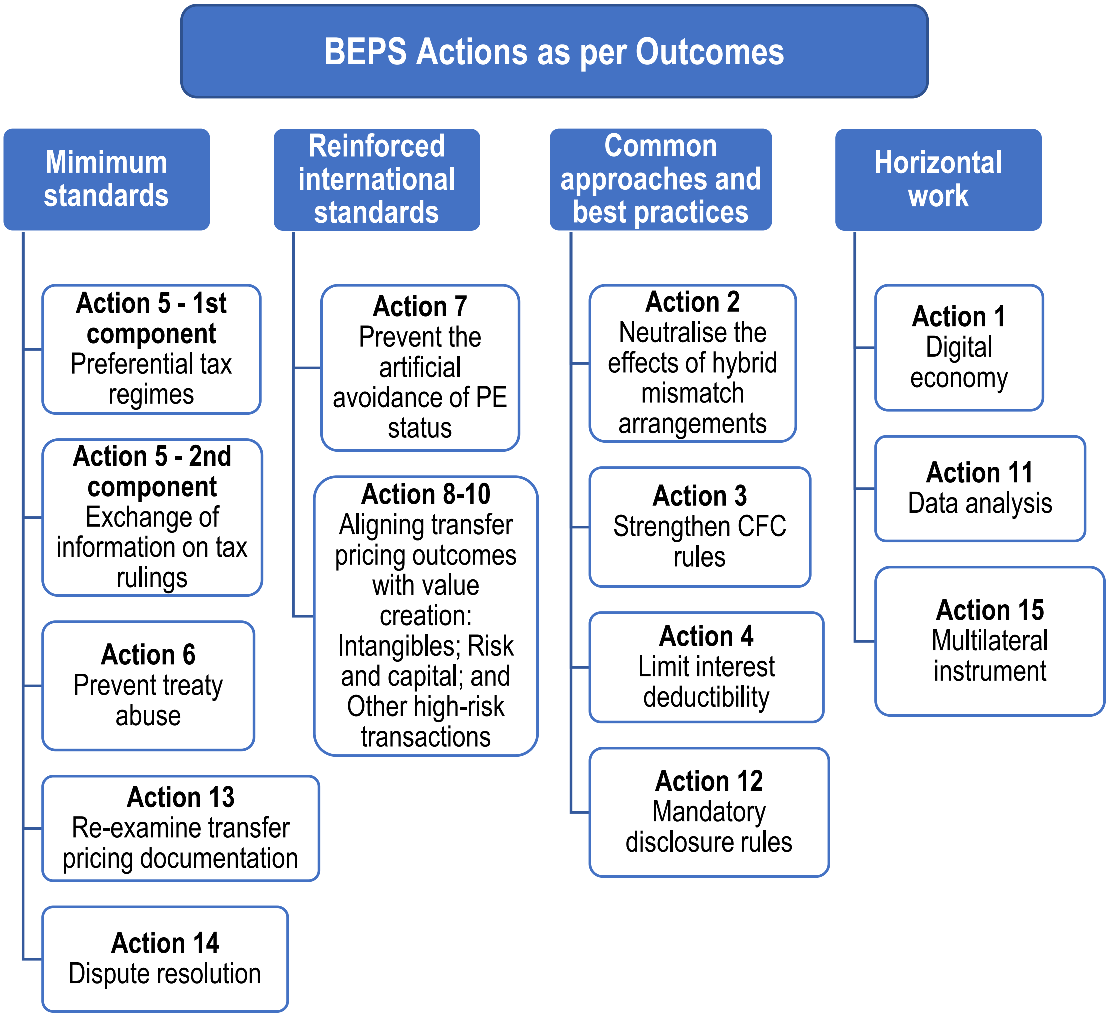
Greater transparency and improved data: Pre-requisites to evaluate the impact and magnitude of BEPS.

Taxpayers to report their aggressive tax planning arrangements and rules about transfer pricing documentation, breaking down the information on a country-by-country basis: Assist governments identify risk areas and focus their audit strategies.

Making dispute resolution mechanisms more effective: To provide businesses with greater certainty and predictability

The BEPS measures range from new minimum standards to a revision of pre-existing international standards, and to common approaches which will facilitate the convergence of national rules and guidance drawing on best practices.

A brief classification of the various action plans based on the basis of outcomes is as under:



BEPS Actions as per Outcomes

Mimimum standards

- Action 5 - 1st component Preferential tax regimes
- Action 5 - 2nd component Exchange of information on tax rulings
- Action 6 Prevent treaty abuse
- Action 13 Re-examine transfer pricing documentation
- Action 14 Dispute resolution

Reinforced international standards

- Action 7 Prevent the artificial avoidance of PE status
- Action 8-10 Aligning transfer pricing outcomes with value creation: Intangibles; Risk and capital; and Other high-risk transactions

Common approaches and best practices

- Action 2 Neutralise the effects of hybrid mismatch arrangements
- Action 3 Strengthen CFC rules
- Action 4 Limit interest deductibility
- Action 12 Mandatory disclosure rules

Horizontal work

- Action 1 Digital economy
- Action 11 Data analysis
- Action 15 Multilateral instrument

An unprecedented amount of interest and participation has been witnessed by OECD with more than sixty countries, both OECD members and G-20 countries, being directly involved as a part of technical groups in the development of congruent international tax standards. The Inclusive Framework on BEPS works to ensure that the international tax framework for MNEs remains relevant for today and the future, thereby promoting economic efficiency and global welfare. It will also ensure that governments continue to efficiently raise revenues not only from traditional but also from digital businesses, both for direct tax and indirect tax purposes.

The summary explanatory statement indicates the level of political commitment by OECD, G20 and other States involved in the 2015 work to the various reports. The OECD has iterated the following terms to indicate the commitment by various participant countries:

New minimum standard - New minimum standard implies application of a new rule to be implemented by all states, since non-implementation may result in negative spill overs (including adverse impact of competitiveness) on other countries. Each of the four BEPS minimum standards [namely, Actions 5, 6, 13 and 14] is subject to peer review in order to ensure timely and accurate implementation and thus safeguard the level playing field. All members of the Inclusive Framework on BEPS commit to implementing the minimum standards, and commit to participating in the peer review.

Revision of a standard which already exists – Existing standards have been updated and will be implemented but with the caveat that all BEPS participants have not endorsed the underlying standards on tax treaties or transfer pricing; and Best practice – A best practice is not a standard but optional recommendation for states to follow. Guidance based on best practices will support those countries proposing to act in the areas of mandatory disclosure initiatives or controlled foreign company (CFC) legislation.

(1) ACTION PLAN 1 – ADDRESSING THE CHALLENGES OF THE DIGITAL ECONOMY

Digital economy: Dissolving link between income-producing activity and physical location

At present, in the digital domain, business may be conducted without regard to national boundaries and may dissolve the link between an income-producing activity and a specific location. Hence, business in digital domain doesn't actually occur in any physical location but instead takes place in "cyberspace." Given the rise of e-commerce, an entire digital economy has emerged in the last decade. Since there is a concept of 'intangibility' attached to the digital model of business, tax authorities often faced challenges rightly bringing to tax the profits earned from a digital business. To address the same, the first action plan of the BEPS project was developed by the OECD which outlines the methods and principles based on which physical and digital economies can be taxed at par. Before the same, physical locations of the servers of such digital businesses were considered to establish the tax jurisdiction in which the profits of digital businesses could be taxed. However, it was observed that servers were therefore placed in tax efficient jurisdictions, even though the main income generation and customers were from other jurisdictions.

Taxation issues in E-Commerce

These new business models have created new tax challenges. The typical taxation issues relating to e-commerce are:

(i) the difficulty in characterizing the nature of payment and establishing a nexus or link between a taxable transaction, activity and a taxing jurisdiction,

(ii) the difficulty of locating the transaction, activity and identifying the taxpayer for income tax purposes.

The digital business, thus, challenges physical presence-based permanent establishment rules. If permanent establishment (PE) principles are to remain effective in the new economy, the fundamental PE components developed for the old economy i.e., place of business, location, and permanency must be reconciled with the new digital reality.

OECD Recommendations under Action Plan 1 of the BEPS project

The The OECD has recommended several options to tackle the direct tax challenges which include:

Modifying the existing Permanent Establishment (PE) rule to provide whether an enterprise engaged in fully de-materialized digital activities would constitute a PE, if it maintained a significant digital presence in another country's economy.

A virtual fixed place of business PE in the concept of PE i.e., creation of a PE when the enterprise maintains a website on a server of another enterprise located in a jurisdiction and carries on business through that website

Imposition of a final withholding tax on certain payments for digital goods or services provided by a foreign e-commerce provider or imposition of a equalisation levy on consideration for certain digital transactions received by a non-resident from a resident or from a non-resident having PE in other contracting state.

Taking into consideration the potential of new digital economy and the rapidly evolving nature of business operations, it becomes necessary to address the challenges in terms of taxation of such digital transactions.

Indian Taxation Regime

Insertion of Chapter VIII in the Finance Act, 2016 on Equalisation Levy to address this challenge

In order to address the challenges of the digital economy, Chapter VIII of the Finance Act, 2016, titled "Equalisation Levy", provides for an equalisation levy of 6% of the amount of consideration for specified services received or receivable by a non-resident not having permanent establishment in India, from a resident in India who carries out business or profession, or from a non-resident having permanent establishment in India.

Meaning of "Specified Service"

(1) Online advertisement;

(2) Any provision for digital advertising space or any other facility or service for the purpose of online advertisement;

Specified Service also includes any other service as may be notified by the Central Government.

Further, in order to reduce burden of small players in the digital domain, it is also provided that no such levy shall be made if the aggregate amount of consideration for specified services received or receivable by a non-resident from a person resident in India or from a non-resident having a permanent establishment in India does not exceed ₹ 1 lakh in any previous year.

"Significant economic presence" to constitute "business connection"

The scope of provisions of section 9(1)(i), prior to amendment by the Finance Act, 2018, were restrictive as it essentially provided for physical presence based nexus rule for taxation of business income of the non-resident in India. Explanation 2 to the said section which defines 'business connection' was also narrow in its scope since it limited the taxability of certain activities or transactions of non-resident to those carried out through a dependent agent. Therefore, emerging business models such as digitized businesses, which do not require physical presence of itself or any agent in India, were not covered within the scope of section 9(1)(i).

In view of the above, the Finance Act, 2018 has amended section 9(1)(i) to provide that 'significant economic presence' in India shall also constitute 'business connection'. For this purpose, "significant economic presence" means-

	Transaction/activity	Condition
(i)	any transaction in respect of any goods, services or property carried out by a non-resident in India including provision of download of data or software in India	the aggregate of payments arising from such transaction or transactions during the previous year exceeds the amount as may be prescribed
(ii)	systematic and continuous soliciting of its business activities or engaging in interaction with users in India through digital means	The users would be of such number as may be prescribed.

Notes:

(i) Only so much of income as is attributable to such transactions or activities shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India.

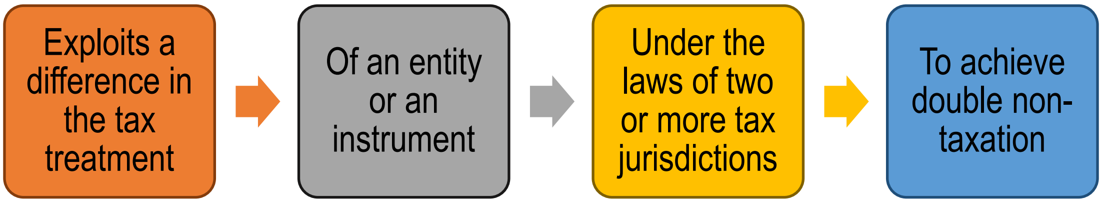
(ii) Such transactions or activities shall constitute significant economic presence in India, whether or not the agreement for such transactions or activities is entered in India or whether or not the non-resident has a residence or place of business in India or renders services in India.

(2) ACTION PLAN 2 - NEUTRALISE THE EFFECTS OF HYBRID MISMATCH ARRANGEMENTS

Before understanding what Action Plan 2 recommends, we must understand what a hybrid mismatch is.

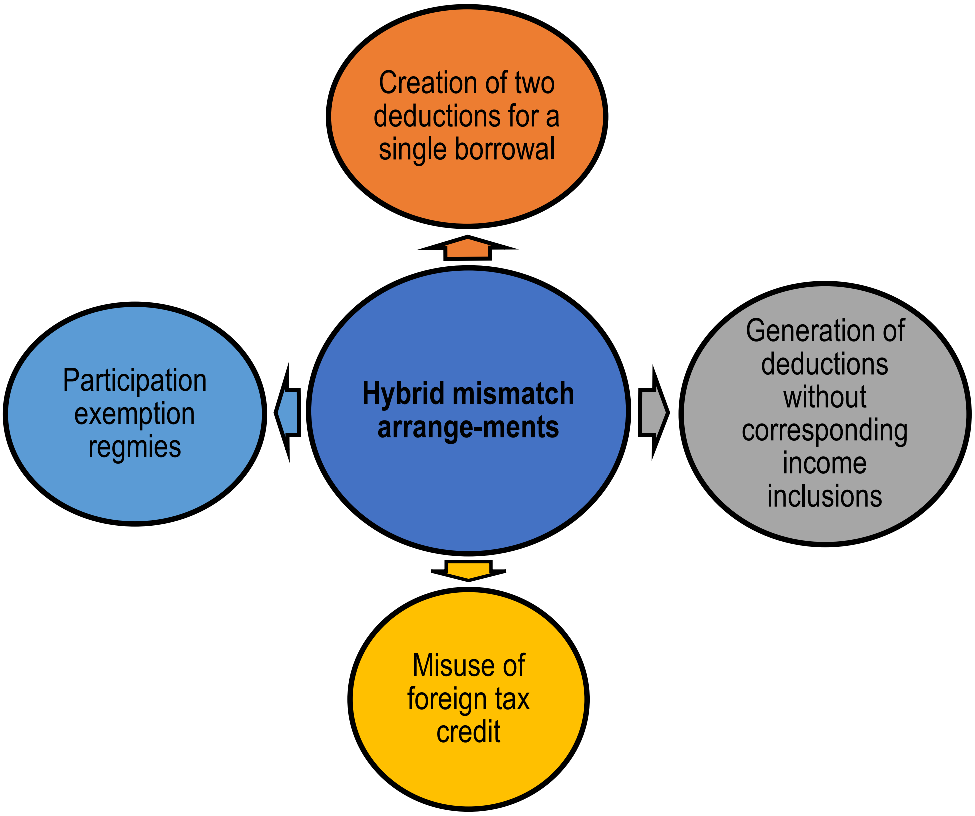
Hybrid Mismatch Arrangement: Meaning

A hybrid mismatch is an arrangement that:



Exploits a difference in the tax treatment → Of an entity or an instrument → Under the laws of two or more tax jurisdictions → To achieve double non-taxation

Hybrid mismatch arrangements are sometimes used to achieve unintended double non-taxation or long-term tax deferral in one or more of the following ways -



Hybrid mismatch arrange-ments

Creation of two deductions for a single borrowal

Generation of deductions without corresponding income inclusions

Misuse of foreign tax credit

Participation exemption regmies

Specific country laws that allow taxpayers to opt for the tax treatment of certain domestic and foreign entities may aid hybrid mismatches. It may not be easy to find out which country has in fact lost tax revenue, since the laws of each country involved have been complied with; however, there is a reduction of the overall tax paid by all parties involved as a whole, which ultimately has an adverse effect on competition, economic efficiency, transparency and fairness.

Recommended general amendments are as follows:

- A rule denying transparency to entities where the non-resident investors' resident country treats the entity as opaque;

Example

Let us say, X Co., a parent company in country X indirectly holds Y Co., an operating company in country Y. Between X Co. and Y Co. is a hybrid entity that is treated as transparent or disregarded for country X tax purposes and as non-transparent for country Y tax purposes. X Co. holds all or almost all equity interest in the hybrid entity which in turn holds all or almost all equity interests in Y Co. The hybrid entity borrows money from a third party and the loan is used to invest equity into Y Co (or to buy the shares in Y Co from either another company of the same group or from an unrelated third party). The hybrid entity pays interest on the loan. Except for the interest, the hybrid entity does not claim any other significant deduction and does not have any significant income.

With respect to Country Y, for tax purposes, Hybrid Entity is subject to corporate income tax. Its interest expenses can be used to offset other country Y group companies' income under the country Y group tax relief regime. On the other hand, country X treats the hybrid entity as transparent or disregarded, with the result that its interest expenses are allocated to X Co, which deducts the interest expense to offset unrelated income. The net effect is that there are two deductions for the same contractual obligation in two different countries.

Therefore, by virtue of rule denying transparency to an entity which is treated as opaque in the subsidiary company's country, the double deduction can be avoided.

- A rule denying an exemption or credit for foreign underlying tax for dividends that are deductible by the payer;

Example

N Co, a company resident in country N is funded by M Co., a company resident in country M with an instrument that qualifies as equity in country M but as debt in country N. A payment made under the instrument would be deductible as interest expense for N Co under country N tax law. The corresponding receipts are treated as exempt dividends under the tax laws of country M. Consequently, deduction is available under the tax laws of country N without a corresponding income inclusion in country M.

Therefore, by virtue of rule denying an exemption or credit for foreign underlying tax for dividends that are deductible by the payer, exemption of such income in country M would not be possible.

- A rule denying a foreign tax credit for withholding tax where that tax is also credited to some other entity; and
- Amendments to CFC and similar regimes attributing local shareholders the income of foreign entities that are treated as transparent under their local law.

Treaty changes - Action Plan 2 recommends a new provision in the case of income earned by a transparent entity. As per the new provision, treaty benefits will only be afforded to so much of the income of the entity as the income of a resident of that State. A specific or general saving rule is proposed so that a State can tax a resident entity generally unrestricted by treaty.

Anti-hybrid rules - The report further issued a series of dedicated domestic anti-hybrid rules which would work in two stages. The primary rules would deny deductions to payers in situations where either

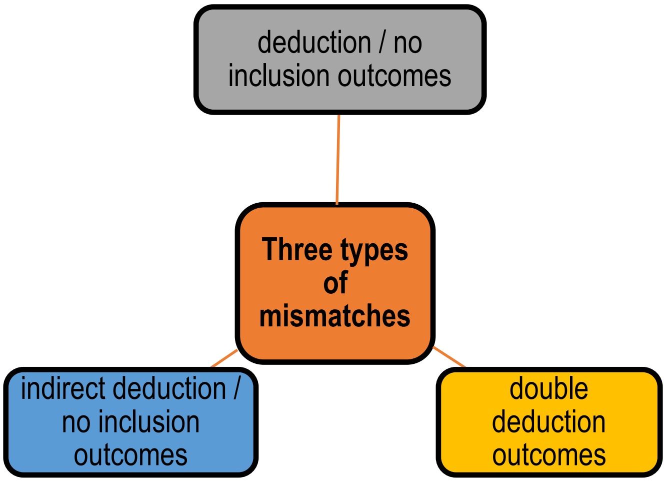
(i) Those payments will not be included in the recipient's ordinary income, or

(ii) The same amount is being simultaneously deducted by another entity.

Treatment of Branch mismatches : 2017 Report

Branch mismatches arise where the ordinary rules for allocating income and expenditure between the branch and head office result in a portion of the net income of the taxpayer escaping the charge to taxation in both the branch and residence jurisdiction. These branch mismatches occur where two jurisdictions take a different view as to the existence of, or the allocation of income or expenditure between, the branch in head office of the same taxpayer.

Unlike hybrid mismatches, which result from conflicts in the legal treatment of entities or instruments, branch mismatches are the result of differences in the way the branch and head office account for a payment made by or to the branch. The 2017 report identifies five basic types of branch mismatch arrangements that give rise to one of three types of mismatches:



deduction / no inclusion outcomes
Three types of mismatches indirect deduction / no inclusion outcomes double deduction outcomes

The 2017 report includes specific recommendations for improvements to domestic law intended to reduce the frequency of branch mismatches as well as targeted branch mismatch rules which adjust the tax consequences in either the residence or branch jurisdiction in order to neutralise the hybrid mismatch without disturbing any of the other tax, commercial or regulatory outcomes.

(3) ACTION PLAN 3 - STRENGTHEN CONTROLLED FOREIGN COMPANY (CFC) RULES

Shifting investment income and passive income to subsidiaries in low tax or no tax jurisdictions: Deferral of home country taxation

Under the tax laws of several countries, a shareholder of a corporation is not taxed on the corporation's income until the income is distributed as a dividend. Therefore, it was common for publicly traded companies to form foreign subsidiaries in tax havens and shift "portable" income to those subsidiaries. Generally, income shifted were mainly investment income (interest and dividends) and passive income (rents and royalties), as well as sales and services income involving related parties. Tax in parent country on this income was avoided until the tax haven country paid a dividend to the shareholding company. This dividend could be avoided indefinitely by loaning the earnings to the shareholder without actually declaring a dividend.

Many countries (where global multi-nationals are based) have high tax rates as compared to certain other countries, which used their low tax rates as a means of attracting inward investment. As a result, when dividends were repatriated from these lower tax countries, the recipient generally suffered additional tax on those profits. Therefore, many companies have a tendency to leave the profits from these low-taxed subsidiaries offshore, with the objective of deferring home country taxation.

Obviously, Governments were disturbed that multinationals based in their countries kept large amounts of profits offshore. In order to address this issue, governments in various countries have introduced legislation aimed at eliminating the benefits of deferral, by currently taxing income in the parent country even when the income has not been repatriated or remitted to that country. These rules are generally referred to as Controlled Foreign Corporation (CFC) rules.

CFC Rules: Addressing BEPS

Controlled foreign company (CFC) rules respond to the risk that taxpayers with a controlling interest in a foreign subsidiary can strip the base of their country of residence and, in some cases, other countries by shifting income into a CFC. Without such rules, CFCs provide opportunities for profit shifting and long-term deferral of taxation.

The OECD Final Report does not propose a minimum standard for controlled foreign company (CFC) regimes. However, OECD regards CFC rules as being important in tackling BEPS and has made a series of best practice recommendations in relation to the ‘building blocks’ of an effective CFC regime. The major reason why the OECD was unable to provide more than best practice was fundamental disagreement over the policy of CFC regimes, in particular whether states should use the regime to protect other states’ tax bases from earnings stripping.

Indian Taxation Regime

- At present, there are no CFC rules in the Income-tax Act, 1961;
- CFC rules formed part of the proposed Direct Tax Code.
- CFC regime has been debated over last many years in India and is one of the last remaining concepts from the DTC to be incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961.
- In order to encourage repatriation of profits, section 115BBD provides a concessional tax rate of 15% (gross basis) on dividends received from a specified foreign company i.e., a foreign company in which the Indian company holds 26% or more in the nominal value of the equity share capital of the company.

(4) ACTION PLAN 4 – INTEREST DEDUCTIONS AND OTHER FINANCIAL PAYMENTS

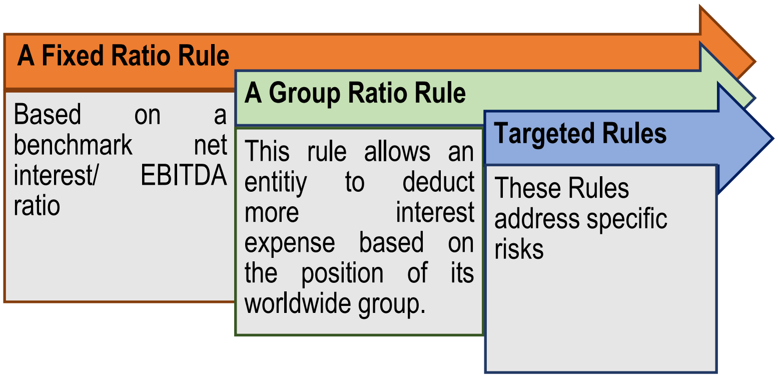
The OECD is concerned that multinational groups are able to erode their tax base (i.e., reduce their taxable profits) with interest expense, for example by:

- Locating third party debt in high tax countries;
- Using intra-group loans to achieve interest deductions in excess of the group's actual third party interest expense;
- Using related party or third party debt to finance the production of exempt or deferred income.

BEPS Action Plan 4 calls for the development of recommendations for the design of domestic rules to prevent tax base erosion through the use of interest expense and other financial payments that are economically equivalent to interest.

Common Approach: Linking an entity's net interest deduction to its level of economic activity

The mobility and fungibility of money enables multinational groups to achieve favourable tax results by adjusting the amount of debt in a group entity. The 2015 Report established a common approach which directly links an entity's net interest deductions to its level of economic activity, based on taxable earnings before interest income and expense, depreciation and amortisation (EBITDA). This approach includes three elements:



A Fixed Ratio Rule

Based on a benchmark net interest/ EBITDA ratio

A Group Ratio Rule

This rule allows an entitiy to deduct more interest expense based on the position of its worldwide group.

Targeted Rules

These Rules address specific risks

Indian Taxation Regime

Section 94B of the Income-tax Act, 1961: Addressing Thin Capitalization

Debt financing of cross-border transactions is often favorable than equity financing for taxpayer. In view of the above, in line with the recommendations of OECD BEPS Action Plan 4, section 94B has been inserted in the Income-tax Act, 1961 by the Finance Act, 2017 to provide a cap on the interest expense that can be claimed by an entity to its associated enterprise. The total interest paid in excess of 30% of its earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization (EBITDA) or interest paid or payable to associated enterprise for that previous year, whichever is less, shall not be deductible.

Applicability

The provision is applicable to an Indian company, or a permanent establishment of a foreign company, being the borrower, who pays interest in respect of any form of debt issued by a non-resident who is an 'associated enterprise' of the borrower. Further, the debt is deemed to be treated as issued by an associated enterprise where it provides an implicit or explicit guarantee to the lender, being a non-associated enterprise, or deposits a corresponding and matching amount of funds with such lender.

Carry forward of disallowed interest expenditure

The provision allows for carry forward of disallowed interest expense for 8 assessment years immediately succeeding the assessment year for which the disallowance is first made and deduction against the income computed under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession" to the extent of maximum allowable interest expenditure.

Threshold limit

In order to target only large interest payments, it provides for a threshold of interest expenditure of ₹ 1 crore in respect of any debt issued by a non-resident associated enterprise exceeding which the provision would be applicable. Banks and Insurance business are excluded from the ambit of the said provisions keeping in view of special nature of these businesses.

(5) ACTION PLAN 5 – COUNTER HARMFUL TAX PRACTICES

The Action 5 Report is one of the four BEPS minimum standards. The minimum standard of the Action 5 Report consists of two parts. One part relates to preferential tax regimes, where a peer review is undertaken to identify features of such regimes that can facilitate base erosion and profit shifting, and therefore have the potential to unfairly impact the tax base of other jurisdictions. The second part includes a commitment to transparency through the compulsory spontaneous exchange of relevant information on taxpayer-specific rulings which, in the absence of such information exchange, could give rise to BEPS concerns.

Indian Taxation Regime

In India, the Finance Act, 2016 has introduced a concessional taxation regime for royalty income from patents for the purpose of promoting indigenous research and development and making India a global hub for research and development. The purpose of the concessional taxation regime is to encourage entities to retain and commercialise existing patents and for developing new innovative patented products. Further, this beneficial taxation regime will incentivise entities to locate the high-value jobs associated with the development, manufacture and exploitation of patents in India.

Section 115BBF of the Income-tax Act, 1961: In line with nexus approach of BEPS Action 5

The nexus approach has been recommended by the OECD under BEPS Action Plan 5. This approach requires attribution and taxation of income arising from exploitation of Intellectual property (IP) in the jurisdiction where substantial research and development (R & D) activities are undertaken instead of the jurisdiction of legal ownership. Accordingly, section 115BBF of the Income-tax Act, 1961 provides that where the total income of the eligible assessee includes any income by way of royalty in respect of a patent developed and registered in India, then such royalty shall be taxable at the rate of 10% (plus applicable surcharge and cess). For this purpose, developed means atleast 75% of the expenditure should be incurred in India by the eligible assessee for any invention in respect of which patent is granted under the Patents Act, 1970.

(6) ACTION PLAN 6 – PREVENTING TREATY ABUSE

Protection against treaty shopping: Minimum Standard

Given the risk to revenues posed by treaty shopping, countries have committed to ensure a minimum level of protection against treaty shopping (the minimum standard). That commitment will require countries to include in their tax treaties an express statement that their common intention is to eliminate double taxation without creating opportunities for non-taxation or reduced taxation through tax evasion or avoidance, including through treaty shopping arrangements.

Countries will implement this common intention by including in their treaties:

(i) the combined approach of Limitation of Benefits (LOB) and Principal Purpose Test (PPT) rule,

(ii) the PPT rule alone, or

(iii) the LOB rule supplemented by a mechanism that would deal with conduit financing arrangements not already dealt with in tax treaties.

Implementation of Action 6 Minimum Standard

The first peer review on the implementation of the Action 6 minimum standard reveals that a large majority of Inclusive Framework members have begun to translate their commitment on treaty shopping into actions and are now in the process of modifying their treaty network. In total, on 30

June 2018, 82 jurisdictions had some treaties that were already compliant with the minimum standard or that were going to shortly comply.

The first peer review shows the efficiency of the Multilateral Instrument (MLI) [For detailed understanding of MLI, refer to discussion in Action Plan 15] in implementing the minimum standard and the other treaty-related BEPS measures. As per OECD, it is by far the preferred tool of Inclusive Framework members for implementing the minimum standard. The majority of the jurisdictions that have signed the MLI have listed almost all their treaties under the MLI.

As on 1st January, 2019, the provisions of the MLI started to take effect with respect to some treaties. For the treaties for which the MLI is effective, tax administration can now use effective treaty provisions to put an end to treaty-shopping.

Indian Tax Regime

LoB clause introduced in India-Mauritius Tax Treaty - On 10th May, 2016, India and Mauritius has signed a protocol amending the India-Mauritius tax treaty at Mauritius. In the said treaty, for the first time, it has been provided that gains from the alienation of shares acquired on or after 1.4.2017 in a company which is a resident of India may be taxed in India. The tax rate on such capital gains arising during the period from 1.4.2017-31.3.2019 should, however, not exceed 50% of the tax rate applicable on such capital gains in India. A Limitation of Benefit (LOB) Clause has been introduced which provides that a resident of a Contracting State shall not be entitled to the benefits of 50% of the tax rate applicable in transition period if its affairs are arranged with the primary purpose of taking advantage of concessional rate of tax. Further, a shell or a conduit company claiming to be a resident of a Contracting State shall not be entitled to this benefit. A shell or conduit company has been defined as any legal entity falling within the meaning of resident with negligible or nil business operations or with no real and continuous business activities carried out in that Contracting State. A resident of a Contracting State is deemed to be a shell/conduit company if its expenditure on operations in that Contracting State is less than Mauritian rupee 15,00,000 or Indian ₹ 7,00,000 in the respective Contracting State as the case may be, in the immediately preceding period of 12 months from the date the gains arise.

LoB clause in India-Singapore Tax Treaty - On similar lines, India and Singapore has signed a protocol amending the India-Singapore tax treaty. Capital gains on alienation of shares would be taxable in a similar manner as laid out in India-Mauritius tax treaty, subject to LoB clause. The transition period benefit is also similar to that contained in India-Mauritius Tax Treaty. In respect of shares acquired after 1.4.2017 and sold before 1.4.2019, the expenditure test needs to be met for the 12 month period immediately preceding the date of transfer.

(7) ACTION PLAN 7 – PREVENT THE ARTIFICIAL AVOIDANCE OF PERMANENT ESTABLISHMENT (PE) STATUS

This report includes changes to the definition of permanent establishment (PE) in the OECD Model Tax Convention that will address strategies used to avoid having a taxable presence in a country under tax treaties.

These changes will ensure that where the activities that an intermediary exercises in a country are intended to result in the regular conclusion of contracts to be performed by a foreign enterprise, that enterprise will be considered to have a taxable presence in that country unless the intermediary is performing these activities in the course of an independent business. The changes will also restrict the application of a number of exceptions to the definition of permanent establishment to activities that are preparatory or auxiliary nature and will ensure that it is not possible to take advantage of these exceptions by the fragmentation of a cohesive operating business into several small operations; they will also address situations where the exception applicable to construction sites is circumvented through the splitting-up contracts between closely related enterprises.

Thus, the following steps have been advocated:

- Reworking exceptions to PE definition – An anti-fragmentation rule to be adopted to aggregate all activities carried by an enterprise in a state, along with activities undertaken by its closely related entities undertaking business operation that create tax mismatch and are cohesive in nature. The above test can also be applied to understand whether the activities undertaken by an enterprise in a state are 'preparatory or auxiliary'.

- Analyzing arrangements entered through contractual agreements –A Commissionnaire arrangement may be broadly defined as an arrangement through which a person sells products in a State in its own name but on behalf of a foreign enterprise that is the owner of these products. Through such an arrangement, a foreign enterprise is able to sell its products in a State without technically having a permanent establishment to which such sales may be attributed for tax purposes and without, therefore, being taxable in that State on the profits derived from such sales. Since the person that concludes the sales does not own the products that it sells, that person cannot be taxed on the profits derived from such sales and may only be taxed on the remuneration that it receives for its services (usually a commission). Commissionnaire arrangements have been a major cause of concern for tax administrations in many countries.

Progress in implementation of BEPS Action Plan 7

The changes to the PE definitions were integrated in the 2017 OECD Model Tax Convention and in Part IV of the MLI (Articles 12 to 15). The Multilateral Instrument (MLI) is a flexible instrument that allows jurisdictions to adopt BEPS treaty-related measures to counter BEPS and strengthen their treaty network. The MLI was signed by nearly 90 jurisdictions and about half of the MLI Signatories have so far adopted the MLI articles that implement the permanent establishment changes [For detailed understanding of MLI, refer to discussion under Action 15].

(8) ACTION PLAN 8-10 - TRANSFER PRICING OUTCOMES IN LINE WITH VALUE CREATION/INTANGIBLES/RISK AND CAPITAL AND OTHER HIGH-RISK TRANSACTIONS

The aforesaid Action plans represent the OECD's work on transfer pricing which has been a core focus of the BEPS Action Plans. The specific Actions focus on Intangibles, Risks and capital and other high-risk transactions. These are the hard areas of transfer pricing and are summarized together in the Final Report 'Aligning Transfer Pricing Outcomes with Value Creation'.

Clarification and Strengthening of existing standards on transfer pricing

Transfer pricing rules, which are set out in Article 9 of tax treaties based on the OECD and UN Model Tax Conventions and the Transfer Pricing Guidelines, are used to determine on the basis of the ALP the conditions, including the price, for transactions within an MNE group. The existing standards in this area have been clarified and strengthened, including the guidance on the arm's length principle and an approach to ensure the appropriate pricing of hard-to-value-intangibles has been agreed upon within the arm's length principle. The work has focused on three key areas.

Action Plan	Details
8	Addresses transfer pricing issues relating to controlled transactions involving intangibles, since intangibles are by definition mobile and they are generally difficult-to-value. Misallocation of the profits generated by valuable intangibles is a significant cause of BEPS.
9	Contractual allocations of risk are respected only when they are supported by actual decision-making and thus exercising control over these risks. Moreover, Action 9 addresses the level of returns to funding provided by a capital-rich MNE group member, where those returns do not correspond to the level of activity undertaken by the funding company.
10	This action focuses on other high-risk areas, which include: the scope for addressing profit allocations resulting from controlled transactions which are not commercially rational, the scope for targeting the use of transfer pricing methods in a way which results in diverting profits from the most economically important activities of the MNE group, and the use of certain type of payments between members of the MNE group (such as management fees and head office expenses) to erode the tax base in the absence of alignment with the value-creation.

OECD Transfer Pricing Guidelines

In addition, the OECD Transfer Pricing Guidelines released in 2017 provide guidance on the application of the "arm's length principle", which represents the international consensus on the valuation, for income tax purposes, of cross-border transactions between associated enterprises. In today's economy where multinational enterprises play an increasingly prominent role, transfer pricing continues to be high on the agenda of tax administrations and taxpayers alike. Governments need to ensure that the taxable profits of MNEs are not artificially shifted out of their jurisdiction and that the tax base reported by MNEs in their country reflects the economic activity undertaken therein and taxpayers need clear guidance on the proper application of the arm's length principle.

(9) ACTION PLAN 11 – MEASURING AND MONITORING BEPS

The adverse fiscal and economic impacts of BEPS have been the focus of the OECD/G20 BEPS Project since its inception. While anecdotal evidence has shown that tax planning activities of some multinational enterprises (MNEs) take advantage of the mismatches and gaps in the international tax rules, separating taxable profits from the underlying value-creating activity, The Addressing Base Erosion and Profit Shifting report (OECD, 2013) recognised that the scale of the negative global impacts on economic activity and government revenues have been uncertain.

Although measuring the scale of BEPS proves challenging given the complexity of BEPS and the serious data limitations, the fiscal effects of BEPS are significant. BEPS causes other adverse economic effects, including tilting the playing field in favour of tax-aggressive MNEs, exacerbating the corporate debt bias, misdirecting foreign direct investment, and reducing the financing of needed public infrastructure.

Indicators of BEPS activity

Six indicators of BEPS activity highlight BEPS behaviour using different sources of data, employing different metrics, and examining different BEPS channels. When combined and presented as a dashboard of indicators, they confirm the existence of BEPS, and its continued increase in scale in recent years.

(i) The profit rates of MNE affiliates located in lower-tax countries are higher than their group's average worldwide profit rate. For example, the profit rates reported by MNE affiliates located in lower-tax countries are twice as high as their group's worldwide profit rate on average.

(ii) The effective tax rates paid by large MNE entities are estimated to be lower than similar enterprises with only domestic operations - This tilts the playing-field against local businesses and non-tax aggressive MNEs, although some of this may be due to MNEs' greater utilisation of available country tax preferences.

(iii) Foreign direct investment (FDI) is increasingly concentrated - FDI in countries with net FDI to GDP ratios of more than 200% increased from 38 times higher than all other countries in 2005 to 99 times higher in 2012.

(iv) The separation of taxable profits from the location of the value creating activity is particularly clear with respect to intangible assets, and the phenomenon has grown rapidly - For example, the ratio of the value of royalties received to spending on research and development in a group of low-tax countries was six times higher than the average ratio for all other countries, and has increased three-fold between 2009 and 2012.

(v) Royalties received by entities located in these low-tax countries accounted for 3% of total royalties - This provides evidence of the existence of BEPS, though not a direct measurement of the scale of BEPS.

(vi) Debt from both related and third-parties is more concentrated in MNE affiliates in higher statutory tax-rate countries. The interest-to-income ratio for affiliates of the largest global MNEs in higher-tax rate countries is almost three times higher than their MNE's worldwide third-party interest-to-income ratio.

(10) ACTION PLAN 12 – DISCLOSURE OF AGGRESSIVE TAX PLANNING ARRANGEMENTS

A significant challenge faced by tax authorities worldwide is the lack of timely, comprehensive and relevant information on aggressive tax planning strategies. Timely access to such information would facilitate quick response to tax risks through informed risk assessment, audits, or changes to legislation or regulations. BEPS Action Plan 12 recognises the advantages of tools designed to facilitate the information flow on tax risks to tax administrations and tax policy makers. The Report provides a modular framework for guidance drawn from best practices for use by countries without mandatory disclosure rules to design a regime that suits their requirement to get early information on potentially aggressive or abusive tax planning schemes and their users. The recommendations in this Report do not represent a minimum standard and countries can decide whether or not to introduce mandatory disclosure regimes. Where a country opts for mandatory disclosure rules, the recommendations provide the necessary flexibility to balance a country's need for better and more timely information with the compliance burdens for taxpayers. It also sets out specific best practice recommendations for rules targeting international tax schemes, as well as for the development and implementation of more effective information exchange and co-operation between tax administrations.

(11) ACTION PLAN 13 – RE-EXAMINE TRANSFER PRICING DOCUMENTATION

This report contains revised standards for transfer pricing documentation incorporating a master file, local file, and a template for country-by-country reporting of revenues, profits, taxes paid and certain measures of economic activity. The revised standardised approach requires taxpayers to articulate consistent transfer pricing positions and will provide tax administrations with useful information to assess transfer pricing and other BEPS risks, make determinations about where audit resources can most effectively be deployed, and, in the event audits are called for, provide information to commence and target audit enquiries. Country-by-country reports will be disseminated through an automatic government-to-government exchange mechanism. The implementation package included in this report sets out guidance to ensure that the reports are provided in a timely manner, that confidentiality is preserved and that the information is used appropriately, by incorporating model legislation and model Competent Authority Agreements forming the basis for government-to-government exchanges of the reports.

Requirements as per OECD report on Action 13 of BEPS Action Plan

The OECD report provides for:

(a) revised standards for transfer pricing documentation; and

(b) a template for country-by-country reporting of income, earnings, taxes paid and certain measure of economic activity.

Three-tier structure mandated by BEPS

The BEPS report recommends that countries adopt a standardised approach to transfer pricing documentation; it mandates the following three-tier structure:-

	Document	Information
(1)	Master File	Standardised information relevant for all multinational enterprises (MNE) group members. Master file requires MNEs to provide tax administrations with high-level information regarding their global business operations and transfer pricing policies. The master file is to be delivered by MNEs directly to local tax administrations.
(2)	Local file	Local file requires maintaining of transactional information specific to each country in detail covering related-party transactions and the amounts involved in those transactions. In addition, relevant financial information regarding specific transactions, a comparability analysis and analysis of the selection and application of the most appropriate transfer pricing method should also be captured. The local file is to be delivered by MNEs directly to local tax administrations.
(3)	Country-by-country report	The BEPS Action 13 report provides a template for multinational enterprises (MNEs) to report annually and for each tax jurisdiction in which they do business the information set out therein. This report is called the Country-by-Country (CbC) Report. To facilitate the implementation of the CbC Reporting standard, the BEPS Action 13 report includes a CbC Reporting Implementation Package which consists of (i) model legislation which could be used by countries to require the ultimate parent entity of an MNE group to file the CbC Report in its jurisdiction of residence including backup filing requirements and (ii) three model Competent Authority Agreements that could be used to facilitate implementation of the exchange of CbC Reports, respectively based on the: a) Multilateral Convention on Administrative Assistance in Tax Matters; b) Bilateral tax conventions; and c) Tax Information Exchange Agreements (TIEAs).

		Following information are required in the CbC report: Information relating to the global allocation of the MNE's income and taxes paid; and Indicators of the location of economic activity within the MNE group. CBC report requires MNEs to provide an annual report of economic indicators viz. the amount of revenue, profit before income tax, income tax paid and accrued in relation to the tax jurisdiction in which they do business. CBC reports are required to be filed in the jurisdiction of tax residence of the ultimate parent entity, being subsequently shared between other jurisdictions through automatic exchange of information mechanism.

Advantages of the three-tier structure [as per BEPS Report]:

(a) Taxpayers will be required to articulate consistent transfer pricing positions;

(b) Tax administrations would get useful information to assess transfer pricing risks;

(c) Tax administrations would be able to make determinations about where their resources can most effectively be deployed, and, in the event audits are called for, provide information to commence and target audit enquiries.

Indian Taxation Regime

Transfer Pricing provisions under the Income-tax Act, 1961

Chapter X of the Income-tax Act, 1961 comprising sections 92 to 92F contain provisions relating to transfer pricing regime.

Section 92D requires maintenance of prescribed information and document relating to the international transaction and specified domestic transaction by every person who has entered into an international transaction. Also, a constituent entity of an international group is required to keep and maintain the prescribed information and document in respect of the international group.

Implementation of international consensus in India

India is one of the active members of BEPS initiative and part of international consensus. For the purpose of implementing the international consensus, a specific reporting regime in respect of CbC reporting and also the master file has been incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961. The essential elements have been incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961 while remaining aspects would be dealt with in detail in the Income-tax Rules, 1962.

Note – Refer to Chapter 1 Transfer Pricing, wherein the following have been discussed at length -

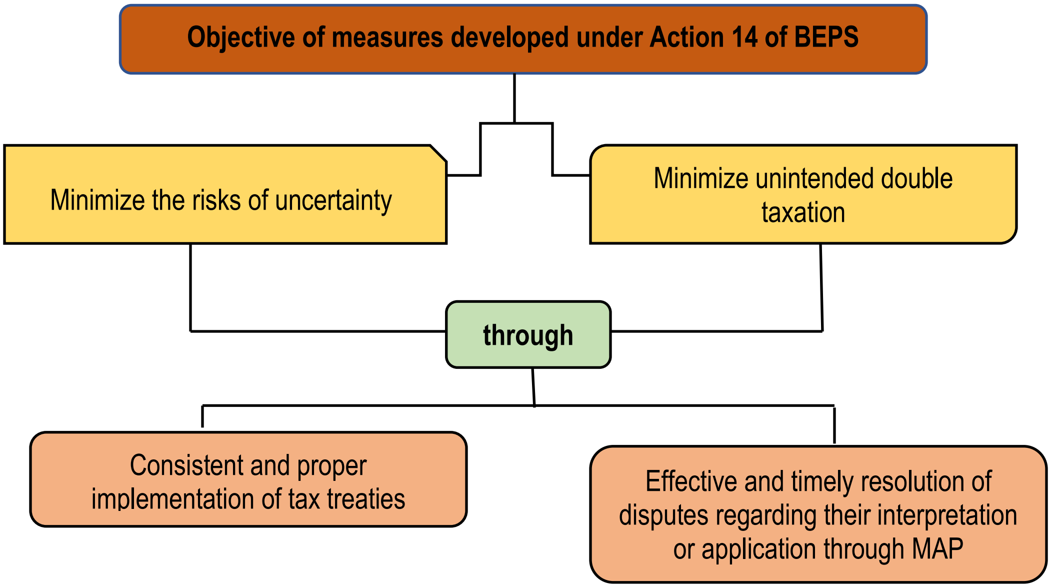
(i) Elements relating to CbC reporting requirement and related matters which have been incorporated in section 286 of the Income-tax Act, 1961

(ii) Maintenance and furnishing of Master file: Consequent provisions incorporated in section 92D of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

Threshold limit of consolidated group revenue for applicability of CbC reporting requirement

The CbC reporting requirement for a reporting year does not apply unless the consolidated revenues of the preceding accounting year of the group, based on consolidated financial statement, exceeds a threshold to be prescribed. The current international consensus is for a threshold of € 750 million equivalent in local currency. This threshold for total consolidated group revenue of the international group prescribed under section 286 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 read with Rule 10DB of the Income-tax Rules, 1962 is ₹ 5,500 crores.

(12) ACTION PLAN 14 – MAKING DISPUTE RESOLUTION MORE EFFECTIVE



Objective of measures developed under Action 14 of BEPS
Minimize the risks of uncertainty
Minimize unintended double taxation through
Consistent and proper implementation of tax treaties
Effective and timely resolution of disputes regarding their interpretation or application through MAP

Eliminating opportunities for cross-border tax avoidance and evasion and the effective and efficient prevention of double taxation are significant to developing an international tax system that facilitates economic growth and a buoyant global economy. Countries concur that the measures introduced to address BEPS pursuant to the BEPS Action Plans should not result in unnecessary uncertainty for compliant taxpayers and in unintended double taxation. Improving dispute resolution mechanisms is, therefore, a critical component of the work on BEPS issues.

(13) ACTION PLAN 15 – DEVELOPING A MULTILATERAL INSTRUMENT

MLI's role in tackling BEPS

Abuse of tax treaties is an important source of BEPS. The MLI helps the fight against BEPS by implementing the tax treaty-related measures developed through the BEPS project in existing bilateral tax treaties in a synchronized and efficient manner. These measures will prevent treaty abuse, improve dispute resolution, prevent the artificial avoidance of permanent establishment status and neutralize the effects of hybrid mismatch arrangements.

Action 15 of the BEPS Action Plan provides for an analysis of the tax and public international law issues related to the development of a multilateral instrument to enable countries that wish to do so to implement measures developed in the course of the work on BEPS and amend bilateral tax treaties.

Formation of ad hoc Group to develop MLI

Based on this analysis, a mandate for the formation of an ad hoc Group to develop a multilateral instrument on tax treaty measures to tackle BEPS, was approved by the OECD Committee on Fiscal Affairs and endorsed by the G20 Finance Ministers and Central Bank Governors in February 2015.

In line with Action 15 report, an ad-hoc group was formed with a pre-defined purpose of development of such Multilateral Instrument (MLI) and that adopted the text of the Convention and accompanying Explanatory Statement in November 2016. India was part of the Ad Hoc Group of more than 100 countries and jurisdictions from G20, OECD, BEPS associates and other interested countries, which worked on an equal footing on the finalization of the text of the Multilateral Convention, starting May 2015. The text of the Convention and the accompanying Explanatory Statement was adopted by the Ad hoc Group on 24th November 2016.

Signatories to the MLI

Once drafted, the said document was thereafter kept open for signatures from 31 December 2016. In the first signing ceremony of the MLI on 7th June, 2017, 67 countries have signed the MLI and 9 countries have expressed their intention to sign the instrument. As on 27th September, 2018, 84 countries have signed the MLI and 6 countries have expressed their intention to sign the instrument.

At the time of signature, signatories submitted a list of their tax treaties in force that they would like to designate as Covered Tax Agreements (CTAs), i.e. to be amended through the MLI.

The Convention enables all signatories, inter alia, to meet treaty-related minimum standards that were agreed as part of the Final BEPS package, including the minimum standard for the prevention of treaty abuse under Action 6.

Features of MLI

The Multilateral Convention is, thus, an outcome of the OECD / G20 Project to tackle Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (the "BEPS Project") i.e., tax planning strategies that exploit gaps and mismatches in tax rules to artificially shift profits to low or no-tax locations where there is little or no economic activity, resulting in little or no overall corporate tax being paid.

The MLI modifies tax treaties that are “Covered Tax Agreements”. A Covered Tax Agreement is an agreement for the avoidance of double taxation that is in force between Parties to the MLI and for which both Parties have made a notification that they wish to modify the agreement using the MLI.

The MLI is a flexible instrument which will modify tax treaties according to a jurisdiction's policy preferences with respect to the implementation of the tax treaty-related BEPS measures. The MLI provides for different types of flexibility:

(i) jurisdictions can choose amongst alternative provisions in certain MLI articles;

(ii) jurisdictions can choose to apply optional provisions (for instance, the provisions on mandatory binding arbitration);

(iii) jurisdictions may also choose to reserve the right not to apply MLI provisions (to opt out through a "reservation") with respect to all of their Covered Tax Agreements or with respect to a subset of their Covered Tax Agreements. Jurisdictions only have the possibility to opt out of provisions that do not reflect a BEPS minimum standard, with the possibility to withdraw their reservation (and opt in) later.

Amendment of MLI position

The provisional MLI position of each Signatory indicates the tax treaties it intends to cover, the options it has chosen and the reservations it has made. Signatories can amend their MLI position until ratification. Even after ratification, parties can choose to opt in with respect to optional provisions or to withdraw reservations.

Indian Taxation Regime

The Multilateral Convention to implement tax treaty related measures to prevent Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS) was signed by India at Paris, France on 7th June, 2017. India had ratified the said Convention and had deposited the instrument of ratification along-with the list of Covered Tax Agreements, reservations and notifications (India's Position under the said Convention) to the Depositary on 25th June, 2019. The date of entry into force of the said Convention for India is 1st October, 2019, being the first day of the month following the expiry of a period of three calendar months beginning on 25th June, 2019, being the date of deposit by India of the instrument of ratification.

The provisions of the said Convention would have effect in India with respect to a Covered Tax Agreement in accordance with the provisions of Article 35 of the said Convention. Accordingly, in exercise of the powers conferred by section 90(1) of the Income-tax Act, 1961, the Central Government has, vide Notification No.57/2019 dated 9.8.2019 (available at https://www.incometaxindia.gov.in/communications/notification/notification57_2019.pdf*), notified that the provisions of the said Convention shall be given effect to in the Union of India, in accordance with India's Position under the said Convention, as set out in the Annexure thereto.*

As per Article 35 of the MLI, the provisions of this Convention shall have effect in each Contracting Jurisdiction with respect to a Covered Tax Agreement:

a) with respect to taxes withheld at source on amounts paid or credited to non-residents, where the event giving rise to such taxes occurs on or after the first day of the next calendar year that begins on or after the latest of the dates on which this Convention enters into force for each of the Contracting Jurisdictions to the Covered Tax Agreement; and

b) with respect to all other taxes levied by that Contracting Jurisdiction, for taxes levied with respect to taxable periods beginning on or after the expiration of a period of six calendar months (or a shorter period, if all Contracting Jurisdictions notify the Depositary that they intend to apply such shorter period) from the latest of the dates on which this Convention enters into force for each of the Contracting Jurisdictions to the Covered Tax Agreement.

Therefore, the earliest date when the provisions of this Convention can take effect in India is 1st April, 2020 (six months from 1st October, 2019, the date of entry into force for India)[1].

Resources: The discussion on BEPS Action Plans contained in this chapter is essentially based on the Action Plans developed in the context of the OECD/G20 BEPS Project and available at the website http://www.oecd.org/tax/beps/beps-actions.htm

[1] Since the provisions of this Convention takes effect only from F.Y.2020-21, the same have not been discussed in detail in this Study Material.

BEPS Action Plan 3: Strengthen CFC rules
OECD Recommendation	Provisions incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961
CFCs are foreign subsidiaries in tax havens in which the taxpayer has controlling interest. Since tax is generally levied on distributed dividend, tax in parent country could be avoided until the tax haven country actually paid dividend to the shareholders. The OECD regards CFC Rules as important in tackling BEPS and has made a series of best practice recommendations in relation to the building blocks of an effective CFC regime. BEPS Action Plan 6: Preventing treaty abuse
OECD Minimum Standard	LoB clause incorporated in Indian Tax Treaties
Given the risk to revenues posed by treaty shopping, countries have committed to ensure a minimum level of protection against treaty shopping by including in their treaties: (i) the combined approach of Limitation of Benefits (LOB) and Principal Purpose Test (PPT) rule, (ii) the PPT rule alone, or (iii) the LOB rule supplemented by a mechanism that would deal with conduit financing arrangements not already dealt with in tax treaties	LoB clause in India-Mauritius Tax Treaty • On 10.5.2016, the India-Mauritius tax treaty was amended and for the first time, it has been provided that gains from the alienation of shares acquired on or after 1.4.2017 in a company which is a resident of India may be taxed in India. • The tax rate on such capital gains arising from 1.4.2017-31.3.2019 should, however, not exceed 50% of the applicable tax rate on capital gains in India. • LOB Clause provides that a resident of a Contracting State shall not be entitled to the benefits of 50% of the tax rate applicable in transition period if its affairs are arranged with the primary purpose of taking advantage of concessional rate of tax. • A shell or a conduit Co. claiming to be a resident of a Contracting State shall not be entitled to this benefit. • A shell or conduit Co. is any legal entity falling within the meaning of resident with negligible or nil business operations or with no real and continuous business activities carried out in that Contracting State. LoB clause in India-Singapore Tax Treaty • The India-Singapore tax treaty has been amended to provide that capital gains on alienation of shares would be taxable in a similar manner as laid out in India-Mauritius tax treaty, subject to LoB clause. • The transition period benefit is also similar to that contained in India-Mauritius Tax Treaty.

BEPS Action Plan 15 Developing a Multilateral Instrument (MLI)
BEPS Report	Entry into Force of MLI
The MLI helps fight against BEPS by implementing tax treaty-related measures developed through the BEPS Project in existing bilateral treaties in a synchronized and efficient manner to – • prevent treaty abuse, • improve dispute resolution • prevent the artificial avoidance of PE status • neutralize the effects of hybrid mismatch arrangements. The MLI is flexible instrument which modifies tax treaties that are “Covered Tax Agreements”. A Covered Tax Agreement is an agreement for the avoidance of double taxation that is in force between Parties to the MLI and for which both Parties have made a notification that they wish to modify the agreement using the MLI.	➢ The Multilateral Convention to implement tax treaty related measures to prevent Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS) was signed by India at Paris, France on 7th June, 2017. ➢ India had ratified the said Convention and had deposited the instrument of ratification along-with the list of Covered Tax Agreements, reservations and notifications (India’s Position under the said Convention) to the Depositary on 25th June, 2019. ➢ The date of entry into force of the said Convention for India is 1st October, 2019, being the first day of the month following the expiry of a period of three calendar months beginning on 25th June, 2019, being the date of deposit by India of the instrument of ratification. ➢ The earliest date when the provisions of this Convention can take effect in India is 1st April, 2020 (six months from 1st October, 2019, the date of entry into force for India)

EXERCISE

Question 1

What do you understand by base erosion and profit shifting? Describe briefly its adverse effects.

Answer

Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS) refers to tax planning strategies that exploit gaps and mismatches in tax rules to make profits 'disappear' for tax purposes or to shift profits to locations where there is little or no real activity but the taxes are low, resulting in little or no overall corporate tax being paid.

Adverse Effects of BEPS:

(1) Governments have to cope with less revenue and a higher cost to ensure compliance.

(2) In developing countries, the lack of tax revenue leads to significant under-funding of public investment that could help foster economic growth.

(3) BEPS undermines the integrity of the tax system, as reporting of low corporate taxes is considered to be unfair. When tax laws permit businesses to reduce their tax burden by shifting their income away from jurisdictions where income producing activities are conducted, other taxpayers, especially individual taxpayers in that jurisdiction bear a greater share of the burden. This gives rise to tax fairness issues on account of individuals having to bear a higher tax burden.

(4) Enterprises that operate only in domestic markets, including family-owned businesses or new innovative businesses, may have difficulty competing with MNEs that have the ability to shift their profits across borders to avoid or reduce tax. Fair competition is harmed by the distortions induced by BEPS.

Question 2

What are the significant OECD Recommendations under Action Plan 1 of BEPS? Which recommendation has been adopted in Indian tax laws?

Answer

The OECD has recommended several options to tackle the direct tax challenges which include:

(1) Modifying the existing Permanent Establishment (PE) rule to provide that whether an enterprise engaged in fully de-materialized digital activities would constitute a PE, if it maintained a significant digital presence in another country's economy.

(2) A virtual fixed place of business PE in the concept of PE i.e., creation of a PE when the enterprise maintains a website on a server of another enterprise located in a jurisdiction and carries on business through that website.

(3) Imposition of a final withholding tax on certain payments for digital goods or services provided by a foreign e-commerce provider or imposition of a equalisation levy on consideration for certain digital transactions received by a non-resident from a resident or from a non-resident having permanent establishment in other contracting state.

Taking into consideration the potential of new digital economy and the rapidly evolving nature of business operations, it becomes necessary to address the challenges in terms of taxation of such digital transactions.

In order to address these challenges, Chapter VIII of the Finance Act, 2016, titled "Equalisation Levy", provides for an equalisation levy of 6% of the amount of consideration for specified services received or receivable by a non-resident not having permanent establishment in India, from a resident in India who carries out business or profession, or from a non-resident having permanent establishment in India.

Meaning of "Specified Service":

(1) Online advertisement;

(2) Any provision for digital advertising space or any other facility or service for the purpose of online advertisement;

Specified Service also includes any other service as may be notified by the Central Government.

Further, in order to reduce burden of small players in the digital domain, it is also provided that no such levy shall be made if the aggregate amount of consideration for specified services received or receivable by a non-resident from a person resident in India or from a non-resident having a permanent establishment in India does not exceed ₹ 1 lakh in any previous year.

Note: The Finance Act, 2018 has amended section 9(1)(i) to provide that significant economic presence would also constitute business connection from A.Y.2019-20. However, Rules in this regard are yet to be notified

Question 3

Discuss the provision incorporated in the Income-tax Act, 1961 in line with the OECD recommendations under Action Plan 4 of BEPS.

Answer

In line with the recommendations of OECD BEPS Action Plan 4, section 94B has been inserted in the Income-tax Act, 1961 by the Finance Act, 2017 to provide a cap on the interest expense that can be claimed by an entity to its associated enterprise. The total interest paid in excess of 30% of its earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization (EBITDA) or interest paid or payable to associated enterprise for that previous year, whichever is less, shall not be deductible.

The provision is applicable to an Indian company, or a permanent establishment of a foreign company, being the borrower, who pays interest in respect of any form of debt issued by a non-resident who is an 'associated enterprise' of the borrower. Further, the debt is deemed to be treated as issued by an associated enterprise where it provides an implicit or explicit guarantee to the lender, being a non-associated enterprise, or deposits a corresponding and matching amount of funds with such lender.

The provision allows for carry forward of disallowed interest expense for 8 assessment years immediately succeeding the assessment year for which the disallowance is first made and deduction against the income computed under the head "Profits and gains of business or profession” to the extent of maximum allowable interest expenditure.

In order to target only large interest payments, it provides for a threshold of interest expenditure of ₹ 1 crore in respect of any debt issued by a non-resident associated enterprise exceeding which the provision would be applicable. Banks and Insurance business are excluded from the ambit of the said provisions keeping in view of special nature of these businesses.

Question 4

Describe the three tier structure for transfer pricing documentation mandated by BEPS Action Plan 13.

Answer

Action 13 contains a three-tiered standardized approach to transfer pricing documentation which consists of:

(a) Master file: Master file requires MNEs to provide tax administrations with high-level information regarding their global business operations and transfer pricing policies. The master file is to be delivered by MNEs directly to local tax administrations.

(b) Local file: Local file requires maintaining of transactional information specific to each country in detail covering related-party transactions and the amounts involved in those transactions. In addition, relevant financial information regarding specific transactions, a comparability analysis and analysis of the selection and application of the most appropriate transfer pricing method should also be captured. The local file is to be delivered by MNEs directly to local tax administrations.

(c) Country-by-country (CBC) report: CBC report requires MNEs to provide an annual report of economic indicators viz. the amount of revenue, profit before income tax, income tax paid and accrued in relation to the tax jurisdiction in which they do business. CBC reports are required to be filed in the jurisdiction of tax residence of the ultimate parent entity, being subsequently shared between other jurisdictions through automatic exchange of information mechanism.

Question 5

Explain the nexus approach recommended by OECD in BEPS Action Plan 5 which has been adopted in the Income-tax Act, 1961.

Answer

In India, the Finance Act, 2016 has introduced a concessional taxation regime for royalty income from patents for the purpose of promoting indigenous research and development and making India a global hub for research and development. The purpose of the concessional taxation regime is to encourage entities to retain and commercialise existing patents and for developing new innovative patented products. Further, this beneficial taxation regime will incentivise entities to locate the high-value jobs associated with the development, manufacture and exploitation of patents in India.

The nexus approach has been recommended by the OECD under BEPS Action Plan 5. This approach requires attribution and taxation of income arising from exploitation of Intellectual property (IP) in the jurisdiction where substantial research and development (R & D) activities are undertaken instead of the jurisdiction of legal ownership. Accordingly, section 115BBF has been inserted in the Income-tax Act, 1961 to provide that where the total income of the eligible assessee (being a person resident in India who is the true and first inventor of the invention and whose name is entered in the patent register as the patentee in accordance with the Patents Act, 1970 and includes every such person, being the true and the first inventor of the invention, where more than one person is registered as patentee under Patents Act, 1970 in respect of that patent.) includes any income by way of royalty in respect of a patent developed and registered in India, then such royalty shall be taxable at the rate of 10% (plus applicable surcharge and cess). For this purpose, developed means atleast 75% of the expenditure should be incurred in India by the eligible assessee for any invention in respect of which patent is granted under the Patents Act, 1970.

Question 6

What are the ways in which hybrid mismatch arrangements are used to achieve unintended double non-taxation or long-term tax deferral?

Answer

Hybrid mismatch arrangements are sometimes used to achieve unintended double non-taxation or long-term tax deferral in one or more of the following ways -

(1) Creation of two deductions for a single borrowal;

(2) Generation of deductions without corresponding income inclusions;

(3) Misuse of foreign tax credit; and

(4) Participation exemption regimes.

OVERVIEW OF MODEL TAX CONVENTIONS

LEARNING OUTCOMES

After studying this chapter, you would be able to:

- ❑ appreciate the need for Model Tax Convention;
- ❑ appreciate the key features of the OECD and UN Model Tax Conventions;
- ❑ identify the subject of the various articles of the OECD and UN Model Tax Conventions;
- ❑ appreciate the broad similarities and differences between the principles enshrined in certain articles of the OECD Model Tax Convention vis-à-vis the corresponding articles of the UN Model Tax Convention.

8.1 INTRODUCTION

In order to enable various countries to enter into treaties, which are standardized to some extent, Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) and the United Nations (UN) have developed certain Model Tax Treaties. These treaties can be used by various countries as a starting point in their negotiations with other countries. While these Models are not legally binding, they have been extensively used by various countries as a reference point while entering into Tax Treaties. In some cases, they have been incorporated verbatim or with minor changes. However, in other cases, countries have made suitable changes in the draft model according to their economic environment and commercial and tax considerations.

The significant model conventions have been briefly discussed hereunder:

→ OECD Model - The emergence of present form of OECD Model Convention can be traced back to 1927, when the Fiscal Committee of the League of Nations prepared the first draft of Model Form applicable to all countries. In 1946 the model convention was published in Geneva by the Fiscal Committee of U.N. Social & Economic Council and later by the Organisation for European Economic Co-operation (O.E.E.C) in 1963. However, in 1961, the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (O.E.C.D) was established, with developed countries as its members, to succeed the O.E.E.C., and OECD approved the draft presented to the OEEC. In 1977, the final draft was prepared in the present form which has been revised several times; the latest being in the year 2017.

OECD Model is essentially a model treaty between two developed nations. This model advocates the residence principle, i.e., it lays emphasis on the right of state of residence to tax the income.

→ UN Model – In 1968, the United Nations set up an Adhoc Group of Experts from various developed and developing countries to prepare a draft model convention between developed and developing countries. In 1980, this Group finalised the UN Model Convention in its present form. It has further been revised a number of times, the latest being in the year 2017.

The UN Model is a compromise between the source principle and the residence principle. However, it gives more weight to the source principle as against the residence principle of the OECD Model. UN Model is designed to encourage flow of investments from the developed countries to developing countries. It takes into account sharing of tax-revenue with the country providing capital.

The United Nations Model Convention seeks to be balanced in its approach. As a corollary to the principle of taxation at source, the Articles of the Convention are based on a recognition by the source country that

(a) taxation of income from foreign capital should take into account expenses allocable to the earnings of the income so that such income is taxed on a net basis,

(b) taxation should not be so high as to discourage investment and

(c) it should take into account the appropriateness of the sharing of revenue with the country providing the capital.

In addition, the United Nations Model Convention embodies the idea that it would be appropriate for the residence country to extend a measure of relief from double taxation through either a foreign tax credit or an exemption, as is also the case with the OECD Model Convention.

→ US Model – This Model Convention is used by the United States while entering into tax treaties with various countries. The US Model Convention has been revised in the year 2016.

These Models have a significant influence on international treaty practice, and have important common provisions. The similarities between these Models highlight the areas of consistency. The areas of divergence indicate some critical differences in approach or emphasis which need special focus. These differences are mainly in relation to the taxing rights which would be available to a country under domestic law and the extent to which any country should forego, under a bilateral tax treaty, in order to avoid double taxation and encourage investment.

The above model conventions have been illustrated in the following diagram:

Now, let us discuss the comparative analysis of some of the significant Articles in the Model Tax conventions

8.2 COMPARATIVE ANALYSIS OF SOME OF THE SIGNIFICANT ARTICLES OF OECD AND UN MODEL CONVENTIONS

Title and Preamble to the Model Conventions

The title of the UN Model Convention reads as follows:

"Convention between (State A) and (State B) for the elimination of double taxation with respect to taxes on income and capital and the prevention of tax avoidance and evasion"

There is now a specific reference to "the prevention of tax avoidance and evasion" in the title to emphasize its significance in the Model Convention.

The Preamble to the UN Model Convention reads as follows:

"(State A) and (State B),

Desiring to further develop their economic relationship and to enhance their cooperation in tax matters,

Intending to conclude a Convention for the elimination of double taxation with respect to taxes on income and on capital without creating opportunities for non-taxation or reduced taxation through tax avoidance or evasion (including through treaty-shopping arrangements aimed at obtaining reliefs provided in this Convention for the indirect benefit of residents of third States)"

The Title and Preamble to the OECD Model Convention is almost identical to that of the UN Model Convention. The only minor difference is the reference to "tax evasion and avoidance" in the place of "tax avoidance and evasion" in the Title and Preamble.

The Preamble now clearly indicates that the UN and OECD Model Conventions do not intend to create opportunities for non-taxation or reduced taxation through tax avoidance or evasion including through treaty shopping arrangements.

This language of the Preamble would help ensuring that the provisions of the Conventions are interpreted and applied to prevent abusive treaty shopping arrangements.

Significant Articles in the Model Conventions

Over the years, both Model Conventions have seen a lot of convergence and the language is identical in quite a few Articles. However, there are key differences in approach and language in some Articles which will be the focus of our discussion, in the section below.

The jurisdiction or country of residence of the taxpayer is referred to as the Residence State and the jurisdiction or country where the source of income is located is referred to as the Source State.

Article 1: Persons Covered

The OECD and UN Model Convention would apply to persons who are residents of one or both of the Contracting States.

For the purposes of these Conventions, income derived by or through an entity or arrangement that is treated as wholly or partly fiscally transparent under the tax law of either Contracting State shall be considered to be income of a resident of a Contracting State. However, the same would be treated as income only to the extent that the income is treated, for purposes of taxation by that State, as the income of a resident of that State.

Example

State A and State B have concluded a treaty identical to the Model Tax Convention. State A considers that an entity established in State B is a company, and taxes that entity on interest that it receives from a debtor resident in State A. Under the domestic law of State B, however, the entity is treated as a partnership, and the two members in that entity, who share equally all its income, are each taxed on half of the interest. One of the members is a resident of State B and the other one is a resident of a country with which States A and B do not have a treaty. The paragraph provides that in such case, half of the interest shall be considered, for the purposes of Article 11, to be income of a resident of State B.

Note – The above example forms part of the Commentary to the UN Model Tax Convention.*

With the exception of benefits granted under certain Articles of these conventions, these Conventions would not affect the taxation, by a Contracting State, of its resident.

Article 2: Taxes Covered

The OECD and UN Conventions would apply to taxes on income and on capital imposed on behalf of a Contracting State or of its political subdivisions or local authorities, irrespective of the manner in which they are levied.

Taxes on income and on capital cover all taxes imposed on total income, on total capital, or on elements of income or of capital, including taxes on gains from the alienation of movable or immovable property, taxes on the total amounts of wages or salaries paid by enterprises, as well as taxes on capital appreciation.

The existing taxes to which the Conventions would apply in case of each Contracting State are specifically to be mentioned.

The Convention shall apply also to any identical or substantially similar taxes which are imposed after the date of signature of the Convention in addition to, or in place of, the existing taxes. The competent authorities of the Contracting States shall notify each other of significant changes made to their tax law.

Article 4: Residence

A taxpayer has to demonstrate that he is a resident of one or both Contracting States to be able to gain access to a tax treaty and avail the benefits thereunder.

The concept of 'resident of a Contracting State' has various functions and assumes significance in the following three scenarios:

- In determining a convention's scope of application;
- In solving cases where double taxation arises as a consequence of double residence;
- In solving cases where double taxation arises as a consequence of taxation in the state of residence and also in the state of source of income.

As per paragraph 1 of the UN Model Convention, the term "resident of a Contracting State" means any person who, under the laws of that State, is liable to tax therein by reason of his domicile, residence, place of incorporation, place of management or any other criterion of a similar nature, and also includes that State and any political subdivision or local authority thereof. This term, however, does not include any person who is liable to tax in that State in respect only of income from sources in that State or capital situated therein.

Paragraph 1 of the OECD Model Convention is worded on similar lines. However, it does not contain reference to place of incorporation.

Where by reason of the provisions of paragraph 1, an individual is a resident of both Contracting States, then his status shall be determined as follows:

(a) He shall be deemed to be a resident only of the State in which he has a permanent home available to him; if he has a permanent home available to him in both States, he shall be deemed to be a resident only of the State with which his personal and economic relations are closer (centre of vital interests);

(b) If the State in which he has his centre of vital interests cannot be determined, or if he has not a permanent home available to him in either State, he shall be deemed to be a resident only of the State in which he has an habitual abode;

(c) If he has an habitual abode in both States or in neither of them, he shall be deemed to be a resident only of the State of which he is a national;

(d) If he is a national of both States or of neither of them, the competent authorities of the Contracting States shall settle the question by mutual agreement.

As per paragraph 3 of this Article, where by reason of the provisions of paragraph 1, a person other than an individual is a resident of both Contracting States, the competent authorities of the Contracting States shall endeavour to determine by mutual agreement, the Contracting State of which such person shall be deemed to be a resident for the purposes of the Convention. They shall do so having regard to its place of effective management, the place where it is incorporated or otherwise constituted and any other relevant factors. In the absence of such mutual agreement, such person shall not be entitled to any relief or exemption from tax provided by this Convention except to the extent and in such manner as may be agreed upon by the competent authorities of the Contracting States.

The situation of dual residence may arise in case of companies in case where one Contracting State attaches importance to the place of incorporation and the other State to the place of effective management. The tie-breaker rule traditionally has been 'place of effective management'. Even India has used place of effective management in some of its treaties. In the latest update by OECD and UN, this has changed to a case by case approach considering the number of tax avoidance cases involving dual resident companies. Determination under the case by case approach will be requested by the concerned taxpayer through Article 25 (Mutual Agreement Procedure). Competent authorities will then rely on a range of factors to resolve the question of dual residency.

The last sentence of paragraph 3 of this Article provides that in the absence of mutual agreement, the taxpayer would not be entitled to any relief or exemption from tax provided by this Convention except to the extent and in such manner as may be agreed upon by the competent authorities of the Contracting States. This will not, however, prevent the taxpayer from being considered a resident of each Contracting State for purposes other than granting treaty reliefs or exemptions to that person.

Article 5: Permanent Establishment

The concept of "Permanent Establishment" (PE), defined in Article 5, has considerable importance as business profits (Article 7) of an enterprise cannot be taxed by a Source State unless it proves the existence of a PE.

The comparable term to PE under the Indian tax law is "business connection" [Section 9(1)(i)]. Generally speaking, the concept of "business connection" is wider than PE and hence, a business connection may exist even without a PE, but the absence of a "business connection" may indicate absence of a PE.

As the PE concept gives the Source State the right to tax, it is an important Article for developing countries. Hence, the UN Model Convention varies from the OECD Model Convention in the following respects:

- As per Article 5(3)(a) of the OECD Model Convention, a building site or construction or installation project constitutes a PE if it lasts more than twelve months. The UN Model Convention is wider as it covers "assembly and installation project" and "supervisory" activities in connection thereto and requires the activity in question to continue only for six months.
- Article 5(3)(b) of the UN Model makes a specific reference to Service PE which is absent in the OECD Model. Article 5(3)(b) of the UN Model reads as follows –

  "The furnishing of services, including consultancy services, by an enterprise through employees or other personnel engaged by the enterprise for such purpose, but only if activities of that nature continue within a Contracting State for a period or periods aggregating more than 183 days in any 12 month period commencing or ending in the fiscal year concerned".

  In the absence of a Service PE reference in OECD Model, the presence has to be ascertained through general principles under Article 5(1).
- Article 5(1) states the "basic rule" for a PE and expresses the primary meaning of PE. The definition of PE in Article 5 does not use the qualifying words "unless the context otherwise requires". As such, the definition needs to be followed in all cases unless specifically excluded.

  Paraphrasing Article 5(1), a PE exists if the following conditions are satisfied cumulatively:

  - There is an "enterprise".
  - Such enterprise is carrying on a "business";

- ➢ There is a "place of business";
- ➢ Such place of business is at the disposal of the enterprise (may be owned / rented but must be one which the enterprise has the effective power to use);
- ➢ The place of business is "fixed", that is, it must be established at a distinct place with a certain degree of permanence

The business of the enterprise is carried on wholly or partially through this fixed place of business.

A PE does not exist unless all the aforesaid conditions are satisfied.

- As per Article 5(2), the term "permanent establishment" includes especially:

  a) a place of management;

  b) a branch;

  c) an office;

  d) a factory;

  e) a workshop, and

  f) a mine, an oil or gas well, a quarry or any other place of extraction of natural resources.

- Agency PE under OECD and UN Models targets activities done by a dependent agent of the enterprise in the Source State. The recent update expands the definition of dependent agent PE to include instances when an agent habitually concludes contracts, or habitually plays the principal role leading to the conclusion of contracts routinely concluded without material modification by the enterprise.

- The UN Model Convention has an additional Article 5(6) relating to insurance which is absent in OECD Model.

  As per this Article, an insurance enterprise of a Contracting State shall, except in regard to re-insurance, be deemed to have a permanent establishment in the other Contracting State if it collects premiums in the territory of that other State or insures risks situated therein through a person.

  In the absence of similar Article in the OECD Model, a PE of an insurance Enterprise has to be determined in accordance with provisions of Article 5(1) or 5(2) of the OECD model.

Article 7: Business Profits

Business profits of an enterprise can only be taxed by the Residence State. Right of Source State to tax business profits of an enterprise only exists if a PE exists in its jurisdiction.

As per the approach under the OECD Model Convention, once a PE is proven, the Source State can tax only such profits as are attributable to the PE. The UN Model Convention amplifies this attribution principle by a limited Force of Attraction rule (FOA).

The FOA rule implies that when a foreign enterprise sets up a PE in State of Source, it brings itself within the fiscal jurisdiction of that State (State of Source) to such a degree that profits that the enterprise derives from Source State of Source, whether through the PE or not, can be taxed by it (State of Source State).

As per Article 7 of the UN Model Convention, if the enterprise carries on business in the other Contracting State through a PE, the profits of the enterprise may be taxed in the other State but only so much of them as is attributable to:

(a) that PE;

(b) sales in that other State of goods or merchandise of the same or similar kind as those sold through that PE; or

(c) other business activities carried on in that other State of the same or similar kind as those effected through that PE.

Article 11: Interest

Paragraph 1 of this Article provides the right to Residence State to tax interest. Paragraph 2, however, also confers right to the Source State to tax interest. Generally, the interest is taxed in the Source State at a given rate on gross basis. However, if the beneficial owner of the interest is a resident of the other Contracting State, the tax so charged cannot exceed a specified percentage of the gross amount of the interest. The OECD Model specifies the percentage as 10%, but the UN Model leaves this percentage to be established through bilateral negotiations.

It may be noted that the definition of interest in both the models viz. OECD and UN Model is similar in that it essentially means income from debt claims of every kind, whether or not secured by mortgage and whether or not carrying a right to participate in the debtor's profits, and in particular, income from government securities and income from bonds or debentures, including premiums and prizes attaching to such securities, bonds or debentures. Penalty charges for late payment are not regarded as interest for the purpose of this Article.

Article 12: Royalties

This Article provides the right of Contracting States to tax income from royalty.

Key differences between the two Models are as follows:

- As per the OECD Model, royalties arising in Source State and beneficially owned by resident of the Residence State are taxable only in Residence State. However, the UN Model provides that royalties may be taxed in the Residence State. Hence, the UN Model departs from the principle of exclusive right to tax provided to Residence State in the OECD Model. Thus, under the UN Model, the Source State may also tax royalties. However, if the beneficial owner is a resident of the Residence State, the tax charged by the Source State cannot exceed the specified percentage of the gross amount of royalties. This specified percentage is to be established through bilateral negotiations.

- The definition of 'royalties' under the OECD Model does not include the following: (a) rentals for films or tapes used for radio or television broadcasting and (b) equipment rentals like rentals for industrial, commercial or scientific equipment.

Article 12A: Fees for Technical Services

India is the pioneer of the FTS concept which was added to the Income-tax Act, 1961 since 1976. Some of our tax treaties do contain a specific provision for FTS.

In its 2017 update, the UN Model has inserted a specific article pertaining to Fees for Technical Services (FTS). There is no specific reference to FTS in the OECD Model.

Paragraph 1 of Article 12A provides that the FTS may be taxed in the Residence State but does not provide that the FTS is exclusively taxable in the Residence State.

Paragraph 2 establishes the right of the country in which FTS arises to tax in accordance with its domestic law, subject to the limitation on the maximum rate of tax, if the beneficial owner is a resident of the other Contracting State. The maximum rate of tax is to be established through bilateral negotiations.

FTS is defined as payments for managerial, technical or consultancy services but excludes payment to an employee, payment for teaching in an educational institution or for teaching by an educational institution, payments by an individual for services for personal use. Management involves application of knowledge, skill or expertise in the control or administration of the conduct of a commercial enterprise or organization. Technical involves the application of specialized knowledge, skill or expertise with respect to a particular art, science, profession or occupation. Fees received for services provided by regulated professions such as law, accounting, architecture, medicine, engineering would constitute FTS. The ordinary meaning of "consultancy" involves the provision of advice or services of a specialized nature.

An example of FTS can be seen from the following facts: R Company is a financial institution resident in State R. R Company provides a wide variety of financial services to its customers, including acceptance of deposits, extension of credit, guarantees, foreign exchange, negotiable instruments. R Company's business is conducted primarily in State R, but it also has clients in other countries, including State S. State R and State S have a tax treaty which contains an article akin to Article 12A. Payments received for services provided by a financial institution would constitute FTS if the services involve use of knowledge, skill and expertise to provide research, analysis or advice to a specific client related to particular circumstances. This has to be distinguished from provision of non-specialized services such as payment and transmission services, debit and credit card services, etc.

Article 13: Capital Gains

This is the most commonly used Article and it provides for the taxation of income arising from transfer of a capital asset, including transfer of shares. The right to tax income from capital gains may be exclusively with the Residence State, or shared between the Residence and Source States.

The Article does not specify what is a capital gain and how is to be computed, this being left to the applicable domestic law. The Article contains rules for taxation of gains made from alienation of different assets such as immovable property, immovable property forming part of a PE, ships and aircrafts, etc. In respect of shares, both Models have been updated and are identical. Rights are conferred to the Source State if more than 50 percent of the value of shares during the preceding 365 days is derived from immovable property in such Source State.

Article 14: Independent Personal Services

Article 14 is only present now in the UN Model. It was deleted from the OECD Model on 29-4-2000 on the basis of OECD Report (2000) on "Issues Related to Article 14 of the OECD Model Tax Convention". The Effect of deletion of Article 14 is that income derived from Professional Services etc., is now dealt with as 'Business Profits' (Article 7) under the OECD MC.

This Article deals with the taxation of income derived by a person for professional or specified services which are offered in the Source State through some presence. This article on Independent personal services in the UN Model states as under:

(1) Income derived by a resident of a Contracting State in respect of professional services or other activities of an independent character shall be taxable only in that State except in the following circumstances, when such income may also be taxed in the other Contracting State:

    (a) If he has a fixed base regularly available to him in the other Contracting State for the purpose of performing his activities; in that case, only so much of the income as is attributable to that fixed base may be taxed in that other Contracting State; or

    (b) If his stay in the other Contracting State is for a period or periods amounting to or exceeding in the aggregate 183 days in any twelve-month period commencing or ending in the fiscal year concerned; in that case, only so much of the income as is derived from his activities performed in that other State may be taxed in that other State.

(2) The term "professional services" includes especially independent scientific, literary, artistic, educational or teaching activities as well as the independent activities of physicians, lawyers, engineers, architects, dentists and accountants.

Thus, the Article covers independent activities involving professional skills rendered by individuals on a principal to principal basis. The meaning of the term "professional services" is illustrated by some examples of typical liberal professions. The enumeration has an explanatory character only and is not exhaustive. It excludes industrial and commercial activities that are covered under the Article on Business Profits. Likewise, professional services while in employment which are covered under the Article on Dependent Personal Services, e.g. a physician serving as a medical officer in a factory. Income of Artists, Athletes and Sportsmen, etc. is not covered by this Article. Also, income from Fees from Technical Services is also not covered.

Article 21: Other Income

This Article deals with taxation of items of income which are not specifically taxable under any other specific Article. Key differences are as under:

- OECD approach envisages that the exclusive right to tax is with the Residence State. UN Model contains an additional paragraph, Article 21(3), which provides that Source State may also tax other income.
- Article 21(2) of both OECD and UN Model provides that for income effectively connected with a PE maintained in a Contracting State by a resident of the other Contracting State, taxation is governed by the provisions of Article 7 (Business Profits). Additionally, UN Model provides that if the aforesaid income is effectively connected with a fixed base situated in a Contracting State by a resident of the other Contracting State, taxation would be governed by the provisions of Article 14 (Independent personal services).

Articles 23A & 23B : Elimination of Double Taxation

In many cases, the application of tax treaty may result into double taxation for tax payers. In such a case, in order to provide relief to such tax payers, Articles 23A and 23B which contains provisions relating to elimination of double taxation have to applied. Articles 23A and 23B provide for the mechanism through which tax credit/exemption may be available in the Residence State for taxes deducted in the Source State.

The OECD and UN Model Conventions specify two approaches- Exemption method (Article 23A) and Credit method (Article 23B). Under the exemption method, tax exemption may be available in the Residence State. Under the credit method, tax credit may be available in the Residence State for taxes deducted in the Source State. These methods are not mutually exclusive and there may be cases where a treaty may adopt exemption method for certain types of income and credit method for other incomes.

The double taxation referred to here, is juridical double taxation, meaning the same income or capital is taxable in the hands of the same person by more than one State. It does not thus, encompass situations of economic double taxation, i.e. where two different persons are taxable in respect of the same income or capital. If two States wish to solve problems of economic double taxation, they must do so in bilateral negotiations.

Article 25: Mutual Agreement Procedure

There may be a situation wherein a tax payer may believe that the treatment accorded by either or both Contracting States is not in accordance with the provisions of the tax treaty. In such a case, there is a need for dispute resolution which is addressed by this Article. This Article requires competent authorities of both countries to endeavor to resolve the conflict by engaging in bilateral negotiations.

The UN Model Convention provides two alternatives - Alternative A and Alternative B, for the article on Mutual Agreement Procedure which were introduced in 2011. Under OECD Model the taxpayer may make a request to either Contracting State while UN Model (Alternative A) contemplates taxpayer going to Residence State or the country of his nationality. Alternative B of UN Model Article 25 contemplates reference to an arbitration process as part of the Mutual Agreement Procedure. The decision arrived at, through the process is binding unless a person directly affected does not accept it.

Key differences between the OECD Model Convention (Article 25) and UN Model Convention (Article 25B - Alternative B) are as follows:

- Article 25B(5) of the UN Model provides that an arbitration may be initiated if the competent authorities are unable to reach an agreement on a case within three years from the presentation of that case. However, Article 25(5) of the OECD Model provides a time limit of two years from the date when all the information required by the competent authorities in order to address the case need to be provided to both competent authorities.
- Article 25B(5) of the UN Model provides that arbitration must be requested by the competent authority of one of the Contracting States. Once such a request is made, the taxpayer will be notified. However, as per Article 25(5) of the OECD Model, arbitration must be requested in writing by the person who initiated the case.
- Article 25B(5) of the UN Model allows the competent authorities to depart from the arbitration decision if they agree to do so within six months after the decision has been communicated to them.

Article 26: Exchange of Information

In order to complete tax cases, a country may require certain information which may be available with the treaty partner. Article 26 provides for the information which may be exchanged and the manner in which such a request has to be made. The purpose of Article 26 is to facilitate effective exchange of information between Contracting States. From the perspective of many developing countries, Article 26 is particularly important not only for curtailing cross-border tax evasion and avoidance, but also to curtail the capital flight that is often accomplished through such evasion and avoidance.

The OECD and UN Model Conventions are similar with respect to this Article. A Contracting State cannot be expected to provide confidential financial information to another Contracting State unless it has confidence that the information will not be disclosed to unauthorized persons. A Contracting State can avoid the exchange of information obligations by showing that the information pertains to communication between an attorney and his client which is protected from disclosure under domestic law. However, lack of interest or use in such information cannot form the basis for a Contracting State to not co-operate with the exchange of information obligations.

Resources: The discussion on Model Tax Conventions in the above chapter is essentially based on the text and commentaries of the OECD and UN Model Tax Conventions, 2017 available at the websites http://www.oecd.org/tax/treaties/ and http://www.un.org, respectively.

7 Business profits

- Right of CS to tax business profits (BPs)

OECD MC	UN MC
BPs of an Entr can only be taxed by the Residence State (RS). Right of Source State (SS) to tax BPs of an enterprise only exists if a PE exists in its jurisdiction.
Once a PE is proven, the SS can tax only such profits as are attributable to the PE	- The attribution principle is amplified by a limited Force of Attraction rule (FOA). - The FOA rule implies that when a foreign enterprise sets up a PE in SS, it brings itself within the fiscal jurisdiction of that State to such a degree that profits that the Entr derives therefrom, whether through the PE or not, can be taxed by it (i.e., the SS). - Accordingly, if the Entr carries on business in the other CS through a PE, the profits of the Entr may be taxed in the other CS but only so much of them as is attributable to: (a) that PE; (b) sales in that other CS of goods or merchandise of the same or similar kind as those sold through that PE; or (c) other business activities carried on in that other State of the same or similar kind as those effected through that PE.

11 Interest

- Right of CSs to tax interest

Para of Article	Right of CS to tax interest
1	Confers the right to RS to tax interest
2	Confers right to the SS to tax interest. Generally, interest is taxed in the SS at a given rate on gross basis. However, if the beneficial owner of the interest is a resident of the other CS, the tax so charged ≤ specified % of the gross interest. The specified % as per OECD MC is 10%, but the UN MC leaves this % to be established through bilateral negotiations.

- Definition of interest in OECD & UN MCs - Interest means income from debt claims of every kind,
  - whether or not secured by mortgage and
  - whether or not carrying a right to participate in the debtor's profits.

Specific inclusions in the definition of interest as per OECD & UN MCs

- income from govt securities
- income from bonds or debentures
- premiums and prizes attaching to such securities, bonds or debentures.

Note - Interest does not include penalty charges for late payment.

12 Royalties (Roy)

	OECD MC	UN MC
Right of CS to tax Roy. income	Roy. arising in SS and beneficially owned by resident of the RS is taxable only in RS. Thus, RS has exclusive right to tax royalty income.	Roy may also be taxed in the SS. Definition of Roy	Definition of Royalty does not include: (a) rentals for films/tapes used for radio/ TV broadcasting; and (b) rentals for industrial, commercial or scientific equipment.	Royalty includes: (a) rentals for films or tapes used for radio or TV broadcasting and (b) equipment rentals like rentals for industrial, commercial or scientific equipment.

12A FTS

In its 2017 update, the UN MC has inserted a specific article pertaining to Fees for Technical Services (FTS). There is no specific reference to FTS in OECD MC.

Right of CS to tax FTS [UN Model]

Para of Article	Right of CS to tax FTS
1	Confers right to the RS to tax FTS. However, does not state that FTS is exclusively taxable in the RS.
2	Establishes the right of the SS to tax FTS in accordance with its domestic law, subject to limitation on the max. rate of tax, to be established through bilateral negotiations, if the beneficial owner is a resident of the other CS.

<td>
In many cases, the application of tax treaty may result into double taxation (DT) for tax payers. In such a case, Articles 23A and 23B provide for the mechanism through which tax credit/exemption may be available in the RS for taxes deducted in the SS.
Two approaches for elimination of DT under MCs:
<table>
<tr><th>Exemption method (Article 23A)</th><th>Credit method (Article 23B)</th></tr>
<tr><td>Tax exemption may be available in the RS for taxes deducted in the SS.</td><td>Tax credit may be available in the RS for taxes deducted in the SS.</td></tr>

These methods are not mutually exclusive and there may be cases where a treaty may adopt exemption method for certain types of income and credit method for other incomes.

- Juridical DT and Economic DT:

	Juridical DT	Economic DT
Meaning	The same income or capital is taxable in the hands of the same person by more than one State	Two different persons are taxable in respect of the same income or capital
Example	FTS may be taxable in the hands of the recipient both in the RS as well as in SS, based on the domestic laws of the CSs.	In respect of dividend distributed by a Co., DDT may be payable by the Co. in SS, whereas the dividend may be taxable in the hands of the shareholder of the other CS, on the basis of his residence.
Type of DT addressed by Article 23A & 23B	Articles 23A & 23B address Juridical DT.	The Articles do not address Economic DT. If two States wish to solve problems of economic DT, they must do so in bilateral negotiations.

Chapter VI : Special Provisions

25 Mutual agreement procedure (MAP)

Where a tax payer believes that the treatment accorded by either or both CSs is not in accordance with the provisions of the tax treaty, this Article provides for dispute resolution through bilateral negotiations between competent authorities (CAS) of both CSs.

	OECD MC	UN MC
Request for MAP	The taxpayer may make a request to either CS	Alternative A - Taxpayer has to approach RS or the country of his nationality Alternative B - Reference to an arbitration process as part of MAP. The decision arrived at through the process is binding unless a person directly affected does not accept it.
Time limit	Stipulates a time limit of 2 years from the date when all the information required by the CAS in order to address the case need to be provided to both CAS.	An arbitration may be initiated if the competent authorities (CAS) are unable to reach an agreement on a case within 3 years from presentation of that case [Alternative B]

Article 26 provides for:

the info which may be exchanged the manner in which such a request has to be made.

Importance of Article 26:

facilitates effective exchange of information between CSs.
curtails cross-border tax evasion and avoidance, curtails the capital flight that is often accomplished through tax evasion & avoidance. This is particularly relevant in the perspective of developing countries.

Similar provisions contained in OECD and UN MCs

A CS cannot be expected to provide confidential financial info to another CS unless it has confidence that the info will not be disclosed to unauthorized persons.
A CS can avoid the EOI obligations by showing that the info pertains to communication between an attorney and his client which is protected from disclosure under domestic law.
Lack of interest or use in such info cannot, however, form the basis for a CS to not co-operate with the EOI obligations.

Question 1

Explain briefly the significant difference between the UN and OECD Model Tax Convention.

Answer

OECD Model is essentially a model treaty between two developed nations whereas UN Model is a model convention between a developed country and a developing country.

Further, OECD Model advocates the residence principle, i.e., it lays emphasis on the right of state of residence to tax the income, whereas the UN Model is a compromise between the source principle and residence principle, giving more weight to the source principle as against the residence principle.

Question 2

When does it become necessary to apply the tie-breaker rule? Discuss the manner of application of the tie-breaker rule.

Answer

Every jurisdiction, in its domestic tax law, prescribes the mechanism to determine residential status of a person. If a person is considered to be resident of both the Contracting States, relief should be sought from Article 4 of the Tax Treaty. A series of tie-breaker rules are provided in Paragraph 2 Article 4 of Model Convention to determine single state of residence for an individual.

The tie-breaker rule would be applied in the following manner:

(i) The first test is based on where the individual has a permanent home. Permanent home would mean a dwelling place available to him at all times continuously and not occasionally and includes place taken on rent for a prolonged period of time.

(ii) If that test is inconclusive for the reason that the individual has permanent home available to him in both Contracting States, he will be considered a resident of the Contracting State where his personal and economic relations are closer, in other words, the place where lies his centre of vital interests. Thus, preference is given to family and social relations, occupation, place of business, place of administration of his properties, political, cultural and other activities of the individual.

(iii) Paragraph (ii) establishes a secondary criterion for two quite distinct and different situations:

- The case where the individual has a permanent home available to him in both Contracting States and it is not possible to determine in which one he has his centre of vital interests;
- The case where the individual has a permanent home available to him in neither Contracting State.

In the aforesaid scenarios, preference is given to the Contracting State where the individual has an habitual abode.

(iv) If the individual has habitual abode in both Contracting States or in neither of them, he shall be treated as a resident of the Contracting State of which he is a national.

(v) If the individual is a national of both or neither of the Contracting States, the matter is left to be considered by the competent authorities of the respective Contracting States.

Question 3

Explain the meaning of "interest" and "fees for technical services" under the UN Model Convention.

Answer

As per Article 11 of the UN Model Convention, "Interest" essentially means income from debt claims of every kind, whether or not secured by mortgage and whether or not carrying a right to participate in the debtor's profits, and in particular, income from government securities and income from bonds or debentures, including premiums and prizes attaching to such securities, bonds or debentures. Penalty charges for late payment are not regarded as interest for the purpose of this Article.

As per Article 12A of the UN Model Convention, "Fees for technical services" is defined as payments for managerial, technical or consultancy services but excludes payment to an employee, payment for teaching in an educational institution or for teaching by an educational institution, payments by an individual for services for personal use.
